IN HONOR OF PAT PEACOCK

HON. MARION BERRY

OF ARKANSAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Friday, October 9, 1998

Mr. BERRY. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to Pat Peacock, a lady who means a lot to my family and the community she lives in. Ms. Peacock is from Stuttgart, AR, the "Duck and Rice Capital of the World." It is partly because of Ms. Peacock and her ambassadorial role that Stuttgart and the Grand Prairie are known far and wide as the only place to be, for a least a few days, during duck hunting season. She has worked tirelessly to promote her community and Stuttgart has reaped the rewards of all her hard work.

Ms. Peacock was instilled with a sense of service to others. Her love of the outdoors and appreciation for the need to preserve the precious heritage where she grew up, has defined her lifetime involvement to conservation and wildlife organizations. She has given countless hours to ensure that our children will inherit and appreciate what our generation has been privileged to enjoy. Her many awards include: Arkansas Conservationist of the Year, inducted into the Arkansas Outdoor Hall of Fame, member of the Game and Fish Commission, Outstanding Volunteer of the Year for Arkansas and Women's Champion Duck Caller.

Pat Peacock for many years owned and operated a small business in Stuttgart called Majestic Inc. She began as a salesperson while in high school. From that time, Ms. Peacock helped build the business into one with a fine reputation throughout the state. The competition from chain department stores in nearby cities and discount stores that hurt Main Street were tough on her small business but Pat worked hard and fine tuned her business successfully.

Pat has turned another page now. She has moved on to new challenges and opportunities. I wish her well and want to express my thanks for what she has done for the community of Stuttgart, Arkansas and Arkansas County.

THE "YEAR 2000 INFORMATION AND READINESS DISCLOSURE ACT"

HON. HENRY J. HYDE

OF ILLINOIS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Friday, October 9, 1998

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, the Year 2000 Information and Readiness Disclosure Act (S. 2392) is intended to promote the voluntary sharing of information needed to discover, avoid, or fix problems with year 2000 calculations in our nation's software, computers, and technology products. In all civil litigation including certain antitrust actions, the Act limits the extent to which year 2000 statements can be the basis for liability and it prevents certain evidentiary uses, against the maker, if a subset of such statements. However, the Act ensures that only responsible, good faith information-sharing gets such protection.

In particular, the Act protects good faith sharing of two kinds of year 2000 information: a board category called "year 2000 statements," and a narrower subcategory called "year 2000 readiness disclosures." Year 2000 statements and readiness disclosures can include any year 2000 related subject matter, but year 2000 readiness disclosures must be in writing, be clearly labeled, and concern one's own products or services. Certain already-existing year 2000 statements may be designated as year 2000 readiness disclosures and receive the protections applicable to year 2000 readiness disclosures under the Act. The protections given to year 2000 statements and readiness disclosures protect all those who help in any way to make a year 2000 statement or readiness disclosure, so a broad group of individuals and entities are protected.

The Act encourages the use of the Internet to provide notice of all matters relating to year 2000 processing. In addition, the Act protects against disclosure and use in civil actions year 2000 information voluntarily provided to the government under a "special data gathering request." Finally, the Act creates a temporary exemption to the antitrust laws for sharing of year 2000 information, unless it results in an actual agreement to boycott, allocate markets, or fix prices.

The Act does not create new causes of action or expand any existing causes of action, nor does it create new obligations or duties. The Act does not create any duty to provide notice about a year 2000 processing problem. The intent of this legislation is to promote sharing of year 2000 information. This would be frustrated if any year 2000 statement were the sole basis for any finding of liability on the part of the maker. Furthermore, it is not the intent of this legislation to hold the maker of a year 2000 readiness disclosure liable for the adequacy or sufficiency of its disclosure where such disclosure is not otherwise required by law or contract. The Act also does not affect existing contracts, tariffs, intellectual property rights or consumer protections applicable to solicitations or offers to sell consumer products.

The Act's protections are limited. The Act does not change or address in any way liability for a year 2000 processing failure; does not change or reduce any underlying duty, standard of care or liability for a year 2000 failure; does not apply to certain consumer transactions; does not prevent any underlying facts regarding a failure being demonstrated in court; does not prevent any governmental entity from requiring the disclosure of any information; and does not preclude any claim to the extent it is not based on a year 2000 statement.

The Act prevents the use as evidence against the maker of only a narrow range of year 2000 statements—year 2000 readiness disclosures—to prove the truth of the disclosure. They can, however, be put into evidence to demonstrate matters other than their truth. Further, year 2000 readiness disclosures can be used to in contract litigation as part of the evidence necessary to show anticipatory breach, repudiation, or similar actions, although they should not be the sole evidence supporting liability. A judge can limit (but not totally abrogate) this protection in order to prevent an abusive or bad-faith use of the disclosure contrary to the purposes of the Act.

Year 2000 statements other than year 2000 readiness disclosures can be brought into evidence for any purpose. However, they may not be the basis for any finding of liability against the maker, except where the maker knew the statement was false, made it with intent to deceive, or made it with reckless disregard as to its truth or falsity.

In cases of alleged trade defamation, product disparagement, and the like, year 2000 statements generally can be the basis of liability only if the maker knew the statement was wrong or was reckless about the statement's truth or falsity.

Internet website notice is generally deemed adequate. Important exceptions exist, however, and Internet website notice alone is not deemed adequate in cases of personal injury or serious property damage. In specified circumstances, in order to obtain the benefits of the Act, sellers, manufacturers, or providers of year 2000 remediation products or services must inform their customers about the effects of this Act during the course of solicitations or offers to sell.

For purpose of actions brought under the securities laws, year 2000 statements contained in filings with the Securities and Exchange Commission or Federal banking regulators and disclosures or writings that, when made, accompanied the solicitation of an offer or sale of securities are not covered by the Act.

Section 1, Short Title. This section entitles the Act the "Year 2000 Information and Readiness Disclosure Act".

Section 2, Findings and Purposes. This section lays out the findings underlying the bill and the board purposes the bill is intended to serve.

Potentially millions of pieces of technology can not recognize certain dates around the year 2000. Because year 2000 processing problems could incapacitate government, commerce, and utilities, correcting the year 2000 problem is a matter of national and global interest.

Prompt, candid, and thorough disclosure and exchange of information about year 2000 readiness would enhance year 2000 readiness. Concern about liability is impeding the sharing of such information. Uniform legal standards regarding year 2000 information are in the national interest.

Enacted under the Commerce Clause power, this Act's purpose is to promote disclosure and exchange of year 2000 information by establishing uniform legal principles.

Section 3, Definitions. This section defines various terms.

The term "antitrust laws" means section (a)(1) of the Clayton Act (15 U.S.C. §12(a)) and section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act (15 U.S.C. §45), to the extent that section applies to unfair competition, and similar State law.

The term "consumer" means an individual who acquires a consumer product for purposes other than resale.
