

to keep us busy, it did not seem. There were plenty of activities in the summer to keep us active; and when we were in school during the year, there were activities to keep us active.

But nowadays it seems it is very difficult to keep children active in sports-related activities unless those are around organized activities. As the grandparent of two who are involved in lots of activities themselves, I see very much the benefits to them from being involved in baseball and in basketball and in Kung Fu and other things that teach them skills that will be useful to them all their lives, including team-building skills.

It is very important, I think, that we keep our young people active and that we do all that we can to help them fight against the trends toward obesity that we are seeing in our culture and the trends toward inactivity, with children being drawn to watching television and playing on computers instead of getting outside and being involved in great activities that could help them in all manners of their lives.

So I very much support this resolution, and I urge all Members to support the adoption of H. Res. 826.

Mr. MCINTYRE. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of H. Res. 826, legislation to designate the second week of July as "National Youth Sports Week."

Many thanks to the cochair of the Youth Sports Caucus, Congressman KENNY HULSHOF, and all of the Members of the Youth Sports Caucus for their work on this bill.

Additionally, I would also like to thank the Government Reform Committee, particularly Chairman DAVIS and Ranking Member WAXMAN for their swift support in bringing this bill to the House floor.

Having coached youth sports for 7 years as a volunteer coach in my hometown of Lumberton, NC, I recently created the Congressional Caucus on Youth Sports in response to the release of the first-ever Report Card on Youth Sports in America.

The report card, compiled by the Citizenship Through Sports Alliance, revealed alarming deficiencies in child-centered philosophy, coaching, health and safety, officiating and parental behavior and involvement in youth sports in America.

Youth sports are the largest youth organization in the United States. In fact, more than 42 million children play sports each year with tens of thousands of volunteers, parents, coaches, and officials joining in to help.

Therefore, we must ensure that our Nation's children have a positive experience playing youth sports, and we must restore the focus of youth sports on character development.

The benefits of children's involvement in youth sports go far beyond the playing field. Children who participate in organized sports tend to achieve better results in school, develop excellent interpersonal skills and increased self-esteem.

During my years as a youth sports coach with my sons, Joshua and Stephen, I saw the positive impact of sports on our youth and in our community, as well as in other communities. I know first-hand the positive impact youth sports have had on my life growing up and not only on my sons' lives but also on the lives of countless other young people—both boys and girls—across America.

H. Res. 826 raises awareness about the important and long-term physical and emotion benefits of participating in youth sports and the need to promote sportsmanship among players, parents, coaches and officials.

This bill is supported by the Citizenship Through Sports Alliance, Positive Coaching Alliance, and the National Recreation and Park Association. The month of July has been designated by the National Recreation and Park Association as Parks and Recreation month, and the second week of July to celebrate youth sports would complement this celebration.

Please join me in passing this legislation and helping to ensure that our Nation's children reap the positive affects of involvement in youth sports, and that this crucial part of children's lives remains a source of enjoyment and character-building.

Re National Youth Sports Week Resolution (H. Res. 826)

Hon. MIKE MCINTYRE,

Rayburn House Office Building, House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

I am writing this letter to offer you the full support and endorsement of the National Recreation and Park Association (NRPA) as you seek passage of the National Youth Sports Week Resolution.

Public park and recreation agencies are the largest provider and facilitator of community based youth sport opportunities in America. Not only do park and recreation agencies provide instructional programs and coordinate youth sport leagues, they manage an estimated 500,000 facilities that are permitted to independent youth sport organizations to conduct their own programs and leagues. Public park and recreation agencies lead the way in identifying needs and offering solutions to improve youth sports. Our collective influence regarding public policy associated with quality sports, development of practice standards and leadership around improving the quality of youth sports reflect our commitment to the work of the Congressional Youth Sports Caucus.

Since 1998, the National Recreation and Park Association (NRPA) has engaged national partners and local park and recreation agencies to improve the quality of youth sports nationwide. NRPA partnerships have focused on expanding and improving programming in tennis, basketball, baseball, football as well as many other sports to increase participation among youth and adults.

NRPA was selected by Sports Illustrated in 2002 to celebrate its 50th Anniversary by designating one community in each state as the Sports Illustrated 50th Anniversary Sportstown. This nationwide competition attracted applications from 250 communities in all 50 states. The National Football League Youth Football Fund allowed us to take this project to the next level by engaging thirty-eight communities to demonstrate a new leadership model for improving the quality of youth sports.

At the conclusion of the demonstration project, NRPA launched the Sports Illustrated GOOD SPORTS™ initiative in 2005. Over 1,400 communities joined the initiative to improve youth sports through the following elements:

Teach life skills through sports;
Empower success among youth through sports;

Promote physical activity and healthy lifestyles through sports; and Strengthen communities through youth sports.

NRPA brought our expertise in the field and our community perspective to assist in the development of the Citizenship through Sports Alliance's (CTSA) National Youth Sports Report Card. We recently moved this partnership forward by working with CTSA to conduct a Grassroots Report Card of Youth Sports in America in coordination with the Congressional Caucus on Youth Sports. We are currently assisting local community efforts to benchmark their grassroots report card against the national findings.

NRPA looks forward to collaborating with the Congressional Youth Sports Caucus to work in a bi-partisan fashion to promote the values of sportsmanship, civility, respect, health, safety, fun and physical activity among players and leaders, including coaches, parents and officials. We are pleased that the National Youth Sports Week will take place during the second week of July to coincide and compliment National Recreation and Parks month.

The leadership role of parks and recreation in advancing child-centered youth sports is increasingly evident. Convening community stakeholders and engaging partners to improve programs, policies and practices around all of youth sports is imperative. Park and recreation agencies sit at the crossroads of responsibility and opportunity to elevate the practice and to develop new standards for the benefit of all children. NRPA will continue to develop public policy recommendations to support the leadership role of parks and recreation to improve the quality of youth sports nationwide.

We applaud your leadership and dedication and that of the co-sponsors to the improvement of youth sports in America by designating a National Youth Sports Week.

Sincerely,

JOHN THORNER,
Executive Director,

National Recreation and Park Assoc., Ashburn, VA.

Ms. FOXX. I yield back the balance of my time.
