Food and Drug Administration, HHS

§ 866.5765 Retinol-binding protein immunological test system.

(a) Identification. A retinol-binding protein immunological test system is a device that consists of the reagents used to measure by immunochemical techniques the retinol-binding protein that binds and transports vitamin A in the diagnosis of fibrinolytic (blood-clotting) disorders.

(b) Classification. Class II (performance standards).

[47 FR 50823, Nov. 9, 1982, as amended at 66 FR 38793, July 25, 2001]