

The Chamber of Commerce is a strong and independent leader of the business firms of Calumet region, and thus addresses issues that affect its members and the community. The Chamber has lent greatly to the development of this fine community over the years and should be recognized for its spirit of leadership and vision.

Currently, the Calumet City Chamber of Commerce provides many services to its residents. From initiating the area's ambulance program to attracting new business to the area, the Chamber has shown a devotion to continuing to build and revitalize the region. Community strength, in part, stems from those who are willing to give back to their patrons, the very community they serve. We all share a vision of good schools, safe streets, and a healthy commerce. The Chamber should be commended to their dedication toward achieving this goal.

The 60th anniversary of the Calumet City Chamber of Commerce will be celebrated this evening, Saturday, November 8. At this time the Calumet City Chamber will install its new officers for 1998 who include: Frank Orsini, president, Mike Sawicki, vice president, Don Todd, treasurer, Kenneth M. Tease, executive manager.

Board of Directors: Tom Cornwell, Harry Jones, Jeanette Sackol, Elaine Lane, Bob Sanders, George Karl, Tom Sanders, Ray Mika, Jerry Eurlay, Chris Martin, and Mike Gauthier.

It is truly fitting that this Chamber celebrate 60 years of history and progress. I extend my best wishes to the Chamber's membership, its present and incoming leaders for many more prosperous years to come.

THE NATIONAL HISTORIC PRESERVATION ACT

HON. MARK E. SOUDER

OF INDIANA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Saturday, November 8, 1997

Mr. SOUDER. Mr. Speaker, today, I am introducing the National Historic Preservation Act, which would establish a national historic light station preservation program. It has been introduced in the other body by the chairman of the Energy and Natural Resources Committee, Senator FRANK MURKOWSKI of Alaska.

As you may know, Mr. Speaker, lighthouses have served as lifesaving navigational aids since before the turn of the century. However, many of these lighthouses have outlived their use to the Coast Guard as navigational aids. Thus, the Coast Guard is left with surplus lighthouses, and declares them excessed. The question then becomes, who cares for these lighthouses once they leave the Coast Guard's hands? If the land on which a particular lighthouse in question was first granted by a Presidential Order to the U.S. Lighthouse Establishment, it is considered to be public domain, and has to be first offered through the Bureau of Land Management [BLM] to the Interior Department. If the Interior Department does not claim the land, then the lighthouse is placed in the General Service Administration's [GSA] excessing process. If the property is not considered public domain, then the lighthouse is placed directly into the GSA excessing process.

Through the GSA process, priority is first granted to Federal agencies. This means that the lighthouse could be used for such things as an office for the Internal Revenue Service. If no Federal agency claims it, the property is then surveyed to see if it is suitable to qualify under the McKinney Homeless Assistance Act, thereby allowing it to be transferred to those organizations that assist the homeless. Should neither of these categories claim the lighthouse, it is then offered to the State in which it is located, possibly to be used for recreation purposes. If the State does not claim it, then it is offered to the local government where the property is located. Finally, if the lighthouse is still available at the end of the GSA process, it is put up for public sale.

The real tragedy here, Mr. Speaker, is that many of these lighthouses have been protected and preserved over the years by nonprofit historical lighthouse societies, who have donated a great deal of time, money, and resources to lighthouse preservation. As you can see, in order to have the lighthouses conveyed to them, they must wait through the long process described above, and then must bid on them. This process basically requires these nonprofit organizations to compete financially with private groups that have greater access to funds, and that have, in many cases not made the same commitment to the lighthouse in the past. In addition, these private groups may have plans for the lighthouse that are inconsistent with the best interests of the community. Though these nonprofit groups can, in some specific cases, purchase the lighthouse directly from the BLM, they must pay half of its market value—a value that those particular groups helped to increase over the years through their hard work. Thus, the message we are sending here is that if you're going to provide a public service by preserving historical sites, you're going to have to pay for them in the end.

I should point out that another method for conveyance is for Congress to enact separate pieces of legislation to transfer a lighthouse to a specific group. As we know, this process can be very time consuming and cumbersome considering that there are hundreds of lighthouses that will be excessed in the near future.

My legislation would introduce fairness into the conveyance process for historic lighthouses by amending the National Historic Preservation Act to transfer this process to the National Parks Service, which would be able to work in conjunction with the State Historic Preservation Officer, to establish a national historical light station program. This new program would give priority to those Government agencies that have entered into a partnership agreement with a nonprofit organization whose primary mission is historical preservation of lighthouses, and would convey them at no cost. If no such applications are offered, or approved of, then the lighthouse would be put up for public sale. Thus, this legislation would help to ensure that in those cases where a nonprofit group has been active in a particular lighthouse's preservation, and wishes to continue in its work, that that group would be given a fair shot at claiming lighthouses when the Coast Guard excesses them.

Mr. Speaker, we need to recognize the very important role lighthouses have played in this country's history. By encouraging Government agencies to join with nonprofit groups to help preserve lighthouses for the future, we will be providing a much fairer process to those who wish to continue their work in preserving these nationally historic structures.

HONORING MAYOR RAY BLEDSOE

HON. RALPH M. HALL

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Saturday, November 8, 1997

Mr. HALL of Texas. Mr. Speaker, it is a privilege for me to rise today to pay tribute to Mayor Ray Bledsoe of Howe, TX, who last month received the national Hometown Leadership Award, given by the National Association of Small Cities. Only 300 officials in the country received this award, and I am so pleased that my good friend and outstanding civic leader, Ray Bledsoe, is one of those.

Ray is always at the center of community service in Howe. He has served Howe as mayor for the past 11 years. He has spearheaded economic development and was instrumental in obtaining a connector road from Highway 11 and U.S. Highway 75. He helped put together funds for a new community center and coordinated a joint effort between the city and school district to build two new baseball parks. He is the president of the Grayson County Fair, serves on a half-dozen boards, and works about 60 hours a week taking care of the city of Howe's business—all without pay.

Ray not only provides leadership and guidance for the citizens of Howe but also provides hands-on service. Last month, as reported by the Herald Democrat, he was at the Grayson County Fair unfolding chairs, moving extension cords, and setting up booths. Earlier he built a fence around a statue of Judge Jake Loy, then got on his hands and knees and landscaped around it. Ray is willing to help with any task—no matter how large or small—and he is respected and beloved by the citizens of Howe.

Mr. Speaker, in the small towns and cities of America, the mayor plays an indispensable role in the functioning of the community. Often, as in Howe, this is an unpaid position. Too often the mayor receives far more complaints than thanks. So as we adjourn today, Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to recognize an outstanding civic leader of Howe and an outstanding American—Mayor Ray Bledsoe—and to thank him for a job well done.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

HON. MICHAEL P. FORBES

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Saturday, November 8, 1997

Mr. FORBES. Mr. Speaker, on Thursday, November 6, 1997, I appreciated being granted an excused absence for part of the day. Due to that absence, I missed several rollcall votes.

Had I not been absent for part of the day on June 6, I would have voted in the following manner:

"No" on rollcall No. 585—Motion to adjourn;

"No" on rollcall No. 586—Motion to adjourn;
