

soldiers, and he is remembered fondly by all who had the privilege of knowing him.

Matthew Commons was born in Fort Wayne, Indiana, raised in Indianapolis and also lived in Boulder City, Nevada and Alexandria, Virginia. In high school, Matthew was an accomplished honor student and class officer. He then spent a year at the University of Nevada at Reno, but decided in July 2000 to become an Army Ranger because he wanted to serve his country. He had planned to finish college after his four-year tour and become a history teacher like his father. In December 2001, he visited his father's history classes at Carl Sandburg Middle School in full battle fatigues to discuss his life as a Ranger. Matthew had also recently celebrated his 21st birthday with his Army buddies, a celebration that included hats and banners sent by his mother Patricia Marek, who had just moved to Alexandria, Virginia.

Matthew's Army unit had been sent to Afghanistan on a secret assignment in January. Though he frequently spoke by telephone with his father, he had not been allowed to disclose his location. In speaking of his son, Greg recently said, "I'm real proud of him. He loved his family, he loved his country and he loved the Rangers . . . He gave his life to save the life of another Ranger."

Military service is not new to the Commons family. Both of Matthew's grandfather's served in World War II, where his grandfather Marek earned a Purple Heart. Additionally, Matthew's father Greg served in the Marines in the Vietnam War.

Besides his mother and father, Matthew leaves his brother Aaron, his father's second wife Linda Chapman, and two half-brothers, Thomas and Patrick. Matthew, who was buried at Arlington cemetery, has been awarded the Purple Heart and the Bronze Star with V Device for Valor.

Mr. Speaker, I hold out the example of this fine young man, a great American, who paid the ultimate price in defense of freedom and liberty. I know I speak for the entire Congress when I extend sympathies to the entire Commons family and friends who are grieving during this difficult time. May they be comforted by the precious memories of their beloved son and brother.

As a veteran myself, I greatly appreciate the unique challenges faced by the men and women serving in our military today. It is the ultimate sacrifice when a soldier dies for his country. We are able to enjoy the freedoms we have today because of men like Matthew Commons and the hundreds of thousands of Americans who have given their lives in the fight for American principles over the past 226 years.

Matthew Commons answered the call of his country, and his death will forever place his name on the roll of heroes who sacrificed their own lives to protect the lives of others. His life and unyielding commitment to duty and honor should remind us all that the liberties we enjoy do not come without a price. Let us always remember these costs, and always remember Private First Class Matthew A. Commons.

TRIBUTE TO THE UNIVERSITY OF MARYLAND MEN'S BASKETBALL TEAM

HON. WM. LACY CLAY

OF MISSOURI

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, April 9, 2002

Mr. CLAY. Mr. Speaker, it is with much pride and satisfaction that I rise today to offer my warm congratulations to my alma mater, the University of Maryland, and its coach, Gary Williams and its men's basketball team, for winning the 2002 NCAA Men's Basketball Tournament and being crowned national champions.

The Terrapins basketball team, led by those heralded seniors, guard Juan Dixon, forward Lonnie Baxter, and guard Byron Mouton, secured the school's first national basketball title with a 64–52 victory over the Indiana Hoosiers earlier this month.

It was a magical tournament run for Maryland's leader and All-American, Juan Dixon, who averaged 25.9 points per game throughout the tournament and was named the tournament's Most Outstanding Player.

Dixon, the Terrapins' steadiest hand throughout the year, led Maryland to a record 32–4 season, with Terrapins winning 19 of their last 20 games.

And now Maryland has the first NCAA basketball championship in school history.

The University of Maryland has a rich basketball history and much to be proud of, even before this national title. Its men's basketball team has posted 20-win seasons 19 times. They have also been to the NCAA Tournament 19 times. Fourteen players have been named All-American.

But for various reasons, the school had never even reached a Final Four until this last season. And it had never won it all until last month.

In their ninth straight appearance in the NCAA tournament, this year the Terrapins finally went the distance. Before this year however, Coach Williams had been a victim of his own great success. The pressure for him to win was incredible.

Getting into the tournament wasn't good enough for Terps fans anymore. For Maryland, March had become maddening, and they wanted a championship. And Gary Williams delivered.

For Williams, this is the culmination of so many dreams. When he returned to his alma mater 13 years ago to take over a program struggling under probation and with an image problem, this goal seemed so far away. But he worked at it every day and now he has reached the pinnacle of college basketball.

For the joyous Terrapin fans, who danced through the streets of Atlanta and College Park, this was Maryland's time to be hailed as "No. 1". This was the year to "Fear the Turtle."

Once again, I congratulate Coach Williams, the Terrapins basketball team and the entire University of Maryland administration and student body for their school's exceptional basketball season.

TRIBUTE TO PETER COGAN

HON. JOSEPH M. HOFFEL

OF PENNSYLVANIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, April 9, 2002

Mr. HOFFEL. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to congratulate Peter Cogan of Amber, Pennsylvania. For twenty-five years Peter has served as the executive director of the Children's Aid Society (CAS) in Southeastern Pennsylvania. He has done an outstanding job for his community. CAS provides specialized, professional, family-focused social services to abused, neglected and delinquent children and youth within and outside of the context of their families.

Peter received his bachelor's degree from Georgetown and his master's degree in social work from the University of Pennsylvania. In 1977, the board of directors of CAS selected Peter to become the executive director of their organization. During his tenure, Peter brought CAS from an agency that operated primarily in one county to a regional organization serving Southeastern Pennsylvania. Through his diligence and vision, Peter has started programs that have maintained CAS as a reliable, high quality delivery system that protects children, empowers families, and achieves permanent homes for children.

Peter and his wife Donna reside in Ambler and are the proud parents of three children.

I am pleased to recognize Peter Cogan for his many years of dedicated work. Our community is fortunate to have someone of such distinction.

ON THE 90TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE GIRL SCOUTS

HON. TAMMY BALDWIN

OF WISCONSIN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, April 9, 2002

Ms. BALDWIN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to extend my congratulations on two momentous occasions for an organization that has made a difference in the lives of girls and women around the nation. In the same year that the local Black Hawk Council chapter of the Girl Scouts in Madison, Wisconsin celebrates 75 years of scouting, the Girl Scouts of the USA are celebrating 90 years of "helping girls grow strong."

Girl scouting began on March 12, 1912, when Juliette Gordon Low assembled 18 girls from Savannah, Georgia for a local Girl Scout meeting. Low believed that all girls should be given the opportunity to develop physically, mentally and spiritually. Today, 3.7 million strong, the Girl Scouts continue to carry out their goal by encouraging girls to discover and develop their full potential. They focus on empowerment of girls by engaging in cultural exchanges, going on field trips, participating in community service projects, and learning about non-traditional fields for women such as science and technology.

The Girl Scouts emphasize that their mission is to help all girls grow strong. They emphasize that Girl scouting is available to every girl in every community, reaching beyond racial, ethnic, socioeconomic and geographic boundaries. I experienced this first-hand when
