ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

LEGISLATION TO AMEND THE COMMODITY EXCHANGE ACT

- Mr. LUGAR. Mr. President, today Senator LEAHY and I announced that we will propose legislation to amend the Commodity Exchange Act, which establishes the ground rules for commodity futures trading in the United States. Our decision to proceed with legislation follows a public hearing on June 5 and extensive discussions with industry and federal regulators.

I commend Senator LEAHY for his bipartisan cooperation in this as in so many other matters. In order that our colleagues and the general public may understand the legislation we plan to introduce, I ask that a statement issued earlier today by the two of us be printed in the RECORD. I further ask that a letter signed by the two of us and addressed to Acting CFTC Commissioner Tull also be printed in the RECORD.

The material follows:

REFORMING AND UPDATING THE COMMODITY EXCHANGE ACT: OUTLINE OF PLANNED LEGISLATION

The Commodity Exchange Act has benefited the American economy. It has helped encourage a dynamic, world-class futures trading industry that allows farmers, ranchers and other business operators to manage risk, provides investment opportunities and offers protection to consumers of its services. From time to time, Congress has re-examined the Act to bring it up to date with changing markets. Such an update is now opportune.

On June 5, the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry heard testimony on the need to update the Commodity Exchange Act. Since then, committee staff have consulted extensively with federal agencies and private industry, seeking to explore the implications of legislative proposals by various groups.

As a result of this thorough process, we have decided to introduce legislation to amend the Commodity Exchange Act. Because it is late in the legislative session, it is unlikely that the bill will become law this year. We intend it to spark discussion, with the aim of completing work on revisions to the Act in 1997.

In considering such legislation, we have been ably advised by CFTC staff. While the CFTC is unconvinced that new legislation is needed, commission officials have cooperated with our staff whenever they have been asked. We want to thank them publicly for this assistance.

In addition, commission staff have been receptive to addressing some issues through administrative action. Although some reforms proposed in the legislation are beyond the commission’s current statutory authorities, others could be resolved without legislation. We encourage the CFTC to work toward this end.

There is a public interest in a strong, competitive U.S. futures industry because of its critical role in price discovery and business management. The Act implies, and requires, a degree of regulation. In recent years, U.S. futures exchanges have also faced increasing competition from foreign exchanges and from over-the-counter derivative products.

U.S. exchanges face some regulatory costs that are not borne by their competitors. The Act, and the Commodity Futures Trading Commission’s actions to implement its requirements, must strike an appropriate balance between prudent regulation and the need for a cost-competitive industry.

We will introduce legislation in September. The reason for delaying introduction is the provision of the Treasury amendment. The amendment excludes certain transactions from the CFTC’s jurisdiction and has been the subject of varying interpretations since it was enacted. Many firms and associations have requested that Congress clarify the Treasury amendment, and we agree that clarification is in order.

The CFTC and the Treasury Department have been working to arrive at a common interpretation of the Treasury amendment. We believe it is wise to give them, and other relevant agencies, a chance to complete these discussions before making a legislative proposal. Therefore, we are writing to Secretary Rubin and Acting Chairman Tull to encourage their agencies to complete their discussions and advise us of their progress. If these conclusions suggest a need to modify the Treasury amendment, we will strongly consider incorporating those modifications into the bill we introduce.

In order for our colleagues to have an opportunity to examine the legislation before this session of Congress ends, we will need to introduce the bill in the first week Congress returns from the August recess, that is the week ending September 6. Therefore, we would like to receive the Administration’s comments before the Labor Day weekend. It is premature to propose a specific change to the Treasury amendment. However, we can say that we do not intend for the CFTC to become involved in markets where it does not now have any significant role. An example is the “when-issued” market in Treasury securities.

We invite public comment during August on the legislative proposals we will outline in this statement. The bill we introduce in September will be a draft. It might subsequently be scaled back but it also might be expanded to make additional changes to the Act. It will be neither an omnibus nor a gut amendment. It will represent our best judgment of how the Act should prudently be changed, but our minds remain open to other approaches.

The committee’s work on the Commodity Exchange Act has been bipartisan and collegial. Like the 1996 farm bill and the landmark food safety legislation now on the President’s desk, and other important laws originated by the committee, this legislative effort is one on which we work together.

A summary of planned legislative provisions follows.
CONGRESSIONAL RECORD — SENATE

S9621

August 2, 1996

CONGRESSional Record — SENATE

Considerations required in regulatory actions.—For each significant regulation it imposes (not including enforcement, emergency and similar actions), the CFTC will be directed to take into account both the anticipated costs and the anticipated benefits of the action it contemplates, and to explain publicly its evaluation of the various costs and benefits. However, we are confident, CFTC will consider whether the proposed action, taken as a whole, will promote customer protection, market integrity and efficiency, consumer protection and sound risk management. The provision will apply to actions commenced after the date of enactment, and will require analysis in the strict, quantitative sense.

Audit trail.—The bill will clarify the intent of Congress that the audit trail statute does not mandate the development or adoption of any particular technology, but establishes a performance standard. This clarification will be consistent with 1995 Senate testimony by then-Chairman Mary Schapiro.

Contract designation.—The legislation will end the requirement that proposed futures contracts be pre-approved by the CFTC before trading can commence. Instead, the bill will provide that exchanges must submit information about contracts they intend to trade and, if the CFTC does not have a reason to believe the contract is susceptible to manipulation, violates the Act or is contrary to the public interest, will approve the contract terms. The CFTC will analyze the information with a presumption in favor of allowing the contract to trade. However, within the examination period, the CFTC may require additional information, or delay the start of trading for a limited time, if it finds reason to believe the contract is susceptible to manipulation, violates the Act or is contrary to the public interest. Ultimately, the CFTC would have the ability to prevent exchange trading, but only after instituting proceedings to disallow the exchange from commencing trading. Comments are invited on the appropriate length for the periods specified above.

Similar procedures would apply to other proposed exchange rules. Committee report language will direct the CFTC to report, on an ongoing basis, its evaluation of how well exchange governing bodies meet the statutory requirement for meaningful representation of a diversity of interests.

Disciplinary actions and penalties.—The bill will state that when Congress returns from its August recess, that is the week ending September 6, 1996, the Treasury amendment was cited by several witnesses as a provision of the Act that is the week ending September 6, 1996. We would appreciate hearing from relevant federal agencies their views on the Treasury amendment before the Labor Day holiday, if possible. However, we are confident you share our strong hope that agencies will resolve any differences by that time and arrive at a common understanding, so that the statute’s provisions and scope can be made clear.

Thank you for your assistance in this matter. A similar letter has been sent to Secretary Rubin.

Sincerely yours,

Patrick J. Leahy, Ranking Democratic Member.

Richard G. Lugar, Chairman.

CONNECTICUT SUPREME COURT

Justice T. Clark Hull

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I rise today to pay tribute to one of Connecticut’s most colorful and witty politicians, Connecticut State Supreme Court Justice T. Clark Hull. Known for his penetrating intelligence and passion for justice—and perhaps better known for his warmth and good spirit—T. Clark Hull, had the rare distinction of serving at the top levels of all three branches of state government—executive, legislative and judicial.

Born in Derby, CT in 1921, T. Clark Hull attended many prestigious academic institutions including Philips Exeter Academy, Yale University and Harvard Law School, and yet he always retained the perspective of a common man.

His political career spanned some 33 years, beginning with his election to the Connecticut State Senate in 1962. He was known as a liberal Republican who charmed many conservatives, and his Irish humor and zest for public service eventually earned him the
