

record in the three-team competition between Army, Navy and Air Force. I am proud to say this is the fourth year in a row the Air Force Academy has captured the trophy and they have won 10 of the last 12 seasons.

The most important aspect of the 2000 Air Force Academy Football Team is each athlete on this team is a student first, and an athlete second. They play the game of football not to become an NFL star one day, but because they love the game of football.

Their leader is a modest southern gentleman named Fisher DeBerry whose life is driven not by football, but by his Christian faith and his family. In his 17 seasons as head football coach at the Air Force Academy he has guided his teams to an overall record of 135-72-1. He has won more football games than any other coach in service academy history and has taken the "fighting falcons" to an amazing 11 bowl games. In 1996, he served as president of the prestigious American Football Coaches Association.

The 2000 Air Force Academy football team demonstrated that hard work can overcome any obstacle. Despite being picked to finish in the lower half of their conference, they finished with an overall record of 9-3 and won a thrilling victory over Fresno State in the 2000 Silicon Bowl. Their perseverance is an inspiration to all us.

I commend the Superintendent of the Air Force Academy, General John Dallager and the Director of Athletics, Colonel Randy Spetman, along with all the coaches and players of the 2000 Air Force Academy football team for a job well done. You have set a standard of excellence that all of us should strive to achieve.●

JUDGE WALTER M. HEEN—A LIFETIME OF ACHIEVEMENT

● Mr. INOUE. Mr. President, I rise today to share with my colleagues the contributions of a fine jurist, tireless community leader, and native son of Hawaii. Nearly 50 years of public service excellence have made Walter Meheula Heen an acknowledged leading citizen, a "special treasure" of the State of Hawaii.

Judge Heen's dedicated drive to build a better Hawaii was awakened as a law student at Georgetown University in the mid-1950s. The seeds of his commitment and service were planted in childhood by his father and his uncle, Ernest and William Heen, respectively, two patriarchs of social reform in plantation-era Hawaii. It was the Heens, along with Johnny Wilson and David Trask, Sr. Who formed the core of the early Democratic Party in Hawaii.

Walter Heen's career as an elected official, state judge and U.S. district court judge includes remarkable accomplishments and historically significant achievements. Elected to the Territorial House of Representatives in 1958, the year before Statehood, Judge Heen served in the Hawaii legislature as a Representative until 1964 and was elected to the State Senate in 1966.

The "Democratic Revolution of 1954" was more than a headline or a slogan, is accurately conveyed the significant legislative agenda the new majority was committed to enact to affect fundamental changes to improve the social and economic character of the islands. Land reform, anti-trust, "Green Belt" land use, collective bargaining, and workers' compensation were to become the battle zones that would change the face of politics, legislation and the administration of justice across Hawaii. Walter Heen was on the front lines of those struggles. His cause, together with those whom he served, was to level the playing field of social and economic opportunities for all, regardless of race, class or religion.

Walter Heen served as a member of the Honolulu City Council from 1969 to 1972, including his selection as Council Chair in 1969-70. He left elective office in 1972 accepting an appointment to the State District Court, and then State Circuit Court in 1974-78.

Judge Heen's star continued to rise with his appointment as U.S. Attorney, District of Hawaii for 1978-80, and as U.S. District Court Judge, District of Hawaii in 1981. He retired from a distinguished judicial career in 1994 after 12 years as Associate Judge of the State Intermediate Court of Appeals. During that period, Heen authored several opinions on important Hawaiian issues and had occasion to sit and add his voice to the deliberation of the State Supreme Court.

Always an active contributor to community affairs, Walter Heen was a founding member of the renaissance Democratic Party revolution beginning in 1950. It was a significant political movement that focused on changing the traditional unequal and unfair distribution of opportunities available to Hawaii's minority communities. Judge Heen carried this passion for leveling the playing field throughout his career of public service. More recently, Heen added his hand to exposing improper management and unethical practices at the Bishop Estate, a charitable trust charged with the responsibility of providing children of Hawaiian ancestry with educational opportunities and achievement. While controversial, his joint authorship of the milestone piece entitled "Broken Trust", successfully led to court ordered reviews of trust operations, and the ultimate improvement and accountability of the charitable trust.

Judge Heen's volunteer activities are broad and diverse, spreading across Hawaii's community concerns. As early as 1962, Walter was singled out as the Honolulu Junior Chamber of Commerce "Outstanding Young Man of the Year." Virtually at the same time, he was Chair of the State Bar Association Ethics Committee 1961-63, President of the University of Hawaii Alumni Association, and President of the Honolulu Hawaiian Civic Club. As a member of its Founding Board of Directors, Heen launched the Big Brothers of Hawaii program that has made an enormous contribution to supporting and mentoring thousands of youth in Hawaii.

Upon his retirement from the bench, Walter Heen has continued his public service. He served as a Director of the Native Hawaiian Bar Association, Advisor to the Native Hawaiian Advisory Council, co-counsel for Hawaiian water rights in the Waiahole Ditch dispute, member of the Public Access Shoreline Study Group, 1997-1998, and member of the Governor's Economic Revitalization Task Force. Currently, Heen is the acting Executive Director of the Office of Mauna Kea Management, lending a "community voice" and oversight to the maintenance and development of the University of Hawaii's astronomical facilities at Mauna Kea's summit.

In 1996, Walter Heen was tapped to serve as the Chairman of the Hawaii Democratic Party. It was a turbulent time for a political party that has dominated Hawaii's political scene for more than 50 years. Heen led us forward in a hotly contested gubernatorial election in 1998 and then a
