

heard from was Isaac Lidsky, a young man from my Congressional District. For Carlos and Betty Lidsky, Isaac's parents, the fight for a cure is one they struggle with on a day-to-day basis. Of their four wonderful children, Izaak, Ronit, Daria, and Ilana, three are stricken with this devastating disease.

At our briefing, their youngest, Isaac, talked to us about how the disease has affected his life, and although he has an unwavering optimism that one day soon a cure will be found, he also expressed frustration from knowing that the possibility for a cure is out there waiting, but because of lack of sufficient funding for research, he is slowly losing his sight.

Promoting important research efforts and wonderful, nonprofit organizations like Foundation Fighting Blindness, which are on the cutting edge of new procedures, and which have dedicated scientists working tirelessly to eradicate these diseases, is crucial at this juncture.

The National Eye Institute, which is a division of the National Institutes of Health, is a critical player in the fight to save the loss of sight caused by retinal degenerative diseases. Their role, however, has been impaired to a certain extent because of the lack of sufficient funding for continued research. Over the last 13 years, funding at NEI has grown at less than one-fourth of the rate of the National Institutes of Health.

There has been a considerable effort to double the funding provided to NIH, but this effort needs our help. Research has made excellent progress. Groups like the National Eye Institute and the Foundation Fighting Blindness have conducted terrific research in this field. Their scientists have made incredible progress in understanding the biological processes of these diseases. They have been able to identify and isolate many of the genes that cause retinal degenerative disease.

There have been significant discoveries also in the area of molecular engineering and gene therapy. Tremendous advances have been made in the lab with vectors, which are modified viruses that transport normal replacement genes into cells to help them function. This past year also there was significant improvement in the new generation of vectors which have the potential of being safer and more effective.

Science is now, Mr. Speaker, at a critical turning point. Researchers are ready to take the knowledge that they have gained from basic research and transfer it to clinical research that will create the foundation for future treatment and therapies.

Let us make a difference in the lives of these 6 million Americans that are already affected, and those many millions who are yet undiagnosed. Let us support the wonderful research efforts through increased funding for these agencies, these agencies that are making remarkable steps, and that continue to give us hope and renew our energies toward finding a cure; for a cure, Mr. Speaker, will come.

Let us work together to plan for a future where funding will not be the obstacle to curing the vision loss of people like Isaac and his sisters. Now is the time to take advantage of these scientific advances, and with adequate funding, Mr. Speaker, there is, indeed, a cure in sight.

A TRIBUTE TO LOUIS GOLDSTEIN

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. HOYER) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Speaker, with the death of Louis Goldstein on July 3, Maryland, as well as the entire country, lost a great patriot, dutiful public servant, and loving individual.

Louis Lazarus Goldstein died at the age of 85, having spent all of his adult life in the service of his fellow citizens. He was in some ways a simple, unassuming man, and in other ways, an extremely complicated one. He loved people, his family, history, the United States marines, the state of Maryland, the Democratic Party, and America. He served all of them in turn, and served them with enthusiasm and faithfulness.

Louis was larger than life when he lived, and he will become even larger in a his death. The Louis stories that are legend now will geometrically multiply in years to come. Hopefully, however, we will not lose the reality along the way: his genuine, heartfelt prayer that God would bless each of us real good; his observation that our gift to God was service to others, and his shining example of such service; his brilliance in the administration of his office; and his fidelity to Maryland's citizens and the stewardship of their money.

He was, Mr. Speaker, an unforgettable character who made everyone feel that they were his close friend and objects of his genuine concern, as, indeed, they were. Some thought him hokey, but they saw only the facade. To know Louis was to know how deeply he cared about democracy and individual freedom and civil liberties, and how committed he was to ensuring that every American young person had an opportunity to excel to the limit of his or her talent, and their willingness to expend effort and energy in the pursuit of their goals; how much of his own time and extraordinary political skills he spent ensuring that Washington College and the University of Maryland were places where excellence was encouraged and facilitated; how much he valued the principles of his party, and how strongly he fought for its candidates.

Mr. Speaker, I do not know whether Members have ever met Louis Goldstein, how many of our colleagues have met him. I suspect many. He lit up a room and a podium, a campaign trail and another candidate's events, or certainly his own. He brought common sense and uncommon intellect and integrity to the business of politics.

God granted to Louis and to us 85 vigorous years which Louis used to the utmost. God indeed blessed us real good through the force of nature we knew for the past 40 years as our comptroller; arguably, the most popular tax collector in the history of the world.

Louis Goldstein was a wonderful servant to Maryland and America, and his death is a tragic loss for all. But the happy note is that his life was not a tragedy at all. It was a victory, a celebration, a joy. Louis Goldstein loved life and he gave it his all. He served as a public official for 51 out of his 85 years, not out of a need for power or money or even attention, but out of his earnest desire to help those less fortunate and make a difference in the lives of others. His legacy will no doubt live on, and serve as a much needed model for future leaders of our State, for future leaders of our country.

All of us would do well to emulate his charity towards all and malice towards none. Louis Lazarus Goldstein will be missed.

Louis Lazarus Goldstein first came into my life in 1962, 36 years ago. He was my friend, he was my mentor, he was an adviser and counselor. He was an extraordinary human being. He ended every speech, as I have alluded to, with, "May God bless you all real good." God blessed us through Louis Goldstein.

THE LAURIE BEECHMAN MEMORIAL ACT, BIPARTISAN LEGISLATION TO HELP DEFEAT OVARIAN CANCER

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. FOX) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. FOX of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, I rise tonight to discuss important legislation which I filed this week which really makes a difference in the lives of women across the country. I speak of the Laurie Beechman Memorial Act. Together with legislation I have worked on with the gentlewoman from Hawaii (Mrs. PATSY MINK), our legislation is a brave, new, ambitious attempt to eradicate ovarian cancer in our lifetime.

Together with the gentlewoman from Hawaii (Mrs. MINK) and others, we have introduced legislation to increase by $90 million per year money for a cure for ovarian cancer.

Up until this point, Mr. Speaker, ovarian cancer is not detected in any early stages, and of course, therefore, it makes it more difficult for us to keep the patient alive and to have a cure.

The Laurie Beechman Memorial Act will have two facets, in addition to the research. It will have an Information and Education Act, which will increase funding for educational and outreach programs, including those which provide information to both the person with the illness as well as their family, and will provide $10 million annually from 1999 through 2003 for the purpose of this outreach program.

Mr. Speaker, ovarian cancer is the fifth leading cause of cancer death among U.S. women. It is treatable when detected early, but the vast majority of cases, as I said, are not diagnosed until it is too late. Raising public awareness of ovarian cancer by educating doctors and women about the disease can save lives and will save lives. More ovarian cancer research is needed to develop reliable diagnostics, better therapies, and to learn how to prevent the disease.

We named the act after someone in my district who was famous all over this country. Laurie Hope Beechman died on March 8, 1998, after a 9-year struggle with ovarian cancer. Her parents and sisters reside in my district.

She grew up in the Delaware Valley in Pennsylvania, and moved on to a brilliant career on the Broadway stage in New York, in productions including Annie and the Pirates of Penzance and Les Miserables. She was nominated for a Tony award as the first female narrator in Andrew Lloyd Webber's Joseph and the Technicolor Dreamcoat.

Besides all her outstanding work in the theater and acting, she was a great human being and a wonderful wife, sister and daughter, someone who really made a difference in this world. She approached with dignity and grace her career, her life work here on earth, and her disease, with the kind of special sensitivity and courage that she faced all of life.

So this legislation we have filed is in dedication to Laurie Beechman, in hopes that we will find a cure, and we will save more women's lives in the United States because of passage of this important legislation.

TRIBUTE TO LOUIE GOLDSTEIN

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. CARDIN) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. CARDIN. Mr. Speaker, I want to join my colleague, the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. HOYER) in paying tribute to Louie Goldstein, who died on July 3rd. Louie Goldstein was Mr. Maryland, Mr. Public servant, Mr. Integrity. He loved public service, and the people loved Louis Goldstein.

In 1966, when I was first elected to the Maryland General Assembly, Louie Goldstein had already completed his eighth year as comptroller of Maryland. He had been comptroller for 40 years. First and foremost, he did an outstanding job as the comptroller of our State. Maryland enjoys a AAA bond rating, one of the few States in the Nation, thanks to Louie Goldstein. He watched over our State Treasury like no one else did.

I had the opportunity, and I know that the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. HOYER) did also, to travel with Louie Goldstein to New York, to Wall Street, and watch him as he explained the intricacies of Maryland finance to the bond rating firms in New York. Maryland maintained its AAA bond rating because of the confidence Wall Street had in Maryland and Louie Goldstein. He saved the people of Maryland millions and millions of dollars.

Louie was an extraordinary campaigner. Those that had the privilege of watching him and his campaign activities marveled at his love for our system. He attended Democratic conventions from before I was born. The zip trips that were organized in Maryland where we traveled all over the State in order to campaign for State wide office Louie organized. And there are so many stories, I see the gentlewoman from Maryland (Mrs. MORELLA) also on the floor, many interesting stories. One time Louie was campaigning in western Maryland. Someone told him that he accidentally had gone across the State line in West Virginia. He did not know it. Two hours later, Louie was still campaigning in West Virginia because, he said, you never know when you are going to find someone who has a relative in Maryland.

Then there was the time that we were going from one town to another. Everyone on the bus sort of relaxed a little while, got something to drink. But Louie was still at the window waving at a field. We asked, why are you there at the window waving? He said, maybe there is someone in that barn over there looking out at us. He did not want to miss or offend a single person in our State.

The comptroller serves on the Board of Public Works, one of three, along with the governor and the treasurer, that is responsible for many of the decisions of government on what leases should be approved or what land can be bought or sold. Louie Goldstein knew just about every piece of land in our State personally from having visited that area.

When decisions had to be made as to what was in the best interest of our State, Louie could always be counted on to do what was right for the people of Maryland, saving our taxpayers, again, millions and millions of dollars. That is just the way he was. He understood people. He was a good friend. He gave hope to all people that you could accomplish anything you wanted to.

The gentleman from Maryland (Mr. HOYER) pointed out his service at Washington College and at the University of Maryland. He was their number one cheerleader, whether it was at a basketball game or whether it was the academic program, lobbying in Annapolis.

First and foremost, he was a southern Marylander, coming from the district now represented by the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. HOYER). The people of southern Maryland he understood. He was part of the culture of that great, great part of our State, and he will always be remembered for everything that he has done.

Mr. Speaker, he died on July 3 after attending a 4th of July parade, one of many that he had planned during the 4th of July holiday. He had just read with his family the Declaration of Independence, which was a tradition that he observed on every 4th of July because that was important to him as a great patriot of our country. He lived a great life of 85 years, and I know that all of us send our sincere condolences to his family.

May God bless Louie Goldstein real good. We are all blessed for having known him.

FURTHER REMEMBRANCE OF LOUIS GOLDSTEIN

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. LAHOOD). Under a previous order of the House, the gentlewoman from Maryland (Mrs. MORELLA) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mrs. MORELLA. Mr. Speaker, it is nice to follow my colleagues from Maryland in tribute to a man that we all loved who was indeed Mr. Maryland. Whoever thought you could love a tax collector, but that was Louie Goldstein. He was our tax collector, and everybody did love him. Whether they were Independents, whether they were Republicans, whether they were Democrats, they were all citizens of Maryland and all good folk, as far as Louie was concerned.

I first met Louie Goldstein when I was in the State legislature serving with the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. CARDIN) when he was speaker. I was on the Appropriations Committee and, indeed, Louie would come in and he would give us his estimate about what was happening with regard to the finances of the State. It was interesting how he could point to any one of the members of that committee, and he could remember and he could reveal anecdotes about their background, about their lives, about the district that they represented, an incredible memory, the kind of memory that we in public service only wish that we had, where we could remember everything about all of the people with whom we work.

He did serve on that very powerful Board of Public Works. He, with the governor and with the treasurer, had a tremendous amount of power. And as has been mentioned, he used it exceeding well. He was a very prudent man, came off as kind of corn pone in terms of the folksy humor, but had a brilliant intellect and a sense of good investment. And yes, indeed, he did love southern Maryland, Calvert County, which our colleague, the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. HOYER), represents and where I have a little log cabin. I drive on that highway which says, dedicated to Louie Goldstein.
