

a United States District Judge for the Eastern District of Oklahoma.

Following the two judge votes, the Senate will begin a period of morning business until 11:30. Following morning business, the Senate will resume debate on H.R. 2765, the District of Columbia appropriations bill.

The majority leader has stated on a number of occasions his intent to try to finish that bill early this week. The managers will be here again tomorrow, waiting for any additional amendments that may be offered. Therefore, it is hoped we can conclude this bill during tomorrow's session.

As mentioned earlier today, the Senate will begin consideration of the Iraq emergency supplemental just as soon as that bill is available. Rollcalls will therefore occur each day this week on that bill as we press to try to complete it.

Madam President, if there is no further business to come before the Senate—

Mr. REID. If I could say, just before the Senator gives his final statement here, I appreciate very much the majority allowing the time for us to speak. There are a number of Senators on this side who wish to speak. I appreciate very much the thoughtfulness of the Senator from Kentucky and the majority leader in allowing us to go forward on this basis. Having been in his position on a number of occasions, I know how difficult it is to keep people around, but I appreciate his doing it.

ORDER FOR RECESS

Mr. MCCONNELL. If there is no further business to come before the Senate, I ask the Senate stand in recess under the previous order, following the remarks of Senators DASCHLE, HARKIN, and REID.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Iowa.

BREACH OF NATIONAL SECURITY

Mr. HARKIN. Madam President, I remember when I was a young boy, right towards the end of World War II, and there was a famous sign I saw at the American Legion club in my small town in Iowa. The sign said, "Loose Lips Sink Ships."

Later on when I went into the military and served in the military, I always remembered that, especially when it came to dealing with sensitive information, that we had to be very careful, very cautious about how we dealt with information which, if it got into the wrong hands, could be injurious to the United States of America.

I mention that because if what I have been hearing and reading about in the news media is anywhere near the truth, then we have a very serious breach of national security emanating from the administration. This is no small matter, about the disclosure of the identity of a CIA agent, an undercover agent, the identity of whom could not only be harmful to that individual herself but to persons with whom she had contact and dealings in other countries.

This July a noted columnist, Robert D. Novak, on July 14, disclosed a covert operative's identity. That is a violation of Federal law. I am not certain Mr. Novak knew that was a violation of Federal law. He should have. He has been in this business a long time. But he printed this disclosure. Where did he get the information? Mr. Novak said he got the information from two senior administration officials. The story goes on to say that:

Yesterday, a senior administration official said that before Novak's column ran, "two top White House officials called at least six Washington journalists and disclosed the occupation of Wilson's wife [who is the undercover agent who was disclosed by Mr. Novak]. 'Clearly it was meant purely and simply for revenge,' the senior official said of the alleged leak.

What happens when a disclosure like this goes out is that if agents in the field are on pins and needles about whether they are going to be disclosed at some time, it is going to threaten our intelligence capabilities around the globe. And in fighting international terrorism, the most important thing we need is not the U.S. military, it is not bombers and missiles or a nuclear arsenal or nuclear submarines—in order to combat and beat international terrorism, what we need is good information. Intelligence—intelligence sharing with our allies. If our agents in the field—working undercover with the contacts, the kind of sources they need—if they believe their identity is going to be disclosed in a newspaper column, what does that say to them about how they can do their business? This threatens our intelligence-gathering capabilities.

In fact, I can think of no single action that probably has done more to hurt our ability to fight international terrorism than this disclosure of this undercover agent's name. I say that because it is going to cast a cloud over those who risk their lives daily who are already out there gathering information to protect our country.

You might ask: What precipitated this? Why was this leaked? Evidently it was leaked because this person's husband had revealed the truth about President Bush's deception in his State of the Union Message about Iraq trying to get uranium from Niger.

This individual, Joseph C. Wilson, IV, former U.S. Ambassador, publicly challenged President Bush's claim that Iraq tried to buy "Yellow Cake" uranium from Africa for possible use in nuclear weapons. Because Mr. Wilson had such good credibility when he put this out, it raised questions about whether the President was being forthright in his State of the Union Message. That is why one senior official said that clearly it was meant purely and simply for revenge.

We have the leaking of an undercover individual's name because her husband had revealed the truth about the deception in the State of the Union Message.

I don't know who these two individuals are in the administration, nor how high up they are. Mr. Novak said they were two senior administration officials. Another senior administration official said two top White House officials. Who are they? I guess I would have to ask if President Bush is really serious about cooperating and finding out who it was that violated Federal law—a criminal activity punishable by up to 10 years, a felony. If the President is really serious, and he said he was here—Mr. McClellan, the President's press secretary, said it is a serious matter and it should be looked into.

If the President is serious about cooperating and getting the truth out, ABC News "The Note" today posed these questions which I agree should be answered:

Has President Bush made clear to White House staff that only total cooperation with the investigation will be tolerated? If the President has not done this, why hasn't he?

Has the President insisted that every senior staff member sign a statement with legal authority that they are not the leaker and that they will identify to the White House legal counsel who is? If the President hasn't asked his staff to do that, why hasn't he?

Has President Bush required that all of his staff sign a letter relinquishing journalists from protecting those two sources? If he hasn't, why hasn't he?

Has President Bush said that those involved in this crime will be immediately fired? If he hasn't, why not?

Has Mr. Albert Gonzalez distributed a letter to White House employees requiring them to preserve documents, logs, and records? It is very important. Has Albert Gonzalez distributed a letter to White House employees telling them to preserve documents, logs, and records? If he hasn't, why hasn't he?

Has Mr. Andrew Card named someone on his staff to organize compliance with these? If he hasn't, why hasn't he?

These are things the President has to do if he really and truly wants to cooperate, if he truly wants to get these two individuals identified, and if he truly wants to have them prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law, which they ought to be.

This is not some obscure real estate deal out in the middle of nowhere. I repeat this is not some obscure real estate deal out in the middle of some wilderness area. This has to do with our fight against international terrorism and whether or not those who are charged with the responsibility of collecting and gathering intelligence for us will be protected and their identities protected. Or will we send a signal that they are fair game, that someone in the White House can leak their name, that some columnist will print it in the paper and identify them as an undercover agent for the CIA?

This is serious business. The sooner the President of the United States gets
