IN THE UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

BARRY A. HAZLE, JR.,)

Plaintiff,)
)
v.)	ORDER DENYING MOTION FOR NEW
)	TRIAL MITCH CROFOOT, et al.,)
)
Defendants.)

Plaintiff Barry A. Hazle moves for a new trial under Federal Rule of Civil Procedure ("Rule") 59(a) arguing: the jury's verdict was contrary to the clear weight of the evidence; the jury failed to award damages which was contrary to law and evinces the jury did not follow the Court's instructions; and, newly discovered evidence shows the Defendants presented false information to the jury.

Mitchell Crofoot ("Crofoot"), Brenda Wilding ("Wilding"), and Richard Jallins ("Jallins") (collectively, "Defendants") oppose Hazle's motion. For the reasons stated below, the motion is DENIED.

1 I. LEGAL STANDARD

2 Rule 59(a) states, "A new trial may be granted . . . in an 3 action in which there has been a trial by jury, for any of the reasons 4 for which new trials have heretofore been granted in actions at law in 5 the courts of the United States." Fed.R.Civ.P. 59(a)(1). The Ninth 6 Circuit

7 has noted, Rule 59 does not specify the grounds on which 8 a motion for a new trial may be granted. Rather, the 9 court is bound by those grounds that have been 10 historically recognized. Historically recognized grounds 11 include, but are not limited to, claims that the verdict 12 is against the weight of the evidence, that the damages 13 are excessive, or that, for other reasons, the trial was 14 not fair to the party moving. [The Ninth Circuit has] 15 held that the trial court may grant a new trial only if 16 the verdict is contrary to the clear weight of the 17 evidence, is based upon false or perjurious evidence, or 18 to prevent a miscarriage of justice.

19 Molski v. M.J. Cable, Inc., 481 F.3d 724, 729 (9th Cir. 2007) (citations 20 and internal quotation marks omitted).

21 II. FACTUAL BACKGROUND

22 Prior to trial, an order issued granting Hazle's motion for 23 partial summary judgment against Defendants, in which each Defendant was 24 found liable for violating Hazle's Establishment Clause rights by 25 requiring him to participate in a 12-step drug rehabilitation program 26 that contained religious components. (Order, April 7, 2010, ECF No. 87.) 27 The final pretrial order prescribes: "The damage issues will be tried to 28 a jury[.]" (Final Pretrial Order, May 5, 2010, ECF No. 93 1:22-23.)

29 A jury trial commenced on the damages issues on June 22, 2010.
30 (Reporters Transcript ("RT") 4:1-4.) Following preliminary jury 31 instructions, the judge told the jury about the pretrial ruling on 32 liability as follows: "Ladies and gentlemen of the jury, I decided in a 33 pretrial ruling that each defendant violated plaintiff's First Amendment 34 Establishment Clause right by requiring that plaintiff attend a 12-step

1 drug rehabilitation program after plaintiff objected to the religious 2 components of the program, and by arresting and incarcerating plaintiff 3 because of that failure to participate in the program." Id. 73:14-19.

4 A. Undisputed Facts

5 The following undisputed facts were read to the jury:

6 As a condition of parole following his incarceration 7 on drug possession charges, Barry Hazle was required to 8 participate in a 12-step religious drug treatment 9 program.

10 The residential drug treatment program to which 11 Hazle was assigned to fulfill his parole condition was 12 called Empire Recovery Center.

13 Empire used a 12-step program that included 14 references to God and a higher power.

15 Mitch Crofoot was Barry Hazle's parole agent at the 16 time that Hazle was at Empire.

17 One of Mr. Crofoot's responsibilities was to make 18 sure that Hazle complied with the conditions of his 19 parole.

20 Hazle told Crofoot that he objected to participating 21 in the Empire program because he was an atheist.

22 Hazle asked Crofoot whether he could fulfill his 23 parole requirements through a secular program.

24 Crofoot told Hazle that he needed to continue at 25 Empire while Crofoot researched the situation, and told 26 Hazle not to leave class again.

27 After making inquiries, Crofoot told Hazle there 28 were no programs that were non-12-step.

Crofoot told Hazle that he could file an inmate/parolee appeal, a 602 appeal, but that in the meantime he should continue to participate in the Empire program or he would be returned to prison.

Hazle presented Crofoot on April 3, 2007 with a 602 appeal that set forth the basis for his objection to participation in the Empire program.

According to Crofoot, representatives of the Empire told Crofoot on April 6, 2007, that Hazle has been disruptive, though in a congenial way, to the staff as well as other students.

As to Hazle's disruptive behavior, Crofoot's understanding from the Empire representatives was that Hazle was not being loud; he wasn't throwing things around; he wasn't stomping around; he wasn't being boisterous and that sort of thing. He was sort of passive aggressive.

Crofoot spoke with his unit supervisor Brenda Wilding and concluded that the right thing to do was to refer Hazle to the BPH, the Board of Prison Hearings, on a parole violation for failing to participate in the board-ordered program.

1 Crofoot and Wilding decided together that Hazle 2 needed to be returned to prison so he could argue his case before the BPH.

3 Crofoot arrested Hazle on April 6, 2007, and booked him into Shasta County Jail.

4 After arresting Hazle, Crofoot called the CRC, 5 explained the circumstances pertaining to Hazle, 6 explained that he was requesting that Hazle be returned to custody, and obtained an oral order of return, and an oral order of return was authorized by Deputy Commissioner Richard Jallins.

7 After the oral order of return was authorized by 8 Deputy Commissioner Jallins, Hazle was sent back to prison.

9 Wilding understood that Hazle objected to participating in the Empire Recovery Center program because he was an atheist.

10 Wilding understood that Crofoot told Hazle that 11 Hazle either had to participate in the Empire Recovery Center program or be returned to prison.

12 Richard Jallins made the oral order of return with respect to Barry Hazle in April 2007.

13 Id. 73:25-76:12.

14 The following undisputed facts were also read to the jury:

15 Number 1, . . . concerning the conditions that 16 existed from May 2006 to July 2007 at the California State Prison located in Norco, California, known as the California Rehabilitation Center, may also be referred to as CRC.

17 Number 2, from May 2006 to February 2007, plaintiff 18 Barry Hazle was incarcerated at CRC as a civil addict after entering a no contest plea for a drug possession 19 related offense. His incarceration during this period of time, which was later ruled to be improper by a 20 California appeals court, was not caused by any of the defendants in this action.

21 Following his arrest by defendant Crofoot in April 2007, plaintiff was re-incarcerated in CRC until July 2007.

22 Number 3, between May 2006 and July 2007, CRC's 23 inmate population was comprised of civil addicts like Mr.
Hazle, as well as inmates convicted of other felonious offenses.

24 Between April 2007 and July 2007 there were roughly 25 3200 inmates housed at CRC, of which civil addicts accounted for approximately 18 percent.

26 Number 4, during this period, CRC was overcrowded.
The number of inmates housed in the facility was approximately twice the prison's design capacity.

27 According to a study presented by the California Department of Corrections and Rehabilitation to the 28 California State Senate in 2006, overcrowded prison conditions can have negative psychological and behavioral

1 effects on inmates due to an increased likelihood of 2 tension and violence between inmates. The study also 3 found that prison overcrowding makes it more difficult 4 for prison guards to control or limit inmate violence and 5 provide rehabilitative or treatment programs.

6 In March 2007, Governor Schwarzenegger toured CRC 7 and expressed his opinion that overcrowding resulted in 8 increased danger to prison staff and inmates.

9 [I]n these proceedings, the parties have not agreed 10 to or stipulated to either the existence of or the extent 11 of any alleged emotional distress related injuries 12 suffered by Mr. Hazle during his incarceration at CRC, or 13 at any other prison or substance abuse treatment 14 facility.

15 The existence or extent of such emotional distress 16 related injuries and damages is a question of fact to be 17 determined by the jury based upon all of the admissible 18 evidence presented during the trial, as well as any 19 instructions that the judge may give to you, the jury.

20 Id. 77:16-79:10.

21 III. DISCUSSION

22 A. Clear Weight of the Evidence

23 Hazle protests the jury's failure to award him damages, and 24 argues that the jury's award "of zero damages is simply irreconcilable 25 with [the pretrial] adjudicated liability, undisputed facts, and 26 principles of law." (Mot. 12:13-14.) Hazle contends "[b]ecause that 27 verdict is contrary to the clear weight of the evidence, a new trial 28 must be ordered." Id. 12:14-15.

The trial record evinces that the Board of Prison Hearings ordered Hazle to be placed in the inpatient Empire program as a civil addict, and that eventually Empire ceased allowing Hazle to participate in that program because Hazle became disruptive. Each defendant testified concerning a lack of authority to do anything other than reincarcerate Hazle in prison after Hazle was no longer allowed to participate in the Empire in-patient program. (RT 128:11-18, 135:6-8; 141:1-7, 144:12-15, 145:13-19, 154:9-14.)

1 Hazle argues that the jury apparently determined that "some 2 other party or parties . . . bore primary responsibility for the 3 violation of Hazle's rights", and that this determination does not 4 salvage the verdict, since each defendant "bear[s] full responsibility 5 for the consequences of" Hazle's incarceration "[u]nder principles of 6 joint and several liability[.]" (Mot. 9:22-23, 10:1-2.) However, the 7 jury's verdict on the damages and causation questions is clearly 8 supported by the trial record. In fact, the judge alerted the parties 9 about the authority and causation trial issues, out of the presence of 10 the jury, in pertinent part as follows:

11 THE COURT: The trial record is different than the 12 record before me at the time I ruled on summary judgment.
13 There is an issue of authority that has been developed 14 during your case. That issue was not an issue that was in 15 the summary judgment record, at least I don't recall 16 seeing it.

17 Plaintiff said something during his testimony 18 concerning the development of conditions for release 19 which basically states that "I don't think either of the 20 defendants developed those conditions for release." And 21 two of the defendants have stated that they had no 22 authority to change the conditions of release.

23 Am I mistaken in my statement that this authority 24 issue was not an issue that was in the summary judgment 25 record?

26 MR. HELLER [attorney for Plaintiff]: Your Honor, my 27 best understanding, and I remember the summary judgment 28 papers fairly well, was that in the opposition raised by the defendants to our motion for partial summary judgment, they did not assert as a defense or a basis for not ruling in summary judgment anything having to do with authority. And that's not been an issue that was raised in those papers, nor is it one that, given the ruling, we were intending or have addressed in this trial. It's come up -- you're right, I've heard that in their testimony, but our focus in this trial has been not to prove or disprove any of that.

THE COURT: I'm not sure you're completely right about . . . the focus in the trial was not to prove any of that, because when Crofoot was giving testimony, you asked him about, I believe it was, the 602 appeal and the form that was used.

MR. HELLER: Yes, I remember that.

THE COURT: And whether there was a place on the form where he could have stated an opinion concerning whether

1 plaintiff should be allowed to attend a secular drug 2 rehabilitation program.

3 And I thought that his testimony was that place on 4 the form that you had referenced at some point during 5 your examination was not designed for that kind of input.
6 And I thought that you followed up with a question that 7 basically tried to elicit from him testimony [showing] he 8 could have used that space for . . . a purpose that would 9 have benefitted your client

MR. HELLER: Yes. You're correct.

7 (RT 335:9-337:2.)

8 THE COURT: So, plaintiff's position is that each 9 defendant should be held liable, whether or not he or she 10 had the authority to change the unconstitutional 11 condition to which plaintiff was subjected?

12 MR. HELLER: No. Our position -- no. If I may correct 13 Your Honor, my position is that liability has already 14 been established in this trial by your order, and that we 15 were not in a position to -- or did not attempt to refute 16 that issue, that the authority question was never raised 17 in the summary judgment motion, so therefore we did not 18 address it at that time.

19 And although there are issues that could be raised 20 with respect to authority, we are not in a position to do 21 that because we didn't prepare, or bring in evidence in 22 the course of the trial, to prove that issue. That would 23 be an issue that would be, obviously, our burden. And 24 it's a burden that would be unfairly imposed upon us.

THE COURT: It's a burden that's what?

25 MR. HELLER: It would be a burden that would not be 26 fairly imposed on us at this stage because we didn't -- 27 we didn't anticipate it during the course of the trial.
28 So that's my -- I respectfully explain that is our position, Your Honor.

THE COURT: But you must have anticipated it, because if you are seeking punitive damages, and you are, against each defendant, aren't elements of punitive damages focused on what a defendant should have done, could have done and failed to do, and if a defendant lacked the authority to do what plaintiff opines the defendant should have done, then that appears to have a clear bearing on punitive damages.

MR. HELLER: You are right in the sense that we -- that punitive damages turns on what options were available, what they did, what they didn't do. But we did not put on a case because we did not anticipate that authority would be a liability issue here that we would have to prove.

There is case authority, regretfully I can't cite it right now, but that punitive damages -- the fact that you violated somebody's rights, as has been found in the order that was the basis of the initial ruling, is itself a basis, if that was done recklessly, or in a callously or indifferent way, for the punitive damages.

1 So, our approach had to do with relying on that 2 ruling, on that prior ruling, and bringing out, as you 3 heard during the testimony, some of the things that the 4 -- that the defendants did, didn't do, or could have 5 done. So, it was not -- it is not -- it's not the same as 6 in the sense of a causation element or a -- for liability 7 purposes, Your Honor. And we didn't plan or put on that 8 type of a case.

9 Id. 365:12-367:9.

10 However, Hazle proposed a compensatory damages jury 11 instruction that included a causation element on which the court relied 12 when finalizing the compensatory damages instructions. "[D]amages 13 awarded in a § 1983 action must always be designed to compensate 14 injuries caused by the constitutional deprivation." Guy v. City of San 15 Diego, 608 F.3d 582, 587 (9th Cir. 2010). Although Hazle states in his 16 reply that his "motion does not argue that there were errors in the 17 instructions and verdict form" (Reply in Supp. of Mot. for New Trial 18 ("Reply") 2:4-5.), the causation and jointly and severally liable jury 19 instructions are considered when determining what "[t]he jury likely 20 concluded" and whether "substantial evidence supported the jury's 21 verdict[.]" Guy, 608 F.3d at 588. Specifically, Hazle's proposed jury 22 instruction number two stated: "Damages mean the amount of money that 23 will reasonably and fairly compensate the plaintiff for any injury you 24 find was caused by defendants." (ECF No. 118 9:10-11 (emphasis added).) 25 Ultimately, the Court defined compensatory damages in the jury 26 instruction as follows: "Compensatory damages means the amount of money 27 that will reasonably and fairly compensate plaintiff for any injury you 28 find was caused by a defendant." (RT 421:7-9 (emphasis added).)

 The jury instructions and verdict form also allowed the jury to determine whether Defendants were jointly and severally liable based on whether Hazle had "an indivisible injury that cannot be apportioned 1 to each defendant." (RT 422:2-3.) The jury was instructed on joint and 2 several liability as follows:

3 Whether defendants are jointly and severally liable 4 depends on whether you find that plaintiff has an 5 indivisible injury that cannot be apportioned to each 6 defendant. Where several independent actors concurrently 7 or consecutively produced a single indivisible injury, 8 each actor will be held jointly and severally liable for 9 the entire injury. Where plaintiff's injuries are 10 divisible and attributable to the action of a specific 11 actor or actors, you shall specify damages caused by each 12 actor.

13 Id. 422:1-9 (emphasis added). The Court also instructed the jury to 14 award nominal damages for emotional distress: "The law which applies to 15 emotional distress damages authorizes an award of nominal damages. If 16 you find that plaintiff has failed to prove emotional distress damages, 17 you must award nominal damages." Id. 421:14-17.

18 The verdict form allowed the jury to determine joint and 19 several liability for "Plaintiff's emotional distress damages" and, if 20 the jury determined Defendants were not jointly and severally liable 21 asked: "What is the amount of emotional distress damages caused by [each 22 Defendant], if any?" (ECF No. 158 2:4-15 (emphasis added).) The verdict 23 form repeated these questions for Hazle's "loss of time and freedom of 24 movement damages" and, required the jury to answer the following 25 question if the jury determined the Defendants were not jointly and 26 severally liable: "What is the amount of loss of time and freedom of 27 movement damages caused by [each Defendant], if any?" Id. 3:11-22.

28 The damages causation issue appeared to be a focus of the jury during deliberations since the jury sent a note to the Court seeking:

Verification of the court's determination of a guilty verdict having been rendered against the Defendants for violation of the Plaintiff's constitutional rights. We are confused as to whether the Defendants are the only parties to have been found in violation of the Plaintiff's rights.

1 (ECF 156.) The parties ultimately agreed that the Court would respond to 2 the jury as follows: "I found each defendant liable but did not decide 3 whether any defendant caused damages to plaintiff." (RT 458:8-459:4.) 4 While discussing the jury's question with the parties, the Court 5 explained that the word "cause" was not defined in the jury instruction 6 and there is both a lay and legal meaning for that word. Id. 449:22-7 459:4, 469:20-471:17. The Court offered to instruct the jury on the 8 meaning of the word; however, Hazle refused the Court's offer stating: 9 "I believe they've been adequately instructed on that point[.]" Id.
10 470:14-15.

11 The jury returned a verdict finding: Defendants are not 12 jointly and severally liable for Hazle's emotional distress damages; 13 "the amount of emotional distress damages caused by [each] Defendant" is 14 zero; Defendants are not jointly and severally liable for Hazle's loss 15 of time and freedom of movement damages; "the amount of loss of time and 16 freedom of movement damages caused by [each] Defendant" is zero; and, 17 Hazle is not entitled to punitive damages. (ECF No. 158.) After the 18 verdict was read in open court in the presence of the parties and the 19 jury, the judge asked counsel: "Any further action to take with respect 20 to the jury?" (RT 488:2.) To which both parties responded "[n]o". Id.
21 488:3-4.

22 Hazle now argues that the jury's zero damages award was 23 contrary to law and disregarded the Court's instructions. Specifically, 24 Hazle argues it is well-established law that when there is an 25 adjudication of a constitutional violation that resulted in a loss of 26 liberty, plaintiff is entitled to compensatory damages that exceed mere 27 nominal damages. (Mot. 6:21-23.) Hazle also argues the jury disregarded 28 the Court's instructions in failing to award at least nominal emotional

1 distress damages. Id. 8:17-18. Defendants counter Hazle waived his 2 arguments regarding the zero damages award when he failed to challenge 3 the zero damages verdict after the jury's verdict was read and before 4 the jury was discharged. (Defs.' Opp'n to Mot. for New Trial ("Opp'n") 5 9:11-14.)

6 [M]otions for a new trial challenging a zero damages 7 award as inconsistent with liability are waived when 8 either: (1) a jury verdict finds liability but no damages 9 and the moving party does not object before jury 10 discharge; or, more generally, (2) the moving party 11 argues that the jury has rendered a verdict that contains 12 two legal conclusions that are inconsistent with one 13 another, and the moving party does not object before jury 14 discharge.

15 Kode v. Carlson, 596 F.3d 608, 611 (9th Cir. 2010). "This rule 16 recognizes that district court judges are in a unique position to 17 instruct the jury regarding the meaning of the law, including whether 18 two legal conclusions by the jury are inconsistent." Id. Here, Hazle's 19 "motion[] for a new trial challenging [the] zero damages award as 20 inconsistent with [the Court's finding of] liability [is] waived . . .
21 [since Hazle did] not object before jury discharge[.]" Id.

22 Further, the jury's award of zero damages is consistent with 23 its causation findings in the jury verdict, and is not contrary to the 24 clear weight of the evidence. The jury "likely concluded" that no 25 defendant was a cause of any injury Hazle received or suffered as a 26 result of his Establishment Clause claim. Guy, 608 F.3d at 588. "[I]t 27 has long been held that a jury may properly refuse to credit even 28 uncontradicted testimony." Id. Here, it is evident that the jury did not find any defendant was a cause of any of Hazle's injuries. Further, it is undisputed that the Board of Prison Hearings ordered Hazle to participate in the Empire program. Hazle himself testified he was "still in custody" when he was sent to the Empire program. (RT 322:3.) Since

1 Hazle "has not shown that the jury's verdict was clearly not supported 2 by the evidence or only based on speculation or guesswork[,] " his motion 3 for a new trial based on his arguments that the jury's verdict was 4 contrary to the clear weight of the evidence and that the jury failed to 5 award damages which was contrary to law and evinces that the jury did 6 not follow the Court's instructions is denied. Id.

7 B. False Testimony/Newly Discovered Evidence

8 Hazle also argues a new trial is warranted because the 9 Defendants presented false testimony that their only option under the 10 circumstances was to return him to prison, and this testimony tainted 11 the trial proceedings. (Mot. 11:1-2.) Defendants rejoin that Hazle's 12 "argument that such testimony was false is wholly specious and is 13 contradicted by what Plaintiff learned in depositions of the Defendants 14 . . . months before trial." (Opp'n 12:17-18.)

15 A new trial may be granted if the verdict "is based upon false 16 or perjurious evidence[.]" Molski, 481 F.3d at 729. Hazel has not 17 presented evidence suggesting that any Defendant's testimony was false 18 or perjurious.

19 Hazle also argues that "[e]ven a cursory review of the 20 governing regulations [in the CDCR Operations Manual] demonstrates that 21 Crofoot and Wilding . . . could have made recommendations to the board 22 to remove or adjust the conditions of Hazel's parole[;] [and,] [h]ad the 23 truth been revealed at trial, it would likely have led to a different 24 verdict." (Mot. 11:15-18.) Defendants counter that this Hazle's his 25 argument is tantamount to an objection to their lack-of-authority 26 defense, which Hazel waived since his questions during his cross 27 examination invited this testimony and he did not object to this 28 evidence. (Opp'n 8:26, 9:1-9, 11:24-12:8.) Hazle responds that he is not

1 arguing that the Court improperly admitted the lack-of-authority 2 evidence. (Reply 2:6-8.) Hazle argues:

3 Notwithstanding defendants' testimony to the contrary, 4 CDCR's Operations Manual provides that a parole agent and 5 his supervisor have a variety of options when a civil 6 addict parolee such as Hazle is deemed to be in violation 7 of the terms of his parole. Specifically, a parole agent 8 is required under these circumstances to prepare a report 9 to the [Narcotic Addict Evaluation Authority ("NAEA")] in 10 which he must make one of several recommendations, at 11 least three of which do not involve returning the parolee 12 to prison. He may, for example, recommend that the NAEA 13 "add, delete or modify any special condition of civil 14 addict parole," that the parolee "continue on parole" (a 15 recommendation which may be made when the "civil addict 16 parolee has violated conditions of parole or when a 17 violation is minor"), or that parole be suspended and 18 reinstated (a recommendation which "may be made when a 19 violation has occurred, but civil addict parolee's best 20 interests would be better served by retention in 21 community"). See Article 14 - Civil Addict Violations, §§ 22 82050.1, and 82050.7. Even in the absence of a violation 23 of a condition of parole, a parole agent may recommend 24 that NAEA "add or remove special conditions of release or 25 civil addict parole." Article 11 - Conditions of Release, 26 Parole and NAEA Appeals, §82020.2.1.

27 (Mot. 4:2-15.)

28 Although Hazle indicates the CDCR's Operations Manual, which he contends reveals Defendants had options other than returning him to prison after he was removed from the Empire program, is newly discovered evidence that warrants a new trial, he has not addressed the standard applicable to determining whether this evidence is newly discovered evidence that justifies granting his motion for a new trial. To prevail on his motion for a new trial under Rule 59 based on newly discovered evidence Hazle has the burden of establishing: "(1) the evidence was discovered after trial, (2) the exercise of due diligence would not have resulted in the evidence being discovered at an earlier stage and (3) the newly discovered evidence is of such magnitude that production of it earlier would likely have changed the outcome of the case." Far Out Productions, Inc. v. Oskar, 247 F.3d 986, 992-93 (9th Cir. 2001).

1 Hazle "fails to [address or] meet any of these three 2 criteria." Coastal Transfer Co. v. Toyota Motor Sales, U.S.A., 833 F.2d 3 208, 212 (9th Cir. 1987). On the first point, Hazle indicates he had 4 possession of this evidence prior to trial as follows: "Since defendants 5 had never raised this 'lack of authority' defense as an affirmative 6 defense or in the pretrial statement, trial brief, or other submissions 7 that called for disclosures of such defense, plaintiff had neither 8 anticipated the need for such evidence nor included these Operations 9 Manual provisions in his pretrial exhibit list." (Mot. 4:23-26.) 10 "Evidence is not 'newly discovered' under the Federal Rules if it was in 11 the moving party's possession at the time of trial or could have been 12 discovered with reasonable diligence." Coastal Transfer Co., 833 F.2d at 13 212.

14 Hazle's argument indicates he did not realize before trial 15 that the Operations Manual could be probative of each Defendant's state 16 of mind at the time each Defendant made a decision relevant to Hazel's 17 punitive damages claims. The punitive damages jury instruction indicated 18 this evidence could have probative value since it stated in part: "An 19 act or omission is oppressive if the defendant injures or damages or 20 otherwise violates the rights of Plaintiff with unnecessary harshness or 21 severity, such as by the misuse or abuse of authority or power or by the 22 taking advantage of some weakness or disability or misfortune of 23 Plaintiff." (RT 423:1-6.) This provision of the punitive damages jury 24 instruction is almost identical to a provision in Hazle's proposed jury 25 instruction number eight, which also used the language "misuse or abuse 26 of authority or power". (ECF No. 118 16:16-19.) Since "misuse or abuse 27 of authority or power" was a trial issue, it should have been apparent 28 to Hazle that the trial could include evidence on what each Defendant

1 understood to be his or her authority. The pretrial order states that 2 "[t]rial on the damage issues shall be to a jury[,]" and the parties 3 understood that damage issues included punitive damages. See U.S. v.
4 First Nat. Bank of Circle, 652 F.2d 882, 886 (9th Cir. 1981) (indicating 5 that "a pretrial order should . . . be liberally construed to permit 6 evidence and theories at trial that can fairly be said to be embraced 7 within its language").

8 Hazle does not adequately explain why he could not have 9 obtained the referenced Operations Manual provisions before the trial 10 was over. Even if each Defendant's lack-of-authority testimony at trial 11 surprised Hazle, it is unclear why Hazle did not obtain the referenced 12 Operations Manual provisions before the trial ended. Hazle has not shown 13 that his decision, resulting in his failure to use this evidence during 14 the trial, constitutes the measure of diligence required under the newly 15 discovered evidence criteria. Therefore, the Court need not reach the 16 question of whether this evidence would have changed the outcome of the 17 case.

18 Accordingly, Hazle has not shown that a Defendant perjured him 19 or herself, or that he is entitled to a new trial based on newly 20 discovered evidence.

21 IV. CONCLUSION

22 For the stated reasons, Hazle's motion for a new trial is 23 DENIED.
