TOMMY WYCHE: FATHER OF SOUTH CAROLINA'S MOUNTAIN BRIDGE WILDERNESS

● Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I rise today to salute a native South Carolinian and the "Father of South Carolina's Mountain Bridge Wilderness," C. Thomas Wyche. On December 7, 1995, here in Washington, Tommy Wyche was recognized for his outstanding contributions to environmental conservation when he was awarded one of the Nation's top environmental awards, The Alexander Calder Conservation Award.

Located just 30 miles up the road from Tommy's hometown of Greenville, the rolling red clay hills of the South Carolina piedmont suddenly springs into the foothills of the Great Smokey Mountains. The area, known as South Carolina's Blue Ridge Escarpment, is one of unusual natural beauty. Typified by high cliffs, steep terrain, rushing rivers and dense forests, it is relatively pristine despite being located within 30 miles of one of the Nation's fastest growing communities. It is for preserving this natural wonderland that Tommy Wyche was recognized.

Mr. President, the Mountain Bridge is just one of Tommy's many conservation successes. Over the last quarter century, he has almost singlehandedly led the fight to ensure that the mountains of South Carolina are preserved for the benefit of future generations. He spearheaded efforts to designate the Chattooga River as a wild and scenic river, and drafted the South Carolina Heritage Trust Act, the first in the United States. In addition, he has produced books celebrating the area, a guidebook and a photographic journal, both of which have played an important part in educating the public on the area's natural treasures.

Tommy's crowning achievement, and the basis for the Calder Award, is his work to preserve 40,000 acres along the South Carolina-North Carolina border—the Mountain Bridge Wilderness Area. Tommy began efforts to preserve the area in the early 1970's. As I mentioned earlier, this is an area of rough terrain which contains a number of natural wonders like Raven Cliff Falls, a 400 foot waterfall—one of the highest east of the Mississippi—and a monolith known as Table Rock. A recent biological assessment of just a portion of the wilderness area produced a number of astonishing finds, enormous trees, trophy-size native brook trout, and a stunning variety of birds, reptiles, amphibians and insects, many of them rare or endangered and two new to science. The scientist concluded the area was "the most significant wilderness remaining in South Carolina."

Tommy not only originated the idea of the Mountain Bridge but he is responsible for its success. In the beginning, he organized a nonprofit organization known as the Natureland Trust to preserve the area we now know as the Mountain Bridge. Working with the Natureland Trust, Tommy met with numerous landowners, walked their properties, and developed plans for the donation or bargain sale of their lands to the State. In many instances, he volunteered his expertise as a tax attorney to insure the most beneficial transfer for all parties. Slowly but surely, Tommy's efforts began to pay off—a hundred acres here, a thousand acres there. The wilderness acres began to take shape.

Today the Mountain Bridge is almost complete, although Tommy has recently been working on one last acquisition. Although Tommy and the Natureland Trust are closing in on their goal, I am sure he is looking for other mountains, not to climb, but to preserve—other missions, like the Mountain Bridge which will ensure future generations enjoy the natural beauty of South Carolina.

Mr. President, for a quarter century Tommy Wyche has worked tirelessly and unselfishly to coordinate efforts to preserve this piece of South Carolina's wilderness. I encourage others to follow his lead. Given the severity of the current budget deficit, the Federal Government has limited resources dedicated to preserving wild areas. I encourage others to use Tommy Wyche as a model for cooperative conservation. I commend him for a job well done, congratulate him for the Calder award and encourage him to continue his good works.●

ERNEST BOYER

● Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, it was with great sadness that I learned of the death of Ernest Boyer who was president of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching.

Ernie Boyer was a friend to many of us in the Senate, and to thousands who will never know his name but who will feel his influence for years to come. His contributions to education are well known. "Ready to Learn" and "The Basic School," his excellent primers on the state of American education, both make the strong case that we can't start too soon in preparing our children—through education—for the world they will face.

It was my good fortune, Mr. President, to have Ernest Boyer as a sounding board, an ally, and a friend. We have lost a remarkable man with his death, and I hope that others of us will be able in some small measure to carry on with his ideas.

Ralph Waldo Emerson wrote about "sensible men and conscientious men all over the world [who] were of one religion of well-doing and daring." I believe, Mr. President, that Ernest Boyer's well-doing and daring sprang from his sensible view and his conscientious approach. He was very fine, and I will miss his counsel and friendship.●
