

He has worked with developers and other community leaders to rebuild the city's tax base and placed new emphasis on creating and improving affordable housing and social programs in priority neighborhoods. He works tirelessly to raise education standards and has shown unfaltering commitment to improving race relations.

In 1984, after only 3 years in Charlottesville, David was appointed to the city's Social Development Commission. Four years later he became the Chair of that commission. Since being elected to city council in 1990 he has served as Chair of the Charlottesville Redevelopment and Housing Authority, co-chair of the West Main Street Task Force, and as a member of the Regional Housing Task Force. He has also chaired the Charlottesville Social Development Commission and the Charlottesville Committee on Race Relations and Public Sector.

As a member of the city council, David devotes himself to serving the best interest of the city and its residents. He has used everything from the Internet to open houses and has attended hundreds of public events to remain accessible and keep in touch with the wants and needs of his constituents.

A firm believer in empowering government at the local level, David confronts each issue with an enlightened blend of prudence and vigor. He delves to the heart of every matter, often taking the job home with him. And, he has never been afraid to weather controversy and opposition in doing what he felt was best for Charlottesville.

As Charlottesville enters the 21st century, its citizens are fortunate to have a public servant with such uncommon devotion to his calling. And, with David remaining on city council, they can rest assured that he will continue to work tirelessly with their general welfare and Charlottesville's future in mind.

Mr. Speaker, I consider myself privileged to have worked with David Toscano and I am proud to take this milestone in the man's career as an opportunity to honor his outstanding service and continued dedication.
