

for corporations, not for profit organizations, and the Government. At Northrop, Ford, and the Aerospace Corporation he worked on re-entry physics research and aircraft development. While at the Johns Hopkins Applied Physics Laboratory, Tom worked on submarine detection concepts. This work took him to the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency as the codirector of the Naval Technology Office and the Advanced Submarine Technology (SUBTECH) program.

As a senior fellow and director of technology systems development at the Center for Naval Analyses, Tom carried out a highly respected and well-received study of design concepts for future aircraft carriers, and a second highly regarded study of air-traffic management for the Federal Aviation Administration.

He co-authored a book, "Computational Methods for Fluid Flow," and wrote numerous papers on computational fluid dynamics and other topics. Just two years ago Tom was one of a handful of experts to testify before the House Science Committee Subcommittee on Space and Aeronautics Review of Vertical Takeoff and Landing Technology in the National Airspace System.

At the Office of Naval Research, Tom started as the director of strike technology for the Special Programs department. Later, he was the chief scientist and director of special projects in the Expeditionary Warfare department. The Affordable Weapon program was his "crowning achievement." Tom's science and technology prototype proved that an effective cruise missile could be made from commercial and government parts without costing a fortune.

In addition to his numerous scientific and management accomplishments, Tom was a tremendous guy—a lot of fun to be around. He had lived in Paris, drove a fast car, was a sharp dresser, and owned a vacation home on the coast of Morocco. He made friends wherever he went. His passing leaves all of us sad but filled with happy memories.

Tom leaves a wife, Francoise, of Paris, a son, Scot, of San Francisco, a daughter, Cynthia, who lives in London, a granddaughter, and a sister, Sandra.

CONGRATULATIONS, BOB LYONS

HON. TAMMY BALDWIN

OF WISCONSIN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, July 10, 2003

Ms. BALDWIN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to congratulate Bob Lyons as he enters retirement. For nearly 33 years, he has worked tirelessly to improve the lives and working conditions of Wisconsin workers.

As the Executive Director of AFSCME Council 40, through good times and challenging times, Bob Lyons has been a wise and stabilizing force in the Wisconsin labor movement. An active union leader, Bob worked to strengthen unions, standing firm against those who sought to weaken them. Bob has also been passionate in his protection of worker benefits and in his opposition to any limitation of worker rights. In recognition of his intellect and integrity, Bob was appointed as one of nine members on the AFSCME international judicial panel.

Bob did not limit himself to working on labor issues. He has also worked for greater consumer and community protection and fought the reduction of state services—services that are essential to the survival and well being of Wisconsin families.

Today, I join AFSCME Council 40 and other well-wishers in Wisconsin in recognizing the service that Bob Lyons has provided to the members of AFSCME Council 40, and to the people of Wisconsin. He has been an outstanding leader. Bob Lyons is one of Wisconsin's best and we are proud to congratulate him as he retires this summer.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

LIFE OF ANTHONY J.
CELEBREZZE, JR.

HON. STEPHANIE TUBBS JONES

OF OHIO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, July 10, 2003

Mrs. JONES of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, Anthony J. Celebrezze Jr., one of the great leaders in the history of the Great State of Ohio, departed this life at the age of 61. A true servant of the people, Anthony was a stalwart of both Cleveland and Ohio politics.

At the age of 34 Anthony was elected to Cleveland's 25th District Senate seat. In 1978, he was elected Secretary of State at age 38. He would remain in that position until 1983. From 1983 to 1991, he served as the Ohio Attorney General.

In 1990, Anthony ran against George Voinovich for Governor of the state of Ohio. Despite his loss, he remained active politically and throughout the community. Anthony went on to join the law firm of Kegler, Brown, Hill & Ritter. He recently was a consultant for Diebold Inc., promoting electronic voting machines.

Anthony had a love of life. He had a passion for racing cars and spent much of his time attending racecar events.

I had the pleasure of getting to know Tony while he was running for Governor of Ohio and I was running for the Ohio Supreme Court. He has been a constant supporter of me during my career in politics. While we mourn his loss, let us remember all that he did for Ohio and his deep and undying love for its people and keep his legacy alive through our deeds and actions.

On behalf of the Congress of the United States and the citizens of the 11th Congressional District of Ohio; I would like to offer my sincere condolences to the entire family and friends of Anthony J. Celebrezze, Jr.
