

change would be an alarming development that would further exacerbate the current problems in the student loan program. I urge the Committee to reconsider this decision.

I am sending an identical letter to Senator Kassebaum.

Yours sincerely,

U.S. DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION,
OFFICE OF THE GENERAL COUNSEL,
Washington, DC, September 28, 1995.

MEMORANDUM

To: The Secretary

From: Judith A. Winston, General Counsel

Subject: Guaranty Agency Reserves

Earlier this week, the Senate Committee on Labor and Human Resources approved certain changes to the statutory provisions relating to the Federal Family Education Loan (FFEL) Program in connection with the budget reconciliation bill. One of the approved provisions would make significant changes in the status and ownership of guaranty agency reserve funds. If enacted, these changes would cede Federal ownership of more than $1.7 billion in funds and assets to state or private non profit agencies.

In particular, the bill passed by the Committee would make significant changes to §422(g) of the Higher Education Act of 1965, as amended (HEA). Currently §422(g) reflects numerous Federal court decisions that the reserve funds of the guaranty agencies are Federal property which is held by the guaranty agency as a trustee of the funds for the general public. See Puerto Rico Higher Education Assistance Corp. v. Riley, 10 F.3d 847, 851 (D.C. Cir. 1993); State of Colorado v. Cavazos, 962 F.2d 968, 971 (10th Cir. 1992); Rhode Island Higher Education Assistance Auth. v. Secretary, U.S. Dep't of Education, 929 F.2d 844 (1st Cir. 1991); Great Lakes Higher Education Corp. v. Cavazos, 911 F.2d 10 (7th Cir. 1990); Education Assistance Corp. v. Cavazos, 902 F.2d 617, 627 (8th Cir. 1990), cert. denied U.S. , 111 S.Ct. 246 (1990); Ohio Student Loan Com'n v. Cavazos, 902 F.2d 894 (6th Cir. 1990), cert. denied U.S. , 111 S.Ct. 246 (1990); South Carolina State Education Assistance Auth Corp. v. Cavazos, 897, F.2d 1272 (4th Cir. 1990), cert. denied U.S. , 111 S.Ct. 243; Delaware v. Cavazos, 723 F.Supp. 234 (D. Del. 1989), aff'd without opinion, 919 F.2d 137 (3d Cir. 1990). Earlier this month, the United States District Court for the District of Idaho reaffirmed the holding of these earlier decisions that guaranty agencies do not have (and have never had) a property right in their reserve funds. Instead, that court held that the guaranty agencies' reserve funds are Federal property and are subject to the control of the Secretary of Education. Student Loan Fund of Idaho v. Riley, Case No. CV 94-0413-S-LMB (D. Ida., Sept. 14, 1995).

The bill would essentially give away the overwhelming amount of Federal property included in the guaranty agency reserve funds. Most importantly, the bill would redefine the term "reserve fund" to mean "the Federal portion of a reserve fund". See §1004(e)(2) of the Committee bill, p. 38, lines 14-16. The bill would then limit the Federal property to an amount calculated under the formula in §422(a)(2) of the HEA. The formula in §422(a)(2) of the HEA would, in most cases, limit the "Federal portion" of the reserve fund to the amount of Federal advances maintained by the guaranty agency plus interest. As of September 30, 1994, the amount of outstanding Federal advances was $40 million out of total guaranty agency reserves (all of which came from federal sources or under Federal authority) of more than $1.8 billion. See FY 1993 Loan Programs Data Book, at 65, 67. Thus, the Federal government would be relinquishing ownership and control of more than $1.7 billion in federal funds and property.

Enactment of these proposed changes to the definition of "reserve fund" would also effectively end Federal control over the uses of the reserve funds by the agencies. If the reserve funds are the property of the guaranty agency and the agency uses those funds for purposes unrelated to the FFEL program, the Department would have no authority to take action against the agency. Thus, the Department would be unable to take action against an agency that used funds intended to be used to pay lender claims on elaborate offices or high executive salaries. If this provision were enacted, the strong possibility exists that an agency could choose to use reserve funds for non-program purposes and be unable to pay lenders' claims. At that point, the lender would then be able to demand payment from the Department under §432(o) of the HEA. The Department would have to use taxpayer funds to pay the lenders.

This proposal would also provide an incentive for some guaranty agencies to leave the program. An agency which left the program would be able to take its reserve fund (minus Federal advances and interest) with it and use it for purposes unrelated to higher education or student loans.¹ Moreover, those agencies which have already established loan servicing and secondary market operations could use the reserve funds to compete with private parties which provide services in this area.

NOMINATION OF JUSTICE JAMES DENNIS FOR THE U.S. COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE FIFTH CIRCUIT

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I would like to correct a matter that arose in yesterday's discussion on the nomination of Justice Dennis. As the committee investigation found, a case can be made that Justice Dennis should have recused himself and that he should have notified the committee of the problem. My staff has told me that it communicated these conclusions to interested Senators. But my staff has informed me that it never presented any conclusions to Senators concerning what the committee would have done had it known of the Times-Picayune information before it reported the nomination to the floor. I can appreciate how some might have misinterpreted these findings but I wanted to make the matter clear for the record.

THE BAD DEBT BOXSCORE

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, as of the close of business yesterday, September

¹Those agencies which are tax exempt non profits under §501(c)(3) of the Internal Revenue Code would have to use the funds in accordance with the requirements of that section. However, some agencies have already transferred significant portions of reserve funds to associated non-profit companies which may not be tax exempt and thus not bound by those restrictions. Moreover, some state laws appear to allow non-profit corporations which dissolve to distribute remaining assets to members (generally the company's directors) in certain circumstances. See 805 ILCS 105/112.16 (Illinois); A.R.S. §10-2422 (Arizona). In regard to state agencies, it appears that a State could close the guaranty agency, put the reserve funds into its general fund for use for other purposes and leave the Department with the responsibility for paying lenders.

28, the Federal debt stood at $4,954,794,272,486.85. On a per capita basis, every man, woman and child in America owes $18,808.48 as his or her share of that debt.

THE FINAL DAY OF BOSTON GARDEN

Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, I come to the floor of the Senate today to convey my thoughts on the closing of the fabled Boston Garden in Boston, Massachusetts.

To almost all of my constituents in Massachusetts, the Boston Garden represents the best in the world of sports. Many championship battles have been waged within the hallowed walls of this magnificent structure. Some were lost, most were won, but all are captured forever in the hearts and minds of the legions of Boston sports fans.

Just ask any hockey player from Northeastern University, Boston College, Harvard University or Boston University what the Boston Garden means to them and you will hear war stories about two Mondays every February where seasons are made or broken during the Beanpot Championship.

Just ask any of the high school athletes, whose teams were good enough to persevere through endless qualifying playoff rounds in order to play for a league championship on the Boston Bruins' ice or the Celtics' parquet floor, what the Boston Garden means to them and you will hear innumerable accounts of a dream come true.

Just ask the scores of everyday people, who file into the Garden to sit together knee-to-knee and elbow-to-elbow, what the Boston Garden means to them, and you will hear recollections of rumors, myths, legends, and lore.

Gallery gods, leprechauns, ghosts, and other beings are rumored to inhabit the Garden and wreak havoc with the fate of visiting, unfriendly teams. Some say they are responsible for turning up the heat on the L.A. Lakers and trying to fog-out and eventually powering down the Edmonton Oilers. Others claim they are to be credited with the infamous dead spots in the parquet and the impossible bounces of the puck off the boards.

Other teams feared coming to the Garden. They declared it archaic and decrepid with abysmal accommodations and playing conditions. But Boston fans know the truth, they feared coming to the Garden because they hated to lose.

Legends abound in the Boston Garden, and historical significance seemingly is a basic element of every event that has taken place there.

On election night in 1960, then-Senator John KENNEDY delivered his first campaign address in the city of Boston at the Garden. An estimated 1 million people flocked to the area surrounding the Garden and a precious few 25,000 were fortunate enough to be inside to hear his words. Many other great politicians of this century have addressed the people of Boston from a platform in Boston Garden. President Eisenhower, Horace Taft, Mayor James Curley, Gov. Thomas Dewey, and Winston Churchill are just a few who have contributed to the Garden's political lore.

I could stand here and talk for days on the meaning of the Boston Garden and the tumultuous history it has enjoyed. I could recall the many games I have attended and rallies I have witnessed. There are many things worth mentioning, but I am certain I would be unable to recall them all.

Tonight, in Boston, the people will re-live all of these and other memories in a ceremony full of history and celebration designed to mark the closing of one of the greatest venues in America.

"Havlicek stole the ball * * *," "Sanderson to Orr * * *," "Bird for three * * *," "Penalty—O'Reilly," "Russell with a block," "Esposito shoots, scores!" "DJ steals, over to Bird, Good!" "Cheevers stones him," "Cousy tricky dribbles, lays it in." The voices of the past catalogue the great moments in a history soon to be turned over to a new building and a new era of sports in Boston.

As the lights dim for the final time, echoes will resound through the city and people will think of their fondest memories of the Garden and celebrate the great times enjoyed by those who were there, or watching, or listening, when great things happened.

THE CONVENTIONAL WEAPONS REVIEW CONFERENCE: AN OPPORTUNITY FOR U.S. LEADERSHIP

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, this week representatives of over 50 governments began meeting in Vienna, Austria to discuss proposals to amend the Conventional Weapons Convention, which contains the first laws of war limitations on the use of landmines.

Fifteen years ago, the United States played a leading role in negotiations on the Convention. However, despite lofty rhetoric at the time, the Convention is so riddled with loopholes and exceptions, as well as lacking any verification procedures, that the numbers of civilian casualties from landmines has soared. This is because the focus of the negotiations then was on reducing the dangers to military personnel, rather than on the problems landmines cause for civilians.

Today, there are 80 to 110 million landmines in over 60 countries, each one waiting to explode from the pressure of a footstep.

These hidden killers have turned vast areas of land, in countries struggling to rebuild after years of war, into death traps. According to the State Department every 22 minutes someone is maimed or killed by a landmine. That is 26,000 people each year, most of whom are innocent civilians.

It would cost tens of billions of dollars to locate and remove the mines. It is an incredibly arduous, dangerous, and prohibitively expensive task. There is no way they will be cleared. The world's arsenals are overflowing with new mines that are only compounding the problem in every armed conflict today.

Mr. President, the meetings in Vienna began yesterday with dramatic announcements by two of our NATO allies, France and Austria. The French Government announced that it would halt all production of antipersonnel landmines, and begin destroying their stockpiles of these weapons. The Austrian Government declared that its military would renounce their use, and destroy their stockpiles.

Earlier this year, Belgium outlawed all production, use and exports of antipersonnel mines.

I mention this because just a month ago, my amendment to impose a 1-year moratorium on the use of these weapons passed the Senate 67 to 27.

Yesterday's announcements by our NATO allies go even further, and the United States should seize this opportunity to support them. These NATO countries defy the Pentagon's assertion that modern militaries like ours require antipersonnel landmines. Landmines are a coward's weapon, that are overwhelmingly used against civilians. If the United States were to join France, Belgium and Austria it would give an enormous push toward the goal of ridding the world of these weapons.

Mr. President, I am going to put my full statement in the RECORD, but I do want to say this. This conference in Vienna presents the United States with a tremendous opportunity, an opportunity that must not be missed.

Fifteen years ago the Conventional Weapons Convention was signed with much fanfare, but it has turned out to be worth little more than the paper it was printed on. Today, there are hundreds of thousands of people dead or maimed by landmines, the very weapon that Convention was intended to control.

We have seen the immense devastation landmines cause, and continue to cause, around the world. Each day, another 70 people are killed or horribly mutilated. The undeniable truth is that antipersonnel landmines cannot be controlled. They are too cheap to make, too easy to transport and conceal. They are the "Saturday night specials" of civil wars, and they have become one of the world's greatest scourges.

Last September at the United Nations, President Clinton took a courageous step, when he called for the eventual elimination of antipersonnel mines. My amendment was a small step toward that goal.

Its purpose was not unilateral disarmament, as some in the Pentagon would have one believe, but leadership. Leadership by the world's only superpower with a military arsenal that dwarfs that of any other nation, to stop the senseless slaughter of tens of thousands of innocent people. By setting an example, we can lead others to take similar action, just as our European allies announced steps yesterday that we should imitate.

The amendment that won the bipartisan support of two thirds of the Senate should be a model for our negotiators in Vienna. I only wish these negotiations were being held in Cambodia, or Angola, where the one-legged victims of landmines can be seen on every street corner.

I wish the negotiators could experience the constant fear of losing a leg, or an arm, or a child, simply from stepping in the wrong place. Instead of weeks of lofty speeches in air conditioned room quibbling over an elaborate set of unenforceable rules, I think we would see dramatic progress toward a ban on these weapons.

Let us not repeat the mistake of a decade and a half ago. Let us finally recognize that there are some weapons that are so indiscriminate, so inhumane, and so impossible to control, that they should be banned altogether. Let us finally do what we say, and stop this when we have the chance.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a New York Times article about the French Government's announcement.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the New York Times Sept. 27, 1995
PARIS TO SCRAP SOME LAND MINES IN FACE OF GROWING SENTIMENT

VIENNA, Sept. 26.—France announced today that it would stop production and export of all antipersonnel mines and begin to destroy its stocks.

Xavier Emmanuelli, the French secretary of state for emergency humanitarian actions, said at a conference in Vienna that France was determined to carry on its struggle against mines, which caused a "humanitarian catastrophe."

"To further this end, France has decided to adopt a moratorium on the production of all types of antipersonnel mines," Mr. Emmanuelli told delegates. "We shall also halt the production of these weapons."

Furthermore, he added, "France will as of now begin to reduce its stocks of antipersonnel mines by destroying them."

The Vienna conference is reviewing a 1980 convention on weapons that are deemed to be indiscriminate or excessively injurious. It will also be discussing laser weapons that blind people exposed to them.

The United Nations Secretary General, Boutros Boutros-Ghali, called for a total ban on land mines, which he said killed or maimed thousands of civilians each year.

He acknowledged that the conference was unlikely to outlaw land mines completely but urged participating countries to at least establish an export moratorium.

In a videotaped message, the United Nations chief said 1,600 people would be killed or wounded in mine blasts around the world during the time the conference was being held. It ends Oct. 13.

Mr. Boutros-Ghali said several countries had already heeded a call by the General Assembly to establish an export moratorium and he urged the conference to back an export ban to states that had not yet ratified the 1980 convention.

France's move, which does not cover anti-tank mines, is likely to increase pressure on countries that are still exporting mines.
