

Unanchored stairwell with missing bolt and washer

Facility Structure Challenges

Building on left is used for evidence storage, the center building attachment is an operational Law Enforcement Substation with three cells, and the building to the right is the abandoned building that was used by the Bureau of Land Management

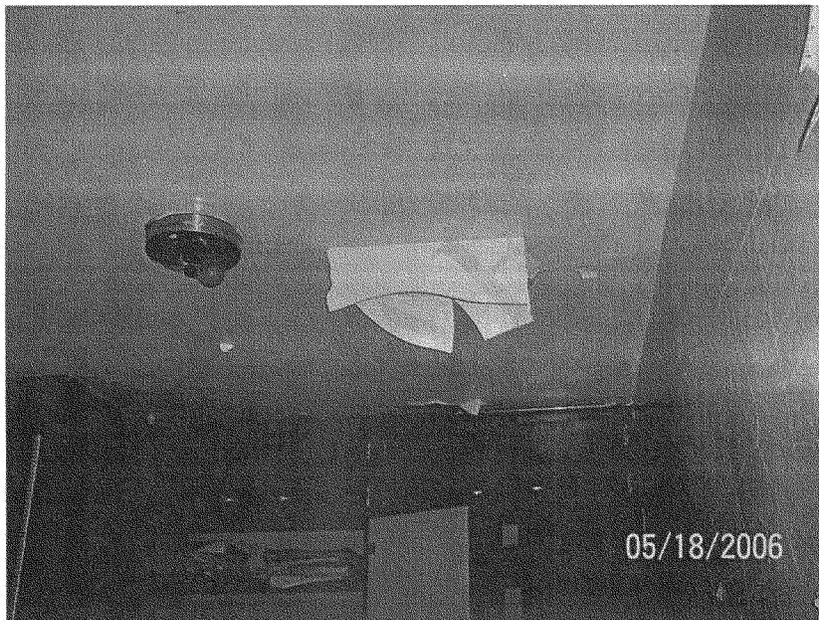

An overview of the evidence storage garage, law enforcement substation and the Bureau of Land Management building

Remains of the basement of the abandoned building

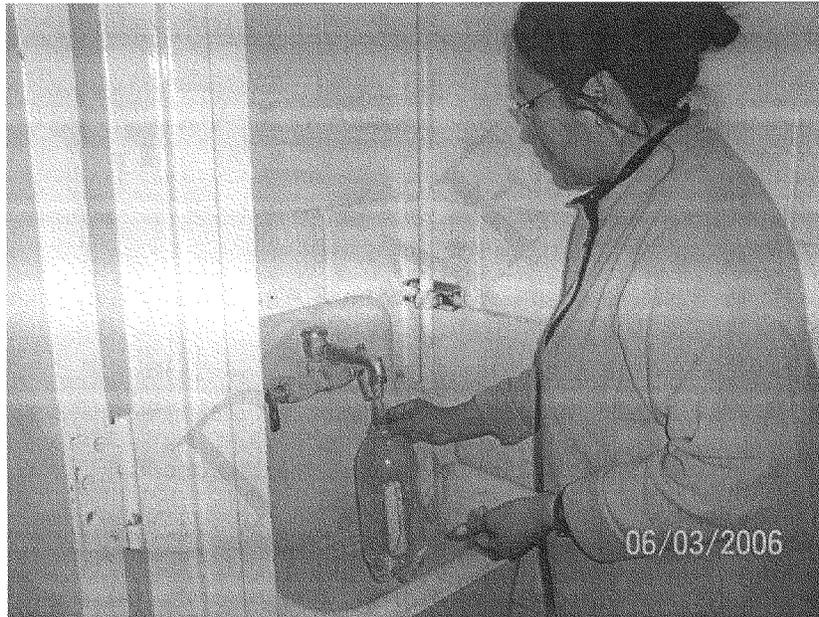

The front door cannot close since the door jamb skewed resulting from the settling foundation.

Peeling paint at the ceiling

17 -Water Quality Challenges

Quality of potable water is a challenge. Most locations depend on wells that produce hard water with high salt content. Staff uses deteriorating salt-encrusted-low pressure or no-pressure, plumbing lines and fixtures to collect water in plastic containers. Drinking water is distributed to the inmates in recycled soda bottles and Styrofoam cups, both of which are a hazard for the safety and security of the officers and inmates.

Staff filling water bottle for inmates' drinking water -- from the janitors mop sink

Plastic water bottles in the cells

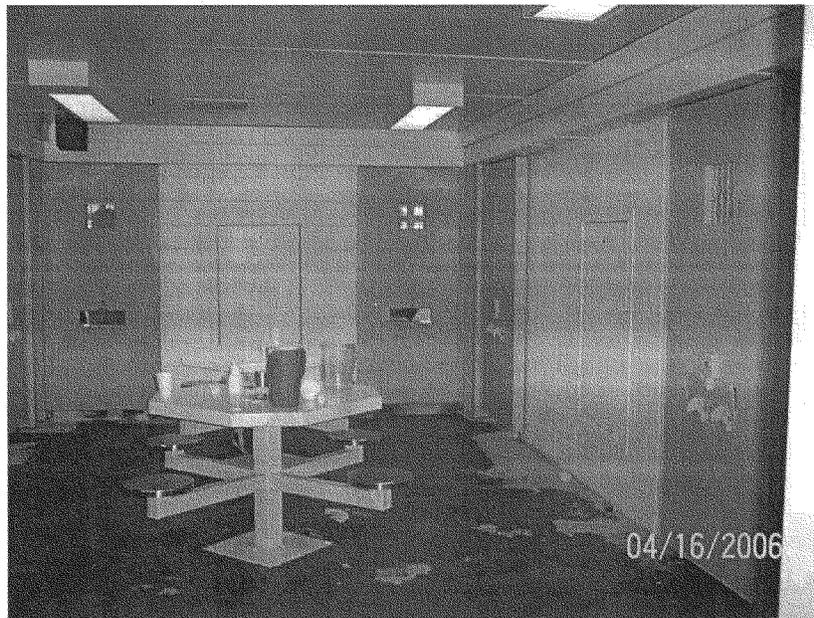

Styrofoam cups and soda bottles

Drinking water supply in the cells

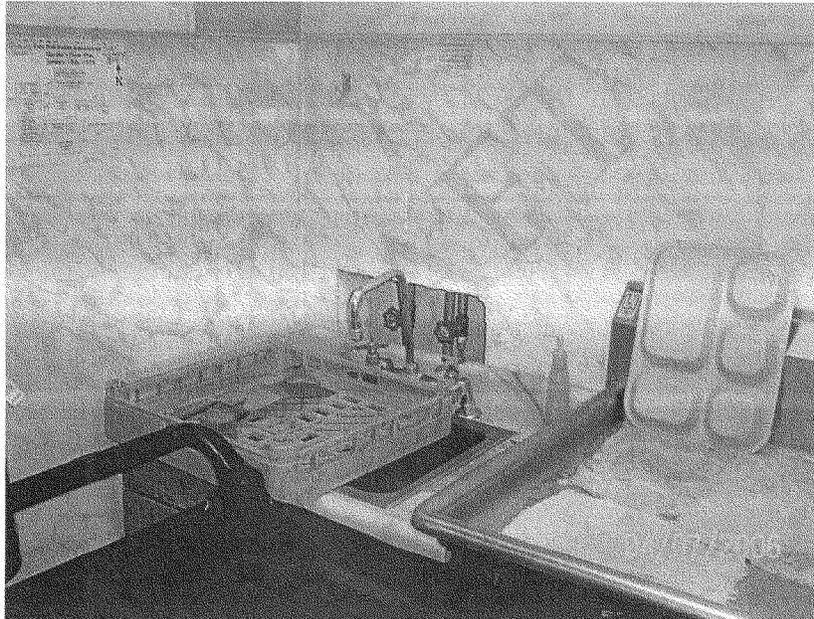

Drinking water supply in the cells

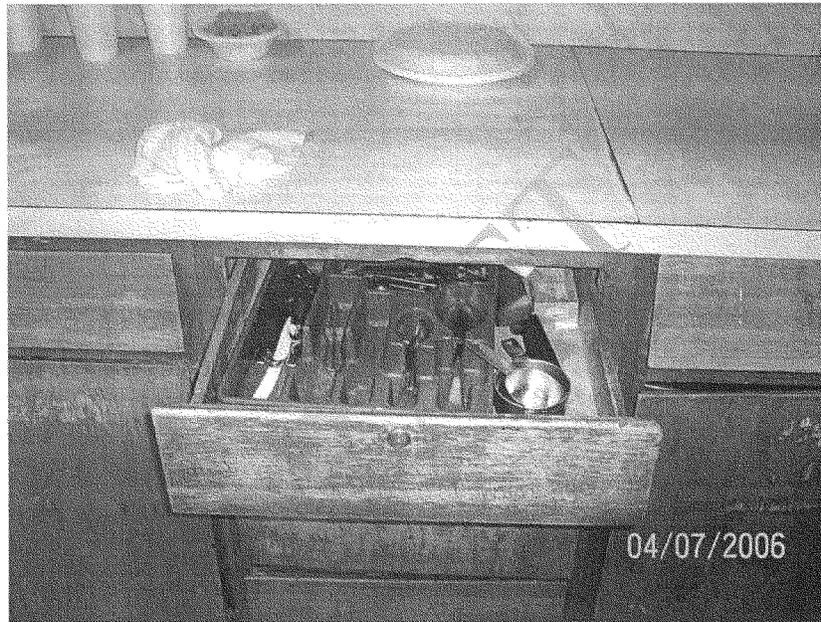

Drinking water supply for the inmates

18 - Weapons in Kitchen and Interiors

Ordinary kitchen utensils and implements take on a different role in a prison environment. Without appropriate security, control, and accountability, such items become deadly weapons jeopardizing the safety and security of officers and inmates. The pictures were taken at multiple facilities during routine working hours.

Chopper in the dish pan

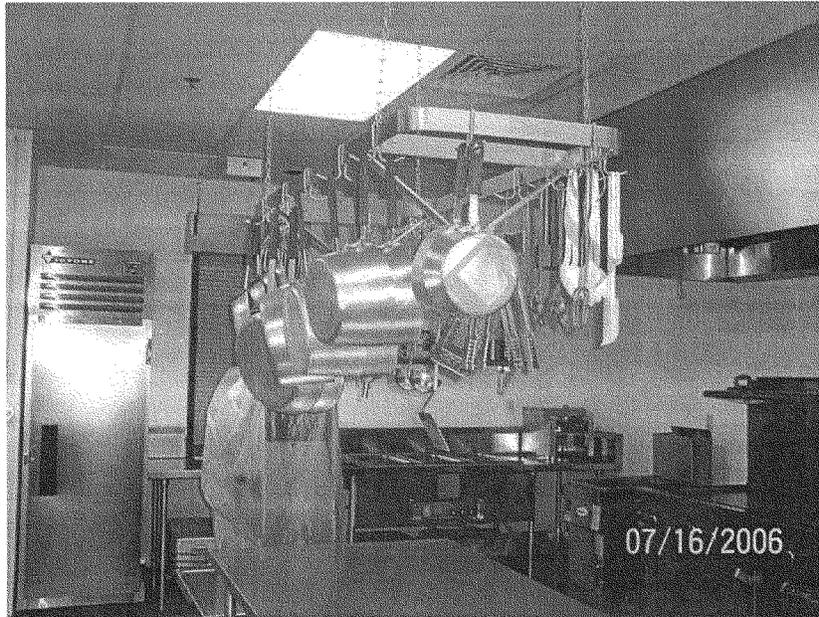

Each implement in the unlocked drawer is a potential weapon

Potential weapons in unlocked drawers

Weapons in Kitchens and Interiors

Potential weapons

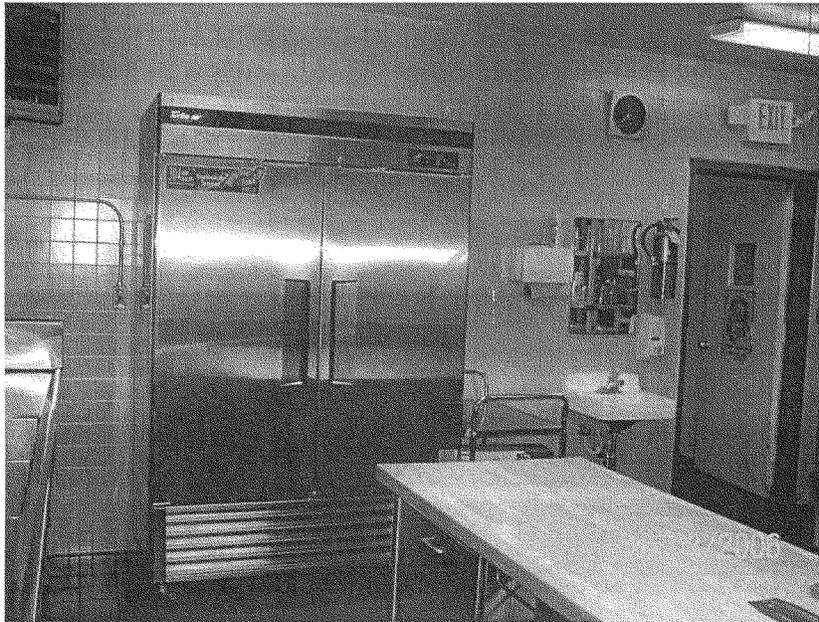

Weapons in Kitchens and Interiors

Potential weapons

The locked knife cabinet with a check-in, check-out provides some security. However there were no entries on the log for it was affixed just prior to the visit.

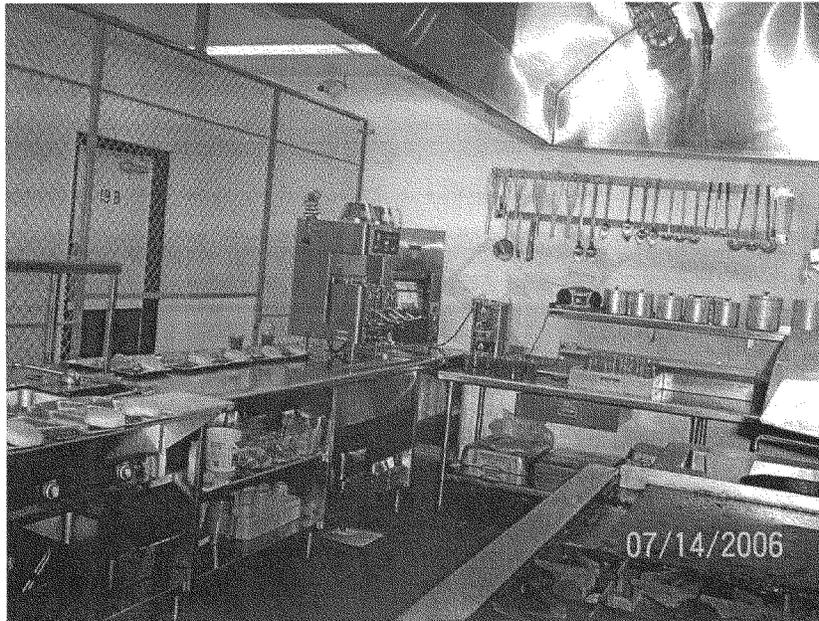

Innocent looking drawer at the prep table

Weapons in Kitchens and Interiors

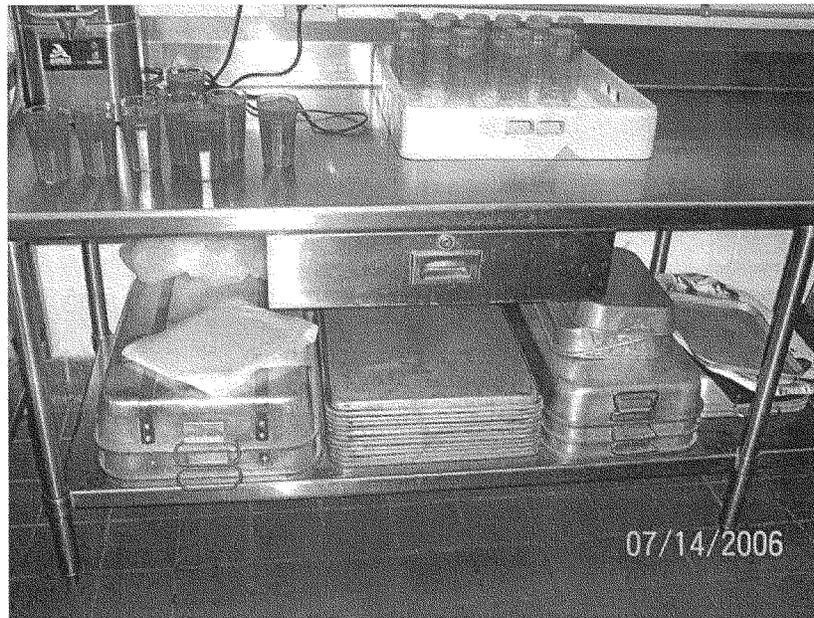

Contents of the drawer – potential weapons

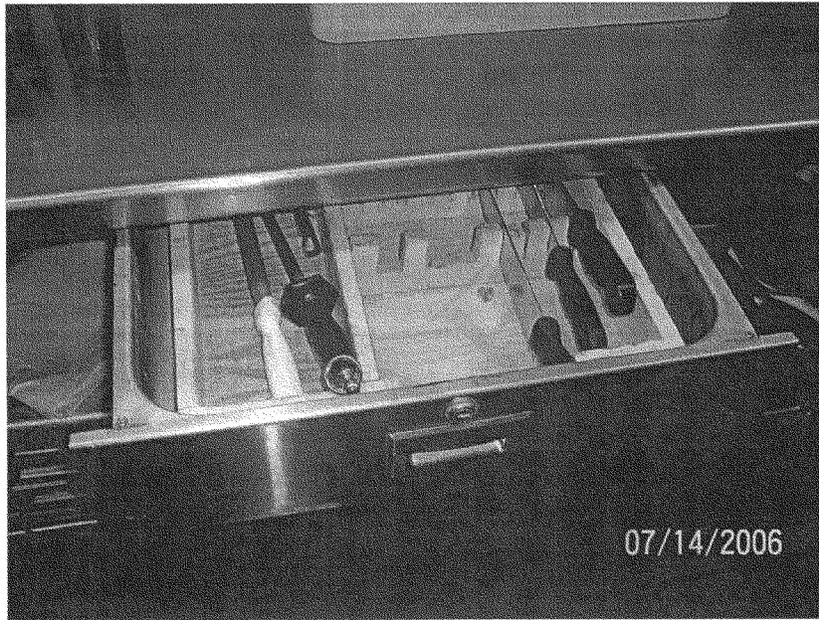

An array of weapons on the wall

Weapons in Kitchens and Interiors

An innocent looking drawer, until it is opened – in the next picture

Weapons in Kitchens and Interiors

Potential weapons in the unlocked drawer