

But I don't want to belabor this because what we are attempting to do is move this process along and bring up the other amendments. We are certainly not looking to extend the debate on the issue or filibuster this bill through unlimited amendments.

Currently, as I have indicated, there are roughly 150 known potential amendments remaining—roughly 100 on the Democratic side and 50 on the Republican side. Virtually all of them could and would have been dealt with within the committee process. But the staff for both the majority and the minority are working to eliminate this list.

I pledge my support to improve the legislation before us and get a bill to the President as soon as possible. I urge my colleagues to recognize the weight of this task before us as we push through the agenda and do what is right for the Nation.

I hope that as we start afresh after our Easter recess we can come together and recognize the reality that this country is in peril over energy, that the continued escalation of prices is going to hit the consumer and hit our recovery, the prospects associated with the curtailment of imports from Venezuela and Iraq, which constitute 30 percent of our oil imports, and the results of nearly 2 million barrels coming to a halt which we have depended on is going to severely affect our economic recovery.

It has been estimated for every million barrels of oil taken off the world market, crude oil prices rise roughly $3 per barrel. Today's price is roughly $27. Obviously, we are looking at somewhere between $30 and $33 if, indeed, this curtailment continues.

It is time to recognize that indeed we have some recourse. The recourse is to reduce our dependence, and one way to do that is obviously to look favorably upon the ANWR amendment.

I thank the Chair and my colleagues for the time. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut.

CHERRY BLOSSOM QUEEN ELIZABETH O'CONNOR

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, my colleague from Connecticut is joining me on the floor, and we are going to spend a couple minutes talking about two sources of State pride. I will very briefly mention, before I talk about the University of Connecticut women's basketball team, that last Friday night the U.S. Cherry Blossom Queen was crowned in Washington. We are very proud in my office to say Elizabeth O'Connor was chosen, by a random selection process, as the Cherry Blossom Queen of the United States.

She is a staff assistant in my office. She is a wonderful young woman who is very accomplished in many ways. A summa cum laude graduate of Notre Dame University from Farmington, CT, she went to Farmington High School. She is the daughter of wonderful parents, Fred and Katherine O'Connor in Farmington, CT.

She will be going to Japan for a couple of weeks, meeting with the Prime Minister, the Speaker of the House, as the Cherry Blossom Queen of the United States.

You can understand the source of pride in our office and in Connecticut that Elizabeth has been chosen as Connecticut's society princess crowned the Cherry Blossom Queen. We are very proud of her. I know she will represent the State and the country very admirably. In the last few years we had another queen, Shannon Kula of my office, also chosen the Cherry Blossom Queen. People are beginning to wonder if Connecticut has some fix, a hold on the cherry blossom queen festival. Nothing such as that has occurred. This is good fortune and good luck for the State of Connecticut.

NCAA WOMEN'S BASKETBALL CHAMPIONS

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I rise today, along with my friend and colleague, Senator LIEBERMAN, to offer a Senate resolution commending the Connecticut women's basketball team. We have had a phenomenal season from start to finish, with the crowning victory at the Alamodome in Texas, defeating the University of Oklahoma just a few weeks ago. Their 82-to-70 victory in the national championship game on March 31 capped one of the most dominant seasons enjoyed by any sports team in recent memory.

The Huskie Women's Basketball Team finished the season undefeated, 39 and 0, becoming only the fourth women's NCAA basketball team in history to do so and one of a few teams that have had multiple national championships. There are only a handful that have had undefeated seasons and national championships.

The margin of victory of the UConn team over the season was astounding. A historical 35 points was the average margin of victory in the 39 victories they had during the regular season. In all my years—I know the Presiding Officer is a fan as well of sports and basketball—I never have seen anything quite like this. Each game was not a question of whether or not they would win but by how much. A phenomenal group of young women, a phenomenal coaching staff, they just did a terrific job during the entire season.

The accomplishments of this team go far beyond their dominance on the hard court. The Huskies have helped contribute to the greater cause of increasing the visibility of women athletes. Nearly 3.5 million people watched the final game on ESPN, which represented the largest audience for a college basketball game, men's or women's, in network history. Imagine, a few years ago, you would have been lucky to have a handful of people that might show up for a women's basketball game.

Not only did they have 3.5 million people watching on television, 30,000 people were packed into the Alamodome to watch the final game. Many people would have predicted that could never have happened only a few years ago. Why shouldn't it be so? Anyone who watched this remarkable team from Connecticut as well as the other top teams across the Nation—Tennessee, Duke, Oklahoma; there are a lot of great women's teams, the number growing each and every year—would certainly be impressed with the quality of the play they have brought to the game.

Theirs is a wonderful, pure style of basketball combining accurate shooting and flashy passing, as we have all seen, and sound all-around play. For the women's team, one of the strengths was the senior leadership. NCAA Player of the Year Sue Bird, along with her senior teammates Asjha Jones, Tamika Williams, and Swin Cash, have played together for 4 years—four remarkable women.

This last victory caps an incredible collegiate career for these four women, including an unbelievable 136-and-9 record and two national championships—rather phenomenal. Throughout the season, their familiarity with each other made it seem as though they could read each other's minds as they played on the court.

All of us in Connecticut are deeply proud. Last Saturday, there was a parade in Hartford, CT. Literally thousands of people on a bitterly cold day showed up to express their admiration and pride in these wonderful players and their coaches.

Coach Geno Auriemma is truly a special individual and deserves some very special recognition. He has led this team to victory after victory and does so with a great deal of style, emotion, and feeling for these young women. He arrived on the Storrs campus in 1985, at which time the Huskie team had experienced only one winning season. He quickly turned the program into one of the leading powerhouses in the Nation, and the pride of the people of Connecticut has been swelling ever since.

Coach Auriemma has compiled over 400 career wins at UConn including an unbelievable 272-and-17 record over the last 8 seasons. This represents a run of dominance possibly unmatched in the history of team sports competition. Under Coach Auriemma's leadership, the Huskies have won 3 national titles, 12 Big East regular season titles, and 11 Big East tournament titles. This year, Coach Auriemma was named National Coach of the Year for the fourth time in his career and the Big East Coach of the Year for the fifth time in his career.

Perhaps the most important example of Coach Auriemma's philosophy is the way he has led these women to be winners on the court and off as well. I know the Presiding Officer will be impressed by this statistic. Coach Auriemma has overseen a program that
