Food and Drug Administration, HHS

§ 866.2300  Multipurpose culture medium.

(a) Identification. A multipurpose culture medium is a device that consists primarily of liquid or solid biological materials intended for medical purposes for the cultivation and identification of several types of pathogenic microorganisms without the need of additional nutritional supplements.