Thank you.

ROBERT V. ROTA,
Postmaster.

The resignation was accepted.

¶31.8 POINT OF PERSONAL PRIVILEGE

Mr. LIGHTFOOT rose to a question of personal privilege.

The SPEAKER, pursuant to clause 1 of rule IX, recognized Mr. LIGHTFOOT for one hour.

Mr. LIGHTFOOT made the following statement:

"Mr. Speaker. I rise today because I, like a number of my colleagues, feel that my reputation as a Member of Congress has been damaged by the actions of the House bank and the office of the Sergeant at Arms.

"This weekend, after going through and reviewing my canceled checks from the House bank, I discovered at least 60 that had been held by the bank without their ever notifying me.

"The key word is 'held.' They were not bounced. My monthly statements have been juggled by the House bank, so I never knew the actions they had taken.

"For whatever reason, as most of you know, we are paid by the Sergeant at Arms. Our checks are issued on the 30th of the month. They are to be deposited to our account the following day, which is the 1st of the next month. But for whatever reason, many times those paychecks were not credited to my account for 4 or 5 or 6 days after the 1st of the month. I assumed that my paycheck was where it was supposed to be, in my account, under my name.

"Specifically, the House bank frequently held checks for 4 to 6 days. In one instance the House bank held my tax refund check. Now, this is a check from the U.S. Treasury, which we assume is good. They held it for 5 days, or 6 days, actually, before they credited it to my account.

"Assuming that my refund was in my bank account, I continued to write checks against the account. As those came in the House bank held them. They did not bounce them, they held them.

"As an old ex-police officer, a few flags started to fly as things started to unfold. First of all, as more and more Members are talking about their personal experiences, we find that there is a common theme that has developed through much of what is being said.

"That is, that deposits, for whatever reason, were not credited at the time they were put in the House bank.

"I have had colleagues tell me of 15 days since the time they went down and made the deposit to the time it was credited to their account, 15 days expired. Had this been a real bank, I am sure that the Federal examiners would have closed it down. But the big question, I guess, that comes to my mind, and the one that I think has to be answered, what or who was doing what with our money when it was not credited to our accounts?

"Where did my paycheck go on the first of July, when I did not get credit for it until the fifth? Was it credited to somebody else's account? Was it used to cover the deficits of those known abusers that we have here which have been uncovered through the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct, where we reconstructed some 66 accounts and found abusers, that there is proof that they did in fact abuse the bank and deliberately wrote overdrafts month after month after month? Were they using my money to cover those overdrafts and then holding my check until enough of them came in the bank that decided, well, we better pay up on this guy? So they paid my checks and then reached over to this gentleman's or this gentleman's account and took some more money out? What were they doing with that money?

"To me that is the key question that needs to be answered at this point in time. I tried to explain this to the media back home. I have a tape recording of the news conference that we held, and I certainly did not say what the headline says.

"It says, 'I Bounced 60, But It Wasn't My Fault.'

"I never said that, but that is what the news media chose to write. Also in the roughly 7 years that we have been in this House, we have, I think, done a few decent things for our State. We saved a major highway that was going into another State. We have got a lot of improvements going on roads and airports and waterways and sewer systems and rural water districts and so on. Never made the front page of this newspaper. But with this little cartoon, wherever it went, we finally got on the front page for something that we did not do.

"The irony of it is that there is a feeding fest going on because for some reason the whole judicial system has been turned around, as it pertains to Members of Congress. We are all guilty until we prove ourselves innocent, and then every time we try to explain it, we are just trying to cover up and blame it on somebody else. I think there is a way that we can get to this central question and we can do it very quickly.

"Today I am going to send a letter around to the entire House membership. In that letter I am going to ask them to join me in requesting the U.S. Attorney's Office to undertake a criminal investigation of the House bank. Yes, I said criminal investigation of the House bank. Because for one, I want to know where were my deposits when they were not in my account. What was that money used for?

"It is my understanding that there is something in the neighborhood of a $2 million a day float. Where did the interest off of that money go? These are the questions that the folks in the Press Gallery should be asking, rather than trying to skewer Members of Congress simply because we chose to get in this job and someone mishandled our personal finances for us.

"I am certain there are Members who did write overdrafts, and I would be hard-pressed, I think, to find anybody that could say 100 percent that they had not because we all do make mistakes. But when an institution of the House takes individual Members and juggles their financial accounts around, for whatever the reason might be, be in just plain laziness and sloppiness or be it for criminal reasons, that is wrong. Particularly when it smears the reputations and the names or Republicans and Democrats alike, who had no evil in their heart, no intent to do anything wrong, and did nothing wrong other than they got elected to Congress and chose to use the facilities that were provided for us here.

"The only thing we get out of this world with is our name and our reputation, and there is a lot of good men and women of both political stripes who are being smeared because a few, in my opinion, evil, mean-spirited, corrupt, arrogant people decided they were going to run some kind of a scam with our money and they would never get caught.

"Unfortunately, the trap has fallen on the wrong folks. I ask Members from the Democratic side of the aisle as well to join us or join me, rather, in signing this letter. I have a great deal of respect for my Democratic colleagues. Many of them are good friends. Even when we disagree over political issues, that is what this whole game is all about. We still have respect for each other as decent men and women and citizens of this country, and I think we all have the good interests of this country at heart.

"One of the proudest days of my life was back in January 1985, when I stood somewhere about right in here. At that time my son, who is now 14, stood beside me and he held his hand up when I held up mine, and we took the oath of office.

"Never did I ever imagine in my wildest dreams that trying to do something to help other people would end up in this kind of a situation.

"I am still proud to be a Member of this House, even though we may have low esteem in all the polls that are taken. As the history of this body shows, the House of Representatives can and does do great things for the American people when we work together in the fashion that we are supposed to.

"The fact of the matter is, today many Members of Congress are being questioned by the actions of the people who ran the House bank, the Sergeant at Arms. This body cannot begin to win back the respect of the American people until we clean up that mess and clean it up thoroughly.

"I realize the cause of every over-draft was not rotten bank procedures. People make mistakes, but some Members of this House knowingly wrote bad checks. I think they have been identified. There must be a differentiation made between the abusers and those who were caught in this particular mess. Their constituents will make their own decisions.

"The problem is, their constituents are not being told the truth. But there are a great many of us on both sides of the aisle who have been caught in the middle, and I would appeal to my colleagues today to join me in trying to get to the bottom of this mess, be they Republican or Democrat, because I think if we want to extend it one step further, not only are individuals being smeared but in my opinion the name of this great country is being smeared.

There is a tarnish on the eagle because of the actions of a few. And until we get to the bottom of it, it is not going to change.

"This House is not going to change it. It has to be some outside independent, objective set of eyes that takes a look at the whole situation. Now we have the post office scandal. Some other questions, I guess, that come to mind, as an old ex-policeman, how much of the post office scandal is tied into the House bank? Where did they launder the cocaine money?

"There is a lot of good, strong legal questions. And if I were a reporter today, I think I would be out trying to win a Pulitzer Prize getting to the bottom of it."
