Vol. 141

WASHINGTON, WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 13, 1995

No. 198—Part II

House of Representatives

DISPOSING OF SENATE AMENDMENT 115 TO H.R. 1868, FOREIGN OPERATIONS, EXPORT FINANCING, AND RELATED PROGRAMS APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 1996

Mr. CALLAHAN. Mr. Speaker, pursuant to House Resolution 296, I call up from the Speaker's table the bill (H.R. 1868) making appropriations for foreign operations, export financing, and related programs for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1996, and for other purposes, with the Senate amendment numbered 115 thereto, and to consider the motion printed in section 2 of the resolution.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. KINGSTON). The Clerk will designate the Senate amendment.

The text of the Senate amendment is as follows:

Senate amendment 115:

Page 44, line 19, after "lizations" insert: "Provided, That in determining eligibility for assistance from funds appropriated to carry out section 104 of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, nongovernmental and multilateral organizations shall not be subjected to requirements more restrictive than the requirements applicable to foreign governments for such assistance: Provided further, That none of the funds made available under this Act may be used to lobby for or against abortion".

MOTION OFFERED BY MR. CALLAHAN

Mr. CALLAHAN. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will designate the motion.

The text of the motion is as follows:

Mr. CALLAHAN moves that the House recede from its amendment to the amendment of the Senate numbered 115, and concur therein with an amendment, as follows:

In lieu of the matter proposed by said amendment, insert:

"Authorization of Population Planning

"Sec. 518A. Section 526 of this Act shall not apply to funds made available in this Act for population planning activities or other population assistance pursuant to section 104(b) of the Foreign Assistance Act or any other provision of law, or to funds made available in title IV of this Act as a contribution to the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA)."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to House Resolution 296, the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. CALLAHAN] will be recognized for 30 minutes, and a Member opposed, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. WILSON], will be recognized for 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. CALLAHAN].

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. CALLAHAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks on the disposition of Senate amendment number 115, and that I be permitted to include tabular and extraneous material.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. GOODLATTE). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alabama?

There was no objection.

Mr. CALLAHAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume. Mr. Speaker, I do not want to take any more time on this matter than what is necessary. We have already had this matter, population assistance and abortion, before the House four times previously this year. I want to be sure, however, that all Members understand what the motion does and does not do.

The motion provided for by the rule does not cut population funding. It freezes obligations under the fiscal 1996 bill for population funding until it has been authorized or a further waiver of the statutory authorization requirement has been enacted. It does not halt the hundreds of millions of dollars of population funding from prior year bills that has not yet been spent.

This motion does not ask the Senate to agree to enact a funding cutoff for foreign private groups that decline to comply with the Mexico City policy restrictions. The Senate does not have the votes to do that.

Mr. Speaker, I want the Members to be aware of another proposal that I offered to the Senate managers of the foreign assistance bill several weeks ago.

Mr. Speaker, as the Members may be aware, we have had various differences with the Senate on this proposition. As a matter of fact, the original bill that was sent to the Senate came back with 193 amendments. We were able to resolve 192 of the differences between the House and Senate. The only one that could not be resolved is the issue on abortion. We have tried, and tried with frustration, to look at a possible way to pass the foreign operations bill for 1996, to satisfy those that are concerned about abortion worldwide, that are concerned about planned parenthood, to no avail. We simply have been unable to get the votes in the Senate to make this reality come true for the 1996 foreign operations bill.

We are in a situation now that we will send another bill to the Senate and ask that they, with their great wisdom, find a way to pass something that can pass through the Senate and that also can be acceptable to the House. I, for example, have offered what I think was a reasonable compromise to the pro-life forces in the House, and that was to cut the funding capability of any organization to 50 percent of its 1995 level until they sign the Mexico City policy language. In my opinion, that is a fair resolve in this House of compromise.

If we do not get something to the Senate and get something from the Senate that we can concur on, that will satisfy us, we are not going to have a 1996 appropriation bill for foreign operations.

Instead, we are going to be dealing in a continuing resolution, a CR that more than likely will not include any protection for those of us that are concerned about abortion worldwide. A CR may not protect anything that has to do with child survival. We could lose many things, including the prohibition of USAID from moving into a Taj Mahal downtown and paying each month hundreds of thousands of dollars in unnecessary rent. A CR will not reduce funding to USAID. It will not cut the funding that we were successful in passing through this House, unless we get something realistic that both sides can work with.

In a sense, Mr. Speaker, I chastise those Members of Congress who are so hell-bent and determined to have their way that they are interfering, in my opinion, with the due process and with the compromise that this body must occasionally represent.

Mr. Speaker, this measure is another vehicle going back to the Senate. We do not expect the Senate to accept it. I would not think that the President would sign the bill if they Senate passed it, so it is futile, in a sense, to think that we are going to enact this legislation with this language in here, but it is the only opportunity we have to send this train back to the Senate and ask them to look at it and to take into account those of us who are concerned about abortion being funded or encouraged by any American moneys.

I want Members to be aware of another proposal that I offered to the Senate managers of the foreign assistance bill several weeks ago. I suggested that they accept what I call an incentive program for private groups to accept the Mexico City policy language.

Under my proposal, which is not in this rule, all groups which now receive A.I.D. population money could continue to receive up to 50 percent of current funding. However, there would be no funding limits on foreign private groups which agreed to comply with Mexico City principles. That would be the incentive for many is not most population assistance providers to sign on to the Mexico City principles again, as the did prior to 1993.

I recognize that the gentleman from New Jersey opposes the approach that I just described. Yet another pro-life Members of this body and the Senate continue to express interest in it. I just wanted the House to know that many of us have been working on a compromise that will enable us to send this appropriations bill to the President for his signature.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. WILSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. OBEY].

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, again we are here because the committee has still not finished its work. We are here because there are still six appropriation bills which have not yet crossed the finish line and become law. The foreign operations bill which we are discussing today is one of those bills. We are going to be in a big fight over whether or not we should pass the CR come Friday, a continuing resolution to prevent the Government from closing down. And we are going to be in that fight because we have not yet finished our appropriations work. I would think that under those circumstances what we would be looking for is ways to find compromise between the House and Senate so we can move more of these bills forward.

That is what I very much want to do on this bill, but this language, as the gentleman who just spoke clearly indicated, this language has no chance whatsoever of being accepted by the Senate or becoming law. So my question is, why on earth should we do this?

Mr. Speaker, this proposal meets somebody's strategic idea that what we have to do is send another piece of legislation to the Senate which we know will not pass. I think all that does is to harden each side, rather than make each side more flexible. I would point out, the practical effect of this strategy is to ask 221 Members of this House from both sides of the aisle who voted against this proposition on the Labor-HEW bill to vote for it today.

What this proposition essentially does is to eliminate all international family planning money. This is not an abortion issue. I support efforts, for instance, to shut off funding for the U.N. population program if it continues to operate in China. I agree with the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. SMITH] on that issue. However, I do not agree with, and I do not think most Members of this House do, and I know that many Members on the Republican side of the aisle do not agree with the idea of eliminating all authority for any family planning programs internationally.

The following Members voted against this amendment when it was offered by the gentleman from Louisiana, Mr. LIVINGSTON, from the HEW bill. I am going to read everybody's name:

WATT of North Carolina, WAXMAN, WHITE, WILLIAMS, WILSON, and WISE, Ms. WOOLSEY, Messrs. WYDEN, WYNN, YATES, ZELIFF, and ZIMMER.

All of those Members voted against this proposition when the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. LIVINGSTON] offered language which in essence cut off funding for all family planning domestically.

Mr. Speaker, I would submit that cutting off all family planning funds for international programs is even worse, because if you do, you know that that will disarm us in our ability to try to do something about uncontrolled population growth in many sectors of the world. If you are for compromise, you ought to be looking for compromise language. You should not swallow language which the manager of the bill himself indicates has no chance whatsoever of becoming law. All that is going to do is guarantee that we have to have a continuing resolution for this bill. I do not think we ought to be doing that. We ought to be trying to find ways to pass this bill.

Mr. CALLAHAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I might say that this does not deny funding to Planned Parenthood or to any of the agencies. It just simply says what we have heard over and over again in this House: that the Committee on Appropriations ought not to be authorizing items, so we have appropriated the money in this bill. We just simply say that until such time as the Congress of the United States authorizes it through an authorization bill, that the money cannot be spent.

Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. LIVINGSTON], the chairman of our committee.

(Mr. LIVINGSTON asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

□ 1130

Mr. LIVINGSTON. Mr. Speaker, I was glad to see the chart from the gentleman from Wisconsin once again. In fact, that chart is looking better every day. All those black lines mean that the appropriations bills are working their way through the process.

It may take a little bit longer than we might have hoped, but they are betting there and that chart is going to be complete someday, hopefully within the next week. We will find out at Christmastime, either this Christmas or next Christmas, as to whether or not the chart is complete.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LIVINGSTON. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. OBEY. I would be happy to buy the gentleman the biggest scotch in town if all of those bills are passed by Christmas.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. We will see.

Actually the fact is the administration is negotiating, or course, with the Congress to see whether or not we can come to a package deal and complete business on all of these appropriations bills. I want to ask the gentleman's indulgence and allow me to draw the lines to complete the chart when the package is complete.

The point is, though, that we have indeed passed seven entire appropriations subcommittee bills and they have been signed into law. The eighth, the Commerce-Justice-State bill, goes to the President today for his signature or his veto. The VA-HUD bill, the Foreign Ops bill which is on the floor today and the Interior bill are all working their way through various processes and should be complete by, if not the end of this week, certainly by the end of next week, we hope.

the District of Columbia bill, likewise, has one or two issues in conference that remain to be dealt with. I think that that bill will be on the floor very shortly.

So the only bill that really is far from passage, and that is because the other party as filibustering it in the Senate, is the Labor-HHS bill.

We are working our way through these bills. This bill unfortunately has been to the floor twice before. This is the third time. This is a conference report that has been hung up on the issue of abortion. We have come to an impasse. The Senate does not want to adopt the language that the House has offered. So we have offered some new language which we hope they will consider and which we hope that they will adopt. They may or may not. But we have to move the process forward.

In the spirit of doing exactly that, I would ask all of our Members to join with us, pass this bill one more time, get it to the Senate and let them work their will and hopefully let us get this bill to the President for his signature.

There has been some disagreement on exactly what the language was that disallowed funding for family planning, international family planning. I would say in response to what the gentleman from Wisconsin said that that amendment really had little to do with this provision. This deals with UNFPA, U.N. family planning operations, and all it does is freeze the money in place. It says the money is there but that the money will be frozen until such time as the authorization bill is passed.

Frankly, it would be better if the issue of abortion were handled in the authorization bills. Because it is policy that should be handled by the authorization bills. And so what this does is to remove the issue of abortion and transfer it to the place it belongs, to the authorization committees for them to consider, for them to assess the policy ramifications and for them to ultimately pass the law.

This is an attempt to take abortion out of the appropriations process and say to the authorizers, you do the job, and let us not hang up the appropriations bills in this House and in the Senate up any longer so that we can get the country's business done and so that we can get the functions of government funded and so that we do not have to waste any more time and be here at Christmastime.

Mr. WILSON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LIVINGSTON. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. WILSON. I was just going to ask the chairman if he understands and remembers that it has been 10 years since we had an authorization bill on foreign aid.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. Reclaiming my time, the gentleman has reminded me that it has been a very long time, but I am very hopeful and optimistic that we are going to pass one this year or certainly within the next 3 months. Certainly before the gentleman retires.

Mr. WILSON. I hope so.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. And we do not want him to retire, we hope he decides to stay around, but if that is his decision, I hope that by the time he retires, he will have confidence and knowledge that the Foreign Affairs authorization bill has been passed by both Houses and enacted into law so he can take that with him back to Texas.

Mr. WILSON. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. Mr. Speaker, I urge all my colleagues to vote for this bill.

Mr. WILSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentlewoman from New York [Mrs. LOWEY].

Mrs. LOWEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong opposition to this amendment because it will effectively eliminate funding for international family planning. Our colleagues on the far right continue to hold up this bill with their extreme legislative agenda. This has got to stop. Let us pass this bill.

After all, this amendment is just another way to masquerade the issue and stop all family planning funding. Let us stop it and let us get this bill passed today.

Our chairman, the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. CALLAHAN], has crafted an excellent foreign aid bill. This extreme language, I say to the chairman, is preventing this critical bill from being enacted.

Let me tell my colleagues exactly what is happening here. Our anti-choice colleagues have attempted to place restrictions on the international family planning programs in this bill, despite the fact that abortion funding overseas has been prohibited since 1973. Their restrictions have been rejected by the Senate three times. We have heard the message loud and clear.

Now their solution to the Senate's refusal to accept their extreme restrictions is to do something even more extreme, to eliminate the programs altogether.

This bill is already 2½ months late, and rather than offer a true compromise or simply accept that their restrictions have failed 3 times, our colleagues on the right now offer an amendment that they know both the Senate and the administration will reject.

Why do they insist on wasting our time with this? This is the fourth time that we have voted on this appropriations bill. Why do they continue to play politics with a bill that contains funding for so many vital programs throughout the world?

Their amendment will effectively end one of the most important forms of aid that we provide to other countries, family planning assistance. The amendment exempts the family planning program, and only the family planning program, from the waiver in the bill that allows funds to be appropriated even though the foreign aid authorization bill has not passed.

What our colleagues have not told you is that the foreign aid authorization bill has not passed in a dozen years, and I know the chairman is optimistic. The Senate has already indicated that it will not pass the authorization bill this year.

The reality is, it could be years before an authorization bill is signed into law. We know that. In the meantime, we will have failed to fund vital family planning programs throughout the world.

No one can deny that the need for family planning services in developing countries is urgent. The aid we provide is valuable and worthwhile.

The world's population is growing at an unprecedented rate. In 40 years our planet's population will more than double. As a responsible world leader, the United States must do more to deter the environmental, political and health consequences of this explosive growth.

Let us not forget what family planning assistance means to women around the world. Complications of pregnancy, childbirth, unsafe abortion are the leading killers of women of reproductive age. One million women die each year as a result of reproductive health problems. Each year 250,000 women die from unsafe abortions. Only 20 to 35 percent of women in Africa and Asia receive prenatal care. Five hundred million married women want contraceptives but cannot obtain them. Most of these disabilities and deaths could be prevented.

This amendment will stop us from continuing our fight against these tragedies. Simply put, this amendment will end our family planning programs. Period. that is what it would do.

I urge my colleagues, once again, oppose this amendment. We cannot let them eliminate international family planning. There is too much at stake. Let us pass this excellent appropriations bill. Let us take off this extreme amendment. Let us not vote on this again. We need this bill.

I again salute the chairman on this outstanding bill. Let us pass it here today. Let us not bow to the right that continues to tack on the extreme amendments. Let us not do it. Let us join and pass this bill today.

Mr. CALLAHAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Responding to the kind gentlewoman from New York, let me thank her for her help during this past year or so, too, and to tell her that I am optimistic that the Senate is going to bring up the authorization bill either today or tomorrow under a unanimous-consent agreement.

I think for the first time in the 10 years that they have not been able to pass a bill, they are finally going to have a bill that passes the House and the Senate and goes to conference. This is the argument that we always hear, those of us who are appropriators: Do not authorize, do not authorize, you are appropriators.

In this bill, we appropriate the money. What we simply say is it cannot be spent until it is authorized by the proper committee.

Mrs. LOWEY. If the gentleman will yield, let me just say that I am happy the holidays are coming and we all have wishes. I do wish the authorization bill would pass as well as you do but it has not passed in 12 years and I would rather deal with fact rather than fiction, although I wish you and the authorization bill well.

Mr. CALLAHAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. KNOLLENBERG], a member of the subcommittee.

Mr. KNOLLENBERG. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me the time and appreciate his leadership on this issue.

Incidentally, and this is not so incidentally, I rise in strong support for this conference report and for its passage. But I do want to refer to, first of all, the chart that the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. OBEY] brought out. I do like the looks of that chart. It is getting better.

It is because we are working a lot harder to get to a point of success. None of this is very easy. The chairman referred to the fact that we had 193 amendments in the conference committee. We completed and agreed upon 192. The one remaining, of course, is the one we are dealing with today.

This language, I think, ensures that any expenditure of funds for population planning or the UNFPA must be, as has been pointed out here, specifically authorized by this body, which has not been done.

Somebody on the other side made the comment about it has not been done in 10 years. Well, that is not to say it should not be done. I think it should be. We have an opportunity perhaps where that will take place.

We have to be able to debate these things or we will not get anywhere. So maybe this is, in the eyes of the gentlewoman from New York, an extraneous matter, should be done away with, forgotten about, so we can pass this beautiful bill. Well, it is important to a lot of us. It is worth debate. It is something that we want to carry on and come to some conclusion, a successful conclusion.

I would not suggest to you that it is guaranteed, as the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. OBEY] stated, that the Senate will just let this thing float and die. We do not know that yet entirely. There is some idea here that may be beginning to impress them, that there is perhaps more to this and we can come to a conclusion that will satisfy everybody.

As I have said many times before, I strongly support this conference report. It balances fiscal restraint and the needs of foreign policy, and it reflects the reasoned compromise and considerable cooperation that did take place between all of the Members from both sides in committee and also in the conference committee. It deserves bipartisan support.

I think we are at a point now where we can get to a position of passing a bill that is in dire need of being passed. I agree with the sense of urgency but I do not agree that this is an unimportant matter. It is very important to many of us, and it does allow for the continuation of funding at the appropriate time for the specific family planning ideas. It just has to be authorized.

H.R. 1868 allows us to continue to remain active in world events while it reflects our budgetary constraints, and you all know that. This conference report reflects, I believe, what is best for this body. We will send it to the Senate. They will make their decision. I support this conference report and urge all of my colleagues to vote for it.

Mrs. LOWEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KNOLLENBERG. I yield to the gentlewoman from New York.

Mrs. LOWEY. Mr. Speaker, I just want to reassure the gentleman from Michigan that I respect your views on the issues of abortion, just as I respect the views of every one of my colleagues. I just think it is so unfortunate that every appropriations bill is tied up in abortion. I do wish we could isolate that issue, have a real debate, and move this appropriations bill now.

Mr. WILSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from Oregon [Ms. FURSE].

Ms. FURSE. I thank the gentleman for yielding me the time.

Mr. Speaker, I think we should be very clear. This amendment is simply a way to freeze the family planning funds. This amendment targets only family planning, that portion of the legislation.

Family planning works. No one wants abortion to be the only way to control pregnancy. Family planning gets us beyond abortion. It allows people to control the size of their families and thereby control their economies. Family planning is absolutely profamily.

It is truly the most pro-family thing we can do, because it allows families to make the decisions. It is so ridiculous. You know, if I asked my constituents, many, many of them say to me, "You know the greatest problem in this world is over population," over population because of use of resources, because of the stress it puts on communities, overpopulation is a great threat.

Family planning allows us to move beyond. Family planning is one of the greatest parts of getting us to peace and prosperity internationally, because it allows families to decide on how many children they are having. So we really need to defeat this anti-family amendment.

I urge my colleagues to do that.

Mr. CALLAHAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentlewoman from Nevada [Mrs. VUCANOVICH], a member of the Committee on Appropriations.

Mrs. VUCANOVICH. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding. Mr.

Speaker, the House has voted four times to support the pro-life provisions which would ensure that international family planning assistance will be abortion neutral. The first provision prohibits tax dollars from being used by the United Nations Population Fund—which currently helps manage China's brutal one-child-per-one-family policy unless it ceases family planning activities in the People's Republic of China or unless China's family planning activities in China cease to be coercive.

The second provision would ensure that none of the moneys sent to the UNPF may be used to fund any private, nongovernmental, or multilateral organizations that directly or through a subcontractor perform abortions in any foreign country—except to save the life of the mother or in cases of rape or incest.

Now some may claim that this is a gag rule on family planning assistance. However, this is not the case. Abortion is not considered a family planning method and should not be promoted as one, especially by the United States. Recently, the State Department decided that the promotion of abortion should be a priority in advancing U.S. population-control efforts. This is unacceptable to the millions of Americans who do not view abortion as a legitimate method of family planning and do not support Federal funding of abortion except to save the life of the mother or in cases of rape or incest.

The Callahan motion does not eliminate or even reduce the appropriations for population assistance but will leave the appropriations levels in H.R. 1868 intact. However it will delay the use of these appropriated funds until these expenditures are authorized. It will also delink pro-life issues from other important provisions such as aid to Israel, child survival programs and other foreign aid programs.

I urge my colleagues Mr. Speaker to support this motion and allow this important legislation to move forward and fund vital foreign aid programs.

Mr. WILSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DURBIN].

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. Speaker, in the 19th century at the height of the Industrial Revolution, there arose a political group which frankly was opposed to the change and progress of the Industrial Revolution. They were known as the Luddites. The Luddites would try to wreck the machinery of the Industrial Revolution to stop the change that was taking place. They objected to it, and they used violence and terrorism for that purpose. There was a mindless opposition to the reality of change, a resistance to accepting the world as it existed.

What we hear on the floor today is the same mentality when it comes to family planning, a mindless opposition to family planning from groups which characterize themselves as pro-life. Anyone who has taken the time to study the issue understands that the greatest world threats to our children are nuclear proliferation and overpopulation.

Take a look at the expanding population in continents around the world, whether in Asia, Africa, South America. You will find that those expanding populations not only create human suffering for the people living there, but they, in fact, lead to environmental disasters which visit themselves on the entire world as well as to military confrontations which ultimately drag the United States and other civilized nations into the vortex of the conflict. Overpopulation is a major problem.

What we are doing with this motion today is literally shutting down America's commitment to family planning around the world. We are not talking about abortion. I hold in my hand a penny, one penny; not one penny is being spent of Federal money to fund abortions in any country of the world. You would never know that from this debate. You would think we were setting out to fund abortions and the pro-life people wanted to stop it. It has nothing to do with it. Not a penny of Federal funds are being used for that purpose. What we are doing, in closing down this $450 million of family planning is adding to degradation and personal disaster around the world and, sadly, adding to the likelihood that move abortion will result.

Several years ago I traveled with Congressman Mike Synar to Bangladesh, one of the poorest countries in the world. Far away in a distant, dusty village we met a 19-year-old woman holding a baby. It was her third child. Through an interpreter she told us with great pride it would be her last child. Because of world health efforts which the United States supported, her children were healthy, and she did not have to bear any more children and through family planning efforts, that we spend pennies on, she was able to control the size of her family.

She and so many other women around the world, given a chance for their own personal dignity, will be denied that chance because of this terrible motion. I urge my colleagues, do not give in to this extremism. Oppose this motion.

Mr. CALLAHAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. SMITH].

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the Callahan motion, which represents yet another sincere attempt by Chairman CALLAHAN to seek a compromise approach to this issue on which so many of us feel so very strongly.

As most of my colleagues know, I have been a very strong supporter of the pro-life Mexico City policy which is designed to protect innocent unborn children around the world by barring United States family planning funds to foreign organizations that perform or promote abortion overseas. The House has voted four times, four times, in favor of that legislation this year. It should be clear by now, Mr. Speaker, that one way or the other pro-lifers will not stand by. We will not allow the abortion industry to get an infusion of literally hundreds of millions of dollars in foreign aid for the promotion of the killing of unborn children in other lands or by lobbying to bring down their statutes.

More than 95, closer to 100, countries of the world have pro-life statutes, and these nongovernmental organizations, some, not all, get into these countries, begin networking, and they have been working aggressively to bring down those pro-life statutes.

I do not think the U.S. taxpayer should be making these organizations the dominant force in these capitals around the world. Family planning, yes; abortion promotion, and abortion performance except in the cases of rape, incest, and life of the mother, which is what the original language had in it, they are the exception; but family planning, yes; abortion, no.

I would also remind Members that I have been a very strong supporter of linking UNFPA funding, U.N. Population Fund, to withdrawal of UNFPA from the program in China where forced abortion is commonplace and prevalent and where the UNFPA has been the dominant cheerleader for the population program in Beijing, in the People's Republic of China. Again, if the Senate or the White House will not budge on this at this time, pro-lifers are not going to cave.

We will allow the money, we will push the money for family planning, but will not allow it to be used in any way, shape, or form for the promotion of abortion or for promoting this coercion in the People's Republic of China. The pro-life Members are willing to support this motion which deletes these two provisions, but says we have got the wait until the authorizers take it up and then the bill will pass, I believe, and will be signed. Otherwise, we go back. We put the language back into the appropriations bill. That is fine with me.

If the Senate will not budge, we stay here until hell freezes over, because unborn children are precious and the women in the People's Republic of China, who have been victimized by the brutality of that program are precious as well.

I absolutely and categorically reject those who stand on the floor and say we are stopping all family planning funding. During the many years that the Mexico City program was in effect, 350 plus nongovernmental organizations, more NGO's than we had the money to fund, accepted the Mexico City clauses of no abortion promotion and got their money for family planning in Bangladesh, in Africa, in Central America. Planned Parenthood, Western Hemisphere, got, if I remember correctly, about $10 million when they agreed they would no longer be promoting abortion. They got their money to stay on point, and that is family planning, not abortion.

We are insisting on very modest language that says we are not going to be in the business of promoting abortion or performing it except in those very rare cases. We are not going to allow these organizations to be lobbying to bring down these anti-abortion statutes around the globe.

The family planning money will then flow. Nobody will object to it, and condoms and some of the other things that are disseminated will go out without any impediment, but we will not be in the business of empowering the abortion industry.

Vote for the Callahan motion.

Mr. WILSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from New York [Mrs. MALONEY].

Mrs. MALONEY. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

This amendment is a gross misuse of the political process to thwart the will of the American people who overwhelmingly support family planning in this country and around the world.

Once again, the new majority is attempting to put the radical right's agenda ahead of good government and global responsibility. It is clear that their actions show little concern for women's health, pre and postnatal care, health and nutrition for children, families, and stabilizing global population, and the problems that flow from it, including the massive increases recently in refugees.

The Callahan measure would make it illegal to appropriate funds for international family planning programs unless they are authorized. We need to vote to save international family planning programs. We need to vote to protect families, children, and women around the world. We need to defeat this politically motivated action by anti-family, anti-women Members here. It goes against everything this country agreed upon, and I might add, 187 other countries agreed upon at the International Conference for Women in Beijing.

Supporting international family planning programs is socially responsible, fiscally sound, and it serves our national purposes.

Vote to support women and families around the world. Defeat the Callahan motion.

Mr. CALLAHAN. Mr. Speaker, so eloquent is the gentleman from Illinois and so knowledgeable of this subject is the gentleman from Illinois, it would be immoral to deny him any restriction on time.

Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HYDE], but remind him that we are down to about 5 minutes.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, I suggest the gentleman correct the RECORD when it comes around for his extravagance in introducing me.

You know, when you get in this debate, you have to expect to be called names, and I have been called some wonderful names, some colorful names. Today it was mindless Luddite, and, you know, you can play that game. I would call people who think abortion is a good idea or an acceptable idea, or something the American taxpayer ought to pay for, I would not call them mindless, but I might call them heartless. I might call them unthinking. But I do not want to get into that game.

I want to just try to talk a little reality here. Family planning is not abortion, and abortion is not family planning, and when you link the two together you have got real problems, because many of us do not want to have American tax dollars go to pay for killing unborn children even if they are in Bangladesh or if they are in Toledo. We think human life ought to be special and ought to be sacred, and killing it, exterminating it, however you do it, is wrong and ought not to be paid for with tax dollars. That is what the struggle is about, and we are entitled to access to the political process to try and make our point.

But when misstatements are made, we have to wonder who is being mindless. For example, family planning flourishes under our program. Forty percent of all the dollars that are spent worldwide on family planning come from the United States and did under Reagan and Bush.

It is simply two organizations that will not accept the money because they want to continue promoting abortion. So there are 300-some organizations that are happy to take our family planning money. Meanwhile around the world family planning, properly understood, which is either helping someone to get pregnant or keeping them from getting pregnant; it is not exterminating the pregnancy once it has occurred, and that is what my colleagues are talking about, and we are asking those gentlemen from Mount Olympus across the rotunda to please understand we are for family planning, we are for foreign aid. It is abortion we are not for. We think that is despicable, we think it is wrong, and we do not think tax dollars ought to go pay for it.

So overpopulation; we have heard two speakers bemoan that as one of the great problems in the world. I suggest that is an unsophisticated look at a serious problem. Density is what we should look at, how many people per square mile. There are countries on the globe with a higher density than many of these countries that have overpopulation problems and yet a high standard of living. Japan, Switzerland, Holland have high density, high standard of living. Maybe it is something more than the number of people, maybe it is the economy, maybe it is the kind of government, maybe it is society. But that is a rather superficial look at the problem of overpopulation.

The money is fungible. If we give the money to the International Planned Parenthood of London, and they say, "We're going to spend our money on abortion and not your money," that is a bookkeeping transaction and does not fool anybody.

So I suggest that we stand fast, we continue to tell the gentleman and gentleladies across the rotunda we do not want to fund abortion.

Mr. WILSON. Mr. Speaker, please let the RECORD reflect that this gentleman has not called the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HYDE] any names.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. PORTER].

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Speaker, I certainly want to express my respect for my chairman, for the gentleman from New Jersey, and of course for my wonderful colleague, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HYDE].

Mr. Speaker, the language of this proposed amendment is simply not going to fly. We know, everyone knows, that the Senate will not accept this approach. Even if they did, the President would veto the bill. We are wasting our time, we are tying up the House, we are tying up this legislation. We are delaying programs that ought to be going forward, we are delaying our commitment to Camp David that we have always observed, and I think it is totally disingenuous to say, as some on the opposite side are saying that our side is delaying the bill. They are delaying the bill.

Mr. Speaker, my colleague from Illinois just said family planning is not abortion. That is exactly right. It is against current law to spend any U.S. funds for abortion, and those of us who are arguing this matter are supporters of family planning, and not supporters of abortion. To hold all family planning funding hostage to legislative language that will not be agreed to by the Senate or by the President is to hold this entire bill hostage. And, to hold up other bills over this issue is to hold those bills hostage as well.

Mr. Speaker, we do not fund abortion. We have never funded abortion. I have always supported the Hyde amendment both domestically and internationally.

This issue is not going to be resolved with this proposal. This issue is simply delaying this entire bill from going forward, and it seems to me that we should defeat this proposal and strip all language on both sides of this issue out of this bill, and let the legislation go forward and become law.

Mr. CALLAHAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. WELDON].

Mr. WELDON of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Alabama for yielding this time to me, and I applaud the subcommittee chairman for this amendment. I think it is a very reasonable approach to dealing with this problem.

There are a lot of things that go on up here in Washington, and it is, I believe, very hard for the American public to keep a watch on everything. One of the amazing things that has gone on up here in Washington is immediately after this President was inaugurated he started funneling a lot of foreign aid dollars into programs that promote abortion on an international scale, and the American people, in this environment that we are in of huge deficits, a huge national debt, I believe clearly do not want taxpayer dollars being used for this kind of a purpose.

The gentleman from Alabama [Mr. CALLAHAN] has come up with a very reasonable approach. He is saying that we can continue to give these organizations money but that the ones that are actively out there promoting abortion, particularly the forced abortion like we have in China, which I would imagine 99 percent of Americans find reprehensible, and it is amazing that this administration would want to pump money into those kinds of organizations. It is saying that we will not do that unless the authorizing committee actually authorizes this.

Now our colleagues on the other side of the aisle who like to put money into these kinds of programs know that they can never get authorizing language for something like this, so they are going to fight this tooth and nail, but I think it is a very reasonable approach in the part of the committee, the subcommittee chairman. I applaud him for coming up with this solution to the problem.

We need to get this bill through. I support the bill. I support all my colleagues who would stand up and rise in support of this bill, and it is a good solution to the problem.

Mr. WILSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from Connecticut [Mrs. KENNELLY].

Mrs. KENNELLY. Mr. Speaker, this is unfortunate that this debate has gone along these lines with linkages that should not be made. We should not be discussing family planning dash abortion. This is a family planning issue. And we are talking about no international funds can be appropriated to any international societies unless an authorization bill is passed. Well, we have not had an authorization bill for a number of years, and if my colleagues want this amendment passed, it should be attached to the authorization bill.

But this is unfortunate, that we have to be doing this, because for years and years people around this world understood that the way to deal with population problems, health problems, children who are born into families where they are not wanted, is through family planning, and to do this today means we do not realize that family planning works, and eliminating this aid would hurt countless families throughout the world and increase the number of unintended pregnancies.

We do not want abortions; we want pregnancies not to happen. Countless women around this world have no access to health care screening and do not have information on how to plan a family, how to avoid an unwanted pregnancy. Denying U.S. funds for these services does not make sense. It is an arbitrary denial, dealing with something that we all, as world citizens, should be dealing with.

Mr. Speaker, right here I have a statement of the administration's policy. We are all trying to deal with legislation, we all know we should be going forward and not getting into these kinds of discussions, and the administration says:

If the previous House-passed language on population contained in section 518 and the substitute language were dropped, the Secretary of State would recommend that the President sign the bill.

One more problem eliminated, and we could go for it. We really should not be debating the way we are today. We should just be getting on with the business of the House.

Mr. CALLAHAN. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. WILSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from Maryland [Mrs. MORELLA].

Mrs. MORELLA. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the Callahan motion. This motion is worse than the original amendment—it would prohibit any funding for family planning until the foreign aid authorization bill is approved—legislation which historically has not been enacted into law. Thus, this motion effectively kills all family planning funding for the rest of this fiscal year.

One point must be reiterated in this debate—this amendment attempts to address a nonissue—foreign aid dollars do not currently pay for any abortions and never have. For 20 years, foreign aid policy and law has clearly stated that U.S. funds cannot be used to pay for abortion services or to lobby on the issue.

What this amendment does do is kill family planning programs—resulting in more abortions.

Mr. Speaker, this foreign aid bill already includes drastic cuts in funding for population assistance overseas. The Callahan motion will further endanger women's health and will deny women and couples access to family planning information. It will increase, not reduce, abortions.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to join me in opposing this motion.

Mr. WILSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from Texas [Ms. JACKSON-LEE].

(Ms. JACKSON-LEE asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. JACKSON-LEE. Mr. Speaker, I am not here to call anyone any names. I think this is a debate that really is for world health. Family planning is good health. It is good for the world's families. It is instructive that over the years this type of family planning has saved more lives, and it has done so because the world's women and families have been eligible for family planning education. It is good health.

Mr. Speaker, we do not need to encourage these misstatements that have been offered about the facts that family planning is promoting abortion and forced abortions in China. Mr. Speaker, I have gone on record saying that the atrocities in China should not be tolerated. None of us are accepting of that.

But with this legislation, it would be illegal to appropriate funds for international family planning programs. That is all, that is the bottom line, of what their policy does help implement world family planning.

Organizations like International Planned Parenthood offer health care screening and information on family planning. Denying funds to organizations like International Planned Parenthood is nonsensical. This language would implement an international gag rule. The people that would be suffering would be millions of women and families across this world. One million women die each year as a result of reproductive health problems.

I started out saying this is a health bill, we want to support family planning because it is good health. This debate has nothing to do with abortion and current law which, as we all know, prohibits for the last 20 years the use of U.S. funds for abortion. It is time to err on the side of families, women, and good health.

Defeat this legislation. We want to keep what the law says, good health, good family planning, and support for our world's family of women and our world's families. In this season of caring and giving, Mr. Speaker, can we do any less?

Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to this motion which would eliminate all funding for international family planning organizations. This motion exempts family planning programs from the waiver in the bill that permits appropriations for foreign aid programs without passage of the foreign aid authorization bill, a bill that has not been passed in 12 years.

In other words, it would be illegal to appropriate funds for international family planning programs—and only international family programs—until the passage of the stalled foreign aid authorization bill. This new tactic by my antifamily colleagues is even more drastic than the restrictions they have been attempting to impose on the bill. This new approach will effectively kill the international family planning programs at issue by denying them funding.

Organizations like International Planned Parenthood offer basic health care screening and information on family planning. Denying funds to organizations like International Planned Parenthood is nonsensical. This language would implement an international gag rule.

With the world's population growing at an unprecedented rate, one of the most important forms of aid that we provide to other countries is family planning assistance. As a world leader, the United States must work to reduce the complications of pregnancy, childbirth, and unsafe abortions, which are the leading killers of women of reproductive age throughout the Third World. One million women die each year as a result of reproductive health problems.

But this debate has nothing to do with abortion itself. Current law prohibits—and has for 20 years—the use of U.S. funds for abortion. Foreign aid policy and law clearly states that U.S. funds may not be used to pay for abortion procedures or to lobby on the issue.

Thus, the proposed motion would simply eliminate funding for legal, and essential, health and family planning services—not abortion. Legitimate and effective international health organizations would be prohibited from providing valuable and desperately needed family planning information to women around the globe. I urge my colleagues to defeat this dangerous motion.

Mr. WILSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as she may consume to the gentlewoman from California [Ms. PELOSI].

Ms. PELOSI. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me, and for the gentleman's leadership on this issue.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in complete respect, as our chairman knows, for his leadership on our Foreign Operations Subcommittee. As a member of that subcommittee, I have seen him shepherd our bill through many storms. We have this one remaining obstacle.

As Members know, we have gone back and forth and back and forth on the issue of family planning in this bill. Frankly, I do not see any reason for us to have to go through this, because this controversy is based on a false premise, the premise that $1 in this bill would be spent to fund abortions. That funding is not allowed by U.S. law, and we do not need any language to further prohibit it.

Let us all say that we all agree in this Congress that we abhor, we abhor the family planning methods used in China. I mention that issue because I see my colleague, the gentleman from New Jersey, rising, and I know that issue is a bone of contention in this bill, but shouldn't be in this Congress. We all agree that it is a gross violation of human rights for the women, indeed, for the families, the people of China, to have to be subjected to China's family planning methods. The practices are atrocious and I will not go into them, except to say that no funding from this bill supports the China program.

With that in mind, Mr. Speaker, that first, none of the funds would be used for abortion, and second, that none of the funds will be used to support the family planning program which we all abhor in China, the question arises: Why are we holding the poorest of the poor people in the world who depend on family planning funds that are provided in this bill hostage to the Chinese regime's policy.

Mr. Speaker, I call this, with all due respect to my colleague, the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. CALLAHAN], our distinguished chairman, the make matters worse amendment. We had a situation which was a challenge to us about funding for family planning. We have been fighting that fight. Many people who support family planning but do not support every medical option available to women to terminate a pregnancy support us in opposition to this rule. I am very pleased that staunch anti-choice Members, and I do not say that as a badge of honor, oppose this amendment. The gentleman from Ohio, TONY HALL, and I have been on opposite sides of the choice issue, and he voted against the rule on this bill because of the restrictions it places on family planning. Restrictions that are not per se in the bill, but restrictions which are by way of procedure. If we do not get the funding through this bill now and if we have to wait for an authorization at the end of the session, as we are, waiting to go out for the holidays, what will happen to the family planning funds that are so desperately needed so very soon for so many people in the world?

That is why I call this the make matters worse amendment. It tries to resolve a conflict that I do not think should be there in the first place, because we all agree that China's policy is abhorrent and none of our funds should go to it. And because we all know that there is no funding for abortion allowed under United States law. So why can we not come to a sensible conclusion which enables us to fund family planning?

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Chairman, will the gentlewoman yield?

Ms. PELOSI. I am pleased to yield to my colleague, the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. SMITH], because although we differ on the issue of choice, he has been a champion on funding for child survival issues and the like; but as a tactic, I think the way that the chairman has decided to proceed on this will present huge obstacles to getting our family planning money out there when it is needed.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman for yielding. We do work together on a number of other issues, but unfortunately, on this one we have a difference.

Let me reiterate, and make this so very clear to everyone who may be listening to this debate, that we will provide family planning funds, as we did during the Reagan and Bush years when we provided in excess of 40 percent of all the subsidies globally for family planning, but we did it in a way that did not promote or perform abortions. That is the key.

Ms. PELOSI. Reclaiming my time and in conclusion, Mr. Speaker, let me say, if Members abhor abortion, as we all do, they should support family planning and vote against this amendment.

Mr. CALLAHAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from California [Mr. DORNAN].

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. GOODLATTE). The gentleman from California [Mr. DORNAN] is recognized for 3 minutes.

Mr. VOLKMER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DORNAN. I yield to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. VOLKMER], the conscience of the minority party, who is pro-family, pro-defense, and pro-second amendment.

Mr. VOLKMER. Mr. Speaker, I would like to announce that I rise in favor of the motion of the gentleman from Alabama, in strong support of it, and I urge the House to adopt this motion.

Mr. DORNAN. Mr. Speaker, I hope as Missouri goes, so goes the House.

Mr. Speaker, I also rise in support of what the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. CALLAHAN] is trying to do, and with great respect for human rights voices like the gentlewoman from California [Ms. PELOSI], on the other side of the aisle, and to try and clarify here for the 1,300,000 audience that watches this on C-SPAN that would think we are debating two different issues here today. Everybody suddenly gets up and says they are all against abortion.

Now, a gentleman on the minority side from Illinois held up a penny, so I will hold up a penny. All pennies today are Lincoln pennies. Lincoln, our greatest President from the State of the gentlemen from Illinois, Mr. HYDE and Mr. DURBIN, finally came to realize that the greatest evil in our country since its founding was slavery. We now have great religious leaders all over the world talking about the culture of death in the womb, of the elderly, of the infirm, of the physically challenged.

Since our country first met with the House of Representatives 206 years and 9 months ago, two enormous evils have confronted us: slavery and the taking of innocent life through abortion. There is a benchmark in this House as of November 1: 139 people a few on my side of the aisle, stood up and said that execution-style coup de grace to the base of the skull, removing the brains, partial birth abortion, was OK. Those in the medical profession that do nothing but abort, nothing but abort, and in the other Chamber one of our lady Senators objected to us calling them abortionists instead of doctors. If that is all they do, they are not doctors in this Member's eyes, they are abortionists. So we start with a benchmark of 139 who find even a coup-de-grace abortion OK.

Now we have this group that stands up and says: "I am against abortion, but do not listen to the pro-lifers on this side or that side of the aisle." Money is fungible, down to a penny. If we free up money with all sorts of U.S. restrictions and we know they are not going to be obeyed, then it is going to drive abortion and the political undermining of the laws, and the majority of the 185 nations in the U.N., over 100, will have their laws undermined by these people who are driven almost as a religious conviction about abortion.

Mr. Speaker, Dr. James Timothy McMahon, who with Dr. Haskell worked out partial birth abortion, is buried near my parents in Holy Cross Cemetery in Culver City. I visited that cemetery Sunday. He renounced his whole life to abortion. Money is fungible, listen to the pro-lifers.

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, I wish to commend my colleagues on the Foreign Operations Appropriations Subcommittee for their work on this year's Foreign Operations Appropriations Act (H.R. 2666). On balance, H.R. 2666 moves us in the right direction as we seek to come to grips with the role of the United States in the post-cold war world.

However, I rise to express my opposition to a specific provision adopted by the conference that would impose a moratorium on the use of antipersonnel landmines by the U.S. military.

This provision does nothing to address the problem that led to its adoption—namely, the tens of thousands of unexploded non-self-destructing landmines that are taking a tragic toll on civilian noncombatants around the world. Instead, it unilaterally bars the United States from using a legitimate weapon in combat for defensive purposes while other nations are not similarly restricted.

Even the administration, which has made a global ban on the use of antipersonnel landmines one of its foreign policy objectives, is vigorously opposed to this moratorium. No less an authority than the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, General Shalikashvili, has noted that "antipersonnel landmines will be required by U.S. forces for safe defense in the foreseeable future" and that a prohibition on their use would place American forces at risk.

General Shalikashvili expressed his concerns in a letter to me on September 12. I find his arguments logical and persuasive, and request at this point that a copy of his letter be inserted in the RECORD.

Landmines are an integral part of current U.S. war-fighting doctrine and an important economy of force multiplier. They played a critical role in defending our troops during the decisive final stage of the Persian Gulf war by protecting General Schwarzkopf's forces as they closed in to defeat Saddam Hussein's army deep within Iraqi territory.

The U.S. military uses antipersonnel landmines in strict accordance with the international laws of armed conflict. This moratorium would place unreasonable and unprecedented restrictions on the use of a lawful weapon.

Other countries, most notably China and Russia, have made it clear that they consider landmines to be an integral part of their overall military posture, and have refused to forswear their use.

In summary, a unilateral moratorium on antipersonnel landmines use by the United States will diminish the U.S. ability to conduct ground combat operations. It would put our soldiers at greater risk and require increased expenditures to maintain an equivalent level of battlefield protection. The potential cost of this moratorium is likely to be measured not only in dollars, but in American soldiers' lives.

We should all oppose this moratorium, and should instead continue to ensure that we provide our fighting men and women in uniform the tools they need to accomplish the missions they are called upon to perform.

THE CHAIRMAN, JOINT CHIEFS OF STAFF,
Washington, DC, September 12, 1995.

Hon. FLOYD SPENCE,
Chairman, Committee on National Security,
House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: I solicit your support on the topic of landmines during the forthcoming FY96 Authorization Bill Conference. The proposed legislation in the Senate bill would ban use of anti-personnel landmines by US forces except in narrowly defined scenarios. I have significant concerns because, as written, American personnel would be placed at risk.

The proposed legislation, beginning 3 years after enactment, would prohibit the use for 1 year of anti-personnel landmines by US forces, except in marked and guarded minefields along internationally recognized national borders and demilitarized zones.

The legislation would effectively prohibit the use of all self-destructing mine systems because they employ a combination of anti-tank and anti-personnel mines. Self destructing anti-personnel mines represent approximately 65 percent of the US total anti-personnel mine inventory. Mines were an indispensable component of the coalition's ability to conduct the maneuver warfare that made such an important contribution to victory in DESERT STORM. Significantly, mines secured the right flank of General Schwarzkopf's ground offensive in western Iraq.

I wish to emphasize that mines used by US Armed Forces self-destruct a short period of time after emplacement with a high degree of reliability and do not pose a significant humanitarian problem. Restricting anti-personnel landmines to "internationally recognized national borders" and demilitarized zones effectively prohibits their use by US forces in most combat scenarios. Defensive minefields around sensitive military installations such as Naval Station Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, would also be precluded. US forces are heavily dependent upon such minefields for security.

The US military strongly opposes the illegal and irresponsible use of these mines and is a proponent of humanitarian demining activities to alleviate suffering caused by them. However, anti-personnel landmines will be required by US forces for safe defense in the foreseeable future. Congress and the American people expect us to fight and win conflicts with minimum casualties. That goal requires the retention of the capabilities provided by the advanced, self-destructing mine systems which would be prohibited under the proposed legislation.

While I wholeheartedly support US leadership in the long-term goal of anti-personnel landmine elimination, unilateral actions which needlessly place our forces at risk now will not induce good behavior from irresponsible combatants. As practical solutions are pursued, our priorities must be to maintain warfighting superiority while concurrently protecting the safety of US service men and women. I consider this to be a critical force protection issue and request your support to defeat the proposed legislation.

Sincerely,

JOHN M. SHALIKASHVILI,
Chairman.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. All time has expired. Pursuant to House Resolution 296, the previous question is ordered.

The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Alabama [Mr. CALLAHAN].

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. WILSON. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 226, nays 201, not voting 5, as follows:

REPORT ON RESOLUTION WAIVING POINTS OF ORDER AGAINST FURTHER CONFERENCE REPORT ON H.R. 1977, DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR AND RELATED AGENCIES APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 1996

Mrs. WALDHOLTZ, from the Committee on Rules, submitted a privileged report (Rept. No. 104-403) on the resolution (H. Res. 301) waiving points of order against the further conference report to accompany the bill (H.R. 1977) making appropriations for the Department of the Interior and related agencies for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1996, and for other purposes, which was referred to the House Calendar and ordered to be printed.

REPORT ON FARMINGTON RIVER PURSUANT TO WILD AND SCENIC RIVERS ACT—MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. LAHOOD) laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States; which was read and, together with the accompanying papers, without objection, referred to the Committee on Resources:

To the Congress of the United States:

I take pleasure in transmitting the enclosed report for the Farmington River in the States of Massachusetts and Connecticut. The report and my recommendations are in response to the provisions of the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act, Public Law 90-542, as amended. The Farmington River Study was authorized by Public Law 99-590.

The study was conducted by the National Park Service, with invaluable assistance from a congressionally mandated study committee. The National Park Service determined that the 11-mile study segment in Massachusetts and the 14-mile study segment in Connecticut were eligible for designation based upon their free-flowing character and recreational, fish, wildlife and historic values.

The 14-mile Connecticut segment of the river has already been designated as a Wild and Scenic River pursuant to Public Law 103-313, August 26, 1994. The purpose of this transmittal is to inform the Congress that, although eligible for designation, I do not recommend that the Massachusetts segment be designated at this time due to lack of support by the towns adjoining it. If at some future date the towns should change their position and the river has retained its present characteristics, the Congress could reconsider the issue. Also, for 3 years from the date of this transmittal, the Massachusetts segment will remain subject to section 7(b) of the Wild and Scenic Rivers Act. Section 7(b) prohibits licensing of projects by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission and Federal or federally assisted water resource development projects that would have a direct and adverse effect on the values for which the river might be designated. Finally, the report includes the Upper Farmington River Management Plan that is referenced in Public Law 103-313 as the plan by which the designated river will be managed.

The plan demonstrated a true partnership effort of the type that we believe will be increasingly necessary if we are to have affordable protection of our environment in the future.

WILLIAM J. CLINTON.

THE WHITE HOUSE, December 13, 1995.

WAIVING THE PROVISIONS OF CLAUSE 4(b) OF HOUSE RULE XI AGAINST CONSIDERATION OF CERTAIN RESOLUTIONS REPORTED FROM THE COMMITTEE ON RULES

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 297 and ask for its immediate consideration.

H. RES. 297

Resolved, That the requirement of clause 4(b) of rule XI for a two-thirds vote to consider a report from the Committee on Rules on the same day it is presented to the House is waived with respect to any resolution reported from that committee for the remainder of the first session of the One Hundred Fourth congress providing the territory of the Republic of Bosnia and Herzegovina, any amendment thereto, any conference report thereon, or any amendment reported in disagreement from a conference thereon.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. LAHOOD). The gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON] is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, for the purposes of debate only, I yield the customary 30 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MOAKLEY], I know he is going to support this rule which will get all of our Members home by Christmas, pending which I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, during the consideration of the resolution, all time yielded, of course, is for debate only.

Mr. Speaker, this rule is similar to rules we granted prior to the Thanksgiving recess for the consideration of general appropriations bills, continuing appropriations resolutions, the debt limit bill, and the Balance Budget Act.

In this instance, we would be waiving clause 4(b) of rule XI, which requires a two-thirds vote for the same day consideration of special rules reported from this committee, for rules that deal with bills, resolutions, amendments, and conference reports dealing with five separate matters:

First, general appropriations bills; second, continuing appropriations measures; third, debt limit measures; fourth, the Balanced Budget Act; and fifth, measures relating to United States troops in Bosnia.

At the request of the minority leadership, we have dropped two provisions from an earlier draft that would have waived the layover requirement for all conference reports and created special suspension days on days other than Mondays and Tuesdays.

As Members may be aware, there is already a standing House rule that permits the same day consideration of special rules for any matter during the last 3 days of a session. But that rule is not activated until we have adopted a sine die adjournment resolution since that is the only way we can determine with certainty which are the final days of a session.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to refer to this rule as the "family friendly, holiday get-away rule" since we are attempting to expedite the business of this House so that Members can return as soon as possible to their districts and families for their holiday celebrations.

We still have several appropriations matters to complete action on as well as the Balanced Budget Act which is now the subject of negotiations between the Congress and the White House.

The expedited consideration of a possible rule relating to the deployment of United States troops in Bosnia was included in this rule. We anticipate bringing such a rule to the floor today that will make in order up to three measures on Bosnia. This rule permits those measures to be considered today.

The Senate is considering three different measures as well today. It is important that both Houses act today since tomorrow is the signing of the Paris peace agreement in Paris.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, I want to point out that the minority on the Rules Committee expressed the hope that there would be ample time available to see any emergency matters that we do the same-day rules on so that Members can study them before voting—both on the rules and the bills they make in order. We think that is a reasonable request and will do all in our power to see that this emergency authority is not abused.

With that assurance, Mr. Speaker, this rule was adopted by unanimous voice vote in the Rules Committee. I urge that the House follow suit by adopting this rule to permit us to get on with out business in an expeditious fashion.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I thank my colleague from New York for yielding me the customary half hour and I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in reluctant opposition to this rule.

I am sorry we have to do this rule in the first place. I am sorry my Republican colleagues have not finished the appropriations bills. I am sorry that they spent so much time on the contract on America instead of on the business of the House that the Federal Government actually shut down for 6 days.

But as Walter Cronkite used to say, "That's the way it is." It is the middle of December and five appropriations bills still have not even gotten to the President.

Those appropriations bills are probably Congress' most serious responsibility and I am certainly willing to help my Republican colleagues get them done. But Mr. Speaker, this rule is far too dangerous in fact it is already being misused.

I have just been told that the Rules Committee will be meeting this afternoon to consider a very serious, very far-reaching profound Bosnia resolution that very few people have seen.

Mr. Speaker, we are talking about American lives. We are talking about American national security. We are talking about an awesome responsibility, the responsibility to authorize the President to commit our troops to the peacekeeping effort in Bosnia. This responsibility absolutely must be borne with the gravity and solemn consideration it deserves.

But, Mr. Speaker, the legislation that Members will be asked to vote on, later today, legislation to give the President this authority, has just been written. Mr. Speaker, that is absolutely inexcusable.

And, Mr. Speaker, to make matters worse, the reason we are doing this rule is simply because my Republican colleagues are disastrously behind in the appropriations cycle. This work needs to get done and it needs to get done now. In fact it needed to get done 3 months ago. But not at this price.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to oppose this dangerous rule. For matters of this importance, thoughtful, responsible legislating should take precedence over speed.

Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I urge Members to come over and vote for this very fair rule.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time and I move the previous question on the resolution.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the resolution.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present, and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 230, nays 186, not voting 16, as follows:

WAIVING POINTS OF ORDER AGAINST FURTHER CONFERENCE REPORT ON H.R. 1977, DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR AND RELATED AGENCIES APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 1996

Ms. PRYCE. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules and pursuant to House Resolution 297, I call up House Resolution 301 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 301

Resolved. That upon adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to consider the further conference report to accompany the bill (H.R. 1977) making appropriations for the Department of the Interior and related agencies for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1996 and for other purposes. All points of order against the conference report and against its consideration are waived.

The conference report shall be considered as read.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. LAHOOD). The gentlewoman from Ohio [Ms. PRYCE] is recognized for 1 hour.

Ms. PRYCE. Mr. Speaker, for purposes of debate only, I yield the customary 30 minutes to my good friend, the distinguished gentleman from California [Mr. BEILENSEN], pending which I yield myself such time as I may consume. During consideration of this resolution, all time yielded is for purposes of debate only.

GENERAL LEAVE

Ms. PRYCE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks on the legislation under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is their objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

Ms. PRYCE. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to bring to the floor today this rule providing for the consideration of the further conference report on H.R. 1977, the Department of the Interior and related agencies appropriations bill for fiscal year 1996. This is a simple, fair rule which waives all points of order against the conference report, and against its consideration.

The blanket waiver includes a waiver of clause 2 of rule XX, as well as a waiver of clause 3 of rule XXVIII, which will permit the House to discuss provisions which may exceed the scope of differences between the House and the Senate.

Under the normal rules of the House, we will have one hour of debate on the conference report itself, in addition to the minority's traditional right to offer a motion to recommend, with or without instructions.

Mr. Speaker, despite recent press reports to the contrary, we are making progress toward completing our work on the thirteen regular appropriations bills. Seven of the thirteen bills have thus far been enacted into law, and passing this bill, and this rule today will bring us one step closer to our goal of balancing the Federal budget and avoiding any unnecessary shutdown of the Federal Government.

Clearly, the task of finishing all of the spending bills on time has not been easy, and the Interior appropriations bill is certainly no exception. Issues related to the development and stewardship of America's natural resources often spark great controversy, as we have seen with regard to mining patents and the management of national forests with this particular piece of legislation.

But, under the leadership of my friend and colleague from Ohio, Mr. REGULA, who is the distinguished chairman of the Interior Subcommittee, the conferees have reached a new, a hopefully final agreement on these two very sensitive issues.

First, the conference report continues the existing moratorium on issuing mining patents, and there is no trigger that would cancel the moratorium. Any repeal would be contained in separate mining law reform legislation. In addition, the conference agreement extends the schedule for processing grandfathered applications from 2 to 5 years.

Second, with regard to the Tongass National Forest, it is my understanding that the conference agreement actually lowers the annual harvest ceiling in the forest's current management plan, and maintains the size of the current timber base for 2 years.

I would also add, Mr. Speaker, that in response to the administration's request, conferees restored a significant amount of funding for Indian-related programs. The conference agreement restores a total of $137 million to these programs, which is $27 million above the administration's request.

Other than these modifications, the conference report is essentially unchanged. It still provides funding for the core programs and missions of the agencies covered by this legislation, including funding to operate the National Park System and all of our public lands, and for the health care and education needs of native Americans.

Overall, total spending in this year's conference agreement is more than one billion dollars less than the amount provided in last year's legislation. That is the fiscally responsible thing to do, and I commend Chairman REGULA and members of the Appropriations Committee for crafting a bill that honors our commitment to the American people to achieving meaningful deficit reduction and a limited, but effective Federal Government.

In closing Mr. Speaker, I believe it is only fair and proper that we do everything we can to move the budget and appropriations process forward—not only to keep the Government up and running, but to give future generations of Americans the kind of financial stability and economic prosperity that can only come from a balanced Federal budget.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, House Resolution 301 is the customary rule granted by the Rules Committee this year for conference reports on general appropriations bills, and it is entirely appropriate for this debate. The Rules Committee reported this rule by unanimous voice vote earlier today. I urge my colleagues to adopt the rule and to pass the conference report without any further delay.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. BEILENSEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, we oppose this rule and the measure it makes in order, the conference report on Interior appropriations for fiscal year 1996. As Members know, this is the third time this conference report has been brought to the House floor. Our good friend, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. REGULA], has our greatest respect for the difficult and time-consuming process he has had to endure from the beginning with this bill, but unfortunately, this legislation remains highly objectionable to many of us. Although the new conference report finally extends the moratorium on processing new mining patents for the duration of the fiscal year, as the House has called for through repeated votes, it contains questionable provisions for processing some 370 claims that had reached a certain stage in the patenting process.

On the other issue the conferees were specifically directed to address, the Tongass National Forest, the conference report clearly fails to respond to the House's direction. The new provision would increase timber harvests from an average 315 million board feet annually to 418 million board feet, which is the same amount that would have occurred under the previous version of this legislation.

The rule before us waives all points of order against the conference report and against its consideration. One major reason why the conference report needs such a rule is that it contains numerous violations of clause 2 of rule XXI, the rule that prohibits legislation, that is, policy matters, in an appropriations bill. We acknowledge that it is very difficult to avoid violating rule XXI entirely in an appropriations bill, but the Committee on Rules usually tries, or we did try, at least, in previous Congresses to minimize the extent to which appropriations bills contain policy matters. Not only did those efforts prevent flagrant intrusions on the jurisdiction of the authorizing committees, but they also kept appropriations bills from getting bogged down in disagreements over issues that are unrelated to the amount of funding being provided to government agencies.

This rule, however, sanctions the use of the appropriations process to make far-reaching changes in policies governing the use of our Nation's resources. It makes it possible for the House to consider a bill that the Los Angeles Times has said is "swollen with hidden attacks on the public lands, national parks, and the environment."

Many egregious provisions that were contained in the original conference report remain in the new version. For example, the conference report removes the Mojave preserve in California from the protection of the National Park Service by prohibiting the Park Service from spending more than $1 on it in 1996. New report language accompanying the conference report allows the National Park Service to use a half million dollars to develop a management plan for the east Mohave area which is an increase over the second version of the conference report, but the legislation itself would still shift authority for the area back to the Bureau of Land Management, whose rules are much more lenient than are the Park Service's on mining, grazing, dirt biking, and other potentially detrimental activities.

It prohibits adding new species of plants and animals to the Endangered Species Act list, despite clear scientific evidence that hundreds of species awaiting listing are headed toward extinction. It cripples a joint Forest Service-BLM ecosystem management project for the Columbia River Basin in the Northwest, a project that was intended to allow a sustainable flow of timber from that region. This provision threatens the protection of salmon and other critical species and guarantees continued court battles over logging in that region. It places a moratorium on the development of Federal energy efficiency standards, and it delays implementation of the Interior Department's new grazing regulations.

In addition, this latest version adds a brandnew provision waiving certain environmental laws to expedite the construction of a telescope and supporting infrastructure on Mount Graham on the Coronado National Forest in Arizona, a site that contains rare and valuable ecological resources.

In addition to all these troubling provisions, the conference report endangers resource protection by reducing spending for many critical activities.

The conference report cuts spending on the Interior Department and related agencies as a whole by 10 percent from this year's level, but within that reduction are much more severe cuts in many valuable programs, including wildlife protection, energy conservation, land acquisition, support for the arts and humanities, and support for native Americans, despite the modest increase in the new version for that issue.

Mr. Speaker, these are programs that do an enormous amount of good for our Nation for a relatively small sum, and they ought to be sustained at adequate levels. These are also programs that are strongly supported by the American people. I recently sent a survey to my own constituents asking them to choose what they would cut from a list of virtually everything the Federal Government spends money on.

In response, and there were about 20,000 voters in our area who responded, and even though they wanted us to cut spending in many other areas, a full 87 percent, Mr. Speaker, 87 percent of the respondents opposed cutting spending on national parks, forests, and wildlife refuges. Eighty percent opposed cutting spending on environmental protection, 78 percent opposed cutting energy conservation and other energy research programs, and 59 percent opposed cutting Federal support for the arts and humanities. I have little doubt that if the same questions were asked almost anywhere else in the country, the results would be close to the ones that I received.

Defenders of these cuts, Mr. Speaker, say they are necessary to help balance the budget, but in fact, the $1.4 billion cut this bill makes from last year's level of spending is necessary only in the sense that the majority's budget plan needs it to help pay for the defense appropriations bill's additional $7 billion in spending that Pentagon officials themselves say they do not want or need.

It is necessary only because the majority's budget plan needs it to help pay for a 7-year, $245 billion tax cut that the vast majority of Americans believe should not be provided until the Federal budget is actually balanced.

The real significance of this legislation is not its contribution to reducing the Federal budget deficit but rather its contribution to the comprehensive assault on environmental protection that has been launched by the Republican leadership in the House. When this legislation is viewed in the context of other antienvironmental measures the House has already passed, its negative impacts are even more apparent.

This conference report follows House passage of several so-called regulatory reform bills, the Contract With America bills that would cripple Federal regulatory agencies' ability to implement and enforce environmental protection laws.

It follows House passage of the amendments to the Clean Water Act that would permit more water pollution and allow the destruction of more than half the Nation's remaining wetlands.

It follows enactment of a provision included in the fiscal 1995 rescission bill which already has dramatically increased logging in national forests.

It follows House passage of an appropriations bill that cuts funding dramatically for the Environmental Protection Agency.

It follows House passage of the budget reconciliation bill that would open the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge to oil and gas drilling, and would provide special deals for industries that want to use the natural resources that belong to all Americans—mining, ranching, timber, and oil and gas interests—and special deals for concessionaires in our national parks.

Mr. Speaker, to repeat, the conference report this rule makes in order is severely flawed. It fails to provide the necessary funding and safeguards for our Nation's natural resources that the American people overwhelmingly want us to provide.

I urge Members to vote "no" on the rule and "no" on the conference report.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. PRYCE. Mr. Speaker, I continue to reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. BEILENSEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the distinguished gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. MOAKLEY], the ranking member of the Committee on Rules.

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from California for yielding me the time.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to this rule. And, Mr. Speaker, every single Member of this House who voted for a constitutional amendment to balance the budget should oppose this rule.

Now is the time for Members who voted to balance the budget, no matter what the cost no matter how painful, to show that they mean what they say. Now is the time for my Republican colleagues to show that they can live within their own budget.

Because, Mr. Speaker, this bill is a budget buster. This bill will cost $21 million more than my Republican colleagues said this country could afford. It is $21 million over budget and $21 million over the 602b allocation.

Mr. Speaker, I want to state for the RECORD that never, in the history of Democratic control of the House did we waive the 602b requirement on an appropriations conference report. Every single one of our appropriations conference reports stayed well within its limits. I wonder why my Republican colleagues cannot do the same and I wonder how on Earth they can vote for this rule.

I urge my colleagues to defeat this rule. If you voted to balance the budget, now is your chance to do so.

Mr. BEILENSEN. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the distinguished gentleman from Illinois [Mr. YATES], the ranking member of the Appropriations Subcommittee.

Mr. YATES. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me the time, and I want to congratulate him upon a magnificent and accurate statement of what this bill contains and why it should be defeated.

But I rise, Mr. Speaker, to read from a book review that appeared in the Washington Post last August on a book that is entitled "The Making of a Conservative Environmentalist":

In 1992, an American-Canadian agency charged with overseeing the health of the Great Lakes surprised the White House, never mind governors in 8 States bordering the lakes, by making a radical proposal. Convinced that the toxic by-products of chlorine-based industrial compounds were harming wildlife and perhaps poisoning people, the panel called for phasing out one of the basic chemical feedstocks of modern manufacturing straight elemental chlorine.

One might assume that the man behind such a noble gambit was a learned statesman and veteran environmentalist. Hardly. The recommendation's main champion was Gordon K. Durnil, the panel's American chairman, a Rush Limbaugh-loving conservative Republican from Indiana.

Here was a plain, middle-aged guy who freely admits that before being appointed by George Bush in 1989 to the International Joint Commission, a little-known but influential oversight agency that watches the Great Lakes—

He had done little. Those last few words are mine, but I go back to the quote.

In fact, Mr. Durnil acknowledges in "The Making of a Conservative Environmentalist" that he possessed absolutely no qualifications for one of the continent's senior environmental posts, other than having served as Republican Party chairman in Indiana and cultivated a close political friendship with former Vice President Dan Quayle.

How could such a naif advance one of the single boldest environmental policy ideas of the 1990s? The answer, we are told, is a simple tale of personal discovery. A Midwestern party operative late in life suddenly awakens to find truth in the popular concern for the safety of the earth. The message is that someone as conventional and as conservative as Mr. Durnil can latch on to one of the great social transformations of the American century, then so can every other Republican in the country.

The fact that they have not, particularly this year when Republican leaders in the House and the Senate are desperately trying to unravel 25 years of environmental regulation, has Mr. Durnil in a gentlemanly lather—

And so forth. It continues.

The reason I read that, of course, Mr. Speaker, is the fact that Mr. Durnil would have been very much upset by the attack that our bill makes upon the natural resources of our country.

A third more of our ancient forests are being cut in this bill than were authorized for cutting in the previous bill. The Indian people have not received the kind of funding that they should have received, in spite of the fact that additional funds were made available in the last session of the conference committee. Environmental damage is being done to our forests, to our streams, to our parks, to every other natural resource.

I would urge, Mr. Speaker, that the rule be defeated, and if the rule is not defeated, that the bill then be defeated.

Ms. PRYCE. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the distinguished gentleman from Ohio [Mr. REGULA], the chairman of the subcommittee.

Mr. YATES. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. REGULA. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. YATES. I might say that Mr. Durnil could very well come from Ohio as well as from Indiana.

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Speaker, a lot of conservative environmentalists come from Ohio.

Mr. YATES. That is true. I wonder why they are not on the committee.

Mr. REGULA. I think one of them chairs it.

Mr. Speaker, I am intrigued by the gentleman from Massachusetts complaining that we are spending too much money. It is the new math that we have in Washington, DC, as near as I can figure out, since this bill is $1.3 billion less than in 1995. It is about a 10-percent reduction from 1995 funding. It is responsive to the movement to a balanced budget.

We have had to make tough decisions, of course. But as I have said previously, we divided the responsibilities into three parts: The must-do's, the need-to-do's, and the nice-to-do's.

The must-do's we took care of. We kept the parks at level funding, the forests at level funding and operations. The Smithsonian, the National Gallery, the Kennedy Center, the things that the people enjoy, that they want to use, are nearly level-funded.

Certainly, in order to save $1.3 billion, we had to eliminate or substantially downsize some other activities. But I simply point out again that in terms of the budget and the deficit reduction which I think the American people very much want to see, this bill is extremely responsible. I do not think that in any way it is environmentally detrimental.

It responds to the motion to recommend. We have made adjustments on the mining issue of the moratorium. We have made adjustments on Tongass. All the parties involved and both sides worked on the language, and I will address that more in the general debate.

On the matter of the Indians, we have added $50 million, $25 million for health services, $25 million for tribal priorities. In fact, this is more than the administration requested. They wanted something like $125 million over the Senate level. We are at about $111 million over the Senate level.

So I think we have a very responsible bill here. I hope that the Members will support the rule, I hope that the Members will support the bill, and that the administration will sign it.

There are 130,000 employees that are directly affected by this bill, and what a great gift we could give them by passing this excellent, responsible bill that has been developed with a lot of give-and-take, so that those 130,000 employees would know on Friday that their jobs would be secure, that they can go out and open the gates to the parks, to the forests, to the Smithsonian, to the fish and wildlife facilities.

If Members are concerned about the environment, the way to support the environmental issues is to vote for this bill so the funding will be available to these dedicated people who do truly take care of the environment as they provide the services in the Department of the Interior, to the cultural institutions, to the Department of Energy.

I would strongly urge the Members to support the rule and support the bill. I think, given the restraints that we had on the funding levels, that we have done a responsible job of meeting the needs of this Nation.

Mr. BEILENSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the distinguished gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. OBEY], the ranking member of the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I think every Member of the House needs to know that if you vote for this rule today and if you vote for this bill today, you will be voting to bust the budget.

Just a week ago, on December 5, the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. LIVINGSTON] filed on behalf of the Committee on Appropriations the Report on Budget Allocations Between Subcommittees as required by 602 of the Budget Act. That act sets the ceiling above which no appropriation bill may go without being subjected to being knocked off the floor by a point of order lodged by any Member.

Yet 1 week after they did that, and just a few short days before we are going to confront the need for a continuing resolution, or else see the Government shut down because the Speaker of the House is still at this point talking about using the leverage of the continuing resolution to force settlement of the overall budget issues, in the long-range budget talks that are now taking place, after being told that that is important enough to shut the Government down to get to a balanced budget, we are being asked to pass a proposition here today which busts the budget.

The filing by the committee on December 5 indicated that the ceiling for spending in this bill would be $12,213,000,000 in budget authority. The ceiling reported in this bill, 8 days later, is $12,234,476,000. That means it is $21.5 million above the allowable ceiling.

Now, we tried on three different occasions to get the committee to adopt a different 602 allocation to make room for additional funding in this and other bills. We were turned down by the majority in the committee, and yet today we are being asked to put that limitation aside.

I would ask Members of the House on both sides of the aisle, how many times do you remember having the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. WALKER] come to the House floor and berate the then majority Democratic Party for waiving budget rules when they brought rules to the floor under which appropriation bills would be debated? The answer is time and time and time again we were told by the gentleman from Pennsylvania and many others that we were waiving the Budget Act. Now, today, we are being asked not only to waive the Budget Act, but to waive spending ceilings within that budget.

If you take a look at the history of this House on regular appropriation bills, you will find that it has been a rare experience, indeed, when we were asked on a regular appropriation bill to waive those ceilings. It just seems to me that when we are facing a situation which may lead again to a Government shutdown, it is a very odd thing, indeed, for the committee to ask us to bust the budget ceiling to the tune of $21.5 billion. I do not think that is the orderly way to proceed. A much better way to proceed would have been to adjust those 602 allocations so that we are behaving as we are supposed to behave in a situation like this.

I also make the point this rule will allow us to proceed to consideration of a bill which allows for a significant increase in timber cutting in the Tongass Forest, one of a handful of temperate rain forests in the entire world, and yet this bill is going to accelerate that cutting. I do not believe we ought to do that. I do not think most persons concerned with preserving the environment think we ought to do that, certainly not in this appropriation bill.

So I would urge both on environmental grounds and because this bill breaks the very budget ceilings which were imposed on us just 8 days ago by the majority party, I would urge Members to vote "no" on the rule.

Ms. PRYCE. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. LIVINGSTON], the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Appropriations.

(Mr. LIVINGSTON asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. LIVINGSTON. Mr. Speaker, I listened attentively to my friend from Wisconsin who, throughout this last year, has been complaining that we have not been spending enough money on one program or another, on babies, on children, on old people, on Indians. The gentleman from Illinois sitting over there wants to help the Indians. In fact, the administration wanted to help the Indians, too. They wanted at the outset of the conference $110 million above the Senate level to help the Indians.

This bill provides, I think, $137 million for the Indians above the Senate level. This bill provides more than the administration asked for them, and still the administration is threatening to veto it because now they still say there is not enough money for the Indians.

The gentleman from Illinois is opposing it because there is not enough money for the Indians. The gentleman from Wisconsin has opposed this bill because we are not spending enough money. He is not here arguing against the bill. He is just saying, well, we technically exceeded our budget allocations. Well, we did, in trying to accommodate his side, in trying to accommodate his administration, and we can cure the technicality, we can rearrange the budget allocations. In fact, we are in the process of working on that, and that is a technical glitch, and technically we are in error.

But do not say that we are not spending enough money and then attack us because we spent too much money. It does not make sense. But that is the position of the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. LIVINGSTON. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, that is not the position of the gentleman from Wisconsin. The position of the gentleman from Wisconsin is that if we have budget ceilings, we ought to live by them. But in my view, as you know, I tried twice or three times in the committee to try to adjust those ceilings in the proper way so that we could get that money from another place. I do not believe in busting the budget in order to fund the Interior bill. What I do believe is bills that are too high should be brought down to make room for the spending in this bill. I do not believe in spending $7 billion more than the White House asked on the military budget and then also exceeding the spending authority in this bill.

Mr. LIVINGSTON. Reclaiming my time, Mr. Speaker, the gentleman knows the Defense budget has been enacted into law. I think it called for spending about $400 million less than we spent last year, even though the administration wanted $700 million less than we appropriated, and he still wanted to send the troops to Bosnia. But the Defense bill is not before us.

The gentleman is technically correct. I concede the gentleman's technical assertion. He is absolutely technically correct, but substantively we are giving him more money than he asked for in the first place. This is a ridiculous objection.

I urge adoption of the rule.

Mr. FARR. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to speak in opposition to the Interior appropriations conference report for fiscal year 1996. One of the main reasons for my opposition is the severe cuts to the National Endowment for the Arts and the National Endowment for the Humanities. For a modest investment of $162 million, the preservation of our cultural resources outweigh the small cost to the government each year.

Recently, this Republican Congress proposed the elimination of Federal funding for these institutions. The purpose of these agencies is to provide support for arts organizations. In turn, these groups offer the community many activities such as plays, festivals, and seminars that cannot occur without Federal assistance. Furthermore, no arts organizations receive grants from the NEA or the NEH without providing matching funds.

On July 17, the House voted to approve the fiscal year 1996 Interior appropriations bill which cut Federal funding to the National Endowment for the Arts by 40 percent, leaving only $99 million. There were three amendments to the bill which would have cut all funding to the endowment and thus, completely phase out the agency at the end of this year. Fortunately, bipartisan efforts defeated the amendments.

However, in this era of Federal budget constraints, every Federal program, whether it is worthy or not, is subject to cuts. While we must work toward a balanced budget, we must not make indiscriminate and arbitrary cuts in the NEA budget. Recently, Chairman Jane Alexander has had to implement a 47 percent reduction of staff. Because of these reductions, the number of applications will have to be significantly cut and viable arts organizations will be hurt.

During my tenure in the California legislature, I continually met with business leaders who supported the arts. I believe that support for the arts is essential and contributes to our economic edge. The same hands that mold clay or play the piano can also program computers and start new businesses. It is our creativity which must be nurtured from an early age. We cannot afford to abolish the NEA and the NEH. It is an investment in our future.

Mr. BEILENSEN. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Ms. PRYCE. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, I yield back the balance of my time, and I move the previous question on the resolution.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. LAHOOD). The question is on the resolution.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. BEILENSEN. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify Members.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 231, nays 188, not voting 13, as follows:

Ms. PRYCE, from the Committee on Rules, submitted a privileged report (Rept. No. 104-404) on the resolution (H. Res. 303) providing for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 1745) to designate certain public lands in the State of Utah as wilderness, and for other purposes, which was referred to the House Calendar and ordered to be printed.

CONFERENCE REPORT ON H.R. 1977, DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR AND RELATED AGENCIES APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 1996

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Speaker, pursuant to House Resolution 301, I call up the conference report on the bill (H.R. 1977) making appropriations for the Department of the Interior and related agencies for the fiscal year ending September 30, 1996, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. LAHOOD). Pursuant to House Resolution 301, the conference report is considered as having been read.

(For conference report and statement, see proceedings of the House of December 12, 1995 at page H14288.)

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. REGULA] will be recognized for 30 minutes, and the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. YATES] will be recognized for 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. REGULA].

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker and my colleagues, this is the conference report on Interior. As my colleagues know, it was recommitment once on the question of the moratorium on mining, and the second time on the mining issue and also on the Tongass timber program.

Mr. Speaker, the questions on mining and the Tongass, I will address, but let me say at the outset I think what we have is a very fair bill. For example, we had dozens and dozens of requests from Members for various things that might impact in their districts, and the number on the Democratic side that we responded to is actually a few more than on the Republican side. We made an effort to respond on the merits of the issues without regard to partisanship, and I would hope that my colleagues on the minority side would support this legislation. I think likewise that the majority Members should do the same, and I think, as I explain what we made in the way of changes, that my colleagues will understand we have responded to the concerns of the Members.

Also I think it is very important that we get this bill down to the President, and I would hope he would sign it. There are 130,000 employees who are waiting and hoping that this legislation will become law so they can get on with the job of managing the parks, keeping the gates open for the public to enjoy these wonderful facilities; likewise in managing our forests, our public lands, the grazing lands, the fish and wildlife facilities, the Smithsonian, the National Gallery. Many of my colleagues probably had their visitors here experience the fact that the doors were closed on the Smithsonian, the National Gallery, the Kennedy Center during the period of time, the 5 days or so, that we did not have funding, and, if we can get this conference report passed in the House and the Senate, get it to the President, I think to examine the merits of the bill, that the executive branch, the President, will recognize that we have been as fair as possible, that we have addressed the problems.

I want to say also at the outset that there is some talk about a budget bust. That has got to be the new math in this town, because this bill is $1.3 billion under 1995 in budget authority. It is about 10 percent below 1995, and it causes some tough decisions, but if we are to get to a balanced budget in 7 years, we have to look at each expenditure and say can we do this more efficiently, and we have tried to apply the policies of total quality management to the responsibilities that we have.

Let me address the issues that caused the recommittal, the first being the Tongass, the rain forest in the State of Alaska. A statement was made during the debate on the rule that actually we were increasing the cut. Exactly the opposite is happening. In the modified language, which I might say was worked over and agreed to by both sides of this issue on the Tongass, we reduced the allowable cut from 450 million board feet to 418 million board feet in the Tongass, so this is a reduction of the amount that can be allowed as far as cutting the timber. The practical matter is that the money in the bill, because of reduced funding, is only enough to allow for about 310 million board feet, and the same will likely be true in the 1997 bill. So, as far as the amount of cut that is allowed, it is substantially below what had been allowed prior to this time, so I think that is one of the ways we responded to those who have a concern for the Tongass.

Second, we removed the sufficiency language. Sufficiency language insulates actions from the courts from the requirements for environmental evaluation, and in the original bill that was language that was placed in there by the other body. We remove that so that the cuts in the Tongass, with one exception, are subject to all the rules, regulations, the actions of the courts, the Environmental Protection Agency, the endangered species law, the whole 9 yards, and therefore I think for those who are concerned about the environmental impacts, Mr. Speaker, we have made every effort to insure that environmental concerns are addressed. The one sale has already gone through all this, and we would allow that sale to be transferred to another buyer.

We have also allowed the planning process by the Forest Service to continue. They can go forward in their planning process to determine what should be the allowable cut and how it should be handled in the future, and that plan, we would hope, would be developed in the next several months. We give the Department a totally free hand in the planning process.

We removed the language concerning the Goshawk and permanently prohibiting establishing certain habitat conservable areas. The administration strongly objected to this permanent provision and it has been deleted.

I think on balance what we have done in the Tongass represents a very good compromise between those who are concerned about providing the jobs in Alaska, allowing a cut, and those who want to protect the environment, protect this forest, and as I said earlier, this represents a compromise among the interested parties.

On the mining issue, which was also part of the motion to recommit, we removed the triggers that would lift the moratorium so what we have is a moratorium with no triggers. We also provide that the Department of Interior, or BLM, has a 5-year period to process the grandfathered patents, and I know that is of an interest to those who have concern about the mining proposals. But, the moratorium that has been in place in the 1995 bill remains in place in the 1996 bill, and I think this is the important fact that I want to convey to all members:

We responded to the motion to recommit exactly as has been requested in that motion. It also provides that the Secretary of Interior should give us a report in the year as to what success they are having in getting the grandfather patents in which people have a proprietary interest effectuated or out to the applicants.

On the question of the Indians, I know the gentleman from Wisconsin, the minority leader on the Committee on Appropriations, was concerned about adequate funding for the Indians, and we had a request from the administration. Actually they requested $110 million over the Senate level. We end up here with $11 million. We have added $50 million from the second conference report to this one, $25 for tribal priorities. This allows the Indian tribes to use these funds in the way that will best serve their individual tribes and the people that are members thereof, and we put $25 million in Indian health, recognizing again that this is extremely important as we discharge our responsibility. One of the treaty obligations, the really true major obligations we have under the treaties, one is to provide health services, and the second is to provide education, and we have addressed those, and we have added the $50 million.

We have some other changes in the conference report. They are not big items, and I would be happy to address those in response to any questions. One of these would be requested by the Department of Interior, to allow them to work out agreements in cooperation with other levels of government. Also, a requirement that limits the log exports for an additional period of time in the Western States, and most of the other changes were agreed on, but I think the important thing I want to impress on the Members is that we responded to the motion to recommit. On the Tongass, on the mining moratorium, we responded in a way in which I think those who are interested parties will tell the Members during this debate that they are very well pleased with what we have been able to do, and the bill itself, I believe, responds, given the fiscal constraints we had, very effectively in meeting the needs of the people.

So I would hope that we can get this passed and get on with it. Our responsibilities, and we can say to those 130,000 employees, "We know your job is important, we know the public depends on you to provide the services in the parks, the forests and so on, and we want to let you know that we are behind you by supporting this legislation."

Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the RECORD include a table on the various accounts in the bill, as agreed to by the conference managers.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

The table on the various accounts in the bill is as follows:

FY 1996 INTERIOR AND RELATED AGENCIES APPROPRIATIONS BILL (H.R. 1977)

	FY 1995 Enacted	FY 1996 Estimate	House	Senate	Conference	Conference compared with enacted

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. YATES. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

My good friend, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. REGULA], has done as good a job as one can do with the assets that were at hand, a reasonable job, but it still is a very, very bad bill, and I intend to vote against it. He said that the conferees had responded to the motions of the House by making appropriate changes to Tongass and mining. The mining change does restore the moratorium, but the change to Tongass is so small as to be infinitesimal, and it still will be environmentally unsound.

Mr. Speaker, the song asks where have all the flowers gone, and the poem asks where are the snows of yesteryear. I ask where are all the Republican moderates going? Will the Republicans reject a bill that is as environmentally disgraceful as the previous bill? It appears that the Republican leadership has pressured their moderate members to swallow hard and support this bill, and that is too bad because this bill is not worthy of their support, nor is it worthy of the support of any of us in the House.

The conference report before us still puts our precious natural resources at grave risk. This conference report mandates the Forest Service implement the discredited alternative P management plan in the Tongass National Forest in Alaska, and this bad plan is not forced upon the Forest Service for 1 year, but it mandates alternative P be employed as well in fiscal year 1997.

I think most Members now know that alternative P is a radical forest management plan that was rejected by the Forest Service and rejected by the Governor of Alaska because it would wreak ecological havoc on the Tongass. Currently the Forest Service allows 310 million board feet of timber to be cut from the Tongass each year. Alternative P does not recognize that limitation, although my good friend, the gentleman from Ohio, indicated that the funds that are made available for the cut in this year will only allow a cut of 310 million board feet. Nevertheless, the spurs will be put to the Forest Service, the whip will be lashed upon its employees to exceed the 310 million board feet, because alternative P puts that pressure upon them.

In addition, the Tongass provisions are fiscally irresponsible. The Tongass is a notorious below-cost forest. In the last 3 years the Government lost $102 million in timber sales there. If the timber harvest increases, the loss to the taxpayers increases. It will go up dramatically. What is more, this conference report also contains sufficiency language concerning which my good friend, the gentleman from Ohio, spoke. It is aimed at overturning the 9th Circuit Court ruling that blocks the sale of 280 million board feet of timber. If this sufficiency language is approved, no environmental laws will be in effect for the large sale, the large sale for which the sufficiency language is placed in the bill.

That means, Mr. Speaker, the Endangered Species Act is dismissed, the National Environmental Policy Act is waived, the Clean Water Act is ignored, and all other applicable laws are considered irrelevant. In addition, this sufficiency language prevents all citizens, environmentalists and private landowners alike, from exercising their right for a fair hearing before the courts.

If we do not recommit this conference report, we will be rejecting the judgment of the Forest Service. We will be putting a great forest at risk, and we will be setting a dangerous legal precedent.

Mr. Speaker, I intend to offer a motion to recommit at the appropriate time, and I hope that motion may be sustained, with the help of the moderate Republicans, again.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes and 30 seconds to the gentleman from Arizona [Mr. KOLBE], a member of the subcommittee.

(Mr. KOLBE asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. KOLBE. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of the Interior appropriations conference report. This $12.1 billion appropriations bill is the result of a lot of hard work, and yes, a lot of compromise. As we know, this bill has been recommitted twice because of concerns that have been expressed regarding two of the provisions that have already been mentioned here today, the mining patent moratorium and statutory language regarding the Tongass National Forest. But those two issues have been resolved after a lot of tough negotiations. Now it is time we pass this important legislation and send it to the President.

Putting together a workable budget for the Department of the Interior, the Department of Energy, the Forest Service, and numerous other independent agencies under this subcommittee's jurisdiction has not been an easy one. There have been a lot of roadblocks. Some of them have been legitimate, some of them frivolous. But here we are with a conference report that is fair, it is fiscally conservative, and I think it represents an excellent starting point for the 7-year journey toward a balanced budget that both the Congress and the President have now committed themselves to doing.

The gentleman from Ohio [Mr. REGULA], chairman of the committee, has informed us of the various provisions that are in this bill. I just want to re-emphasize a couple of them. We have attempted to place an emphasis on preserving natural and cultural resources, the maintenance of scientific and research functions, our commitment to the health and educational needs of Native Americans. The conference report also ensures that adequate resources are allocated for our Nation's public parks and, our crown jewels, our National Park System. In fact, in an era of decreasing budgets, this bill actually contains an increase in the operational account of the National Park Service. This is going to prove invaluable to the management of America's parks. Contrary to some published reports, the subcommittee never, never considered or even contemplated closing any of our Nation's parks.

I have spoken previously about some of the projects and programs in this report. A couple, though, deserve to be highlighted again. An important and much needed initiative is the recreational fee demonstration program. This innovative program will give the National Park Service, the Bureau of Land Management, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, the Forest Service, the opportunity to establish a 1-year pilot program that allows these land management agencies to charge and utilize onsite recreational use and access fees. The conference report directs each agency to establish up to 50 demonstration sites where broad fee authorities are established.

The best aspect of this program is that the bulk of the fees that are collected stay at the site which collects them. Allowing 80 percent of the fees that are collected to be used in that particular park is a way to give park managers an incentive to collect fees and make visitor driven improvements.

Another important aspect of this conference report is the level of funding for the Bureau of Indian Affairs. Is it as much as the House initially provided? No. Compromises did have to be made. I think the level of funding proposed in this report is fair and it goes a long way to providing the necessary infrastructure services our tribal communities depend upon.

Under this bill, the BIA will receive $1.3 billion in fiscal year 1996. This represents an additional $25 million we added during the third conference for the tribal priority allocation program. It will now have $653 million in fiscal year 1996. That is $111 million above what the Senate had proposed. Conferees also added another $25 million to the Indian Health Service Account, bringing their 1996 funding level to $1.747 billion.

In addition to the preceding, the conference report contains a provision which is vitally important to the astrophysical community and certainly to the State of Arizona. This provision will allow the Mt. Graham Observatory project to continue construction of the world's largest ground-based telescope, the large binocular telescope. This legislative clarification was needed because of constant and often frivolous lawsuits that have beset the project, even though Congress spoke clearly on this matter when it passed the Arizona-Idaho Wilderness Act in 1988, authorizing the construction of these three telescopes.

I want to thank the chairman of the committee, Senator GORTON, and all my colleagues on the conference committee for supporting this effort. Mr. Speaker, the conference report provides a sound and fiscally conservative blueprint for the continued management of our public lands. As stewards of these lands, it is incumbent upon us to ensure that they are preserved for future generations to enjoy. Let us stop the demagoguing and political posturing. It is a good bill, it is one that merits our support. Let us send it to the President. Support this conference report and let us defeat any motion to recommit.

Mr. YATES. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Colorado [Mr. SKAGGS], a member of our subcommittee.

Mr. SKAGGS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me the time.

Mr. Speaker, as we begin debate on this conference report, the third time we have had a conference report on this measure, I want to join my other colleagues in both paying my respect and expressing my affection toward our chairman, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. REGULA], even as I express my dislike for his bill. I suspect that perhaps the chairman would rather have affection for his bill, rather than for him. But be that as it may, we are back again for the third time on this particular measure, and the Republican leadership's third try for an acceptable conference report on this important appropriations bill.

The first two times this bill was brought to the floor, the House did the right thing. We rejected the conference report and told the conferees to go back and try again. It was the right thing to do because neither of those conference reports deserved to pass.

This version is not quite so bad, but it still falls short, in my opinion, and I cannot support it. The Republican leadership would not let the conferees even try to improve many of the funding provisions in the previous conference report. While this version does provide somewhat more funding for native American programs, which I endorse heartily, the other provisions remain unchanged. The report still has all of the previous version's antienvironmental riders, like the ban on any new listings under the Endangered Species Act.

The report does a much better job dealing with a moratorium on bargain basement sales of mineral lands. But as the ranking member, the gentleman from Illinois, has already pointed out, what about Tongass? The previous report called for increased timbering, including in areas that the Forest Service wants to put off limits in order to protect fish and wildlife, and would make permanent some of the temporary restrictions on protecting habitat that were misguidedly included in the rescissions bill earlier this year. This conference report with respect to Tongass is almost as bad, and on this point alone, if for no other reason, we should send it back so we may try again.

Regarding the National Endowment for the Arts, the conferees voted again to retain the so-called Helms language. That is a sad decision, and it should not be accepted.

In short, Mr. Speaker, this third conference report still is a bad bill, still deserves to be defeated. We should not pass it. If we do, the President should veto it and we should sustain that veto.

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Alaska [Mr. YOUNG], chairman of the Committee on Resources.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, I would ask, where are the timber jobs of yesteryear? We asked where the flowers were and where the moderate Republicans are, but where are the timber jobs of yesteryear? The gentleman from Illinois [Mr. YATES] had the privilege of serving at one time as the chairman, and knows full good and well, he voted for the Tongass agreement to allow us, in fact, to have a sound economy, yet leaving over 15 million acres in southeast Alaska out of the multiple-use timber base.

Good fiction never dies, especially fiction about the Tongass Forest that is being spread on this floor today. I can hardly believe my ears. Such a distinguished gentleman saying this would destroy the last standing rain forest of the great southeast Alaska, when there are 15 million acres already off limits to logging, and he has twice voted in this Congress to do so.

But we have lost 42 percent of our timber workers since the last act of this Congress on the Tongass in 1990.

This bill, as I suggested to the conference and the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. REGULA], is not everything I would want. In fact, this Tongass issue is truly a red herring. All we are asking in this agreement is to freeze a land base of 1.7 million acres, the amount of land agreed to in 1990 that would be available for timber over a 100-year period. The amendment says that the land base can no longer be taken away. And remember, we have 15 million acres of land available for wildlife and old growth habitat today. We are talking about a very small, tiny land base for timber.

Harvesting does not change, in fact, what can be harvested, does not increase at all under the provision. It does not tell the Forest Service what they can do, other than the fact it says "You can no longer take away any of that land base that we made available in two previous acts of Congress."

This, in fact, is further than I would have gone, but my senior Senator in fact has agreed to this. He sits on the conference. I am going to suggest, this conference report must pass.

I listened to the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. HOYER] yesterday saying "We can solve these problems if we just send the appropriation bills to the President." We are going to do that today. We will send him a bill that should be signed, a bill that does take care of the problem, a bill, in fact, that does keep a moratorium on mining, which the gentleman wishes to do. That is what he wanted.

This is good legislation, but I again would like to put to rest this constant misinformation, this constant fiction about the Tongass National Forest. We are talking about 1.7 million acres available for harvest but not cut, and we are talking about 15 million acres of rain forest unavailable for logging, 15 million acres for the future generations to study those great old trees and watch them become gray and fall down. We have already done that. Let us vote for this conference report. This is good legislation. Let us support the chairman.

Mr. YATES. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from New York [Ms. SLAUGHTER].

(Ms. SLAUGHTER asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Speaker, today I rise in opposition to H.R. 1977, the Department of Interior appropriations for fiscal year 1996. As my colleagues all know, this is now the third time the House has considered this measure. Twice before, we sent it back to conferees and demanded that they place a moratorium on the sale of Federal lands for as little as $2.50 an acre. Today, we have a third try at the Interior conference report which could stop this giveaway temporarily, but still contains some dangerous provisions.

When I look at the conference provisions to eliminate the Bureau of Mines, I am dismayed that Congress is rushing to dismantle the agency. As a child in Harlan County, KY, I was aware of mine disasters regularly occurring with great loss of life. Mining is considered the most dangerous of jobs. It took President Franklin Roosevelt to care enough about working people to intervene and impose worker safety standards.

Now, deciding that businesses know better, the 104th Congress has already crippled worker safety programs in the Labor Department. Under this legislation today, we will approve eliminating the Bureau of Mines, and accept a vague promise that health and safety research will be transferred to the Energy Department; itself slated to be demolished.

Another grave mistake in this conference report is the destruction of the NEA. When I see provisions to slash funding for the arts, I cannot understand the sense of this Congress to phase out an agency which costs about 64 cents a year per taxpayer and yields $3.4 billion a year in tax revenue. I urge my colleagues to realize how much economic growth results from a modest investment in the arts.

Just last week, an article in the New York Times described the annual storytelling festival held in Jonesborough, TN, which drew crowds from all 50 States and generated over $5 million in economic activity.

All across the country, cities and convention centers are forming partnerships with arts councils and museums, realizing the revenue possibilities with increased tourism.

In October, the White House Conference on Travel and Tourism devoted a day long session to cultural tourism, and the conference overwhelmingly agreed that arts and museum attractions were vital to any city's competition for tourists.

Besides the economic reasons to support the arts, we have to realize the arts' impact on our children's education. In a recent survey of public elementary and secondary schools conducted by the Department of Education, teachers and administrators viewed the arts, music, and creative writing as essential to a child's education. If we vote today to approve these cuts to the NEA, the educational and economic impact to our cities would be greater than we could ever imagine.

Mr. Speaker, a vote for the Interior appropriations bill sends a message that we approve of clearcutting and logging; that we accept rolling back protection for mine workers; and that we feel secure sacrificing Federal support for our Nation's cultural programs. Vote against this bill.

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3½ minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. BOEHLERT].

(Mr. BOEHLERT asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BOEHLERT. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this conference report. We did not get it right the first two times. We have made some significant improvements this time.

Once again I want to extend my appreciation to Chairman REGULA, who did truly Herculean work in brokering this compromise. For weeks he engaged in a sort of shuttle diplomacy that would put Henry Kissinger to shame. He has my deepest appreciation.

We have heard a lot about the moratorium on the mining. That is a plus, because that moratorium is in this legislation. And I believe the language on the Tongass National Forest in this bill is a reasonable compromise. Certainly I would prefer that the bill have no Tongass provision at all, but I believe we needed to reach an agreement to move this appropriation forward, and it is a fair compromise.

The compromise removes the sufficiency language that would have insulated alternative P from legal challenges. That is an important victory for the environment.

The compromise removes the prohibition against setting up habitat conservation areas. That is an important victory for the environment.

The compromise removes the constraints on future planting in the Tongass, allowing science to determine the content of future forest management plans. That, too, is an important victory for the environment.

These are all important advances that will protect the forest from excessive logging and permit science to be the basis for future planning.

I want to emphasize that nothing in this bill in any way limits the ability of the Forest Service to make decisions about the future of the Tongass, including reducing the timber acreage or timber sale quantity. Science, that means peer review science conducted in line with standard scientific procedures. Science will determine those figures.

The managers' language makes clear that the Forest Service is empowered to continue with its planning, including filing a final environmental impact statement and record of decision.

The only limitation is that no revisions can be implemented before September 30, 1997. So this is a reasonable compromise.

And my good colleague and friend from Illinois with whom I worked closely on this issue has asked, where have the moderates gone? The moderates have gone into the conference room to sit down with all the players to work out something that makes sense, that protects the environment and gets us the progress we want. Those who oppose this conference report should consider the alternative, and that alternative is not very friendly to anyone, most likely a continuing resolution with lower funding and more restrictions. We do not want that.

I urge my colleagues to support this conference report, and I thank the distinguished gentleman from Ohio [Mr. REGULA], the chairman. He deserves our praise.

Mr. YATES. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. KENNEDY].

Mr. KENNEDY of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, this is one of the clearest cut, so to speak, examples of corporate welfare that we see padded in our Federal budget.

What we have here is plain and simple, a recognition that while this bill goes about cutting a program to provide low-income people and moderate-income people weatherization funds which are cut by 47 percent, in the same bill we go back in and provide subsidies to the biggest lumber companies in this country, of hundreds of millions of dollars to go in so that they can cut down virgin trees in our most pristine areas of our national forests.

We use Forest Service employees to go in and identify trees, that then the big companies come in cut the trees down, take the trees over to Japan, they mulch them up into fiberboard, we bring them back, buy them in the United States, build our homes with Japanese-supported improvements on our own trees, and then what we do is send the bill to the American taxpayer.

We sit here on the House floor and watch time and time again while the Republican Party stands up and condemns black women on welfare, and yet when it comes to corporate welfare, all of a sudden they lose their tongues.

It is time for this country to come to grips with where the money goes in the Federal budget, whether or not we are willing to stand up to those that have and want more, or whether or not we want to provide a meager opportunity to those that are struggling to put their house in order and to try to be part of the American dream.

I think that this bill demonstrates when we start throwing hundreds of millions of dollars at the Tongass, the Tongass, the most pristine and most beautiful place that I have ever been in the United States of America, and we are extending the amount of land that the Tongass has to be allowed to be cut down by our lumber companies by a third in this bill.

Why would we possibly destroy America's forests and not come to grips with the cost to the American taxpayer?

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. LEWIS], a member of the full committee.

(Mr. LEWIS of California asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Speaker, I very much appreciate my colleague yielding me the time.

I want to say to Chairman REGULA and his subcommittee members and staff that I know it has been a very difficult process finally putting this conference report together. I think the kind of work that has been done by our chairman in connection with making compromises can best be illustrated by pointing to a very serious problems that relates to the work that is being done in the California desert.

As all of your know, the last Congress, we spent many hours on this floor debating the future of the California desert. No small part of that debate centered around the fact that some of us were concerned that the Park Service was being asked to become the new managers of a region that they had very little experience in managing. The Park Service by statute is a single use agency. The desert, however, is unique area that for generations has a long and successful history of multiple use management.

I was very much concerned about the National Park Service's ability to handle these responsibilities. Indeed, we have learned in recent months that they need a good deal more preparation for that management.

Let me share with my colleagues an unfortunate problem that developed recently. The Park Service, in classic form, decided to run their new responsibilities at the Mojave Preserve in a single purpose fashion. In doing so, they essentially excluded many volunteer wildlife organizations that had been very helpful in managing the California desert. The California Department of Fish and Game was excluded as were volunteers from the Society for the Conservation of Bighorn Sheep. These volunteers have worked for years to build a fantastic success story in dealing with the bighorn sheep. Unfortunately, the Park Service excluded them from the Mojave Preserve. As a direct result of Park Service mismanagement, water guzzlers that were voluntarily developed in conjunction with the Bureau of Land Management and the California Department of Fish and Game to help build up our bighorn sheep population malfunctioned. As a result of restricted access by the Park Service, 38 bighorn sheep were killed.

What that really means is our efforts to build that herd up to some 2,000 animals by the year 2000 probably has been undermined because of frankly a lack of experience on managing a multipurpose area.

There is absolutely no doubt that this bill begins to meet that challenge by directing the Park Service to rethink where they have been, come forward with a management plan that will recognize the traditional multiple uses of the Mojave region so that we can save the wildlife success stories that we have had in the eastern Mojave Desert.

Mr. YATES. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Montana [Mr. WILLIAMS].

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. Speaker, this bill started out terrible and it is slowly getting better. I think maybe the third time is the charm, although I still do not support it because I still believe it is a bad bill that undercuts essential American efforts, it is still environmentally unsound, although incrementally getting better thanks to the efforts of Democrats, being joined by a few moderate Republicans.

However, this bill still savages the National Endowment for the Humanities and the National Endowment for the Arts and still contains language that on its own merit, the Helms language, would not pass even this Congress because it is unconstitutional. But the bill is getting better.

I want to commend both sides for adding funds for Native Americans. Frankly the Democrats embarrassed the Republicans into putting this additional money in here and even though it is not enough, it improves the bill.

I want to take a moment now, however, to mention a matter of great importance to my constituents in Montana and also other Americans. The Senate is going to place in the report, Senate committee report, language which, although it does not have the force of law, is very disturbing. The Senate report language represents an attempt to discourage the efforts of our Secretary of Agriculture to protect the best wild places left in the northern Rocky Mountains in Montana.

Secretary Glickman, a number of weeks ago, announced his intention to issue a directive which will protect the wildest remaining roadless lands in Montana. Those are lands, by the way, which just a year and some ago this House voted overwhelmingly to place in wilderness.

In the last session of Congress, the House voted to place 1.7 million acres of Montana's wildest remaining roadless lands in wilderness. Secretary Glickman is determined, on behalf of President Clinton, to follow the intention of that Congress in which 308 members voted to provide ultimate protection to those wild lands.

Those lands are now under threat. They are under threat from oil and gas leasing, they are under threat from green harvest, most particularly under threat from the salvage sale because of the bill that was supported, sadly, by a majority in this House and Senate.

□ 1500

Those areas are now under threat of being roaded, blasted and gouged. Secretary Glickman has announced his intention to issue an order protecting those areas under his discretion as Secretary of Agriculture until finally both the House and Senate can move, as the House did, alone, in the last Congress.

The Senate report language, in effect, asks the Secretary of Agriculture not to do that, asks that development go ahead in this the last best place of America.

I simply want the RECORD to show that in the last Congress by a vote of almost 3 to 1. This House voted that those areas receive the ultimate protection of wilderness and I am convinced that this Congress might do no less if it had the opportunity.

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from West Virginia [Mr. RAHALL].

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, as the old saying goes, three times is a charm.

This is the third time this body is considering the conference report on the fiscal year 1996 Interior appropriation.

And, by golly, this time they have finally got it right, at least, as right as they'll ever get it in terms of maintaining the moratorium on the issuance of mining claim patents.

This version of the conference agreement basically extends the moratorium on the Interior Department issuing mining claim patents that was in place during fiscal year 1995.

In recognition that some patent applications are far enough along the process where the right to a patent may have vested, as with the fiscal year 1995 moratorium, the pending language grandfathers those claims.

While I would prefer to see no patents issued, I cannot quarrel with this grandfather provision as it is aimed at protecting the taxpayer from expensive takings claims.

I also would prefer not to see language in the moratorium requiring an expedited processing of the grandfathered claims. Frankly, the deadline set in the legislation will be impossible for the Department to meet so I do not place a great deal of weight on it.

I am going to support this conference agreement. I am not enthused about the Tongass provision or the Mount Graham telescope language.

I strongly support the designation of Yellowstone National Park as a world heritage site in danger, and note that the conferees simply wrote report language against this proposal. This report language does not carry the weight of law.

And finally, if I had my preference, the appropriations for the Office of Surface Mining and the National Park Service would be a lot different than what is contained in this bill.

However, in light of the fact that the conferees have finally addressed the important issue of mining claim patents in a suitable fashion, and that we must provide funding for the many important programs within the Interior Department, I intend to support this conference agreement although not the bill I would have written, but then rarely is a bill so written.

Mr. Speaker, I do strongly commend the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. REGULA], the subcommittee chairman, as well as the ranking member, the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. YATES], for their years and years of dedicated effort to try to enact true mining law reform, and absent that we have had to go along with this moratorium as it exists, and as it exists in this particular bill, I will support it.

Mr. YATES. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 3 minutes.

Mr. Speaker, I yield myself this time to bring to the attention of the House the letter I have just received from the Executive Office of the President, OMB, dated December 13, 1995, relating to H.R. 1977, the Department of Interior and related agencies appropriations bill, and I quote:

This statement of administration policy provides the administration's views on H.R. 1977, the Department of the Interior and related agencies appropriations bill, FY 1996, as approved in conference December 12, 1995.

In the November 6, 1995, statement of administration policy to the House, the administration identified the most troublesome provisions in the original conference report with the goal of arriving at a bill that serves specific vital interests and that could be signed by the President.

Regrettably, the third conference report does not adequately address the significant funding shortfalls and objectionable legislative riders. If the bill, as approved by the third conference, were it presented to the President, he would veto it. With few exceptions, the issues that were identified in the November 6 statement of administration policy remain serious problems and are described below.

And there are three pages of objections.

Mr. Speaker, I am including the full statement of administration policy as a part of the RECORD at this point.

EXECUTIVE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT,

OFFICE OF MANAGEMENT AND BUDGET,
Washington, DC, December 13, 1995.

STATEMENT OF ADMINISTRATION POLICY

(This statement has been coordinated by OMB with the concerned agencies.)

H.R. 1977—DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR AND RELATED AGENCIES APPROPRIATIONS BILL, FY

Sponsors: Livingston (R) Louisiana; Regula (R) (Ohio).

This Statement of Administration Policy provides the Administration's views on H.R. 1977, the Department of the Interior and Related Agencies Appropriations Bill, FY 1996, as approved in conference on December 12, 1995. Your consideration of the Administration's views would be appreciated.

In the November 6, 1995, Statement of Administration Policy to the House, the Administration identified the most troublesome provisions in the original conference report with the goal of arriving at a bill that serves specific, vital interests and that could be signed by the President.

Regrettably, the third conference report does not adequately address the significant funding shortfalls and objectionable legislative riders. If the bill, as approved by the third conference, were presented to the President, he would veto it. With few exceptions, the issues that were identified in the November 6th Statement of Administration Policy remain serious problems and are described below.

Funding Issues

While the Administration appreciates the $50 million in funding restored for the Bureau of Indian Affairs and the Indian Health Service, this additional funding falls short of the levels needed to maintain these important programs. In addition, the third conference has done nothing to restore funds for the Department of Energy's (DOE's) energy conservation programs.

The Bureau of Indian Affairs (BIA) budget has been increased in the third conference $25 million above the previous conference level. That would still leave the program $111 million short of the House mark and $159 million below the FY 1995 enacted level. The most significant effect of this action remains the crippling reductions targeted at tribal priority allocation programs, which support essential tribal government, law enforcement, housing improvement, general assistance, Indian child welfare, adult vocational training, road maintenance, and other basic reservation services. The Administration's view is that funding must be restored more substantially for these programs.

DOE's energy conservation programs are still funded at a net level of $536 million. There has been no increase from the first or second conference levels. This funding level is $187 million, or 26 percent, below the net FY 1995 enacted level of $723 million, and 38 percent below the President's request. Funding for these programs must be restored significantly in order to reach acceptable levels.

In addition to the satisfactory resolution of the language issues addressed below, the President will not sign an Interior appropriations bill unless funding for these programs is significantly restored without harming in other high-priority programs or unless there is an overall agreement between the Congress and the Administration on budget priorities that addresses the Administration's fundamental concerns about spending priorities both in this bill and elsewhere.

Language Issues

The conference committee has made few changes to the numerous legislative riders in the bill that the Administration finds seriously objectionable. Except for the continuation of the existing mining patent moratorium, the riders that were cited in the November 6th Statement of Administration Policy has not been significantly improved in the third conference. These provisions are so seriously flawed that the Administration sees no way to remedy them, short of removing them altogether. The most serious problems are:

The Tongass (Alaska) forest management provisions. These provisions would dictate the use of the current forest plan for FY 1996 and FY 1997, require unsustainable timber sale levels, and not allow the plan to be updated during this period;

The Interior Columbia River Basin provision. This provision would continue to impede implementation of the comprehensive plan for management of public lands by prohibiting the publication of the final Environmental Impact Statement or Record of Decision and limiting the contents to exclude information on fisheries and watersheds, although it would extend by 90 days the due date for the assessment project. The provision would risk a return to legal gridlock on timber harvesting, grazing, mining, and other economically desirable activities;

Bill language that provides $500,000 from available funds for the National Park Service (NPS) to develop the Mojave National Preserve's management plan. This provision would still limit funding to $1 for NPS land management operations within the Preserve, while providing $599,000 for operational funding to be managed by the Bureau of Land Management (BLM). Report language adopted by the third conference calling for more studies by the Park Service, and prohibiting any transfer of funds to NPS to augment operations, does not change the fact that the Preserve would be starved of funding, and the purposes of the California Desert Act would be undercut; and

No change in language from the first conference in a rider to make permanent the protocol for identification of marbled murrelet nests that was included in the FY 1995 rescission bill, thereby eliminating normal flexibility to use new scientific information as it develops.

In addition, the Administration has previously expressed concern about other legislative riders, including the moratorium of future listings and critical habitat designations under the Endangered Species Act, the Department of Energy efficiency standards one-year moratorium, and the provision affecting the Lummi Tribe and seven other self-governance tribes in Washington State.

An additional funding issue concerns the severe cuts (nearly 40 percent) to the National Endowment for the Arts (NEA) and the National Endowment for the Humanities (NEH). These significantly reduced funding levels would jeopardize NEA's and NEH's ability to continue to provide important cultural, educational, and artistic programs for communities across America.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. VENTO].

(Mr. VENTO asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to this Interior appropriation bill. Unfortunately, what has occurred here as we have marched through 3 months of off and on floor consideration of this Interior appropriation is that the House has on two occasions, on one occasion by over a 2-to-1 vote, sent this back to conference because of the mining patent problems, has sent it back to conference because of the Tongass language, and not only has the conference not dealt effectively with those issues, they have made some cosmetic changes in terms of them, but the substance and thrust of them, the effect that they would have in terms of the policy initiatives, remains intact, that it is and remains intact in terms of its micromanagement and, of course, according to the mineral rights and patents of the various claims that were filed before 1994. The effect is to make the effect of having a moratorium on mining patents null and void in this insofar as anything that occurred before September 30, 1994. That is probably the ball game. That is the ball game in terms of what is going on.

In the Tongass, the national forest bill modified the language but the levels of timber, 418 million board feet out of the Tongass, is exactly what the language was before. It may be modified in some respects, but it has the same effect.

Worst than that, Mr. Speaker, it seems like this measure has become a moving target, this particular legislation, and I lament that it has become a moving target to attach any legislative matters that the Republican majority thinks that they need to get done, they do not want to have considered or voted on the floor in an up-or-down vote and debated in an open way.

We have maintained log exports from the Northwest, regulations limiting log exports from the Pacific Northwest is set aside. There is authorizing law; a designation of the Vancouver national historic site, an issue that is being and should be considered in the resources authorizing committee. It has changes in the Columbia River Basin assessment. It has new National Park Service authorities. It has managers language in terms of what the park service may do with regard to the protection of Yellowstone, one of the crown jewels of the National Park System in terms of how we can protect the areas around it because there is development in terms of goldmining and that is going to affect the watersheds and this national park. This legislation bars protection or action to monitor.

And so apparently that is of paramount concern to the new majority to protect that degradation of Yellowstone National Park in this legislation.

It talks about wilderness designation and limiting such designation to law. I always thought we legislated wilderness designation. Apparently, at best this measure is the redundant reiteration of the self-evident with regard to what we do with wilderness designation, but I do not know what the language does, or its purpose.

Far more, it goes on to keep all the other riders and limitations preventing the Secretary to exercise his stewardship responsibilities with regard to grazing, preventing the Secretary from trying to attain the recordation of roads and the degradation of the environment.

This bill deserves to be defeated once more today because it has grown worse, not better, in the bad faith effort on the part of the Republican majority party. Today they point to the date and the pressure to enact funding for the departments and agencies in this measure, but the basis for not acting to pass this measure in October or November have not changed. The mining provisions have not changed, the Tongass timber language retains all the limits on the ability to reasonably regulate grazing, road rights of ways and the Endangered Species Act persist in this measure and to add insult to injury the measure piles on new riders and limits—it was not right in September, October, or November and even this crock of December does not justify and warrant passing an appropriation that has grown worst with age not better.

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. LIVINGSTON], the distinguished chairman of the full committee.

(Mr. LIVINGSTON asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. LIVINGSTON. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank my friend, the gentleman from Ohio, for his incredible patience in working this bill through. This is the third time we have tried to get this through the House, and as the gentleman who preceded me in the well has vigorously pointed out, some people are never going to be satisfied with this bill. He is not, and there will be others who will vote against it.

But we have massaged this bill under the leadership of the gentleman from Ohio. He has worked with the environmentalists. He has worked with the people in the West who are concerned about mining. He has worked with the people in Alaska who are concerned about the Tongass and the environmentalists who are concerned about the same issue on the other side. We have worked with people concerned about the Mohave Desert, and one issue after another, and we have brought them together in the spirit of compromise. That is the legislative process.

The Senate and the House have come together, Republicans and Democrats have come together to agree. Liberals and conservatives, environmentalists and other people who may not consider themselves quite within the environmental mode, all of these people have come together, and today is the day.

The bill did not pass the first time, because one group or another was unhappy. The bill did not pass the second time because other people were unhappy. Today, for crying out loud, let us pass this bill. Send it to the Senate and send it to the President for his signature, yes, for his signature. I know he is threatening a veto, as the gentleman from Illinois has pointed out, but he threatened a veto on the defense bill, too, and he ended up letting that become law.

This is as good a bill as we can get. We have got all the interests competing. We have worked, we have massaged, and we have tried to mold this bill and satisfy everyone's concerns. It is a reasonable bill. It is a good bill. The President of the United States should sign it into law.

I urge the adoption of this conference report.

Mr. Speaker, earlier the technical 602(b) violation was discussed. I just want to make clear the committee is well within its overall 602 allocation. This particular subcommittee's subdivision however is in technical violation of the so-called 602(b) at this time. The committee has not had an opportunity to revise its latest allocation to shift the necessary funds into the Interior subcommittee. In order to make this new conference report comply with the allocation we will have to shift some $22 million in budget authority and some $36 million in outlays. Even with this shift in funds the committee's domestic allocation would still be some $2.1 billion in budget authority below the ceiling and some $570 million in outlays below the ceilings.

The committee has always stayed within its overall allocation, and will redirect the funds accordingly.

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself the balance of my time.

Mr. Speaker, Members, my colleagues, this is a good bill. We have addressed your concerns. You have heard the gentleman from New York [Mr.

BOEHLERT] speak and the gentleman from Alaska [Mr. YOUNG] who had some differences on the Tongass and on mining, and they both agreed that this represents a reasonable compromise, as was clearly pointed out by the chairman.

I would just point out, also, that in terms of the Tongass, we have reduced the cut from 450 million board feet to 418 and as a practical matter, it will be about 310.

Likewise, we have addressed the mining concerns. The issues that were in the recommittals, I think, have been very thoroughly addressed, and this is quite evident by the fact that the people who have an interest on both sides have spoken in favor of this bill.

Also, I would address the question the President raises in his message about not enough money is being spent. Well, obviously earlier we heard that it was a budget buster. Now, I think that message is a bit in conflict. The truth of the matter is it is a responsible bill, and it does reduce spending, but it uses the funds available in a very prudent way.

As far as the Bureau of Indian Affairs, we have addressed the needs of education, of health. We are actually above the President's request in one of his last statements.

Overall I think that we have a very good bill. I think it is important we get this down to the White House, and I hope that they would sign this so that the 130,000 people that serve all of us in the parks and forests can get on with the job and serve the American people in the way that they would like.

Let me strongly urge the members on both sides to reject the recommittal motion which will be again on the Tongass. We have already, as you have heard from other speakers, we have addressed the problems in the Tongass. Let us reject the recommittal motion and pass the bill.

Mr. FAZIO. Mr. Speaker, once again, I cannot support this Interior appropriations conference agreement. It is a bad deal. Not only are the mining provisions a sham, but once again the bill is a back door attempt to repeal the California Desert Protection Act.

In addition to retaining the $1 limit on the Park Service budget to manage the Mojave Preserve, this version goes even further by capping their planning money as well. While this third attempt provides a nominal increase to $500,000 in planning money, it does nothing to restore the protections needed to ensure the park is properly maintained.

When Congress passed the California Desert Protection Act, it placed much of California's desert wilderness under the jurisdiction of the National Park Service. This provided much greater environmental protection than previously afforded under the Bureau of Land Management.

Last year the National Park Service improved visitor services, resource protection, and law enforcement in the Mojave resulting in significantly increased visitation and revenues for the surrounding communities. During the 14 years that the BLM managed the Mojave as a national scenic area, open pit mining, motorcycle races, and general environmental degradation led to widespread protest.

I understand my good friend and colleague Mr. LEVINS' concern that the Park Service not become overzealous in its oversight of the preserve. However, even the local chamber of commerce has conceded that the new management of the park has enhanced tourism and made the Mojave more enjoyable for everyone. They endorse the changes made by the California Desert Protection Act and oppose the language in this appropriations measure. Not only is the BLM funding level for the preserve inadequate in this measure—a mere $600,000—but the Park Service's ability to devise a plan to manage the preserve in the future is severely restricted both in dollars and in time. Unless a plan is devised in the next few months, management of the Mojave will in all probability stay in BLM clutches.

I urge my colleagues to once again send the message on this measure that major policy changes affecting the environment—regarding both mining and the Mojave—should be conducted through an open and deliberative legislative process, not shortcut through the appropriations bills. Vote "no" on the Interior appropriations conference report.

Mr. MARKEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong opposition to the conference report on Interior and related agencies appropriations.

There are a number of reasons to oppose this ill-conceived legislation, and I have discussed some of them in previous debates on this bill. Today, I would like to focus on one shortcoming that is particularly disturbing about the legislation, and that is its failure to provide adequate funding for energy efficiency programs at the Energy Department.

DOE's efficiency programs support the development of new energy efficient technologies that prevent pollution, create jobs, make our economy more competitive, and save consumers precious dollars. Unfortunately, the Republican majority has elected to slash funding for our energy efficiency efforts by 28 percent from the fiscal year 1995 enacted budget.

Of particular concern is the nearly 50 percent cut in low-income weatherization assistance. This program leverages over $100 million dollars in outside money, enabling low-income Americans to better handle winter and summer energy costs. Because of these debilitating cuts, many thousand fewer homes will become energy efficient this year.

President Clinton has vowed to veto the fiscal year 1996 Interior appropriations bill if and when a conference report clears the Congress. A recent statement of administration policy on the Interior bill stated that, "Funding for [energy efficiency] programs must be restored significantly in order to reach acceptable levels." I strongly encourage the President to stand firm on his commitment to energy efficiency as a solution which protects the environment and helps the economy.

The President is quite right to criticize this legislation for failing to adequately fund the energy conservation programs within the DOE. The level of funding in H.R. 1977 is inadequate to carry on the important work of these programs.

Many House Members continue to support the President's position on this matter. I urge defeat of the conference report and request that the attached letter to the President, which was signed by 68 House Members, be included in the RECORD.

CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES,
Washington, DC, December 6, 1995.

Re H.R. 1977—energy conservation programs

Hon. WILLIAM J. CLINTON,
The President, The White House

DEAR MR. PRESIDENT: We want to take this opportunity to strongly endorse the Statements of Administration Policy of November 7, 1995 and October 19, 1995, in which you indicated that the Department of Interior and Related Agencies Appropriations Bill for Fiscal Year 1996 (H.R. 1977) should and would be vetoed for a variety of reasons. We share your concern that this legislation does not adequately fund the energy conservation programs within the Department of Energy (DOE).

The funding level for these programs of $553 million is identical to the first conference report funding level and remains $215 million (or 28 percent) below fiscal year 1995 appropriations and 38 percent below your budget request.

We believe that this level of funding is inadequate to carry on the important work of these programs. As you know, DOE's energy conservation programs help every American by saving consumers precious dollars, making the economy more efficient and internationally competitive, and improving the environment by preventing pollution. These programs largely work with the private sector to develop and deploy new and more efficient technologies, as well as saving energy on the local level through state energy conservation programs (SECP) and low-income weatherization. We concur with OMB Director Alice Rivlin's statement that "funding for these programs must also be restored significantly to reach acceptable levels."

The approximately 50 percent reduction in funding for low-income weatherization and SECP is of special concern to us. Many thousand fewer homes will receive economically empowering energy efficiency improvements this winter because of the proposed Congressional cuts.

We applaud your continuing leadership in this area and stand ready to support you in insisting on a strong federal energy efficiency program.

Sincerely,

Mr. MILLER of California. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong opposition to this conference report.

There are many reasons to vote against this report, and there are lots of reasons for the President to veto this bill, which he certainly will in its present form.

Let me focus on just one of the important reasons why Members should vote against the conference report and that is because of the language which will lead to increased federal spending and accelerated logging in the Tongass National Forest.

On November 15, the house voted 230 to 199 to instruct the conferees to drop the Tongass logging rider from this legislation. They haven't done that. What they have done instead is to return to the floor with a cosmetic coverup of more taxpayer subsidies for clearcutting this rainforest.

As one of the architects of the Tongass Timber Reform Act of 1990, I can assure you that this rider is offensive to the goal of that act, which was to modernize forest management. This rider tries to turn the clock back to the days when subsidized clearcutting took priority over all other uses of the forest.

The Tongass rider requires that an outdated, scientifically discredited draft timber plan shall govern management of the National Forest for the next 2 years. What that means is that logging is authorized at a rate of 418 million board feet per year, 100 million board feet over the historic average. Even though the Forest Service already has a solid scientific basis and has rejected this plan as allowing an unsustainable, environmentally destructive rate of harvest, the rider would impose the plan by congressional edict for 2 years.

To add further insult, the rider has sufficiency language which is intended to overturn environmental lawsuits applying to existing sales.

Even at current rates of logging, the Tongass has the Nation's most heavily subsidized timber program. According to GAO, between 1992 and 1994, the cash flow deficit to the Treasury was $102 million. If we adopt this rider, losses to the Treasury could increase by another $18 million annually.

And what are we getting for the taxpayer's money? We're taking 400-year-old trees from the rainforest and turning them into pulp. I don't recall that provision being in the Republican Contract With America.

I do recall that during the timber salvage sale debate on the rescissions bill last March, Members were told that the amendment jointly applied to dead, dying, and burnt trees. What has happened is that we got a lot more than we were told about, including cutting of healthy, green old-growth timber in the Northwest.

Don't get fooled again. Vote against this conference report.

Mrs. SMITH of Washington. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this conference report. While this bill contains many important elements for natural resource dependent communities, I want to highlight one very important provision that was included in the conference committee yesterday by Senator GORTON.

This provision calls for the National Park Service to extend the lease at Pearson Airpark in the city of Vancouver past the year 2002. This is a key element in my legislation (H.R. 2172) to create the Fort Vancouver National Historic Reserve. While I anticipate that my legislation will pass the House next year, I am supportive of efforts to expedite the process with respect to Pearson Airpark. The designation of the Fort Vancouver National Historic Reserve will, of course, go through the normal authorizing process.

It was important to expedite the extension of the lease to give the city of Vancouver and the M.J. Murdock trust the certainty they need to forge ahead with the construction of the Murdock Aviation Museum. This will be a Smithsonian quality museum that will highlight the rich aviation history in the city of Vancouver. This legislation will go a long way to making this museum a reality.

I urge my colleagues to support this conference report.

Mr. SMITH of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to rise in strong support of the conference report on the Department of the Interior Appropriations Act. This appropriations bill contains a moratorium on new listings of endangered or threatened species or new designations of critical habitat under the Endangered Species Act. This moratorium is based on my Farm, Ranch and Homestead Protection Act.

The Endangered Species Act has destroyed the rights of hardworking, taxpaying American families for the sake of blind cave spiders, fairy shrimp, and golden-cheeked warblers. Until Congress reauthorizes the Endangered Species Act to balance the rights of landowners and common sense with environmental concerns, we must protect American landowners by putting regulators on a leash. This amendment would extend the regulatory moratorium on listing of endangered or threatened species or designation of critical habitat until Congress reauthorizes the Endangered Species Act.

Mr. REGULA. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. LAHOOD). Without objection the previous question is ordered on the conference report.

There was no objection.

MOTION TO RECOMMIT OFFERED BY MR. YATES

Mr. YATES. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion to recommit.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is the gentleman opposed to the conference report?

Mr. YATES. Mr. Speaker, very much. The SPEAKER pro tempore. The clerk will report the motion.

The clerk read as follows:

Mr. YATES moves to recommit the conference report on the bill H.R. 1977 to the committee of conference with instructions to the managers on the part of the House to insist on the House position on the amendment of the Senate numbered 108. In order to protect the Tongass National Forest from increased timber harvests.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion to recommit.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the noes appeared to have it.

Mr. YATES. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

ANNOUNCEMENT ON AMENDMENTS TO THE COMPREHENSIVE ANTITERRORISM ACT

(Mr. SOLOMON asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, the Rules Committee may be meeting as soon as this Saturday, December 16, to grant a rule which may limit the amendments to be offered to H.R. 1710, the Comprehensive Antiterrorism Act of 1995.

Subject to the approval of the Rules Committee, this rule may include a provision limiting amendments to those specified in the rule. Any Member who desires to offer an amendment should submit 55 copies and a brief explanation of the amendment by 4 p.m. on Friday, December 15, to the Rules Committee, at room H-312 in the Capitol.

Amendments should be drafted to the text of the Hyde-Barr substitute, which has been printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD of December 5, and which has also been introduced as a separate bill (H.R. 2703). The rule is likely to self-execute in the Hyde-Barr amendment as a new base text for H.R. 1710.

Members should use the Office of Legislative Counsel to ensure that their amendments are properly drafted and should check with the Office of the Parliamentarian to be certain their amendments comply with the rules of the House.

FURTHER CONFERENCE REPORT ON H.R. 1530, NATIONAL DEFENSE AUTHORIZATION ACT FOR FISCAL YEAR 1996

Mr. SPENCE submitted the following conference report and statement on the bill (H.R. 1530) to authorize appropriations for fiscal year 1996 for military activities of the Department of Defense, for military construction, and for defense activities of the Department of Energy, to prescribe personnel strengths for such fiscal year for the Armed Forces, and for other purposes:

REPORT ON RESOLUTION PROVIDING FOR DEBATE AND CONSIDERATION OF THREE MEASURES RELATING TO U.S. TROOP DEPLOYMENTS IN BOSNIA

Mr. SOLOMON, from the Committee on Rules, submitted a privileged report (Rept. No. 104-405) on the resolution (H. Res. 304) providing for debate and for consideration of three measures relating to the deployment of U.S. Armed Forces in and around the territory of the Republic of Bosnia and Herzegovina, which was referred to the House Calendar and ordered to be printed.

PROVIDING FOR DEBATE AND CONSIDERATION OF THREE MEASURES RELATING TO UNITED STATES TROOP DEPLOYMENTS IN BOSNIA

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 304, and ask for its immediate consideration.

H. RES. 304

Resolved, That upon the adoption of this resolution it shall be in order to debate the deployment of United States Armed Forces in and around the territory of the Republic of Bosnia and Herzegovina for one hour equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on International Relations.

SEC. 2. After debate pursuant to the first section of this resolution it shall be in order to consider in the House the bill (H.R. 2770) to prohibit Federal funds from being used for the deployment on the ground of United States Armed Forces in the Republic of Bosnia and Herzegovina as part of any peace-keeping operation, or as part of any implementation force. The bill shall be debatable for one hour equally divided and controlled by Representative Dornan of California and an opponent. The previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit.

SEC. 3. After disposition of or postponement of further proceedings on H.R. 2770, it shall be in order to consider in the House the resolution (H. Res. 302) relating to the deployment of United States Armed Forces in and around the territory of the Republic of Bosnia and Herzegovina to enforce the peace agreement between the parties to the conflict in the Republic of Bosnia and Herzegovina. The resolution shall be debatable for one hour equally divided and controlled by Representative Buyer of Indiana and an opponent. The previous question shall be considered as ordered on the resolution to final adoption without intervening motion.

SEC. 4. After disposition of or postponement of further proceedings on House Resolution 302, it shall be in order to consider in the House a resolution relating to the deployment of United States Armed Forces in and around the territory of the Republic of Bosnia and Herzegovina offered by the Minority Leader or his designee. The resolution shall be debatable for one hour equally divided and controlled by the proponent and an opponent. The previous question shall be considered as ordered on the resolution to final adoption without intervening motion.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. LAHOOD). The gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON] is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I yield the customary 30 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. HALL], pending which I yield myself such time as I may consume. During consideration of the resolution, all time yielded is for debate purposes only.

(Mr. SOLOMON asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks and to include extraneous materials.)

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, the rule before us in designed to enable the enable House to debate the President's policy of deploying American ground troops to Bosnia as part of a NATO peacekeeping contingent.

Because the peace agreement is scheduled to be signed in Paris tomorrow, and because the President has asked the Congress to vote on the deployment of U.S. troops before the peace agreement is signed, we are taking this unusual action of a same-day consideration rulemaking this debate in order. It, therefore, can be legitimately argued this qualifies as an urgent or emergency matter on those grounds.

Having said that, however, I want to make clear that my own preference would have been that we not vote on anything today since the House has already twice expressed its overwhelming opposition to send American troops in Bosnia. That should have been sufficient. I seriously doubt that many minds have been changed since our last vote on November 17—less than a month ago.

However, it was the feeling of our conference, and of many Members on the other side of the aisle, that the House should vote again on the President's policy, because it was not officially and fully unveiled or presented, until after that last vote took place on this floor. That's an understandable argument for today's debate and votes, even if I don't happen to agree with it.

The rule before us will give the House ample time to both debate the President's Bosnia policy, and to vote on three distinct alternatives measures. Under the rule before us, there will first be 1 hour of general debate on the subject of deploying American troops to Bosnia, equally divided between the chairman and ranking minority member of the International Relations Committee.

Following that debate, the rule first makes it in order to consider in the House a bill introduced by Representative DORNAN of California, H.R. 2770, which prohibits the use of appropriated funds for deploying American troops to Bosnia. That bill will be debated for 1 hour, divided between Mr. DORNAN and an opponent. It will not be subject to amendment but will be subject to one motion to recommit which may contain instructions.

Following the disposition of the Dornan bill, the House will consider a sense-of-the-House resolution, House Resolution 302, by Representative BUYER of Indiana. The Buyer resolution first calls attention to the previous two House votes in opposition to sending our troops to Bosnia, and the President's subsequent decision to do so anyway, notwithstanding those votes.

The resolution then reiterates, and this is important, the concerns and the opposition of the House to the President's policy, but goes on to express for American servicemen and women who will be deployed to Bosnia and calls for their full protection, and the supply of sufficient resources to carry out the mission.

The Buyer resolution will be debated in the House for 1 hour, and is not subject to amendment or to a motion to recommit.

Finally, the rule allows the minority leader or his designee to offer a resolution in the House on the subject to United States troop deployment to Bosnia, debatable under the same terms and conditions as the Buyer resolution.

Let me emphasize that we are talking about three, free-standing measures, each of which will have a separate vote, regardless of the outcome of votes on the other measures. This is not a king-of-the-hill or most-votes procedure. It is conceivable that all three measures could pass, that all three measures could be defeated, or that only one or two could pass.

The House will be able to work its will on all three.

Mr. Speaker, I know there will be some who will still criticize this process for one reason or another. It is not perfect, but it does allow for substantial debate on at least three options. I say "at least three options" since the minority is also protected in its right to offer a motion to recommit the Dornan bill with amendatory instructions subject to 10 minutes of debate. So, there could actually be four alternatives before the House today.

Mr. Speaker, the process will still be criticized by some, I suppose, because none of the measures has been reported for a committee or is subject to amendment.

But the President's Bosnia policy has been the subject of considerable hearings and discussions in several committees of the House and Senate, as well as the subject of the previous debates and votes on this floor which I have already referred to.

So, while this may not be a perfect process, I think it is still fair and open in giving this House the ample amount of debate time that many have asked for on the President's Bosnia policy, and the opportunity to choose among several alternatives in response to that policy. By the end of the day today, there should be no question as to where this House stands. I personally remain adamantly opposed to the present policy of placing American troops in harm's way in a place where they are not wanted and do not belong.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. HALL of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

(Mr. HALL of Ohio asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HALL of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I would like to commend my colleague from New York, Mr. SOLOMON, for bringing this resolution to the floor.

House Resolution 304 is a rule which would permit the consideration of three, free-standing bills in response to our commitment to use United States troops to bring peace to Bosnia and implement the Dayton peace accord. The three bills are H.R. 2770, introduced by Mr. DORNAN; House Resolution 302, introduced by Mr. BUYER and Mr. SKELTON, and a Democratic alternative, offered by the minority leader or his designee.

As my colleague from New York has ably described, this rule provides 1 hour of general debate, equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on International Relations. The rule further provides for 1 hour of debate for each of the other three proposals. No amendments are permitted.

I must express my disappointment with the process on this rule. We all knew that the President asked Congress for a vote of support for the troops. We have had weeks to plan this rule. However, not even 3 hours ago, key decisions had not been made on this process. Now we are debating this on this floor. As a matter of fact we just debated on the rule 15 minutes ago. This is a vital matter of war and peace. Ram-rodging this issue through the House on such a grave issue does a disservice to Members on both sides of this question.

Mr. Speaker, there are two issues of substance at stake here. The first issue is whether the United States will be a leader for world peace. We have an opportunity to bring peace to a turbulent region in Europe that has been ravaged by war for 4 years. Opportunities like this do not come about easily or often. We should seize the chance for peace while we have it.

The second issue is whether we will support our President and retain credibility in the international community. Or will we tie the hands of our President, embarrass ourselves, and let down our supporters and friends in Europe. President Clinton has taken a bold step for peace. We should back him up.

This past summer, I traveled to the former Yugoslavia and witnessed the terrible conditions there. When I visited refugees in Tuzla and Zenica, I saw many children that had not only lost their homes. They had lost hope. When I looked into the eyes of these children, I saw pain, confusion, and sadness. I found that many of these children had not been immunized or educated during the 4 years of the Bosnian war.

When I returned to America, I called Carol Bellamy, the executive director of UNICEF, and asked her to help implement a plan to immunize the children of Bosnia. She quickly pulled together a detailed proposal.

Two weeks ago, I was with President Clinton at the White House when he endorsed the proposal and he pledged funding. This humanitarian initiative is now going on. I compliment the President for supporting the children.

My constituents and I have a special reason for wanting the peace process to go forward. The treaty between the warring factions was negotiated at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base, which is partly in my district. We are proud of the role that we played in the crafting of this agreement.

Two days ago, the mayor of the city of Dayton and all the city commissioners signed a proclamation expressing pride and support for the men and women of our Armed Forces who are helping to implement the Dayton peace agreement. The resolution also calls on "all nations of the world to support the Dayton peace agreement."

I would like to insert the text of the proclamation in the RECORD.

The rule before us will give House Members an opportunity to support the President and peace. I regret that the rule did not make in order a proposal by Mr. KENNEDY that would have required our NATO allies to pick up the costs associated with this mission.

Mr. Speaker, our national security interests are at stake. I urge defeat of the Dornan bill, defeat of the Buyer/Skelton resolution, and support of the Democratic alternative.

Mr. Speaker, I include for the RECORD the proclamation to which I referred.

PROCLAMATION

Whereas, The Dayton Peace Agreement represents an opportunity for all parties within Bosnia and Herzegovina to work toward building a lasting peace for its people; and

Whereas, the last four years have yielded untold suffering of families and innocent victims who have lost homes, friends, and a way of life to the worst atrocities and war in Europe since World War II; and

Whereas, The Dayton Peace Agreement calls for free and democratic elections to be held throughout Bosnia and Herzegovina, and commits all parties, including Serbia and Croatia, to cooperate fully and abide by international humanitarian law; and

Whereas, The Dayton Peace Agreement also commits all parties in Bosnia and Herzegovina to respect the highest level of internationally recognized human rights; and

Whereas, The Dayton Peace Agreement acknowledges the need for international assistance to help the people of Bosnia and Herzegovina rebuild communities after the devastation of four years of war; and

Whereas, The Dayton Peace Agreement is testimony to the leadership that The United States and its allies must play not only to preserve peace, but to build peace in the world.

Now, therefore, be it resolved, that the City of Dayton Ohio, and its citizens commend all the parties in Bosnia and Herzegovina for courageously agreeing to peace for all its people; and

Be it further resolved, that the City of Dayton, where, through leadership of the United States and its allies, terms and conditions for a fair and just peace were forged, extends its hopes and prayers to the people of Bosnia and Herzegovina that their peace may be lasting and free; and

Be it further resolved, that the City of Dayton with pride and support wish the men and women well, of our armed forces, who will assist the North Atlantic Treaty Organization in implementing the Dayton Peace Agreement; and

Be it further resolved, that the City of Dayton commits to working with Sister Cities International in providing a network of cities to assist our counterparts in further building the peace in Bosnia and Herzegovina; and

Be it further resolved, that the City of Dayton encourages all nations of the world to support the Dayton Peace Agreement.

Signed and presented to the President of the United States, William J. Clinton, December 11, 1995.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I have to take exception to the statement of my very good friend, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. HALL], that we are ramming these measures through the House.

My colleagues, let us be perfectly clear about it, the reason we are on this floor here today over my objections, I might add, because I do not think we should be here, period, is because President Clinton has asked Speaker GINGRICH to have this body take another vote on this issue before the Paris signing tomorrow. That is why we are here today. If it were not for that request, I can guarantee you that I would not have let this matter come before this body today.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. DIAZ-BALART], a very respected new member of the Committee on Rules.

Mr. DIAZ-BALART. Mr. Speaker, I will support this rule because it gives ample opportunity to the Congress to support the very serious question of the Bosnia intervention. In the last 2 weeks, in multiple discussions held with colleagues in this House about the imposition of the Clinton administration of the new Secretary General, Mr. Solana, of NATO, various colleagues have stated to me that that decision by the Clinton administration seriously and legitimately calls into question the foreign policy judgment of the administration.

Mr. Speaker, NATO of course is the military wing of the western alliance. It was greatly responsible for maintaining the security of Europe throughout the cold war and, of course, today we are poised to intervene militarily in an armed conflict in Europe for the first time since World War II and in the Balkans under the military shield and utilizing the military structure of NATO for the first time in history.

Thus even though NATO was always important, it is perhaps even more important today. So who is the man who was named last week in Brussels as the new Secretary general, the head of NATO? Javier Solana is the foreign minister of the Spanish Socialist Workers party government. Mr. Solana opposed NATO with vehemence throughout the 1970's and the 1980's. As late as 1986, when a Socialist-sponsored referendum was held in Spain to determine whether it would remain in NATO, Mr. Solana, then culture minister in the Spanish Government, was one of the most outspoken opponents of Spain remaining in NATO.

He also opposed the presence of United States military bases on Spanish soil. As late as 1985, precisely on that subject of the presence of United States bases on Spanish soil, he I think somewhat contemptuously stated, and I quote, If need be, we will send a copy of the Spanish Constitution to Washington so they will know what a sovereign country is.

Until September 29, 1979, Mr. Solana was formerly a Marxist. That is the date that his party, the Socialist Workers Party, erased the word Marxist from its political program so as to help and win the next Spanish general election. Despite the opposition of almost all western Europe, the Clinton administration, Mr. Speaker, insisted upon Mr. Solana to be the new NATO Secretary General.

Much of the military and intelligence community of the NATO countries simply could not understand why the Clinton administration would insist on Solana as the new NATO head with other available candidates in contention such as Mr. Ruud Lubbers, former Dutch Prime Minister, who was endorsed by France and Germany and Great Britain and was always a dedicated supporter of NATO with exemplary security credentials.

The Clinton administration insisted on imposing the Spanish Socialist Solana as we prepare to use NATO to intervene militarily in Europe for the first time since World War II, despite the fact that the Spanish Government is being wracked by unprecedented corruption, despite the fact that Solana, while Spanish Foreign Minister, just ended a 6-month stint as chairman of the European Union and during that time named a buddy of his, Mr. Garcia Vargas, a former defense minister in the Spanish Cabinet, who was so personally affected by corruption, including illegal wiretapping that he had to resign from the Spanish Cabinet. Mr. Solana named him European Union Special Envoy to Bosnia.

Most importantly, Mr. Speaker, despite the fact that Spain is not part of the military structure of NATO, that was the candidate, that Foreign Minister of that government that is not part of the military wing of NATO, was the imposition of the Clinton administration for Secretary General of NATO, and that is the administration that is now asking the American people and the Congress to trust it with respect to Bosnia. I think this debate is long overdue, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. HALL of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I would just like to say before I yield to my friend, the gentleman from California [Mr. BEILEN-SON], that the chairman, the gentleman from New York [Mr. SOLOMON], took issue with the fact that I said that we were ramrodding this rule through this process. I say to the gentleman, I really believe that, Mr. SOLOMON, and I know that the gentleman is trying to react to the fact that the President is going to the peace signing tomorrow, but I must say that we have known about the fact that we wanted to have this debate, and it has been many weeks in coming, and what has happened is that we had a Committee on Rules in which we just passed a rule 20 minutes ago of which we have three amendments; not three amendments, three bills and one rule. Only one amendment has any teeth in it; it is the Dornan amendment, because in fact it is really law if it would pass. The other two are sense of Congress. But of the other two, one is changing, and probably as I am talking, the Skelton-Buyer amendment. At least it was changing as of 110 minutes ago. I just got the Democratic alternative, which to me as I read very quickly is I wish it could be stronger, and the fact is that it is being ramrodded, and it is a heck of a way to debate probably one of the more important issues that we are debating this whole year, is the commitment of troops.

So, it is being ramrodded. I realize the pressure that the chairman is under, but I must stick by my original comment, that this is a heck of a way to bring up a serious issue like this, and I very much object to it.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 7 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. BEIL-

ENSON], a very distinguished member of the Committee on Rules.

Mr. BEILEN-SON. Mr. Speaker, I thank the distinguished gentleman for yielding me such a generous amount of time.

Mr. Speaker, the rule before us provides for consideration of what is clearly one of the most significant foreign policy measures we shall take up in the foreseeable future, the measure dealing with congressional support, or disapproval, of the President's decision to send troops to Bosnia-Herzegovina to participate in the peacekeeping operation there. This is a decision we all hope will mark the beginning of the end of the tragic conflict.

With respect to the rule itself, our main concern in fashioning it was enough time be provided so that Members on both sides of the aisle and on all sides of the issue have an adequate opportunity to offer their arguments and to hear the opinions and arguments of other Members. We should have preferred more debate time, and many of us felt that a full day of debate was necessary for a measure of this significance. We do hope that every Member who has a desire to be heard during this important debate is given the opportunity to speak during the time that is provided under this rule.

Mr. Speaker, for almost 4 years now most Americans have been angered and sickened by the seemingly endless savagery and destruction being perpetrated in the lands that comprise the former Yugoslavia—and have urged and prayed that someone, somewhere, would try to put an end to the suffering.

Finally, after years of failure of the combatants themselves and of their neighbors in Europe to stop the fighting, the United States has stepped in and done what every decent and caring American has wanted.

We have asserted our leadership of NATO and participated in air strikes that sent an unmistakable signal for the first time that continued aggression would be punished forcefully, and we have asserted the moral authority that only the United States seems to represent to many people throughout the world and have brokered a peace treaty between the former combatants.

Finally there has been a cessation of hostilities; finally, a peace agreement has been approved by all the warring parties.

I hope one can assume, up to this point at least, virtually all Americans approve of and applaud what we have done. Yet many Americans are voicing unalterable opposition to sending any U.S. personnel to help enforce this newly achieved peace agreement, and even more are questioning the advisability of such further involvement by us in attempting to help keep this tragic conflagration from restarting.

That is an entirely proper and normal concern, it seems to me. In fact, it should be part of the debate that we have not really had since the end of the cold war, about what the international role of the United States should be, and when and where, and under what circumstances, we should use our Armed Forces other than to repel a direct attack upon our own Nation.

It has, understandably, been difficult since the end of the cold war to agree upon a role for the United States to play in world affairs. The threats to us, and to much of the rest of the free world, are certainly less obvious and less specific than they used to be. But it has become painfully clear over the past few years that concerted efforts to help bring about the results most of us in the United States would hope for seem unable to be brought about successfully without active involvement and, in fact, leadership from the United States.

Now we are faced with a peace agreement that was made possible by American-led NATO air strikes and American diplomacy, and one that all of the parties want American forces to help carry out. One could argue that it does not necessarily follow that we cannot now walk away from a truly hopeful situation that we were instrumental in creating, but if Americans really want us to do just that, it probably would have been better for us not to have tried to end the fighting in the first place.

Not everyone agrees, of course, but some of us like the idea that the world looks to us for leadership so long as we determine how, and when, and whether we should respond. In this case we are not faced with the situation confronted by the British, French, and other nations' troops under the banner of the United Nations, who have tried to enforce a peace on warring parties that required their being in the middle of an ongoing war.

The parties have now agreed to stop fighting, and our troops will be in the position, finally, of peacekeepers, rather than peacemakers, which was sadly the position in which the United States troops found themselves both in Somalia and in Lebanon. In this current case, too, the Pentagon itself is satisfied with the role our troops will play and the circumstances in which they will be deployed which represents a complete about-face from their position, quite a proper one it seems too. I think all of us over the past couple of years were against committing United States troops to Bosnia for war-fighting purposes.

If our military, which is far and away the most capable, best-trained, and best-equipped in the world, is ever to be deployed for purposes other than defending our own territory, this, it seems to many of us, is the best possible use.

We are proud of the fine men and women of our Armed Forces, and if we are ever to use them at all, we can think of no better way than that of honest peace-keeping in a situation where our presence, United States presence, literally will make all the difference.

There is no one here in Washington who wants us to be the policeman of the world, or solely responsible for enforcing the peace in Bosnia or anywhere else, but this is the kind of cooperative and multilateral effort that many Americans have, for many years now, called for and insisted upon, and it is being done under rules of engagement that provide that American troops will be under American command, and that they will have the authority to respond immediately, and with overwhelming force.

It may not be possible for us to define to our own satisfaction, and in advance, exactly when and in what capacity American troops should be used in this new and more complicated—if oftentimes less threatening—world than we used to face during the cold war, but we are a moral, and a caring, and a peace-seeking people; we take our ideals and beliefs seriously; and, when our involvement, with others, will stop the kind of terrible suffering that has been going on in this corner of Eastern Europe for 4 years now, common decency and concern for other human beings dictates that we do what we can.

President Clinton, in fact, offered a useful, pragmatic, and yet moral policy for this Nation to follow in the years immediately ahead, and I quote him, if I may, Mr. Speaker: "We cannot stop war for all time, but we can stop some wars. We cannot save all women and all children, but we can save many of them. We can't do everything, but we must do what we can."

This is something we can do, and it is something we must do, if we are to have any respect for ourselves and for this great Nation whose people we are privileged to represent.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Sanibel, FL [Mr. GOSS], a very distinguished member of the Committee on Rules who has been very much involved in this issue.

(Mr. GOSS asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the distinguished chairman of the Rules Committee from Glens Falls, Mr. SOLOMON, for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, let me begin by saying that I support the rule to allow this critical debate to come to the floor. The rule provides for ample debate time especially since this body has debated and spoken clearly twice recently, and it provides for consideration of a range of motions, fairly representing—in my opinion—the broad range of views and conflicting positions held by Members of this body. There is no question that the President has used his authority to deploy troops—against the clear wishes of this House of Congress. Nevertheless, we must deal with the situation as it exists. It is a curious situation. Why is the President flying to Paris on December 13 when we are in budget crisis that threatens to shutdown Government Friday? Where do the President's priorities lie?

But Mr. Speaker, as we prepare to begin this debate that has national and international ramifications, I want to take a minute to talk about individuals—those I represent in southwest Florida and those who will be spending a cold winter in the hills of war-ravaged Bosnia under the Dayton agreement and the President's plan. This past weekend I held two town meetings, and the topic that evoked the sharpest response from my constituents at these meetings was Bosnia. Not Medicare, not the budget, but Bosnia. And the questions were direct and heartfelt and to the point: Why are we putting our young men and women on the ground in Bosnia? These were not political people asking political questions—these were honest folks demanding an answer.

I have listened to the President and his advisors and his spokesmen, and I still cannot find a convincing answer. I have yet to be convinced that the United States has a compelling reason to put people on the ground in Bosnia. I say "people," because these are individuals—sons and daughters—who will be put in harm's way. And it is not a country or an army that will suffer casualties and loss of life if things go wrong; it is those individual people.

In considering where to go from here, I cannot support a complete withdrawal of funds and support for the United States troops who are already on the ground in the former Yugoslavia. These men and women are wearing the uniform of the U.S. military and obeying orders, and we cannot leave them stranded in hostile territory. I would like to see them brought home, however, and I certainly will not give the President a blanket approval to continue as he sees fit. Because too many Americans have taken the time to tell me that they strongly disagree with the President's actions so far. In addition I have serious questions about the role of NATO in this operation, and the arrangements for burden sharing that have been put together. Our forces have been trained in conventional warfare, and are the best in the world—however, the greatest threat in Bosnia comes from unconventional sources. And I am concerned that when it comes time to withdraw our troops under the President's plan, extraction will be extremely difficult.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, I do want to draw attention to the parallel that many inside and outside the administration are drawing between the mission in Bosnia and the mission in Haiti. I think this is a good comparison, but not, I suspect, for the same reasons as the White House. It is a useful comparison because despite a virtual media blackout and attempts by the Clinton administration to spin the situation otherwise, the conditions in Haiti are deteriorating and could very well collapse as soon as our troops leave. We are reminded that efforts at nation building are not as simple as they seem, and that internal problems of foreign countries spanning many generations cannot be solved by a year of occupation by the United States Armed Forces, especially in difficult terrain, harsh climate, and the dangerous atmosphere we know is Bosnia. And we are disarming in Haiti and rearming in Bosnia. I urge my colleagues to support the rule.

Mr. HALL of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. HASTINGS].

(Mr. HASTINGS of Florida asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HASTINGS of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I thank my good friend, the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. HALL], for yielding time to me.

Mr. Speaker, I oppose this rule because it promotes wishy-washiness. The gentleman from New York, [Mr. SOLOMON], the chairman of the committee, has commented on the fact that we have had hearings in other committees. We have, but not about the particular language that we are getting ready to vote on. There have been no committee hearings in that regard. I have been to every hearing on the Committee on International Relations that was officially held concerning Bosnia. It does not permit any amendments, and then we are just seeing the language, as I speak. It is a work in progress. We do not have any idea what we are getting ready to vote on. This is political posturing in the extreme.

Mr. Speaker, we were sent here to lead, not to seek cover for our political, personal safety. What do we have with this rule? Cut off the troops. The other body just voted something like that. We voted on Hefley here on authorization. The other body just rejected that soundly, 77 to 22. Trash the President but support the troops. You all trash the President every day around here, so what else is new about that? Support the troops? But we have some reservations.

Is this leadership? We should support the President, any President, Republican or Democrat, when they deploy troops under their constitutional aegis, and we should promote and praise the troops that I saw when I was in Croatia this past weekend. These children are magnificent, and we should reject this rule. Here is why.

Let me quote, for those who keep asking, "What is the stake for the United States, and why does United States participation make a difference?" Admiral Leighton Smith, a four-star in charge of every American child in that theater, said:

The question is about United States leadership in the world. If we don't go in, our credibility goes to rock bottom.

Let me repeat again what Admiral Leighton Smith said, in response to the question "What is the United States' stakes in Bosnia, and why does United States participation make a difference?" He said:

The question is about United States leadership in the world. If we don't go in, our credibility goes to rock bottom. The next time, when vital U.S. interests are engaged, our allies and friends are not going to be with us. If we don't go in, there will be more killing and the war can spread. Do not underestimate the volatility of the Balkans.

What I saw in the way of destruction in Sarajevo, no man or woman in this body can say that we should not somehow or other, as the leader of the world, promote a period of decency and give peace a chance.

Reject this rule.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I would say to my friend, the gentleman from Florida, ALCEE HASTINGS, who is leaving the floor there, and he is a good friend, but I have just about heard all I am going to hear on this. This bill is on this floor because the President asked for it to be here. Mr. Speaker, I would just as soon pull this rule. We do not need to debate this today. However, if you are going to continue trashing us, we might as well do that. Keep that in mind. We are bending over backwards to be fair, I want to tell the gentleman, and he can trust my sincerity in that.

Mr. DORNAN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SOLOMON. I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from California.

Mr. DORNAN. Mr. Speaker, we have 97 people on the ground in Tuzla, 97, scouts, that is all. It snowed 2½ feet yesterday. There were 16 flights ready to go in, not big C-141's and certainly not C-5 Galaxies, Hercules, hard landing aircraft. One got in out of 16. I am waiting for a weather report right now. I do not think anybody got in today. It is snowing again.

I am the one who drove this, so we could have one more vote before we start the First Armored moving. I do not want this on the floor today after what I have just heard. I really do not. I want to give you time to study it all night.

Mr. HASTINGS of Florida. Mr. Speaker will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DORNAN. I yield to the gentleman from Florida.

Mr. HASTINGS of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I will be very brief. I share with the gentleman from California [Mr. DORNAN] the concern about that snow. The weather or the elements there are the most serious threat to our troops, but you do not pick your theater when you are trying to preserve some kind of semblance of peace. It is going to be a difficult theater. No war is risk free, and nobody here knows that better than he does, I would say to the gentleman from California.

Mr. DORNAN. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for saying that. My problem is basically constitutional. I testified to this up at the Committee on Rules. Bless everybody's heart around here for loving our men and women in uniform going in harm's way.

I have spoken on this floor about the atrocities in Bosnia as much as anybody. I begged President Bush to do something, to hit those concentration camps with an air assault using Blackhawks with Cobra and Apache gunship support, and extract the people from the concentration camps. I did not want, and it is a rough word, but it is fair, I did not want the current President to dither away 3 years.

The other sides are not going to kill one another with three feet of snow. You cannot find your own land mines without landmarks, and I do not give Bill Clinton much advice, but if he wanted to be a hero with the First Armored Division, he could very easily, at Paris tomorrow, say:

We are holding off the deployment because of the severe weather, and I am telling my young dads and moms in Europe that are on their way there, enjoy Christmas with your children and your wives. We will start moving on the 6th or 7th.

Imagine the cheer that would go up in the day rooms in Germany, which will probably have half a foot of snow, and nobody knows what the buildup in weather is going to be until Christmas. I just heard a European weather projection. They are predicting the worst weather since the winter of 1944 and 1945, which was the worst in 50 years, so I do not want this on the floor if we are going to have all this angst. Jerk it, and we can do it tomorrow, or better yet, Friday.

Mr. HALL of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. SKELTON].

Mr. SKELTON. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate hearing my friend, the gentleman from Florida [Mr. HASTINGS], and his spirited comments a few moments ago. I would point out a phrase that he used: "No war is risk free." Mr. Speaker, this is not a war. We are told that our troops are being sent there as peacekeepers, but I am afraid and I will explain this further in debate on the general bill and during the amendments, why this is not an evenhanded, impartial peacekeeping operation, and how it may very well end up in a very high-risk situation as far as our troops are concerned.

I would also point out that the bill that the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. BUYER] and I put forth, and on which there will be a vote later this evening, is based upon hearings that we had in the Committee on National Security. We had numerous hearings there. What is in there, we took from the hearings the testimony and combined it into this bill that we have put forth as number 302.

I also wish to point out that early on November 11, I set forth some eight conditions under which we could deploy troops to the country of Bosnia. I gave full expression of my concern in those eight conditions as of that moment. I tell this body, Mr. Speaker, that six of those conditions have been met, two have not been met.

As a result, I have chosen to be a principal cosponsor with my friend, the gentleman from Indiana, and I hope that when we reach that, that there will be a sizeable, sizeable vote in favor of it. I also will vote for this rule.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Greensboro, NC, Mr. HOWARD COBLE, a very distinguished Member of this body.

Mr. COBLE. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from New York for yielding time to me.

Mr. Speaker, I am fresh off the Christmas parade circuit back home. I rode in nine Christmas parades. While these parades are not scientific polls, they are accurate barometers of public opinion. The consistent theme I heard from thousands at these Christmas parades was twofold: Do not back down on your effort to balance the budget, and stay out of Bosnia.

I spoke with many of these constituents personally, Mr. Speaker. They oppose our presence in Bosnia, not because they are insensitive or uncaring about the problems that plague Bosnia, but rather because they view it as a lose-lose proposition for the United States.

The reasons for this conclusion are apparent: No vital national interest in Bosnia; fighting that has endured over the centuries there is not likely to cease with the presence of 20,000 American men and women on the ground; severe, unforgiving inclement weather in a country generously laced with land mines located Lord only knows where.

Our Bosnian operation, Mr. Speaker, in my opinion is a recipe for failure at its best, a recipe for disaster at its worst. The arms embargo should have been lifted months ago, but that cannot be corrected at this late date.

America cannot continue, Mr. Speaker, to be the world's peacekeeper eternally. American men and women should not be placed in harm's way at this time, and virtually nothing, Mr. Speaker, has been said about the enormous cost to the American taxpayer. It has been estimated at $2 billion. All of us know that is the low end. It will exceed probably $3 to $4 billion, money that we do not have.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, I reiterate the message of Christmas parade goes in the Sixth District of North Carolina: Stay out of Bosnia.

Mr. HALL of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from New Mexico [Mr. RICHARDSON].

(Mr. RICHARDSON asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. RICHARDSON. Mr. Speaker, this is the most important national security vote that we have cast since the Persian gulf war. We have to ask ourselves, and that is what we are doing, why is United States involvement in Bosnia in the national interest? There are three reasons:

First, America's values are at stake, and we can stop genocide and war in the Balkans.

Second, America's interests are at stake. We need a stable Europe, and Europe's stability is in danger if this war simmers.

Third, America's leadership is at stake. The peace agreement that we pushed, initialed, and fathered would collapse.

If we do not support the President on this issue, our credibility in other crisis areas, North Korea, the Middle East, Northern Ireland, and many other arenas will be eroded.

Mr. Speaker, over the last 4 years more than half of Bosnia' pre-war population has been murdered, starved, or driven from their homes. One million are homeless; one million. The people of Bosnia have witnessed Europe's worst human rights atrocities since the end of World War II: ethnic cleansings, mass executions, torture, rape. The only way to stop this killing for good is to make peace.

□ 1645

Our conscience demands that we seize this chance. America needs a strong Europe as our partner in fighting security threats from terrorism to proliferation of mass weapons of destruction, and Europe's stability is in danger if this war continues. Without United States participation, the peace agreement would literally collapse and the war would reignite and spread through Greece, Turkey, Macedonia. That is not in our interest. NATO would collapse literally.

Third, America's leadership brokered this cease-fire and brought the parties to Dayton to make peace. Now we have to take the lead in securing that peace.

This vote is not popular. My constituents let me know their views, too. But once in a while when national security and America's interests are at stake, we must take the tough votes. If we fail to keep our commitment in Bosnia, what is going to happen on North Korea and the nuclear issue? What are the North Koreans going to think? Or in containing Saddam Hussein in Iraq? Or in Northern Ireland and the Middle East where we are brokering peace?

If we fail to keep our commitment in Bosnia, the credibility of our leadership in Europe and around the world will suffer and with it our ability to protect America's interests.

Mr. Speaker, all of us here want to do the right thing. I cast no aspersions on any Members' motives. Therefore, we should do the right thing and support the President as we have done with President Bush in the Persian Gulf and other important national security votes.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1½ minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. GEKAS].

Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding to the time.

Mr. Speaker, just like the statement of the gentleman from North Carolina about the numbers of his constituents who have registered there opposition to the deployment of troops in Bosnia, I am here to report to the Congress that the same is true in my district. Even the gentleman who just preceded me in the well acknowledged that of his constituents. The question that was posed to our people by the action of the President is: Should we support deployment of troops in Bosnia? The answer is no.

But the next question now has to be asked, since the president has decided once and for all, without looking back and without any chance of changing his mind, that the troops will be deployed. So the question now that the people must register there opinions on is as follows: Shall we abandon our troops in Bosnia? The answer to that is no.

I cannot vote under any circumstances to abandon our troops. Not to fund them? Unheard of. I cannot support that. Not to supply them with foods, materiel, ammunition, all the weapons that they require to do their mission? All the accoutrements of carrying on a peacekeeping mission? I will not be a party of not supplying all that is needed to our troops. I will not abandon our troops. I deplore the action of the President, but it is his decision and I will abide by that decision and support it, but know well that it is a tragedy about to unfold.

Mr. HALL of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. HEFNER].

(Mr. HEFNER asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HEFNER. Mr. Speaker, I take a back seat to no one in the House. For years I have fought, as chairman of Military Construction, for quality of life for our troops and for better living conditions. And I have served on the Defense Subcommittee for a lot of years with my good friend, the gentleman from Florida [Mr. YOUNG].

This is not a political argument. In my view we should not be trashing the President of the United States. This is the price that we pay for being who we are, the most powerful country on the face of the Earth, the only superpower that is left.

Our negotiators went to a part of the country where people had been fighting for 4 years, and we saw on our television screens the precious old grandmothers that were crying and trying to find their place and trying to get across the street to get water. We saw in the marketplace where they were being shelled, we saw the children with their limbs blown away. Total devastation. Something that would make any honest human being cringe at the atrocities that were being committed on these human beings.

There people all came together, and our negotiators said, "We want you to come. You are tired of war, and we want you to come to Dayton, Ohio," in the great United States of America, in our chairman's home district. "We want you to come, and you are going to sit down and we are going to talk about trying to come to grips with this, because we are so tired of war. We have people being slaughtered."

The city of Sarajevo where we saw the beautiful winter games many years ago, the stadium now has now been turned into a cemetery, the buildings destroyed, people absolutely ravaged. Thousands have been buried in the skating rinks and the coliseum and all the places where we had the beautiful games. They have been turned into graveyards, and the stadium seats, the wood has been used to make coffins.

People were tired of war. So our negotiators said, "Would you come to Dayton, Ohio? We will sit down, we will try come to some kind of a peace accord." They came and they hammered out and all the parties signed on to a peace agreement.

Every other time we have been involved in a confrontation, we have fought our way in, we have gone in with guns blazing. This is different. It may not work. But is it not worth, for God's sakes, to go in with other countries to try to make some effort to establish peace and to police a peace process for these people that have been so devastated in the past few years?

I would hope and pray at this time close to Christmastime that we should talk about peace on Earth and good will to men, that we would bypass the political cheap shots and at least make an effort to establish some peace in a part of the world that has been so devastated by the havoc that has been perpetrated on these citizens for so many years.

I would hope that we would support our troops and our effort to proclaim peace on Earth and good will to men this time at Christmastime.

Mr. HALL of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. COYNE].

(Mr. COYNE asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. COYNE. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to support the effort to try to keep the peace and to send troops to Bosnia as part of the peace agreement recently reached in Dayton.

The United States has committed troops to serve in Bosnia as part of the NATO peacekeeping force.

The United States has been able to broker a peace agreement in Dayton among the various factions in Bosnia. As the President stated in his address to the Nation November 27, America's mission will not be fighting a war. "It will be about helping the people of Bosnia to secure their own peace agreement."

The United States mission in Bosnia is limited, focused, and under the command of the American general.

This deployment of troops in the United States's national interest. The United States mediated the Dayton peace accord. If we want to be credible in future international negotiations, we must take the necessary steps to implement that which we have arranged. If we do not follow through in this instance, we will not have much credibility in any future negotiations.

Furthermore, the United States has a vital interest in maintaining stability in Europe. Instability in any part of that region can not only intensify but expand to include other countries as well. As we all know, events in Sarajevo earlier this century led to World War I and the eventual involvement of the United States in a very wide conflict. Only 20 years later, the United States was inescapably drawn into war in Europe again. And for most of the last 50 years, the United States has been involved in NATO because its national interests were threatened by the prospect of Soviet hegemony over Europe. Even today, when Soviet Union has collapsed, the United States has a powerful interest in promoting peace, democracy, and free trade within Europe and around the world.

It is important to point out that the emphasis in this deployment is peace—U.S. troops will be part of a peacekeeping force which is implementing a peace agreement made by the various warring factions. We will be administering a peace, not imposing one.

We now have an opportunity to make peace in a conflict which could—and I believe would—eventually widen and draw us into it. We must consider whether the eventual cost of standing idly by and allowing the war to continue might not eventually far exceed the cost of this peacekeeping mission.

We should also not forget that we are implementing a peace agreement which will end the continuing murder of innocent civilians. These crimes against humanity have been so horrible that the United Nations has established an international tribunal to investigate them. We can not claim to be a civilized nation if we turn our backs on torture and murder when we have the power in our hands to stop it.

In closing, I urge my colleagues to support the agreement in Dayton and support the U.S. military in its mission as a peacekeeping force in Bosnia.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1½ minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. RAMSTAD].

(Mr. RAMSTAD asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. RAMSTAD. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me the time.

Mr. Speaker, this past weekend in Friedberg, Germany, I visited our troops of the 1st Armored Division, U.S. Army, who are being deployed to Bosnia.

One young soldier who served in both Somalia and Haiti told me, "The Bosnian mission is so much harder to understand. We're going in as neutral peacekeepers but also to get the Bosnian Muslims armed. You can't have it both ways!"

Mr. Speaker, this young soldier points out the inherent contradiction in the Administration's Bosnia policy.

As Vice President GORE said on Meet the Press Sunday, "We're going to make sure it (referring to arming the Bosnian Muslims) gets done."

The President is putting 20,000 American lives in harm's way, as neutral peacekeepers, while simultaneously helping arm one of the combatants. You cannot have it both ways!

This past weekend, as part of the congressional fact finding mission to the Balkans, I also heard Admiral "Snuffy" Smith, IFOR Commander, say that he does not want to be involved in any way with equipping, arming or training the Bosnian Moslems. And he also said we're not neutral because the Serbs don't think we're neutral. After all, Mr. Speaker, we just bombed them into submission.

My overriding concern is that we are placing our troops in an untenable position and committing them to "mission impossible."

As Serbian President Milosevic told our delegation, "If the Bosnians are armed, peace will be endangered and the treaty will fail."

Mr. Speaker, the Dayton peace accord has a rigid formula on weaponry that, relatively speaking, ensures the Bosnian Moslems remain weak.

Therein lies the basic problem with the President's Bosnia policy. If a balance of power in the Balkans is not established, how in the world can we ever expect long-term peace and stability in the region?

Yes, we should lift the arms embargo. Yes, we should train and equip the Bosnian Moslems to defend themselves.

But, no, Mr. Speaker, not with 20,000 U.S. troops on Bosnia soil at the same time.

Let us establish the equilibrium of power in the Balkans by creating a stable military balance. But let us arm, equip and train the Bosnian Moslems in a neutral country and out of harm's way for 20,000 American troops.

Mr. Speaker, as we heard from every military officer on our recent trip to the Balkans, this is a very dangerous mission.

There are as many as 6 million land mines awaiting our troops in the snow where they are almost impossible to find.

Also, Bosnian Serb mortar and sniper positions are well-established. Our troops are being deployed primarily to Tuzla where 71 civilians were killed in a single mortar attack in May.

The mujahadeen—some 4,000 Islamic extremists—represent a real threat to our troops as well.

And as one commander put it, "The threat of guerrilla warfare with grenades is very real."

Mr. Speaker, our ambassador to Croatia told us that the biggest problem is Serb Sarajevo. He said, "We can expect big trouble if the Serbs there don't accept the peace agreement."

Yesterday, the Serbs in Sarajevo overwhelmingly rejected the agreement in a referendum.

As one Serb woman in Sarajevo told me, "I would rather kill myself than accept the new boundaries."

Mr. Speaker, I stand here with a heavy heart because I want to support our Commander in Chief on foreign policy matters, especially those involving U.S. troops.

However, Mr. Speaker, my first obligation is to our troops and their safety. I cannot and will not support a policy that is fundamentally flawed and inherently inconsistent.

But if our troops are deployed, as it now appears they will be, I will support them 100 percent and do everything I can to see that they return home safely and as soon as possible.

Mr. HALL of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. TRAFICANT].

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 seconds to the gentleman from Youngstown, OH [Mr. TRAFICANT].

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. LAHOOD). The gentleman from Ohio is recognized for 2½ minutes.

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Speaker, we forgot about some of these cities. Maybe that is the way to start this debate. There are great problems in Bosnia. There are great problems in America.

I support the rule. I commend the chairman for bringing the rule forward. He is trying to help the President. The President asked for this vote. This is a nonbinding, after-the-fact vote. The President has already decided to send troops into Bosnia.

I oppose sending troops into Bosnia for the following reasons: First, our generals have told us that Bosnia does not pose a security threat to the United States of America. Second, Europe has adequate manpower and money to handle this problem.

And, ladies and gentleman, we have been subsidizing Europe for too long as it is. These countries just dial 911 and we send over our troops to fight their problems, whether or not they have the money and the personnel or not. Then we send a credit card with them, an American Express card.

I am opposed to sending our troops. If, in fact, Europe cannot contain this civil war and it would spread. I would then support ground troops. But I cannot at this point.

Let me also say this: The Constitution speaks to these issues. Everybody who continues to talk about the history of Vietnam should take a look at the debate that is occurring in the House here tonight. Vietnam started with some trainers, some consultants, some technicians. That is about what we have.

But I think it is time to look at the Constitution. The Constitution is explicit. The founders took great pains to debate one issue: No one person could ever place America and our troops at war. And the potential for hostilities here is very great, folks.

So I do not think we are sending peacekeepers over to Bosnia. I think we are sending over targets, with bull's-eyes on their backs, and I believe this is a flawed policy.

But what bothers me in America anymore, the people do not govern. If the people govern, the House of Representatives and the other body would not allow for a nonbinding, after-the-fact vote on placing troops in harm's way. I think this is very bad move for us to make.

I am going to support the Dornan amendment, folks. I do not believe it will pass, and I will probably vote for every one of these nonbinding, after-the-fact, feel-good, kiss-your-sister types of votes here tonight. But it is not good policy, and the Congress of the United States should govern and the American people should govern, and right now, ladies and gentlemen, the American people do not govern anymore; governance comes from the White house.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 seconds to the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. BEREUTER], one of the very most distinguished members of the Committee on International Relations.

(Mr. BEREUTER asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BEREUTER. Mr. Speaker, a few minutes ago one of our Members stood up and said that he was opposed to sending ground troops to Bosnia, but once and for all the President has made the decision, so he is not going to be involved in abandoning our troops. That is pure nonsense, and I am sorry to say it came from this side of the aisle. I am appalled to hear something like that.

It can be stipulated that everyone in this body supports our troops, but we have a constitutional responsibility. It is to serve as a check on this President or any other President from the inappropriate deployment of American troops abroad. That is what we are here discussing in the Bosnia resolution that follows.

We will support our troops. That is clear.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the very distinguished gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. DUNCAN].

(Mr. DUNCAN asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DUNCAN. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from New York for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, President Kennedy said in 1961 we must face the fact that the United States is neither omnipotent nor omniscient, that we are only 6 percent of the world's population, that we cannot impose our will upon the other 94 percent, that we cannot right every wrong or reverse each adversity, and that there cannot be an American solution to every world problem. Mr. Speaker, President Kennedy was right.

Twice in the last few days I have spoken on this floor to say something that

I want to emphasize once again: There is absolutely no threat whatsoever to our national security because of what is going on in Bosnia.

Second, there is no vital United States interest in Bosnia, and we should never send young American soldiers to foreign battlefields or participate in any military adventure unless one of these conditions is unquestionably, unequivocally clear and certain. And there are many questions about, and much opposition to, our involvement in Bosnia.

I know that the pack mentality of those in our very liberal national news media has produced a drumbeat to try to gain support for this very ill-advised operation, but I really believe that this has much more to do with political correctness than it does with anything else. It is simply not politically fashionable today to be labeled as an isolationist. Yet someone who is not an isolationist and who wants good relations with and close ties to other nations still should be strongly against sending transportation to Bosnia.

First, Time magazine asked a few days ago on its cover the question: "Is Bosnia worth dying for?" It may be for Bosnians, but they should solve their own problems. It is not worth even one American life to temporarily stop this age-old conflict.

Second, even if by some miracle, for which I hope, we have no casualties, we still should oppose this mission.

We are $5 trillion in debt, Mr. Speaker, and almost everyone believes we will crash in a few years if we do not turn this around. Yet now we are going to spend billions we do not have in Bosnia, and we are going to, further, very seriously jeopardize the futures of our own children and grandchildren.

I feel sorry for the people in Bosnia. Humanitarian aid, yes; military aid, no. We can prove world leadership in many other ways.

Mr. HALL of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. SOLOMON. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself the balance of my time.

Mr. Speaker, President Clinton ought to know that the American foreign policy has been to defend our democratic allies against external military attack that threatens the sovereignty of those nations that we are treaty-allied with or where America has a strong national interest that is threatened.

Mr. Speaker, there is no vital American national interest that would justify the taking of even one American life. President Clinton says we will hurt our standing with our NATO allies.

Well, if that were true, I would say, "So what?" It is still not worth one American life.

But even that is not true, Mr. Speaker. I have worked with our NATO allies as a member of the North Atlantic Assembly, the political arm of NATO, for the last 17 years. I am the chairman of the political foreign affairs committee of that body, and I can tell you that they are shocked that we would even consider putting American troops in harm's way when there is only a European interest and no American interest there. That is why we should do everything in our power to stop President Clinton from putting those troops there.

Because he has made the decision, I do believe that we are going to have to support the Buyer amendment, the Buyer resolution, because it does say that we oppose the policy but we support our troops, and that is something that we absolutely must do.

So let us get on with it. Let us pass this rule and then take up the general debate on the bill.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time, and I move the previous question on the resolution.

The previous question was ordered. The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. LAHOOD). The question is on the resolution.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. HALL of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground a quorum is not present and make the point of order a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 357, nays 70, not voting 5, as follows:

UNITED STATES TROOP DEPLOYMENTS IN BOSNIA

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the first section of House Resolution 304, it is now in order to debate the subject of the deployment of Armed Forces in Bosnia.

The gentleman from New York [Mr. GILMAN] will be recognized for 30 minutes, and the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HAMILTON] will be recognized for 30 minutes.

□ 1730

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, we have come to this point in our debate over United States policy on Bosnia because the Clinton administration has resolutely declined to provide the necessary leadership.

In this campaign for President, Mr. Clinton stated that he favored using military force, if necessary, to ensure that food and other relief supplies could reach the desperate people of Bosnia. After his election in November 1992, President Clinton followed the lead of the United Nations and our European allies.

During that period, a number of us in the Congress sought to ease the suffering of the Bosnian Moslems by repealing the arms embargo that put them at such a terrible disadvantage.

Our legislation would have permitted the equipping and training of the Bosnians so that they could defend themselves.

The Government of Bosnia pleaded with our Government to do just that, to lift the immoral arms embargo the United Nations imposed with our Government's support.

In meetings with the President, again and again we strongly urged lifting the arms embargo, but the President did not act because our NATO allies opposed it.

The best we could obtain was enactment of legislation late last year that required our Nation to stop enforcing the embargo against other countries.

Had the arms embargo been lifted, we would not now be confronted with sending our troops to enforce a peace plan that raises more questions than it has answered.

Hundreds of our troops are now in Bosnia even as we speak. Thousands more will soon follow. Short of passing a law to cut off funds—which the Senate has declined to do—and which the President would veto anyway—we cannot prevent this deployment.

The administration has yet to convince the American people that we have a vital national interest in Bosnia that warrants the possible sacrifice of American lives there.

The American people have registered their overwhelming opposition to sending our forces on a mission whose purposes remain murky, and whose outcome is uncertain.

As the House debates the measures before it today, we must consider how to balance our opposition to the policy of deploying our forces to Bosnia with our support for the men and women who are being ordered into a real-life Mission Impossible.

In his speech to the Nation, the President stated that providing more than 20,000 American ground troops for the NATO implementation force is vital for the Bosnian peace plan to succeed.

The President stated that our mission would have realistic goals achievable in a definite period of time—1 year.

While the President has specified a time frame, he has not spelled out the criteria for success, or our options if those criteria are not met. There is an exit date, but no exit strategy.

The peace plan is complex and complicated. It states that our main military task will be to separate the warring factions from the lines of confrontation, and keep them behind boundaries that will partition Bosnia into two entities. If the factions do not comply, our troops are authorized to forcibly remove them. How does this differ from fighting a war, which the President has assured us is not our objective?

Justice Richard Goldstone, the Chief Prosecutor of the War Crimes Tribunal, has told us that there can be no peace in Bosnia without justice for the victims of war crimes.

The peace plan describes an elaborate framework for investigating and assigning responsibility for human rights abuses, but is silent on how its findings will be enforced. Will our troops be called upon to bring the guilty to justice? If not, who will?

The President has argued that failure to keep his commitment to send troops to Bosnia will undermine future United States leadership and NATO's credibility.

But what will happen if, when the year is up and the President prepares to withdraw our troops, our NATO allies object, saying that the mission is incomplete? Do we stay, or go anyway?

Mr. Speaker, the votes we cast today will long be remembered in the history books of our Nation. Our votes must reflect our best judgments of the risks that this mission entails, of the soundness of the policy behind it, the potential for success and the price of failure.

How many Members of Congress who voted for the Tonkin Gulf resolution in 1964 have since said that was the one vote they wished they could take back?

Mr. Speaker, let us hope that, in the months ahead, our colleagues do not say that they wish they could have back any of the votes they cast on this issue today.

Mr. HAMILTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 7 minutes.

Mr. Speaker, this is an important debate for the House today. Putting American troops in harm's way is as serious a decision as government makes. It is a decision that should be made not only by the President, but also by the Congress, so it is good that we are having the debate.

I should say at the outset that my preference is that the House vote today to support the U.S. troops and the mission in Bosnia. I think that kind of a decision should be a collective judgment of the Congress and the President; and when the Congress shares responsibility, the decision is stronger, sounder, and better able to withstand the shifting political winds and circumstance.

Let me state, as briefly as I can, why I think the deployment of troops to Bosnia is worthwhile. First, I think it is quite clear that the United States participation is essential to peace. All of the parties here, the Muslims, the Croats, the Serbs, and so far as I know all the countries in the world, none in opposition, agree that without American leadership, there would be no peace agreement; that without American troop participation, the peace agreement would simply fall apart; and that without U.S. involvement, the killing would resume and the war risks spread.

I also think that U.S. interests are very much at stake here. The question of Bosnia is now bigger than Bosnia. It has become a key test of American leadership, and having brokered the peace agreement, we cannot walk away. Bosnia is a test of U.S. leadership in the world. If we do not go in, our credibility sinks and our reliability collapses.

This Dayton agreement is not perfect. Some say it is not just. But the president of Bosnia has it right: This peace agreement is more just than a continuation of the war, peace is better than more war.

Mr. Speaker, this agreement supports U.S. interests in many ways. It stops the killing, it maintains a single unitary Bosnia state, it protects human rights, it reunifies Sarajevo, it allows refugees to return, it obligates the parties to participate and cooperate fully with the War Crimes Tribunal, it certainly avoids more war, it strengthens and preserves NATO and maintains U.S. leadership in NATO.

I believe the mission is doable. The mission for IFOR will be limited with a clearly states military task. The mission will be NATO-led, operating under clear, unified command and control with robust rules of engagement. heavily armed, well-trained U.S. troops will take their orders from an American general who commands NATO. Its mission is limited and targeted.

The purpose of this limited military mission is to establish a stable and secure environment so that others, not IFOR, can do the important tasks of reconstruction and reconciliation.

It is important to recognize what the mission is not, and there must be no mission creep. Our troops must not deliver humanitarian assistance, they must not serve as a nation-building force, they must not be a police force, they must not be responsible for election security. Those are all important and even critical tasks, but they will be performed by the civilian component of the peace process, and the Europeans will play the leading role there and pick up most of the costs.

I believe, Mr. Speaker, that the risks here are shared and acceptable. There is not any doubt that the U.S. troops will face risks, but those risks are acceptable and the mission can be achieved.

The costs and risks of failing to act are far greater: war instead of peace, not only in Bosnia but possibly in Europe, a crippled NATO alliance, and the United States not leading but staying on the sidelines.

We do not bear these risks alone. We share these risks with our closest NATO allies. We supply one-third of the troops. NATO and other countries provide the other two-thirds. I believe that there is no real alternative that has been enunciated by the opponents of the President's policy.

Mr. HAMILTON. So far as I can determine, those who oppose the present policy simply do not have an alternative. What would they have us do? how would they maintain U.S. leadership, U.S. credibility, and U.S. reliability? How would they stop the fighting? How would they aid the injured? How would they create stability? How old they provide hope?

I believe, in this situation, that the United States can make a difference. Americans are understandably conflicted about this mission, and they have every right to be skeptical and to demand answers to their concerns. They do not want the United States to become the world's policeman, and there are many conflict in the world where we are not involved. But where we can make a difference for peace, where our action can stop a war, where our action can stop the killing, where the costs and the risks are manageable, we should act.

Finally, the United States, and this may be the most important point of all, must remain, in the conduct of its American foreign policy, reliable and credible. When we come right down to it, foreign policy is all about reliability. The United States will only be taken seriously in the world if we are seen as reliable; if we are viewed as standing up to our commitments in Bosnia or elsewhere. If the United States does not participate in IFOR, the United States will not taken seriously, its standing in the world is weakened. The consequence then of not voting to support the policy in Bosnia is, in my view, to undermine U.S. security because we undermine the reliability and the credibility of U.S. foreign policy.

No one knows whether this effort will succeed. no one is satisfied with all aspects of the Dayton agreement. There are no guarantees. But I urge the Members to support the policy and, of course, to support the troops.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. ROHRABACHER] a member of the Committee on International Relations.

Mr. ROHRABACHER. I respectfully disagree with the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HAMILTON]. We have advocated an alternative to this policy for years. We have had a policy in the United States of an arms embargo against the victims of aggression for all of these years. The years go on and on, and yet the architects of that failed policy, which brought genocide, which brought mass killings, which brought aggression, now those architects of that failed policy tell us we have to send our young people into the Balkans, and we have not had an alternative.

We have been advocating an alternative all along. The fact is the architects of that failed policy now want to deploy tens of thousands of young Americans into the bloody Balkans when they helped make the bloody Balkans, and they want to put then right in the heart of the conflict.

I will be supporting the Dornan bill, which is the only binding legislation that we have to choose from of the three bills that we will choose from today. The other bills, just for the public knowledge, are show bills. They will give Members a chance for cover. The bill offered by the gentleman from California [Mr. DORNAN] is the only that will stop a deployment, if indeed, it was enacted into law.

I will have to let my fellow Members know what that means. The House of Representatives should understand that the vote that we will take that is going to take place will be characterized by the President, if the Dornan bill goes down, as support of his deployment of Americans into the Balkans. That is what he has done with the vote in the Senate.

When the Senate voted down the Hefley bill today, the White House said, "That was probably the strongest statement of support they could possibly make. Having voted overwhelmingly not to shut off funding, is in a sense supporting the President's judgment."

If my colleagues want it on their record that they voted for the Gulf of Tonkin resolution of the Balkans, go right ahead and vote against the bill offered by the gentleman from California. We do not want to send our young people into that meat grinder that has absolutely no goals in mind, just to have an American presence. That is insane.

Mr. HAMILTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Tennessee [Mr. CLEMENT].

Mr. CLEMENT. Mr. Speaker, yesterday, in a very uplifting and inspiring address, Prime Minister Peres of Israel characterized the 20th century as the American Century. As the end of the 20th century approaches, Americans can look back and feel proud of what we have accomplished in the past 96 years. The United States has compiled a list of foreign policy successes which is unrivaled in the modern world, including squelching the threats of nazism and communism, and the recent strides made toward lasting peace in the Middle East, South Africa, and Northern Ireland. All of these successes share the same values—American values—on which this great country was built: freedom and democracy. Yes, this truly is the American Century.

Now, the United States has been called on again, not to make war, but to make peace. Peace in a place where many felt it would never be achieved. We have all seen the atrocities on television, the rapes and murders of innocent civilians. After 3½ years, the fighting in Bosnia has left 250,000 people dead and 2 million more homeless. Yet here we are, on the verge of a unilateral peace agreement in war-torn Bosnia which will be formally signed tomorrow in Paris. We should be proud as Americans that our country's leadership has made this settlement possible. Now that the leaders of Bosnia, Croatia, and Serbia have reached agreement on the principles of freedom and democracy, it is up to the United States to take the next step, and following through with our commitment to help enforce these peace provisions. Let us all pray that this peace agreement will be kept by all parties.

The political upheaval of the former Soviet Union has left the United States, and its democratic foundation, in a position of world leadership. We are the last superpower. With this leadership comes responsibilities, and helping to ensure the stability of Europe.

I find it reprehensible that when the drawn of peace in Central Europe is upon us and our troops are already risking their lives to forge out this peace in Bosnia's hilly and dangerous terrain, some of my colleagues wish to cut off funding to the American troops.

Congress has the opportunity to do the right thing. Support the President, support the troops, support American values, and support peace in Bosnia. My colleagues, it is time to give peace a chance. The American Century is far from over.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from Kansas [Mrs. MEYERS].

(Mrs. MEYERS of Kansas asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mrs. MEYERS of Kansas. Mr. Speaker, I rise to express strong concern about sending U.S. troops to Bosnia and in support of the Dornan amendment.

Mr. Speaker, I have said that I would not object to sending troops to Bosnia if we had a really rock-solid peace agreement, but we do not have a rock-solid peace agreement.

President Tudjman has signed for Croatia, but he had an agenda. They got Slavonia back. President Milosevic has signed for Serbia, but he also had an agenda. He wanted to end the embargo. The only one who has signed for Bosnia is President Izetbegovic. No one has spoken for the Bosnian Serbs; no one for the Bosnian Croats. I think that, in fact, Mladic has spoken against this agreement on behalf of the Bosnian Serbs.

The argument about not abandoning the troops in the field I think is just not valid. The troops are not there yet. We have maybe 100 troops in Tuzla. By this time 6 months from now, we will have thousands there. Now is the time to speak.

Mr. Speaker, this war and the Vietnam war were very different, but in some ways, in one way at least, they are very similar. Do we never learn anything? We found out in Vietnam that we cannot and we should not fight a war that the American people do not support. I do not think that that support is here.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, I think we should look at what will we accomplish? I firmly believe that if we leave in a year, and I say if we leave in a year, the fighting will not only resume, but will be much more violent, because all the parties will have had a year to rearm and to develop supplies.

Mr. Speaker, I support the Dornan amendment.

Mr. HASTINGS of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. FARR].

Mr. FARR. Mr. Speaker, the debate here today is not about sending troops to Bosnia. Our troops are in Bosnia, and tomorrow more will go, and Friday even more will go. In fact, yesterday afternoon I was with many of my colleagues having lunch with those troops in Frankfurt, Germany, and what they asked is for us to support what they are doing.

Mr. Speaker, those troops are trained. They are prepared to go. They are eager to go. In fact, the ones I had lunch with said, "I want to do the job that I am trained for."

This debate here tonight is not about war in Bosnia. It is a debate about whether Americans will stand up to implement a peace plan—a peace plan that we led. The agreement was written in Dayton. This agreement is one of the most interesting contracts ever done in the modern world. It sets out a whole process for how the military aspects will be involved in the peace settlement; how to stabilize the region; how to enter into boundary disputes; how to prepare for elections; a new constitution is written.

It sets up a system of arbitration of differences and sets up a commission for human rights and petitioning that commission. It is how to deal with refugees and displaced persons, including just compensation for taken property. It sets up a commission to preserve the national monuments and sets up public corporations for Bosnia and Herzegovina.

It sets up a civilian implementation plan to transfer from war to civil governments; it sets up an international policy for police task forces.

Mr. Speaker, this is an agreement that is signed by all the leaders. This is a contract on how we get from here to there. And when it is over, we stabilize the Balkans. Sure, there is some risk. But we are in a world where leadership is about getting something done, and the United States has gotten something done. We have ended the war; peace has broken out.

Mr. Speaker, to walk away from this would be a travesty. All the generals that we talked to, and the admirals that are going to be involved in this, urged our delegation to support the troops. As Admiral Snuffy Smith, who is going to be in command, told us, "I'll tell you why I want you to support us. Because we're big, we're good, and we deliver. We'll get in, we'll get the job done, and we'll get out."

Twenty-eight nations are already involved in the IFOR process. It would be a travesty for our military to walk away from all of those other troops whose mothers and fathers are just as concerned as our mothers and fathers about their sons and daughters serving there.

Mr. Speaker, it would be a travesty for diplomacy. Every ambassador that we talked to said this is the right thing. This peace accord is amazing. It is a great document. We ought to be supporting.

Last, the Presidents whose countries are involved, whose citizens suffered the war, all stated, "We signed this document. We are going to implement it. We want it to work. We are sick and tired of war. We do not want it to continue. We want to be back in the nation of economic prosperity. We have the talent to do that. Give us the chance."

Let peace prevail. Support our troops. Reject the Dornan amendment.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2½ minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. DORNAN].

Mr. DORNAN. Mr. Speaker, I have one North Star that my eyes are going to be fixed on during the next 3 hours, and that is what I will say to a young widow or Gold Star Mother or some young child who has lost their dad or their mom for the rest of their life.

There has been a lot of confusion around here in the last couple of hours. It appears that Clinton is on his way to Europe again. The plane takes off in about a minute from Andrews. He is going to be calling the Democratic cloakroom, or somewhere, regularly to see if this House is going to give him the power that he took unconstitutionally, without coming to the Senate or the U.S. House of Representatives for permission to do this.

I remember when the Vietnam war went down the tubes and the fight transferred from the jungles and the fields and the central highlands of Vietnam to the Halls of this Congress. I remember when liberal Democrats were on this floor saying that Johnson, and then Nixon, did not have the constitutional power to absorb 300 and 400 killed in action every week.

Every time I thought they are half right, I was suppressed by loyal Americans saying you must support the men in the field. The last speaker talked about the enthusiasm of our young men and now women who want to do the job they were trained to do.

How many people are left in this House who talked to the 18,000 Vietnamese-speaking Green Berets who John F. Kennedy sent to Vietnam in 1963, 1964 and 1965? They were over there because of his orders in 1961 and 1962. How many thought that they should be allowed to do the job then? Talk to some of the fighter pilots here like the gentleman from California, DUKE CUNNINGHAM, the gentleman from Texas SAM JOHNSON, and the gentleman from Florida, PETE PETERSON, on this side. Ask how they were not allowed to hit serious targets in Vietnam and paid for it with years out of their life and their friends dead.

This is going to be, as the man in the Speaker's chair said today, at the Republican conference the most important vote of 1995, maybe 1995-1996. Clinton does not have the constitutional authority to do this. We have not even properly debated the constitutionality of it, let alone the weather report that I am looking at at Tuzla, which is sickening to put our men in there. Ninety-seven people are on the ground only right now.

Mr. HASTINGS of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. GIBBONS], distinguished dean of the Florida delegation.

Mr. GIBBONS. Mr. Speaker, I have learned a few things in life. One of the things that sticks out I guess in all of our minds is that anything that is worth doing is not without risk, and certainly this mission is not without risk. But after long consideration, I rise to support the Hamilton resolution, support the mission and support the troops that are involved.

I was here on the House floor and voted for the Gulf of Tonkin resolution. This is not a Gulf of Tonkin resolution. The Gulf of Tonkin resolution was a thinly disguised declaration of war against the Vietnamese forces. We go this time to keep peace, not to make war. There is a plan. There is a large support from the nations of the world to support this plan. There is acquiescence by the leaders of the combatants involved. Nothing that we do is without risk. We are going to have some casualties, for which we will all feel very sorry. But we cannot sit here or stand here idly and not do anything. Too much is at stake.

I often think that World War II could have been avoided had there just been any resolve on the organized world community to resist the aggression that took place in the guise of Hitler and Mussolini and Tojo. In the beginning, we could have said no, if we had had the physical ability or the will to do it, but we did not and the world did not. That conflagration, that combat grew and grew and grew.

I do not know that what we are doing here today is similar, but if we fail to act, the fault will be on our part. There is a time in which civilized people must act and must act together and must act in accordance with a plan. This is the best plan that we have come up with. I think it is time that we go ahead with it, facing the risk of facing the challenges that are there and be resolved to support our troops and to take whatever action is necessary in bringing about peace in that area of the world. If we do not, the fault will be on us. If we do, there will be plenty of other people to help claim whatever victory there is in all of this. But we must move. We must move together and we must move resolutely. Let us support our armed forces.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. BATEMAN].

(Mr. BATEMAN asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BATEMAN. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Speaker, like the gentleman from Tennessee, I was terribly moved yesterday as Prime Minister Peres extolled the United States of America for what it means to the entire world community. We all stood and applauded the eloquence, even though maybe that was self-serving, because he was talking about us.

This country, after having deferred to our European allies for 1991 until into this year, finally became fully engaged. Because it became engaged, our NATO Forces commenced their strikes against the Bosnian Serbs.

Following that, there was a cease-fire and, following that, an agreement that the leaders of the warring factions would come to this country to try and work out a negotiated peace. None of that would have happened but for American leadership. There is no substitute for American leadership.

Having brought about a cease-fire, now having brought about an agreement under our sponsorship, based upon a commitment that our forces would be committed, we make a terrible error if we now renege on that commitment. There are things about the commitment, the degree of the commitment and blemishes in the commitment that I think are unfortunate. But the bedrock of the matter is that we stand committed. If we renege upon it, our vital national security interests will be very materially and significantly adversely affected.

We are the sole remaining world power, and we cannot be engaged militarily certainly anywhere and everywhere where there is strife in this world. But certainly if, having given this commitment, we renege upon it, say goodbye to the NATO alliance. Others may tell you otherwise, but I have no doubt that what it will, cripple it. Say goodbye to America playing a role and being credible in all of the far-flung corners of the globe, where the United States can make a difference in terms of promoting stability and peace, which are in our national security interests.

I must oppose the Dornan resolution. There is not and has not been a substantial question as to whether America has a role to play in seeking a peaceful conclusion to the war in Bosnia. It is an immutable fact of history that our country is the world's premier superpower. We did not seek that role; it has devolved upon us as a by-product of history in this century.

The international activism of President Theodore Roosevelt, followed by our being compelled to enter World War I to facilitate the triumph over the forces of aggression and totalitarianism, had consequences. We were right recognized as a major world power.

Unfortunately, after World War I, we withdrew from the world stage. We refused to participate in the League of Nations despite the fact that it was our creation. We stood by and watched Fascism come to power in Italy and Germany. We offered no meaningful opposition to Hitler as he marched into the Rhineland or to Mussolini as he attacked Ethiopia and marched into Croatia. We offered no resistance to Hitler's dismemberment of Czechoslovakia or to the invasion of Poland, which ultimately led England and France to belatedly challenge Nazi Germany after it had rearméd.

Only after the treacherous attack on Pearl Harbor did we enter World War II and again make possible the defeat of aggressive and repressive totalitarianism. Based on the disastrous agreement struck with Stalin at Yalta, we saw all the Balkan, Eastern Europe and Baltic states come under the yoke of communism and an iron curtain descend across Europe. We committed ourselves to helping Greece and Turkey from falling prey to communism. We initiated the Marshall Plan to save Western Europe from sinking into economic collapse and communist influence. We negotiated the North Atlantic Treaty Organization [NATO] as a bulwark against the expansion of the Soviet Union. In 1950, we led a United Nations' effort to defeat the conquest of South Korea by the North Korean communists.

It could be argued that we could—or should—have remained disengaged from these situations because they were not our problems. Fortunately, we did not. Soviet influence was contained after a struggle of more than 40 years. We led the free world in defeating Soviet imperial designs and the nations of Eastern Europe were freed of Communist regimes accountable to Moscow. This is an incredible record; one every American should reflect on with pride.

There is no disputing that the historic events of this century have conferred upon the United States a status that is significant and unavoidable. We are the superpower, what our country thinks, the position it takes, and how it acts are vitally important factors in every area of the globe. Only a fully engaged United States could have put together the grand coalition that defeated Iraq in the Gulf War, when Sadaam Hussein's aggression threatened our security interests. No one can conclude that this aggression would have been resolved without American leadership.

The break-up of powerful empires has throughout history been attended by political and economic instability, which is anathema to democratic governments and inimical to the maintenance of peace. Surely, few would argue that we have no interest in encouraging democracy and peace. The absence of either runs counter to our moral view and, as history has shown in certain areas—as in Europe—contrary to our national security interest.

None of this argues that we are the world's policeman, or should conduct ourself as an international busybody. We should, however, be engaged where our influence serves a constructive purpose in spreading or supporting democracy, even if no American military or economic commitment is contemplated or appropriate. Against this background, I approach the question of what is the role of this country in the Balkans and in seeking to end the war in Bosnia and Herzegovina. Due to the troubled history of this region through the centuries, and the nature of the ethnic, religious, and nationalistic forces at play there, the peace of Europe has not only been threatened but conflict has occurred.

When the former Yugoslavia broke up in 1991, the United States remained largely detached and chose to defer to its European allies to deal with the problem. This was an understandable view, but events have proven it unrealistic. Without the United States taking an active part, there exists a deficiency in leadership adequate to bring about an end to the war in Bosnia and to discourage its spread. NATO allies deployed thousands of troops on the ground and sustained a number of casualties, but the troops and their diplomacy failed to produce a comprehensive peace agreement.

With Americans successfully insisting upon NATO air strikes against the Bosnia Serbs, and Croatian-Bosnian Moslem successes, the warring parties were induced by U.S. diplomacy to come to the bargaining table. But for the stature of the United States, this would not have happened, and vital to it happening was a commitment that the United States would play a part in the peacekeeping forces that would be put in place following the signing of a peace agreement. That such an agreement has been concluded is a triumph of American diplomacy and a tribute to this country's standing as a force for good, for peace and for democracy. How can we bring the parties to the bargaining table based on a commitment of our involvement, induce them to agree to peace, and then walk away from that commitment?

If we refuse to honor the commitment, it will have consequences. These consequences would be significant and would affect our vital national security interest. If we falter, it would have deleterious implications for our most important national security relationship: the NATO alliance. It would be a low blow from which the alliance could likely never recover. That presents a clear and vital national security concern for this country.

Should we shrink from our proper role in implementing the peace agreement negotiated under and as a result of our sponsorship, this country will have lost not face, but credibility throughout the world. It would have an impact in this hemisphere, throughout Europe, Asia and the Middle East—in short, everywhere. A superpower sought as a force for stability and peace that chooses to disengage, especially when it made a commitment to be involved, defaults as a leader. Such a default creates a vacuum of power no other nation is capable of filling. Such a circumstance is the basis from which instability and conflict are born and this defeats our vital national interests.

We have supported expansion of NATO over the reluctance of some of our NATO allies. If we refuse to lead in implementing the peace agreement we procured our policy of expanding NATO will be nullified. NATO could well contract, not expand. Resumption of the conflict between Bosnian Serbs, Bosnian Muslims and Croats will not necessarily lead to expansion of conflicts throughout the Balkans, but if it resumes because the United States refuses to play it proper role, the risk of new and wider conflict in the Balkans increases. A signal that we are not concerned and are unwilling to take some risk for peace is a signal that we would not regard conflict between Albanian, Macedonian, Bulgarian, Greek, or Turkish ethnic, religious, or nationalistic elements as adversely affecting our national interest. To send such a signal would be a tragic mistake, for there are those who would certainly receive that signal and become more inclined to act upon it.

I repeat, the issue should not be whether there is an important role we need and should play in bringing peace to Bosnia and Herzegovina. We do, we should, we must play our proper role. President Clinton deserves recognition for ultimately becoming engaged and for using our unique standing to bring the warring parties to the negotiating table. He was right to do so. In fact, it should have been done earlier. President Clinton was correct to signal that, if a peace agreement was reached, we would play a role in seeing it implemented.

To have specified a commitment of 20,000 to 25,000 American ground forces, even before the military mission and the size of the total force could be determined, however, was a ridiculous mistake. We will undoubtedly have a very heavy responsibility for the air and sea-lift for the peace implementation force. We will provide the medical care, command and control, most of the intelligence function and the combat air support. This being the case, there should have been no need for us to comprise a third or more of the ground forces. This is a disproportionate burden for us, measured by what our NATO and other allies can and should be expected to do. The President should be seeking to reduce the burden we accepted to a more equitable level.

American and the other forces deployed to implement the peace agreement must be perceived and in fact be neutral, not protagonists of one or the other of the warring parties. To be viewed as favoring one side risks the permanence of the peace and enhances the risk of casualties for the American forces.

There are provisions of the Dayton peace agreement that wisely impose a moratorium for a period of months on the acquisition of arms by the formerly warring parties. It properly calls for negotiation of a disarmament regime to bring the conflicting parties to a state of parity in aggregate military capability, which should serve to deter renewal of the conflict. This is eminently sound, and we must exert intense diplomatic influences to promote military parity through disarmament. If the effort succeeds, there would be no need for us to arm and train the Muslims unless it was done within the framework of such an agreement. If the disarmament effort does not succeed, the Dayton agreement, by its terms, provides that after 180 days there should be an agreed self-executing military parity between the parties using as a baseline the military resources of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia. Based on the terms of the agreement, the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia would be permitted 75 percent of the baseline, with the Republic of Croatia and the Republic of Bosnia and Herzegovina each allocated 30 percent of the baseline.

If we make it clear that we will not provide arms to any faction except under the specific condition that it is done to provide and protect the military parity to which the parties have agreed, we can preserve the mutual, even-handed posture our role as a peacekeeper requires. The earlier the President spells it out, the less likely any role we ultimately undertake to arm and train Muslim forces will be perceived as constituting a hostile presence by the other parties.

Our NATO allies have opposed arming the Bosnian Muslims. Should the United States proceed to do so while there is an ongoing NATO deployment, and without the concurrence of the North Atlantic Council, it would threaten alliance solidarity. This would place us on a slippery slope we would do well to avoid. If we do as I suggest it should be acceptable to our NATO allies because our actions would be consistent with the Dayton agreement that they have endorsed.

I oppose any American forces being deployed to implement the peace agreement negotiated in Dayton until or unless it has been formally accepted by all the parties. Our role is not to make peace when the parties wish to continue the conflict. Our mission is to implement and help build mutual confidence among former warring factions who purport to want and have agreed to peace. If those parties by their conduct cast doubt upon whether they indeed desire the peace they ask us to implement, we should not put our forces in harm's way.

The agreement initialed in Dayton spells out a number of specific measures the warring parties pledged to implement within a specified period of time. Those measures include the departure of foreign forces such as the Islamic fundamentalists, whose presence is a threat to NATO troops. The warring parties also agreed to comply with the October 5, 1995, ceasefire and to refrain from all offensive operations of any kind, to disarm and disband all armed civilian groups and to avoid committing reprisals or counterattacks in response to violations of the agreement. The parties committed to begin promptly and proceed steadily to withdraw all forces behind a zone of separation. The parties are to account for all prisoners and to release them no later than 30 days after the date of the "transfer of authority," which is the date on which the U.N. commander transfers authority to the Implementation Force [I-FOR] commander.

The I-FOR implementation of the military aspects of the agreement should be delayed until the warring parties have demonstrated their willingness to discharge the obligations spelled out in Dayton by their leaders. If this is not done it will signify that they do not accept and will not comply with the reasonable measures required of them. In that event there will be no peace to implement and I-FOR, from the outset, would be injected into a combat mission.

The Clinton administration is insisting that our deployment of forces in Bosnia will last approximately 1 year. That is not an exit strategy, only a more or less arbitrary date. I am sympathetic to the declaration of a date for the withdrawal of American military forces from Bosnia, and it should be understood that if the need exists for a continued deployment beyond 1 year that the forces that remain will be comprised from contingents supplied from other nations. While establishment of fixed dates to conclude operations is generally ill-advised, a 1-year deadline for participation of American forces should be sufficient to ensure that the conditions in Bosnia are stabilized to the extent that any continued deployment could be sustained by non-United States forces.

As I have said, we do have a role to play in bringing peace to Bosnia. In 1 year we will have fairly and fully played that role and will have created conditions where non-U.S. forces should be fully adequate. The President should immediately communicate this position to our allies.

Our commitment of ground forces is based upon more than the initialing of words on a piece of paper. It is predicated upon the premise that the warring parties truly desire peace and will comply with the actions they have pledged to take. If they do not, the conditions for our commitment of forces will not have been met and U.S. personnel should not be deployed. In this context, the recent repudiation of the Dayton agreement by Bosnian Serb military leaders and the statements of French Gen. Jean-Rene Bachelet are particularly worrisome. Before we proceed with the deployment of our personnel, we should insist on assurances through confidence-building measures that the Bosnian Serbs want peace and under the terms of the Dayton agreement.

The securing of peace in Bosnia and stability in the Balkans is a noble objective that serves American interests and justifies our accepting some measured risk of casualties. Every drop of blood of American military personnel is precious, yet to shrink from our forces being engaged because there might be some casualties argues for doing away with our military. An American policy that shrinks from honoring commitments because there might be casualties is an invitation to future disaster. Our national interests throughout the globe would be imperiled if we prove unwilling to honor a major commitment.

If we are steadfast, we reinforce freedom, decency and stability throughout the world. To be otherwise would lead to instability and upheaval in many areas that are important to our Nation's peace and security.

Mr. HASTINGS of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentlewoman from Connecticut, [Ms. DELAURO] with whom I visited Bosnia this past weekend.

Ms. DELAURO. Mr. Speaker, I stand in support of American troops and in support of the United States mission in Bosnia.

The debate we have here today is as much about America's future as it is about Bosnia. Our vote today will send a message about our country's future role in NATO. If we walk away today, we will have relinquished our leadership role in the international community.

The human tragedy in Bosnia is beyond description. A quarter of a million people have been killed in 3 years of senseless slaughter. If we fail to enforce the Dayton peace agreement, we turn our backs on those who have suffered from mass rape, ethnic cleansing, and other unspeakable horrors.

In the face of this moral crisis, we must be willing to step forward and lead. It is what great nations such as ours have always done. Moral leadership in the world is part of the price of being the world's sole superpower.

Over the weekend, I joined a factfinding trip to Bosnia. I admit that I went with strong reservations about our military mission there, but I have returned with the knowledge that our troops are ready and our mission is clear. I have also returned with a belief that we have a moral obligation to do what only a U.S.-led force can do: keep the peace.

One of the highlights of our trip was a stopover in Germany to visit with American troops who will be deployed in the coming weeks. While there, I had a chance to speak with a young soldier from New London, CT, Private Jarion Clarke. Private Clark told me that he is well-trained, has faith in his leaders, and believes in the United States mission in Bosnia.

I asked Private Clarke what I could do for him: "Tell the American people that we are ready and we need their support," he said. So, that is the message I bring. Our soldiers need our support. They deserve our support.

I urge my colleagues to vote against the Dornan, and Buyer resolution. Vote for the Hamilton resolution. The only measure that clearly says to American men and women in uniform is that we stand behind them.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GANSKE].

Mr. GANSKE. Mr. Speaker, I too, just returned from Bosnia. Let me summarize what I learned.

First, no one in the Balkans wants to be part of a minority. Minorities get raped and killed. This fact caused the refugee problem. My impression is that there is a difference in commitment by the signers of the treaty on how to handle these refugees. One party wants them to return to their homes and villages. The other argues that this will recreate the conditions that led to the conflict in the first place. They argue for humanitarian aid to resettle these refugees in safer places. This is a crucial difference that bears on the long-term chances for success and peace.

Second, there is clearly unhappiness with the territorial provisions of the accord by both the Bosnians and the Serbs. The Bosnian Serbs feel they were betrayed, and the Bosnian Moslems do not like the territorial provisions either. They only signed on with the condition that the United States arm and train them.

This brings us to the third major area of disagreement, the level of rearming of the Bosnian Serbs. There were reports in the press indicating that the Bosnian Moslems want training for 18 brigades and want to be supplied with 200 tanks and 200 armed vehicles. Mr. Milosevic on the other hand thinks that all parties should proportionally downsize. This difference of interpretation of the treaty does not bode well for long-term peace.

Mr. Speaker, the technical requirements of the plan are contradictory. Will our troops be policemen or not? Nation builders or not? I asked a senior military official what would happen if in his sector the Bosnians or the Serbs started to harass a civilian population, would he respond or not. He said, why yes. Well, if he does, then he has now taken sides. We now have the U.S. military in a civil war.

Mr. Speaker, there is an alternative. Lift the arms embargo, provide relief aid, provide the same air support, the same logistical support. It is not too late. The best answer is Dornan.

Mr. HASTINGS of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 4½ minutes.

Mr. Speaker, this past weekend I was fortunate to lead, with Congressman DENNIS HASTERT of Illinois, a CODEL which visited Italy, Croatia, Bosnia, Serbia, and Germany. We met with the President of Croatia, the Prime Minister of Bosnia, the President of Serbia, IFOR commanders, and U.S. troops who were preparing for deployment. The CODEL sought to answer six questions: What is the United States stake in Bosnia? Can the IFOR mission be accomplished? Are there risks to our troops? How do you separate military from civilian responsibilities? How do you measure the success of the missions, and what happens if they are not working? What should be done to maximize IFOR's success?

Adm. Leighton Smith, commander of the American forces south, and the other American generals and officers who briefed the CODEL were confident that the IFOR mission is achievable because IFOR has a clear mandate, substantial firepower, and the desire of the parties involved to settle this conflict. Each head of government with whom we met also expressed confidence that the Dayton signatories would meet their obligations because, as President Tudjman said, "Without the direct involvement of the United States, peace in Bosnia is not possible."

Implementation of the Dayton agreement is necessary and only the United States and NATO can do it.

There are risks. The roads are poor and the danger of accidents is high. Snipers, car bombs, land mines, and mortar fire are all potential threats. The presence of an unknown number of Mujahedeen fighters may be a problem, especially if they decide they do not want to leave Bosnia.

Clearly, there are many unknowns. Neither the U.S. Congress, our military leaders, our NATO allies, or the signatories to the Dayton agreement can promise that our involvement is without risk. But we do know that the Dayton signatories, both the politicians and the people they represent said they want peace. And they believe that peace and stability can be reached only with our assistance. As Prime Minister Silajdzic of Bosnia said, "This move by your President is a courageous move, a far-reaching move. It is extremely important to grasp this change for peace. Because if Dayton doesn't work nothing will work. We cannot have peace without a stable buffer, a bridge. That is why we need NATO troops. No other organization can do it. We need your help to make peace, not war."

Mr. Speaker, this debate is as much about our role in the world as it is about our role in this conflict. Today we are deciding how involved we want to be in shaping the world around us. In the past 72 hours two persons have put our role into perspective for me. The first was Admiral Smith. When asked about the United States national interest in Bosnia, he replied that the wrong questions was being posed. He stated: "The question is about U.S. leadership in the world. If we don't go in our credibility goes to rock bottom. The next time when vital U.S. interests are engaged, are our allies and friends going to be with us? Probably not."

The second person was Israeli Prime Minister Shimon Peres, during his address to the joint session of Congress, when he said that the United States has "... save[d] the globe from three of its greatest menaces: nazi tyranny, Japanese militarism and the communist challenge." When he spoke of Palestinian democracy and peace with Israel's enemies, he said "three years ago such a prospect would have been a fantasy. All of this would not be attainable were it not for the American involvement and support for our efforts."

Mr. Speaker, every person voting in this Chamber today must decide right now what kind of world he or she wants to live in. We are clearly the most powerful country in the world. We have a strong military, a stable government, robust civil rights, and a reputation for constantly recreating ourselves to make America a better, more equitable country. And it is because of our vibrant, democratic traditions that the rest of the world looks to us for leadership. We talk a good game in this body, passing resolutions to say this and sense of Congress' to say that, but if we do not support our good intentions with actions, then our words will lose meaning and our good intentions and strong words will be a joke worldwide.

I, for one, believe in American leadership and I believe, as one of the American generals said to me, that the people of Bosnia, Serbia, and Croatia, need a period of decency. I want to give them that period of decency by helping to secure their peace.

□ 1815

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Louisiana [Mr. LIVINGSTON], chairman of our Committee on Appropriations.

(Mr. LIVINGSTON asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. LIVINGSTON. Mr. Speaker, I also was in Bosnia last weekend, and I met some of the troops that are going to carry out this plan. I had my picture taken with them, and I got a medal from them, from the First Armored Division. They are good people, and they deserve our support.

They were sent by the President to work with NATO to separate warring parties and hopefully keep those people from killing one another.

Now those parties have gone to Dayton, and they have signed a peace accord, and that accord says that our troops are there to assure the peace, not to make war, not to rebuild Bosnia, not to aid refugees, not to remove mines, not to disarm the parties, not to arm or train the Muslims. They are there to keep the peace, and they are well-trained, and well-equipped. They are prepared for the mission, and they will shoot to defend themselves, if necessary.

But hopefully they will not have to. Now, I have opposed the circumstances which have brought us to this point. I cannot change history however. The Commander in Chief of our armed forces has deployed our troops in what he says is in our national interest, and at this point I can only repeat what the local commander of our forces told me as recently as this Monday. He said, "Don't let the Congress do anything which sends a message to these kids that you in Congress aren't in full support of their efforts." Mr. Speaker, I intend to follow his advice, and I intend to support our troops in and out of Bosnia.

Mr. Speaker, I will vote for the buyer resolution, I will vote for the Hamilton resolution, and I will give our troops the resources that they need to do their job and come home.

Mr. HASTINGS of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to another

Floridian, Mr. PETERSON, a distinguished veteran who, I might add, had a very significant hand in allowing that the fighter pilots from France were released.

Mr. PETERSON of Florida. Mr. Speaker, we have a peace treaty. We did not sign it, we did not initial it, but the combatants in the war in Bosnia, all three, did.

This is an unusual opportunity for America. We have always had the opportunity to risk war, and we have done so every time that there was any national interest at stake. We have done that willingly, we have done that as a governmental body, we have done that as a nation.

What a wonderful opportunity to have today. We can risk peace. Yes, we can risk peace.

What happens if we fail? What happens if we fail in our effort to seek peace? We have war.

This is a no-brainer to me. Never have I in my career had the opportunity to go for peace. Our troops are going to Bosnia to implement a peaceful settlement that all three of the combatants have agreed to.

No one, I do not think can say that anything that happens in Europe is not of interest to us. The cost of being a superpower is that virtually anything that happens on this planet affects this Nation, and what is happening in Bosnia and in the Balkans right now is in fact affecting this Nation, and it will affect it even more if we do nothing. We have a very shallow window of opportunity to grab peace, and we should grab it with both hands, wrap our arms around it, and take it to the Balkans.

If we fail to do so, my colleagues, there is no doubt in my mind, having just visited that area, that we will have an expansion of this war to Kosovo, which will then trigger the Albanian input, which will then probably bring Macedonia in, which will then bring in Turkey, which will then bring in Greece, and then what do we have? We have the potential for World War III.

Mr. Speaker, we have history behind us that takes us back to World War I and World War II, both of which began in the Balkans. Do not let us help that start World War III. Support our troops and support the policy.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute, 30 seconds to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. MANZULLO], a member of our Committee on International Relations.

Mr. MANZULLO. Mr. Speaker, I would encourage the Members of Congress to examine the exact document which is called the peace agreement, especially the military annex which is attached to it, and to compare the rules of engagement there with the statement put out by the Joint Chiefs of Staff of the United States, and those rules of engagement contradict each other. In the one put out by the Joint Chiefs of Staff it says we are not to be involved in moving any people or equipment out of the demilitarized zone, we are not to be involved in any type of disarmament, and yet the NATO troops, in the military annex attached the peace agreement, gives our troops that type of power.

Mr. Speaker, this is a matter of defining the mission to send our beloved troops to a country that has experienced war for 1,500 years. I support the troops. I do not believe it is wise to send them, but I support the troops.

Mr. HASTINGS of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of our time.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. BUNN].

Mr. BUNN of Oregon. Mr. Speaker, having just returned from Bosnia, I was appalled at the devastation in Sarajevo. I did not see a single building that had not been damaged by the shelling of the sniper fire, and it is very, very clear that something has to be done, but I came back convinced that the President had made a horrible mistake in the decision to send our troops there.

We had an opportunity to listen to our military commanders tell us about how the troops are going to get in and how we are going to deal with the planning for casualties, how we have planned for communications, but when we asked about the exit strategy, there was no plan. We do not have a plan, how we are going to get our troops out of there. There was an alternative, and the plan was to lift the arms embargo and allow the Bosnians to defend themselves, and in meetings with the leaders in Bosnia the vice-president of Bosnia said point blank, "We didn't ask for your troops, we didn't need your troops. What we needed was the ability to defend ourselves, and you denied us that."

Nevertheless we need to understand today that there are troops there and troops on the way. Nothing we do tonight is going to stop the deployment. We are beyond that now. Congress is often faced with bad options, and President Clinton has given us bad options, but tonight we can choose to support the troops.

I am going to vote no on Dornan and support the alternative so we can do everything possible to allow our troops who are well trained and well equipped to do a job that they should not have been asked to do.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. INGLIS].

Mr. INGLIS of South Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from yielding time to me.

There has been a fair amount of confusion on the floor here today about the thought process. One idea is we should support the troops by sending them there. The best way to support the troops is to keep them from going there.

Then there was a statement about how we are there to wage peace. I have never seen it waged with tanks and guns and bullets. I think if you are going to wage peace, you do not send in the U.S. Army. The U.S. Army goes into places to crush, kill, and destroy. That is what they are real good at. I do not understand this idea of waging peace with tanks and weapons. If there is a peace, there is no need for peacekeepers. They have peace. If there is not a peace, then our people are peace-makers and that makes them, I think, combatants in a centuries-old civil war.

Then there is the thought we have to contain the conflict. It is like world War II, we are told. Think again. World War II, two key differences: No. 1, a pernicious, expansionistic ideology that wanted to control the world. There is no pernicious, expansionistic ideology here. This is the normal inhumanity of man against man, normal hatred. It is around the globe. It is in Rwanda, it is in China, it is all over. No pernicious expansionistic ideology.

The second key difference between World War II and now, in World War II we were not prepared. Now we are prepared. We learned after World War II you prepare for peace by preparing for war, and you stand ready with that strength under control. We can contain the conflict no matter where it goes in that region.

The sober judgment we need to bring right now is very simple: Is there an American security interest at risk? I would submit, that is the threshold question before you send troops anywhere: Is there an American security interest at risk? Clearly there is not in the Balkans. The only way to send that message is to support the gentleman's alternative.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN].

(Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Speaker, for me the most important priority is to support our servicemen and women. The President has made his decision. While I am angry that he has made it without consultation to Congress and with the American people, we need to back up our troops 100 percent. Our actions tonight should send this message loudly and clearly to them as they prepare to go, because 25 years ago I was one of them in Vietnam. I was sent on a mission that bitterly divided this country and this House, but I learned then, as I know now, that our troops deserve nothing less than the undivided support of this House and all the resources necessary to support their mission. Please support the Buyer resolution.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. TAYLOR].

Mr. TAYLOR of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, in 1954 one of my heroes, Senator John Stennis, spoke against sending American mechanics to a little country called South Vietnam. He said that we would get drawn into a land war that we could not win, in a part of the world that people did not care about. John C. Stennis was right. We did get sucked into it. Then when that happened, he did his constitutional duty to support those troops.

What I am asking this body to do tonight is to prevent us from getting sucked into another war where other brave young Americans will die, be maimed, in a part of the world that Americans just do not care about. It is not a right or wrong decision, it is what is best for the American young men and women who have sworn to defend this country.

The best thing for those fine young people is not to waste their lives, and above all, do not abuse their trust. They swore to defend the Constitution of this country. They swore to defend this country. We are not even a participant on this treaty. Vote for the Dornan alternative.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. HAMILTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield the remainder of our time to the distinguished gentleman from California [Mr. DELLUMS], the ranking member of the Committee on National Security.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BUNNING of Kentucky). The gentleman from California [Mr. DELLUMS] is recognized for 4¼ minutes.

Mr. DELLUMS. Mr. Speaker, we come to the end of the general debate on this very significant and important issue. All of us in this room come to this debate from our various reference points. My reference point in this debate is as a peace advocate who came here 25 years ago to challenge militarism and to challenge the concept of military intervention. We opposed the war in Vietnam, military intervention in El Salvador, Nicaragua, Grenada, opposed our military intervention in the Persian Gulf.

We now find ourselves in the throes of a new era, an era referred to as the post-cold-war era, a period marked with change, with transition, a period pregnant with challenges and with opportunities.

But I would hasten to observe, Mr. Speaker, that there is a very interesting and fascinating disconnect in this country at this moment. At the grass roots level, the bedrock of a democracy, the American people look to Washington to say, "What do we do, leaders, in this new post-cold-war era?" The leaders in Washington, us being politicians who tend to poll, measure, count the votes, weight the mail and count the telephone calls, are saying, "No, you tell us," so there is a great disconnect. Most politicians are not willing to step into a period of transition to lead. That is risky. Many American people are saying in this period of transition, "Tell us where to go." It is very difficult.

I am prepared to accept the challenge. I step into this breach. My argument, Mr. Speaker, is that yes, this is a period of change and transition, challenge and opportunity; perhaps wrongly, but I believe that this post-cold-war era has presented us with a significant enemy, and that enemy is war itself, war itself. The great challenge is the challenge of peace. The great opportunity is to bring the world, kicking and screaming, to peace.

Perhaps wrongly, Mr. Speaker, but I believe that in my entire adult lifetime we have been given a magnificent gift, the gift of the post-cold-war world, an opportunity to step forward boldly and bring about significant change in America and in the world. I believe that this is the first opportunity, Mr. Speaker, that we truly have to challenge the whole notion of the use of force and the making of war as an instrument of foreign policy, the first time; the first time we truly, as adults, can challenge these whole bizarre and barbaric ideas of using force to kill and maim and harm, and using war as an instrument of foreign policy.

I have lived long enough, Mr. Speaker, to come to this moment where we now truly have an opportunity to talk about the issue of peace. The transition that we are in, the pain that we feel, I believe is that we are witnessing the transition from war to peace, from warring to peacekeeping, from risking war to risking peace. These painful steps into the future, into the unknown, into transition, into change, are fraught with challenges. They are difficult.

Peacekeeping is a new concept, a new lexicon, not worn easily by politicians, not understood by the American people. It is not something we have done, but I believe that it is something that we need to do as we move into the post-cold-war world with respect to Bosnia. The moral imperative is as follows: If you encourage a group of people to come off the bloody battlefield of killing and maiming and raping and plundering, and move them to the negotiating table, and they come with a product, perfect or imperfect, good or bad, liked or disliked, a product, a peace plan, and then they say to you, "He has murdered my son, I murdered his daughter, he murdered my mother, I murdered his father, we murdered 16,000 of our children and 250,000 of our neighbors. So while we have come to a peace plan, we do not rest easy with each other. We are paranoid about each other. We are fearful about each other. So stand in the way for a while to allow a period of transition as we move from the bloody battlefield to the issue of peace; so help us at this moment, because we are fearful. We have killed many of them."

The moral question then is do you reject that notion? What is a peace advocate in a post-cold-war world? Do we walk away from that?

Finally, Mr. Speaker, when 6 million Jews were being killed during the period of Nazi Germany, as we looked back at that moment we said, "How could that have occurred? Killing 6 million people is terrible." But there are 250,000 people dying in Bosnia. So what triggers your moral imperative? Six million people? Two hundred fifty thousand people? Where do you get upset?

Mr. Speaker, I would conclude by saying I think our role is one of peace. I think we have a responsibility to walk into this period as peacekeepers. I think we must address the moral imperative to play our significant role in the world. I think we ought to reject any effort to do anything less than that.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. TIAHRT].

Mr. TIAHRT. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Speaker, I also went to Bosnia to meet our troops on the way in Germany and to receive a coin from the First Armored Division. This coin I plan to carry for the next 12 months, so I keep them in my thoughts and prayers. But this is a civil war. This is not a religious war. Only three of the five parties have initialed off this peace agreement.

Today, Bosnian Croats who did not initial this agreement are burning Bosnian Herzegovinian villages. This week they released a known war criminal, Bosnian Serbs, who also did not sign this peace agreement or initial this peace agreement, have two war criminals still commanding troops. This is an incomplete agreement. There will be no peace without justice. These people must be brought to justice.

This is just a trial separation before the divorce. We are giving them the opportunity to rest and rearm. We need to create other opportunities for peace, opportunities that will be there without sacrificing our young men and women. That is why I support the Dornan bill.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. SCARBOROUGH].

Mr. SCARBOROUGH. Mr. Speaker, I am truly amazed at how the sides change here. Many of the same people who have been telling us for 20 years that we can no longer be the world's policeman are now coming to the floor saying, "We must be the world's policeman," even when there is not a direct vital American interest worth dying for. Who said that? The Secretary of Defense, Secretary Perry, in Philadelphia, said there was not a direct vital American interest involved. So do we as a Congress have a right to stand up and say something? Yes. That is our constitutional right. Yet it amazes me that Republicans as well as Democrats say it is all the President's prerogative.

James Madison, the framer of the Constitution, in 1792 wrote to Thomas Jefferson and said the following:

The Constitution supposes what the history of all governments demonstrate: that the executive is the branch of power most interested in war and most prone to it. It has, accordingly, with studied care, vested the question of war in the legislature.

It is our responsibility. Support Dornan and support the troops.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield the remainder of our time to the gentleman from California [Mr. CUNNINGHAM].

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from California [Mr. CUNNINGHAM] is recognized for 3/4 minutes.

Mr. CUNNINGHAM. Mr. Speaker, this is a very difficult subject for me to even speak about. It is wrapped with emotion, it is wrapped with anger, and it is wrapped with pain. I do not think, no matter what you vote for today, if you vote for the gentleman from California [Mr. DORNAN], I am against sending the troops to Bosnia. I think if you vote for the gentleman from California [Mr. DORNAN], that is a message, again, that you do not want to do that. The Senate is not going to pick it up. I think that is an acceptable vote.

If you vote for the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. BUYER] and the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. SKELTON] to support our troops in what they are doing, I think that is acceptable, also, and the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HAMILTON] as well. I am not concerned so much about the vote today, Mr. Speaker, as I am in the future.

Many of us served overseas. In 1968, President Johnson stopped the bombing over in North Vietnam. Our hands were tied.

I watched friends of mine die. They did not have to die. We had Mogia and Van Kari and Ban Nappi Pass where we could see supplies coming through, and we could not stop them.

There was an ROE that you had to wait until a MiG shot at you first before you could shoot back. No Member of Congress ever devised that ROE. They never strapped their rear end into a fighter.

I looked at the thousands of my friends that died over there when we could not hit the SAM sites and we could not mine the harbors. Yet when President Nixon came up, he let us do that.

My concern is in the future because there are going to be some tough votes. There are a lot of people here in this body that will do anything they can to cut defense. It is a legitimate issue. They would rather put it in social spending. But in the future, we are going to have to vote, ladies and gentlemen, on supporting our troops. Make sure that you do.

Another area that kills me, not just under this President. Lebanon was a disaster, to tie down our Marines.

Those kids died and they did not have to die. In Somalia, we have gone through the reasons why our troopers died. It is because we did not give them the support, the votes in this Congress and the President. Not just this President but other Presidents.

My real concern, Mr. Speaker, is the future. Because the votes are going to be tough. You are going to have to increase defense dollars probably if we get tied in there. I would ask my colleagues that want to cut defense, that want to cut defense, think about the amendments and the bills that you are going to vote for and all of them, because what you are saying is that you are going to support these kids. It is important. Do not forget the way you vote today.

Most of us have lost too many friends. There are 30 kids that fought in Vietnam and in Desert Storm that because of Tailhook are not passing and making Captain or Commander because there are certain people that would exacerbate that. Some of these kids had nothing to do with Tailhook. But yet the Senate failed to confirm them.

I would ask you, when we ask our men and our women to place their lives on the line, do not forget those sacrifices. Because we have over and over and over again, Mr. Speaker, and I would ask, think about your vote but carry it on after today.

Mr. FRANKS of Connecticut. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to voice my opposition to the deployment of United States troops to the former Yugoslavia.

I have consistently voted to lift the arms embargo levied on the Bosnian Moslems. I firmly believe that President Bush and President Clinton were wrong in their policy to continue the arms embargo on Bosnia. The Bosnians have the right, as a sovereign people, to defend themselves against any form of aggression. By continuing the arms embargo, the United States and its allies have perpetuated the slaughter of innocent people.

I applaud the Dayton peace agreement initiated by the warring factions and the agreement to begin to re-arm the Bosnian Moslems in an attempt to return a balance of power to the region. However, I am skeptical of the agreement because all parties have not initiated the agreement and I have viewed very vocal and extremely aggressive anti-American sentiments in Bosnia. The peace is tenuous at best.

I have long questioned the role of the United States as the policeman of the world. Clearly there are other conflicts around the world that need policing, yet, no one has called for the use of the United States military. Not one Member of Congress has claimed that these conflicts are in the national interest of the United States or worth one drop of American blood. Still, Members call for American troops to sacrifice for the Bosnian civil war.

During the debate surrounding the deployment of United States troops to the Persian Gulf, many of my colleagues on the other side of the isle derided the deployment as the United States in the role of world policeman. These same Members are now supporting the deployment of troops to Bosnia because they claim that it is the duty of the United States to lead the world in policing the civil war.

Let me simply suggest to those Members: this is not the Persian Gulf. The United States deployed troops to the Persian Gulf as a direct result of military aggression by Iraq against Kuwait. The Bosnian deployment is a result of a weak peace agreement between warring factions of a centuries-old civil war that represents no risk to United States national security.

I do not support the deployment of troops to Bosnia because the President has not convinced me, my constituents, or the majority of Americans of the need for this military action. Yes, I recognize the authority of the President to commit troops, but I also recognize the authority of the U.S. Congress to authorize the use of the military. The President, after repeated requests by this body, has neglected to seek Congressional authorization for the deployment of the troops. For this reason I supported Mr. DORNAN'S bill to refuse to fund the military action in Bosnia.

The President has truly failed in his attempt to convince the American people that one American life is worth peace in Bosnia. My constituency is not convinced. Overwhelmingly, my constituents have written to me to oppose the deployment of troops to Bosnia. I will not allow this Nation to become the policeman for a regional civil war that has raged for hundreds of years and still simmers below the surface of this peace agreement.

I have supported the use of United States technical support and related assistance in the Bosnian theater. I did not oppose the use of United States airpower to protect the peacekeepers in Bosnia because this is where the United States expertise lies. As the world leader in military technology, this is an acceptable role for the United States. However, I will not support the use of United States ground forces in the Bosnian theater. Ground support in the Balkans is the sole responsibility of the European nations. Europe has the singular obligation to protect the European continent and provide the force necessary to maintain peace in the European theater.

Due to the lack of a cohesive mission strategy and the inability of the President to convince the majority of the American people that deployment of United States troops to Bosnia is essential, I cannot support the deployment.

Mr. LIPINSKI. Mr. Speaker, the peace that was brokered in Dayton that is supposed to resolve the civil war in Bosnia and Herzegovina is nothing but a thin, glass wall waiting to be shattered. It is just another cease-fire that will once again be broken by discontented parties. To send American ground troops into the thick tension that still prevails is nothing short of a kamikaze mission.

Many Bosnians want Americans to come and help enforce the peace established in Dayton. Unfortunately, this is not true peace. True peace does not require 60,000 foreign soldiers to police the streets. Bosnian Serbs living in Sarajevo are staging daily protests hoping that the peace settlement will be renegotiated. They are dissatisfied because under the Dayton agreement the suburbs of Sarajevo that they call home will be turned over to the newly created Croat-Muslim Federation, which most view as a fate worse than death. This one provision in a multifaceted agreement is enough for some to pick up arms once again. Because Bosnian Serbs are so discontent with the agreement, their leaders announced they would hold a referendum on December 12, to ask their citizens whether or not they should accept the Dayton peace plan.

The fact that Croatian President Franco Tudjman, Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic and Bosnian President Alija Izetbegovic were able to sit down in one room together and over the course of a few weeks, create a plan for peace is, of course, nothing short of a miracle. President Clinton and his administration ought to be commended for accomplishing the unthinkable. The problem though is that only presidents and foreign ministers present agreed to stop the war; no one consulted the people. It is the people who have festered hatred in their hearts which has caused this civil war. There cannot be a workable peace solution unless the people want it, unless they are willing to put away their deep-seated hatred for one another and say enough is enough.

This tenuous peace which 60,000 NATO troops must enforce will be led by American troops and was promised to the warring factions before the American public could have its say. In fact, the understanding of the three warring parties before they came to the peace table was that America would be there to monitor the final agreement. But we cannot send 20,000 of your young, vibrant men and women to enforce a peace that is not going to last. President Clinton has promised Bosnia the lives of thousands of our young people for 1 year. Does President Clinton really believe that hatred which spans to course of hundreds of years is going to be resolved in 1 year?

Why do we want to subject our soldiers to the wrath of the Serbs? What will these young men and women be to angry Serbs? Targets. Targets of their frustration of being bombed by American-led NATO war planes. Targets for their frustration of losing large amounts of territory to Croatia this past summer. Targets for their frustration of being forced to accept a peace plan they do not agree to. Targets for the anger of Serbs who were bombed by Americans in Sarajevo. Targets along the slim stretch of land, Brcko, that the Serbs want expanded and handed over to them. And when our soldiers are not the targets of snipers they will be subject to the threat of thousands upon thousands of landmines that will be covered by the winter snow. Yes, the best way for factions who are reluctant to go along with the Dayton agreement to sabotage peace is for them to attack Americans.

And why should Americans be deliberately put in harms way? What vital interest does America have in Bosnia? None. We have no vital interest in Bosnia. Secretary of State Warren Christopher called Bosnia "the problem from Hell." Political leader for the Bosnian Serbs, Radovan Karadzic, who has the responsibility of drumming up support for the agreement said, "What is wrong with the Dayton agreement is that it has created a new Beirut in Europe. It is going to bleed for decades." Why does this require that we put American lives on the ground in a country whose hatred is older than our Republic? This is a civil war that must be resolved by its own citizens. It took nothing short of a totalitarian regime to maintain the peace during this century. One year of peacekeeping will not solve their problems or further any of our interests. For this reason, Mr. Speaker, I will vote today for H.R. 2770 to prohibit the use of Federal funds from being used for the deployment of United States Armed Forces on the grounds of the Republic of Bosnia and Herzegovina.

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Speaker, tomorrow the President will be in Paris to witness the signing of the peace accord that will officially end the 43-month war in Bosnia. The United States will be standing proud as the instigator of the process that took place last month in Dayton, at which the leaders of Serbia, Croatia, and Bosnia agreed to end the savage ethnic warfare that has claimed more than 250,000 lives over the past 4 years. This will be a great day for the people of Bosnia, and certainly a proud moment for those nations involved in the peace process. There is much work ahead in implementing the vision of peaceful coexistence in the Balkans, but with the determination of all of the NATO countries to extend the guarantee of European stability, it is truly a cause worth the effort.

Under this agreement one state with a unified, constitutional government will be created. Free elections will be held throughout Bosnia next year. Territorial issues within Bosnia have been resolved, and within these boundaries, all Bosnians will have the right to move freely. Those displaced from their homes by the fighting will finally be able to return home. Best of all, perhaps, is that the parties have agreed to respect the human rights of all persons, and those individuals who have been responsible for the heinous crimes perpetrated against the Bosnian people will be brought to justice.

This agreement represents great progress. While some of my colleagues here in the House today have expressed skepticism, I firmly believe that this peace can and will work. The leaders of all sides in this conflict have affirmed a true desire for peace on behalf of their people who are weary from the harshness of the conflict they've experienced. The people themselves have encouraged their respective leaders to follow the course of reconciliation.

What is required to make this plan work is simple: a neutral intermediary to enforce the peace accords for a time sufficient to allow the establishment of the new government. Clearly, this role can only be served by NATO. No other international organization has the capacity and respect to undertake such a critical operation. The mission itself is one that NATO is particularly capable of accomplishing. But it is equally true that NATO cannot accomplish the task without the direct and substantial participation of the United States. We have an obligation to participate and we have a direct interest in doing so because of the impact on the stability of Europe. Without our agreement to join NATO on this endeavor, other nations would decline to participate and the peace would assuredly fail. And then the fierce fighting would resume.

I am confident that our participation in this peacekeeping mission will be both limited and well-defined. U.S. troops, serving under an American commander, have been given rules of engagement sufficient to provide them with the ability to protect themselves and carry out their assigned tasks. Our role in the implementation force, although significant, will be limited to about one-third of the NATO contingent, with more than 60,000 troops coming from European and other nations. And our role will be limited in duration: the President has expressed the clear intent of withdrawing American troops in a year.

Mr. DEUTSCH. Mr. Speaker, the President's decision to send United States troops to Bosnia is an appropriate and necessary use of power by the world's only superpower designed to bring peace to the Balkans. It is a mission we neither sought nor savior. These troops are not being sent into a war. Rather, they are going to support a peace treaty. Last month, in Dayton, OH, the three Balkan leaders initialized a peace treaty that would halt the fighting between the Serbians, Croatians, and Bosnians. Two months ago, while the fighting was raging across the former Yugoslavia, I would have refused to endorse a plan sending American troops to Bosnia. Today, however, American troops are not being sent to Bosnia to engage in an active military conflict. Instead, they form the backbone of a peacekeeping mission that will at long last bring stability to an area of the world that has only seen violence and misery for so many years. Surely there is risk in sending our soldiers overseas. However, it serves our national interest to help bring peace and stability to the Balkans and to Europe.

Before we send our soldiers to Bosnia, however, it is imperative that we develop a comprehensive exist strategy to guarantee that our troops will not fall into another intractable quagmire. As wisely highlighted by the Senate Majority Leader BOB DOLE, if we leave Bosnia without allowing all the parties to stand on equal ground, we will find ourselves debating these same issues in the very near future. The United States must ensure that before our soldiers return home, the Bosnian Army has the ability to defend itself and its people.

Mr. MARTINI. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to strongly support tonight's efforts to prevent American troops from serving on the ground in Bosnia.

This Congress has voted repeatedly in Congress and told President Clinton that we had no desire to send Americans to participate in a peacekeeping mission that is of no vital interest to us, of questionable prospects for lasting success, and that puts at risk thousands of American lives.

I hope peace prevails in that troubled region, and that the recently negotiated peace holds and the bloodshed and misery in the Balkans soon ends.

But we have no vital interests at stake in the region, and should not get involved.

There is no overriding strategic or economic threat to the United States there.

The war has not yet spilled outside of the former Yugoslavia, and we have already taken steps toward containing the fighting.

And NATO won't fall apart if we do not participate.

NATO is a strong alliance, a collection of Western democracies bound together by common interest.

That common interest will not go away if we do not go to Bosnia.

As for our prospects for success, exactly how will a 1 year deployment of peacekeeping troops solve a conflict that has raged for centuries?

It took the iron fists of one empire after another to keep the underlying ethnic tensions in this area under control.

It is unfortunate, but true: signatures on a piece of paper and a brief intervention of foreign troops will not quell the hatreds that dominate the former Yugoslavia.

Yet to pursue this questionable objective, we are asked to risk the lives of 20 thousand American troops.

The President wants to put them in the crosshairs of sniper's rifles, and subject them to the jeopardy that comes with the thousands of land mines that are buried over there.

Angry mobs are already gathering in the streets to demonstrate against our mission.

We are sending our men and women into an unfamiliar and dangerous hornet's nest, and for the wrong reasons.

I support the troops, and am grateful for their efforts on our behalf.

They have a very difficult mission to carry out, and I am sure they will do a fine job when they do.

But it is a mission that will come at great cost, and it is one we should try to avoid for them completely.

Mr. SKAGGS. Mr. Speaker, tonight, this House faces a choice. We can choose to support the President of the United States in his decision to help end the tragic war in Bosnia, in his decision to act with our NATO allies to stop the killing in Europe for the third time this century, in his decision to nurture a peace that without question will be fraught with its own risks and dangers. Or, we can choose to desert the President at this time of challenge to American leadership, to seek moral comfort for this country in the failure of Europeans to end the slaughter, to watch the war resume content that the vital interest of the United States might this time escape the blight of war in Europe. As between a problematic peace and a horrific war, I choose to support the President's courageous work for peace.

Mr. Speaker, many of the people I represent have contacted me to express their concerns about the Dayton peace plan for Bosnia and the risks our troops may face as part of a international force to implement that plan. I've had many of the same concerns myself.

Earlier this month I joined 14 other members of the House on a bipartisan fact-finding tour of Bosnia and other countries in the region to address these concerns. We met with American, NATO and U.N. military commanders and diplomats, soldiers from Colorado, and the presidents of Serbia, Croatia and Bosnia and Herzegovina. I've also met with the President; the Vice President; Richard Holbroke, the Assistant Secretary of State who negotiated the Dayton accords; Samuel Berger, the Deputy Assistant to the President for National Security Affairs; and Lt. Gen. Howell Estes and Lt. Gen. Wes Clark of the Joint Staff. I asked them the same questions that Coloradans have been asking me.

At a town meeting this past Saturday, I heard again from people in my district, and I talked with them about what I had seen and learned.

Based on all that I've been able to learn, I believe the American role in leading the NATO implementation force is essential and that the mission of the implementation force is well-planned and appropriate.

I'm well aware that as we go down the path envisioned by the Dayton agreement, there is no guarantee of success. I have questions about having the new civil and political institutions up and running after the one year NATO deployment concludes, progress that will be important to sustaining the peace. Nevertheless, our contribution to the peacekeeping deployment gives us the best chance we have had to stop a dangerous war that has been raging for four years in Europe.

Critics of this mission have said that the war in Bosnia is really a European problem and that we should let the Europeans solve it. But the truth is that we cannot afford to duck our responsibility as the leader of NATO during this defining moment in Europe's post-cold war history. We have largely deferred to the Europeans on this problem for 4 years, and they have never been able to reach a consensus on how to solve it. Without United States leadership the war in Bosnia will continue. Two tragic world wars should have taught us what can happen when we turn our back on Europe in a time of crisis.

Our military mission in Bosnia will not be risk free; there will no doubt be casualties. But the mission has been carefully planned and trained for; American military leaders have been preparing for this mission for 18 months and helped to write the military annex to the Dayton agreement. The 1-year time frame for the military deployment is part of the plan that our military leaders helped craft—it is not some arbitrary deadline imposed from the outside for purely political reasons. The mission statement is clear, and our commanders in the field have unprecedented authority to respond to challenges and threats with overwhelming and decisive force. While it is impossible to plan for every contingency, I'm persuaded most have been anticipated.

Our troops are well-trained in the recognition, detection, and clearing of land mines. They'll be equipped with sophisticated detection equipment and protective gear. Protection from the hazard of mines is a key reason our military planners chose a heavy armored division for this assignment. And keep in mind that the Dayton agreement calls for the warring factions to clear the mines they have planted. Yet, there will no doubt be casualties from mines.

Our troops will likely face attack from some rogue elements outside the chain of command of the regular armies. We will have a remarkable capability to detect and track hostile elements, however, and overwhelming force to deter and repel attack.

The question of an exit strategy has been repeatedly raised by critics of the plan. This strikes me as a false issue. Exit after 1 year is expressly built into the Dayton agreement, with time-defined tasks and objectives. U.S. military commanders were quite clear that they have no question about when and how they'll depart. They also made it clear that if the parties to the agreement aren't serious about keeping peace and fighting resumes, we will withdraw our troops.

There are risks and problems in the civil-political parts of the Dayton agreement, too. It includes an ambitious timetable for economic reconstruction, humanitarian activities and the formulation of new political institutions, and the power arrangements crafted to create the new Bosnian state seem awkward at best. But a massive international effort has already been launched by the London conference to coordinate the myriad of humanitarian and political projects that will have to be undertaken to support the agreement. We can only hope that enough will be in place to sustain the peace when the troops go home at the end of next year. And it may well make sense at that time, under circumstances then very different from the last 4 years, for some international police authority to assist with security for a longer period.

We should be under no illusion that Presidents Milosevic, Izetbegovic, and Tudjman entered this agreement out of altruism. Just as self-interest brought these three leaders to the table in Dayton, it will be self-interest that will encourage them to keep their bargain and make peace work. All three have calculated that their future lies with the West. Izetbegovic is struggling to find a way for his country to survive as an independent state. Milosevic is desperate to put a permanent end to the devastating international embargo that has destroyed the Serbian economy. And Tudjman wants to expand trade with Europe and to press for admission to European institutions.

So, the peace reached at Dayton is a messy, pragmatic arrangement. Sadly it is not a just peace, because it ratifies the gains of war. But I believe this peace is better than continued war with its horrors and injustices.

Mindful of all these risks and uncertainties and imperfections, if we don't keep our commitment to help enforce the Dayton peace agreement, we'll pay a great price. The war will resume, and we will have forfeited American leadership and credibility. If the war spills over to Kosovo and Macedonia, it would cause enormous damage to our security interests in Europe by drawing Albania, Bulgaria, Greece, and Turkey into the conflict. This risk of conflict between NATO member states and a broader European war can't be lightly dismissed.

Ten days ago in Sarajevo, we encountered a group of the long-suffering people of that city outside the Presidential Palace. An older woman, tears spilling from her eyes, told us that she had lost her son in the war; she pleaded that only America had the trust of the Bosnian people and the power to end the war. It was a poignant reminder that this is not a problem that can be solved by Europeans without American leadership.

The next day I had lunch with two impressive young Army troopers from Colorado awaiting final orders to Bosnia at their 1st Armored Division base in Germany. One of these men had taken his Thanksgiving leave to visit the former Nazi concentration camp at Dachau. Referring to the mission ahead of him, he said, "Congressman, if we have the power to keep that from happening again, we have to do it." A reminder of an earlier problem that could not be solved by Europeans without American leadership.

So, it is important to remember that this is not just about Bosnia. Other actors around the world are watching these events and will be taking their cue. If leaders of dispossessed ethnic groups elsewhere in Europe and in the new states of the former Soviet Union see that the international community is unable to act effectively, they may well challenge the political compromises that have been worked out in their states. Eventually, much of what we won in the cold war could be put at risk.

The President has not done an adequate job in making the case for the deployment of American soldiers in Bosnia. This surely makes it harder for members of Congress to support him, because it makes it harder for the American people to understand what's at stake. Still, the President's commitment to send a U.S. military force to help to enforce peace has been clear for a long time.

The President has shown courage in taking on this difficult responsibility in the face of political risks and public opposition. A vote for this resolution to oppose the mission will only serve to encourage both the enemies of peace in Bosnia and the enemies of United States leadership in pursuit of a decent international order.

Mrs. MORELLA. Mr. Speaker, I have deep concerns about the mission which the President has assigned to our Armed Forces to implement the Bosnia agreement reached in Dayton last month.

I remain deeply troubled by the President's decision to deploy United States troops in support of the Bosnia peace agreement. First of all, this is an unworkable agreement—that it is the best agreement attainable does not make it a good agreement. I have serious doubts that this agreement, even if it were fully implemented, would be successful in the long term. Moreover, the President has failed to make a convincing case that the conflict in Bosnia threatens our national security interests, or that implementation of the Dayton accords will resolve those concerns. He has also blurred the distinction between peacekeeping and peacemaking.

I am also deeply concerned about the conditions on the ground for our troops. Bosnia, particularly the area around Tuzla where United States troops will be based, is heavily mined. The great majority of these minefields are not mapped, and many of the mines in use in Bosnia are not easily detected. Furthermore, United States troops who may be taken prisoner will not be afforded the protections of the Geneva Convention for prisoners of war; they will not even have the legal status and guarantees of POW's.

Lastly, does anyone really believe that this mission will last only 1 year? Timetables on many international agreements in recent years have been much too ambitious, and inevitably have been revised and extended. I have serious doubts that this agreement, as contentious and entailed as it is, can meet its timetable.

Last month, I voted for legislation in the House forbidding the use of appropriated funds for the President's proposed Bosnia peacekeeping mission unless he requested a specific authorization of appropriations for the mission. I believe that the Commander-in-Chief, although not constitutionally required to do so in all cases, should always come to Congress for approval of the deployment of U.S. troops in area of conflict. However, I will not vote to cut off funding for our service men and women when they have already been deployed; I will give our troops as much support as they need to carry out their mission to the best of their ability. I oppose H.R. 2770; I support the Buyer resolution.

Mr. EWING of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of the bills in opposition to President Clinton's misguided Bosnia policies. I support these bills because I support the men and women troops being asked by President Clinton to put their lives at risk.

The President believes he may conduct this policy without the approval of Congress. However, Congress does have a responsibility to address this issue, particularly when Congress is expected to provide the funding for this endeavor. This House has already voted twice advising the President not to send ground troops into Bosnia, but he has ignored that advice. I see no reason why we should now give him our consent.

The President has failed to explain to the American people clearly what our goals and objectives are in Bosnia or what national security issues are at stake there. He simply offers vague statements about securing peace. We are all deeply concerned about the terrible ethnic warfare occurring in Bosnia, but we cannot send American troops into a deadly situation without a clearly defined military mission, a firm timetable for their commitment, and a plan for getting them out. Furthermore, the President has failed to tell us how much this endeavor will cost the American taxpayers.

I commend the various parties involved in the civil war for finally reaching a peace agreement recently, at least on paper. However, the long history of violence in Bosnia demonstrates that this agreement could easily fall apart. If it does, this time thousands of American troops will be in the firing line.

Finally, and perhaps most importantly, the American people are strongly opposed to the President's policy. In my own congressional district, constituent phone calls to my offices have been more than 5 to 1 against sending ground troops into Bosnia. We should have learned from the Vietnam war that a successful military mission requires strong support from the American people.

Mr. KLECZKA. Mr. Speaker, there is not a Member of this House that does not hope the Dayton peace agreement ends the bloodshed in Bosnia and Hercegovina. Three-and-a-half years of war and destruction must end, so that thousands more innocent lives are spared.

However, I do not believe that the United States must or should send ground troops to continue to be a leader in implementing this agreement. Thus far, we have provided essential air, naval, and logistic support activities to our NATO allies. We could continue to operate in this capacity in order to make sure the peace is kept.

Only a few months ago, we led the NATO air strikes against the Bosnian Serbs. How can our troops now be seen as neutral peacekeepers? Being viewed as partisans is a major threat to their safety, and already there is disension among the parties to the peace agreement.

The first bill considered today, offered by Mr. DORNAN, expresses the position I have held on this issue from the beginning. This is the view that hundreds of my constituents have voiced, as well. They believe that there is no compelling argument for sending ground troops. This conflict is replete with many ethnic and historical issues which will not be resolved by deploying our service members.

As a Member of Congress, I could never turn my back on the men and women who so bravely serve our country. Preceding the gulf war, I voted against similar resolutions to send in American troops. After they were sent, however, they needed and deserved the support of Congress. That is why the resolutions offered by Messrs. SKELTON and HAMILTON will also receive my vote today. We have a responsibility to give these brave and dedicated men and women our unqualified backing in their mission and these two resolutions accomplish that purpose.

Mr. DELAY. Mr. Speaker, already patriotic American young men and women are in the former Yugoslavia preparing for the arrival of thousands of troops to help implement the recent peace agreement. President Clinton, without the support of the American people or the Congress, has exercised his Presidential authority to send troops into action without the consent of Congress.

Republicans don't question the President's authority as Commander-in-Chief to send United States troops to Bosnia. We do question his judgment.

I believe the President has made a grave mistake. He has put Americans in danger without clearly articulating what national security interest requiring the use of United States forces is at stake in Bosnia. The President's promise to send some 20,000 United States ground forces into war-torn Bosnia was made in an off-hand remark more than 2 years ago. It became a commitment in search of a mission.

President Clinton made the promise without seeking the support of the American people. As a result, both the American public and the Congress have been shut out of the process that now involves sending American men and women into a very dangerous situation. This fact is highlighted by numerous polls indicating that close to 60 percent of Americans continue to disapprove of the Clinton plan.

There is no doubt that Republicans will unconditionally support our troops now and throughout the entire time they are deployed. We will make sure they are properly armed and have every resource available so they can adequately defend themselves.

However, the President needs to understand that he has not successfully made his case, as is demonstrated by the fact that the House has voted three times in opposition to his policy. Unfortunately, the President has chosen to ignore our counsel. Today will mark the House's final attempt prior to the signing of the peace agreement in Paris to express to the President the will of the American people with regard to sending our young Americans to Bosnia.

Mr. President, please take heed this time.

Mr. RICHARDSON. Mr. Speaker, we must support our troops. We cannot fail to support our troops. If we cut off funds to our troops we are failing to support them.

We must also support the President. He has created an environment for peace through the Dayton Agreement that hasn't been seen for 4 years in Bosnia. Four years of relentless killing; 4 years of non-stop ethnic cleansing; 4 years of unspeakable horror.

Every soldier knows that his chain of command is vital to his well being. The President is the Commander in Chief. Therefore the well being of our troops depends on support for the President.

The leaders of the warring sides have agreed to a peace. NATO is the only body that can enforce that peace. America is NATO's leader. Without NATO, the peace plan for Bosnia will collapse. NATO may collapse if the United States fails to lead in Bosnia. Turkey and Greece, both strong members of NATO, have conflicting sympathies in Bosnia. If the United States fails to act in Bosnia the war there may reignite, and it may drag members of NATO into it on opposing sides. Without American leadership, the peace agreement can not survive.

The opportunity for peace is at hand. We need to act now. We need to support the President's initiative for peace.

The Dayton Peace Agreement settles the territorial issues that caused the war. The Dayton Peace Agreement commits all parties to the conflict to cooperate with the investigation and prosecution of war criminals.

If we fail to act now to enforce the peace, we may later find ourselves with no choice but to once again become involved in a broader European war. The Balkans have been an historically volatile place. We are presented with an historic opportunity to contain that volatility.

The peace agreement is now larger than Bosnia. It is about America's leadership in the world. It is about America keeping its word. If America fails to lead a peace plan brokered in the heartland of America, America's credibility around the world is irreparably damaged. North Korea, Iraq, and other countries that have aggressive intentions will no longer take America at its word. Failing to act in Bosnia opens a Pandora's box of worldwide troubles. American is only as good as her word. We must remain reliable in order to be taken seriously by every country with whom we conduct foreign policy, and that is every country in the world.

Do not vote to cut America's soldiers off. Support the troops. Support the soldiers. Support the President. Support America's leadership role in the world. Support the peace.

MR. SCHAEFER. Mr. Speaker, as President Clinton Boards Air Force One for Paris to sign the Bosnian Peace accords, 20,000 American troops prepare to embark on a trip to Bosnia. They will spend the holidays in a strange and hostile land. Though I know they will serve with distinction and honor, I cannot support President Clinton's unilateral decision to deploy these young men and women without first seeking approval from Congress.

President Clinton is sending our troops to Bosnia to enforce an agreement that many Bosnians themselves reject. Look at a map and see how difficult it will be to police an effective peace. There are pockets of Croat-controlled areas, there are pockets of Moslem-controlled areas and there are Serb-Controlled areas forming a virtual horseshoe around half of Bosnia. It would be necessary to deploy hundreds of thousands of troops throughout these various areas for many, many years—perhaps decades, in order to effectively separate and pacify these warring factions. President Clinton's politically inspired withdrawal deadline of 1 year almost seems to ensure that in the long-term, open hostilities will resume once foreign troops are removed.

Now I do not pretend to have the key to peace in Bosnia, nor do I wish the suffering to continue. That is why I salute President Clinton's attempts to mediate a peace accord. However, I regret that he was unable to Broker a peace treaty that would essentially be self-enforcing—one which would give all Bosnians incentives to uphold its terms and conditions without the necessity of massive foreign troop involvement. If most Bosnians are not convinced that peace is in their best interest, then I fear that the Dayton peace accords will be short-lived. And our troops will be at risk from the day they arrive in Bosnia.

I would like to remind President Clinton and my friends who support his unilateral troop deployment that Congress has spoken twice in recent months on this issue with a clear voice: On October 20, by a vote of 315-103, the House voted for the nonbinding Buyer-McHale resolution opposing deployment of United States troops to Bosnia. On November 17, less than a month ago, the House once again spoke on this issue, voting 241–171 for Mr. HEFLEY'S binding resolution stating that no money is to be spent on deployment to Bosnia unless it is specifically authorized by Congress.

In recent polls the American people have spoken on Bosnia. In a "CBS News poll" on November 27, 58 percent of Americans said they were opposed to sending United States troops to Bosnia as part of an international peacekeeping force.

My constituents have spoken on Bosnia. As of December 8, my office has received 603 letters and phone calls opposing United States involvement in Bosnia. How many have called or written in favor of deployment? All of 18.

Mr. Speaker, I cannot in good conscience support the President's troop deployment to Bosnia which might result in the loss of American lives in an ill-defined and dangerous attempt at nation-building.

As our failed intervention in Somalia demonstrated, American troops cannot force peace and good-neighborliness on a reluctant local population.

Mr. BUNNING. Mr. Speaker, once again the House is going to express the will of the American people regarding the Clinton policy in Bosnia. The American people do not want our troops to go to Bosnia.

Mr. Clinton and his followers have never made the case that this country's vital interests are at stake in Bosnia. That is why this House has repeatedly voted to oppose the deployment of U.S. forces there.

There is simply no compelling reason for one drop of American blood to be shed in that troubled country. Contrary to Mr. Clinton's contention that this is a NATO matter, there is no threat to NATO from Bosnia.

NATO is a mutual defense pact. The members of NATO are pledged to treat an invasion or attack on one of the members as an attack on all. There is not threat of an invasion of any NATO country by Bosnia. Bosnia is not going to invade Canada or Germany or England.

What is happening in Bosnia is a civil war. It has been a horrible bloody affair with thousands of innocent people killed or hurt. But, it makes no sense to inject U.S. forces into that situation when we do not have any vital interest at stake.

In my book, the injury or death of even one American soldier is not acceptable if there is no threat to the security of the United States. Clearly, there is no such threat in the case of the civil war in Bosnia.

I feel for the people of Bosnia and I hate the fact that they have been suffering during this war. It has been brutal. But, there are brutal civil wars going on in several countries and we are not contemplating putting our military personnel into those fights; we should not.

There is no more moral imperative to intervene in Bosnia than there is for United States intervention in Sri Lanka or Sudan. It is horrible that there is evil in the world and that men do wretched things to one another. But, it is not the job of the U.S. military to act as the world's security guard.

Our military exists to protect our national security, not for enforcing other people's peace treaties.

History is not on the side of those who, in my estimation, naively believe that we can solve the Bosnians' problems for them. The ethnic, religious, and territorial rivalries among the Serbs, Croats, and Moslems are many centuries old.

The battles that the Bosnians are fighting today have their roots in the atrocities committed over the centuries. Bosnia has been conquered, controlled, traded, and oppressed by the various empires, kingdoms, and dictatorships that have ruled the region.

We cannot change their history and we cannot assuage their mutual grievances. The peace that was brokered in Dayton, OH, may make us feel good about ourselves but it is a paper peace and our soldiers will be shot at with real bullets.

We have all seen the old films of British Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain coming down the steps of the airplane waiving the peace treaty with Hitler and boldly proclaiming peace in our time. Let's not repeat that mistake.

We intervened in the civil war in Vietnam. Let's not forget the lesson we learned from that. Congress should not give a blank check for the use of our forces to a President who has not spelled out exactly why they should be sent and what they are to accomplish and how we are to get them out.

The policy is wrong. The American people do not want it. This House has repeatedly rejected it; but, Mr. Clinton has ignored us.

I urge my friends and colleagues to vote to support the troops and to oppose the Clinton intervention policy.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BUNNING of Kentucky). All time for debate pursuant to the first section of House Resolution 304 has expired.

Pursuant to section 2 of House Resolution 304, it is now in order to consider the bill, H.R. 2770.

PROHIBITION OF FUNDS FOR DEPLOYMENT OF ARMED FORCES IN BOSNIA

Mr. DORNAN. Mr. Speaker, pursuant to House Resolution 304, I call up the bill (H.R. 2770) to prohibit Federal funds from being used for the deployment on the ground of United States Armed Forces in the Republic of Bosnia and Herzegovina as part of any peacekeeping operation, or as part of any implementation force, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

H.R. 2770

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. PROHIBITION ON USE OF FUNDS FOR DEPLOYMENT ON THE GROUND OF UNITED STATES ARMED FORCES IN THE REPUBLIC OF BOSNIA AND HERZEGOVINA AS PART OF ANY PEACEKEEPING OPERATION OR IMPLEMENTATION FORCE.

Notwithstanding any other provision of law, no Federal funds shall be appropriated or otherwise available for the deployment on the ground of United States Armed Forces in the Republic of Bosnia and Herzegovina as part of any peacekeeping operation, or as part of any implementation force.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to section 2 of House Resolution 304, the gentleman from California [Mr. DORNAN] will be recognized for 30 minutes and a Member opposed, the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HAMILTON], will be recognized for 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from California [Mr. DORNAN].

Mr. DORNAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, those Members that were on the floor and missed the evening ABC news tonight missed some very graphic videotape from Tuzla.

The airport at Sarajevo has been closed all day today and the better part of yesterday. No C-5's or C-141's, our biggest transport airplanes, will go into either the Tuzla airport or to Sarajevo. It is going to be all tough C-130 Hercs or the C-17 at some point in the future when the runways are perfected.

Tuzla has 2½ feet of snow, it is snowing at this moment, it is going to snow all night. There is a frontal system throughout the whole Balkan area. The mountains, where the mines are, are all in dense fog. The winds are 25 knots gusting to 35 causing snow drifts, and they expect 28 degrees at the city levels, much less up in the hills, and the 2 foot of snow will stay for weeks if not months to come, and more will be added to it.

I wish someone in this Chamber could explain to me why this operation, Task Force Eagle, could not have been implemented the day after Christmas. Why do we take all these families, including mothers, away from their kids and their mates in Germany and a lot of reserve units having their civilian employment interrupted to go over there, 12 days before Christmas?

I am going to vote, of course, for the amendment of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. BUYER] and the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. SKELTON]. IKE has two sons on active duty. I have two Dornan nephews, a lieutenant in the Air Force and a lieutenant commander in the Navy who has 35 some missions in the gulf war.

They tell me privately, all the military people I meet with, that this is a terrible way to put men and women in harm's way, but once they get the call, they are ready to try and do their best.

This is going to come back to haunt a lot of Members, their Dornan vote tonight. December 13, 1995 is going to come back to haunt people, Mr. Speaker.

When a Gold Star mother comes to a Member in this House and says that you do everything to keep Americans from going back to Europe after 50 years of keeping their peace and two bloody wars, and the Pope did not tell anybody to put American ground troops in there so that this century would not end in Sarajevo the way it began in 1914.

The factor of supporting the troops is a given in this House. I do not know anybody in this House, the most liberal Member, the most conservative, I do not know anybody at this point after Desert Storm and what we did to our forces in Vietnam and tragedies like Beirut and the fact that thousands of young men and women die every year in training, I do not know anybody in this Chamber who does not truly have intense, deep affection for our troops.

But many Members have not met Herb Shugart, the father of one of our two last Medal of Honor winners from the streets of Mogadishu. He would not shake Clinton's hand.

Herb Shugart told me the whole story. He said, "Mr. President, why do you fly a warlord Aided on our airplanes with Marine guard? You wouldn't ask my son's Army to guard him just days after he had killed 19 of our men. Why did you fly him to Addis Ababa?"

Clinton said to him, "It was a good military operation, Mr. Shugart. You son did not die in vain."

He said, "How would you know what a good military operation was?"

It went on from there, and finally he said, "I have nothing more to say to you."

The press, some of the press, most of the press, suppressed that story. I do not think there are five Members in this Chamber that know that our two Medal of Honor winners, Gary Gordon, buried in Lincoln, ME, and Randy Shugart, buried in Carlisle, PA, were not just dragged through the streets before our eyes but their bodies were horribly mutilated and then burned and then dumped on the steps of the U.N. every 2 days.

And then I am told by nice men like Christopher and Perry and Shalikashvili that, "Well, we've learned our lessons from Somalia." Learned our lessons from Somalia? Did we not learn anything from Reagan's mistake in Beirut? Did we not learn anything from Vietnam? Did we not learn anything from the cold in Korea? Ask CHARLIE RANGEL about trying to concentrate to fight when you are freezing to death.

No, we did not have to rush in to rescue our European NATO friends when we are doing over 90 percent of the airlift, 90 percent of the sea lift, 90 percent of the sea power in the Adriatic. More like 95. The air strikes were 95 percent ours in August and September. Ninety percent of the food, the logistics, 100 percent of the hospital at Zagreb in Croatia. And when it comes to intelligence, it is all ours, from the unmanned aerial vehicles to the super architecture of our big satellites. Is that not a Treasury commitment of the American people?

I am not an isolationist, far from it. I went up to Walter Reed Hospital and met all the wounded men up there. Chris Reed was trying to rescue the bodies, not the men, the bodies of a helicopter that went down September 25, 1993, days before the horrible fire-fight, and he lost his arm and his leg. His fiancée married him anyway—beautiful ceremony up at Walter Reed. I flew over 200 flags on the roof of this Capitol with my 5 oldest grandchildren. I sent little Medals of Honor to the parents of Shugart and Gordon because the Army had forgotten that parents raise the young heroes. The wives get the Medals of Honor posthumously.

This is a Gold mother, a Gold mother vote tonight. It is a widow vote. It is a vote to tell a couple of young kids and a handsome young father why their mother was hit by a sniper in Tuzla or some area in those hills.

I wish all Members could get the intelligence briefing I had today. By the way, you can. Every one of us has a top secret briefing. Go get the briefing that I got today on who are our friends there and who are not our friends. The war criminals are on their best behavior, the victims are furious that they lost 49 percent of their country, and the older politicians who cut the best deal they could to have their nation partitioned in half, and we are going to enforce the partition, they cannot sell their younger people on the anger that they have lost what they wanted, not to be a multicultural state but an Islamic state.

The intensity of the hatred with some of these folks reminds you of the 8, 14-way split in Afghanistan, reminds you of the worst of Lebanon, the worst of Vietnam.

I am going to vote against Mr. HAMILTON's amendment, because I think it is naive and a fig leaf and it acts like all 20,000 troops are in there. The news tonight said, I stand corrected, it is not 97, it is about 150 people are on the ground. Period. Nobody is getting in tonight.

Mr. Speaker, I am going to call this the Dornan-Scarborough—because he has led my freshman—Freshmen amendment, "freshmen" for the baker's dozen, the 13 of you over there, because I predict, without any fear of being wrong, that some seats are going to be lost in November based on how people vote here.

I want everybody to realize that we are a pretty elite group here now. Almost all of our kids go to college. This blue collar warfare that we started, putting our men and women in harm's way, started in Korea and it was perfected in Vietnam.

I am going to give some time to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. TRAFICANT] to speak out for the families who have their sons and daughters wear our uniforms as police, fire people, deputy sheriffs, and in all of our services. Then I am going to give 1 minute to as many freshmen as I can who were on the trip this weekend, last weekend, or the weekend before who have a totally different opinion than some of the people who have already spoken.

Mr. HAMILTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as she may consume to the distinguished gentlewoman from Ohio [Ms. KAPTUR].

(Ms. KAPTUR asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. KAPTUR. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me the time.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the Dornan resolution as the only crystal-clear vote this House will cast on this precedent-setting U.S. military involvement of our ground forces in an unstable former Soviet bloc nation.

I rise in support of the Dornan resolution as the only crystal clear vote this House will cast on this precedent-setting U.S. military involvement of our ground forces in an unstable former Soviet bloc nation. The most assured way of maintaining our troops' safety is not sending them there in the first place.

Moreover, there is no possibility that the age-old hatreds that have fueled the killings and plunder in the former Yugoslavia will be calmed in one year. Reestablishing civility in that region will require years of dedicated commitment, and the resources to back it up. Other instabilities in that corner of the globe are likely to bubble up in years ahead. Unless Europe, now rebuilt 50 years after World War II, seizes its proper leadership role, the United States cannot keep filling the vacuum. The initial cost of U.S. ground force involvement is projected at $2.6 billion including an initial $600 million for rebuilding roads, bridges and infrastructure. The cost in American lives tonight is uncertain. This operation is high risk and its ultimate resolution unclear. Thus, before committing U.S. forces, it is critical to ask the Clinton Administration:

Under what Constitutional authority is your Administration committing 20,000 U.S. ground forces to Bosnia and thousands more to adjacent nations?

Under what specific treaty obligation and amended obligations is your Administration committing U.S. ground forces to Bosnia?

Please define peace-keeping.

Please outline the mission in Bosnia and when our nation will know it has succeeded and thus withdraw.

Please define peace-making.

In the past, when, where and through what legal or treaty authority has the U.S. deployed ground forces through NATO, or other European Security institutions for "peace-keeping" operations in the former Soviet bloc?

Since the administration's Bosnia initiative is precedent-setting—U.S. ground forces in a former, unstable Soviet nation—on what basis will our forces be committed to other internal civil wars in the future? What will be the U.S. military "peacekeeping" relationship to the United Nations, NATO and other such international entities in the future?

Has the Conference on Security and Cooperation in Europe formally requested NATO assistance in Bosnia? Please provide the document requesting such involvement.

What is the role of the Western European Union, if any, in the Bosnia deployment?

Is Eurocorps functional and what force level has it committed to Bosnia?

Describe the Bosnian Commission that is to settle property disputes and its legal structure. Is it operational? If not, when will it become functional?

How does the United States role in Bosnia differ from our role in Lebanon?

Do the three parties to the peace accord—Presidents Milosevic, Izetbegovic, Tudjman—represent legitimate authority for their respective constituencies? Through what legal process was each elected to preside over those countries? Please detail the nature of their respective elections.

Finally, why in this post Cold War era—when the U.S. citizenry has been clamoring for more defense-burden sharing by U.S. allies—has the U.S. again been asked to assume the central role in resolving this situation, even convening the peace talks in Dayton, OH, rather than on the European continent.

This matter is a defining moment in U.S. foreign policy in that the U.S. is being asked to substitute for European resolve.

In the NATO nations of Europe we have thousands of European trained, deployable troops that could be dispatched immediately to the Bosnia region in the event a final peace accord is signed in Paris.

Let me read to you the countries and the number of their combat ready troops:

Belgium .....	63,000
Denmark .....	27,000
France .....	409,000
Germany .....	367,300
Greece .....	159,300
Italy .....	322,300
Luxembourg .....	800
Netherlands .....	70,900
Norway .....	33,500
Portugal .....	50,700
Spain .....	206,500
Turkey .....	503,800
United Kingdom .....	254,300

Total .....

2,468,400
The Administration states that Europe, since 1914, has been unable to effectively maintain the peace and there was no other recourse but for the U.S. to assume the lead in bringing the warring factions to peaceful resolution. We are urged not to become "isolationist".

The truth is the long-term prospects for peace in this troubled region are slim. Once the NATO troops withdraw, it will require 50 years of cooling off between warring factions and maintenance of borders by external forces to give peace a chance, not a one-year quick fix. And who will commit to that? Who will pay for it?

Mr. HAMILTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from California [Mr. FAZIO].

Mr. FAZIO of California. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong opposition to the Dornan resolution. At a time when U.S. troops are in the field, right at this very moment, the Dornan resolution would deny American troops the resources they need to carry out their mission.

This is a naked political ploy that, despite all the rhetoric, pulls the rug right out from under the feet of the very troops that most if not all the Members in this body want to support. You cannot have it both ways.

The gentleman from California [Mr. DORNAN] says there are now 150 troops on the ground. If this bill were to reach the President over the next several days, there would be at least 2,000 troops on the ground before it would be presented to him.

At a time when we already have a significant number of people there; what kind of message does this send, when Members of this Congress act to strip American troops of the resources they need? Could we even evacuate the area of those who have already arrived and will over the next several days be arriving?

□ 1900

I do not believe this bill would permit it. The Dornan resolution represents, I believe, a direct assault on every U.S. soldier on the ground in Bosnia and those who will soon be there. This resolution essentially could take the weapons out of the hands of the troops and put, unfortunately, and maybe unintentionally, our men and women directly in harm's way.

I think we should stop playing politics with the lives of the young men and women who are there. If we really support our troops, there are opportunities ahead to vote for that. There is no question that this bill is not necessary and, in fact, could do a lot of damage. I think it is the height of irresponsibility, and I personally believe this resolution is far too far to the extreme. I believe it is really an attempt to embarrass this President.

But, more importantly, to those of us who will be voting here shortly, I believe it will, in the long run, embarrass those of us who choose to vote for it. I do not intend to be one of them. I think there are other alternatives available to us this evening, whether you are for or against this effort in Bosnia, that have a more effective and less destructive way of expressing the opinion of this Congress.

I wish this resolution had not been presented, but I think those of us who have the courage to stand with our troops need to oppose it.

Mr. DORNAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 30 seconds to remind the gentleman who just spoke that there will be a lot of conscience voting on the other side. I respect that. But I believe all of the leadership over there, including you, voted against Desert Storm and voted against our troops. So let us not inject politics and hypocrisy here. Let us all speak with our brains and our hearts and respect one another.

I looked up how you voted.
Mr. Speaker, I yield 3½ minutes to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. SCARBOROUGH].

Mr. SCARBOROUGH. Mr. Speaker, I must tell you I am highly offended that the Member from California would call this a naked political ploy, when we in Congress are simply doing what is our constitutional right to do, questioning whether we send young Americans to die in the snows of Bosnia.

I sit on the Committee on National Security; make no mistake of it, every single person that has testified in front of the Committee on National Security has said young Americans will die in that battle. We have that right to ask the question.

How many times have we heard since the end of the Vietnam war, "Why didn't our leaders step forward earlier and stop it?" The troops are not in at such a degree that we cannot get them out. We have more Americans in Central America fighting the drug war right now than we have over in Bosnia. We have a right, and for those who say how dare we do it now, these are the same people that were telling us during the Dayton peace talks that we had no right to do it; then that we had to wait until after the Dayton peace talks. Now they are telling us we as Congress do not have the right to do it now.

Let me tell you, if not now, when? And if we do not have the right to do it, then who has the right to stand up and ask the President why he is sending Americans to die in a conflict that his own Secretary of Defense says does not pose a vital threat to America?

The Constitution is clear. James Madison, one of the three drafters of the Constitution, said that the Constitution supposes, with the history of Governments to declare, that the executive branch of power is the most interested in war and the most prone to it. It has, accordingly, with studied care, vested the power of war in the legislature. That was from James Madison to Thomas Jefferson.

I want the Member from California, I want those who vote against the only true bill that can do something to stop the bloodshed now, to tell me during this debate what will they tell the parents of those children who die in Bosnia? What is the reason that we have sent them over there to die? Tell the gentleman from Kentucky [Mr. BUNNING], what is the vital American interest in sending his son over to die?

These troops are not cowards. People from my district have been over there for months flying missions. We are not isolationists. But tell us the vital American interest that is worth the death of Americans. And make no mistake of it, the President will tell you, the Vice President said it today, as many as 50 Americans will die over there.

So when you vote against Dornan, you are voting to wash your hands of this issue, and if you are comfortable with that, if you feel there is a compelling vital American interest, if you truly believe in your heart that a 500-year-old civil war with no vital American interest, according to our own Secretary of Defense, is worth spilling American blood, that is fine. But convince me, because nobody in the administration has convinced me or 75 percent of Americans that we have a vital American interest over there.

I certainly respect those who will vote against the Dornan amendment. I know this is a highly emotional issue. Nobody has made a case yet that it is worth spilling American blood.

Mr. HAMILTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from New York [Mr. HINCHEY].

Mr. HINCHEY. Mr. Speaker, for the last 4 years a horrible war has been ranging in the former Yugoslavia. It is a war that, with each passing day threatens to become wider and more dangerous, not just for the people in that country but for other countries in the surrounding region and for the world itself.

Already that war has claimed several hundred thousand lives. There are 2 million refugees in country and another 800,000 refugees outside of country.

On the Serbian side, there are already volunteers, including high-ranking officers, serving with the Serbians from former Soviet-bloc countries. On the Bosnian side, there have been volunteers from other countries, particularly in the Middle East. The war is becoming more dangerous, more complicated and more involved all the time.

A month ago our President invited the leaders of those three countries to come to this country. They sat down in Dayton, and after 3 weeks they signed a peace agreement. The fighting has stopped. Now they ask us to come and stand between them to make sure that the fighting continues to stop while they have an opportunity to rebuild their countries and settle their differences peaceably among themselves. They need NATO.

They said to us, and I was in Bosnia as others of us have been over the last weekend, they told us directly,

No one can ensure that this happens, that this peace continues, other than NATO, and there is no one that can lead NATO except for the United States. We need the United States. We trust the United States. We respect the United States. We want you to come here and make sure that this peace continues.

Our troops are on their way. They are already now on trains heading for the staging area in lower Hungary. Hundreds of them are on the ground in Tuzla.

This resolution cuts off all funding for American troops in the field. I met with those troops in Frankfurt just yesterday, had lunch with them in the mess hall. What they said to us, from officers down to privates, the two privates that I sat next to in that lunch hall, was this:

We need the support of the American people. We are going for this mission. We understand it is dangerous. We are prepared for it. Our morale is high. We can do the job, but, don't deprive us, don't deprive us of the means to achieve the objectives that you have set forth for us.

That is what this bill does. Unfortunately, it deprives them precisely and specifically of the means to carry out the mission that they have been sent there to accomplish. It would cut off all of their funding. Let us not do that to them.

We are sending them there on a mission that is dangerous and important for our country, for the NATO countries, and for the rest of the world to keep peace.

More than 60 years ago, a kind of ethnic cleansing swept through Europe. We did not step in in time. Let us not make that mistake again. We are there to maintain this peace. Let us not cut off the funds for the troops who are there to do the job.

Vote "no" on Dornan.

Mr. HAMILTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. FOGLIETTA].

Mr. FOGLIETTA. Mr. Speaker, the holiday season is a time for us to count our blessings, and it was in this spirit that I came before the House last week to urge my colleagues to reflect upon the efforts of the peacemakers. I felt that the words found in the Bible expressed it best, "Blessed are the peacemakers."

After 3 years of starvation, mass executions, sniper fire, indiscriminate shelling and rape, the children of Sarajevo are ready to enjoy their first Christmas free of fear and violence. For the first time in years, families have an opportunity to share the holidays together without worrying that a father or a son will be dragged off in the dead of night never to be seen again.

In large part, our Nation, our President, its leaders, its diplomats, its men and women in uniform and its people are responsible for this state of affairs.

While I strongly support the humanitarian goals of this mission, I also support this mission because it is in our national interest. Is not preservation of the North Atlantic Alliance, which has kept the peace in Europe for over 40 years, important to America's national security? Is not keeping the war in the Balkans from spreading to engulf our important allies, Turkey and Greece, important to America's national security? The answer is "yes."

It is also a national interest to protect the constitutional powers, not just of this President but of future Presidents.

After 3 years, our President and our European allies have finally pulled the warring parties in Bosnia off the battlefield and to the negotiating table to end the bloodshed and death which has claimed the lives of so many innocent women and children.

Mr. Speaker, let us be messengers of peace and goodwill and support. Let us support our troops, America's national interests, our President, and the peacemakers. Let us support the Hamilton amendment.

Mr. DORNAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. TRAFICANT].

(Mr. TRAFICANT asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Speaker, blessed are the peacemakers. Peacemakers? Maybe targets.

There is only one vote on the House floor tonight; I am going to vote for Mr. HAMILTON's, but I am going to vote for Mr. SKELTON's and Mr. BUYER's.

They are after-the fact, nonbinding votes. They mean nothing. Yes, there may be 2,000 troops in Bosnia before the Dornan amendment may pass. I do not think it will pass. But if it did, the President would veto it, and we could not override the veto.

Because, Congress, we know our history in Vietnam. What was the sense to it? What was the binding vote that declared war in Southeast Asia? There was none.

Congress does not govern anymore. I hear all of this superpower business. We are not the only power. Europe is not exactly a Third World military pushover, folks.

I want you to just think of this, while our young men and women, while there is no security national security threat in Bosnia, No. 1, and our experts tell us Europe has enough military personnel and money to provide the peace, while our personnel, ground troops, are over in Bosnia, French soldiers will be visiting Disneyland.

This is ridiculous. I keep hearing about NATO. NATO was designed and, in fact, created to prevent a Soviet invasion. It is time for Congress to realign NATO. Let the Europeans put up the big money. Let the Europeans put up the military. Let us support them.

My God, this is contained, and if we needed to send troops, if it would be exported out of Bosnia, we could send ground troops.

This is the only vote you have. These other votes have absolutely no meaning. I am going to vote for them, but you have just given the authority to declare war to one person, the President. I do not want to hurt the President. But it is not the President's authority to do this. By God, if we do not challenge it over Bosnia, we will continue to look in our history, at Vietnam, Bosnia, Beirut, Lebanon, Somalia. What is next here?

Wise up, Congress.

Mr. HAMILTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. LEWIS], the distinguished deputy whip.

□ 1915

Mr. LEWIS of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to support the peace agreement between the warring parties of Bosnia. Blessed are the peacemakers, for they shall be called the children of God.

This was not an easy decision for the President. This is not an easy vote for any of us. It is not popular, and it is not easy. But we are leaders. We are not called to do what is popular, to put our fingers to the wind is blowing. Our mission, our responsibility is to do what is right.

For 3 years, we have heard the cries of anguish from the people of Bosnia. We have been deeply troubled by the accounts of rape, torture, and murder. We wanted to help stop the violence, stop the fighting. But we did not want to get involved in a war that seemed to have no end.

But now—finally—we have an opportunity to support peace. This mission is not for war. It is not Vietnam. It is a mission to uphold the peace.

Only yesterday, the Prime Minister of Israel thanked America for leading the way. For fighting fascism and championing democracy. He urged us to continue our leadership, not just in the Middle East, but elsewhere, in places where our leadership—American leadership—can make a difference. America has always stood for peace and freedom because it is right.

If we fail to act, we lose our moral compass. We lose our sense of purpose, our sense of direction as a great nation.

We now live in a global village. What happens in Bosnia affects people in Boston, in Chicago, in Detroit and in Atlanta.

But I believe—I truly believe—we cannot, we must not stand idly by. To do so would undermine our position in NATO and throughout the world. Our involvement can make the difference between war and peace, between death and life.

How in God's name can we stand by? We have seen the ethnic cleansing, the slaughter of young children, and the rape of women. More than 250,000 people have lost their lives. More than 2 million people have been uprooted and made refugees.

If we fail to respond to the Macedonian call—to lend a helping hand for those in trouble—then the cycle of violence will continue.

At long last, we can make a difference—to give peace a chance. I plead with you my colleagues—stand with us. Stand with our troops. Stand up for what is right and just. Support our mission for peace. Oppose this amendment, support Hamilton.

Blessed are the peacemakers, Mr. Speaker, for they shall be called the children of God.

Mr. DORNAN. Mr. Speaker, since communism killed more people in Cambodia, Laos, and Vietnam than the entire population of Bosnia and Herzegovina, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Texas, Mr. SAM JOHNSON.

Mr. SAM JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. Speaker, this is not about peace and war; it is about war. That is what is going on over there, and they are not going to stop fighting just because we go in there.

I wholeheartedly support withholding funds from President Clinton's Bosnia mission. Although it is a drastic step and ties the President's hands, I do not feel like we have any other choice. The President has tied our hands, gone against the wishes of the American people, and this is the last best way I know how to show my respect for our American servicemen and women. They are helpless, following orders. But we, we are in a position to stop this terrible mistake before it happens.

I know how those soldiers are feeling. I was in the military for 29 years, and I recognize that we used to say "Let's go to war. Let's go fight that war, it is the only one we have got." And that is what some of them are doing. However, I was told by Senator HUTCHISON that the guys down in Fort Hood did not say that. They said "Why are we going there? Can't you stop us?" She said she would try.

Thirty years ago when I was sent to Vietnam in a similar situation, Vietnam started out as a peace type mission, no defined goal, no exit strategy, no idea whose side we were on, and a created incident to gain support of the Congress. A peacekeeping mission? Come on. Does this not sound just like a carbon copy? I think it is.

What is going to happen when our guys get over there, and if the rules of engagement apply, and they get shot at, and we start shooting back, what are their people going to say when we start killing them, killing Bosnians, killing Croats, killing Serbs? We will do it, and we will get chastised for it.

Let me just ask one more thing for the guys over here voting against it: What are you going to do when one of our women soldiers get captured?

Mr. HAMILTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from New York [Mr. OWENS.]

(Mr. OWENS asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. OWENS. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the Dornan amendment. There is no more noble a purpose and no more practical a purpose for the use of American military strength than the purpose for which the troops are being deployed in Bosnia. Blessed are the peacemakers and peacekeepers. All armies are created and mobilized for the purpose of achieving peace. Troops fight to win wars in order to realize peace. To conquer an enemy is to achieve peace.

If peace is always the objective, then why do we belittle and challenge a use of American troops to maintain the peace in a situation where peace has been negotiated? Every soldier who serves in Bosnia should be saluted as a hero. The soldiers who keep the peace deserve all the medals and as much glory as the soldiers who fight hot wars.

Peace is always the objective of honorable military action. Certainly there are great risks. From day one in training camp, every soldier enters a world where risks are far greater than in the civilian world. In any foreign theater, a soldier's risks are greatly increased. But in Bosnia the risks are being taken to feed the hungry, to clothe the naked, and to provide shelter for those who have been made homeless over and over again by the actions of military criminals.

We spend nearly $250 billion a year to maintain the world's greatest military force. The American armed forces of 1995 should be declared an Army for peace. For all the years to come it should be understood that we are armed to promote and preserve peace. Bosnia should not be seen as a waste. The deployment of troops in Bosnia is a necessity to send a message to the military criminals of the world that thugs will not be allowed to rule any part of the world and go unchallenged.

American soldiers should not be asked again and again to do this in the world, but this is a clear and present situation. This is a situation that has been negotiated. This is a situation where peace is achievable. Let our Army help to achieve that peace.

Mr. HAMILTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. DURBIN].

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. Speaker, imagine for a moment that you are an American soldier who said good-bye to his family and you are on your way to Bosnia. Word reaches you tonight that the Dornan resolution has passed in the U.S. House of Representatives. The House of Representatives has voted to cut off all funds for Bosnian peacekeeping.

The gentleman from California [Mr. DORNAN] knows and everyone knows on this floor his resolution will not go any further than this House of Representatives, but it will reach these troops on their way to represent America.

This is a cruel resolution. It will say to the men and women whom we ask to wake up tomorrow to dress in their military uniform and to represent the United States that we do not stand behind them.

I think we have learned many lessons through our lifetime. We have certainly learned that when we have made the commitment to put our troops in the field, we in the United States Congress must stand behind them.

The gentleman from California likes to recount the fact that many of us voted against the Persian Gulf war. I did. The gentleman should also recount the fact that immediately thereafter there was offered a bipartisan resolution, which passed I believe without a dissenting vote, where we stood resolutely behind those men and women, regardless of our vote on the Persian Gulf war. That was the appropriate and proper thing for us to do as Americans.

Regardless of the fact that I do disagree with some aspects of this Bosnian peacekeeping, I think the President was wrong in not seeking Congressional approval, the fact is the troops are committed. The fact is they will look to us, Mr. DORNAN, and they will look to you as to whether you support them. And your answer to them is not a badge you wear on your lapel or any fancy ribbon that you wear on your suit, but how Members will vote.

Mr. Speaker, I hope Members will join me in voting to make sure those men and women in the field know that we stand behind them. This is serious, it is a serious commitment of this country. These men and women are putting their lives on the line. We owe it to them to take it very seriously. I urge my colleagues, whether you agree with the President or not, to defeat this cruel Dornan resolution.

Mr. DORNAN. Mr. Speaker, I will not be goated yet. Mr. Speaker, my 22 years and 4 months in the Air force prevents me from rising to that fight.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from Idaho, Mrs. HELEN CHENOWETH, a freshman who has just come back from a recent trip to Sarajevo.

Mrs. CHENOWETH. Mr. Speaker, I want to make it clear that the Dornan resolution and the resolutions and bills that we have passed already in this Congress is not a message to our boys who are preparing to be deployed. It is a message to our boys who are preparing to be deployed. It is a message to the President of the United States, who is acting like a dictator. When is he going to get the message?

Mr. Speaker, yes, I was in Sarajevo, and I sat with Prime Minister Siladjic, who said very clearly, we have not asked for your troops. We have only asked that the arms embargo be lifted. We do not want to be an occupied nation. We want to be able to defend ourselves. We want to have military parity.

Mr. Speaker, they will only be able to have peace over there when everyone is equally armed. Let us not make a cheap political trick out of this by distorting the issue and using our boys in a political discourse. We are behind our men and women who will be deployed. There is no doubt about that. But, again, the Congress is saying no to President Clinton.

Mr. HAMILTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Washington [Mr. DICKS].

(Mr. DICKS asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Speaker, I, too, want to urge my colleagues tonight to think of the troops that we have in the process of deploying to Bosnia. I think a resolution that would cut off all money for ground forces would be widely misunderstood with the troops in the field, and I think would be a tragic mistake in undercutting of the U.S. presidency and of the Dayton agreement.

I would hope that my colleagues would give President Clinton what he needs tonight, and that is a resolution which strongly supports the troops, strongly supports the men and women who will be going to Bosnia, and I think the Hamilton resolution gives us that exact message and is what this Congress should rally behind.

I do remember the gulf war debate. After that debate was finished, we had a bipartisan effort to support the troops. I might recall to my friends on the other side, Speaker Foley did not call for a vote on this until after 500,000 troops were deployed to the gulf war. That was an appropriate time to do this. But to take this hard approach, to cut off all money, no money shall be spent, I think would be a terrible mistake. I think it would weaken the presidency, it will weaken our leadership in the world, it will weaken NATO and our leadership of NATO, and I think it is one of the most serious mistakes we will have made in this Congress.

So, again, I urge my colleagues to vote "no" on the Dornan amendment and support Hamilton, which is well written and very supportive of the men and women who will be serving us so well in the Persian Gulf.

Mr. DORNAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from North Carolina, [Mr. FUNDERBURK], the Member of this House or the Senate who spent the most time on the ground, 4 years in Romania, as Ambassador FUNDERBURK.

Mr. FUNDERBURK. Mr. Speaker, 1 year in Bosnia's 600 year old war and out, and peace is to be permanently established? What a joke. U.S. leadership is at stake in the world? What a joke. NATO will collapse if we do not go? World War III? What a joke.

U.S. troops must be supported. True, we all agree, but the President can send troops anywhere and then say if we do not support this unilateral Federal Executive action we are not for our troops. Shame on the one who never supported our troops until he was Commander-in-Chief, and until he seeks leadership credentials. He should have tried getting support of the American people and Congress first, before he committed.

Mr. Speaker, saying our mission was a moral imperative are hollow words coming from people who, for the last 30 years, have turned a blind eye to atrocities in Cambodia, Vietnam, China, Romania, Iraq, and Syria. What about America's moral imperative to intervene in Bosnia? Bosnia is a nightmare, but why should American soldiers stop at Bosnia? Why not Sri Lanka, Peru, China, Nigeria, Indonesia, the Sudan, the Philippines, Western Sahara, Afghanistan, Algeria, wherever there is blood and fighting? The list is endless.

Our policy has always been and it must be to selectively engage our forces where we can do the most good but with the goal of protecting the national security of the United States. On those grounds, Bosnia misses the mark. We have no interest there, plain and simple.

I have lived in that part of the world, the sad part. The Dayton peace accord is a prescription for disaster. Its Byzantine arrangement of one Bosnia with two governments and three independent armies is farcical. Margaret Thatcher had it right when she said the best thing we can do in the Balkans is arm the Moslems and stay out of the direct fight.

Mr. Speaker, I strongly support our only option here tonight for the Congress and the people, the Dornan bill.

Mr. HAMILTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 seconds to the distinguished gentleman from Missouri [Mr. SKELTON].

Mr. SKELTON. Mr. Speaker, I intend to vote against the Dornan bill. I do so because I feel to support it would be a vote in favor of cutting our troops off at the knees. They are on their way. They are going to be there.

Mr. Speaker, in a later moment I will explain, in great detail, problems that I have with the U.S. policy, but this is not the time nor the moment to do that. I will explain why we should vote for the Buyer-Skelton resolution, which will put this entire matter in perspective.

Mr. DORNAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume to say that I appreciate my good friend, the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HAM-ILTON], setting the standard here. There are so many distinguished people on his side and mine that want to speak, and so I am going to limit all my speakers to 30 seconds so that everybody gets a chance to be heard on this, and then they may join my special order tonight for an hour to extend their remarks. Let us give it our best shot on both sides.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 seconds to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. TIAHRT].

(Mr. TIAHRT asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. TIAHRT. Mr. Speaker, it is very clear our troops understand what is going on. I talked to them on my way back from Bosnia. They know it is our job to argue policy, and by supporting the Dornan resolution it does not cut them off at the knees. It is shameful to say that it does.

Our troops took an oath to defend the Constitution and our borders, and we have extended that to America's vital interests across this world, but none of that is here in Bosnia. None of it. We are asking them to go above and beyond the call of duty, outside what they have taken an oath and sworn to do. I think we should realize that.

I am carrying a coin, and I am going to keep the First Armored Division in mind for 12 months. And I hope the guy that gave me this does not come back in a coffin.

Mr. HAMILTON. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. DORNAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 seconds to the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. HEFLEY], who was discussed at great length on the Senate Floor today.

Mr. HEFLEY. Mr. Speaker, I think it is disgraceful that Members would get up in the well of this House and talk about cutting the knees out from under our troops. No one wants to hurt the troops. No one wants to hurt the troops. We want to get the troops there out, and we do not want to send any more troops.

When we debated Hefley back before Thanksgiving, the Democrats said it is a good idea but it was not the right time. Now they say this is not the right time because the troops are already there. When is the right time to say, Mr. Clinton, this is a stupid idea and we do not want you to do it?

Mr. HAMILTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1½ minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. BECERRA].

Mr. BECERRA. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Speaker, I approach this with some trepidation. I have never been one who likes to use our American troops to do things outside of what is absolutely necessary for the protection of this country. I take a look at this and I ask myself did we get the best deal for the troops that are being sent out there? Is this really the peace accord that is the mother of peace accords, that will guarantee us that the parties will finally agree to what they have said? I ask if those paramilitary forces that are out there, under the control of no one, are really going to be stopped? And I ask do we really know how we will get our troops out should this operation fail

At the same time, I know what I do not want to send a signal to the men and women who are going to Bosnia that I am not prepared to support them. Mr. Speaker, as I look at this vote, and I weigh the chance that I am sending people that are like me, in their thirties and twenties and forties, to go face off with people that we have never seen before, I do this with some trepidation.

I will probably support the Hamilton resolution. I cannot, in good conscience, support the Dornan resolution, and I would urge all the Members to not support the Dornan resolution. What we must do is do the right thing for those that are going. And I do not believe, at this stage, we can say that cutting off funds is the way we want to send our troops to Bosnia.

So I would urge Members to consider the fact this is them going. This is our chance to tell them that we support them, because they have no choice but to go, and it is our opportunity to say we will live up to our responsibility to do the right thing.

Mr. DORNAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 seconds to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HOSTETTLER].

(Mr. HOSTETTLER asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HOSTETTLER. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of the Dornan resolution.

Article 1, section 8 clearly enumerates the powers of the U.S. Congress and it clearly lays forth the power of the Congress to make rules for the regulation and the government of land and naval forces. It speaks very limited to the power of the President as Commander in Chief.

It is time to end the concession of this Congress to the executive branch in matters of policy as relates to the military. Support the Dornan language.

Mr. DORNAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 seconds to the distinguished gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. NEUMANN].

(Mr. NEUMANN asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. NEUMANN. Mr. Speaker, 30 seconds is a very short amount of time to say how I feel on this. But let me make a couple of things perfectly clear. I am 100-percent supportive of our troops. It is the policy and the idea of our troops risking their lives without our national interest at stake that I am opposed to.

So the message out of here, in 30 short seconds: We support our troops 100 percent; we do not want them in Bosnia. We have sent this message early in the summer, in the middle of the summer, late in the summer, again this fall. In case the President does not get it yet, we do not want our troops in Bosnia; we do not want our young people to lose their lives in Bosnia.

Mr. DORNAN. Mr. Speaker, how much time do I have remaining?

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BUNNING). The gentleman from California [Mr. DORNAN] has 8 minutes remaining.

Mr. DORNAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 seconds to the distinguished gentleman from Ohio, Mr. STEVE CHABOT.

Mr. CHABOT. Mr. Speaker, I am not convinced that the deployment of our brave soldiers in Bosnia will accomplish any lasting purpose other than to have put valiant American men and women in harm's way in a centuries-old civil war.

I will support the troops once they are there, but I want to state, in the strongest possible terms, that those troops should not be sent to Bosnia in the first place.

I am concerned that one of two things will happen. President Clinton says they will be out in 1 year. Either they will come back in 1 year and the bloodshed will begin anew, or they will be over there for a long, long time; and that is not acceptable to the American people, and it is not acceptable to me.

Mr. DORNAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 seconds to the gentleman from Long Beach, CA, Mr. STEVE HORN, who went over there 5 times as a professor to try to convince them to vote instead of kill one another.

Mr. HORN. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

This is not a partisan issue. Anyone that says we are not supporting the troops has to be either a rogue or a scoundrel. That is utter nonsense. This is a constitutional issue; this is an institutional issue. The House of Representatives must authorize the money.

This is not England. This is not the Roman Empire. This is not some dictatorship. If we have Presidents of both parties, and that is true, that have roamed the world in election years to look better rather than grapple with the problems at home, let us tell them that they must start here for the authority. They have no authority as Commander in Chief.

Mr. HAMILTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Texas [Ms. JACKSON-LEE].

(Ms. JACKSON-LEE asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. JACKSON-LEE. Mr. Speaker, I am not a war hero and so I cannot stand here with any credibility that might in any way match some of my colleagues, one of whom is proposing this resolution. I am however an American, and I am a human being and a supporter of world peace.

I am a mother as well, and I had the opportunity just this past week to talk to some of the parents of some of the troops who are now in Germany, prepared to liberate those in the former Yugoslavia and Croatia and Bosnia.

What I am, however, is an expert on life and the quality of life and what it means to live in a democracy. I would venture to say that the wrongest resolution we could ever have is the one that is on the floor right now: Cutting off the money, telling our troops we do not care, and simply saying to people who want peace, "The heck with you."

I do not know if we are aware of the human suffering that has gone on in Bosnia, some 3.2 million refugees, 200,000 dead, 6,000 elderly; homeless, and the mass graves that USA Today indicated, where dozens of family members gathered in the morgue of Splits Clinical Hospital to try to identify remains of loved ones, including watches, crucifixes, and pieces of clothing found with the bodies.

The article reveals that a BMW car key found on body number 28 was given to a woman who claims her husband, hotel manager Steko, age 33, had a similar car. The woman, Bozana Steko, 32, races home to see if the car starts, and it does.

I am not sure what we are debating here. I did not have the privilege to rise to the House floor and debate whether or not we should have gone into Kuwait when we had a Republican President. But I know there are many of my colleagues here that rose with all articulateness and emotional fervor, saying there was a reason to go to Kuwait. As a Texan, I know that we were talking about oil.

Today, Mr. Speaker, we are talking about peace. The American people have never run away from peace. They have run away from the loss of human life and the memories of Vietnam.

Mr. Speaker, this is not Vietnam. We have a military that is enormously prepared. We have young soldiers who are committed to the principles of peace. We have a strategy of rules of engagement that allows our troops to shoot to kill. We do not have sitting ducks at the line of demarcation. We are sending armored divisions, and yes the Americans are in areas that they know they can cover.

There are those who are cynical. There will be dangers, sniper fire, possibilities of land mines, but Americans and people of the world have never been able to gain peace without taking risks.

But most of all, I would say to my colleagues who want to throw in the faces of our troops that we will cut off the money but yet, we are for you, as I have heard my colleagues say, I want them to simply tell the truth. If my colleagues are for peace, they have got to stand for peace. They have got to take risks for peace.

Having gone to Bosnia, I will tell my colleagues that the people there want peace. They want to be part of peace. They begged us for peace as we stood in the streets with Bosnian children.

Mr. Speaker, this is the wrong way to go. We must support our troops. We must be strong for peace. Let us act like Americans. Take a risk and take a stand. Stand strong for peace.

Mr. DORNAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 seconds to the gentleman from Ohio [Mr. HOKE] who has one of the best chiefs of staff on the Hill.

Mr. HOKE. Mr. Speaker, this is not so complex. Our troops are not in Bosnia. Our troops are in Germany. If my colleagues want our troops to stay in Germany and not go to Bosnia because this policy is wrong, dead wrong, this vote tonight is the only opportunity to do that.

If this vote passes by two-thirds of this House and two-thirds in the other body, it is veto-proof. It is the only opportunity that we have, with 66 percent of these two bodies acting out the will of 85 percent of the American people, to prevent this travesty from happening.

Mr. HAMILTON. Mr. Speaker, we have only one remaining speaker, and I will yield the balance of my time to him. I understand the gentleman from California has the right to close.

Mr. DORNAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 seconds to the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. BARTLETT], a scholar.

(Mr. BARTLETT of Maryland asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BARTLETT of Maryland. Mr. Speaker, with the gentleman from California [Mr. DORNAN] leading this effort, it is patently ridiculous to assert that this vote could be construed as a statement for nonsupport for our troops. Please do not use this argument. With Mr. DORNAN leading this debate, there is no way our intentions could be misunderstood.

Mr. DORNAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from California [Mr. ROHRBACHER].

Mr. ROHRBACHER. Mr. Speaker, the White House and the public will take a vote against Dornan as a vote for Gulf of Tonkin-like powers for a Presidential deployment of American troops to Bosnia. That is what this debate is all about.

Should we give the President the power to send these troops to Bosnia? If some nut or ruthless gang unleashes biological or chemical weapons or in some other way kills hundreds if not thousands of young American defenders, those opposed to this bill will bear a share of the responsibility with the President.

The President is sending them there. We have a chance to act. We are now in the chain of command. If my colleagues vote against the Dornan proposal, they are sending a message to the President that he can send the troops to the Balkans.

The cold war is over. The American people deserve better treatment than this. We should not be sending young Americans all over the world in every conflict. It is not fair to them. It is not good policy, and it will not lead to a more peaceful world.

Mr. DORNAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 seconds to the gentleman from Arizona [Mr. HAYWORTH].

Mr. HAYWORTH. Mr. Speaker, it is difficult in a half-minute to sum up all the arguments. Suffice it to say, clearly and unequivocally, we stand in support of our American troops. It is for that reason that we do not ask those troops to put on referee stripes to go and try to mediate a peace that is not a reality.

We call in American fighting men and women to defend this country and our legitimate national interests. There are no legitimate national interests at stake in Bosnia. Mark Twain said it best, Mr. Speaker: History does not repeat itself, but it rhymes.

Mr. DORNAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 seconds to the distinguished gentleman from Georgia [Mr. KINGSTON].

Mr. KINGSTON. Mr. Speaker, Winston Churchill said that nothing that ever starts in the Balkans ever ends there. I think that when we think about making peace with tanks, bullets, guns, rifles, and missiles, we are not fooling ourselves. We are not going over there to make peace. We are going to go in there and prolong and probably start a bigger conflict than has been going on there already for over 100 years.

So, I proudly support the Dornan amendment and will say this: If anybody thinks there is a Member of Congress who cares about our men and women in armed services more than the gentleman from California [Mr. DORNAN], they are only fooling themselves.

Mr. DORNAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 seconds to the gentleman from California [Mr. PACKARD], just back from Sarajevo and all points thereabouts.

(Mr. PACKARD asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. PACKARD. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this resolution. It is the only way that I can express my view and the overwhelming views of my constituents to our President. The best way to support our troops is to not send them at all.

Mr. Speaker, the President's policy to send United States troops to Bosnia is simply wrong. I have recently returned from Bosnia and I can tell my colleagues firsthand that the situation there is grave. The destruction that I witnessed is horrifying.

We will not have peace in Bosnia with or without our troops, in my judgment. I opposed the President's policy before I went to Bosnia, and I oppose it more even after returning.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from California [Mr. DORNAN] has 3½ minutes remaining, and the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HAMILTON] has 6 minutes remaining.

Mr. DORNAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 seconds to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. NORWOOD], someone who not only supports the troops; he is one of the troops, a Vietnam veteran.

Mr. NORWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I rise tonight with a troubled heart. I rise tonight to ask my colleagues to support our troops. Support them by bringing the 150 home. Bring them home now, before we get into a mess like I personally had to live through 30 years ago.

Mr. Speaker, I served one "Mission Impossible" in Vietnam where we waged political war and no one really knew who the enemy was, and we had no political will to flight. Let us stop this madness. Is it not better we embarrass the President than to lose one American life?

Mr. DORNAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 seconds to the gentleman from New Mexico [Mr. SCHIFF], a member of our conference who just made First Bird Eagle Colonel.

Mr. SCHIFF. Mr. Speaker, there is a vital U.S. interest in peace in Europe, but there is more of an interest in peace in Europe to the Europeans. The case has never been made as to why the Europeans cannot themselves send 60,000 ground troops to quell the situation in Bosnia. No case has been made why U.S. troops are needed to help them.

Mr. Speaker, just because we are a superpower should not make us a superpaty to do the Europeans' job for them. If there is a threat that the war will spread further in Europe, that is even more of a reason for the Europeans to supply the ground troops themselves.

Mr. Speaker, the best way to support our troops is not to send them to Bosnia in the first place.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

Mr. DORNAN. Mr. Speaker, even if I only save 30 seconds for myself, does that mean that the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MURTHA], this very distinguished Marine, once and forever, gets to go right before me, or could I ask the gentleman to speak now?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. No, the gentleman from Pennsylvania could be yielded to speak now. It depends.

Mr. DORNAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 seconds to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. ROTH], a senior Member and a chairman of the Subcommittee on International Economic Policy and Trade.

Mr. ROTH. Mr. Speaker, these things never change. I have been in many of these debates. The American people are always conned. That is the truth of it, and that is happening again tonight.

Mr. Speaker, a year from now, I want to predict what is going to happen. When there are yellow ribbons all over America and the American people say, "When are our boys going to come home," these people are going to say, "We cannot leave now. Look what is going to happen to NATO. Who is going to take care of the American sector? It is going to be war all over again."

Mr. Speaker, if we move in tonight, we are going to be there for a good long time, and all of my colleagues know it.

Mr. DORNAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 seconds to the distinguished gentleman from California [Mr. HERGER].

Mr. HERGER. Mr. Speaker, this so called mission is not—as the President would have us think—a peacekeeping mission—this is a peacemaking mission. How can we commit our troops to keep a peace that does not even exist? Why should U.S. blood be spilled for a cause that is not in the interest of the American people?

Mr. Speaker, what will we tell these brave soldiers' parents that their children died for? Remember the lessons of Somalia and Beirut. Vote for the Dornan bill.

Mr. DORNAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 seconds to the distinguished gentleman from Georgia [Mr. BARR].

Mr. BARR. Mr. Speaker, every once in a great while there is a policy that is so misguided, so ill-conceived, so poorly planned, and so deceptively presented to the American people that drastic measures are called for. The Bosnian policy pursued by this Presidency unfortunately, Mr. Speaker, falls directly into that category, and there is only one way to stop it.

Mr. Speaker, there is only one thing to do and that is to pass a bill that has some teeth in it. Not just mere words; some teeth in it. That is what the gentleman from California [Mr. DORNAN] has presented here this evening, and that is what we must do in order to stop this misguided and ill-conceived policy now.

Mr. DORNAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 seconds to the distinguished gentleman from Washington [Mr. METCALF].

Mr. METCALF. Mr. Speaker, there are no vital United States interests threatened in Bosnia. Sad experience has taught us that it is real easy to move in the troops, it is very difficult to accomplish the objective after we are in there, and extremely difficult to get out in a timely and honorable way.

We must do everything possible, and that is what we are doing now, to prevent this folly before the signing, before the decision is irrevocable.

Mr. HAMILTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Oregon [Mr. DEFAZIO].

(Mr. DEFAZIO asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DEFAZIO. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the Dornan proposal.

Mr. Speaker, I stand in reluctant opposition to the legislation by the gentleman from California [Mr. DORNAN] to cut off funding for United States armed forces already on the ground in the territory of the former Yugoslavia.

The basic problem is this: the President has already placed United States troops on the ground in Bosnia. That is a fact, though I maintain that he had no proper constitutional authority to do so without advance congressional authorization. But despite my opposition to this policy, I believe we owe those troops our support and our blessing. Therefore, in this instance, I will reluctantly oppose Mr. DORNAN's resolution and support the resolution offered by Mr. BUYER which once again expresses our disapproval of the President's policy, but stands behind the well-being and safety of our young men and women in the Armed Forces.

The sorry chain of events leading up to this vote only serves to underscore the need to revamp the legal relationship between the White House and Congress in matters of war and peace. I've introduced legislation to reassert Congress' constitutional authority to place troops into war or warlike situations. The key to my legislation is a binding requirement for prior congressional authorization for the use of U.S. forces in hostilities except in those cases where the President must act to protect the United States, its troops, citizens, or territories abroad. Until we in Congress act to reaffirm our prerogatives, we will find ourselves faced with this kind of HOBSON's choice again and again.

Frankly, I do not believe this peace accord will succeed in the long run, though I pray it will at least stop the blood letting for awhile. We are dealing here with an ethnic and religious war that is hundreds of years old. The best intentions of the Western powers are not likely to cool the flames of hatred in the region.

Furthermore, our Nation should not assume the lion's share of the financial burden and military risk in this attempt to bring peace to the former Yugoslavia. For more than 40 years, the United States has provided for the security of Europe. We have spent as much as $100 billion each year to protect the European democracies from the threats posed by the Soviet Union and its Warsaw Pact allies. It's time for the European community to own up to its responsibilities and take up its share of the burden.

Mr. HAMILTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield the balance of my time to the distinguished gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MURTHA].

Mr. MURTHA. Mr. Speaker, a year ago we stood on the floor and we debated the Haiti resolution. This House had a very good debate on deploying United States forces to Haiti. We heard the same kind of concerns. We heard that people were going to come back in body bags. We heard all kinds of re-cremations about the policy, about the United States deployment, about the ability of the United States Commander in Chief to put United States forces in Haiti.

□ 2000

Not long ago, I became concerned about what was going on in Haiti. I went down there on Saturday. I found out that Aristide is going to step aside. They are going to have an election, that the human rights violations have receded substantially, that the 22,000 troops we had there at one time have been reduced to 2,500. In 2½ months we will have all the troops, all the United States forces out of Haiti, and we will not have had one casualty.

Now, will it be a long-term success? All we did was allow them to have an opportunity to have a free election and to get their country in order. It will take a long time for them to straighten this out.

I have been involved in the Bosnia situation for almost 4 years. When the Bush administration was in their last year, I went to Sarajevo. I could not get from the airport into town because the shelling was so heavy. The shells were landing in the houses. Two young children were killed not far from where I was. The next time I went in, I stopped at the location where 70 people were killed with one mortar shell in town. The people were in disarray. The buildings were destroyed. There was no heat, no electricity, and the people did not know where to go. The British commander, General Rose, said to me, stay out of it. We can handle it. The U.S. forces do not need to be involved. And I listened to that.

I told President Clinton that I did not think we should be involved as long as the fighting is going on; I adamantly opposed any U.S. intervention. I did not think we had any business going in as long as they were fighting.

Then the President took a real risk. A year later, I went over and talked to Gen. Rupert Smith. He thought it was time that something could happen there. Our emissaries went to Bosnia. Our emissaries talked to all the parties, and they did a marvelous job. I do not have the highest regard for the State Department, but in this particular case, they did a marvelous job in getting the parties to agree to a ceasefire, which has held for a period of time.

When I was there, I saw every single building in Sarajevo had been destroyed or in some way hit by shellfire. People were starting to feel better about what had happened. And the British commander said, we cannot do it. Only the Americans can cause peace in Bosnia. The British and the French and the Germans have to many long-term animosities. If you want stability in Europe, you are going to have to have American troops involved.

I still doubted it. I still had concerns. I believed there had to be a peace agreement where the troops withdrew. I felt the Russians had to be involved. I thought the terrorists had to be pushed out. And all those things have been agreed to.

Now we stand on the threshold of a very serious decision by the United States Congress, very similar to what we did in Saudi Arabia with a difference. We were going to war in Saudi Arabia. We are going to make peace in Bosnia.

I do not think that any of us take it lightly. I have no concerns about the patriotism of the gentleman from California [Mr. DORNAN] or his feeling or anybody else's motives in why they believe that they should vote one way or the other. But there is no question in my mind that if the United States is not involved, that if we do not take the chance, and I sat down with the President of the United States for an hour and a half and with my year in Vietnam, with my different experiences in the Congress of the United States, like the distinguished gentleman from California [Mr. CUNNINGHAM], wounded twice when I was over there, I know something about the fighting. I know how difficult it is. But the President listened to my objections and concerns. I told him of the military concerns. I told him that politically he could be making the biggest mistake of his Presidential career. And I said, I do not expect you to make this decision based on politics. I would hope you would make it based on what is right and wrong, but I am just telling you the danger you are getting involved in.

He listened to me and obviously made what he considered was the right decision as the Commander in Chief.

There is no one in this country that I have a greater regard for than the majority leader of the U.S. Senate or the other body, no one who has taken a more courageous position in this incident, even though he has the same concerns that every person in here has about putting American troops in harm's way. But he made a decision based on the American commitment.

The President of the United States made a very tough decision, a decision he considered was right, a decision he considered was in the best interest of this country. It behooves us not to undercut that President as he goes forward to sign or to agree or to witness a peace treaty by the participants who have been fighting.

No question we will have casualties. But I would ask all of my colleagues to think about the involvement of the United States in world affairs. We cannot be the policemen of the world, but we can, when we see an opportunity, exert our moral force and insert our troops, who are so well trained, to do a job to make peace and not war.

I would urge my colleagues not to cut off the funds for these valiant troops who are on their way to Bosnia at this very minute. Defeat my good friend's amendment. Vote down the Dornan bill and vote for the support of the troops later on.

Mr. DORNAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself the balance of my time.

Mr. Speaker, a word to my dear friend, the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MURTHA]. In the streets of Kuwait City a week after the war eight of us had people come up to us and thank us for bringing peace to Kuwait. And they watched our debate from their hidden rooftop antenna on this House floor, amazing. We brought peace there.

This is the gold mother, the gold widow, the child who loses a dad in the snow of Sarajevo, Tuzla forever. Vote for the gold mother vote.

If I were a Democrat, I would vote for all three. If I were a Republican, and I am, I would vote for mine and then I would vote to support the troops, the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. BUYER] and the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. SKELTON], my pal.

This is a tough vote. I will respect whatever Members do on either side. But believe me, history is going to come back to bite us on this one. We are going to be asked to account for our votes on December 13, 1995.

Good luck. Vote your conscience.

Mr. STOKES. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of President Clinton's Bosnia peace initiative. This evening the U.S. House of Representatives debated several legislative measures adressing the issue of President Clinton's deployment of peacekeeping troops to Bosnia. I do not believe that it is constructive for the Congress of the United States to undermine the authority of the President and the confidence of our troops on the ground by challenging the powers granted to the President under the Constitution of the United States.

Though I will always be wary of the deployment of American troops overseas I am confident that President Clinton has exercised his prerogative and authority under the Constitution of the United States to deploy American troops to Bosnia as part of an international peacekeeping force.

Mr. Speaker, during my tenure in Congress, I have been consistent in my opposition and votes against the deployment of American troops in places such as the Persian Gulf and Grenada for the purposes of combat. The circumstances in Bosnia, however, warrant unique consideration of U.S. involvement.

The President has made it clear that the mission of the peace implementation for [IFOR] under the command of NATO is well defined and limited. American forces will be under American command, the deployment has a clear exit strategy and the mission will be limited to the implementation of the historic Dayton Peace Agreement.

Because of the peace mission the President is implementing and because of our strategy of integration, the entire continent can share the blessings of peace that unite our community of free nations. As we strive with our partners to overcome the division in Bosnia, we can also help overcome the remaining division of Europe. Bosnia, once the symbol of Europe's post-cold war disintegration and holocaust, can be the proving ground for a broader and deeper transatlantic community.

Today, we know the extent of war crimes committed against innocent human beings in Bosnia. The atrocities are particularly disturbing when we consider the children of Bosnia and those who know no safe refuge. Finally, thanks to the leadership of President Clinton we are presented with an Opportunity to ameliorate a horrific situation. American leadership will clearly save the lives of many of Bosnia's innocents that would have surely perished without our help. Hopefully, this peace effort will restore stability to their lives.

The President took a historic step when he invited the Balkans leaders to the Dayton peace talks. At that conference, the parties agreed to pursue peace as opposed to war. In light of this pivotal development, I deem it important that we support President Clinton's peacekeeping initiative and support the American troops who are on foreign soil as part of an international peacekeeping force.

Mr. Speaker, in Cleveland and communities throughout the Nation, our hearts and prayers are with our men and women in uniform and their families. The world will always remember their unselfish dedication to this peacekeeping challenge.

Mr. WILLIAMS. Mr. Speaker, with our troops on the move, and our national commitment clear, we cannot, should not, vote to cut off the funding of our military.

To do so would both abandon our men and women who are under arms and negate our world leadership.

Thus, I will vote to support our efforts; Concerned? Yes! Determined to preserve our strength? Always!

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the Dornan bill which prohibits funding for the deployment of United States armed forces on the ground in the Republic of Bosnia.

Tomorrow the Presidents of Bosnia and Herzegovina, Croatia, and Serbia will sign the Dayton peace agreement which assumes the commitment of 60,000 NATO troops to implement its provisions. At least 20,000 of those troops will be American soldiers. Advance troops have already been sent into Bosnia, and the President has said that the troops are committed regardless of whether Congress grants its approval.

For 2½ years President Clinton turned his back on his campaign promises to take decisive action against the aggressors, and his administration further compounded the flawed policy—which had begun in the Bush administration—when it failed to focus, in a meaningful way, on the conflict and the atrocities, and the pleas of the Bosnian Government to permit the means to protect themselves. In fact, I introduced the legislation calling for the unilateral lifting of the embargo against Bosnia. A similar bill, the Bosnia and Herzegovina Self-Defense Act of 1995, was overwhelmingly supported in both the House and Senate. The President chose to veto the bill on August 11.

The Dayton agreement—with the commitment of troops embedded into its fiber—has become the President's answer to the dilemma in the former Yugoslavia. Mr. Speaker, the President left no alternatives for the American people and the Congress.

The President prematurely made commitments to send U.S. troops to Bosnia, first to enforce the Vance-Owen plan, then the Vance-Stoltenberg plan, then the Contact Group plan, then the evacuation of UNPROFOR, and now the Dayton agreement. The President raised the expectations of our allies as well as those of the parties to the conflict that American ground forces would indeed be deployed in Bosnia.

Mr. Speaker, I am not prepared to approve the deployment of our ground troops to this mission.

The White House asserts that failure to deploy ground troops would have serious consequences for our status as a leading force in the world. Perhaps, but any loss of prestige is a consequence the record shows of the President's hasty promise and eagerness to deploy U.S. ground troops to enforce any plan. The premature withdrawal of troops—either in response to military losses or simply in compliance with the convenient time frame set by the administration—without completing a realizable mission is damaging to the morale of the American military forces and the credibility of the United States. Questions remain about the agreement the troops are being sent to implement. Details about how and who will train and provide arms to the Bosnians are being provided piecemeal with the latest understanding being provided in a letter from the President. Will there be a clear delineation between the role of the NATO forces and the agreement's assurances of creating a climate conducive to elections, the return of refugees to their homes and reconstruction of the region?

The President has prematurely committed our troops without providing the Congress and the American people enough confidence that the military strategy has been thoroughly examined, defined and structured. Therefore, I feel I must vote in favor of H.R. 2707 prohibiting the deployment of U.S. ground forces to Bosnia.

Mr. FLANAGAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the gentleman from California [Mr. DORNAN]. Before I begin, however, I would like to associate myself with the remarks of the gentleman from North Carolina [Mr. FUNDERBURK], our former Ambassador to Romania.

President Clinton gave a speech before the American people November 27, 1995. He did not make a compelling case for sending United States ground troops into Bosnia. I do not believe that American interests are at stake or that our national security is being threatened in Bosnia. Therefore, I do not agree with the President's decision to send American troops into Bosnia-Herzegovina.

As a veteran of 5 years of active duty as a combat arms army officer, I am well aware of the risks associated with the deployment of a large force into a hostile environment. Our sons and daughters and brothers and sisters in the military are an extraordinary resource that we must not place at needless risk.

Some say America's international prestige is on the line, and that if we do not send the troops it will be diminished in the eyes of the world. But, I believe that our prestige will be weakened much more if young American men and women start coming home as fallen victims of a failed and poorly outlined foreign policy.

The situation in Bosnia-Herzegovina is deplorable, but the basic fact remains that America's vital interests are in no way threatened by that internal conflict. Allowing our young men and women to fight and die for anything less than our vital interests is immoral and reprehensible and I will not support it.

When the loved ones of those who will have needlessly given their lives for the Bosnia mission come to see us, will we honestly be able to tell them that their loved one sacrificed their life on a mission which served a noble purpose and that they did not die in vain? Can we tell them that their sacrifice advanced the cause of world freedom? Can we tell them that their effort was absolutely vital in protecting the security interests of our great Republic? We all know the true answer to these questions.

The administration has yet to really define America's mission in Bosnia, including a detailed explanation of why it would serve our national security interest. No such definition has been forthcoming, nor is one likely to be, in my opinion.

The situation in Bosnia strikes me as being a lot like the situation preceding the Lebanon fiasco of the early 1980's where over 200 young marines lost their lives in a hopeless crusade for peace when one of the chief belligerents of the conflict viewed the United States not as a peacemaker, but as an ally of another belligerent force. No, Mr. Chairman, sending American troops to Bosnia is not good foreign policy, it's a recipe for disaster and we in Congress have an obligation to prevent it.

Sending our troops to Bosnia may achieve one particular result, it may well unite all the warring factions. And they will all be united against us as their common enemy.

It was just last month that I, and the majority of the House, supported H.R. 2606, a bill which prohibited the use of funds appropriated to the Department of Defense from being used for the ground deployment of United States armed forces in the Republic of Bosnia-Herzegovina as part of any peacekeeping operation, or as part of any implementation force, unless funds for such deployment are specifically appropriated by law. On October 30, 1995, I also supported, as did the majority of the House, House Resolution 247 expressing the sense of the House that no United States ground forces should be deployed to Bosnia without congressional approval. Tonight, I continue in my steadfast opposition to sending our troops to Bosnia and believe the best way of showing that opposition is by supporting H.R. 2770.

The war in Bosnia-Herzegovina is an 800-year-old struggle which is not ours. There is nothing going on in the Balkans that is worth losing one American life. I will never vote to send my neighbors' kids into that meat grinder. There is no discernable American interest, therefore there will be no American lives lost with my vote. There is no price in the Balkans which I am willing to pay with the blood of our military men and women.

By passing H.R. 2770, the House will be exercising its Article I power of the purse and ensuring that we have a say in whether the taxpayer will pay to have American troops thrown into the quagmire in Bosnia. And what we are saying is that we will not appropriate funds for this needless mission that has no vital American interest at stake.

The best way to support our troops is not to send them to Bosnia, and without the necessary funding they will be unable to go. That is the best way we can show our support for our troops. Should it wind up, however, that they have to go, we must ensure that we give them, and pay for, the best logistical support. We want them to be as well equipped as possible so that they will be able to finish the mission and return home as quickly as this President may permit.

Mr. Chairman, colleagues on both sides of the aisle, for the sake of America's sacred military honor and lives, we must pass H.R. 2770 and pass it tonight.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BUNNING of Kentucky). Pursuant to section 2 of House Resolution 304, the previous question is ordered on the bill.

The question is on engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was read the third time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the passage of the bill.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. HAMILTON. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 210, nays 218, not voting 4, as follows:

Mr. BRYANT of Texas changed his vote from "nay" to "yea."

So the bill was not passed.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

Mr. RIGGS. Mr. Speaker, on rollcall No. 856, I was unable to be present because of a prior family commitment. Had I been present, I would have voted "nay."

□ 2030

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BUNNING of Kentucky). Pursuant to section 3 of House Resolution 304, it is now in order to consider House Resolution 302.

RELATING TO DEPLOYMENT OF UNITED STATES ARMED FORCES IN BOSNIA TO ENFORCE PEACE AGREEMENT

Mr. BUYER. Mr. Speaker, pursuant to House Resolution 304, I call up the resolution (H. Res. 302) relating to the deployment of United States Armed Forces in and around the territory of the Republic of Bosnia and Herzegovina to enforce the peace agreement between the parties to the conflict in the Republic of Bosnia and Herzegovina, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the resolution.

The text of House Resolution 302 is as follows:

H. RES. 302

Resolved,

SECTION 1. FINDINGS.

The House of Representatives finds the following:

(1) On October 30, 1995, the House of Representatives agreed to H. Res. 247, which expressed the sense of the House of Representatives that in the negotiations of any peace agreement regarding the conflict in the Republic of Bosnia and Herzegovina there should not be a presumption that United States Armed Forces would be deployed to that country to enforce such an agreement, and that in any event, no United States Armed Forces should be deployed on the ground in the territory of the Republic of Bosnia and Herzegovina to enforce such an agreement until the Congress has approved such a deployment.

(2) On November 17, 1995, the House of Representatives passed H.R. 2606, which provided that none of the funds appropriated or otherwise made available to the Department of Defense could be obligated or expended for the deployment on the ground of United States Armed Forces in the Republic of Bosnia and Herzegovina unless funds for such deployment were specifically appropriated by law.

(3) Despite the expressed will of the House of Representatives heretofore mentioned, the President has chosen to proceed with the deployment of approximately 20,000 members of the United States Armed Forces on the ground in the territory of the Republic of Bosnia and Herzegovina to enforce the peace agreement among the parties to the conflict in the Republic of Bosnia and Herzegovina initiated in Dayton, Ohio, on November 21, 1995.

SEC. 2. DECLARATIONS OF POLICY.

The House of Representatives declares that—

(1) it reiterates serious concerns and opposition to the President's policy that results in the deployment of 20,000 members of the United States Armed Forces on the ground in the territory of the Republic of Bosnia and Herzegovina;

(2) it is confident that the members of the United States Armed Forces, in whom it has the greatest pride and admiration, will perform their responsibilities with professional excellence, dedicated patriotism, and exemplary courage;

(3) the President and the Secretary of Defense should rely on the judgment of the commander of the United States Armed Forces that are deployed in and around the territory of the Republic of Bosnia and Herzegovina in all matters affecting the safety, support, and well-being of such members of the Armed Forces;

(4) the President and the Secretary of Defense should ensure that the commander of the United States Armed Forces that are deployed in and around the territory of the Republic of Bosnia and Herzegovina is furnished the resources and support that he needs to ensure the safety, support, and well-being of such members of the Armed Forces; and

(5) the United States Government in all respects should be impartial and evenhanded with all parties to the conflict in the Republic of Bosnia and Herzegovina as necessary to assure the safety and protection of the United States Armed Forces in and around the territory of the Republic of Bosnia and Herzegovina.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to section 3 of House Resolution 304, the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. BUYER] will be recognized for 30 minutes, and a Member opposed will be recognized for 30 minutes. The gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. TORRICELLI] will be recognized in opposition.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. BUYER].

Mr. BUYER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 2½ minutes.

Mr. Speaker, there are many in this body, both Republicans and Democrats, who fundamentally agree that the President's policy in the Balkans is ill-conceived, poorly defined, and highly dangerous. The House has been heard on this issue.

It is ill-conceived, because the President 2 years ago promised 25,000 U.S. troops to enforce a future peace agreement without knowing what the situation would be on the ground. This commitment of 25,000 United States troops on the ground also is ill-conceived because the United States has lost the protection of neutrality after having bombed Bosnian Serbs and promising to arm and train Bosnia Moslems. The United States troops could become targets and casualties.

The implementation has been poorly defined in that the President has set a date certain as an exit strategy. If there are vital national security interests to place troops on the ground in the Balkans, then that is what is used to define your exit strategy. What is the success and what is the failure? You see, there are also other concerns, whether it is mission creep, whether it is the issue of the Nation-building exercises.

Let me also state this: The implementation plan we all understand will be highly dangerous, but it makes no sense to place U.S. troops on the ground that have lost the protection of neutrality.

Many of recognize the threat to the U.S. forces will not come from actual company or battalion size or platoon size attacks upon U.S. forces. It will come through cowardly acts of terror, whether it be by sniper, whether it be by bombings, whether it be by booby traps or accidents.

Let me share that this House has already been heard on this issue twice. First, we sent an overwhelming message, a bipartisan message, in that 315 Members of this body said "Mr. President, do not negotiate a peace agreement based on the precondition that the U.S. troops will be there to implement whatever agreement you sign." He ignored that and he went forward. Then we had the Hefley amendment, and again the President ignored the Hefley amendment and proceeded anyway.

So now what we are doing here today is sending another message to the President: "Mr. President, we reiterate our prior positions and also oppose United States ground troops in Bosnia."

It is now our congressional oversight responsibility to narrow the parameters, and that is exactly what we do. We are saying as to matters on the field, listen to the commanders, give them the resources they need, make sure that we protect our force by making sure they are impartial and evenhanded to the conflict, and also we have the confidence in the U.S. Armed Forces to do their mission.

Mr. Torricelli. Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from New York [Mr. ENGEL].

Mr. ENGEL. Mr. Speaker, I thank my colleague from New Jersey for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, for the past 3 years, we have heard colleagues on both sides of the aisle, but particularly the Republican side of the aisle, say that the United States has not been forceful. We have been hearing for the past 3 years that the United States has not been forceful, that we have left the European allies to do the job in Bosnia, and they have been doing it ineffectively.

Now the President takes the bull by the horns and hammers out an agreement in Dayton and we are second-guessing and undermining and playing totally politics with the President.

Mr. Speaker, I was one of the Democrats that crossed party lines and supported President Bush during the Persian Gulf war. I did so because I believed that it was in the best interests of America not to undermine the President of the United States at such a crucial time in foreign policy. I believed that then, and I believe it now.

I would no more undermine President Clinton than I would undermine President Bush. We have been watching for nearly 4 years now, and we have seen visions of a new Holocaust rearing its ugly head in Europe again, 50 years after the end of the worst Holocaust in world history. We have seen ethnic cleansing, emaciated people, rapes, pillages. I think America does have a moral obligation to act. I do think that the stability of Europe is certainly in the vital interests of the U.S.

The NATO alliance is certainly important. If we were to do nothing now, the NATO alliance would be rendered impotent and go down the drain. So I do think we have a vital interests there. We are the leaders of the free world and we have to lead. We have seen in other parts of the world that things do not move until the U.S. acts, in the Middle East, South Africa, and Ireland. If we do not act, war will break out again, and it could such more countries into a greater war. We saw what appeasement did in the 1930's with Hitler, and when the United States and other nations did not step in, it led to a larger war.

When we talk about the Persian Gulf war, I remember my Republican colleagues at that time saying support the President, support the President. My God, during the Persian Gulf war we sent 50,000 troops to fight in a war, and the Republicans cheered. This is 20,000 troops to keep a peace. All the warring factions have invited us in. The mission is clearly defined, and the Pentagon, which is usually skeptical about peacekeeping, supports this and says it is doable and will be successful.

The same people who predicted doom and gloom in Haiti and were wrong are predicting gloom and doom again. So my colleagues, let us not undermine our troops, let us not undermine our President. We are the leaders of the free world, not an isolationist nation.

Mr. Speaker, we should defeat the Buyer resolution and support the Hamilton resolution, which supports our troops. The button I am wearing says blessed are the peacemakers, and blessed are the peacemakers. Blessed are our brave men and women, blessed are our troops, and blessed is our Nation in the undertaking we are about to do. Nothing could be more noble than what this country does, and nothing can be more noble than to end the carnage in Bosnia.

We are coming in as peacemakers. We are making peace. We are not fighting a war. We are giving that nation a chance to put itself together. In doing so we are strengthening NATO and we are strengthening ourselves. This is not the time to turn to isolationism. We accept the leadership of the free world. Nobody anointed us with it. We wanted it. We have it. We are to act like leaders, and here in Congress, no matter what the polls say, we are elected leaders, and we have to lead.

Mr. Speaker, I think what is going on now is in the best defining interests of our country. This is a great Nation, it has always stood for what is right, and as the President says, what we are doing is the right thing to do. Defeat this resolution. Support Mr. HAMILTON.

Mr. BUYER. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as she may consume to the gentlewoman from New Jersey [Mrs. ROUKEMA].

(Mrs. ROUKEMA asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mrs. ROUKEMA. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this amendment.

Mr. Speaker, I rise as many of my colleagues before me have done, with grave reservations about the President's policy towards Bosnia and particularly has commitment to deploying at least 20,000 American service men and women to police the Bosnian peace agreement.

We all condemn the brutality perpetrated against innocent civilians in Bosnia, but President Clinton has yet to clearly explain to the American people what direct United States interest is at stake that warrants risking the lives of our servicemen and women. And, had none of our soldiers already arrived in Bosnia, I would stand here before you and argue that, without the full support of the American people behind sending United States troops to Bosnia, one lost life is one too many.

Let us not forget that, although the United States is attempting to be neutral as this peace goes forward, the United States was heavily involved in the NATO airstrikes that debilitated Serbian forces and led them to take a seat at the negotiating table. How can we be sure that American forces will not be targeted for retaliation by angry Serbians? Moreover, any attempt on our part to arm and train the Bosnian Moslems in preparation for our departure would directly contradict our spoken neutrality and put our troops at a much greater risk than that which they already face.

If our purpose in policing this peace agreement is to allow for the rebuilding of Bosnia, how can we put an arbitrary time limit of one year on United States occupation? This will accomplish little more than the unnecessary and unjustified loss of American lives, and could very well lead to a resumption of fighting once our troops are withdrawn. The ethnic and religious hatreds, in Bosnia have caused civil war and bloodshed for over 500 years. Ending this bloodshed would require an occupation force of unlimited duration, not merely 12 months. And, the argument that the war would spread to other parts of Europe without United States involvement does not carry much weight in my eyes, for how much has it spread over the past 4 years?

Congress has already voiced its overwhelming opposition to putting American ground troops in Bosnia by passing legislation that prohibits sending United States forces abroad unless Congress approves the appropriate funds for the operation.

However, the President has decided to send 20,000 servicemen and women to Bosnia over the objections of both Congress and the American people. We have a responsibility, a moral obligation, to support our Armed Forces in order to ensure that we in no way undermine their efforts but hopefully expedite their safe return home. We must offer unwavering support to the men and women of our United States forces, the greatest military in the world. Anything less on our part risks damaging the morale of our soldiers and, as we all know, strong unwavering morale is essential to unit coherence and success.

My colleagues, in closing, let me say that any of us can oppose the President's decision, as I most certainly do, but all of us must support the mission of our American forces.

Mr. BUYER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Missouri, the Honorable IKE SKELTON, co-author of this amendment, who is well respected in this body.

Mr. SKELTON. Mr. Speaker, it has been said the more emotion, the less reason. Emotion reigns. The cry is, stop the bloodshed. Fine. But it should be done right, not in a way that defies common sense and puts our troops at a high and unacceptable risk.

On November 11 I set forth eight conditions under which American forces could go to Bosnia. Two of those conditions have not been met by the U.S. policy.

One, there is no clear and understandable exit plan or policy. This gives me great concern that we could find ourselves stuck like flies stuck to flypaper. Second, the United States has formally guaranteed to arm and train the Bosnian Moslems. The United States has formally agreed to coordinate the arming and the training of these Moslem forces. This policy defies common sense, because it will cause U.S. troops to be viewed as favoring one side over the other. It will destroy our impartiality and puts our troops in danger.

The Americans will be seen as the enemy by the Serbs; the Moslems will expect a wink and a favor, and when they do not get it, they will be angry. This policy causes our troops to become targets of anger and vengeance. This policy of arming and training Bosnian Moslems, even though through a third party but guaranteed and supervised by us, concerns me.

There are three points to be considered. First, already there exists a parity between the warring factions, the Serbs on the one hand and the Croat-Moslem federation on the other. Note the recent battlefield successes by the federation.

Secondly, our allies and our military leaders in this country are not in favor of arming and training the Moslem forces. The French and British in particular are against it.

In order to have peacekeeping work, there must be trust. Trust of the former belligerents, of the impartiality of the peacekeepers. This trust and confidence will not exist so long as our government pursues the policy of supervising the arming and training of the Moslems. The U.S. field manual regarding peacekeeping states peacekeeping requires an impartial evenhanded approach. I have raised this issue with the President.

Mr. Speaker, we are sending our troops into Bosnia and putting them into an atmosphere of hostility. Serbian President Milosevic told the gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. RAMSTAD] and the gentlewoman from Missouri [Mrs. DANNER] the following: "Provisions to equip and train Bosnian Muslims are not part of the Dayton agreements. Such an effort would not be evenhanded and would be a mistake for the U.S." He went on to say, "I would ask the U.S. to reconsider the equip and train effort, as it will have no positive effect and be a waste of money. It will establish the wrong psychology in the area, preparing for war instead of preparing for peace."

Mr. Speaker, the only resolution before us to address this issue of the United States arming and training the Moslems is the Buyer-Skelton measure. It calls for the United States, in all respects, to be impartial. This present U.S. policy is placing our soldiers into the snake pit of the Balkans and angering half of the snakes. Our troops deserve to be put in an atmosphere that they expect, that of impartiality, as evenhanded peacekeepers; an atmosphere where all the warring sides will see the soldiers wearing American flags as truly impartial, where the warring sides will not see Americans as enemies and put targets on their backs.

Mr. Speaker, this policy is putting the American corporal, who is trying to settle a problem between a Serb soldier and a Moslem soldier, in an impossible and dangerous position. I urge a strong vote for the Buyer-Skelton measure.

Mr. TORRICELLI. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Colorado [Mr. SKAGGS].

Mr. SKAGGS. Mr. Speaker, tonight this House faces a choice. We can choose to support the President of the United States in his decision to help end the tragic war in Bosnia, in his decision to act with our NATO allies to stop the killing in Europe for the third time in this century, in his decision to nurture a peace that, without question, will be fraught with its own risks and dangers. Or, we can choose to desert the President at this time of challenge to American leadership, to seek moral comfort for this country in the failure of Europeans to end the slaughter, to watch the war resume, content that the vital interests of the United States might, this time, escape the blight of war in Europe. As between a problematic peace and a horrific war, I choose to support the President's courageous work for peace.

Mr. Speaker, 10 days ago, in Sarajevo, with the gentleman from Indiana and 13 others, we encountered a moving scene outside the presidential palace in Sarajevo. The long-suffering people there, tears flowing from the eyes of an older woman who had lost her son in the war, pleaded with us that only America could solve this disaster. It was a poignant reminder that this is not a problem that can be solved by Europeans without American leadership.

At lunch the next day, with Army troopers in Germany, another poignant reminder, as I listened to one young Army Specialist who told me he had taken his Thanksgiving leave to visit Dachau. And he said, "Congressman, if this country has the power to prevent that from happening again, we must do what we can." Another reminder of an earlier problem that could not be solved by the Europeans without American leadership.

So, Mr. Speaker, it is important to remember that this is not just about Bosnia. Other actors around the world are watching these events and will be taking their cue. If leaders of dispossessed ethnic groups elsewhere in Europe and in the new states of the Soviet Union see the international community unable to act effectively here, they may well challenge the compromises that have been worked out in their states and, eventually, we may lose much of what we had won in the Cold War.

This President has shown courage for taking on this difficult responsibility in the face of political risks and public opposition. A vote for this resolution to oppose this mission will only serve to encourage both the enemies of peace in Bosnia and the enemies of United States leadership in the pursuit of a decent international order.

Mr. BUYER. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from California [Mr. GALLEGLY].

(Mr. GALLEGLY asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GALLEGLY. Mr. Speaker, I stand in strong support of the Buyer-Skelton resolution.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the Buyer-Skelton resolution regarding the deployment of U.S. ground forces to Bosnia. I am concerned, however, that this resolution could provide a blank check for the further deployment of U.S. forces beyond the 20,000 we have been told are being sent.

It should come as no surprise to you that I share the strong skepticism and opposition of many of my Colleagues with respect to the commitment of United States ground forces to Bosnia. I voted for the Dornan resolution because I felt that the most emphatic way to express my opposition to the President's decision was to deny any funding for sending our troops to Bosnia before they actually began arriving in that country.

I believe the Buyer-Skelton resolution is acceptable because it does express our opposition to the President's decision while at the same time saying that the House will support the troops once they are deployed.

Even the Hamilton resolution can be acceptable because it goes directly to the issue of supporting our troops whether we agreed with the President or his decision or not.

I do not share our Commander in Chief's position. However, I do appreciate the dilemma he faces as a full partner in the NATO alliance and the responsibilities which come with that partnership.

While I agree with the President's claim that we have an interest in the future of Bosnia, I see absolutely no vital national security interest, domestic or military, being served by sending American troops into this hostile and volatile place.

Make no mistake, our troops, which will be heavily armed and expertly trained, are not going into Bosnia to keep the peace. They are going in to enforce the peace. And the act of enforcement often comes at a price. This deployment is especially dangerous because many Serbs will see our troops as being there, not as impartial arbiters, but as protectors of the Muslims.

Mr. Speaker we are at the point where the deployment of U.S. ground forces is a fait accompli. Nevertheless, it is our duty to the citizens of this nation to express our views on this matter and my view is that we should not be sending our troops to Bosnia.

Mr. BUYER. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from California [Mr. DORNAN].

(Mr. DORNAN asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DORAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of my friends, the gentleman from Missouri, IKE SKELTON, and the gentleman from Indiana, Major BUYER. And for me, obviously, I support the troops and I will be there with them at Christmas. Join me.

Mr. BUYER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from New York [Ms. MOLINARI] who accompanied me on a trip to the Balkans.

Ms. MOLINARI. Mr. Speaker, I support this resolution very clearly, because it does clearly state our opposition to the policy that has brought us here today.

This is a policy which began with an unfair, uneven arms embargo that left a people crippled, at war. It continued with a policy that reneged on the threats of air strikes to stop an aggressor waging war against civilians, and it has become a policy that allows the most vicious of war criminals to remain in the region with our troops in harm's way.

Nevertheless, despite Congress' prior stands against this policy, our troops will be in the region within a week. So tonight we are not only reiterating our opposition to that flawed policy that brought us here; we are also saying to our troops, Godspeed with your mission. It is a terrible policy, but it is a noble mission that may bring peace to a region that has not known peace and hope to a people afraid now to hope.

But, Mr. President, we are also saying in this resolution that we will be watching to make certain that everything possible is being done to ensure the safety of our troops and to see that the civilian side of rebuilding stays on course. So, you see, since there is nothing Congress can do to change the President's course, I think we have an obligation to make sure that our troops are not caught in the middle of two wars, one in Bosnia and one in Washington; and I believe that the Buyer resolution, as opposed to the other resolutions, fulfills that.

Last and most importantly, this resolution clearly states to our troops that regardless of our position on policy or on mission, that we are with them; that we are proud of them; that we are cheering for them; and that we are praying for them.

Mr. TORRICELLI. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. POSHARD].

Mr. POSHARD. Mr. Speaker, I had three serious questions I needed answered when I went to the Balkans 2 weeks ago. Do the people, including the leadership of Bosnia, Serbia, and Croatia, really want peace? Has our military mission been planned to minimize every possible risk to our men and women who are going there? And is this mission, this policy, the right thing for America?

I felt strongly the first two questions were answered affirmatively, but it is the third question, the question of policy, which I want to address. And it was on the streets of Sarajevo that the rightness of this policy became clear to me.

A crowd gathered around us in the street in front of the President's office; an elderly lady in tears, pouring out her heart, was telling us of her whole family being killed, of the babies in the building where she lived being killed by mortars.

In the anguish of an elderly man, standing not far from her, came these words. He said, "Do you not understand that only America can ensure the peace? Only if America comes will we have peace. We trust America."

Mr. Speaker, I was an 18-year-old kid in Korea, 32 years ago, 12 years after the war, with the First Cav Division keeping the peace in Korea. I remember walking around the streets of Munsani and Yongigo, and the Korean people coming up to us and saying, "Thank you for being here. If not for America, we would have no peace." I remember understanding very clearly then what America meant to people who want peace and freedom.

For the past 32 years, I have intellectualized the role of America in the world. I voted on authorizations and appropriations for foreign policy and military policy, but not until the streets of Sarajevo was I reminded again of what America means to people who are without hope.

Why did they say that only America can ensure the peace? Why did they say, standing there in the midst of ruins, knowing that 250,000 of their people were killed, that 2 million were homeless, why did they say they trust America?

What do they trust? Our superior military forces? Yes. Our leadership of the free world? Yes. Our democratic institutions? Yes. But more than that, they trust the experience of America. They trust the history of America, which no other country can match.

Look around this Chamber. We have come to this country from every nation in the world, from every background, every ethnic, every religious, every racial background.

And we have shown the world that we can live together in brotherhood, tolerating our differences and finding common ground, rather than battlegrounds, upon which to build.

We have chosen to live together, to overcome our differences, and they know that. If we, among all nations, cannot send one division among all the divisions we have in Europe to Bosnia to enforce a peace, to give people a chance to live again with one another, then what Nation will stand in our stead? What nation will give others the hope that only America can give?

If we think people, given the chance in Sarajevo, cannot live together in peace and overcome the forces of hate which inflame passions of ethnic and religious pride, then I tell my colleagues, look at Belfast, look at the Middle East. We cannot go to Sarajevo and fail to understand the faith that people have in the experiment and the experience that is America.

Mr. Speaker, the tears of that grandmother on the streets of Sarajevo are the tears of every grandmother for all time who has lost her son or daughter to wars of injustice. But they are only, in part, tears of regret. They are also tears of hope that at some time in the future someone else's grandson or granddaughter will be walking down the streets of Sarajevo glad that years ago America came and peace came with her. Oppose this resolution.

Mr. BUYER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 15 seconds to respond to the last speaker. I would say that foreign policy must be guided by our heads, not our hearts.

Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. EVANS] in the spirit of bipartisanship that brings the Buyer-Skelton amendment.

(Mr. EVANS asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. EVANS. Mr. Speaker, I oppose sending ground troops to Bosnia and support this resolution and hope that my colleagues will also.

Mr. Speaker, I oppose the decision to send ground forces to Bosnia because it will put our soldiers in the middle of an ethnic powderkeg that could explode again at any moment.

Neither the Dayton Agreement nor military force can erase the centuries of ethnic unrest and dissension that has fueled this conflict. This hatred will not cease. Even as the warring parties prepare for the implementation of the agreement, different factions have burned and looted property that will be turned back to their opponents. Can we expect the peace to last considering this level of animosity or the history of the region?

This leads me to believe that this agreement will unravel. If it does, our soldiers will be in the middle of the conflict. But even if it does last, this operation is a risky proposition. Our soldiers will face the dangers posed by some 6 million landmines, many of them scattered indiscriminately throughout the unforgiving terrain of the region. And numerous armed terrorist groups, who may not be easily controlled by the signers of the agreement, may attack our forces for their own political gains.

Considering the history of the region and the many threats our soldiers face, I cannot support this mission. I urge my colleagues to vote for the resolution.

Mr. BUYER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute and 20 seconds to the gentleman from Michigan [Mr. CHRYSLER].

Mr. CHRYSLER. Mr. Speaker, I was told today that the reason the President is sending troops to Bosnia is to "break the cycle of violence." This, alone, is not an acceptable reason to risk the lives of young Americans.

Four conditions must be met before we commit United States ground troops anywhere: First, there must be a vital national interest at stake. Mr. Speaker, there is no vital national interest at stake in Bosnia. Second, there must be a clear mission and a reasonable change of success. Mr. Speaker, there is no clear mission and no reasonable chance of success. Third, there must be a clear exit strategy. Mr. Speaker, a time line to withdraw before the next election is not an exit strategy.

Fourth, and most importantly, we must have the support of the American people, whose husbands, wives, sons, and daughters are asked to sacrifice their lives to achieve the mission.

Mr. Speaker, I have listened to the debate this evening and I have heard not one member of Congress even pretend that the American people support this deployment.

During this season of peace on earth and good will towards men, I can understand the desire to bring peace to a war torn nation. However, Mr. Speaker, I have two sons in their twenties and a daughter who just turned 18. I would not send them to die in the snows of Bosnia in support of this policy, and therefore I cannot, in good conscience, support asking other parents to do so.

Mr. TORRICELLI. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from California [Ms. HARMAN].

(Ms. HARMAN asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. HARMAN. Mr. Speaker, like the majority of my colleagues, I wish that our Bosnia policy had been focused and clear 4 years ago, before a quarter of a million people died and 3 million more became refugees.

Mr. Speaker, two presidents hesitated and the results were an arms embargo that ratified arms imbalance, a hobbled U.N., and a belated bombing campaign. Another Holocaust was occurring, but the world held back.

Time and again the Congress warned the President, and I did too. "Lift the arms embargo," we said. "Do not make a commitment of troops a precondition to peace," we said, but he chose otherwise. Now, the options are fewer, but I am clear on what course is morally correct. We must support peace.

The Dayton accord, though far from perfect, is the last option for peace in an exhausted region. I too was there last weekend and Sarajevo broke my heart. I gave my word to General Bill Crouch, Commander of the U.S. Army in Europe, to Admiral Layton "Snuffy" Smith, Commander of the NATO operation, and to Corporal Patricia Villa, Sergeant Marie LaRue, and Private First Class Don Bradley, all of California, that I would vote to support them.

Mr. Speaker, I cannot vote for a resolution that sends a confused message. I cannot vote for a resolution that prevents a separate effort to achieve military parity so the future aggression will be deterred.

I would prefer a more just peace, but it is not available. This is the peace we can achieve, and it is unpardonable to let it pass by.

Mr. BUYER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. FOLEY].

Mr. FOLEY. Mr. Speaker, I am directing this to those Americans who are watching. I want to clear up what this debate is about. Is it about America's leadership? Absolutely not. Our leadership brought the warring factions of this evil war to Dayton in an attempt to resolve their differences, but diplomacy does not include sending American troops.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman must address his remarks to the Chair, and not to people watching on television. The gentleman may proceed.

Mr. FOLEY. Mr. Speaker, diplomacy does not include sending American troops—our finest men and women—into danger. Deployment of troops relates to national security and I don't believe a national security risk exists in the Balkans.

To be the leader of the free world does not require our troops to face a brutal winter in a war zone that is littered with as many as 6 million land mines.

Is it about supporting our troops—NO. I will not, nor should one Member of this Congress, allow our troops to be left to hang out to dry. I will fight to ensure that we have no more tragedies like Somalia.

This deployment is a 2-year-old promise that the administration made, and I believe it has made our troops a bargaining chip in the negotiations.

I oppose sending Americans to Bosnia and urge my colleagues to do the same.

Mr. TORRICELLI. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin [Mr. OBEY].

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, if NATO had acted and punished Serbian aggression when it first occurred 4 years ago, we would not be here tonight; the West would not have repeated the mistakes of Munich; and, more than 200,000 people would not have died.

After almost 4 years of NATO drift, Croatian military success and NATO bombing of Serbian forces have enabled the Clinton administration to stop the killing and negotiate a peace. I steadfastly opposed the use of American ground forces there during the wartime situation, but our troops and our allies' troops are now going to police a peace.

Mr. Speaker, if they go under the Buyer approach, we will be sending a signal of uncertainty that will in my view increase the risk of attack on our troops by those who read congressional opposition as a signal that if they just kill a few Americans, we will pull the plug, just as we did in Somalia.

If my colleagues vote for Buyer, it seems to me they logically should have voted for Dornan in order to prevent the financing of the operation in the first place.

Mr. Speaker, I would urge my colleagues to lay down that uncertain trumpet and pass the Hamilton amendment clean without Buyer. Send a clear message that we will leave no doubt about the strength of our resolve.

Mr. Speaker, but by the grace of God, our souls at birth could have been infused into a body born in Bosnia rather than one born on American soil. Only an accident of birth makes us lucky enough to live out our lives as Americans.

Now our troops are going to make peace, not war in an act of mercy toward many of our fellow human beings on this globe. Do our duty tonight. It may not be popular, but it will be right and it will make our troops safer.

Support Hamilton clean, defeat Buyer. That is the best way to help our troops.

Mr. BUYER. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. BROWNBAC].

(Mr. BROWNBAC asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BROWNBAC. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the Buyer bill, supporting the troops, opposing the President's policy.

Mr. BUYER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. BLUTE].

Mr. BLUTE. Mr. Speaker, we all have concerns and trepidations about the President's ill-defined policy in that war-torn part of the world. But we have had two votes in this House that sent an unequivocal message on where we stand on that issue.

Mr. Speaker, it seems to me tonight we are way beyond that now, and for those of us who believe that the President has the constitutional authority to deploy these troops, and who oppose the War Powers Act as unconstitutional and abrogating the President's power, we must support the Buyer-Skelton resolution.

We must recognize that as we speak tonight, the planes are landing, the troops are on the ground, and many thousands more are en route. Young Americans in harm's way. Regardless of our criticism of this policy, it is time tonight to rally behind our troops and send them and any potential adversary, the message that we stand behind them 100 percent and the Congress of the United States is behind them in their mission.

Vote for Buyer-Skelton and vote for our young men and women in Bosnia.

Mr. TORRICELLI. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts [Mr. OLVER].

(Mr. OLVER asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. OLVER. Mr. Speaker, for 4 years, Americans have seen in CNN detail the concentration camps and the ethnic cleansing and the systematic slaughter of civilians. Who dares forget the mass slaughter of the males in Srebrenica, thousands of men and boys, when that U.S.-designated safe haven, swelled with refugees, was overrun by the Bosnia Serbs, all because the United Nations proved that it could not and would not stop the genocide.

Events have shown that the United States is the only power in the world that can stop such crimes. To secure peace, President Clinton has courageously put himself and America's conscience on the line. America led NATO to stop the war, America led the negotiations for peace, and now America must lead NATO in securing the peace so that wounds can heal and justice can evolve.

The United States wields such power morally as well as militarily because of how the world perceives us. As has been eloquently written, America is seen as a "good and tolerant country; a country that leaves people alone, but does not leave evil alone; a country that will find the courage to act where the courage to act is wanting. We are not the world's policeman, but we are not the world's innocent bystander. To do nothing about Bosnia would steal the meaning from the American victory in the cold war."

In the year that NATO will be in Bosnia, boundaries will be secured, warring factions separated, and 2 million refugees who want to return to their homes will be secured in their return.

Those are NATO's purposes. But the purpose of America's presence and participation with NATO is stability in Europe and peace in Bosnia to give Bosnia the opportunity to become again the multireligious, multicultural society that this tragic manufactured war was designed to destroy.

Mr. Speaker, there was a wonderful photo in the New York Times this past Sunday. Mr. Speaker, 3,000 Sarajevans, Bosnians of Catholic and Moslem and Orthodox faith, demonstrating in unity to show that after all the suffering and horror of 4 years, the idea of a multiethnic, multireligious Bosnia has survived.

The ultimate test for peace is whether Bosnians will use wisely the opportunity provided by the 1-year NATO mission to grow those 3,000 to 30,000 to 300,000 and beyond in rebuilding Bosnia. This is our time to act.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to defeat the Buyer resolution and to pass the Hamilton resolution.

Mr. BUYER. Mr. Speaker, may I inquire as to how much time I have left?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Indiana [Mr. BUYER] has 18 minutes and 10 seconds, and the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. TORRICELLI] has 12½ minutes.

Mr. BUYER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from Florida [Mrs. FOWLER].

(Mrs. FOWLER asked and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mrs. FOWLER. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of the Buyer-Skelton resolution.

I have long opposed the deployment of United States troops to Bosnia. I have twice voted against such a deployment, and have written the President, urging him not to send troops.

I believe that our Nation's interests in Bosnia are important. I have supported the involvement of our sea and air forces, our intelligence and logistics assets, and our most diligent diplomatic efforts. But I have never felt our interests were so vital that they warranted putting our ground troops at risk.

Accordingly, I voted for the Dornan measure to oppose the provision of funds to carry out this mission.

However, while I supported the Dornan legislation, I recognize that the President will disregard it. Thus, I will also vote for the Buyer-Skelton resolution. If our troops are going to go—and there is no doubt that they will—the first are already there they should be certain of our commitment to ensure they have every resource necessary to accomplish their mission.

I urge the House to support this measure.

□ 2115

Mr. BUYER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from South Carolina [Mr. SPENCE], chairman of the Committee on National Security.

(Mr. SPENCE asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SPENCE. Mr. Speaker, I have heard Members say on the floor this evening that we should support peace. When I think back, we have supported peace all over this world in recent times. We supported peace in Lebanon, in Somalia. We had people killed in both places because of it. We withdrew.

It is easy for Members to get up here and say that they have concern for people who are being killed in other places throughout the world. Somehow or another they divorce that from the killing of our own people in the process. Mr. Speaker, I do not represent those people in Bosnia. I represent people back here. The lives of our people are more important than the others. It just comes down to that.

Mr. BUYER. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. BARRETT].

(Mr. BARRETT of Nebraska asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BARRETT of Nebraska. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of the Buyer-Skelton resolution.

Bosnia, a name, that up until a few years ago, was rarely mentioned on the House floor, and most of us probably couldn't have found it on a map. Yet, today, U.S. troops are going there to help make sure it continues to exist because it has suddenly become in our national security interest to do so.

None of us who've searched our hearts can say that there haven't been crimes against humanity in Bosnia. None of us want to see those crimes ever happen again.

The President has decided that committing the United States and our NATO allies will put a stop to the slaughter of innocent Bosnians. Perhaps, but for how long?

However, when committing a democratic government, such as ours, to a policy, Congress too has to show a commitment. In the last Congress, we urged the President to lift the arms embargo. In this Congress, we've told the President on several occasions not to send ground troops unless he gets our approval first. Yet, the President took no action on the embargo and ignored us regarding the troops.

We're being asked now to support this policy because the troops are on their way to Bosnia.

This begs the question: Can we support the troops knowing that the policy they, and we, are being asked to uphold is wrong? Can a civil war that has been raging for centuries be cured by a 1-year stay of foreign forces?

The White House has claimed the President is showing leadership, that as the leader of NATO we, as a nation, must also show leadership, that as the only remaining world's superpower, we must show leadership.

But, is being lead into a swamp with no clear path out leadership? Will NATO remain intact when this policy fails? Will the world question our leadership even more when we pull out and Bosnia resumes its bloody civil and ethnic war?

Our troops could end up paying the price of our leadership with their lives. Our troops must understand that we will support them, as we've always done, but that we have no confidence in the President's policy that put them there. This message must be made crystal clear to the President and our troops.

Mr. BUYER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from Mississippi [Mr. Montgomery], a very respected Member of this institution.

Mr. MONTGOMERY. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the bipartisan Buyer-Skelton resolution that expresses opposition to the President's policy to deploy 20,000 members of the United States Armed Forces to Bosnia.

Mr. Speaker, I do not support putting American forces on the ground but since the deployment has begun, I agree with the Buyer provisions that say that the President and Secretary of Defense shall rely on the judgment of the United States commander in Bosnia.

This resolution, Mr. Speaker, makes it very clear that despite our opposition to the President's mission, we stand behind the brave men and women who serve in Bosnia and, also, God bless these great Americans.

I point out to this group tonight, they are all volunteers and they are serving under the American flag.

Mr. TORRICELLI. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan, [Mr. Levin].

(Mr. LEVIN asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. Speaker, if I might, let me share what I learned in Bosnia. First, Dayton is a declaration of peace, not war. Second, there are serious self-interests on the part of all the three parties. The Dayton agreement was reached but not primarily made in America. For each of those parties, there is a clear self-interest.

Third, the U.S. military is supported. As one general said to us, we can do the job. It is a task defined, limited and achievable, and they have authority to take whatever force is necessary to protect our troops.

If Members vote to reject Dayton, what they are saying is not only no to the Commander in Chief but no to the military leadership of our nation. They helped draft this plan.

There is some risk in peace. There is also risk in renewed war, the risk of a renewed war in Europe spilling over beyond Bosnia and the renewed risk of genocide.

I would like to say to my friend from Indiana, yes, we have to make policy with our heads, hard-headed ways.

Americans also have a heart, and the prospect of renewed genocide is something that should not be ignored.

Finally, I want to say there is an exit strategy. It is very clear. If the parties who have chosen peace continue on that path, we will help them. If they choose to renew war, we are going to get out and get out fast.

I urge support of Hamilton and that we vote against Buyer.

Mr. BUYER. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Maine [Mr. LONGLEY] a comrade of mine from the Gulf war.

(Mr. LONGLEY asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. LONGLEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the President's policies and in support of the troops.

Mr. BUYER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. GILCHREST].

Mr. GILCHREST. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the Buyer-Skelton resolution. This is not a Tonkin Gulf resolution. The situation we are debating here is not about Beirut. It is not about Somalia. It is not about Haiti.

There are risks in this policy of our intervention. There are profound unknowns. Does the military, and this is the question we need to ask, have the force necessary to meet those risks, to meet those unknowns? We want to make sure that they do. Is there a chance in this situation for a profound change in a positive way in this world as a result of our efforts? The answer should be yes, can be yes, must be yes.

The policy up to this point, in my judgment, has been haphazard and indecisive. The Buyer-Skelton resolution allows us from this point on to be decisive, clear. And as we go through this dark tunnel together, let us all hold this torch high to light the way and chase away the demons.

Mr. TORRICELLI. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from Connecticut [Mrs. KENNELLY].

Mrs. KENNELLY. Mr. Speaker, tonight we are at a very important point in the history of the United States of America, the point that many would not have chosen to come upon. But now is that moment and we must involve ourselves. Why?

Mr. Speaker, yesterday in this Chamber, Shimon Peres, Israel's prime minister, appealed for American leadership in the world. Today, as we debate the appropriate use of American power in bringing an end to 4 years of bloodshed and suffering in Bosnia, we would do well to remember the prime minister's words. "You cannot escape that which America alone can do," he said. "America alone can keep the world free . . ."

We are, as is frequently observed, the world's only superpower. We possess a potent combination of military and moral authority. But possession is not enough: we must also exercise our authority when the occasion demands it. This administration has done that.

American leadership brought the warring parties to the peace table, and American leadership must ensure that this peace process survives. Failure to lead would guarantee the continuation—even the expansion of bloodshed. It would endanger the future of NATO, an organization that has brought nearly four decades of peace to Europe.

But perhaps worst, failure to lead would undercut our reputation for steadfastness in the pursuit of peace throughout the world. It would signal that we shrink from our responsibilities, instead of shouldering the burdens that accompany leadership.

We must demand more of ourselves. As President Clinton said, "We cannot stop all war for all time; but we can stop some wars. We cannot save all women and all children; but we can save many of them. We can't do everything; but we must do what we can."

In the three wars that shaped this century—World War I, World War II, and the cold war—America achieved victory because we were willing to exercise leadership. Now we have another opportunity to lead—this time to shape the peace that will govern the next century. I urge my colleagues to shoulder this responsibility and seize this opportunity. I will oppose the Buyer resolution which does not support this opportunity to preserve a lasting peace. I urge my colleagues to support the Hamilton resolution and ensure that peace will remain in Bosnia.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BUNNING of Kentucky). The Chair would advise that the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. BUYER] has 14 minutes and 10 seconds remaining, and the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. TORRICELLI] has 8½ minutes remaining.

Mr. BUYER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. FOX].

Mr. FOX of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the Buyer-Skelton resolution which recognizes the fact that the American public still has reservations about the President's policy in Bosnia but wholeheartedly supports our troops who are there. There are serious reservations about what the precise mission of our forces is, what are the specific rules of engagement, what will happen when NATO forces leave and what is our national interest there. While questions remain regarding these questions I have raised, we support our troops, our sons and daughters that have been sent to Bosnia. We completely back them to make sure that they have equipment, the resources and tools that they need. We need to make sure we protect them so that the mission will be speedily and successfully handled.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, I hope and pray that we will soon see a permanent end to the hostilities and atrocities, relief for the war's victims, justice at the war crimes tribunal, and the safe and speedy return of our brave soldiers. Support Buyer-Skelton.

Mr. BUYER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. MCCOLLUM], former naval commander.

Mr. MCCOLLUM. Mr. Speaker, I rise tonight in very strong support of the Buyer resolution. I think it is very clear, despite the opposition of many of us, that the President is going to put the troops in Bosnia and that the votes today are not here to avoid that happening.

I want to join with my colleagues in supporting our men and women in uniform over there. I believe while they are there we owe them that obligation. But that in no measure means that I, nor many of you, believe they should be there. It is a very dangerous and I think highly inappropriate use of military force. It is dangerous because our troops on the ground in Bosnia are going to be the subject and targets of radical Moslem terrorists who have another agenda, and it is inappropriate because there is no vital United States military interest there.

We cannot afford to be the policemen of the world. And there is no realistic expectation that when our troops leave, there will not be a resumption of the civil war over there. I believe in supporting our men and women, but I simply cannot condone nor support the operation that is going on over there. I think the Buyer resolution strikes the right balance under the circumstances tonight. I strongly support it.

Mr. BUYER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. BURTON], prospective and former Army sergeant.

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, observation. Our troops are going and there is nothing we are going to be able to do about it. One of the things that concerns me is that we do not profit from history.

We went into Beirut and we lost 241 Marines blown all to heck, trying to solve their problems that are of an age-old nature. We went into Somalia and got involved in a civil conflict there and guys driving around on pickup trucks with machine guns in the back drove us out of there. Aided, the tyrant, the tribal leader, is still in power over there and we spent hundreds of millions of dollars. And we pulled out and we did not solve that problem.

And now we are going into a quagmire much greater than either one of those, believing that we are going to solve those problems. We are not going to solve those problems. A year from now we will probably pull out and the war will go on and people will continue to die and we will have lost a lot of young men and women unnecessarily.

So tonight all I want to say, because this is a fait accompli, is God bless those soldiers and God bless their parents and loved ones.

Mr. BUYER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. LAHOOD].

(Mr. LAHOOD asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. LaHOOD. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to speak on the president's plan to deploy United States troops to Bosnia.

While I am opposed to sending troops to enforce a fragile peace in a region plagued by war and mired in ethnic conflict, I do want to be clear that I am fully supportive of the troops that will be on the ground.

I believe, Mr. Speaker, that the troops on the ground need and deserve our full support, so that as they head into harm's way they will have the assurance that the thoughts of those at home are with them.

Offering support for the troops, however, does not mean that Congress has no role in the troop deployment or is relinquishing its role in the area of foreign policy.

Mr. SPEAKER. I would also like to mention that my constituent, Sgt. Mathew Chipman, of Beardstown, IL, was one of the first army personnel to set foot on Bosnian soil.

His picture was in the front page of every newspaper in the country.

Sgt. Chipman is a long time veteran of the army with many years of service. Mr. Speaker, I am very proud of Sgt. Chipman and his family. He will be in our thoughts and prayers.

Indeed, Congress does have a role in foreign policy. At the very least. It is incumbent on the President to come before both Houses of Congress and present his plan on deploying troops to the former Yugoslavia, as well as his plan defining the mission and exit strategy for those troops.

Historically, before committing large numbers of U.S. troops to crisis areas overseas, it has been customary for the President to seek the consent of Congress before initiating a deployment of military forces.

In this case, the President has not sought approval of Congress for his actions, yet, the President intends to fly to Paris today for the purpose of signing a treaty that will obligate over 20,000 troops for operations in Bosnia.

If the President, with or without Congressional approval, intends to place American troops in harm's way—and it appears that this is what he intends to do—then I urge the President, in consultation with Congress, to articulate a clear mission statement and to define an achievable exit strategy.

Our troops on the ground need to know precisely what it is that they are being asked to do—and Congress deserves a role in making that determination.

Mr. BUYER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Georgia, [Mr. CHAMBLISS], a member of the Committee on National Security.

(Mr. CHAMBLISS asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. CHAMBLISS. Mr. Speaker, this has been a very difficult decision that we have had to deal with, the deployment of troops to Bosnia. I, along with the gentleman from Missouri, [Mr. SKELTON], and the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. BUYER], have sat in the Committee on National Security over the last several weeks and we have asked very serious questions of the administration.

Those are the same questions that have been alluded to by Mr. SKELTON earlier. Those questions simply have not been answered. I voted in favor of the Dornan amendment earlier. That vote by me in favor of the Dornan amendment was a statement. It was a statement that, Mr. President, you have not provided the information satisfactory to this Congress to authorize this Congress to vote in favor of deploying troops to Bosnia.

In spite of that, that decision has been made. That decision is behind us now, as the gentleman from Indiana, [Mr. BURTON], just said. It is time now to move on. When we move on, we must leave this House, leaving nothing unturned, but giving our unconditional support to the troops, the brave men and women in Bosnia. The Buyer-Skelton resolution does that. I urge support of that resolution.

Mr. TORRICELLI. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from California [Ms. PELOSI].

Ms. PELOSI. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me time.

Mr. Speaker, 50 years ago when the reality of the holocaust came to light, people of conscience said never again to ethnic cleansing and to genocide. These abhorrent actions have continued despite this promise. I believe that the world can no longer turn a blind eye to Bosnia and the tragedies that are there. That is why I commend President Clinton for his leadership, support the troops for their courage, and will support the Hamilton amendment.

I rise in opposition to the resolution on the floor at this time, because I believe our country can be proud of the leadership in bringing the warring parties to the conflict in Bosnia to the negotiating table and for the successful conclusion of the Bosnian peace talks. Now we should join with other nations in ensuring that the peace agreement can be implemented.

Mr. Speaker, the United States does have a national interest in peace in the former Yugoslavia. As the world's lone superpower, we have the obligation to lead. Several hundred thousand innocent children, men and women have died in the conflict in Bosnia. The war must stop.

At stake if the United States does not participate in the Bosnian peace process are the role of the United States as a world leader, the future viability of NATO, and the risk of reigniting the conflagration in Bosnia. A continuing Bosnian conflict threatens to spread killing and destruction to other European states. The terrible acts of ethnic cleansing and brutal atrocities challenge the conscience of us all.

Is the Bosnian mission without danger and risk? No. With strong leadership, there are always risks. These risks have been minimized, and they are risks for peace, risks for ending years of bloodshed, risks for freedom. We risk far more by failing to act. We risk far more if we allow the tenuous peace to collapse and watch the flames of war ignite again.

For this reason I oppose this resolution, urge support of the Hamilton resolution, and commend President Clinton for this leadership.

Mr. BUYER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Nebraska [Mr. BEREUTER] for the perspective of a former Army infantry first lieutenant.

(Mr. BEREUTER asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BEREUTER. Mr. Speaker, I think we need to have a summary of what the Buyer-Skelton resolution really does for I think it is being lost in some of the rhetoric here. It has two parts.

First is a reiteration of votes that the House has already taken on October 30 and November 17. The second is a policy statement which I think all Members should be able to support. First of all, it is an expression of confidence, pride and admiration in members of the U.S. armed services.

Second, it reinforces the need to respect the judgment of the military leadership in the field. After Somalia, that kind of debacle suggests this kind of policy advice from the Congress is essential.

Third, it reinforces the policy that proper weaponry and logistical support must be provided to our troops in the field. Again, after the Somalia debacle, that kind of advice from the Congress is entirely essential and appropriate.

Mr. Speaker, there is no vital interest for the United States in Bosnia. I very much approve of the Buyer-Skelton resolution, and ask all of my colleagues to support it.

Mr. TORRICELLI. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from New York [Mr. NADLER].

(Mr. NADLER asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. NADLER. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the Hamilton resolution as one who has spoken out for the last 4 years urging that we do the one thing that would enable the people of Bosnia to defend themselves against organized aggression, violence, rape, torture and genocide; lift the arms embargo. This was not done. Tragically, the war and the mass murders continued.

By maintaining the arms embargo, which prevented the Bosnians from defending themselves against aggression and genocide, we incurred a heavy moral burden. We now have one final chance to meet that burden, to end the killing, to stop the genocide, and to restore peace. Let us meet the obligation we incurred, least it be said the United States did nothing to stop the genocide. Let us give peace a chance, let us support the President, let us support the Hamilton resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. (Mr. BUNNING of Kentucky). The gentleman from Indiana [Mr. BUYER] has 8½ minutes remaining and the right to close, and the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. TORRICELLI] has 5½ minutes remaining.

Mr. BUYER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. LAUGHLIN] a present colonel in the U.S. Army Reserve.

(Mr. LAUGHLIN asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. LAUGHLIN. Mr. Speaker, I supported the Dornan amendment because I believe the President of the United States, our Commander-in-Chief, has not given us the vital national interest reasons to put our troops in Bosnia.

On the very day President Kennedy stopped the Russian troops off the coast of Cuba, many of my classmates and I signed our contracts to be members of the U.S. Army. History proved President Kennedy right.

Later my three brothers and I volunteered during the Vietnam era. All three of my brothers went to Vietnam. I was sent elsewhere. History proved us wrong when we believed vital national interests were involved there.

Later I supported the Persian Gulf war. History proved us right on vital national interests there.

Today we are asking young men and women of America to become targets of opportunity for a civil war in Bosnia, and history will provide those of us who oppose this policy right. The President of the United States, our Commander-in-Chief, has not demonstrated any vital national interest for the brave young men and women who have risked their lives in defense of freedom to go to Bosnia. I ask support of the Buyer-Skelton resolution.

Mr. BUYER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. MCHALE] a comrade of mine from the Persian Gulf war, for the perspective of a lieutenant colonel in the Marine Corps.

Mr. MCHALE. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me time.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of the Buyer-Skelton resolution. As I have listened to the oppositions voiced by many of my good friends and colleagues, I have to wonder whether they have read the resolution. In fact, there are two elements, Mr. Speaker, contained in this resolution.

The first element is one of opposition to the policy. The simple fact of the matter is the vast majority of the Members of the House opposed the decision to deploy. But the second element is far more important. Let me speak with passion on that issue. A few days ago I watched an interview on CNN of a lieutenant colonel named Bronco Lane, and he said whatever people think of the mission, he urged support for his men, for his soldiers.

We are a good and powerful Nation, and whatever may divide us in the House this evening, the message we communicate to Colonel Lane and to those who might inflict harm on his soldiers is that once Americans go to war, we come together as a Nation. The resources necessary to accomplish the mission, those requested by the field commander, will be provided. Those are the elements of this resolution.

Mr. Speaker, I urge strong support for our soldiers. I urge an affirmative vote on the Buyer-Skelton resolution.

Mr. BUYER. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. TIAHRT].

(Mr. TIAHRT asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. TIAHRT. Mr. Speaker, I rise in favor of the Buyer-Skelton resolution.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of the Buyer-Skelton resolution. The President has developed a policy committing our troops without the consultation of Congress or the consent of the American people. Young men like Kempty Watson and Todd Beeson, both from Arkansas City, KS, have been required to go above and beyond the call of duty.

Mr. Watson and Mr. Beeson, are not defending the border of this great country. Nor are they being required to defend the Constitution of the United States of America. There is no vital American interest in Bosnia. This mission is truly above and beyond the call of duty. They are heroes, as is every American who served in Bosnia. They serve regardless of the policy.

Watson, Beeson, and others, like those men and women who serve in the 1st Armored Division, follow the Commander in Chief and do so professionally like no others in the world.

This resolution supports all our fine men and women in the U.S. Armed Forces, 100 percent.

But this resolution also strongly opposed the policy the President has forced on the American public.

Mr. Speaker, I disapprove of the President's policy. There are many ways to lead the world, lead NATO, present peace, without putting our troops in harm's way.

Therefore I support the Buyer-Skelton resolution and our troops.

Mr. TORRICELLI. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from American Samoa [Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA].

(Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. FALEOMAVAEGA. Mr. Speaker, I do not want to make a play on words with the issue that is now before this body. Mr. Speaker, I was moved by the remarks earlier made by the gentleman from California [Mr. CUNNINGHAM]. We share a similar sense of anger and frustration in our experiences as Vietnam veterans, although I was not a war hero like my good friend from California. But all I know is that we could have been among the 58,000 dead soldiers and sailors whose names are honored at the Vietnam Memorial.

Mr. Speaker, our problem with Vietnam, Lebanon, and Somalia was not because we did not have the resources to protect and sustain our troops. It was because of poor military planning and execution by both our civilian and military leaders here in Washington.

Mr. Speaker, I hope to God we will not have another Secretary of Defense make a confession to the world and to the American people that it was wrong for us to be in Vietnam. I consider it an insult to the names of every soldier who died in Vietnam to tell that to the faces of the parents and relatives of those who died there in Vietnam.

Mr. Speaker, it is obvious the Dayton agreement is not perfect. Our President has spoken well, given leadership. I ask that we sustain the Hamilton resolution with caution, as expressed by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. SKELTON].

Mr. Speaker, I don't want to make a play on words with the issue that is now before this body.

I believe it is appropriate that Congress fulfill its constitutional responsibility by deliberating the merits of the resolution now before us.

Mr. Speaker, I was moved by the remarks expressed earlier by the gentleman from California [Mr. CUNNINGHAM]. We share a similar sense of anger and frustration in our experiences as Vietnam veterans, although I was not a war hero like my friend from California. But all I know is that we could have been among the 58,000 dead soldiers and sailors whose names are honored at the Vietnam Memorial.

Mr. Speaker, our problems with Vietnam, Lebanon, and Somalia was not because we did not have the resources to protect and sustain our troops.—It was because of poor military planning and execution by both our civilian and military leaders here in Washington.

Mr. Speaker, I hope to God we will not have another Secretary of Defense make a confession to the world and the American people—and that is after the fact, that the United States was wrong to be in Vietnam. I consider it an insult to the names of every soldier who died in Vietnam. Perhaps former Secretary McNamara should tell that to the faces of the parents and relatives of those brave soldiers who gave their lives because of misguided policies that our political leaders dreamed up here in Washington.

Mr. Speaker, it is obvious that the Dayton agreement is not a perfect document, and I sincerely hope our President will not be blinded by the concerns appropriately addressed by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. SHELTON].

Mr. Speaker, it is quite obvious that our President is not running an opinion poll or is trying to compete in a popularity contest. I commend our President for his global leadership on this important issue.

Mr. Speaker, I ask my colleagues to support the Hamilton resolution, but to recognize also the concerns raised earlier by the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. SHELTON].

Mr. Speaker, without United States leadership and participation, no peace is possible in Bosnia.

For nearly 4 years, a horrifying war has torn Bosnia apart. The world has witnessed the murder of 250,000 innocent men, women, and children there, while over 2 million people have been forced from their homes and made refugees.

Yesterday, like many other members, I was deeply touched by Israeli Prime Minister Shimon Peres' address before Congress. Prime Minister Peres noted the United States has saved the world from three of its greatest menaces: German Nazism, Japanese Militarism, and Soviet communism.

In honoring America, Prime Minister Peres stated, "You did it. You brought freedom. You defended it. Even in this very day, as Bosnia reels in agony, you offered a compass and a lamp to a confused situation like in the Middle East. Nobody else was able or ready to do it. You enabled many nations to save their democracies even as you strive now to assist nations to free themselves from their nondemocratic past."

"America," stated Prime Minister Peres, "In my judgment, cannot escape what history has laid on your shoulders, on the shoulders of each and every one of you. You cannot escape that which America can alone do. America alone can keep the world free and assist nations to assume the responsibility for their own fate."

Mr. Speaker, Prime Minister Peres has it right. Throughout history, America has always stood for peace and freedom and what is right. In Bosnia, we and our allies are not going to fight a war, but to protect a peace.

Without American Leadership, there would be no peace agreement. Without American troop participation, this peace agreement will not be carried out. As the leader of the free world, America cannot shirk its responsibility to end the suffering in Bosnia, to stop the spread of war to Europe, and to ensure a lasting peace.

The President has committed the United States to the Bosnia mission. As former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger recently stated, "I now believe that if we do not honor the President's words, the threat to our security would be greater because nobody would believe that we are capable of conducting a serious foreign policy."

Mr. Speaker, with American leadership and credibility on the line, we cannot just cut and run from our duty to lead. It is time that we support our President and our troops in providing light and hope to this dark part of the world.

Mr. TORRICELLI. Mr. Speaker, I yield the balance of our time to the gentleman from Maryland [Mr. HOYER], the gentleman who has served as the conscience of this Congress on the carnage in Bosnia.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BUNNING of Kentucky). The gentleman from Maryland is recognized for 4½ minutes.

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Speaker, in August 1990, Saddam Hussein invaded Kuwait. The President, a few days later, determined that he would deploy troops to oppose aggression in the Persian gulf, and we as a Nation and as a Congress were united in that deployment. That deployment occurred during August, September, October, November, and December, and over 400,000 troops were sent. The Democratic leadership and the Republican leadership stood together in support of that deployment to oppose aggression.

We did so as a united nation. Yes; there was a vote in January as to whether to go to war, and in a bipartisan vote we determined that the President would have the authority to do so. The President acted, and the Congress shortly thereafter, some few days, passed a resolution, with over 400 of us voting to support the troops and their success.

Mr. Speaker, I believe it is in our national interest to participate in the effort in Bosnia for several reasons. First, our President has told our allies and the warring parties that we would do so. America's credibility and our leadership in the world would be severely undermined if we do not.

The risk for peace is one that the Western alliance and the United States should be willing to take now and in the future. The NATO alliance under United States leadership remains, my colleagues, the stabilizing force in Europe, and it must be kept ready, united, and maintain its will to deter aggression and establish peace.

I suggest to you, my friends, it would be immoral to stand by in the face of the carnage and the rape and the murder and the genocide and the tragedy that is Bosnia.

My colleagues on the Republican side of the aisle, my fellow Americans, if you will, President George Bush recently stated:

It is in our national interest to maintain the integrity of the United States; credibility in the world. If the President shifts direction now or if it is seen that the President does not have the support of Congress, our standing as leader of the free world and the standing of NATO would be dramatically diminished.

President Bush concluded his remarks by saying "That must not happen."

I will oppose the Buyer-Skelton resolution. They are men of integrity, and they serve their people well. But I am not opposed to the President's policy. It is not my policy. I wanted to lift the arms embargo. I wanted to give to the Bosnian people the right and the ability to defend their homes. I think President Bush and President Clinton were wrong in not supporting that policy. But the issue today is that the President has chosen a policy, and it is not Somalia, where there was no agreement among the warring parties, it is not Lebanon, where there was no agreement among the factions. It is a place in this world where parties brought together by the President of the United States have agreed on peace.

I believe it is worth a risk for peace. I hope many of my colleagues were here yesterday. Shimon Peres spoke to a joint session of Congress. He said to us, as a country, that we saved freedom. He went on to say that wars did not cause us to lose heart, triumphs did not corrupt us, and we remained unspoiled because we rejected the spoils of victory.

He then talked about the risks for peace taken by his friend Yitzhak Rabin and his country, and he observed that just a few years ago he could not have conceived of reaching out to Yasser Arafat, a Palestinian, his enemy of centuries. Not the Arab and the Jews. For centuries. And now he believes there is a chance for peace, and he said that it was worth risking peace because it was more important to win the peace than to win elections.

Mr. Speaker, I think that is the decision our President has made. That is the decision I will support, and that is why I will oppose this resolution.

Mr. BUYER. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Missouri, [Mr. SKELTON], for a dialog.

Mr. SKELTON. Mr. Speaker, I would ask the gentleman, does he agree with me that there has been no credible answer or response to my raising the issue of arming and training the Bosnian Moslems, which puts our troops at risk?

Mr. BUYER. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will yield, I would respond to the gentleman that there has been no credible response in this debate to his question.

Mr. BUYER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Illinois, HENRY HYDE, for the perspective of a former commander of the naval reserves, a hero of World War II.

(Mr. HYDE asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, very simply, this is a good resolution. It does two things: It expresses the dissent that so many of us feel from the policy implemented by the President in Bosnia. That is all it does.

It does not cut any funds, as the Dornan resolution did. In fact, it supports giving our troops all of the resources necessary to carry out their mission safely. So it fully expresses my own views, although I did support the Dornan resolution as the last, best, and only opportunity to keep our young men from going into this morass of ethnic and religious hatred that has been simmering for over 500 years on the off chance that they are out of breath now and they have a cease-fire.

Mr. Speaker, this resolution perfectly states my views in opposition but in support of the troops. So I strongly support and urge my colleagues support for the Buyer-Skelton resolution.

Mr. BUYER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself the balance of the time.

Mr. Speaker, first of all, let me extend a compliment to my friend and colleague, the gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. TORRICELLI], for his demeanor and his statesmanlike conduct in how he has handled the debate. Just let me compliment the gentleman for that.

This is a debate about two very distinct views of foreign policy. There are those of us who tie the use of military to vital national security interests because we believe that placing troops in harm's way on foreign soil is of no ordinary magnitude. The other is the Clinton administration would like for the United States to become the world's policeman and the guarantor of global security.

U.S. troops should only be used on the ground to ensure regional security, not to intervene in civil wars which have no real threat of spreading to that instability of a region. While I have heard the argument, it rings hollow.

The United States, as the world's only superpower must exercise a policy of restraint in our involvement in conflicts overseas. Ours is a responsibility to provide overall military and economic security to regions of the world. If the United States intervenes in intracontinental conflicts, regional powers are allowed to escape their responsibilities.

When will Europe take a role in policing its own region? The answer is when Europe no longer has the expectation that the United States will be there to rescue them whenever they have a problem.

Mr. Speaker, we are closing this century now. For the fourth time, the United States will be on the ground in Europe. Think of that, for the fourth time. Truly, Europe can be a quarrelsome bunch and the United States leadership in NATO unifies and strengthens Europe. But as my colleagues know, the United States must send a message that the post-cold-war policies and doctrine for the security of Europe must reflect 1995, not 1945.

The United States has a key and vital role to play in the peace process, and I compliment the President of the United States for bringing the parties to the table. The role for which we should play is do not put troops on the ground.

The United States should act responsibly in the cohesion of NATO; the IFOR commander should be a commander from Europe, not the United States. The United States should supply our air power, our seapower, our airlift, our sealift, our intelligence, the architecture of intelligence from the sky and our satellites and logistics, but not that on the ground. However, when U.S. forces deploy on the ground as peacekeepers, we go there without the protection of neutrality, and they become targets and casualties.

There are those who have claimed the moral obligation. Well, let me say this. When we view disasters in this country, whether it be by tornado, hurricane, earthquake, fire, you name it, we see that destruction and it is repulsive to us, but we understand it because we say it is a natural disaster. However, when we look and view what mankind can do to one another, it is violent to our values. But if we permit our foreign policy to be guided by our hearts, then the United States will find our troops in over 67 hot spots throughout the world.

If we want the United States to become the world's policeman, just say so. I do not believe that the United States can be the world's policeman.

When I was in Sarajevo, a mother, yes, cried and wept in my arms to communicate to me that she lost a son. That is moving to me. But it is also just as moving when I go to the funerals of American soldiers and have to be able to look into the eyes of an American mother and be able to communicate to her that her son or her daughter has given that life to protect vital national security interests. That is why we tie foreign troops' commitments to vital national security interests, because we cannot be everywhere in the world.

Mr. Speaker, this resolution is very clear. It is clear because we say we are reiterating a policy from before, where we stated we oppose U.S. ground troops. We want to intervene, but we do not agree with that policy. We believe we have the confidence in these troops that they will do their job. They are gallant, they are brave and they are courageous.

We also do not want a repeat of Somalia. I have spoken with a father who lost his son. We do not want that.

We want the President and the Secretary of Defense to rely upon the field commanders when they make military decisions. We also want to make sure they get the resources and the equipment they need to do their job.

Last is a paradox, and that is if we are going to arm and train the Moslems, then we should take sides. And if we do that, then we do not go on the ground. If we want to go on the ground, then we do not arm and train the Moslems. But to do both or to claim that somehow we will get other countries to do it, and our pawprints are all over it, subjects and opens our American soldiers to become targets and casualties, and it is wrong.

Please support the Buyer-Skelton resolution. God bless us all.

Mr. PORTMAN. Mr. Speaker, as the tragedy of the Balkan conflict has unfolded before us in the newspapers, on television, and here, on the floor of the House, I have spent many hours talking with constituents, talking to colleagues, and thinking through the appropriate United States response, as well as the appropriate role for Congress. I continue to believe that the deployment of U.S. ground troops is the wrong approach. I do think the United States has an interest in stopping the fighting and in preserving NATO. But I also believe that military instability in Bosnia and Herzegovina presents tantamount risk to our ground troops and throws into question the achievability of our mission there. A more appropriate U.S. role might have been limited to logistical support and providing air cover.

It is, of course, crucial that Congress voice its support for our troops, for our young men and women who are already in Bosnia. And as much as I disagree with President Clinton about some of his foreign policy decisions, I think when you elect a President as Commander in Chief, you have to give some flexibility.

Tonight I will reluctantly vote against H.R. 2770, Representative DORAN's bill to cut off all funding for our troops, primarily because I think it is not fair to our men and women in uniform who are already there. It would be irresponsible for Congress to jeopardize the safety of those already deployed and the thousands more that are in the process of being deployed—regardless of this vote—in the coming weeks. I think of Annah Castellini, a constituent and graduate of West Point, who is headed to Bosnia soon as a platoon leader. Remembering the Vietnam era, she worries about whether the American people will support her.

Further, I do feel that the passage of H.R. 2770 begins to infringe on the President's power as Commander in Chief and could threaten confidence in U.S. leadership. I think it would be unwise at this time to send conflicting messages to the factions of the Balkan conflict and the rest of the world.

In my opinion, the Buyer resolution, House Resolution 302, strikes a better balance between opposing the decision to send them, yet supporting our troops in their duties. I will support Buyer. I cannot support House Resolution 306, the Hamilton resolution, because it implicitly expresses support, not just for the troops, but also for the President's decision to send them.

Former President Bush said recently, "Sincere people can have honest differences as to whether President Clinton has made the right decision. I am nevertheless certain in my mind that at this point we must support our troops—and that support should come from Republicans and Democrats alike." I agree. As one who believes President Clinton made the wrong decision, I nonetheless will support our troops in any way I can and pray for their safe return.

Mr. TORKILDSEN. Mr. Speaker, I rise this evening in support of the resolution offered by my colleagues from Indiana and Missouri.

Earlier tonight, I voted against the resolution sponsored by my colleague from California because it sent the wrong message to our troops already in Bosnia, as well as those on their way in the coming days. We cannot take away their ability to defend themselves.

I strongly support the Buyer-Skelton resolution which expresses our opposition to the President's Bosnia mission. Yet, this resolution does so without undermining our troops already there, and those troops that will be there by the time this resolution is agreed to by both the House and Senate. This resolution specifically states that our troops in Bosnia will have the resources and support they need to protect themselves until we bring them home.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BUNNING). Pursuant to section 3 of House Resolution 304, the previous question is ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the resolution.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. BUYER. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

SENSE OF HOUSE REGARDING DEPLOYMENT OF ARMED FORCES TO BOSNIA

Mr. HAMILTON. Mr. Speaker, pursuant to House Resolution 304, I offer a resolution (H. Res. 306) expressing the Sense of the House of Representatives regarding the deployment of United States Armed Forces in Bosnia, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the resolution.

The text of House Resolution 306 is as follows:

H. RES. 306

Whereas the President of the United States pledged to commit the United States Armed Forces to participate in implementing a peace agreement in Bosnia and Herzegovina;

Whereas the United States hosted Proximity Talks in Dayton, Ohio, from November 1, 1995 through November 21, 1995, for the purpose of allowing the negotiation of a peaceful settlement to the longstanding conflict in the former Yugoslavia;

Whereas the Proximity Talks concluded with the Presidents of the Republic of Bosnia and Herzegovina, the Republic of Croatia, and the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia initialing a General Framework Agreement for Peace on November 21, 1995;

Whereas the Presidents of the Republic of Bosnia and Herzegovina, the Republic of Croatia, and the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia have requested a NATO-led implementation force with United States participation and have pledged full cooperation with this force;

Whereas some Members of Congress have questions and concerns about certain aspects of the peace implementation process; and

Whereas the Congress joins the President in wanting to minimize the risks to the United States Armed Forces helping to implement the peace agreement in the former Yugoslavia by ensuring that they have the necessary resources and other support to perform their mission effectively: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the House of Representatives unequivocally supports the men and women of the United States Armed Forces who are carrying out their mission in support of peace in Bosnia and Herzegovina with professional excellence, dedicated patriotism, and exemplary bravery.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to section 4 of House Resolution 304, the gentleman from Indiana, [Mr. HAMILTON], and the gentleman from New York, [Mr. GILMAN], each will be recognized for 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HAMILTON].

Mr. HAMILTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise to support House Resolution 306. It is a very simple and straightforward resolution. Its purpose is simply to support the troops and to praise them for the work they are doing and will do. It does two things in its operative clause. It gives unequivocal support to the men and women of the United States Armed Forces and praises them for the work that they are doing and will do in support of peace in Bosnia. The resolution is intended to be silent with regard to policy, and the whereas clauses of the resolution merely recite facts. The resolution is intended to be silent with regard to policy, neither for the policy

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. BUYER. Mr. Speaker, I wish unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks on the resolution just considered, and that I may include extraneous material for the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Indiana?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. (Mr. BUNNING). Pursuant to section 4 of House Resolution 304, it is now in order to consider a resolution offered by the minority leader, or his designee.

nor against it. It recites the historical facts without editorial comment.

The resolution does mention that all Members of this body have questions and concerns about the effort in Bosnia. It emphasizes that we want to do all that we can to minimize the risks to U.S. forces by ensuring that they have the resources necessary to perform their mission. So it only calls for unequivocal support of our troops. With all of the doubts and the questions and uncertainties that exist in this Chamber and in the country with respect to Bosnia, the effort here is to come forward with one certainty. That certainty is that we support the troops.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. SKELTON].

Mr. SKELTON. Mr. Speaker, I feel constrained to speak against this in light of the fact that the last vote passed and it passed overwhelmingly. If this should happen to pass, we would have the most mixed message going out to America possible.

These are nice words. Paraphrasing them, they are pabulum. But we support the troops more than adequately in the previous resolution. We stated more correctly when we speak of their courage and of their professionalism in the previous resolution. This one would have no effect except to confuse the people we represent and of course confuse those wonderful troops that are going to be in Bosnia. I am constrained, Mr. Speaker, to vote against this.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Georgia [Mr. LINDER].

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, I do not believe there has been an issue in my 3 years here that the depth of feeling has been such as there is on this movement into Bosnia. I spoke to a group two Mondays ago and had a senior gentleman walk up to me, a businessman. He said, when the first person dies and comes back in a body bag, it will be because of what we did not do yesterday. I said, what was that? He said, you did not speak out in opposition.

This is a very, very dicey prospect. I have heard Members compare this movement to what happened in Vietnam 20-plus years ago. I said this is not Vietnam. This is Afghanistan. It is much, much more dangerous. This war has been going on since 1389. C.B. Hackworth, the most decorated military officer still alive in this Nation, led a group, he said recently on television, into this very area for 1 year, for 1 year in 1949, and they came out 9 years later.

I honestly listened to the President's speech on this subject with an open mind a couple of Monday nights ago because I had to speak about it on radio the next morning. I thought he gave a good speech, but he always gives a good speech. So the next morning I got up early and I read what he said. It was much different in black and white than it was on a TV picture tube. What he said essentially was that Americans should be for peace. Are we not? I thought that was inane.

Then he said, we must do this out of respect for NATO. My colleagues, NATO is a very large military bureaucracy with nothing to do. It is looking for something to do. My judgment, it is time to recognize that NATO expired in August 1989. It is time for us to give it a decent burial with full military honors and find a new policy and a new arrangement because the old threats are no longer there.

I read the Hamilton resolution. I understand the purpose of it. But if it is anything different in terms of support for the troops than we just voted for, why does it not say, we support the policy? Why does not the President's own party say, we support the policy? Does anybody support the policy?

It does not say that, but there are fine words in here that would let the President tomorrow draw an inference that indeed we do. It says here that the House unequivocally supports the men and women of the United States Armed Forces carrying out their mission in support of Bosnia. I am absolutely convinced that the President can construe that to mean tomorrow that we support the policy. My colleagues, this is not our time. This is not our place. This is not our war. This is the wrong resolution.

Mr. HAMILTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Michigan [Mr. BONIOR], distinguished whip.

Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Speaker, we have heard a lot of emotion on this floor tonight and it is not hard to understand why. The decision to commit troops is one of the toughest decisions any of us will have to make. And none of us takes it lightly.

There comes a time when America—and only America—can lead. Now is one of those times.

For 4 long years, we watched as 250,000 people were killed, 16,000 children were slaughtered, and nearly 3 million people were left homeless in Bosnia.

And through it all, there has been very little reason to hope. But finally, peace is at hand.

Finally, we have a real chance to end the bloodshed. For the first time in 4 years, there is hope in Sarajevo because there is faith in America.

And I, for one, am proud of the fact that American troops are saving lives tonight in Bosnia.

For 220 years we have sent American men and women overseas, not just to defend American interest, but to defend American values. To stand up for freedom and democracy and human rights.

And if those things are not worth defending any more then I do not know what America stands for.

The people of Bosnia are tired of war. They want peace, but they need help to keep the peace. America is not undertaking this mission alone. But only America can lead it.

As Shimon Peres said from the podium behind me yesterday: Only America can provide the compass and the lantern that the world so desperately needs in Bosnia today.

This century began with bloodshed in Sarajevo. And we have it in our power today to make sure that it does not end with bloodshed in Sarajevo.

I would hate to think that someday, historians will look back on this day and wonder why, when we had a chance to keep the peace in Bosnia, the House of Representatives turned its back and let the killing begin again.

We can avoid that fate here today. I urge my colleagues: support our troops. Support the President. And support this resolution.

□ 2230

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from California, [Mr. RIGGS].

Mr. RIGGS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the distinguished chairman for yielding me time.

Mr. Speaker, with all due respect to the distinguished minority whip, this resolution is much more or much less, depending on one's point of view, than an expression of support for our troops. As someone in the delegation that just returned from Bosnia last night, I have to say that that trip to that incredibly war-torn region raised more questions in my mind than it answered.

That is the problem with the Hamilton resolution. It glosses over those questions in one more "whereas" clause. Until we honestly address those questions and concerns, I do not see how this House can vote for the Hamilton resolution.

Let me just say what I think are the questions which absolutely need addressing in a forthright manner by every Member of this body. First of all, it is not clear if we have defined that criteria for ending this mission successfully, and I think we all know that an exit date is not an exit strategy.

Second, there is a very real concern in talking to the leaders of these three countries whether they are doing everything at this moment to stop war crimes as they promised to do in Dayton. Just look at the scorched Earth policy that the Croats are carrying out in the areas they promised in Dayton to turn over to the Serbians.

There is also a very real concern whether we will be able to achieve greater equality between the heavily armed Serbian and Croatian forces and their underarmed Bosnian counterparts. That military parity, that greater equality, is absolutely essential to a lasting peace.

Lastly, we are in for an untold open-ended financial commitment here. The American people need to be told the true cost of this peacekeeping mission, all that it entails, including the economic and humanitarian assistance necessary to rebuild Bosnia.

So the Hamilton resolution comes up short. It does not address these questions and concerns. It glosses over them with another "whereas" clause, and the American people deserve better.

Mr. HAMILTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Virginia [Mr. MORAN].

Mr. MORAN. Mr. Speaker, tonight we are defining who America is and who we will be in the 21st century. Clearly we are a blessed Nation, protected on both sides by oceans, rich with natural resources, and, more importantly, rich with the diversity of immigrants driven by their pioneer spirit. But to whom much is given, much must be expected.

The Bosnians have cried out for American involvement for three and a half years, partly because we have more military capability than all the nations of Europe combined. But, far more importantly, they look to us because of our heroic character because they know that it was America's heart that saved Europe's soul; because they know that it was our grandfathers and our fathers who were willing to risk their lives, not for any selfish materialistic cause, but for the noblest of reasons, for the cause of human freedom, democracy, justice, and religious and ethnic tolerance.

It is precisely these same cause that are at stake in Bosnia today. We should not, in fact, we must not, profane the legacy of our grandfathers who saved Europe in World War I, or the legacy of our fathers who saved Europe from fascism in World War II and then set up NATO to prevent a World War III. But we would profane their legacy if we let the affluence and the comfortable security that their sacrifice has brought us weaken our resolve to uphold the principles that still define America.

Heroic leaders do not shrink from their moral instincts because their own personal security is not directly threatened. They act when they know that only they can make a difference. They act, because it is the right and the principled thing to do.

After a quarter of a million people have been slaughtered, 40,000 women have been raped, and 2.8 million people have been driven from their homes, it is the right and the principled thing to do to put a stop to this ethnic cleansing, the slaughter that will clearly continue, unless America shows its heroic character once again.

Our troops are the clear expression of our national heroic character, and that is why we should support them by voting for the Hamilton resolution.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. PACKARD].

(Mr. PACKARD asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. PACKARD. Mr. Speaker, having just returned from Bosnia and having met with each of the three Presidents and many of the other leaders of the different factions there, I came away convinced that the leaders do not understand the peace agreement, the Dayton accord, the same way. Each of them looks at it differently. There are serious misunderstandings among the leaders that put their initials on the accord and will be signed perhaps tomorrow.

Those differences are major and significant differences. If they exist among the leaders, they surely will exist among the people. The expectations of the people and the leaders there of the United States is that we will be much more involved in the cost, the payment, and the providing of different activities than what the peace accord calls for.

Some of them feel that we will be responsible as Americans to pay for many things that we have no responsibility to do. The refugees, the rebuilding, the building of the infrastructure, the paying for the free elections and for the many commissions that this peace accord calls for, they expect the American people, the American taxpayers, to support all of these functions. Yet that is not the intent of the accord and the American people are not expected to do so.

These confusing understandings from the leaders are not going to lead to a peaceful condition there. I foresee that peace will not come to that region, with or without the American troops. I do not understand how they can have peace with the feelings that they have. There are some that are today rejecting the peace accord.

Mr. Speaker, I think that it is a tragedy and a mistake for us to send troops there. I do not support the President's policy. This resolution implies support of the President's policy.

Mr. HAMILTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the distinguished gentleman from Maryland [Mr. CARDIN].

(Mr. CARDIN asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. CARDIN. Mr. Speaker, for the past 4 years, we have witnessed systematic ethnic cleansing in the former Yugoslavia. The United States and its allies have done precious little. It is an outrage to humanity that Europe and the United States stood on the sidelines, watching the aggressors willfully violate international standards of human rights.

It can be argued that it is too late to help the people of Bosnia. That Sarajevo lies in rubble. That Europe is primarily to blame for the failure to act. That the United States should have exercised its leadership earlier. In my opinion, all of these concerns are true.

However, it is never too late to act to stop human atrocities. President Clinton deserves the international community's appreciation for bringing the warring parties together.

Although all of us hope these recent peace efforts will succeed, I have serious questions about this NATO mission. The territorial boundaries that have been agreed upon lack historical confidence. The will of the leadership in the former Yugoslavia for peace is uncertain. Yet, this agreement presents the only hope for peace and an end to the massive human rights abuses.

There are those who believe that we have no national interest in Bosnia. I disagree. Stability in the Balkans is important to a stable Europe and a stable Europe is important to the economic and security interests of the United States. It is also in the national interest to speak loudly against the continuation of ethnic cleansing.

Others say correctly that the United States cannot act in all parts of the world when human rights are violated. However, that should not be a justification for failing to act when we can.

Mr. Speaker, I have serious reservations about the military strategy of this mission. I am concerned as to whether the time table is reasonable and as to whether we can achieve peace. I am disappointed that the President has chosen not to precede under the war powers act, to seek congressional approval to send our troops to a foreign hostile area.

In addition, the house leadership has regrettably failed to allow us to consider a resolution, similar to what is being considered by the other body, which speaks to an appropriate exit policy. An appropriate exit policy clearly would ensure the arming and training of the Bosnian Moslems, the primary victims of aggression. It is imperative for NATO forces to exit the region with the Bosnian Moslems adequately prepared and knowing that a long-term NATO presence is not necessary because there is an equal military balance among the formerly warring factions.

However, the three resolutions that are before us today do not speak to these military concerns. Therefore, I voted against the rule in which these resolutions were made in order.

It is clear from court decisions that the President has the constitutional authority to commit U.S. troops to this mission. All of us, regardless of our views as to whether the President should commit the United States to the NATO implementation force, stand behind our troops, therefore, the only resolution that I can support is the Hamilton resolution which speaks to the support of our troops and points out concerns raised by Members.

Mr. HAMILTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Connecticut [Mr. GEJDENSON].

Mr. GEJDENSON. Mr. Speaker, I would hope that the Members before voting take their responsibility seriously enough to read the Hamilton resolution. The Hamilton resolution states where we are. It states that the President has committed the troops. This House has refused to cut off the funding to place troops in the field by failing to support the Dornan resolution, the Dornan legislation, and so today before us the only solid support for the troops in the field comes from the Hamilton resolution.

Now, there are debates about the policy. I for one think the policy has succeeded to date. The fighting has stopped, America has used its air power, as many argued that it could not, to bring the sides to the peace table. The President brought them to the United States and to Ohio, and achieved a ceasefire.

All of us are concerned about casualties. That is the only question that remains. If the Congress, House, and Senate, wanted not to send troops to Bosnia, they needed to vote to cut off the funding to make sure no troops would go there. In the Senate that was rejected some 70 votes to less than 30. In the House it was rejected as well.

So tonight, as we look at the opportunities for peace in the former Yugoslavia republic, the debate before us is a simple one: Do we or do we not support the troops as they enter that field of operation?

The Hamilton resolution resolves that the House of Representatives unequivocally supports the men and women of the United States Armed Forces who are carrying out their mission in support of the peace in Bosnia and Herzegovina with professional excellence, dedication, patriotism, and extreme bravery.

General Scowcroft and former U.N. Ambassador Fitzpatrick agree with that posture. They believe that America must fulfill this commitment. But today it seems some would like to have it both ways. They would like to wring their hands about the policy, say that they support the troops, but, on the other hand, take no real action.

Mr. Speaker, it seems to me the only real action before us that we can consider today and seriously give support to our troops is not one that wrings its hands about the potential dangers that we are all concerned about. But if you read that Resolution 302 that was read, it does not state strong support for our military. I know the Members that voted for it meant to do it, but they have not done it, unless they vote for the Hamilton resolution.

Mr. Speaker, this is the right thing to do tonight. The question of the security and safety of our men is one that will stay with each and every one of us for the time they are in the field. But the right thing to do as they go off is to give them the support of this Congress as this Congress gave its troops support as they entered Desert Storm.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 2 minutes.

Mr. Speaker, the resolution before us has been carefully crafted. I urge my colleagues to read it throughout. Although carefully written, I believe it is flawed. Not so much for what it says, but for what it fails to say. It fails to state what a majority of this House believes—that our troops are being deployed on a seriously flawed mission.

We all fully support our troops, strongly unequivocally. The vote we just concluded unmistakably demonstrates that.

I urge our Members not to weaken that message. Accordingly, I submit that the Hamilton resolution is redundant and should be defeated.

Mr. HAMILTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from New York [Mrs. LOWEY].

Mrs. LOWEY. Mr. Speaker, voting whether or not to send American troops abroad is the most difficult decision that any Member of Congress will ever face.

I still have questions and concerns about our exit strategy and about the dangers our troops will face on the ground in Bosnia. The peace agreement we will help enforce is not perfect. The risks and the dangers are real.

But what is the alternative?

We have all been horrified at the events in Bosnia over the last several years. Mass executions. Torture. Systematic rape. Ethnic cleansing.

For the past 3 years, we called for an end to the horrors. We condemned. We impose sanctions and embargoes. We bombed.

And finally the prestige and the armed might of America brought both sides to the negotiating table to achieve peace.

So what now, now that peace is won?

Will we turn our heads and look the other way as Central Europe descends further into barbarism? Will we shut our eyes to the ethnic cleansing and the genocide? Will we walk away and doom this peace agreement to failure?

We dare not. Make no mistake: Refusal to send United States troops to Bosnia will end the peace. There will be no peace without the leadership of the United States.

Some argue that we have no national interest at stake in Bosnia. I must disagree.

We have a national interest in assisting and supporting our NATO allies. We have a strong national interest in preserving peace in Central Europe. And we have a compelling national interest in stopping ethnic cleansing and genocide.

At stake today is whether the United States will continue to assume a leadership role in the world, or whether we will retreat into isolationism. This debate is about our national character, our moral leadership.

Mr. Speaker, the United States still stands for something very special in this world. Since World War II this Nation has maintained freedom's watch around the globe. We have paid a heavy price for our vigilance—but that is the price we must pay to ensure the success of liberty. We are the world's moral leader—and we must not shirk that leadership.

Our troops are the world's best. They are brave—and they are ready.

Mr. Speaker, we must help bring peace to Bosnia. The United States has the ability to respond, we have the obligation to respond, and we must respond.

Let's support this resolution. Let's support our troops.

□ 2245

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. BAKER].

Mr. BAKER of California. Mr. Speaker, it is an honor to speak here on this subject.

Mr. Speaker, our foreign policy is flawed. The State Department told us that the people of Yugoslavia could not get along, so we had to divide Yugoslavia. We set up Croatia, we set up Bosnia and we set up Macedonia. We broke up Yugoslavia because the people there could not get along.

But in Bosnia, the map makers, not unlike the gerrymanderers that ran this place for 40 years, drew an intricate map in Bosnia and said, these people are all going to live under each other and they will live in harmony and peace. And the killing goes on.

And the folks in Sarajevo took a poll, and the Serbians, who comprise about 33 percent of Sarajevo and have for 500 years, said we will not live under the Moslems. So they do not like the plan.

The Mujahedian, who have been imported from the Middle East, 4,000 strong, are there to protect Islam. And they do not care about us and they do not care about the Croatsians and they do not care about the Serbians. They have a different agenda. But our state Department says, we are going to recognize this new central government and, by golly, they are all going to live in peace, and we are going to go there and enforce this peace. It is a flawed foreign policy.

If we really believe these people can live in peace, go back to one Yugoslavia and at least give them some territory, where Croatia, Serbia and the Muslims can live with some distance between them.

We used to have a resolution that said the President has asked us to support his policy and, mysteriously, that was dropped out of the resolution because now we have nothing left but pretty words. Now we say, we, some Members of Congress, have questions. We have reservations.

I cannot get up the first question when I try to make a list of questions, and that is, how the heck do we get out of here? How do we keep from being enmeshed in this quagmire that has gone on for 500 years? How do we save the lives of our young men and women? This Democratic alternative is a fig leaf under any word.

Please vote no.

Mr. HAMILTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from Minnesota [Mr. VENTO].

(Mr. VENTO asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the Hamilton resolution, and I think the Members of this body ought to support it, too.

We had our vote on cutting off the funds; and we said we did not want to cut off the funds. Now we are suggesting we are going to send a mixed message. I suggest some in this body want to have it both ways.

We suggest that we want a peace accord that has no risk. If there were no risk, we would not need military troops in Europe; we would certainly not need them in Bosnia.

Surely, there is risk involved in this, but the fact is, we did not start this foreign policy in November of 1995, such as the resolutions that many Members referred to were initiated at that point. In fact, of course, the commitments in this particular instance, in Bosnia, Yugoslavia, go back to the former administration, and certainly at least 2 years with this administration.

No, the right posture here is to vote for this resolution to provide the type of support and to understand that, indeed, there are risks. There are going to be incidents. There are going to be accidents. We should be very concerned about it, but the goal they are trying to accomplish is a reasonable one and one that this Nation should stand behind, Mr. Speaker.

I rise today to support both our peace-meeting troops and the decision to commit them in support of the Bosnian peace agreement. The conflict in Bosnia has brought many images of pain and suffering. Reports indicate that over 200,000 people have been killed in the conflict, mostly civilians as well as military personnel. Millions of people in Bosnia were forced to leave their homes in this war on civilians and cities. In fact an estimated half the population are refugees. Now with American leadership, and the demonstrated re-energized military capacity in Croatia and Bosnia this past spring, negotiations have led to a peace agreement that offers hope to the people of the Balkans. In order to monitor this agreement and create the basis for a lasting peace, the United States and its NATO allies have been asked by the parties involved to contribute a peacekeeping force and have agreed to enforce the peace.

Because of the instability caused by the Balkan conflict, repercussions from a continued conflict go far beyond the Balkans and threaten United States interests in all of Europe, Greece, and Turkey. This area has been freed from the control of communism and now faces the re-emergence of ethnic and religious tensions, and an unpredictable and dangerous nationalism. The harsh conflicts among peoples and nations in this region seriously risk the new found liberty and the hope of a lasting peace. In such a situation, an opportunity to bolster peace cannot be discarded, especially in light of the past 4 years of suffering.

The Dayton peace agreement gives the U.S.-led NATO forces the ability and authority to accomplish their mission of peace. I support this peacekeeping operation as it is truly a peacekeeping mission. Our peacekeeping forces will be in a dangerous environment, but one in which the parties have agreed to a peace settlement. This separates and establishes a distinct difference with the deployments in Lebanon or Somalia, and the Persian Gulf action, which in essence was a full fledged action to repel Iraq.

The Dayton peace agreement provides for the withdrawal of foreign parties, the removal of heavy weapons, and the reduction in the numbers of forces and such material. Important negotiations will further define and limit armaments and armed forces in the region. Hopefully the militaries can be built down to an improved parity; instead of built up for future instability and conflict.

Ironically, the insistence by some to condition their support on United States assurances of supplying and training of the Bosnian Moslems may in fact compromise the neutral role that the United States seeks to offer as peacekeepers. This factor could indeed raise the risks associated with the U.S. peacekeeping role, and that apparent risk initially has caused significant angst by the same Members of Congress who promote the training and supplying proposal. This confuses and tends to contradict the issue they advance.

The decision to send U.S. troops is not one to be taken lightly. Each soldier's life is important, for family, friends, and our Nation. The troops being sent will have the ability to defend themselves. Their training has prepared them for this situation. No doubt there will be accidents and some incidents in which soldiers lives may be lost. I am very concerned but am hopeful that the Dayton protocols will work to prevent the loss of peacekeepers lives.

The mission of peace, given the circumstances shaped with American participation and support, is important and justifies this U.S. peacekeeping role and contribution. U.S. leadership is necessary to move the peace that has been started into a new future for the people of the region. I urge my colleagues to support the resolution offered by Representative Hamilton.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, may I inquire how much time we have consumed?

The SPEAKER pro tempore [Mr. BUNNING of Kentucky]. The gentleman from New York [Mr. GILMAN] has 19½ minutes and the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HAMILTON] has 15 minutes.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 8 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Illinois [Mr. HYDE], chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary.

[Mr. HYDE asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.]

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, first of all, let me say why I oppose the well-meaning, but I think flawed resolution of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HAMILTON]. It will be interpreted as fully supporting the President's policy. Even though it does not say so, and wisely so, I think that is the way the press is spinning it, as the Dornan resolution, cut off all the funds, a middle ground expressing opposition but supporting the troops in the Buyer-Skelton resolution; and this is the other edge of the spectrum, namely supporting the President.

But having voted for Buyer-Skelton and having voted for Dornan, mostly I cannot support this because purporting to cover the waterfront, it is very benign as to objections the whole policy. The language is, Whereas some Members of Congress have questions and concerns about certain aspects of the peace implementation process. I do not have questions or concerns, I oppose it, and so do most of the people; in fact, everybody who voted for Buyer-Skelton, because it said, we oppose the policy.

So to say we have questions and concerns is just too mild. It is too gossamer. It just does not cover it. So for that reason, I cannot support it, although otherwise it has good language supporting our troops; but the Buyer-Skelton resolution did that, too.

Now, clearly, Mr. Speaker, I oppose putting 20,000-plus troops in extreme and certain danger during what I believe to be a time-out in a series of wars that have been fueled by ethnic and religious hatreds, spawned centuries ago. But the key to all this is our national interest, our national interest.

Now, somebody has decided our national interest is not at play in Rwanda, even though millions of people have been killed, even though there is no democracy there, but our national interests are not involved. The same thing is true in the Sudan. Millions of people have been killed there, refugees, displacements, starvation, racial and religious hatreds, but our national interests are not involved there.

So that becomes very important. And so we look at Bosnia-Herzegovina and we say, where are our national interests there?

By way of comparison, we look at Desert Storm and our national interests were clearly involved. We had a defined enemy, a potential nuclear power with other weapons of mass destruction out waging an aggressive war against Kuwait and putting at risk the major petroleum reserves in the world in the Persian Gulf. If Kuwait had fallen, Saudi Arabia would have fallen and the economies of the world would have been in the vice-like grip of Saddam Hussein.

So, for me, and I am not a particularly bright fellow, I could see our national interest bristling in that situation. And the President saw it and the President wanted to commit troops over there. But those of us with some institutional memory, not all, I am sure, remember the vote of January 12 of 1991 where we got 86 Democrat votes yes and 179 no, and not one Democrat leader supported President Bush.

I am not going to take the time, Mr. Speaker, to discuss the bills of impeachment, three of them, that were brought against President Reagan and President Bush by various people, as well as litigation. I have the bills of impeachment and I have the complaints in my office. But I would like to note parenthetically that one of the charges in the bill of impeachment against Reagan was the abuse of the United States press in perpetuating a disinformation campaign against Colonel Qadhafi of Libya during the summer of 1986. That, I think, is classic.

In looking over the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD at the debates over Desert Storm, and I grant Members they are not identical at all, one was war and this is peace, sort of. Sort of. We are going in with lots of armament, though, to protect. To enforce, not protect the peace. But our national interests, in my judgment, others may wish what they want or think what they want, were directly involved in Desert Storm.

Let me read from the debate what one of the gentlewomen from Michigan had to say, and I quote, and this is January 12, 1991, the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD. I will give Members the pages if they want them, but here is what she said.

In a time of limited resources to rebuild our cities, feed and house our homeless, educate our young, why is this administration so eager to spend billions in a far-off land that will have no meaningful impact on resolving the social and economic problems confronting every American every day right here at home?

Another gentleman, who was recently a senatorial candidate in the far west, in a primary, says:

Today, a large American force sits uneasily in the Arabian desert. They do not have a clear idea why they are there, the American people do not have a clear idea why they are there, and Congress does not have a clear idea why they are there. Mr. Speaker, if we learned anything from the military misadventures of the last 40 years, it is that U.S. military might should not be committed to battle without a clear statement of U.S. objectives and the broad support of the American people.

Another senatorial candidate from a State very near and dear to me. Here is what he had to say:

I certainly do not know that I could go up and tell someone who has lost a husband that it was more important for this Congress to show unity than patience. But I would hope that this Congress would not squander its constitutional birth right over some ambiguous possibility or partisan loyalty to any President, Democrat or Republican.

The ranking member on the Committee on International Relations was very clear when he said in that debate, "We have a constitutional responsibility to vote at the time when and if the President concludes force is necessary. That decision must be made jointly."

Then we have a gentleman from California, a long-standing member of the Congress, who said, and I quote:

I have not heard any of you say a single thing for which I would vote to send even one American to die. The only valid issue is whether to give Bush authority to order thousands, even tens of thousands to their death. For those who persist, it should suffice to point out the United States is insolvent. To increase our deficit and debt by over $50 billion should turn the most aggressive warriors away from combat.

Now, we have a man from Massachusetts, who is skilled in the field of telecommunications and others, and very articulate, and here is what he said:

No one could explain to me what the war in Vietnam was all about. I swore then that if I were ever in any position of power, I would do everything I could to assure that before any young persons were asked to lay down his or her life for our country, we would be able to explain to that young man's friends and family the reasons why. So far I have not heard any explanations that would satisfy the loved ones of the new generation who now stand poised to fight in the Persian Gulf. It is a shame.

MODIFICATION TO HOUSE RESOLUTION 306
OFFERED BY MR. HAMILTON

Mr. HAMILTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the resolution be modified by deleting the preamble and all of the test before the resolved clause so that the resolution be modified by deleting the preamble and all of the text before the resolved clause so that the resolution would simply read, "Resolved, That the House of Representatives unequivocally supports the men and women of the United States Armed Forces who are carrying out their mission in support of peace in Bosnia and Herzegovina with professional excellence, dedicated patriotism, and exemplary bravery."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Indiana?

Mr. BAKER of California. Mr. Speaker, I object.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Objection is heard.

Mr. HAMILTON. Mr. Speaker, I wonder if the gentleman who objected would permit me to explain why I made the request.

Mr. BAKER of California. Mr. Speaker, I think we can save a lot of time by saying in the Buyer resolution we have done this.

□ 2300

Mr. HAMILTON. Would the gentleman permit me to explain?

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BUNNING). Objection is heard.

Mr. HAMILTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from Texas, Ms. JACKSON-LEE].

(Ms. JACKSON-LEE asked was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. JACKSON-LEE. Mr. Speaker, this is a wrenching decision. It is a decision that will have to be made this evening in its purest sense. I beg to differ with my colleagues, because they are skating the issue. This is a weighty decision. I can respect the disagreement of colleagues; I cannot accept the hypocrisy.

The gentleman rose just a few minutes ago to ask that we go on record standing here tonight unequivocally supporting the men and women headed to Bosnia. The resolution just passed was one of hypocrisy, albeit I respect the diversity of opinion and certainly do respect all who would not want to put those in harm's way, but nowhere in the Buyer amendment did it say unequivocally, with no question, do we support the troops going to Bosnia.

I do not know about my colleagues, but I am not going home to my constituents, to the American people, for me to tell them that Shane Hadley and Dwayne Case and Jeffrey Burkette, Texans who are on their way to Bosnia, do not have my support.

So, I would ask those who have a difference of opinion than I might have who may have gone to Bosnia, as I did, who may have talked to the people there who said Americans are the only ones who could give peace, and my colleagues may not have gone, I simply say to my colleagues that we have a serious decision to make.

I would ask that my colleagues follow a little child. The Holy Ghost Catholic School, on December 11, in Houston, TX, asked me to join them to pray for our troops. They asked me as a Congresswoman to take their words to this House as they lit candles and prayed. They said, "We support our troops. Will you do that, Congresswomen?" And I said to them, as I said to our troops in Germany, unequivocally, this Congress will go on record.

My colleagues, I ask you to simply put aside the partisan politics. Let us join together and unequivocally support our troops.

Mr. Speaker, I want to take this opportunity to express my strong support for our young men and women who will be serving in Bosnia. They deserve our utmost support and admiration. They are on a mission of peace that is in the true spirit of what our country was founded on: life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness.

For the past several years, all Americans have been horrified by the atrocities that have occurred in the Balkans. Over this time, many different cease fires and peace agreements have come and gone. We all prayed for a European solution, but none was forthcoming. The time for American leadership has once again arisen.

As the leaders of the free world, we need to be part of maintaining a stable and secure Europe. We stepped in and made a difference in World War I. And, we saved Europe, and the world from tyranny by defeating Hitler in World War II. Now, as the 20th century draws to a close, our Nation must once again enter the European theater and promote freedom. We must learn the lessons of history and speak firmly and act decisively to create a lasting peace.

I was part of the first bipartisan delegation to visit Bosnia, and have seen first hand the devastation there. I was told by the citizens of Sarajevo about the 3.2 million refugees, the over 200,000 people that have been murdered, and the over 6,000 elderly who have been left homeless. I am confident that our military will be able to meet the challenges that will be faced in Bosnia. I am confident because when I personally met with those troops who were in Germany and headed to Bosnia, they said that they were ready. However, they also said to me, "We want the American people behind us." To those troops and the troops from Texas in particular—Shane Hadley, Dwayne Case, Jeffrey Burkette—I promise that I will work for that support.

The peace agreement has been negotiated with NATO as the military enforcer. As the leading power in NATO, and in the world, we have a moral and duty-bound obligation to work with our European allies in ensuring peace in Bosnia. This is not another Vietnam, and our troops will be able to defend themselves. We are the only Nation that has the technology and ability to deploy the large numbers of forces that are necessary to set up a large-scale military operation in a short amount of time. The Germans, the French, the British, and the Belgians have all failed. The citizens of Bosnia want us to help.

As 20,000 American troops prepare to depart for Bosnia, let us give our full support to this mission that is about peace, leadership, and stability. While our troops will work with soldiers of other NATO countries, they will be under the leadership of an American commander at all times. Some would argue that we must ignore the problems of the world. But I say, let us be a part of a larger battle; the battle for human rights and justice.

I want to applaud the children of the Holy Ghost Catholic School in my home State of Texas who in their wisdom came together December 11 to pray for our troops. The children read letters, praying for peace. That's the true American spirit. I thank them for their courage, sincerity, and love of what America stands for.

We in Congress have a very difficult decision to make tonight, but it is not a decision to send troops to war. It is rather a decision to uphold the ideas of democracy, to stop the shooting and the slaughter; to clear the way for peace.

Like the children of the Holy Ghost School, we should stand up and give our troops our support tonight. And we should pray for peace and pray for the safety of our young men and women.

My colleagues, I implore you to support our troops, support the President, support what is morally right, and above all, put an end to the madness. Support the Hamilton resolution, House Resolution 305.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. DORNAN].

Mr. DORNAN. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Indiana knows that I have high regard for him. So I took your last resolved clause, and I personalized it. Because I am going to vote against the amendment, but I am going on the record with a single, "I person" version of your resolved.

"I, Congressman ROBERT K. DORNAN, unequivocally support the 151 men," there are no women in there yet, "of the United States Armed Forces who are carrying out this near-impossible mission in support of temporary peace in a gang fight in Bosnia and Herzegovina with their Reagan-trained professional excellence, dedicated patriotism, and exemplary bravery, that they will be called upon to show if they start stepping on land mines or start taking sniper fire."

That is about it. I support that. I just came back from the Senate. Only 7 Republicans out of 53 voted against the amendment offered by KAY BAILEY HUTCHISON and JIM INHOFE. Only seven. Mr. Speaker, 46 voted for it, and 1 Democrat who has a tough election coming up.

Over here, the amendment of the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. BUYER], 287. That is about as strong a support for the troops as the gentleman from Missouri, IKE SKELTON, whom the troops love, chairman of Subcommittee on Military Personnel, exemplary Member, loves the men and women in uniform. And the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. BUYER] is not only supporting the troops, he is one of the troops. He has been with them in dangerous areas.

Mr. Speaker, I beg my colleagues tomorrow to get that top intelligence briefing, and I want my colleagues to look at this this way. If you were a young man in Bosnia and you were a Moslem and you had a country in the United Nations that the United States and the European Union recognized as a nation on April 7, 4 years ago this coming April, and suddenly your country is cleaved in half, partitioned, and your sister was raped for 3 days by 50 people and then set on fire and burned alive, are you going to write it all off and keep the peace? I would not, and neither would my colleagues. And grudges are going to be filled out, these blood debts, after we are gone.

I predict we will keep some sort of a peace for 10½ months and then they will all come home, and Clinton will roll the dice trying to get reelected.

Mr. HAMILTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Illinois [Mr. POSHARD].

(Mr. POSHARD asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. POSHARD. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of the Hamilton resolution.

Mr. HAMILTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from New York [Mr. OWENS].

(Mr. OWENS asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. OWENS. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of the Hamilton amendment. The deployment of American troops in Bosnia is a very serious undertaking. It is a very risky action. As policymakers, it is appropriate that we move with reluctance and hesitation, but this serious risky action is a vitally necessary action.

Military criminals, thugs with weapons of mass destruction, should not be allowed to butcher innocent thousands of civilians as they recklessly grab for power. On Tuesday in this Chamber, Prime Minister Shimon Peres of Israel paid tribute to America with the following words:

As the end of this twentieth century is nearing, it can verily be described as the American century. The United States has built strength and used it to save the globe from three of its greatest menaces: Nazi tyranny, Japanese militarism, and the Communist challenge. You saved freedom. You enabled many nations to save their democracies, even as you strive now to assist many nations to free themselves from their nondemocratic past. You fought many wars. You won many victories. Wars did not cause you to lose heart. Triumphs did not corrupt you. You remained unspoiled, because you rejected the spoils of victory.

End of quote by Shimon Peres.

The American people and its armies should not again and again be called upon to make great sacrifices in order to save the civilized world. Our Nation should make it known that American resources and American soldiers will not always be available for every just cause.

But Bosnia, we have a most appropriate time to respond. This is a landmark in modern civilization. Our troops are being deployed within the context of a well-developed blueprint for peace. Our troops are being deployed to smother and contain the virus of ethnic cleansing and racism. Our troops are being deployed to provide an opportunity to survive for hundreds of thousands of grieving men, women, and children. Mr. Speaker, I urge a "yes" vote on the Hamilton amendment.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, may I inquire how much time we have consumed?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from New York [Mr. GILMAN] has 9½ minutes remaining, and the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HAMILTON] has 11 minutes remaining.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from California [Mr. KIM].

(Mr. KIM asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. KIM. Mr. Speaker, I have a high respect for our ranking member the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HAMILTON], but I rise in opposition to this resolution.

We are missing the discussion here tonight.

First, it goes without saying that everyone in Congress strongly supports America's troops.

In every speech and in every resolution we have passed about Bosnia, this Congress has gone on record of providing unquestionable support for our troops.

We just passed a resolution with the same language supporting our troops.

This resolution does not address the underlying policy issue. But, while I support our troops, I have serious reservations about the underlying policy that is sending these troops to Bosnia.

By silencing any policy concerns, this resolution is sending a confusing, mixed message. It might be used by some to claim that there is congressional support for this Bosnia questionable adventure. That claim would be totally inaccurate—but they would cite this resolution.

This resolution does not address 3 important questions:

First, why should the United States provide over one-third of all the NATO troops? Many NATO countries are sending as few as 500 troops. Why 20,000 Americans, the lion's share?

Second, why don't we just provide logistical and support troops like Germany—and Germany is only sending 4,000 supporting troops.

Third, why are we sending troops to Bosnia when the American public is overwhelmingly opposed to this operation? In my office alone, the calls are 100 to 4 opposing the deployment of troops.

Again, we all strongly support the troops, it's the policy we question and we cannot afford to send a mixed message as this resolution would surely do.

Mr. HAMILTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Pennsylvania [Mr. FATTAH].

Mr. FATTAH. Mr. Speaker, I think, unfortunately, some with this obsession to embarrass the President are going to cause the House to embarrass itself. When the American troops land in Bosnia, there is going to be no doubt by those who face some 20,000 well-armed, well-trained American troops what American policy is. We only confuse ourselves by this action that we are engaged in this evening.

Mr. Speaker, I would hope that we would support the resolution in front of us. It is difficult to understand the contradiction where we could stand and give a round of applause to the Prime Minister of Israel as he talked about taking risks for peace, and then given our own opportunity here this evening, we would muffle our message about what our role is in Bosnia.

The President has taken the leadership. This Congress has refused to eliminate funds for those troops. Therefore, the result is that our troops are going to be there. They are there to enforce a peace and that peace is well worthy of the best of America's efforts.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1½ minutes to the gentleman from Kansas [Mr. TIAHRT].

(Mr. TIAHRT asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. TIAHRT. Mr. Speaker, I am opposed to the Hamilton resolution, not because those who are supporting it voted against the Defense Appropriations Act, but I am voting against it because it is going to be misinterpreted as supporting the President's policy.

Mr. Speaker, I do not support the President's policy. I sat in Zagreb in a hotel after being in Bosnia, in Sarajevo, and I talked to Marine Lt. Col. Mark Sifford and his wife, Marianne. They have 3 children. He is going to spend his Christmas in Sarajevo away from his family. The question that his children have are, "Why is Daddy not going to be home?" Why are we sending our parents of these kids at Christmas-time to a war-torn country? What is the reason? What is the vital American interest? Why are we defending this?

I think there are many ways to lead the world, but sending our men and women is not one of them. We can lead in many ways.

Mr. Speaker, I have with me this coin from the 1st Armored Division. It was given to me by Sgt. Kempty Watson. He has a mother that has been crippled by a car accident. He is the only son that she has. We are sending American sons to defend them. It is a failed policy. I oppose the policy. Vote against Hamilton, because it will be misinterpreted.

Mr. HAMILTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from New Jersey [Mr. TORRICELLI].

□ 2315

Mr. TORRICELLI. Mr. Speaker, in a few moments when this debate ends, the lights are dimmed across the country, thousands of American families are still going to sit in fear for those they love who are in our Armed Forces.

They need to know that we are a proud and a very grateful Nation. They also need to understand the historic nature of this mission.

When the 20th century concludes, Mr. Speaker, we will close the chapter on nearly 300 wars. Despite all of our science and our culture and the advances of our times, this has been the most deadly period of human history. Our troops go to Bosnia to preserve the peace, to end the genocide, but also because they are the best hope that the future is going to be different from the past. In the Persian Gulf we proved that the world could fight together for justice. In Bosnia we proved that we can stand together to preserve the peace.

Mr. Speaker, we all wish that it could be different. But the lessons of European wars still burn in our memory. And there have been too many nights in too many churches and too many synagogues where we prayed that never again would the world experience genocide. Now we are left with the question, did all of that have meaning? Those memories stay with us for a reason. Yet my colleagues argue that it is not fair, it is not right that America should bear the burden.

Mr. Speaker, it has never been fair. It was not fair in Flanders. It was not fair in Okinawa or Normandy.

Mr. Speaker, we are not everybody else. We are Americans. We have never accepted history. We have changed it. Others might accept 250,000 people dying in their homelands. Other people might see genocide and slaughter and learn to look away. We are different. That is a difference that I am grateful for every day.

The determination of those who sat in this Chamber before us, colleagues who were here before us, led to a triumph of democracy in the world in the 20th century. My colleagues, if we have the same determination, if we have the same strength, we can lead to the triumph of peace in the 21st century. That judgment, Mr. Speaker, holds in the balance.

Mark Twain once said that in a world where physical courage is so common, it is tragic that moral courage should be so rare. Our troops have the physical courage to answer the call of our Nation. In the Hamilton resolution we determine whether we have the moral courage to lead, whether, indeed, Mr. Speaker, we are equal to those who answer the call of our country tonight.

I urge support of the resolution. Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. MICA].

Mr. MICA. Mr. Speaker, this measure asks us to ignore the policy. My colleagues, how can we ignore the policy? How can we ignore this ultimate policy failure of this administration and this President? How can we ignore the failed policy of Somalia that turned a humanitarian mission into a nation-building fiasco that left dozens of Americans dead and United States taxpayers still paying billions?

How can we ignore the failed policy of Haiti, where we sailed into Port-au-Prince Harbor, retreated, imposed an embargo on the poorest of the poor, sat by while the opposition was exterminated? We destroyed any shred of the economy and we spent and we are spending billions and billions, only to watch 1,100 flee just in the last few weeks and dozens die at sea because of our policy. And we are still paying billions.

How can we tonight ignore the failed policy of Rwanda where this administration ignored Butros Bugalis who begged and pleaded for action to avoid a slaughter of three-quarters of a million people and they died. And then we sent troops and then we spent millions.

How can we tonight deny and ignore a failed policy where for 3 years Bosnians begged us to change our policy? This week is Sarajevo, a Bosnian leader said to me, we did not ask for your troops. We asked for the policy to allow us to defend ourselves.

Where was our policy when 12,000 Sarajevo men, women and children were slaughtered? I saw the countless graves across the landscape of Sarajevo just in the last few days and another quarter of a million people were killed in the Balkans. Where was our policy?

Bosnians ask me, where was our policy when the U.N. told Bosnian citizens at Srebrenica to lay down their arms and their women and children are slaughtered. How tonight can we ignore this policy?

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BUNNING of Kentucky). The gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HAMILTON] has 6 minutes remaining and has the right to close, and the gentleman from New York [Mr. GILMAN] has 4 minutes remaining.

Mr. HAMILTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. COLEMAN].

(Mr. COLEMAN asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. COLEMAN. Mr. Speaker, because this Congress must stand for a clear policy, I rise in support of the President's policy to keep the peace in Bosnia, and I rise in support of the Hamilton resolution.

Mr. HAMILTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. EDWARDS].

Mr. EDWARDS. Mr. Speaker, on Saturday night near midnight, I said goodbye to several dozen soldiers from my district leaving their families to go to Bosnia. It was not easy. It was not easy for me to say to them face to face that I had serious reservations about this mission.

To their credit, they were not bothered by that admission from me. Because I said one thing they could count on is just as Congress after a vote on Desert Storm came together and in support of our soldiers, you could be assured that Congress, after our votes on conscience, would come together to support our troops.

Yet I am ashamed that because of the action of one Republican Member of this House tonight we will be denied the opportunity to show unanimous support for our troops.

Let me read to the American people what that one Member kept us from being able to vote on tonight.

Resolved that the House of Representatives unequivocally supports the men and women of the United States armed forces who are carrying out their mission in support of peace in Bosnia and Herzegovina with professional excellence, dedicated patriotism, and exemplary bravery.

It is shameful we will not have the opportunity to vote on that tonight.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Florida [Mr. YOUNG], distinguished chairman of the Subcommittee on National Security of the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Mr. Speaker, one of the earlier proponents of the President's policy used the word "hypocrisy" when referring to some of the statements on the Republican side of the House. The word "hypocrisy" called to attention something of interest to me; that is, how do we really support the American troops?

The real vote in supporting the American troops, the soldiers of our Nation, wherever they might be, came when we voted on the appropriations bill to pay for their training, to pay for their technology, to pay their salaries, their health care, their educational benefits, their quality of life. That is where we voted to support the American troops.

Hypocrisy, one after the other on this side who come here now to support the President's policy, most of them are the very Members who voted against funding training, technology, quality of life for our troops, and refused to support the troops, but they want to send them to Bosnia to get involved in a war.

Another of the speakers mentioned history. Let me say something about history. I read a statement to the President in the Cabinet Room a short time ago at a meeting. Subsequently that same day my distinguished minority leader read the same statement on the floor. Let me read it again just for a few seconds.

No language can describe adequately the condition of that large portion of the Balkan peninsula, Serbia, Bosnia, Herzegovina, and other provinces, political intrigues, constant rivalries, a total absence of all public spirit, hatred of all races, animosities of rival religions and an absence of any controlling power, nothing short of an army of 50,000 of the best troops would produce anything like order in these parts.

History, my colleagues. That was said by British Prime Minister Benjamin Disraeli in the House of Lords in August 1878, and history proved his wisdom.

Pray God that history does not prove this a disaster with Americans in Bosnia. We support our troops wherever they might be.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Iowa [Mr. GANSKE].

Mr. GANSKE. Mr. Speaker, I am going to oppose this resolution. Assistant Secretary of State Richard Holbrooke told me that to get this treaty signed he had to twist arms.

There is a statement in this resolution that is at the heart of my objections to the treaty. That has to do with full cooperation. As earlier this evening I said, after my visit to Bosnia, I had some serious reservations about the commitment. My impression is that there is a difference of commitment by the signers of this treaty on how to handle the refugees.

My impression is that there is clearly unhappiness by the participants about the territorial provisions. My impression is that there is major disagreement that will lead to significant lack of cooperation related to the rearming of the Bosnian Serbs.

Maybe this is why President Milosevic over cocktails with the Assistant Secretary, is quoted in the news magazines as saying, "Richard, you are a BS artist."

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. BUYER].

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Indiana [Mr. BUYER] is recognized for 1 minute.

Mr. BUYER. Mr. Speaker, I wish I could stand here and support my colleague, the gentleman from Indiana. I cannot because his resolution obfuscates the issue. I can understand also why my colleague, the gentleman from Texas [Mr. EDWARDS] came to the floor here upset because he also understands that all these whereas clauses in the Hamilton resolution makes it a flawed resolution. That is why so many are upset here today. This is not just one of these issues of just support the troops. This bill has a lot of flawed statements in it. We understand that.

Let me share with my colleagues, we have voted on this issue. We just voted on it. Let me tell Members what it says. It says that this Congress is confident that members of the U.S. armed forces in who it has the greatest pride and admiration will perform their responsibilities with professional excellence, dedicated patriotism, and exemplary courage.

We have just voted to support these troops. We will support these troops. We grow the defense budgets and provide for them every day and we will continue to do that in the future.

Do not support this resolution.

Mr. HAMILTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield the balance of my time to the distinguished gentleman from Missouri, [Mr. GEPHARDT], minority leader.

(Mr. GEPHARDT asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HAMILTON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GEPHARDT. I yield to the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. HAMILTON. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding to me.

I simply wanted to explain why I was offering the unanimous consent that I did. The objection on the other side of the aisle has been that our resolution sent a mixed message, implied support, was redundant, obfuscated. None of those charges have been spelled out in language, but I take them as genuine concerns on the part of the other side.

So I wanted to strip all of that out and leave simply the language of unequivocal support.

Now, the striking thing about the Buyer-Skelton amendment is that the word support does not appear in it. Expressing confidence in the troops is not the same the Congress supporting the troops. If we finish our work tonight with the Buyer-Skelton resolution adopted and the Hamilton resolution defeated, we will have not supported the troops by a specific resolution of this Congress.

Mr. PETERSON of Florida. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GEPHARDT. I yield to the gentleman from Florida, who served 6½ years in a prison in Vietnam.

Mr. PETERSON of Florida. First of all, let me say to my friend from Missouri, I did vote for the appropriations bill, so what I say is with that kind of support to the troops.

I served in Vietnam for a long time. I did not have a unanimous or, if you will, magnanimous, unequivocal support from this Congress while I served in Vietnam. The troops that are going to Bosnia will not have one either because of one objection. We have missed an opportunity to do a bipartisan, unequivocal support of our troops in Bosnia.

The only thing, incidentally, that General Crouch asked us to give him when we were in Freiburg, we asked what can we do for you? He said "Give me something I can give to my troops that says you support them."

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GEPHARDT. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I would just like to clarify, the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HAMILTON] said there was nothing in the Buyer resolution to show support. On page 4 of that resolution, it says, " * * * is furnished the resources and support that he needs to ensure the safety, support, and well-being of such members of the Armed Forces."

Mr. GEPHARDT. Mr. Speaker, reclaiming my time, let me say to the Members tonight, I think we have gone up and down the hill of whether this says support. The real important vote tonight was whether or not we would cut off the funds, and I know there were many Members in the body that voted to do that. I respect their vote.

Once that decision was made, we then had a resolution which set out people's concerns about what was happening and did, I agree, set out a measure of support for the troops.

Our intent in presenting this resolution was not to change the editorial content, not to go back over the decision of whether or not we would cut off the funds but, as we did after the Persian Gulf debate in 1991, try to get a bipartisan, unanimous if we could, expression of this body that we support the troops, so that the people in the field leading the troops could have a piece of paper that would say unequivocally that the people of the United States, however they may be divided on what was happening and how it was happening, supported, without question, what they were doing.

We passed almost identical wording in 1991, 399 to 6. And I would ask the gentleman from Indiana, if we have an opportunity before we quit, to ask unanimous consent again, and I would ask the Members who wanted to object to rethink it, because I think it would be a good thing for us as a Congress tonight to say to our people there, who will be in harm's way, everybody agrees, we hope no one dies, we hope no one is injured, but that Congress in a bipartisan way wants to unequivocally say tonight, after all of our disputes have been settled one way or the other, that we stand behind our troops.

Let me just say one thing in closing, and then I will try to get out of the way so the gentleman can perhaps try to do this again. Alexis de Tocqueville once talked about America's morality. He said this:

I sought for the greatness and generosity of America in her commodious harbors and ample rivers, and it was not there. I sought for it in her democratic Congress and her matchless Constitution, and it was not there. Not until I went into the churches of America and heard her pulpits flame with righteousness did I understand the secret of her generosity and power. America is a great country because she is good, and if America ever ceases to be good, America will cease to be great.

Ladies and gentlemen of the Congress, this is a good country, and it is a great country, and for all of our differences tonight on what is happening, we have made a choice not to stop this deployment. I ask the Members to try to come together tonight in a bipartisan way and in an unequivocal way to say to our troops, however we may differ about what is happening, we stand behind each of you through every minute and day of this great exercise.

Mr. DIXON. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the resolution offered by the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HAMILTON]. No member of this body takes lightly the decision to place the lives of American troops at risk. In this case, I believe President Clinton has done his best to minimize the risk and there is strong justification for joining the NATO peacekeeping force.

People in the Balkan region have suffered greatly over the last 4 years as a result of the Bosnian conflict. In the quiet of our living rooms, we have seen and read about many of the horrors of the war. The killing of civilians, mass executions, and shortages of food, shelter, and other basic necessities have evoked outrage and sympathy from around the world.

Over the past few months, United States negotiators have succeeded in persuading the warring parties in Bosnia to agree to a peace plan. Now is not the time to turn our backs on the important role we play in the success of this agreement. The parties have agreed to tough compromises, yet it is the presence of the NATO peace implementation force that gives each party the confidence that the others will uphold their parts of the agreement. The United States must join its NATO allies in an effort to give the people of Bosnia the chance to peacefully coexist, build a democracy, and ensure that the horrors of war do not reoccur.

The United States has a vital interest in ensuring that peace in the region is sustained. Renewed war would not only exacerbate the suffering of the Bosnian people, the conflict could spread to nearby nations. Expansion of the war may draw us into a future conflict that requires a greater U.S. commitment—one which might not be limited to a peacekeeping role.

As a leader in the world and NATO, the United States must show willingness to work with our allies. Our participation in NATO has contributed to stability in Europe and to our victory in the cold war. NATO is an integrated military structure whose effectiveness depends on the United States, its largest member. Neglecting our leadership role in efforts to end the Bosnian conflict could erode our standing with our international partners and call into question our commitment to longstanding allies. We cannot afford to undermine those alliances.

The safety of U.S. military personnel on this mission is of paramount importance. I have been impressed with the administration's efforts to pursue a peace agreement that our military could implement and enforce. The mission has been narrowly defined and the President has ensured that the troops will be able to react with force if threatened. While there are risks to this mission, efforts have been made to minimize the possibility of harm.

We are all aware of the atrocities committed in this war. The United States has been actively involved in the peace process. Participation in the NATO peacekeeping is a final step we must take to give the parties in the Bosnian conflict a chance to live in peace.

Mr. FAZIO of California. Mr. Speaker; I rise in support of the resolution offered by the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HAMILTON]. This well-considered resolution offers unequivocal support for the men and women of the U.S. Armed Forces as they prepare to carry out their mission in Bosnia.

My colleagues, over the last 4 years, more than half of Bosnia's prewar population has been murdered, starved, or driven out of their homes. With American leadership, a cease-fire has finally been brokered which will bring an end to Bosnia's suffering.

The Hamilton resolution acknowledges the questions and concerns that many members of the House have about this policy, but it affirms congressional support for our troops.

If we fail to keep our commitment in Bosnia, the credibility of our leadership elsewhere in Europe and throughout the world will be called into question.

I urge my colleagues to support our troops in Europe by supporting the Hamilton resolution.

Ms. ESHOO. Mr. Speaker, I rise to urge my colleagues to support the Hamilton resolution on American troops in Bosnia.

My decision on what is the proper course of action for the United States to take in this Balkan conflict is the most difficult one I have faced since coming to Congress. I have searched my conscience to do what is best for my country, understanding that many of my constituents do not support American troops in the Balkans.

I have been horrified by the violations of human rights that have taken place in Bosnia—the ethnic cleansing, the concentration camps, the rapes, the mass murders, the wanton military attacks against unarmed civilians.

At the same time, I could not support the provision of American arms for the Bosnian Moslems or Croats, because I feared it would lead to more killings, more disregard for human rights and human life.

This is a crisis that has defied easy answers. If there were a simple solution to bringing this bloodshed to an end, our European allies would have accomplished it.

They were not able to bring an end to this war and, as a result, the United States has led the effort for peace, bringing the parties in conflict, at their request, to the negotiating table.

The President, in his capacity as Commander in Chief has exercised his constitutional authority. The Congress will now decide whether or not we will support American Troops, already being deployed on the Ground.

American troops deserve the unequivocal support of the Congress in this effort for peace, for peace, not war.

I recognize fully that there are risks attendant to this peace mission, but the United States of America must be on the side of peace and lead—demonstrate to the world that we can and will live up to our great heritage and place a moral force for peace on the blood-stained soil of the Balkans. The pursuit of peace must rise above the pursuit of reelection.

Two of the resolutions before us tonight do not provide complete support for American troops. The Dornan resolution purports to back our peacekeepers, but refuses to give them funds to do their job. The Buyer/Skelton resolution expresses confidence in our forces but undercuts the justification for their deployment.

Anything less than our total commitment to backing the women and men of the United States Armed Forces at a time when they are trying to bring peace to Bosnia injects politics, not statesmanship. While the United States of America cannot be a policeman of the world, we cannot be bystanders either. The exhortation "Blessed are the peacemakers" moves me to support this effort.

Only the Hamilton resolution expresses our support clearly and without reservation and I support it.

Mrs. CLAYTON. Mr. Speaker, tonight America stands at a crossroads. Tonight we must decide whether we are going to honor our global commitments and responsibilities, or are we going to retreat into the muddy waters of isolationism, turning our back on our friends and allies. Tonight, Mr. Speaker, this body must decide if we are going to stand firmly behind our troops or are we going to point fingers and make a stance for political gain?

The choice is simple, Mr. Speaker, tonight we must act to honor our global commitments and stand firmly behind our American troops.

Mr. Speaker, the case for United States military involvement in Bosnia is clear, it is compelling, and it is credible. First, the Dayton Peace Accord is an American brokered peace agreement. Failure by the United States to participate in enforcing this agreement will greatly diminish American leadership and call into question the viability of NATO. Second, faith in our democratic ideals obliges us to act. Over 250,000 men, women, and children have died in this war, while 2 million more have been forced into becoming refugees through "ethnic cleansing" and torture. Third, American troops will make up one-third of a much larger contingent of British, French, German, Russian, and other troops whose mission it will be to enforce a peace agreement that the Presidents of Bosnia, Croatia, and Serbia have willingly entered into. Accordingly, the risk to these troops will be much less than if they were being used as combatants to militarily impose an American solution. Fourth, American participation now, will prevent the war from reigniting and spreading into neighboring NATO allies and struggling new democracies. Widespread conflict in Europe would threaten our security and require a far different and more costly American intervention in the future.

At stake, Mr. Speaker, is nothing less than the ability of the United States to influence, shape, and guide the complex forces that are tearing at the seams of not only the United States, but of the world. For, make no mistake about it, Mr. Speaker, a failure of the United States to share in the burden of enforcing the peace in Bosnia will be a direct abrogation of American leadership—leadership, that we have earned through the sweat and blood of hundreds of thousands of our young men and women, who died and sacrificed so that we may know peace and prosperity.

However, as I have said before, placing the lives of American soldiers at risk is something that should never be done lightly. They are the living embodiment of our collective desires and dreams for a better tomorrow. As the symbolic custodians of the public will, this body has an obligation to ensure that these young men and women are supported and that they are given the very best chance to successfully fulfill their mission. The Dayton Peace Accord does these things.

Mr. Speaker, Bosnia is a test. It is a test of our willingness to lead in an uncertain world. And, it is a test of our commitment to our NATO and Russian allies.

Some of my colleagues, Mr. Speaker, will argue that the conflict in Bosnia does not threaten our vital national security interests sufficiently enough to merit risking the lives of 25,000 American soldiers. But, I ask, who among us, Mr. Speaker, does not believe that the viability and vitality of NATO as an entity will be called into question if the United States fails to act now, at this crucial period in our history when Europe is experiencing its most brutal conflict since World War II? Who among us does not believe that our enemies will be emboldened to act in the face of American inaction and indecision? Who among us, Mr. Speaker, believes that the United States will be able to influence and coerce other nations to act when we ourselves are unwilling to commit our own sons and daughters?

Mr. Speaker, leadership requires much more than words—it demands action. Through American-led NATO airstrikes and consistent American diplomacy, the Presidents of Serbia, Bosnia and Croatia came to Dayton, OH, to pursue peace. It is that peace agreement that we must now act to enforce. History has taught us that in the absence of American leadership and involvement in Europe, aggressive regimes rise to threaten, not only the security of European neighbors, but our own vital national security interests. American inaction now, Mr. Speaker, will without doubt bring to an end the fragile peace that we are now witnessing blossom in Bosnia. Have we forgotten the horrible pictures of the malnourished and underclothed men waiting to die in the concentration camps spread across the remains of Yugoslavia? Have we forgotten the testimony of the thousands of women who were viciously raped or helplessly watched as their young sons, brothers, husbands, or fathers were dragged from their homes and villages never to be seen again? By doing nothing, Mr. Speaker, do we condemn these people to relive the horror of the past 4 years? Peace is at hand, Mr. Speaker, and leadership demands that we act to protect and foster it.

Yes, Mr. Speaker, Bosnia is a test. But, it is a test that we can and we must pass! The political and military objectives are clear. Unlike Vietnam, American troops will not be acting to militarily impose an American solution, but rather, they will be working in tandem with 40,000 Russian, British, French, German, and other European troops over a limited timeframe to enforce the terms of a negotiated peace—a peace that the Presidents of Bosnia, Serbia, and Croatia, have agreed upon. Neither, Mr. Speaker will our forces suffer the same fate as the United Nations Protection Force—left ineffective and ultimately irrelevant, unable to defend themselves let alone protect United Nations designated safe areas. Our forces and their European and Russian counterparts will have the military capability and authority to repel any threats to their security or violations of the Peace Agreement.

Further, Mr. Speaker, American troops will not be asked to mediate a centuries-old ethnic conflict, rather, we are intervening with our allies at the behest of the warring parties themselves, to conclude this most recent and bloodiest chapter of that conflict. Through our actions, we are giving the Bosnians, Serbs, and Croats time and space to nurture and foster peace. It is incumbent upon them to build upon this peace and shape a society in which different ethnicities and religious beliefs are seen as strengths and are embraced, rather than as weaknesses and rejected.

Accordingly, Mr. Speaker, let us not, in our rightful concentration on our own domestic problems, abrogate our global responsibilities and leadership. Let us not, Mr. Speaker, forget about the 250,000 Bosnians, Serbs, and Croats who have lost their lives in this bloody conflict and the countless others who have been wounded or have been forced to flee their homes because of ethnic cleansing. Let us not, in our desire to protect our brave sons and daughters, allow this war to spread beyond its current constraints and threaten Macedonia or Greece. Let us not, Mr. Speaker, forget about the lessons of history that have taught us to carefully guard ourselves against naive calls for isolationism. For we have learned, through the sweat and blood of our young men and women that freedom is not free and leadership requires more than words—it demands action.

Mr. POMEROY. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of the resolution offered by Mr. HAMILTON to express the support of Congress for the United States troops who will be deployed to Bosnia.

The deployment of U.S. troops is one of the most solemn and difficult decisions a country must make. Even when the mission is not to do battle but to preserve peace as is the case in Bosnia, the deployment of our Armed Forces involves inherent risk. No President and no Member of Congress could ever lightly consider the question of sending U.S. soldiers overseas in support of our national interests.

I would have preferred that the implementation of the Bosnian peace accord would not have required the deployment of U.S. troops. However, the President has made the commitment of our forces and, tonight, several hundred United States troops are in Bosnia and several thousand more are on their way. The choice for the House is whether to support those troops and the mission they seek to accomplish.

In my view, the Hamilton resolution is the only option before us that provides clear and unambiguous support for the brave American men and women who will be serving in Bosnia. While acknowledging that members of Congress continue to have concerns about the implementation of the Dayton Peace Accord, the Hamilton motion says that our soldiers deserve the unequivocal support of the U.S. Congress and the American people. Only the Hamilton motion sets aside the differences in policy that have brought us to this point and simply tells our troops that we support you and the job you are being called to do.

The actions of this House have real consequences for both our foreign policy and our troops who will serve in Bosnia. If we reject our proud tradition of bipartisanship in foreign relations, we will dishearten our friends and embolden our enemies. If, as some suggest, we say to U.S. troops that we support you as individuals but reject the job you are trying to do, it is an empty gesture. What's worse, an equivocating message from Congress that calls into question U.S. resolve threatens U.S. troops by encouraging isolated rogue elements who would resort to violence to derail the peace agreement.

I urge my colleagues to support the Hamilton resolution.

OFFERED BY MR. HAMILTON

Mr. HAMILTON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the resolution be modified by deleting the preamble and all of the text before the resolved clause, so that the resolution would simply read "Resolved, that the House of Representatives unequivocally supports the men and women of the United States Armed Forces who are carrying out their mission in support of peace in Bosnia and Herzegovina with professional excellence, dedicated patriotism, and exemplary bravery."

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Indiana?

Mr. BAKER of California. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the right to object. On page 3 of the Buyer resolution, it says without any equivocation that the House of Representatives declares; Second, it is confident that the members of the U.S. Armed Forces, in whom it has the greatest pride and admiration, will perform their responsibilities with professional excellence, dedicated patriotism, and exemplary courage.

Paragraph number 4 was written by the staff of the gentleman from Missouri [Mr. GEPHARDT], and that has already been referred to earlier. We have covered this over and over.

Mr. HAMILTON. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BAKER of California. Reserving the right to object, I yield to the gentleman from Indiana.

Mr. HAMILTON. Mr. Speaker, there is nothing in the Buyer-Skelton resolution which specifically puts the Congress of the United States on record in support of the troops. The gentleman correctly points out that we express confidence in those troops, and that is an important thing to do. In the clause mentioned by my friend, the gentlemen from New York [Mr. GILMAN], where he uses the word "support" a couple of times, that refers not to the Congress, but to the President and the Secretary of Defense ensuring that the commander of U.S. forces that are deployed in and around the republic, that they are furnished resources and support. That does not put the Congress on record in support.

My friends, I think this is an important matter. We have troops in the field. We have all kinds of differences in this body about the policy. They have been very well debated in this institution today. But I beg you, let us conclude on a unanimous note with a simple support of the troops. We will strip out all other language that raises questions for Members on the other side.

Mr. BAKER of California. Mr. Speaker, respectfully reclaiming my time, both paragraph 4 which the gentleman read and which mentions "support" three times, on line 4, page 3, the House of Representatives declares that. Then it goes to four and says it supports, supports, supports.

I am very respectful of the gentleman's original resolution which states the following: "Whereas the President has asked the people and the Congress of the United States to support the placement of United States Armed Forces on the ground," et cetera.

The gentleman rightfully struck that. That was the original intent of this resolution, sir, not thanking the troops. The Buyer resolution thanks the troops.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BAKER of California. I yield to the gentleman from Illinois.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I just want to point out to my friend from Indiana, and this perhaps has already been pointed out, but line 20 on page 3 says the President and Secretary of Defense should rely on the judgment of the commander of the United States Armed Forces deployed in and around the territory of the Republic of Bosnia and Herzegovina in all matters affecting the safety, support, and well-being of such members of the Armed Forces.

Then, four, the President and the Secretary of Defense should ensure the commander of the U.S. Armed Forces that are deployed in and around the territory of the Republic of Bosnia and Herzegovina are furnished the resources and support that he needs to ensure the safety, support and well-being of such members of the Armed Forces.

Mr. BAKER of California. Mr. Speaker, reclaiming my time, the greatest way to support our troops would have been to keep them home. We lost that by five votes.

Mr. Speaker, I object.
The SPEAKER pro tempore. Objection is heard.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

Mr. HASTINGS of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman will state it.

Mr. HASTINGS of Florida. Mr. Speaker, does any Member of the House of Representatives who supports the troops in this matter have the right to seek modification, such that he or she could make a representation that they wish to request unanimous consent that we do exactly what the gentleman from Indiana [Mr. HAMILTON] set forth?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair would state that that is not a parliamentary inquiry.

ORDER OF BUSINESS

Mr. VOLKMER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that tomorrow morning the first order of business be the Senate resolution sponsored by the majority leader, Mr. DOLE.

Mr. FRISA. Mr. Speaker, I object.
The SPEAKER pro tempore. Objection is heard.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, the objector has to stand so we know who it is.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman who objected will please stand.

The gentleman from New York [Mr. FRISA] stood.

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Speaker, point of order. The gentleman did not stand and object. He sat and objected.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from New York [Mr. FRISA] objected.

Pursuant to section 4 of House Resolution 304, the previous question is ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the resolution.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the noes appeared to have it.

Mr. COLEMAN. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.
The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 190, nays 237, answered "present" 1, not voting 4, as follows:

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks on resolutions concerning Bosnia considering this evening.

Mr. SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

OPPOSING THE NUCLEAR WASTE POLICY ACT OF 1995

(Mr. ENSIGN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. ENSIGN. Mr. Speaker, today I rise to talk about House Resolution 1020, the nuclear waste issue for a deep repository and interim storage that will be located in Nevada. Mr. Speaker, House Resolution 1020 busts the Federal budget. I have a letter here from the gentleman from Ohio, JOHN KASICH, chairman of the Committee on the Budget, which says he will not give a budget waiver to this bill. The importance of that is because this bill does bust the Federal budget by over $4 billion in the next 7 years.

This bill has many other things that are wrong with it, but right now we are waging the biggest budget debate in anybody's recent memory on the budget in the United States. This would be a totally inappropriate time to go busting the budget by an additional $4 billion when we are trying to balance the Federal budget in the next 7 years.

Mr. Speaker, I must oppose severely, for the people of the State of Nevada, this bill which will target Yucca Mountain and nuclear waste in Nevada.

Mr. Speaker, I include for the RECORD the letter from the chairman of the Committee on the Budget.

COMMITTEE ON THE BUDGET,
December 8, 1995.

Hon. GERALD B.H. SOLOMON,
Chairman, Committee on Rules,
House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: I am writing to you regarding H.R. 1020, the "Integrated Spent Nuclear Fuel Management Act of 1995". In its present form the bill violates the Congressional Budget Act of 1974 and could trigger automatic cuts in key entitlement programs under pay-as-you-go (PAYGO) requirements.

As you are probably aware, H.R. 1020 is designed to establish an interim nuclear waste storage facility at Yucca Mountain, Nevada as well as set up procedures for the eventual development of a permanent high-level radioactive waste storage site. I am concerned with Section 401(a)(2) of the bill that replaces the current mandatory fee paid by electric utilities for nuclear waste disposal with a discretionary fee that could vary subject to the level of appropriations provided for the program.

As currently written, the bill violates Section 311(a) of the Budget Act by providing new budget authority rules in excess of the levels set forth in the conference report accompanying H. Con. Res. 67. This bill, in the absence of further legislative action, would increase budget authority by $585 million in fiscal year 1996 and approximately $3.0 billion over the five year period from fiscal year 1996 through 2000.

By changing the nuclear waste disposal fee from mandatory to discretionary, a PAYGO (Section 252 of the Deficit Control Act of 1985) issue arises. The nuclear waste disposal fee change results in approximately $600 million per year in foregone offsetting receipts, a loss of $4.2 billion over the period from fiscal year 1996 through 2002. Absent other legislation, this could trigger a sequester of critical mandatory spending programs.

Furthermore, unless the discretionary spending caps are reduced, this legislation could increase the amount that can be spent under the discretionary spending caps. Increased discretionary spending would lead to higher budget deficits. This would occur because the measure authorizes offsetting collections, and the income generated by these offsetting collections creates room under the discretionary spending caps as set forth in current law for increased spending.

During our negotiations with the Administration, we have emphasized the need to reduce spending in order to achieve a balanced budget. I am concerned that passage of this bill in its current form would send the wrong signal to the Administration.

Thank you for your consideration, and I look forward to working with you to solve the problems in this bill.

Sincerely,

JOHN R. KASICH,
Chairman.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate by Mr. Lundregan, one of its clerks, announced that the bill from the House (H.R. 2606) "An Act to prohibit the use of funds appropriated to the Department of Defense from being used for the deployment on the ground of United States Armed Forces in the Republic of Bosnia and Herzegovina as part of any peacekeeping operation, or as part of any implementation force, unless funds for such deployment are specifically appropriated by law" did fail to pass the Senate.

The message also announced that the Senate had passed a joint resolution of the following title, in which the concurrence of the House is requested:

S.J. Res. 44. Joint resolution concerning the Deployment of United States Armed Forces in Bosnia and Herzegovina.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

Mr. SAM JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I was unavoidably detained for rollcall vote No. 844 on December 7, 1995, Pearl Harbor day, and consequently missed the vote on the conference report for VA-HUD appropriations. Had I been present, I would have voted "aye."
