STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Mr. MCCONNELL.

S. 1444. A bill to establish a Federal air marshals program under the Attorney General; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Madam President, two unmistakable American voices have emerged from the aftermath of September 11.

One voice expressed a newfound hesitancy to fly. Passengers have canceled scheduled flights en masse and I, for one, can hardly blame them. Just this week we heard chilling reports that more acts of terror may be planned in our skies, and, even after the tragic events of September 11, we continue to hear anecdotes of lax security at our Nation's airports. Almost overnight, air travel, a way of life for millions of Americans every day, is now limping along. Families who gather to celebrate holidays, businesspeople who depend upon air transport, and Americans who simply prefer the speed of airplanes, now all must deal with the awful reality of terrorism. The hard economic truth of September 11 is that it scared so many passengers from airlines that it threatens to destroy our multi-billion dollar aviation industry.

But a second, more inspiring, voice emerged from Americans after the acts of September 11, a visceral, instinctive urge to serve their country in some way after the attack on American soil. Minutes after Tuesday's tragedy, we saw real-life armies of compassion come to the aid of those whose lives were destroyed. We saw police and fire rescue units risk their lives to save their fellow citizens. We saw American families generously pour nearly $200 million of relief money to charitable organizations such as the Red Cross, the United Way, and the Salvation Army. And in memorial services and vigils all over the country, we saw Americans rallying together to pause, to pray, and to pledge that the American spirit will not be broken. Still today, in a remarkable show of patriotism, there is a chorus, especially those in law enforcement, asking "what can I do?" to protect and defend our fellow countrymen from future terrorist tragedies.

What we need to do is harness this spirit in order to make our airlines safe again for American families. So, today, I am introducing legislation that authorizes the Attorney General, as our Nation's top law enforcement official, to establish a comprehensive Federal Air Marshal program to secure airports from curbside to cockpit. And to capitalize on the desire of so many Americans to serve our country in the fight against terrorism, the legislation specifically authorizes the Attorney General to use active and retired Federal, State, and local law enforcement officials to serve in the Air Marshal program.

America needs a uniform Federal Air Marshal program to combat potential terrorism from the minute passengers arrive at an airport until the time they arrive safely at their intended destinations. This requires a professional law enforcement team to police airport points of entry, operate x-ray machines, and serve as undercover air security marshals on board commercial aircraft. While we have an existing FAA Federal Air Marshal program on board aircraft, we need to expand Federal aviation security to put Federal marshals on more flights and to stop terrorism on the ground before it can board an aircraft. For a comprehensive Air Marshal program to be most effective, we need to relieve the obligations of airport security from the FAA and the airlines, whose primary purpose is to facilitate and manage air travel, and entrust that obligation to the Department of Justice, whose primary mission is to enforce Federal law, and most important, to safeguard and protect us from terrorism.

Obviously this new Federal Air Marshals program will require additional manpower and financial resources. And that is where we intend to harness the spirit espoused by so many of our law enforcement personnel throughout the country. The new Federal Air Marshals program not only will recruit new full-time active professional marshals but will augment that program with Deputy Federal Air Marshals drawn from retired military personnel, as well as from active or retired Federal, State, and local law enforcement officers, anyone from a DEA agent to a local law enforcement officer who wants to serve his country by securing our airports and aircraft. It is also crucial that we retain a sufficient measure of cost-sharing with private and State and local entities. Private airlines and airport authorities should share a responsibility, as they do now, to help fund a portion of airport security.

The Attorney General will, of course, determine how to deploy the Deputy Air Marshals most effectively, and will ensure that they are properly trained to perform the task required of them, be it thwarting hijackers on board an aircraft or searching suspicious packages in the terminal. What is certain, however, is that tapping this reservoir of knowledgeable and experienced law enforcement officers to serve this vital national security function will allow us to put more Marshals both in the air and on the ground. Our goal should be to secure as many airports and as many aircraft as possible using the most experienced and professional staff available.

We already have models in place for the type of curbside to cockpit security envisioned in this bill. Our Federal courthouses currently are secured by our United States Marshals, who also employ Court Security Officers, CSOs, to provide security around the perimeter of the building, at each point of entry, and in the courtrooms themselves. These CSOs are themselves retired Federal, State, and local law enforcement personnel. Part of the reason our courthouses enjoy such security today is that this unified system provides for layers of security far before one enters the actual courtroom. Our democracy now demands, in the interest of our national security, that we make sure our cockpits are every bit as secure as our courthouses.

In times and events such as these, the Federal Government is not only the best answer, but the only answer. The challenge we face in securing our airports and airlines is not a matter of free market economics, it is a matter of national security, as the tragic events of September 11 made so horrifyingly clear. That is why it is imperative that we entrust this national security item with the resources, expertise, and experience of our Nation's top law enforcement agency, and that we do so immediately.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

This Act and the amendments made by this Act shall take effect 90 days after the date of enactment of this Act.

By Mr. ENZI (for himself, Mr. DORGAN, Mr. FRIST, and Mr. HUTCHINSON):

S. 1445: A bill to amend the Higher Education Act of 1965 to expand the opportunities of higher education via telecommunications; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.

Mr. ENZI. Mr. President, I am pleased to have this opportunity to introduce the Internet Equity and Education Act of 2001 in the Senate. This important legislation, which is based on the findings of the bipartisan Web-Based Education Commission on which I served, will accomplish the critical goal of giving more students in both rural and urban areas access to distance education by expanding Internet-based educational opportunities at the post-secondary level.

Specifically, this legislation, which is cosponsored by Senators DORGAN, FRIST and HUTCHINSON, will remove three regulatory barriers that are slowing the growth of distance education in our nation. First, it will modify the Department of Education's "50 percent rule" that requires institutions that are eligible for Title IV student aid programs under the Higher Education Act to offer at least 50 percent of their instruction in a classroom-based environment. This legislation will instead allow institutions to offer more than 50 percent of their classes by telecommunications methods if the institution already participates in the student loan programs and their student loan default rate is less than 10 percent for the three preceding years. This ensures that distance education options are available to schools with a proven track record of successfully administering federal financial aid programs.

Second, it will eliminate the "12 hour rule." This rule defines a week of instructional time to mean 12 hours of "regularly scheduled instruction, examinations, or preparation for examination" for programs that are offered in non-standard terms. This legislation will instead require that programs offered on a non-standard term, such as those offered by the University of Wyoming and the Western Governors University, be held to the same accountability standards as those offered on a traditional semester or quarter basis.

Third, this legislation will clarify the incentive compensation restrictions that were passed by Congress in 1992 with the intent of prohibiting colleges and universities that participate in federal student financial aid programs from paying any commission, bonus, or other incentive payments to third parties based on their success in enrolling new students. These restrictions, while well intentioned, have had the unintended consequence of preventing some higher education institutions from using third-party Web portals. This practice, which is fairly common and often necessary for many distance education and Internet based education programs, provides prospective students with access to information about the programs they offer and admissions requirements. This legislation clarifies the incentive compensation prohibitions in the Higher Education Act by allowing the use of third-party Web portals and allowing schools to appropriately reward employees for their job performance. The bill preserves the intent of the 1992 law by stating that non-salary payments to those directly involved in recruiting students or awarding financial aid are not allowed. It will also allow the Secretary of Education to impose appropriate sanctions against an institution if a violation occurs. This change to the regulation will continue to ensure that Federal student aid programs are free from fraud and abuse, while allowing prospective students to gain information about all of the post-secondary educational opportunities that are available.

As some of you may know, I have a very personal interest in the issue of distance education. I saw how effective it can be because my wife, Diana, received her masters degree in adult education by taking classes through the University of Wyoming while living here in Washington. After witnessing the high quality of the course work, the responsiveness to students' needs, and the "technology flexibility" that enabled Diana's experience, I have become a strong advocate for distance learning.

I am especially pleased to be able to sponsor this legislation at a time when the University of Wyoming is experiencing record breaking enrollment in Online UW, the web-based educational arm of the University of Wyoming Outreach School. I was impressed to learn that as of August 28, 2001 class enrollments totaled 1,164, which is a dramatic increase over the 140 students who enrolled in the spring of 1999 when the University launched this program. In addition to the enrollment growth, the number of courses that are being offered is also expanding. During the fall 2001 semester 43 online courses are available at the University of Wyoming, supporting seven degree programs or certificates. It is my hope that with the passage of this legislation, programs like those at the University of Wyoming will be able to expand even further to serve more interested students.

In closing, I would like to take this opportunity to extend my thanks to Congressman JOHNNY ISAKSON and his staff. As the Vice Chair of the Web-Based Education Commission, Congressman ISAKSON introduced this legislation in the House earlier this year and has successfully steered it through the House Education and the Workforce Committee, where it passed overwhelmingly on August 1, 2001. I look forward to the same success here in the Senate so that we might open up the possibilities of distance education to a new generation of students.

By Mr. GRAHAM (for himself, Mrs. FEINSTEIN, Mr. BAYH, Mr. NELSON of Florida, and Mr. ROCKEFELLER):

S. 1448. A bill to enhance intelligence and intelligence-related activities of the United States Government in the prevention of terrorism, and for other purposes; to the Select Committee on Intelligence.

By Mr. GRAHAM (for himself, Mrs. FEINSTEIN, Mr. BAYH, Ms. MIKULSKI, Mr. DURBIN, Mr. NELSON of Florida, and Mr. ROCKEFELLER):

S. 1449. A bill to establish the National Office for Combatting Terrorism; to the Committee on Governmental Affairs.

Mr. GRAHAM. Madam President, it has now been 10 days since our Nation was struck by a well-coordinated series of terrorist attacks. It has been 10 days since we all witnessed the horror of hijacked airliners crashing into the World Trade Center and the Pentagon. It has been 10 days since we vowed to track down and bring to justice those who assisted, financed, and harbored these terrorists and to treat them as terrorists.

Today, as the investigation proceeds, I believe it is time we begin to look beyond the crisis of September 11. It is time we begin to develop a long-term response to the continued threat of terrorism.

Terrorism ultimately is not a crisis. It is a cancerous condition, a condition that all Americans must come to grips with as we strive to return to normalcy.

Today, with several of my colleagues, I am introducing a pair of bills that offer a prescription for the condition of terrorism.

The first bill will make changes to a number of laws, including the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act of 1978, to enhance our ability to infiltrate terrorist cells, to collect information necessary to guarantee America's security, and to coordinate more effectively our domestic efforts against terrorism.

There are four primary goals of this legislation. The first relates to data collection to assure that our foreign intelligence should be brought into line with the laws that control domestic law enforcement actions. In a number of areas, we have different standards if we are collecting information for domestic law enforcement than when we are collecting analogous information for purposes of foreign intelligence.

Second, many regulations have not kept pace with the rapid changes we have seen, particularly in communication technology, and need to be updated.

Third, as we saw on September 11, most terrorist acts have both a criminal and an intelligence component. Our foreign intelligence and domestic law enforcement agencies need to be able to share information in order to protect our citizens.

Fourth, there are some strategic changes we need to make in the laws, such as better training of our local law enforcement so that they can play their appropriate role in responding to terrorism before the act to prevent terrorist actions, as opposed to just, as we are doing now at the Pentagon and in New York City, picking up the pieces of the consequences of a terrorist act that has been executed.

I emphasize that the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence has been working on these proposals for several months. We have worked closely with the appropriate Federal agencies, as well as within the Senate Judiciary Committee, the Governmental Affairs Committee, and the Armed Services Committee.

It is my hope that we will develop a consensus around the proposals other Members of Congress may have that the Attorney General has recently submitted. We do not purport that our list is exclusive. We think it represents a well-researched, solid beginning against a very serious challenge to our Nation, and we look forward to fully reviewing those recommendations that have been made within the last 72 hours by the Attorney General.

I also want to make it clear that I am mindful of the concerns we are beginning to hear from various organizations that we might overreact and impinge upon the civil liberties of our people. We would hand the ultimate victory to terrorists if we were to allow them to coerce our great Nation into compromising our highest values, personal freedom, and civil rights.

Madam President, in many ways we are here today much as the country was in the 1920s. It was at that time that America launched a national crusade against organized crime. The Nation committed itself to rooting out the corrupt captains of crime who had infiltrated labor unions, run gambling operations, trafficked in illegal drugs and, in the course of their activities, accumulated great wealth and, in many communities, great political influence.

We can take pride that over several decades an earlier generation of American leaders managed to put many of these domestic enemies behind bars and diminish their influence and their corrosive effect on our society.

I take this experience of the 20th century, our ability to begin to roll back the influence of organized crime in the United States, as a hopeful sign, a sign that we can pass on to our children and our grandchildren a world that has greatly diminished the threat we now face from terrorists. It is our hope that these two legislative proposals will be a step in that direction.

Under our proposal, the President will appoint the Director of the National Office for Combating Terrorism subject to Senate confirmation. This individual will be accountable to the President, to the Congress, and to the Nation.

One of the key responsibilities of this new office would be budget coordination to assure that all of the agencies—and there are now as many as 40 agencies that have some piece of antiterrorism activity—are operating from a coordinated plan and that resources to carry out their portions of the plan are properly coordinated. To do that will require the statutory authority from Congress.

Madam President, the second bill has as its objective to assure that the dozens of Federal agencies that have counterterrorism as one of their missions are working together in a coordinated way to detect and disarm terrorists.

There have been over the past several years several independent commissions which have reviewed the issue of terrorism. Two of our former colleagues, Senators Rudman and Hart, have headed one of those commissions. All of those commissions have endorsed the principle of a stronger central coordination of the Federal Government's efforts against terrorism.

Just this past week, the General Accounting Office issued yet another study of this issue. I quote a portion of that General Accounting Office study:

Key interagency functions are resident in several different organizations, resulting in fragmented leadership and coordination. These circumstances hinder unity of effort and limit accountability. However, the current attention being focused on this issue provides an opportunity to improve the overall leadership and coordination of programs to combat terrorism.

In other words, we need to assign responsibility to someone who will be the leader of our national effort to make certain that all of the agencies are on the field, from the Central Intelligence Agency to the FBI, and are following a common set of objectives. I am pleased that President Bush endorsed this approach in his address to the Nation.

The President called, by Executive order, for the creation of a position of homeland defense within the White House. He has assigned that responsibility to the current Governor of Pennsylvania, Tom Ridge.

I believe we should build on what the President has recommended by going a step further and making this position a statutory position.

Mr. ROCKEFELLER. Madam President, in the wake of the tragic events of September 11, 2001, it is not with pride exactly, but with a firm resolve that I join with my good friend and colleague Senator BOB GRAHAM, the chairman of the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence, in cosponsoring two important pieces of legislation: Bills to establish the National Office for Combating Terrorism and the Intelligence to Prevent Terrorism Act of 2001.

While we strive to go on and do the work that the people sent us here to do, we cannot help but feel heartsick as a Congress, and I am quite sure as individuals, when we consider the unimaginable loss of human life and the magnitude of the destruction wrought by these malicious and misguided men. But grieve though we must, it is our solemn responsibility as representatives of the American people to look into this abyss and find the lessons that may be there for us.

When a relatively large group of foreign terrorists who had lived and even trained in this country carried out a despicable and unfortunately well-choreographed wave of terror attacks months or years in the planning, it cast a harsh light on a range of deficiencies in our Nation's efforts to combat terrorism. We are made to feel vulnerable by the sheer enormity of the evil and by the realization that any of us could become targets of the next fanatical assault. Our dread might even turn to despondency if we consider the agonizing possibility that our law enforcement and intelligence establishments might have been able to prevent the horror of last Tuesday if they had had adequate mechanisms with which to collaborate on strategy, share information, and assist in investigation and apprehension of men capable of these heinous crimes.

Rather than feeling despondent, however, it is our duty as a Congress to act. This Nation and this Congress can no longer tolerate a situation in which competing missions of agencies—or competing personalities of public officials—put our citizens and our property at risk. We must create an environment of coordination between the intelligence community, our Federal, State, and local law enforcement agencies, the military, public health authorities, and all the other parties who can play a role in combating terrorism. I believe these two pieces of legislation, which establish a centralized authority to coordinate the activities and responsibilities of a multifaceted group of agencies, and provide both the intelligence community and law enforcement with valuable tools to combat terrorism-related crimes, do just this.

Briefly, the bills introduced today in the Senate would do the following:

Establish a "National Office for Combating Terrorism" to provide a greater level of coordination among the Nation's law enforcement establishment, the intelligence community, the military, public health authorities, and State and local governments to create a coherent, functional strategy for combating terrorism out of a current system a blue-ribbon Presidential Commission has called fragmented, uncoordinated, and politically unaccountable.

Ensure that terrorism-related intelligence gathered under the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act—FISA—is used to further the overall antiterrorism strategy. The legislation clarifies that the Director of Central Intelligence—DCI—is the primary government official responsible for coordination and dissemination of intelligence gathered under, while retaining the FBI as the agency with operational authority for intelligence gathering from foreign nationals.

Require law enforcement agencies to share with the DCI any terrorism-related intelligence information gathered in criminal investigations.

Mandate cooperation between the DCI and the Treasury Department to root out and cut off the international money trail terrorists use to finance their activities.

Develop training programs for State and local law enforcement agencies and public officials to help them detect terrorist activity, and to improve their understanding and use of intelligence shared with them.

Establish a National Virtual Translation Center to enable intelligence information collected anywhere in the world to be transmitted over secure electronic lines, translated and analyzed by experts elsewhere, and shared with relevant law enforcement and government personnel throughout this country, as well as by policymakers in Washington and intelligence agents overseas.

Make explicit that U.S. Government officers, acting in their official capacity, may recruit any person who has information about terrorist, terrorist groups, or those who assist or harbor them—including foreign governments.

The reactions to last week's attacks have ranged from shock, to horror, to sadness, to rage, and now, as I said at the beginning of my remarks, to resolve. Just over a week after the worst act of terrorism, indeed, the worst crime, in the history of the country, we are united as a people behind our President, our armed forces, and our law enforcement agencies, resolved to root out and defeat terrorism wherever this particular breed of hatred is fostered. Part of that resolve may be seen in the package of legislation introduced here today, although it would be incorrect to characterize this legislation as a reaction to the nightmare of September 11. These bills are the product of a longstanding concern about a lack of coordination between our law enforcement and intelligence resources and are the result of several months of hard work on the part of Chairman GRAHAM, several other members of our committee, and Intelligence Committee staff. I believe these bills represent good first steps.

I have not had the privilege of being a member of the Intelligence Committee for very long, but from the very first day I have been enormously impressed with the careful balance the committee strikes between the intelligence gathering needs of this nation, and the civil liberties enjoyed by its citizens. However, in this time of heightened tension and increased security, I must admit that I share some of the concerns of many Americans, from across the political spectrum, who fear that well-meaning reforms may unduly infringe on the liberties we cherish.

While I am confident that in crafting this legislation Senator GRAHAM has taken those concerns very much to heart and has protected the rights of law-abiding Americans, I will closely monitor the progress of this legislation. I cannot overestimate the importance of ensuring that in our zeal to prevent another terrorist assault on this Nation we do not contribute to an atmosphere of fear and mistrust of our fellow citizens.

I will also be looking for an understanding of these concerns from our colleagues on the various committees of referral, and in the Senate as a whole. We must commit ourselves and our Nation that, despite the grave seriousness of combating terrorism, we will always safeguard civil liberties as we consider this or any other piece of legislation introduced to combat terrorism. What is needed—and what this package of legislation provides—is greater coordination, efficiency, and effectiveness among our existing antiterrorism resources, without a surrender of the rights and liberties that make this the greatest nation in the history of the world.

By Mr. REID (for himself and Mr. ENSIGN):

S. 1451. A bill to provide for the conveyance of certain public land in Clark County, Nevada, for use as a shooting range; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

Mr. REID. Madam President, I rise today for myself and for Senator ENSIGN to introduce the Clark County Public Shooting Range Conveyance Act.

Clark County and the Las Vegas Valley have experienced tremendous population growth over the past decade from about 770,000 in 1990 to over 1.4 million people today. This growth has had a tremendous impact on uses of the outlying public lands, including traditional recreational activities such as hunting, fishing and target shooting. There are literally dozens, if not hundreds, of makeshift shooting ranges across Las Vegas Valley which pose extreme danger to nearby homes and increasingly busy roads.

My bill provides the foundation for the establishment of a world-class shooting range, sports park and firearms training facility by conveying 2,880 acres of public land to Clark County. This facility will be used by residents of, and visitors to the Las Vegas Valley for recreation, education, competitive and marksmanship events, and training related to firearms. Firearms training facilities owned and operated by the Metropolitan Police Department and the North Las Vegas Police Department are also being encroached upon by residential and commercial development. Special facilities will be provided at the Clark County facility to accommodate law enforcement training for firearms qualification and certification.

This facility will provide a great public benefit by creating a safe centralized location for this important purpose. It will enhance public safety by reducing indiscriminate shooting. This facility will also provide economic incentives to the Las Vegas Valley in the form of jobs and support services.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1451

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, SECTION 1. CONVEYANCE OF PROPERTY TO CLARK COUNTY, NEVADA.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds that—

- (1) the Las Vegas area has experienced such rapid growth in the last few years that traditional locations for target shooting are now too close to populated areas for safety;
- (2) there is a need to designate a centralized location in the Las Vegas valley where target shooters can practice safely; and
- (3) a central facility is also needed for persons training in the use of firearms, such as local law enforcement and security personnel.

(b) PURPOSES.—The purposes of this Act are—

- (1) to provide a suitable location for the establishment of a centralized shooting facility in the Las Vegas valley; and
- (2) to provide the public with—
 - (A) opportunities for education and recreation; and
 - (B) a location for competitive events and marksmanship training.

(c) CONVEYANCE.—As soon as practicable after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary of the Interior shall convey to Clark County, Nevada, subject to valid existing rights, for no consideration, all right, title, and interest of the United States in and to the parcels of land described in subsection (d).

(d) LAND DESCRIPTIONS.—The parcels of land to be conveyed under subsection (c) are the parcels of land described as follows:

- (4) Approximately 640 acres of land in Clark County, Nevada, in sec. 34, T. 18 S., R. 60 E., Mount Diablo Base and Meridian.
- (5) Approximately 640 acres of land in Clark County, Nevada, in sec. 35, T. 18 S., R. 60 E., Mount Diablo Base and Meridian.
- (6) Approximately 640 acres of land in Clark County, Nevada, in sec. 36, T. 18 S., R. 60 E., Mount Diablo Base and Meridian.

(e) USE OF LAND.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The parcels of land conveyed under subsection (c)—

(A) shall be used by Clark County for the purposes described in subsection (b) only; and

(B) shall not be disposed of by the county.

(2) REVERSION.—If Clark County ceases to use any parcel for the purposes described in subsection (b), title to the parcel shall revert to the United States, at the option of the United States.

(f) ADDITIONAL TERMS AND CONDITIONS.—The Secretary of the Interior may require such additional terms and conditions in connection with the conveyance as the Secretary considers appropriate to protect the interests of the United States.

(g) RELEASE OF LAND.—Congress—

(1) finds that the parcels of land conveyed under subsection (c), comprising a portion of the Quail Springs Wilderness Study Area, NV-050-411, managed by the Bureau of Land Management and reported to Congress in 1991, have been adequately studied for wilderness designation under section 603 of the Federal Land Management Policy Act of 1976 (43 U.S.C. 1782); and

(2) declares that those parcels are no longer subject to the requirements contained in subsection (c) of that section pertaining to the management of wilderness study areas in a manner that does not impair the suitability of such areas for preservation as wilderness.

By Mr. KENNEDY (for himself, Mr. BROWNBACK, Mr. GRASSLEY, Mr. LEAHY, and Ms. CANTWELL):

S. 1452. A bill to provide for electronic access by the Department of State and Immigration and Naturalization Service to certain information in the criminal history records of the Federal Bureau of Investigation to determine whether or not a visa applicant or applicant for admission has a criminal record; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. KENNEDY. Madam President, it is a privilege to join my colleagues Senators BROWNBACK, LEAHY, GRASSLEY, and CANTWELL in introducing immigration legislation that will enhance our intelligence capabilities and improve our border security.

These critical functions are an important part of the massive challenges now facing the country in the wake of last week's terrorist attacks. These functions are the shared responsibility of the FBI, the INS, and the State Department. This legislation will provide U.S. consular officers and the INS, including inspectors at our ports of entry, with electronic access to information located within certain FBI databases, such as the National Crime Information Center's Interstate Identification Index, the Wanted Persons File, and other files maintained by the National Crime Information Center. Electronic access to this information will enable the State Department and the INS to act immediately to identify high-risk criminals seeking admission to the United States or seeking other immigration benefits.

Clearly, we must improve the security and intelligence capabilities of the Nation. But we must do so without violating the basic rights and liberties of the American people. Our legislation includes provisions to protect individual privacy. It authorizes the Secretary of State to draft regulations which will appropriately limit the use of the FBI's information. These regulations will require the information to be safeguarded from unnecessary dissemination, so that it is used only for the purpose of making decisions on the issuance or denial of visas or immigration benefits, and so that its confidentiality will be maintained to protect the privacy rights of those who are the subject of the information.

These steps are needed now. We must also examine other ideas to improve safety at the Nation's borders and strengthen our overall ability as much as possible to prevent future terrorist attacks.

I urge all of my colleagues to support this important legislation.

By Ms. SNOWE (for herself and Mr. STEVENS):

S. 1455. A bill to amend title 49, United States Code, to regulate the training of aliens to operate jet-propelled aircraft, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

Ms. SNOWE. Madam President, I am sure I am not alone in finding that one of the more disturbing revelations of the investigation into the September 11 terrorist attack on the World Trade Center and Pentagon is that over half of the hijackers received flight instruction at American facilities. Investigators have named ten separate flying schools across the United States, from California to Oklahoma to Florida, where the hijacking suspects may have engaged in flight training in one form or another. In addition, it is believed that one of these suspects was able to gain legal entry into the United States through the assistance of a flight school that provided immigration documentation.

I know that this ironic turn of events, the schools dedicated to the safety of the airline industry were unwittingly utilized to facilitate the worst airline disaster in history, has school administrators and instructors asking themselves, "What if . . ." as they look in the mirror every morning.

We need to take action now to remove the doubts of the instructors as well as restore confidence in student pilots engaged in valid training. That is why I am introducing legislation to require thorough background checks on foreign nationals seeking advanced flight or jet aircraft training in American flight schools.

At present the Federal Aviation Administration FAA, regulates course content at these schools and does it well, the U.S. has the best training program in the world and pilot certification from the FAA is considered the industry "gold standard." That is why a large number of foreign students are attracted to American schools. And we want to continue to encourage foreign participation at our schools, it assures aviation safety world wide.

However, the FAA does not regulate who can participate in pilot training, be it glider plane basics or 757 advanced training. More specifically, the requirement for foreign students is limited to demonstrated English proficiency and proper immigration documentation.

Given the events of September 11, it is imperative that the screening process for pilot trainees be improved. As such, the legislation I am introducing today mandates the completion of security checks before foreign nationals may commence advanced jet training. Specifically, by requiring that the Attorney General carry out background investigations on individuals seeking such training, the legislation ensures a comprehensive review against records held by such agencies as the FBI, INS, and DEA will be carried out prior to starting training on any simulator or jet powered aircraft. Also, given the recent tragedies in New York, Washington DC, and Pennsylvania, all foreign nationals currently in training would be required to stop until a satisfactory background check is completed.

I want to urge my colleagues to join me in taking this small but critical step to prevent a repeat of unintentionally training those who would terrorize our cities and skies and ask for their support in increasing security requirements for flight training.

Whereas 1 out of every 55 women will develop ovarian cancer at some point during her life;

Whereas over 70 percent of women with ovarian cancer will not be diagnosed until the cancer has spread beyond the ovaries;

Whereas prompt diagnosis of ovarian cancer is crucial to effective treatment, with the chances of curing the disease before it has spread beyond the ovaries ranging from 85 to 90 percent, as compared to between 20 and 25 percent after the cancer has spread;

Whereas several easily identifiable factors, particularly a family history of ovarian cancer, can help determine how susceptible a woman is to developing the disease;

Whereas effective early testing is available to women who have a high risk of developing ovarian cancer;

Whereas heightened public awareness can make treatment of ovarian cancer more effective for women who are at-risk; and

Whereas the Senate, as an institution, and Members of Congress, as individuals, are in unique positions to help raise awareness about the need for early diagnosis and treatment for ovarian cancer: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate—

(1) designates the week of September 23, 2001, through September 29, 2001, as "National Ovarian Cancer Awareness Week"; and
