

"I was just following orders" to be so cowardly that it was prohibited under the rules of the trial.

Perversely, there are some who consider that defense acceptable for Americans today.

The proponents of these rationalizations tell us that we are living in different times.

That we are facing enemies who show blatant disregard for human life, and whose organizations transcend international borders.

As a result, the argument goes, we must re-evaluate certain conventions and practices that we have long respected.

I wonder how men like Robert Jackson and my father would respond to these arguments. Would they be swayed by them? Would they be persuaded somehow that the followers of Osama bin Laden and Saddam Hussein are fundamentally different from the despicable and depraved defendants who swore allegiance to Adolf Hitler?

Would these men, who prosecuted the Nazis based on testimony and documentary evidence, be heartened by the argument that the best responses we can muster against evil today are attack dogs and water-boarding?

I truly, truly think not. On the contrary, I believe that Robert Jackson and my father would be tremendously disappointed and saddened at some of the actions taken by Americans on behalf of our nation—and by some of the official legal arguments made in support of those actions.

I believe that Robert Jackson and Thomas Dodd would see these actions as a reflection of a government that has turned away from the lessons of history and stepped back from the very values of due process and equal justice that we expect of others worldwide.

Is the threat of international terrorism a dangerous one? Unquestionably. But we cannot allow that danger to compromise bedrock principles which have stood since the birth of our nation—values like the right to be free from torture or from indefinite detention without a charge.

We enshrined these values in our Constitution not simply because we believe Americans are entitled to them. We did so because they affirm a basic sense of human dignity in each and every man and woman. And because we, as a nation, are committed to upholding that dignity—even if others do not.

If we cavalierly toss aside those values in response to a particular enemy or threat, it is not our enemies, but we who will pay the ultimate price.

As Justice Jackson said at Nuremberg, "we must never forget that the record on which we judge these defendants today is the record on which history will judge us tomorrow. To pass these defendants a poisoned chalice is to put it to our own lips as well."

A century and a half ago, in his second State of the Union address, Abraham Lincoln said that in giving or denying freedom to slaves, "We shall nobly save or meanly lose the last, best hope of earth."

The issue then was how our nation treats the enslaved. Sixty years ago, the question was how to treat Nazi war criminals. Today, we face the same choice with regard to the way we treat international terrorists.

If we heed the example set at Nuremberg by people like Robert Jackson and Thomas Dodd, if we treat our enemies according to our standards—not theirs—we feed the flame of liberty and justice that has rightly led our nation on its journey for these past two and a quarter centuries.

And we set a shining and lasting example for a true global community—one grounded in the principles of justice, freedom, and peace.

And we live up to the great memory of Robert Jackson and of a young counsel named Thomas Dodd.

HONORING OUR ARMED FORCES

TRIBUTE TO SPECIALIST SETH GARCEAU

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, today I rise in remembrance of a fellow Iowan who has fallen in service to his country in Iraq. Specialist Seth Garceau died on the 4th of March after being seriously injured by a roadside explosive on the 27th of February. A member of the Iowa Army National Guard Company A, 224th Engineer Battalion, Specialist Garceau is survived by a mother, Lori, a father, Rick, and a sister, Tess.

Seth Garceau grew up in Oelwein, IA, and enlisted in the Iowa Army National Guard in 2000 while he was still in high school. Seth graduated from Oelwein High School in 2001 and was mobilized for Operation Iraqi Freedom in 2004. Officials announced on the 5th of February that Specialist Garceau will be promoted posthumously to the rank of Sergeant.

Former President Calvin Coolidge once said, "No person was ever honored for what he received. Honor has been the reward for what he gave." Seth Garceau has given his life, that greatest of gifts, and for that, we shall forever honor him. I offer my most sincere sympathy to his family and friends who have felt this loss most deeply. May we always remember Seth with respect and admiration. For his life and the sacrifice he made, he deserves no less.
