

is a tax cut, and they are going to use Medicare to pay for it, and make no mistake about it, and it is not scare tactics. It is telling the senior citizens the truth, and that is what scares them.

Mr. SABO. The gentleman from North Carolina has good judgment.

Mr. HOBSON. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Texas [Mr. DELAY].

Mr. DELAY. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to this sad alternative to a real balanced budget.

The President agreed almost a month ago to balance the budget using honest numbers. Instead, he has offered us this budget, unbalanced and discredited.

This budget alternative has been discredited for two simple reasons. It does not balance. It will not get any support from an overwhelming bipartisan majority of this House.

First, the budget does not balance. It does not even come close to balancing. Even with a parade of smoke and mirrors that would make Houdini blush, the President's budget still remains $87 billion short of balance.

Why is reaching balance so important? Because if we do not reach balance, we cannot get the balanced budget dividend.

The President wants his cake, and wants to eat it too. That may work in the White House, but it does not work in the real world.

To get interest rates down, to give middle-class families a break on car loans, on mortgage rates, on school loans, we need a balanced budget.

And if my colleagues do not believe me, look what happened yesterday on the stock market.

Second, this budget will not come close to receiving a majority vote in this House, and that opposition will be bipartisan. Members on both sides realize that the President's budget is a loser.

My question to the President is this: If you knew it was wildly unpopular, why did you put it on the table?

And that is the real reason why we are voting on this alternative. We have not been able to engage the President in honest discussions, so we are forced to show the American people where the administration has failed. And it has failed miserably.

So, I urge my colleagues on both sides of the aisle to send the President another message:

Get serious on a real balanced budget. Keep your promise, keep your word, and work with the Congress to save America's future.

Balance the budget now.

Mr. SABO. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Virginia [Mr. PAYNE].

Mr. PAYNE of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, sometimes the answers to our problems are so obvious that we miss them entirely, and that is exactly what is happening right now in this debate.

With the budget developed by the Democratic coalition, we can break this impasse right now. We can give the American people the best Christmas present ever: A budget that is balanced fairly and equitably.

Our plan balances the budget in 7 years under CBO scoring, it reduces the deficit faster and deeper than the Republican plan, and it provides greater resources to programs vital to working Americans.

But let me use my time to focus for a moment just on Medicare.

The Coalition has developed a Medicare reform plan that meets the demand of the American people for fairness, and efficiency and reform. It assures the solvency of Medicare through the year 2014. It asks all participants in Medicare to share in protecting the program's future. It achieves private-sector innovations, including provider sponsored networks and private-sector managed care. It provides expanded coverage for preventive care. It avoids the deep cuts that threaten the future of rural hospitals in my district and other rural areas.

Our bill provides $100 billion more for Medicaid than does the Republican Conference plan, and by doing so it insures health care coverage for our most vulnerable citizens and for our rural communities. This is why an increasing number of health providers are lining up behind the coalition's Medicare reforms.

Just last Thursday, the American Hospital Association issued a statement which said it is time for a bipartisan solution on the budget and on Medicare and Medicaid, and the coalition plan is a good framework. More than a dozen other leading organizations have joined the AHA in praising our budget's health care provisions.
