

airplane seat. That, of course, is not the case at all. What is between California and New York is a wonderful part of America and a part of America that we should care a great deal about, a part of America that is suffering a great deal at this point with the out-migration of people. You see it in red on this map.

As we proceed, there will likely be things that are very partisan here on the floor of the Senate, and perhaps properly should be because the political parties come to this debate on a range of issues believing in different things—not different goals, but dramatically different ways to achieve the same goal, in many cases. But my hope is that even as we have those debates which can and perhaps will be partisan debates from time to time, there will be some issues on which Republicans and Democrats can say: Sign us up together. This is not about getting credit. It's not about forcing the other side to lose or demanding that we win. It is about doing together that which needs to be done for the preservation of this country, for the preserving of values in this country, and for the nourishing of hope for certain people in this country who have lost hope, especially those living in the heartland and living in circumstances where their neighbors have left, their community is shrinking, family farmers are leaving.

We can do better than that. My hope is that we will find a bipartisan way in this Congress to decide this, too, is an urgent priority for our country and pass legislation of the type Senator HAGEL and I will reintroduce once again, called the New Homestead Economic Opportunity Act.

I yield the floor. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CORNYN). Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the time for morning business be extended by 10 minutes and that I be permitted to speak.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

IN HONOR OF CAPTAIN JIM BINKLEY

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I come with a sad heart today because on January 3, the City of Fairbanks, where I started my life in Alaska, and the State of Alaska lost a great citizen with the passing of Captain Jim Binkley at the age of 82.

Jim was born in our State in Wrangell, on May 16, 1920. His parents were gold rush pioneers, and his father was a riverboat pilot on the Stikine River in southeast Alaska.

In World War II, he was a veteran who served on riverboats in Alaska and after the war he attended the University of Alaska in Fairbanks. In 1950, Jim and his wife Mary bought their first boat, the Godspeed, and began what would become Alaska Riverways, Incorporated. They ran a historic riverboat for tourists who came to Alaska.

Jim and Mary built and rebuilt many of their company's sternwheelers in the backyard of their family's home which was on Noyes Slough, which is a river that runs through Fairbanks, AK. It was a great experience to go with him on that boat. I have taken many people on Captain Jim's boat.

Alaska Riverways is Fairbanks' number one tourist attraction. Each summer, Alaska Riverways' three sternwheelers, the Discovery (I), the Discovery (II), and the Discovery (III), ferry thousands of tourists down the Chena and Tanana Rivers, following trails to the gold rush people and really letting people see what rural Alaska is like.

Along with being a successful riverboat captain, Jim served in the Alaska State House of Representatives for two terms from 1961 to 1964. In addition to that service in the Alaska legislature, Captain Jim served on numerous community boards and organizations. He received many statewide awards, including being named "Alaskan of Year" and the business leader of the year.

Jim was a proud father of three sons and daughter Marilee. I know all three sons: Johnne, Jim Jr., and Skip. They are all riverboat captains and they have continued the great tradition of their father, as have several of his grandchildren.

Captain Jim was clearly a leader in the development of Alaska tourism and of our State in general. His vision and hard work forever changed Alaska's visitor industry, and for that we are very grateful.

I am pleased to say I have asked that a flag be flown over the Capitol today so we may send it to his family, along with a copy of this statement.

(At the request of Mr. STEVENS, the following statement was ordered to be printed in the RECORD.)

• Ms. MURKOWSKI. Mr. President, I rise today to speak and honor a great Alaskan, and long time family friend, Jim Binkley of Fairbanks.

Jim, one of the State's great riverboat captains, died last Friday after a long and painful illness. I join all Alaskans in expressing my deepest condolences to his family and all of his friends across the State.

Jim was born in Wrangell in southeast Alaska 82 years ago and was raised in California after his father's death. After high school, Jim moved back to Wrangell and worked as a river guide with him uncle, learning his craft on riverboats and gaining his love of the water. After a few years he moved to Fairbanks to attend the University of Alaska.

It was there during the long Fairbanks summers that he learned the ways of interior rivers, working on steamboats, hauling supplies to Eskimo and native villages along the Yukon River. While his schooling at the University was interrupted by a tour of duty in the U.S. military during World War II, he returned to school in Fairbanks after the war. There he met his future wife of 55 years, Mary Hall, and they were married in June 1947.

In 1950, Jim and Mary were asked to run riverboat cruises in Fairbanks by Alaska tourism pioneer Chuck West. Using the Episcopal Church vessel, "Godspeed" they began offering tours of the Chena and Tanana Rivers. As their business expanded, they needed a bigger boat. So in 1955, Jim and Mary, along with their original partner Bill English, built the first Riverboat Discovery in their backyard on the Noyes Slough in Fairbanks.

Over his 45 years in the riverboat business, Jim built two more boats, helping to launch the modern era of tourism in Alaska's interior. But he launched much more for Alaska.

He helped create Alaskaland, Fairbanks' historic major municipal park. He was a founder of the Alaska Visitors Association and the Fairbanks Convention and Visitors Bureau. And he showed his commitment to public service by serving two terms in the Alaska House of Representative in Juneau from 1961 through 1964.

He was also a pioneer in improving communications in Alaska, serving on the boards of Alascom, Pacific Corp. and later Pacific Telecom, helping switch telecommunications in Alaska from an era of Government-controlled long-distance phone service to the modern era of satellite communication that included the arrival of live television to all parts of the State.

He received numerous awards, including being named the Alaskan of the Year and the Business Leader of the Year.

While I have lived in Anchorage for the past 25 years, I can never forget sitting in my parents' backyard along the Chena River in Fairbanks. You could almost tell time by when Captain Binkley would pilot the Discovery past our house, always waving his warm welcome as we tooted a fog horn in reply as the sternwheeler rounded the small bends heading for the junction with the Tanana.

Alaska has lost a great pioneer and an even greater leader. I want to express my deepest condolences to his wife, Mary, to his son Johnne, himself a former leading member of the Alaska Legislature, to his sons Jim, Jr. and Skip and to all his grandchildren. All of Alaska mourns his passing.●

Mr. STEVENS. I suggest the absence of a quorum.
