

the proposed purchase of a small number of defensive missiles while Turkey's continued occupation goes largely unremarked. The Cypriot government has consistently reaffirmed its support for complete demilitarization of the island—Turkey has flatly refused to consider it. The Cypriot government has also said they would cancel the missile orders in a minute if there was genuine progress towards a solution—Turkey has responded with more threats.

Even though Cyprus met the fiscal requirements for EU membership years ago, Turkey continues to irrationally threaten both Cyprus and the EU in an effort to derail Cypriot accession talks.

No progress has been made toward peaceful resolution of the Cyprus issue in the past year. Threats and intransigence from Ankara and the north have increased. The intransigence of the Turkish side has led to the unprecedented situation of both Tom Miller and Richard Holbrooke, the top U.S. diplomats working on the issue, to lay the blame for the current impasse squarely at the feet of the Turkish side.

The answer to this long-running tragedy clearly lies in Ankara. If we buy into efforts to shift blame and create a public relations backlash by focusing on the S-300 missiles, we will only allow Ankara to retrench in their posture of annexation by force. We have to stand clearly on the side of international law and peaceful settlement of disputes, and against lawlessness and aggression. The records of both the United States Congress and the United Nations General Assembly are clear: the illegal occupation of Cyprus must end.

I join my colleagues today in calling on the Clinton Administration to be honest about the facts of the Cyprus dispute and be honest with Turkey about our expectations. We cannot resolve this dispute on the basis of half-truths and self-delusion. What a shame it will be if we are again here on the House floor next year, marking the 25th year of occupation. I strongly hope that the Administration will do everything in its power to bring about a just resolution to this issue in the coming year. Unfortunately, based on what we have seen so far, I am not optimistic.

Mr. BILIRAKIS. I would like to thank all of my colleagues who joined me tonight, it is very, very late, and also thank the staff people who are here so very late as a result of this, to help us focus attention on this grave injustice which must be remedied.
