MISSING CHILDREN LEGISLATION

• Ms. SNOWE. Mr. President, I introduce a small but important piece of legislation designed to assist parents in times of terrible crisis and need, times that every parent has nightmares about—when their children are missing.

Imagine the horror of discovering that your child is missing. Imagine the pain and emotion that overcomes a family at such a time. Imagine the strength and dedication that such families muster in order to do everything possible to locate that child. And imagine how this horror and devastation becomes compounded by senseless Government regulations which hinder their efforts to locate their children.

Consider the tragic experience of Claudine and Don Ryce, the parents of Jimmy Ryce, a 10-year-old Florida boy who disappeared on September 11 of this year. Jimmy disappeared somewhere in the three square blocks between his school bus stop and his home.

Tragically, Jimmy's body was found late last week. I extend my deepest sympathy, and my most sincere condolences, to his family.

I want Jimmy's parents to know that I heard about the frustration they encountered as they searched for their son. I want them to know that Congress will do something to rectify this. Today, I want to break down one barrier that they encountered in their vigilant efforts to locate their son.

Jimmy's parents tell the story of how simple tasks, such as posting notices in Federal buildings with Jimmy's picture on it, were frustrated by senseless Government regulation. They tell of how, with the assistance of the FBI, they would post these notices in one Federal agency building, only to have them removed by employees of another agency. Imagine how frustrating this must be to parents of missing children. How frustrating this must be, especially since photographs of missing children are the most effective tool we have for locating these children.

Unfortunately, far too many children are missing in this country. A 1990 study by the Department of Justice—the most recent study on this issue—found that in 1988 there were as many as:

114,600 attempted abductions of children by non-family members;

4,600 abductions by non-family members reported to the police;

300 abductions by non-family members where the children were gone for long periods of time or were murdered;

354,000 children abducted by family members;

450,700 children who ran away; and

438,200 children who were lost, injured or otherwise missing.

Moreover, the National Crime Information Center reports that approximately 60,000 children are missing at any given time.

The legislation that I introduce today is designed to help the parents of these missing children by eliminating one barrier that Jimmy's parents faced in their search for their son.

This legislation amends the Protection of Public Property Act, which empowers the General Services Administration [GSA] to set rules governing Federal property under its control. Currently, Federal regulations issued by the GSA prohibit the posting of materials on Federal property. My bill directs the GSA to make a very important exception to these rules, and requires the GSA to draft regulations allowing the posting of notices designed to locate missing children. It also ensures that Federal employees cannot needlessly remove these posters.

As Jimmy's father said, "There are things the Government can do, simple things, that would make it easier to publicize" that a child is missing. He also said that we need to "turn these agencies into our allies."

Well, Mr. Ryce, you are correct, and I believe that this legislation will do just that. •
