

while serving his country in Iraq. Each day, men and women in the Armed Forces face danger in the hope of bringing peace and prosperity to those in need. We must not forget the individual stories of these soldiers who have served our country with courage and honor. Chad Maynard was from Montrose, CO. All his life he wanted to follow in his father's and brother's footsteps and serve in the Marines. He volunteered to serve in the Marines and was proud to wear our Nation's uniform. He was the pride of the ROTC and the local community. We should honor his dedication and courage and leadership.

He was a good man, a strong and courageous man. He was everything a soldier should be. He was the kind of person that boosted our pride in being an American. On Wednesday, June 15, 2005, Corporal Chad Maynard was killed in Ramadi, Iraq. Chad Maynard made the ultimate sacrifice for his country.

My heart goes out to Chad's parents Gene and Cindy, his brothers Jacob and Jeremiah and his sister Breanne. And to his wife Becky and their yet unborn child, I offer these words of condolence. Your courage in this time of hardship humbles all of us. We will not forget your sacrifice.

Mr. Speaker, I submit this recognition to the United States House of Representatives in honor of their sacrifice so that Chad Maynard may live on in memory.

IN MEMORY OF JAKE PICKLE

(Mr. DELAY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. DELAY. What a good man he was, Mr. Speaker. What a friend, what a gentleman, what a servant. James Jarrell Pickle was born on October 11, 1913, the son of a grocer and his schoolteacher wife, and died June 18, 2005, a statesman of the first cut. He was in many ways the story of his country in the 20th century. Some of his earliest memories were of soldiers returning home from France, heroes back from winning the First World War. He witnessed the roaring twenties as a teenager and came of age—much like our Nation itself—during the Great Depression.

After graduating from the University of Texas in an age when the country turned to Washington for help, Jake Pickle came to Washington to help. He became a congressional aide, and quickly put his heart and mind into service for his country. That commitment to public service, though, was not to be limited to desk work. He served honorably in the United States Navy as an officer aboard the USS Miami and St. Louis during the war in the Pacific.

After the war, Pickle returned home to Texas to make his way in the world as a young entrepreneur, spending his postwar years, as so many of his countrymen did, earning his share of America's peace dividend. He returned again to Washington in 1963, this time as a young Congressman, the winner of a special election in Texas' 10th Congressional District.

Representative Pickle learned early that the 1960s would give no quarter to half measures. Sides had to be chosen and stands had to be made. J.J. Pickle cast his first significant vote in this building in favor of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, one of only a handful of Southerners to do so. A Southerner in the days of Jim Crow, he feared the vote would destroy his young career. Instead, Mr. Speaker, that vote of conscience and courage came to define him. He served nobly in this body but never forgot he was a Texan serving in Washington, and not the other way around. His family and his constituents, Texans all, were his passion and he loved them all with the heart of a servant.

It was in 1983, when he led the effort on the Ways and Means Committee to solve the short-term crisis facing Social Security, that Pickle reached the pinnacle of his congressional service. Over his 31 years in Congress, Jake Pickle served millions of people in his Austin-based district, and if he had his way, he would have gotten to know every last one of them. He was a good man, a good friend and a great Congressman. I think what may sum up his life and death is this: That as much as we will all miss his service to our Nation, he will still probably miss the opportunity to serve even more.

SOCIAL SECURITY

(Mr. ETHERIDGE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. ETHERIDGE. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to speak about the President's Social Security plan. Social Security represents the values of hardworking communities that Americans in small towns across this country hold dear. It is the fulfillment of our Nation's promise that if you work hard and follow the rules, you will be rewarded for your lifetime of work with a secure retirement.

Today, Social Security keeps 50 percent of seniors out of poverty. No politicians should be allowed to take away the retirement benefits that workers in rural America have earned through Social Security. As a part-time farmer myself, I know how much rural families rely on Social Security. Farm families have tight budgets, even in good years, and most do not have access to employer retirement accounts such as 401(k) plans. Instead of standing up for our rural communities and values, the President's Social Security plan cuts benefits and jeopardizes the most important safety net in rural areas for retirees, survivors and the disabled.

All of rural America needs to read the fine print on President Bush's plan to privatize Social Security. Protecting the promise of Social Security is important to every worker, to every generation and to every family, especially to rural America.

THE 125TH ANNIVERSARY OF WIEDERKEHR WINERY

(Mr. BOOZMAN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BOOZMAN. Mr. Speaker, this year marks the 125th anniversary of the Wiederkehr Wine Cellars near Altus, AR. Many of my colleagues might be surprised to know that fine wine is being produced in this small western Arkansas town and, in fact, has been for the past 125 years. In 1880, Johann Andreas Wiederkehr emigrated from Switzerland to America, choosing a spot in the beautiful Ozark Mountains to plant the grapes, blackberries and persimmons that would make the blend for his first wines. He chose the spot in the Ozark Mountains to settle because the soil, climb and shape of the countryside closely matched the conditions that had led to some of Europe's greatest wines.

One of the finest wineries in the country, the original cellar has been converted into the Weinkeller Restaurant, specializing in authentic dishes from the Wiederkehr family's homeland of Switzerland. The cellar is listed in the National Register of Historic Places.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to congratulate the Wiederkehr family on this milestone. I encourage my colleagues to take a tour of Arkansas' wine country on their next vacation.

SAVE SOCIAL SECURITY FIRST

(Mr. EMANUEL asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. EMANUEL. Mr. Speaker, recently some Senate Republicans have unveiled a proposal to dedicate the Social Security surplus to private accounts. Having worked in an administration that not only proposed saving Social Security first, but having dedicated the Social Security surplus funds to strengthening the system, I assume that this new idea has some concepts of how to pay back the $800 billion that has already been taken out of the surplus over the last 6 years. All of a sudden we have discovered we are going to dedicate the Social Security surplus to Social Security.

I welcome their new-found conviction, but I assume it also includes an idea of how to pay back the $800 billion that we have already diverted from the surplus already diverted from Social Security. What I did not read is how they are going to do that.

The Democratic position has been consistent since 1998: Save Social Security first. The President lacks a plan
