The House met at 10 a.m.
The Chaplain, the Reverend Daniel P. Coughlin, offered the following prayer:

Lord God of history and ever present to all believers, in contemporary darkness we readily turn on lights.

In spiritual darkness of doubt and confusion, You can send forth a spark of inspiration and grace that will enlighten minds and warm hearts to respond to Your love for Your people and praise Your deeds in Sacred Scripture.

Fill this day with Your blessings. As the first day of Chanukah, the Festival of Lights is celebrated by Jews. Christians tonight will light a Christmas tree on the lawn of the Capitol.

Eternal Father of us all, fill Your children with the delight that comes from light. May we walk no longer in the darkness of fear and ignorance, but join together in mutual understanding and peace, for our eternal hope is placed in You, now and forever.

Amen.

THE JOURNAL

The SPEAKER. The Chair has examined the Journal of the last day’s proceedings and announces to the House her approval thereof.

Pursuant to clause 1, rule I, the Journal stands approved.

Mr. CONAWAY. Madam Speaker, pursuant to clause 1, rule I, I demand a vote on agreeing to the Speaker’s approval of the Journal.

Mr. CONAWAY. Madam Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER. Pursuant to clause 8, rule XX, further proceedings on this question will be postponed.

The point of no quorum is considered withdrawn.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The SPEAKER. Will the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. AKIN) come forward and lead the House in the Pledge of Allegiance.

Mr. AKIN led the Pledge of Allegiance as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER

The SPEAKER. The Chair will entertain up to 15 requests for 1-minute speeches on each side of the aisle.

A NEW ENERGY POLICY

Mr. BLUMENAUER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.

Mr. BLUMENAUER. Madam Speaker, thank you for the work that you and Chairman DINGELL have done in bringing forth to the House for a vote today an opportunity for a comprehensive energy policy.

For too long, we’ve focused on energy for the past, on energy sources and products for the world as it was or as some wanted it to be. This is an opportunity for us to deal with the energy challenges of today and for the future.

The bill that comes forward will be, for the first time since 1975, an opportunity to significantly increase vehicle fuel mileage standards. It will contain a renewable portfolio standard that emulates what has happened in over half our States across the country, to be able to jump-start renewable energy. It will be financed by redirecting tax breaks from the largest oil companies who don’t need taxpayer support to produce oil profitably, and it will be directed to the energy sources of the future, renewables, which do need this help to bring their opportunities to scale.

I hope my colleagues will arise to meet this challenge. Vote to pass this legislation. Our national security, economic stability, and environmental survival depends upon it.

THE DEMOCRATS ARE LATE

Mr. AKIN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.

Mr. AKIN. Madam Speaker, we all have to struggle from time to time with the bad practice of being late. We don’t like to be late, and the reason we don’t is, of course, when we’re late, we inconvenience somebody. If you’re late to the car pool, a couple of people have to sit there and wait and you’ve got to choke your breakfast down a little bit quicker so you don’t inconvenience someone.

But you know the Democrats have been very late. But when the Congress... is late, it is really a big inconvenience, because the Democrats knew that they had to pass the AMT patch some months ago and they didn’t do it. And so what does that mean? It means not just a few people in the car pool. What it means is that the billions of dollars we will not get their tax refund; $87 billion will be late to 32 million Americans because the Democrats are late in dealing with the AMT tax patch. They tried to put it together with a $3.5 trillion tax increase, the mother of all tax increases. Of course that didn’t work, and now we’re late.

ENERGY INDEPENDENCE AND SECURITY ACT WILL HELP US REDUCE OUR DEPENDENCE ON FOREIGN OIL

(Mr. BRALEY of Iowa asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BRALEY of Iowa. Madam Speaker, today we will consider legislation that invests in the future of our Nation and puts us on the path to energy independence. The Energy Independence and Security Act is a significant legislative package that will strengthen our national security by reducing our dependence on foreign oil. The bill addresses skyrocketing gas prices with increased fuel economy standards that will save American families 700 to $1,000 a year at the pump. It also reduces oil consumption by 1.1 million gallons per day in 2020, one half of what we currently import from the Persian Gulf. And this legislation includes a historic commitment to American biofuels that will fuel our cars and trucks. This investment in hometown crops will create American jobs and protect the environment by reducing carbon emissions.

Madam Speaker, the Energy Independence and Security Act will help our Nation invest in resources in the Midwest to improve our environment, instead of relying on Mideastern countries for power-hungry fossil fuels.

I hope all my colleagues in the House and Senate will support this legislation and help reduce our dependence on foreign oil.

CONGRATULATING THE REDSKINS OF HAMILTON COUNTY, OHIO

(Mrs. SCHMIDT asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mrs. SCHMIDT. Madam Speaker, I rise today to congratulate the Anderson Redskins of Hamilton County, Ohio, on winning the Division II Ohio School Athletic Association Football Championship. The Redskins capped off their incredible run into history Friday night by beating the Louisville Leopards of Stark County 31-25 in front of 11,065 fans at Paul Brown Tiger Stadium in Massillon.

After 19 years as assistant coach at Anderson, first-year head coach Jeff Giesting led his team to a final record of 13-2, including a win in the playoffs against township rival the Turpin Spartans.

On Sunday, the Anderson township community celebrated the Redskins’ first-ever State championship in their history when all of the Anderson kids took to the podium to talk about their incredible victory. The resounding theme among those players was not the championship trophy itself, but the sense of community, togetherness and pride which now spread throughout the area.

Madam Speaker, I salute the school, the players, Head Coach Giesting, and the entire Anderson township community on their championship season. Well done, Redskins.

THE BUSH-CHENEY ENERGY PLAN

(Mr. DeFAZIO asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. DeFAZIO. Madam Speaker, the so-called Bush-Cheney energy plan was developed in secret, and it was developed in secret because it was disastrous for America. It would have been bad policy to offer subsidies for the oil, coal and gas industry, dig, drill and burn, but it was a total embarrassment and disaster for 21st century policies. Today we have a chance to reverse that, to put in place a modest renewable portfolio, but the Republicans object to renewable portfolios; to put in place a mandate on increased fuel economy, which the American people would dearly love to have more efficient vehicles, but the Republicans object to that; and investment in new technologies and new sustainable fuels to take us to energy independence, to free us from the thrall of being subject to Chavez and the Saudis and others, but the Republicans object to that too. And we would pay for it by stripping the wild profitable oil and gas industry of some tax subsidies from the American people, and the Republicans object to that too. But despite their objections, we are going to establish a new energy direction sustainable for this country.

FUND OUR VETERANS

(Mrs. DRAKE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mrs. DRAKE. Madam Speaker, this is day 66; that’s 66 days so far that our veterans have not had the use of the increased funding for their benefits and health care. That’s $18.5 million a day, not able to be used. This bill has been done for months and the President has already agreed to sign it. But instead of moving the bill forward, the Democratic leadership in Congress continues to postpone this bill. So far, only one of 12 appropriations bills have been approved and passed and signed into law. Why? Our veterans are heroes. There are few things more important than ensuring that this Congress provide all possible benefits and health care for our veterans.

I’m calling on the Speaker to move this bill forward. And I call on all Americans to contact their representatives and tell the Democratic leadership to send the clean veterans appropriation bill to the President now. Our veterans deserve it.

NO BLANK CHECK FOR THE WAR IN IRAQ WITHOUT INPUT FROM CONGRESS

(Mr. PAYNE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. PAYNE. Madam Speaker, while our troops continue to perform heroically in Iraq, President Bush’s troop surge has not lived up to its promise of producing essential political reconciliation.

As a member of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, I helped lead the opposition to our involvement in Iraq in the first place because I felt that we should let the weapons inspectors do their jobs before rushing into a preemptive military response.

After our Iraq policy failed, and the rationale for going to war was invalidated due to the absence of weapons of mass destruction, we’re told that the so-called military surge would help bring a political solution to Iraq. That has not happened. Senior military commanders have indicated that the inability of the Iraqi Government to achieve political reconciliation is a greater threat to our troops than the insurgency in Iraq.

Many of us here in Congress believe that the Iraqi Government will not begin to address the political reconciliation until it is clear that our troops are coming home.

Last month, House Democrats once again passed a bill that provided our troops with $50 billion in funding and a strategic plan that brings them home. We must bring our troops home. We demand a change in the direction in Iraq.

NEW ENERGY POLICY

(Mr. CONAWAY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. CONAWAY. Madam Speaker, the previous speaker mentioned that the current energy policy was crafted in the dark. I would have to agree that the current energy policy that’s being proposed has certainly kept the Republicans in the dark because we have yet to see the language on the policy that we will be asked to vote on over the next couple of days. In all likelihood, it will require mandates. Mandates are good ideas that I’ve come up with that you have to pay for.

There will be a lot of talk on this floor, there will be a lot of good arguments made, but to cut to the chase, if it were cheaper to produce electricity today by using solar and wind and other alternatives, we would be doing it. That’s the American way. That’s the commerce of the circumstances, but it is not. And so, as we look at these proposals that will require how we go about providing Americans with the electricity and energy we need over the next decades, let’s don’t forget that there is a cost associated with it. We ought to know that cost. We ought to know the cost to consumers and to the businesses that have to use that energy.

There’s an old saying, “If you don’t like the high cost of eggs, then why would you kill chickens?” Let’s be careful that with this new energy policy that’s being proposed, that we don’t, in fact, kill the chickens that produce the eggs that generate the electricity and the energy that we need.

HOUSE DEMOCRATS FIGHTING FOR MIDDLE-CLASS FAMILIES IN AN UNCERTAIN ECONOMY

(Mr. CARDOZA asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. CARDOZA. Madam Speaker, with home values dropping and the cost of health care, home heating oil and college education continuing to rise, American families are justifiably uneasy about their ability to make ends meet in a declining economy.

The Democratic Congress has made protecting middle-class families its highest priority. Over the course of this year, we have passed billions in tax relief for American small businesses, increased the minimum wage for the first time in a decade, passed legislation that cuts taxes for middle-class families and given families the most financial assistance for college since the GI Bill.

The New Direction Congress is also working to reach bipartisan agreements to address the subprime loan crisis and predatory loan practices that are threatening to force thousands of American families from their homes. Today, we will bring a comprehensive energy bill to the floor that will provide some much-needed relief at the gas pump as well.

Madam Speaker, the needs and concerns of our Nation’s working families remain one of this Congress’ top priorities.

DEMOCRATS’ ENERGY BILL

(Mr. RADANOVICH asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. RADANOVICH. Madam Speaker, energy independence is one of the most critical issues facing our Nation. This Congress has a responsibility to the American family to ease the burden they’re feeling at the gas pump and reduce the cost of heating America’s homes this winter. Unfortunately, this Democrat majority is either unwilling or unable to accept that responsibility.

The majority wants to place unrealistic Federal mandates on renewable electricity that will drive up the cost of utilities and mandates on renewable fuel that will increase the cost of food at the supermarket.

The American public wants results. That means increasing domestic oil and gas production, building petroleum refineries for the first time in 30 years, and expanding the use of nuclear energy. Instead, the static electricity created by my shoes rubbing across this carpet creates more energy than the Democrats’ energy bill.

ENERGY INDEPENDENCE AND SECURITY ACT

(Mr. CARNAHAN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. CARNAHAN. Madam Speaker, as evidence mounts about the growing risk of climate change and dependence on foreign oil, this Congress has a duty to enact responsible legislation that reduces our impact on the environment.

Today, we will do just that by considering the Energy Independence and Security Act, which includes critical provisions to not only reduce global warming, but create new American jobs by harnessing the best of American innovation and technology.

This energy bill creates a program to train a skilled green workforce in our Nation, and could lead to the creation of nearly 3 million green jobs over the next 10 years. It increases loan limits for small businesses to help them develop energy efficient technologies, and increases investment in small firms developing renewable energy. It also includes landmark fuel efficiency standards, renewable electricity standards, and energy efficiency programs that will save businesses and consumers money, while reducing carbon emissions.

This new energy bill is a big step for the U.S. in the right environmental direction, and it deserves the support of every Member of this Congress.

PELOSI BILL WILL MAKE US MORE DEPENDENT ON FOREIGN ENERGY

(Mr. PETERSON of Pennsylvania asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. PETERSON of Pennsylvania. Does the energy bill help Americans who are struggling to heat their homes and drive their cars? For affordable energy, the answer is no.

Despite claims to the American public that they will put policies in place to achieve energy independence, the Democrats’ bill will produce only one BTU of energy.

To achieve energy independence, we must replace imported energy with our domestic resources. Unfortunately, the Pelosi bill will make us more dependent on foreign energy, not less.

The Democrat bill relies on much-needed conservation through increased CAFE standards 13 years from now, which will change the fleet, and the production of 15 percent of electricity from renewables, hardly enough to replace the 13 million barrels of oil we import every day.

If we want to achieve energy security and reduce our dependence on foreign energy we must increase the production of oil and gas in America’s energy-rich areas.

As American families and small businesses continue to tighten their belts to cope with soaring energy costs, Congress should be doing everything in their power to relieve this unnecessary burden. Yet today the House is taking a step in the opposite direction, increasing our dependence on energy from foreign, unstable countries.

DEMOCRATIC HOUSE WORKING ON BEHALF OF PROGRESS

(Mr. YARMUTH asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. YARMUTH. Madam Speaker, how many times is President Bush going to hold the same press conference, hammering away at Congress just because we’re meeting our responsibilities under article I and restoring Americans’ faith in the future? Doesn’t he understand that the American people chose to put Democrats in control of Congress for a reason?

All year long we have been working to take our Nation in a new direction and restore that faith in the future. In some instances, the President has joined our efforts. We worked together to fully implement the 9/11 Commission recommendations, increase the minimum wage, and make college more affordable for millions of college students. Unfortunately, in almost every other instance, President Bush has stood in the way of real progress. He refused to help us provide quality health coverage for 10 million children. He rejected our efforts consistently to change course in Iraq. And he has threatened to veto our appropriations bills that truly prioritize our domestic needs.

Madam Speaker, President Bush has every right to be frustrated by his lack of accomplishments, but he has nobody to blame but himself. He needs to stop standing in the way of progress.

LET’S DO AWAY WITH EARMARKS

(Mr. FLAKE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. FLAKE. Madam Speaker, I got a kick out of a recent hearing made by the chairman of the House Appropriations Committee. He cautioned Members that if congressional negotiators were forced to make additional cuts in this year's spending bills, that he just might do away with all earmarks in the bill. Well, that may pass for a threat here in Washington, but taxpayers all over the country are applauding.

Despite the perception that many in Congress seem to have that taxpayers are eagerly awaiting the completion of appropriation bills to see if their earmarks ended up in the bill for their hometown, taxpayers, whether they're Republicans or Democrats, are applauding. They think that earmarks are a waste of money.

Chairman OBEY has said on many occasions that if it were up to him, he would do away with earmarks altogether; they are a waste of his time and his committee's resources. I couldn't agree more. In fact, I think of a better Christmas present to Chairman OBEY than releasing him from the stress and hassle of having to deal with our earmarks. I'm sure he would be grateful, and our constituents would be grateful even more.

RECOGNIZING THE LIFE AND LEGACY OF FORMER CONNECTICUT GOVERNOR WILLIAM O'NEILL

(Mr. COURTNEY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. COURTNEY. Madam Speaker, I rise today to recognize the life and legacy of former Governor William O'Neil, who passed away on November 24, 2007.

Bill O'Neill is today recognized as one of the giants of Connecticut history. He served as Governor from 1980 to 1982, and was a leader who had a common sense, compassionate vision of government, raising teachers' salaries, rebuilding our roads, and creating a pathbreaking prescription drug benefit for seniors.

In Connecticut over the last 2 weeks, there has been an outpouring of affection for the Governor and his wonderful surviving wife, Nikki, partly because of his great work for the people, but also because of the plain spoken, humble man he carried himself in the State's highest office.

As the Irish would say, Bill O'Neill never put on airs. And that is why last week, at a funeral service at St. Patrick's Church in his beloved East Hampton, the same church he served as an altar boy and the same church he faithfully attended for over 70 years, people from all walks of life came to pay tribute to him and Nikki and honor a man who set a beautiful example for us all, of service, decency and compassion.

I ask my colleagues to join with me in honoring Governor O'Neill's contributions to Connecticut and offer sincerest condolences to his family and friends.

ENERGY BILL IS A TERRIBLE DEAL FOR AMERICANS

(Mrs. MILLER of Michigan asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Mrs. MILLER of Michigan. Madam Speaker, three things are certain to occur because of the Democrat's energy bill: First of all, it's going to make cars more expensive, it will force taxes to be raised, and it will cost American jobs.

The imposition of higher CAFE standards combined with a regulatory nightmare of the EPA regulating tail pipe emissions and NHTSA regulating fuel economy will force the domestic auto companies to expend billions on regulatory compliance with the cost passed along to consumers, of course.

Some estimate that the cost of this will be as much as $85 billion. This means that the cost of an American automobile will rise as much as $5,000 to $10,000 per vehicle. And worst of all, the new mandates will actually force automakers to outsource more vehicle production in an effort to reduce their costs and to remain competitive, which will cost more American jobs. This is simply a terrible deal for American consumers, American taxpayers, and American workers. It will result in a hidden tax on cars, higher taxes on gas, and less jobs in America.

Our Nation needs a comprehensive energy policy, but this bill misses the mark badly. I urge the Democrat leadership to bring the bipartisan H. Res. 843 to the floor for a vote. It would be a mark on this body if we did not honor the life and work of a man of character like Henry Hyde.

FINALLY A COMPREHENSIVE ENERGY BILL

(Ms. SHEA-PORTER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Ms. SHEA-PORTER. Today we will vote on a comprehensive energy bill, finally. This country has waited 32 years for an increase in mileage standards. Thirty-two years. We have also waited for Congress to focus on renewables, green jobs and energy conservation in our buildings and on our roads. This bill will do that. This bill will also help free our Nation from dependence on foreign oil.

When Newt Gingrich was sworn in as Speaker, we were 41 percent dependent on foreign oil. We are now 61 percent dependent on foreign oil. This is a risk to our national security. This bill will help our pocketbooks, it will help our environment, and it will help our national security. I urge my colleagues to vote "yes."

HONORING THE LIFE OF REPRESENTATIVE HENRY HYDE

(Mr. PITTS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. PITTS. Madam Speaker, last week, America lost a true statesman when Henry Hyde passed away at the age of 83.

Representative Hyde was a student of American history, a constitutional scholar, a thoughtful legislator, and a skillful orator. But above all, he will be remembered as a man of integrity who stood for the most basic principles of liberty, justice, and, above all, respect for life.

On November 5, President Bush awarded Mr. Hyde the Presidential Medal of Freedom, the very highest honor the President can bestow on an American citizen.

In his first term, Henry Hyde offered an amendment that ensured that Americans who believe in the sanctity of life would not see their taxpayer dollars go to the funding of abortion. That demonstration of Henry's long legislative career spent working to protect the sanctity of human life.

I urge the Democrat leadership to bring the bipartisan H. Res. 843 to the floor for a vote. It would be a mark on this body if we did not honor the life and work of a man of character like Henry Hyde.

ADMINISTRATION'S MISPLACED PRIORITIES

(Mr. HALL of New York asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. HALL of New York. Madam Speaker, I rise today to oppose the latest demonstration of this administration's misplaced priorities.

President Bush wants to slash $2 billion in funding that will help our police and other first responders protect Americans here at home from terrorists and other threats so that he can send $3 billion over to Iraq to train police there. That money means a lot to our police and firefighters here at home. By cutting this funding, President Bush will endanger security at our ports, subways and rail lines. Further, his proposal will not allow law enforcement agencies to use grants for counterterrorism or intelligence personnel, funding which has helped the NYPD uncover and stop nearly 20 terrorist attacks.

By proposing these cuts, the President rejects the advice of the Department of Homeland Security and the 9/11 Commission and again shows his priorities are not those of the American people.

I urge the President to reconsider this request and will work with my colleagues to reverse these deeply misguided cuts to homeland security.

LIFE HAS LOST ITS LION

(Mr. PENCE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. PENCE. On November 29, Americans learned of the passing of one of the giants of this Congress in the 20th century. Congressman Henry Hyde of Illinois died at the age of 83.

As Members in both parties know, throughout his nearly four decades in this Congress, Henry Hyde was the essence of dignity, civility, and a commitment to principle. He was a champion of the great causes, life, liberty... and the rule of law, a voice for the voiceless, victims of human rights abuses, and he was a lion of the right to life. In every sense, life has lost its lion, and this movement will miss his roar.

Henry once quoted me on this floor from his favorite poet Tennyson from the poem “Ulysses.” He said, by memory, “Though we are not now that strength which in old days moved heaven and earth, that which we are, we are, one equal temper of heroic hearts made weak by time and fate, but strong in will to strive, to seek, to find, and not to yield.”

On all the great issues of the day, Henry Hyde strove, he sought, he found, he did not yield. May he rest in peace, and those of us who share his values and his principles not rest until the work he began is done.

Mr. COHEN. Madam Speaker, on Monday evening, the President hosted a holiday party for Members of Congress and others. A good time was had by all. It was a wonderful time and the President was a marvelous host, but I had to think in that moment about the holiday spirit and the idea of giving and caring for people who need something and providing for them.

I asked the President at that time to use some of his compassionate conservatism to help us get through this budget. There are people that need help with their heating bills this winter. There are people that need police and protection for their neighborhoods. There are people who have problems with illnesses in their families, whether it be cancer, Alzheimer’s, diabetes or heart disease, which research dollars could help them with. There are people that need help with Head Start and education in this country and children that need health care.

Madam Speaker, I think in this Christmas season we ought to think about why we’re here, who we should be helping and what we ought to be doing. Part of it is helping others and people who need a little bit more. The President was elected on an idea of compassionate conservatism. It’s time to be compassionate. Part of that is being compassionate to take care of people here in America.

Bring it home, Mr. President.

IRAN AND THE ENERGY BILL

Mr. MORAN of Virginia asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.

Mr. MORAN. Madam Speaker, after all the discussions and all the deliberations associated with Iraq, not to mention the human rights abuses in Guantanamo and Abu Ghraib, you wouldn’t think that America could lose any more credibility, but now we understand the President was warned well in advance that there was new information on Iran’s nuclear program; yet he continued with his bellicose rhetoric, even raising the specter of World War III.

Well, now we know. There is absolutely no excuse for going to war with Iran. But the fact is that if the President is still concerned about Iran, which he very much should be, he should read the rest of the National Intelligence Estimate which makes it clear that Iran is going to acquire even more wealth and, thus, power because of our dependency on oil.

So the best thing that the President can do if he’s concerned about Iran is to sign the energy bill that we are considering today. We cannot continue our dependence upon foreign oil, and the first way to start moving in a new and more secure direction, is to sign the Energy Independence bill that will go to his desk very shortly.

TIME FOR A CHANGE OF COURSE IN IRAQ

Mr. PALLONE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.

Mr. PALLONE. Madam Speaker, while our Nation and our military are paying a huge price for the continuing war in Iraq, the Iraqi Government itself refuses to take any steps needed to bring about political reconciliation. It has now been more than 320 days since the surge began. During that time, more than 860 American troops have been killed and we continue to spend more than $10 billion in Iraq every month; yet the Iraqi Government still refuses to live up to the promises it made to President Bush when the surge began.

The government promised that the Iraqi Parliament would pass a national oil and gas bill. It hasn’t.

The Iraqi Government also promised the President that its parliament would pass a de-Baathification law. It hasn’t.

The government also promised to hold provincial elections. Once again, they have failed to follow through.

Madam Speaker, how much longer is President Bush going to sacrifice both our military and our Treasury for an Iraqi Government that refuses to make the difficult decisions that could possibly produce real stability in Iraq? It’s time for a change of course in Iraq.

REMOVAL OF NAME OF MEMBER AS COSPONSOR OF H.R. 3120

Mr. PUTNAM. I ask unanimous consent, Madam Speaker, that my name be removed as a cosponsor from H.R. 3120.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Ms. DeGETTE). Is there objection to the removal of the gentleman from Florida?

There was no objection.

APPOINTMENT OF CONFEREES ON H.R. 1585, NATIONAL DEFENSE AUTHORIZATION ACT FOR FISCAL YEAR 2008

Mr. SKELTON. Madam Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker’s table the bill (H.R. 1585) to authorize appropriations for fiscal year 2008 for military activities of the Department of Defense, for military construction, and for defense activities of the Department of Energy, to prescribe military personnel strengths for such fiscal year, and for other purposes, with a Senate amendment thereto, to disagree to the Senate amendment, and agree to the conference asked by the Senate.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Florida?

There was no objection.

MOTION TO INSTRUCT OFFERED BY MR. HUNTER

Mr. HUNTER. Madam Speaker, I offer a motion to instruct conferees. The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. Hunter moves that the managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the Senate amendment to the bill H.R. 1585 be instructed to agree to the following provisions:

(1) The provision contained in section 1586(b) of the Senate amendment, relating to the sense of the Senate that the Senate should commit itself to a strategy that will not leave a failed state in Iraq and the Senate should not pass legislation that will undermine our military’s ability to prevent a failed state in Iraq.

(2) The provisions contained in title XV of the House bill, relating to the authorization of additional appropriations for Operation Iraqi Freedom and Operation Enduring Freedom.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 7 of rule XXII, the gentleman from California (Mr. SKELTON) and the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. HUNTER) each will control 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from California.

Mr. HUNTER. Thank you, Madam Speaker. I yield myself such time as I might consume.

My colleagues, the Republican motion to instruct outlines the consequences of a failed state in Iraq and supplan military conflict involving Saudi Arabia, Iraq, Syria, and Turkey, and would lead to massive humanitarian suffering, including widespread ethnic cleansing and countless refugees and internally displaced persons, many of whom will be called upon to contribute to having assisted coalition forces.

Senate provision 1536 concludes by stating that the Congress should commit itself to a strategy that will not leave a failed state in Iraq and should not pass legislation that will undermine our military’s ability to prevent a failed state in Iraq.

Now, going to the aspect of the authorization of additional appropriations for Operation Iraqi Freedom and Operation Enduring Freedom, my colleagues, these are the funds that are essential in this ongoing war in two theaters, to keep the funds going, to keep the money going to operate our military forces so that we don’t end up having to reach into the cash register and pull money out for ammunition, pull money out for training exercise, pull money out for important ongoing operations and activities here that are in fact assisting the war-fighting effort.

One example of those, of course, is the Joint Improvised Explosive Device Defeat Organization, JIEDDO, which has a complicated name but very simply means developing capabilities against roadside bombs. That’s a command that we set up to defeat IEDs in Iraq, and we are told now that it will run out of money within the next couple of months. I would like to be able to fund enough money to fund all urgent initiatives from Iraq and Afghanistan during that time.

I would remind my colleagues that the roadside bombs are being seen on a more widespread basis in Afghanistan now. There has been an understanding by the insurgents, by the Taliban, by al Qaeda in Afghanistan that those, in fact, are a deadly and effective system. And it makes no sense whatsoever for us to shortchange the accounts that are going toward the defeat of roadside bombs.

Another point that I would make is that we have been notified that the Pentagon will soon be required to lay off 100,000 civilian workers. Many of those workers are working on important projects that go to the heart of our ability to ward off theater. So this is a major, major mistake for this Congress, in the middle of an operation in two war-fighting theaters, to shortchange these accounts which will result in the military having to go back to the cash register to take money out of other accounts in the hope that at some point in the future next year we are going to be able to make up that money. So whatever your position on our operations in Iraq and Afghanistan, whether you think we should be there or not be there, every Member of this body says time and again, “We support the troops.”

Let me explain what it does. The Republican motion to instruct puts the House of Representatives on record acknowledging the consequences of a vote for a precipitous withdrawal from Iraq and not fully funding our troops and their missions. It instructs House conferees to accept Senate provision 1536 which states that it is the sense of Congress that a failed state in Iraq would become a safe haven for Islamic radicals, including al Qaeda and Hezbollah, who are determined to attack the United States and its allies.

The provision also notes that a failed state in Iraq could lead to a broader regional conflict involving Saudi Arabia, Iraq, Syria, and Turkey, and would lead to massive humanitarian suffering, including widespread ethnic cleansing and countless refugees and internally displaced persons, many of whom will be called upon to contribute to having assisted coalition forces.

Senate provision 1536 concludes by stating that the Congress should commit itself to a strategy that will not leave a failed state in Iraq and should not pass legislation that will undermine our military’s ability to prevent a failed state in Iraq.

Now, going to the aspect of the authorization of additional appropriations for Operation Iraqi Freedom and Operation Enduring Freedom, my colleagues, these are the funds that are essential in this ongoing war in two theaters, to keep the funds going, to keep the money going to operate our military forces so that we don’t end up having to reach into the cash register and pull money out for ammunition, pull money out for training exercise, pull money out for important ongoing operations and activities here that are in fact assisting the war-fighting effort.

One example of those, of course, is the Joint Improvised Explosive Device Defeat Organization, JIEDDO, which has a complicated name but very simply means developing capabilities against roadside bombs. That’s a command that we set up to defeat IEDs in Iraq, and we are told now that it will run out of money within the next couple of months. I would like to be able to fund enough money to fund all urgent initiatives from Iraq and Afghanistan during that time.

I would hope that my colleagues on the other side of the aisle would be forthcoming with their suggestions on how to address the strategic risk we incur by pursuing the President’s failed policy, the Defense Authorization Act, our committee, I expect, will act in conference to ensure that those debates can occur and that the House can work its will on future appropriations bills to restrain the President’s Iraq war policy.

We all acknowledge that our troops have done a great job in Iraq. We owe them our thanks, our gratitude, and our congratulations for their work as well as for their sacrifices. Their sweat and their blood have helped to reduce the level of violence in Iraq from the horrific levels of late 2006 and early 2007.

The original purpose of this surge was to reduce violence to provide the Iraqis with a chance for political reconciliation. Violence is down. It is time for the Iraqis to step up and take the hard steps toward reconciliation that will finish the job our wonderful troops have started. Yet they have refused to do this.

In response to this refusal, the House recently voted to begin to redeploy most of our troops out of Iraq and to change the nature of our involvement there. This policy is supported by a large majority of the American people who do not believe that we should continue to police a civil war when the Iraqis themselves refuse to take the hard steps to bring it to an end.

Well, we are not having the Iraq debate on the defense authorization bill. The supplemental authorization is intended to set the stage for that debate. That is an appropriations bill as all of us know. That is why the House and the Senate versions of the Defense Authorization Act, which is before us, included a supplemental authorization and why I suspect that the conference will do the same.

I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SKELTON. Madam Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

As my friend, Mr. HUNTER, the gentleman from California knows, both the House version of the Defense Authorization Act and the Senate version authorized supplemental funding for the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan. I say “authorized.”

The Armed Services Committee has collectively supported authorizing this funding to ensure the continued relevance of the committee and to make sure that the specific purposes for which the President has requested funds are actually related to the wars.

In both the House and Senate versions of the bill, we have authorized this funding in a way that provides maximum flexibility for the leadership as well as for the appropriators. While we authorize funding, as my friend from California knows, nothing can happen without further action on an appropriations bill, and it is those appropriations bills that have served as the vehicles for the Iraq debate.

The House recently passed a bridge supplemental fund that would change our policy in Iraq, and we moved to a well received, well considered debate in the future, but I would hope that my colleagues on the other side of the aisle would be forthcoming with suggestions on how to address the strategic risk we incur by pursuing the President’s failed policy, the Defense Authorization Act, our committee, I expect, will act in conference to ensure that those debates can occur and that the House can work its will on future appropriations bills to restrain the President’s Iraq war policy.

We all acknowledge that our troops have done a great job in Iraq. We owe them our thanks, our gratitude, and our congratulations for their work as well as for their sacrifices. This policy is supported by a large majority of the American people who do not believe that we should continue to police a civil war when the Iraqis themselves refuse to take the hard steps to bring it to an end.

Well, we are not having the Iraq debate on the defense authorization bill. The supplemental authorization is intended to set the stage for that debate. That is an appropriations bill as all of us know. That is why the House and the Senate versions of the Defense Authorization Act, which is before us, included a supplemental authorization and why I suspect that the conference will do the same.

I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. HUNTER. Madam Speaker, at this time I would like to yield 5 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. SAXTON) who is the ranking member on the Terrorism Subcommittee.

Mr. SAXTON. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

I happen to believe that this motion to instruct is extremely important. I think it is extremely important for two reasons. First, as Mr. HUNTER pointed out, this provision provides instruction to authorize the full $192 billion supplemental for the war spending bill without any strings or date certain to withdraw American forces from Iraq. I think that is important. And I will say why a little bit later here. But I also think it is important to recognize, as this provision also does, that there are consequences for not carrying out our actions in Iraq and in other places in the world, for that matter, in a responsible fashion.

This measure instructs the House conferees to accept a provision that has already been passed by the Senate. It is known as provision 1536 which states that it is the sense of Congress that a failed state in Iraq would come a safe haven for Islamic radicals, including al Qaeda and Hezbollah, and others, who are determined to attack the United States here at home and our allies.

Let me speak to the first point to say why I think it is important that we go forward to authorize the full $192 billion supplemental war spending bill. All of us should be students of history, particularly recent history. I know that the chairman of the Armed Services Committee is a great historian himself. But recent events I think are extremely important. Perhaps some of our colleagues here have not watched this as closely as perhaps some of us on the Armed Services Committee, but as we saw progress begin to take place in Iraq, many of us asked why. And I think it was universally accepted that one of the reasons was that the Sunni tribal leaders, began to cooperate with our forces and our personnel who are there. One reason was in their own self-interest. They recognized that the time of wishing each other, that is Sunnis and Shiites, was draining to a close because the Iraqi people themselves were tired of the violence. So just like any of our neighbors here would be tired of violence under those circumstances, the Iraqis grew tired of it as well.

But the second reason I believe we began to make the progress that we see today is very simply that the Iraqi people became convinced, in spite of many days of rhetoric on this floor, became convinced that we weren’t going to leave and they were going to stay and finish the job. And so the commitment that would be expressed by the passage of this language I think is extremely important.

But I also think it is important to recognize that the provision notes that a failed state in Iraq could lead to a broader regional conflict. There was a lot of talk here this morning on this floor and yesterday in the news media about the threat of Iran. Republicans have raised concerns with the chairman of the Armed Services Committee that there are con-stating that the Congress should commit itself to a strategy that will not leave a failed state in Iraq, that will continue the progress that we have seen in recent months and should not pass legislation that will undermine our military’s ability to prevent a failed state.

Mr. SKELTON. Madam Speaker, before I yield to the gentleman from Mississippi, let me point out the fact that both in the House version of the defense authorization bill as well as the Senate version there is a positive reference to the threat of a failed state in Iraq. That is fully recognized in both pieces of legislation, and I appreciate the gentleman’s comments thereon and hopefully correct and parallel language could be adopted in that regard.

I now, Madam Speaker, yield 5 minutes to my friend, my colleague, the gentleman from Mississippi, the chairman of the Subcommittee on Seapower (Mr. Taylor).

Mr. TAYLOR. I thank the gentleman from Missouri, the chairman.

Madam Speaker, one of the things we ought to do in a democracy is when the other guy has a good idea, no matter what party it is from, to say, that’s a good idea. I would remind the gentleman that it was the Bush administration that classified the number of jammers in Iraq under a failed policy by Donald Rumsfeld that basically didn’t want the moms and dads of Americans to know how few we had. It was this Congress that insisted that we have a jammer on every vehicle in Iraq to keep the improvised explosive devices from being remotely detonated. So, of course, I don’t want those funds cut because I, along with others, worked to put those funds in the bill.

Along that same policy of “war by wishful thinking” from the Rumsfeld crowd was that we didn’t need mine-resistant vehicles over there. The Bush administration only asked for 4,000. We were going to build over 15,000 because this Congress realized the importance of them, and that there are kids in Walter Reed today who would still have their limbs if we had built them sooner. There are kids in Mississippi graveyards who would still be alive if we had built them sooner. So of course we want those funds in the bill.

I fully support the gentleman’s efforts. We have a lot of very good things in this bill, and it deserves to be funded, and the troops in Iraq need to know that we are going to fund the jammers they need to save their lives both over there and here because one of the problems with having too few jammers is that our troops in the United States that are training to go to Iraq still aren’t seeing a jammer until they get to theater. And this is the device that is going to save their lives. This is the device that is going to save their limbs. And they need to be training with those devices. And the reason is that the first time they don’t see this device that’s going to save their lives is when they are traveling from Kuwait into Iraq. That is the situation that still exists today that we are trying to fix.

The Bush administration asked for too few of these. Congress, in an earmark, said no, we are going to build them because they are going to save lives. The Bush administration asked for too few mine-resistant, ambush-protected vehicles. Congress, in an earmark, said no, we are going to build them because it is going to keep kids from losing their legs, and it is going to keep kids from losing their lives. So once again I am going to support this bill. I am going to support the gentleman’s efforts, and I thank the chairman for putting together what I think is an excellent Armed Services defense authorization bill that is going to lead to fewer deaths in Iraq, fewer deaths in Afghanistan, and a stronger, and hopefully in the future, more peaceful world.

Mr. HUNTER. Madam Speaker, I want to thank the last speaker for his support and for his wonderful contribution on the Armed Services Committee in terms of working the jammer issues, and lots of other Members who have worked these important force protection issues. I think that we have proven on the committee that the wisdom of the committee and lots of Members who have gotten personally involved in this force protection issue have matched and at some times exceeded the Pentagon’s own projections and projects.

Mr. SKELTON. Madam Speaker, one of the things we can direct to force protection is a failed state in Iraq. That is the situation that still exists today that we are trying to fix.

The Bush administration asked for too few of these. Congress, in an earmark, said no, we are going to build them because they are going to save lives. The Bush administration asked for too few mine-resistant, ambush-protected vehicles. Congress, in an earmark, said no, we are going to build them because it is going to keep kids from losing their legs, and it is going to keep kids from losing their lives. So once again I am going to support this bill. I am going to support the gentleman’s efforts, and I thank the chairman for putting together what I think is an excellent Armed Services defense authorization bill that is going to lead to fewer deaths in Iraq, fewer deaths in Afghanistan, and a stronger, and hopefully in the future, more peaceful world.

Mr. HUNTER. Madam Speaker, I want to thank the last speaker for his support and for his wonderful contribution on the Armed Services Committee in terms of working the jammer issues, and lots of other Members who have worked these important force protection issues. I think that we have proven on the committee that the wisdom of the committee and lots of Members who have gotten personally involved in this force protection issue have matched and at some times exceeded the Pentagon’s own projections and projects.

I am reminded also that we manufactured and fielded 10,000 portable jammers, so that one foot could also have jammers, which had not been planned by the Pentagon. So I think he makes a good point. Of course, having these funds that are available in these supplementals that we can direct to force protection is a key aspect of our request. And I want to thank the gentleman from Mississippi, the chairman of the Armed Services Committee.

Madam Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentlewoman from Virginia (Mrs. DRAKE).

Mrs. DRAKE. Madam Speaker, I rise in strong support of the motion to instruct conferees. This motion would instruct House conferees to accept section 1536 of the Senate version of the national defense authorization, a provision which received near unanimous support on the other side of the Capitol. This section states, “A failed state in Iraq would become a safe haven for radicals, including al Qaeda and Hezbollah, who are determined to attack the United States and its allies.” It goes on to statement that “a failed state in Iraq would lead to a broader regional conflict, possibly involving Syria and Iran.”

I would remind my colleagues that only a few short months ago, the President of Iran was quoted as saying that very soon we will be witnessing a great period of time. And so that Iran is willing to fill this void.

Madam Speaker, the other side has attempted over 40 times to wave a white flag in Iraq. This motion would put this Chamber on record as supporting a policy of success in Iraq. Our goal must be the path that we are on: a stable, functioning Iraqi Government, who can be an ally with us in the war on terrorism and not the goal of our enemies, which is the capital of their caliphate.

Madam Speaker, I visited Iraq this summer. I had the opportunity to meet with the Deputy Prime Minister, and I asked the question why Iraq had not passed this legislation that we were using as a benchmark. I told him I had heard he had the votes to pass the legislation.

His answer to me was quite surprising. He said, “Yes, I have the votes. I have 75 percent to pass the legislation.” He said, “But if I do it, I will be cutting the Sunnis out of the government; they will have no voice and no power.”

That is exactly the opposite of what their goal is in Iraq. I would maintain that the Iraqi Government is working very hard for stable institutions where no one group can take over power again.

We have all seen the efforts of our military and the surge are working, creating stability and security. And now we are seeing the best of all results, which is the Iraqi people themselves, who have chosen us and have chosen their government. And in the words of their own sheiks that we met, two Sunni and two Shia, they said, “We are working together for Iraq.”

I urge my colleagues to support this motion in the best interests of our national security and working together for Iraq.

Mr. SKELETON, Madam Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to my friend and colleague, the gentlewoman from California (Mrs. TAUSCHER), who is the chairwoman of the Subcommittee on Strategic Forces.

Mrs. TAUSCHER, Madam Speaker, I thank the distinguished chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, who led a fabulous effort this year. For the first time in 13 years, Democrats are in the majority and wrote a defense bill that came to the floor and passed with almost 400 votes. I think that is a record, and I think it speaks very much for the bipartisan effort that we had on the committee.

In my subcommittee, Strategic Forces, which includes many different issues, including missile defense, the entire nuclear weapons portfolio, our part of the bill passed through on a voice vote and then came to the committee and was supported by virtually all members. So I think we have a very good bill. I think that the conference between the House and the Senate will be a productive one. It will be a time for us to mesh these issues.

But as we often say in Washington, no good deed goes unpunished. I very much appreciate the ranking member from California bringing this motion to instruct forward, but, by the way, it is what is going to probably be in the bill, and it is certainly what is reflected in a bipartisan way by both Democrats and Republicans in both the House and the Senate.

I think there has been a lot of rhetoric that a failed state in Iraq was going to be a bad thing, but would continue to be a bad thing.

I guess the real question is, what about the failed policy that got us to a place where we are all concerned about a failed state in Iraq, and why isn’t the debate today about the failed policy? How could it be that we are sitting here talking about a national defense bill that is one of the most important bills that the Congress brings, our constitutional responsibility, and we are not talking about a failed policy that has caused us to borrow almost $800 billion and virtually no ready ground forces in the United States currently, caused us to degrade our ability to be prepared for any other contingency? Why isn’t the debate today about that?

Well, because that would be a good debate. That would be really what the debate should be about. But, instead, we are going to have a motion to instruct on things that are already agreed to by the Senate and the House, by the two parties, and I would say every Member here.

So I appreciate the Member from California bringing this up. This is easy to support. We are all for it and we all know it. But the real question is: Why don’t we have a debate about the failed policy? Why aren’t we really concerned about the readiness of our troops, our inability to deal with other contingencies, all of the money we have borrowed, and no solution to extricate ourselves fairly and as soon as possible to bring our troops home so that we can maintain our readiness?

Our American forces in Afghanistan and in Iraq have done everything that the American people have asked for. The problem, my colleagues, is they have done it for too long. They have done it for too long without an Iraqi Government that will stand up and provide the political solution necessary for us to be able to leave an Iraq that is beginning to put itself together, knitting those tribes together, moving forward together to do the right thing.

But what we have right now is an intransigent, stuck Iraqi Government that hasn’t provided the political solution, the only solution, that will be able to create a stable Iraq. It is not our responsibility to create a stable Iraq. That is why they have a sovereign government. And what we can no longer do is enable the sovereign government to come up with excuse after excuse after excuse.

I really appreciated my colleague from Virginia explaining to me why the oil legislation written by our State Department isn’t something that the Iraqis can pass, even though they have the votes to do it. I find that fascinating.

We have been told for months that the petrochemical law is the most important thing that we have that is going to give the Sunnis the effort to come into the government and feel like they are part of the government and that they are part of a solution and a one-Iraq strategy. But, of course, we can’t do that, because even though they have the votes, it seems like it is just a little too hard to do.

We are spending too much money. We are spending too much and we are risking too many American soldiers. We are risking our readiness. The failed policy is really what we should be talking about, Madam Speaker.

Madam Speaker, I said it is easy to support this motion to instruct because it is something we all agree on.

Mr. HUNTER. Madam Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to respond to my good colleague from California.

First, I would say to my colleague, we are winning in Iraq. We are winning. We are going to leave Iraq in victory.

Maybe my friend heard a different briefing than the one that I heard when General Petraeus came back and laid out the most recent figures with respect to attacks, but that very dangerous part of Anbar province that we have both visited has seen a drop in attacks of 80 percent. In fact, we have seen a drop in attacks and a drop in American casualties and civilian casualties across Iraq. And we have also seen new capabilities in the 131 Iraqi battalions that we have built from scratch.

I would just say to my friend, I have seen all the old smooth-path books and reports and recommendations that said somehow there was a smooth path to victory in Iraq, and I have always said there is no smooth path. It is a battle of wills.

To those who say we should have kept Saddam Hussein’s army in place, I am reminded that Saddam Hussein’s army had 11,000 Sunni generals, which would have been exactly the wrong formula for a military which is supposed to take on a role of stabilization and honest brokerage in Iraq.

The reports that we are now seeing from the battlefield are that the Iraqi forces, while some of them had limited battlefield experience, some have had extensive battlefield experience, that military is maturing; that the military that broke and ran in the first battle of Fallujah, the Iraqi military now stands and fights; that in fact that government is moving forward, and although it is moving forward in a stumbling, bumbling, sometimes inept fashion, that is the nature of new governments. That is also the nature of governments that solve their most important issues with ballots and not bullets, because it is not always easy to get the other guy to agree with you on a particular function.
With respect to oil distribution, there is an ad hoc oil distribution that is taking place right now, or de facto oil distribution. It is not a function of legislation. Right now the Kurds get, for example, 18 percent of the oil revenues, the Sunni get an oil distribution, and I think if there wasn’t an oil distribution, you would have more conflict. Instead of seeing a waning conflict between the various sectors in Iraq, you would see an increasing conflict.

So I would just say to my friends and to the gentlewoman and to everyone who cares about an American victory in Iraq, we will have victory in Iraq if we maintain our strength. And maintaining our strength includes continuing to fund this operation.

It is our committee, the Armed Services Committee, that came up initially with the so-called bridge fund appropriation, because we said it is only proper that the Armed Services Committee with its appropriate language that will go through the winter months of the year so that the services do not have to reach into the cash register and take money out of valuable training exercises, take money out of our military equipment accounts and take money out of our ammunition accounts.

So I think we have exactly what we need in this motion to recommit. It is a motion that says it is the commitment of the United States Congress that we don’t have a failed state in Iraq, and it also emphasizes again that we have to have these supplemental funds to ensure that the war fighters in both of those theaters, in Afghanistan and in Iraq, are able to move forward.

Madam Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. Gingrey).

Mr. GINGREY. Madam Speaker, I rise in strong support of the Republican motion to instruct the conference on the 2008 Department of Defense authorization act.

Madam Speaker, as we adjourned for the Thanksgiving recess, we witnessed something remarkable. We witnessed the Democratic majority, in working to mollify their liberal base one more time before the Thanksgiving recess, come to the floor pouring their fist declaring that we must not give our troops additional funding without congressional withdrawal lines. They recycled the same old rhetoric, seemingly oblivious to the facts on the ground.

Thankfully, the direction of our efforts in the global war on terror is being guided by General Petraeus and others who do understand the momentum that we have garnered; that violence between Sunnis and Shites has nearly disappeared from Baghdad, with terrorist bombings down 77 percent; that attacks against United States soldiers is on the rise since before the February 2006 bombing of the Shiite shrine in Samarra; that United States casualties in Iraq are at their lowest level since March of 2006; and that many military analysts, including some who are opposed to the war, have concluded that the United States and its allies are on the verge of winning in Iraq.

Indeed, Madam Speaker, the distinguished chairman of the Defense Authorization Appropriations Subcommittee just returned from Iraq, and he declared that the surge is finally working. I reference Mr. MURTHA from Pennsylvania.

Madam Speaker, this is something the other side doesn’t like to discuss, victory in the global war on terror. That is tough to squeeze in with the defeatist rhetoric recited to appease MoveOn.org and Code Pink.

Another thing the Democratic majority never discusses are the consequences of failure, and they have been discussed this morning on our side.

That is why this motion to instruct is so important, Madam Speaker. It is critical that the House accept Senate provision 1386 and recognize that failure in Iraq is the collapse of a democratic Iraqi Government, likely leading to mass killings and genocide in that nation; certainly emboldening Al Qaeda; regional instability; Iran and Syria determining the course of Iraq’s future; and Israel being pushed into the Mediterranean Sea, just as Ahmadinejad called for.

These are the consequences of defeat and these are the reasons why Congress must commit to a strategy that will not leave a failed state in Iraq and why Congress must not pass, indeed, not pass legislation that risks demoralizing and undermining our military, as they are indeed on the verge of victory in Iraq.

So, Madam Speaker, the Democrats are zero for 40 in trying to compel this precipitous withdrawal from Iraq. With this motion to instruct, I ask them for once to get on the right side. Join not just the Republicans, but, more importantly, our brave men and women in the military, and give victory a chance.

Madam Speaker, I encourage all my colleagues, let’s vote “yes” on the motion to instruct.

Mr. SKELTON. Madam Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. ANDREWS), a very distinguished member of the Armed Services Committee.

Mr. ANDREWS asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.

Mr. ANDREWS. Madam Speaker, this resolution affirms the obvious and avoids the necessary. It is obvious that the common goal of the United States, the House, the Senate, Republicans and Democrats, is to avoid a failed state in the near future. And Israel affirms this, the House bill affirms this, and I am supremely confident that the final conference report will confirm it as well.

The issue, as my friend the gentlewoman from California said, is how do we avoid a failed state in Iraq. Sadly, the record gives us many examples of what not to do.

When General Shinseki told the administration that his recommendation was to put 300,000 troops on the ground after Saddam fell, and the administration ignored that request, that is what not to do; when leaders who had studied Iraq in our State Department, our intelligence agencies, and the Defense Department said abolishing the Iraqi Army and the Baathist Party in its entirety is the wrong thing to do, abolishing the Iraqi Army, abolishing the Baathist Party in its entirety was the wrong thing to do, it increased the risk of a failed state.

Now I heard my friend, the ranking member, talk about 11,000 Sunni generals, and he is right. The top of the Iraqi Army is a collection, the top of the Baathist Party should have either been put on trial, put in prison, or, at the very least, removed from those institutions. But the 85 to 90 percent who ran the sewer system and the train system and the bureaucracy in Qatar should not have been fired all at once. It was not the recommendation of the Secretary of State, it was not the recommendation of the intelligence community, but it’s what we did, and it’s how to create a failed state.

When voices within our government and around the world said that the right way to transition from Saddam’s corrupt and evil regime to a new day was an internationally supervised political process, not listening to those voices was the wrong thing to do, and it increased the risk of a failed state.

So, yes, we know all sorts of things. We have learned all kinds of lessons about what not to do.

What should we do? Well, I think what we should do is insist that the Iraqi politicians do what American troops have done with such excellence, to execute the job that has been given. We are thankful that the level of violence has been reduced. We are very grateful for this, and we understand that the credit for that largely goes to the Americans in uniform and to their Iraqi partners fighting with them. We are very thankful for that result.

But we are also very mindful that the Iraqi politicians who have been given a golden opportunity to bring peace and stability to their country, utterly failed to do so. They have not passed a law dividing up the proceeds of their oil industry; they have not guaranteed minority rights in their government; they have not set up and established provincial elections and our Department said abolishing the Department said abolishing the Iraqi Army, abolishing the Baathist Party in its entirety is the wrong thing to do, abolishing the Iraqi Army, abolishing the Baathist Party in its entirety was the wrong thing to do, it increased the risk of a failed state.

If you want to avoid a failed state in Iraq, change that delusionary perception. Say to the Iraqi politicians, the clock is running. The time is drawing nigh when our sons and our daughters will no longer revere your civil war. Negotiate an end to it, stop it, build a stable government. That is how to avoid a failed state. That is the policy underlying the policy of this majority. Frankly, my friend, your excellent Armed Services authorization bill, which I hope will promptly be on the floor, promptly be on the President’s desk, and promptly get about the business of serving the people who served.

Mr. HUNTER. Madam Speaker, I would like to yield to a gentleman, in fact, the next two gentlemen have sons who have served in the Iraqi theater. The gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. KLINE) has a son who is a Blackhawk helicopter pilot who has served, I believe, in both theaters and has quite a bit of experience in some very difficult operations. The gentleman always has an excellent insight on this important operation. The gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. KLINE), I would like to give him 3 minutes.

Mr. KLINE of Minnesota. I thank the gentleman for yielding, and for his kind words.

I, like the gentleman from California, have a son serving in uniform and I am very proud of his service, proud of Mr. HUNTER’s son’s service in the Marine Corps and my son’s service in the Army in Iraq. I understand that on July 1 my son is heading to Afghistan. So I do feel a certain personal importance to what we are discussing today and to the funding for our troops. But collectively we have all sent our sons and daughters into combbate, into dangerous theaters in the world, and we need to make sure that we are giving them every chance for victory.

My good friend and colleague, the gentleman from New Jersey, said that we have to deal with some things not to do and some things to do. I would argue that the thing not to do is to take a strategy which is clearly working, which is bringing increased security to a dangerous spot in the world, to a strategy that is producing more electricity, more oil, opening schools, shops. You don’t take that strategy and pull the rug out from under it.

Last July, Madam Speaker, I and other Members stood on this floor to ask a question in connection with the lack of the possibility of victory away from our soldiers and marines. In an atmosphere filled with overblown rhetoric predicting the failure of surge operations before they had begun in earnest, General Petraeus and those under his command pushed forward into the streets of Baghdad and into the tribal-dominated areas of al Anbar province. They engaged and destroyed al Qaeda cells while working closely with tribal leaders to establish a lasting stability in once hostile Sunni areas. Just a few short months ago, critics in this body and the Senate declared defeat, declared defeat before giving success a chance. They did not believe our fighting men and women, implementing General Petraeus’ new counterinsurgency strategy, could rout al Qaeda and insurgent forces and win over the Iraqi population. I am proud to say that they were wrong, and that is what has happened.

As we proceed with conference negotiations on this National Defense Authorization Act, I would urge my colleagues not to repeat the mistake we have sadly made many times before. We must make sure that while our military forces fight for victory. This motion to instruct conferrees is just a small step to ensure that the position of this body is not to accept a strategy which will produce a failed state in Iraq.

In a letter to his troops before commencing the surge operations, General Petraeus noted that, “Success will require discipline, fortitude and initiative, qualities that you have in abundance.”

The question before us today, Madam Speaker, is the same one I asked in July: Do we in Congress have those same qualities?

Mr. SKELTON. Madam Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

The motion to instruct by my friend Mr. HUNTER from California is in two parts. Both of these sections make reference to issues that are spelled out in both the House and Senate versions and consequently should be acceptable. I would hope that the conferees would be in line with accepting both of those issues.

I would like to take just a moment, Madam Speaker, however, to say a word about those wonderful troops who we, through this authorization, support. They are the best in the world. They and their families have been tasked to do monumental work in Iraq, Afghanistan, and elsewhere, and to say that we are proud of them is an understament. General Petraeus is the right man for the job in his great efforts in Iraq.

That is why in this bill we authorize a 3½ percent pay raise for our troops; that is why we made significant changes to address the problems unearthed by the Walter Reed situation regarding our wounded warriors; that is why we put $1 billion in strategic reserves to deal with the critic readiness shortfall. And this is a major challenge for us. The reforms for Iraq and Afghanistan contracting are spelled out in this bill. There is additional money for the MRAP vehicles; there is $360 million for our National Guard and Reserve on TRICARE fee increases; taking steps to minimize the inequities for survivors and to step forward on the survivor benefit plan offset.

So all of these are major issues within the realm of the two bills, and hopefully the conferees would be able to make significant progress on each of those.

I am proud of the work we have done. I am proud of the Armed Services Committee. I think it is the most bipartisan committee in Congress. Special thanks to the gentleman from Caliifornia who has worked with us these many years to the end of positive help for American men in uniform.

So with that, I will reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. HUNTER. Madam Speaker, I would like to yield to another gentleman whose son has served in the Iraqi theater, Mr. WILSON of South Carolina.

Mr. WILSON of South Carolina. I want to thank my Republican colleagues for bringing this motion to instruct to the floor. It is important to me as a member of the Armed Services Committee, as a 31-year veteran of the Army National Guard, and as the paret of a soldier who has served in Iraq, that we never act to undermine our troops and jeopardize the success they are achieving in Iraq today. Unfortunately, the strategy of precipitous withdrawal and defeat some continue to advocate has brought us to this point.

The Democrat leadership has continued to propose legislation that aims to micromanage our military leaders and tie their hands as they stop the terrorists. This undermines the extraordinary gains by our troops that I have seen on my eight visits to Iraq, which has been possible by the surge led by General David Petraeus. We must not forget al Qaeda spokesman Zawahiri has declared Iraq and Afghanistan the central front in the global war on terrors; and we must not declare defeat some continue to advocate has brought us to this point.

the world. It is imperative that we follow their lead.

Again, I want to thank the ranking member, DUNCAN HUNTER, for his leadership. He is a dedicated veteran and father of an Iraq veteran. And additionally, I want to thank my Republican colleagues for bringing this matter to the floor. I encourage all of my colleagues to support it and send a bipartisan message to our enemies and allies that we are committed to victory in Iraq and ensuring that Iraq does not become a failed state and a safe haven for terrorists.

Mrs. TAUSCHER. Madam Speaker, we have no further speakers on our side and are prepared to close.

I just want to once again remind everyone what this is really about. We have an excellent national defense authorization bill for fiscal year 2008. It has broad bipartisan support, bicameral support, both the House and the Senate. Most Members voted for this bill. The Appropriations Committee realized it was time to get the money to the troops this spring. We are about to go to conference and make sure that the bills become congruent so we can send it to the President.

This is a bill that the President must sign. It has so many good things in it. I want to take a couple of seconds and talk about the fact that Democrats, who took majority in January, have added $17.4 billion for MRAPs, submarine, an LPD and a T-AKE, and State can use in the case of a flood or wildfire. We need global power projection. We need to have the needed equipment that the soldiers, airmen and marines had what they needed in the war-fighting theater to be successful.

It is true we have this in our bill this time because we are the major architects of the bridge fund. We are the people who came up with it the first time, and the appropriators followed us. But this time they did not follow us. This time they conditioned the bridge fund with get-out-of-Iraq language, and that was a disservice to everyone who wears the uniform in the theater and to the mission. So it is important for the Members of this body to cast their votes in favor of that bridge fund, and perhaps that will show that the direction to the Appropriations Committee and to the Members of Congress who vote on the full appropriations, because we need to have that bridge fund not only authorized but appropriated.

Finally, we do need to have that very strong language committing ourselves to avoid a failed state in Iraq. And we are winning.

Now let me go back to my good colleague Mr. SKEELTON, who said we all support the troops and we have manifested that support in pay raises. And we have. We have manifested it in good medical care and a new Wounded Warrior bill to assist those in Walter Reed and Bethesda and in our medical facilities around the world. We have done that. And we have manifested that in getting them the right equipment to carry out their mission.

But there is something else we owe the troops. We owe them the right to have victory, and they are achieving that right to have a successful mission, because nothing will be more fulfilling to them than to be victorious. And that means we need to continue to move the resources into Iraq and Afghanistan so they can continue to be victorious, so that the 80 percent drop-off in the violence rate in Anbar province will continue, and so that the Iraqi Army will continue to stand up to the point where its own forces, the Iraqi police, Defense Ministry, Army and Army, and our guys can come home or go to other places in CENTCOM.

Madam Speaker, this is a very important motion to instruct because it is a very clear message to those 157,000-plus troops in Iraq and those 22,000-plus troops in Afghanistan. It says the American Congress, we stand behind our troops and we stand behind their mission.

Mr. HALL of New York. Madam Speaker, I voted in favor of the motion to instruct conferences, which included Senate language stating that "the Senate should not pass legislation that will undermine our military's ability to prevent a failed state in Iraq", because I believe that those soldiers, sailors, airmen and marines who are admirably and ably performing their duties. They are already doing everything they can to prevent Iraq from becoming a failed state, and I continue to support them and the professionalism and skill they have displayed.

I served on the Appropriations Committee to get the United States military to control the long term viability of the Iraqi government. To avoid becoming a failed state, Iraqi political leaders must come to a consensus regarding the future of Iraq and the Iraqi government. There is no role for the United States military in that task. I continue to call for strong diplomatic efforts to resolve the situation in Iraq, and believe that a firm time line for the withdrawal of U.S. troops will force Iraq's political leaders to take responsibility for the future of their country.

Mr. HUNTER. Madam Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

INCLUDING ALL BANKING AGENCIES WITHIN THE EXISTING REGULATORY AUTHORITY UNDER THE FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION ACT

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 3526) to include all banking agencies within the existing regulatory authority under the Federal Trade Commission Act with respect to depository institutions, and for other purposes, as amended.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The text of the bill is as follows:

SECTION 1. INCLUSION OF ALL BANKING AGENCIES WITHIN THE EXISTING REGULATORY AUTHORITY UNDER THE FEDERAL TRADE COMMISSION ACT

(a) In general.—The second sentence of section 18(f)(1) of the Federal Trade Commission Act (15 U.S.C. 57a(f)(1)) is amended—

(1) by striking “The Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System (with respect to banks) and the Federal Home Loan Bank Board (with respect to savings and loan institutions described in paragraph (3))” and inserting “Each Federal banking agency (with respect to depository institutions described in paragraph (3))”;

(2) by inserting “in consultation with the Commission” after “shall prescribe regulations”;

(b) FTC CONCURRENT RULEMAKING.—Section 18(f)(1) of such Act is further amended by inserting after the second sentence the following: “Such regulations shall be prescribed jointly by such agencies to the extent practicable. Notwithstanding any other provision of this section, whenever such agencies commence such a rulemaking proceeding, the Commission, with respect to the entities within its jurisdiction under this Act, may commence a rulemaking proceeding and prescribe regulations in accordance with section 553 of title 5, United States Code. If the Commission commences such a rulemaking proceeding, the Commission, the Federal banking agencies, and the National Credit Union Administration Board shall consult and coordinate with each other so that the regulations prescribed by each agency are consistent with and comparable to the regulations prescribed by each other such agency to the extent practicable.”;

(c) GAO STUDY AND REPORT.—Not later than 18 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Comptroller General shall transmit to Congress a report on the status of regulations of the Federal banking agencies and the National Credit Union Administration regarding unfair and deceptive acts or practices by the depository institutions.
The Comptroller of the Currency and the Director of the Office of Thrift Supervision a few years ago promulgated very stringent preemption State rules and State laws and regulations regarding the activities of national banks. As a result of that ruling, which was challenged but upheld by the courts, States have virtually no authority over the banking practices of national banks. Only the national bank regulators may regulate.

The problem is that there were, in many, many States, most of the States from which we here come, consumer protection laws which were invalidated by that. In fact, the preemption said even when there were rules of general application that were covering the banks, the ability of the States to enforce them was limited. They had to go through the Federal regulators. So we thought there were Federal regulators, but many of us were opposed to that. We were critical. And on a bipartisan basis there was criticism of it on the Financial Services Committee. Our former colleague, the gentlewoman from Massachusetts, who was chairman of the Oversight Committee, was a very strong critic of what she believed to be excessive overregulation. But that has been upheld, and there is no realistic chance of undoing it.

So the second best for us was to have the Federal bank regulators able to provide the consumer protections that were lost when the State rules were invalidated. I spoke with the Comptroller of the Currency, and his response was, well, here's the problem. Under the Federal Reserve Act, the Federal Reserve has the right to promulgate the code of unfair deceptive practices. He indicated to me that he would like to do that, in fact, two Comptrollers said we would like to. But we didn't have the authority to promulgate the rules. The Office of Thrift Supervision, which preempted, interestingly, does have the authority to promulgate the rules.

Now, what motivated our colleagues of an earlier era to give the Federal Reserve the right to make the rules for the Comptroller of the Currency and to give the Office of Thrift Supervision the right to make the rules only for themselves? I do not know. I can't speculate on most recent experience, it was probably the Senate's fault, because almost everything that goes wrong these days is. But I don't know that for sure. On the other hand, it's our job to try to correct it.

So the second best for us was to say to two of the Federal bank agencies, the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, which the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation through its depositary institutions have some authority over State banks since it insures the deposits in both, we take away in this bill from the Federal Reserve System the power they have refused to use to promulgate a code of unfair and deceptive practices and give it, instead, over to the Comptroller of the Currency and the FDIC, either jointly or concurrently, and it comes with their support.

The Fed said they didn't like it, but they weren't using the power. The Comptroller of the Currency, he is, after all, a defender of this preemption. He has maintained the preemption. This is not an effort to undo the preemption. He acknowledges that in presiding over this national set of rules, it would be helpful to him to have this code of unfairness and deceptive practice, and what the code does is give some notice to the banks as to what are prohibited practices and what aren't. So this bill does nothing in terms of substantive promulgation of the code, but it gives to the active agencies, the Comptroller of the Currency, who promulgated the preemption, and the FDIC, the ability to put into effect what we think should have been put into effect before. It comes with the support of those agencies, and I think that if we get this done, they will proceed to do it.

I should note that the Office of Thrift Supervision, which already has the authority to promulgate such a code, is in the process of doing so. No legislation is needed. But they have put out a proposed rule in which they have, many of us, encouraged them to go forward with it. And as a result of what OTS is doing under its authority and what this bill would give the Comptroller of the Currency and the FDIC by early next year, we should have in place rules that will tell people what are unfair and deceptive practices. And as I said, I would have preferred that the preemption would not have been so far reaching, but it's a fact of life. This was in an effort for the Federal bank regulators fully to be available to provide consumer protection when it's appropriate in lieu of the State laws that were cancelled.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mrs. CAPITO. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I rise in support of the bill, H.R. 3526, a bill that is intended to provide financial consumers with additional regulatory protections against unfair and deceptive trade policies. This measure, which the Financial Services Committee approved by voice vote, expands the range of financial regulators, as the chairman has just explained, with the authority to promulgate regulations that identify and restrict such practices under the Federal Trade Commission Act.

Today only the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve, the Office of Thrift Supervision, and the National Credit Union Administration have this authority. This bill expands that list to... include the other Federal banking regulators, namely the FDIC and the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency.

The legislation also mandates that regulations promulgated under the relevant section of the FTC Act be prescribed jointly by such agencies to the extent practicable,” in consultation with the FTC. And it requires the GAO to report on the status of the regulations of the Federal banking agencies and the NCUA regarding unfair and deceptive acts.

In testimony before our committee earlier this year, the Comptroller of the Currency and the Chair of the FDIC recommended that the committee make these changes, which also are supported by consumer advocates. This bill merits our support, and I urge its adoption.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts. Mr. Speaker, the good news is that I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. FRANK) that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 4043, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds being in the affirmative) the rules were suspended and the bill, as amended, was passed. A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

Mr. Speaker, allow me to start today by expressing the collective condolences of the members of the Oversight and Investigations Subcommittee of the House Financial Services Committee to our ranking member, Representative GARY MILLER, following the death of his daughter. Representative MILLER was an original sponsor of the legislation we are considering, H.R. 4043, and he and his staff encouraged us to proceed with consideration of the bill today when we offered to withdraw it from the calendar and wait until he returns to Congress following the sudden death of his daughter.

I am deeply indebted to Representative MILLER for the cordial manner in which he has worked with me as the ranking member of this subcommittee, for his personal support of H.R. 4043, and I want to ensure that this important legislation is considered in the bipartisan way it deserves, and for his encouragement to us... to proceed with consideration of this important bill so it will not be delayed. All of us wish Representative Miller the very best as he and his family try to cope with a loss that we know is devastating to him. Representative Miller has under these circumstances cast a significant pall on our consideration of this bill, but we must proceed, and I am happy to do so with his approval.

Minority-owned banks and thrifts comprise about 2 percent of all banks, thrifts, and banking assets in the United States. Under section 308 of the Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery and Enforcement Act, the Secretary of the Treasury is required to consult with the Chair of the Board of Directors of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation and the Director of the Office of Thrift Supervision on methods to achieve the following five goals:

- One, preserving existing minority banks; two, preserving the minority character of these institutions in cases involving mergers or acquisitions of minority banks; three, providing technical assistance to prevent the insolvent of existing minority institutions that are not insolvent; four, promoting and encouraging the creation of new minority banks; and, five, providing for training, technical assistance, and educational programs to assist minority banks and thrifts.

The requirement for consultation between the Secretary of the Treasury, the FDIC, and the OTS has been on the books since the passage of the Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery and Enforcement Act in 1989, and the Office of Thrift Supervision has been required to submit an annual report to Congress describing actions taken to achieve these five goals that help preserve and expand minority banks.

On December 5, 2007, our Financial Services Oversight and Investigations Subcommittee, which I am privileged to chair, held a hearing about a report issued by the U.S. Government Accountability Office in October of 2006 that reviewed Federal banking regulators' efforts to promote these five goals. This report, entitled “Minority Banks: Regulators Need To Better Assess Effectiveness of Support Efforts,” found that, despite recommendations contained in a similar 1993 Government Accountability Office report, none of the Federal banking regulators have routinely surveyed institutions within their jurisdiction to assess the effectiveness of the regulators' support efforts to minority banks nor have the regulators systematically established outcome-oriented performance measures to gauge the effectiveness or results of the regulators' efforts. In short, the efforts being taken by the regulators to preserve and promote minority banks appeared modest, and whether they are being made or could not be ascertained. The regulators were taking some steps, but there were no outcome measures to judge their effectiveness. Indeed, if the number and strength of minority financial institutions since 1989 is a barometer, the efforts of the regulators appear not to have the positive results we desire.

H.R. 4043 would, in effect, increase the pressure on and transparency of the regulators' efforts by requiring all of them, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, the Federal Reserve, the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency, and the Office of Thrift Supervision, to report to Congress on their efforts to implement the goals outlined in section 308 of FIRREA, the goals of preserving and supporting and promoting minority businesses.

At the subcommittee hearing, all the regulators acknowledged that they could and should be doing more and indicated that they do not object to a statutory change to expand the goals of section 308 of FIRREA to their agencies. In addition, witnesses from the FDIC, the Federal Reserve, and the OCC indicated that they do not object to being obligated to prepare and submit to Congress an annual report describing their efforts to promote and preserve minority depository institutions. H.R. 4043 requires this, and I encourage my colleagues to support the bill.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mrs. CAPITOLI. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I rise in support of H.R. 4043, the Preserving and Expanding Minority Depository Institutions Act of 2007. This bipartisan legislation, introduced by Chairman Watt and Ranking Member Miller of the Financial Services Oversight and Investigations Subcommittee is intended to support our Nation’s minority banks. The bill includes new reporting requirements which will help gauge the effectiveness of government programs that assist minority banks. Like other community banks, minority banks may confront unique challenges because of their smaller size.

Section 308 of FIRREA, the Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery and Enforcement Act of 1989, mandates that the FDIC in conjunction with the Office of Thrift Supervision work to preserve existing minority banks, promote the creation of new minority banks, and provide technical assistance and training. At the subcommittee hearing, all the minority depository institutions, all of which we think is good, I encourage my colleagues to support the bill.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of H.R. 4043, the “Preserving and Expanding Minority Depository Institutions Act”. Minority-owned financial institutions are vitally important to the economic development and revitalization of urban and minority communities. Businesses and residents in these traditionally underserved communities rely on minority-owned financial institutions to serve their banking and other financial services needs. They have always been there when we needed them—making homeownership a reality for many for whom homeownership was elusive, providing capital for the neighborhood grocery and barber shop, financing housing rehabilitation, providing consumer credit counseling services, providing jobs, and revitalizing communities.

However, minority-owned financial institutions face many challenges. By and large much smaller than other banks, minority banks have difficulty competing with larger institutions for deposits and other business. It is often difficult to diversify their geographical and credit risk exposures. They also face challenges associated with operating in economically depressed markets.

Despite these challenges, minority-owned financial institutions are committed to providing capital, promoting economic revitalization, and creating jobs. They are committed to serving the urban and minority communities in which they are located and the people and businesses that reside there. We need them.

Minority-owned financial institutions comprise about 10 percent of all financial institutions and a significantly lower percentage of total industry assets. We must do all that we can to support, protect and promote these institutions.

This bill, H.R. 4043, the Preserving and Expanding Minority Depository Institutions Act, is an important step. Existing law requires that the Office of Thrift Supervision (OTS) and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC) consult with the Department of the Treasury on methods to preserve, encourage and promote minority ownership of depository institutions and provide technical assistance, training and education programs.

H.R. 4043 would direct the Chairman of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System and the Comptroller of the Currency to help preserve, encourage and expand minority-owned financial institutions by participating in those activities. In addition, the bill would require each of the participating agencies to submit an annual report to the Congress on actions taken to implement the law.

Mr. WATT. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. MAHONEY of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and agree to H.R. 2930, as amended.

The Speaker pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. WATT) that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 4043, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds being in the affirmative) the rules were suspended and the bill, as amended, was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. MAHONEY) and the gentlewoman from West Virginia (Mrs. CAPITO) will each control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Florida.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. MAHONEY of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks on this legislation and to insert extraneous material thereon.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Florida?

There was no objection.

Mr. MAHONEY of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, today the House of Representatives has the ability to improve the lives of thousands of seniors across the country. As we noted in the 202 Supportive Housing for the Elderly Act of 2007. As our elderly population grows, the need for affordable housing will also increase. In 2005, there were approximately 37 million seniors living in the United States. According to the U.S. Census Bureau, the number of seniors is expected to grow rapidly during the next few decades. In addition, today's seniors are facing economic uncertainty. In my home State of Florida, the toxic cocktail of rising gas prices, skyrocketing property taxes and exorbitant homeowner insurance has forced seniors to make difficult choices between paying their mortgage, putting food on the table or purchasing lifesaving medication.

Despite this increase in demand, the number of affordable housing units is shrinking. According to the Joint Center for Housing, for every unit of affordable housing constructed, two are lost. The Housing for the Elderly Act is a crucial step in ending this crisis.

In 2002, Congress created a bipartisan commission to study the need for affordable housing and supportive services for the elderly. In the commission's report to Congress entitled "A Quiet Crisis in America," they stated that this Nation, despite competing demands for national resources, must respond to the critical need for affordable housing and home and community-based supportive services, with a substantial financial commitment and effective policies. The report also concluded, "the matter with which their individual circumstances and resources, should be able to continue to live where they prefer regardless of their income, with the services they need to maintain personal dignity and quality of life." One of the most important responsibilities we have as a society is to ensure that our seniors, who have done everything our Nation has asked them to do, have a safe and affordable place to live.

Mr. Speaker, the Section 202 Supportive Housing for the Elderly Act is a step in achieving this goal. This important piece of legislation will give the owners of 202 facilities the ability to leverage the property's equity, access much needed capital and benefit from low interest rates from private lenders. By doing so, this legislation will ensure that these facilities are preserved and improved to meet the changing needs of seniors.

In addition, the bill allows for funding to be used to increase the services that section 202 communities provide for their residents, allowing them to live a more independent life. Finally, this bill will assist seniors living in older section 202 facilities by extending them rental assistance. This provision will allow owners to preserve these properties without the risk of displacing poor residents.

I must first make clear how important these facilities are to our communities. I visited Villa Assumpita in Jensen Beach, Florida, a section 202 facility run by Catholic Charities, and Presbyterian Homes of Port Charlotte, Florida, operated by the Presbyterian Association of Homes and Services for the Aging. I have met with the residents and I have heard their life stories, residents like Ruth Justice. Mrs. Justice lived in a mobile home in Stuart, Florida, for almost 40 years until Hurricane Wilma ripped the roof off of her home. Fortunately, Ruth was able to escape from the hurricane with her piano, trumpets and other instruments she and her husband had collected over the years. However, no matter how much she loved her musical instruments, it couldn't ease the financial burden that she faced with a new place which ate up her entire monthly Social Security check. Ruth felt like she had no place to turn.

There were no fortunate ones. For seniors in need of low-income housing who qualify for one of Villa Assumpita’s 99 units, waits can be ten years. Stories like Ruth’s and how much this housing means to our seniors. After years of working to live the American Dream, many of these seniors find themselves with monthly incomes of $300 or less. Without the section 202 housing, where would Ruth and her friends be? Where are the seniors living tonight that are on Villa Assumpita’s 2-year waiting list? On our streets? We have a responsibility to make sure that we provide affordable housing to our seniors and we can start by passing this important legislation.

Mr. Speaker, the Section 202 Supportive Housing for the Elderly Act is an example of what this Congress can achieve when it works together in a bipartisan fashion. First, the bill was reported out of the Financial Services Committee by a unanimous vote. Secondly, following the committee’s consideration of H.R. 2930, we worked closely with my colleagues in West Virginia (Mrs. CAPITO) to ensure that the bill meets the needs of rural communities.

Under current law, HUD is required to reserve 15 percent of program funds for the development of units in non-metropolitan areas. Unfortunately, the small number of units that are reserved do not provide an adequate incentive for developers to undertake such projects. As a result, rural communities often face severe shortages of section 202 units. The provision added by Mrs. CAPITO will provide HUD with greater flexibility by allowing the Department to allocate funding for... non-metropolitan units on a regional or national scale. I would like to thank her for her work to further strengthen the bill and to ensure that all of our communities, whether they be urban or rural, have access to the program.

Mr. Speaker, the section 202 program is a key component of how the Federal Government can work with religious institutions to provide needed services to our communities. Many of the section 202 facilities are run by religious organizations. I am proud that this legislation has the strong support of more than 30 organizations that provide housing to the elderly, including Catholic Charities, Lutheran Services of America and United Jewish Communities.

Mr. Speaker, at this time I would like to insert into the Record a letter from these groups expressing their strong support for H.R. 2930.

H.R. 2930—Section 202 Supportive Housing for the Elderly Act of 2007

We, the undersigned organizations, write in strong support of H.R. 2930, the Section 202 Supportive Housing for the Elderly Act of 2007. Under the current Section 202 law, the development and preservation of supportive housing can be time-consuming and bureaucratic at a time when demand for supportive senior housing is exploding and the loss of affordable housing exceeds new construction. We believe that this legislation is sorely needed to streamline and simplify the development and preservation of affordable, supportive senior housing for increased participation by not-for-profit developers, private lenders, investors, and state and local funding agencies.

The current Section 202 program is a capital advance grant for the construction of new supportive senior communities with a project rental assistance contract to subsidize very low-income elderly renters. Even though the award now comes in the form of a grant, HUD engages in a protracted ‘underwriting’ process that often increases red tape, slows down the development process, resulting in escalated costs, particularly when Section 202 funds are combined with the Low Income Housing Tax Credit. To promote efficiency, streamline the processing of new developments, the proposed legislation will delegate the processing of the Section 202 capital advance grants to state or local entities with expertise in housing development. We know that this will ensure that supportive senior housing will be open more quickly to serve our Nation’s most vulnerable seniors, particularly in combination with tax credits.

Many older Section 202 facilities are in need of repair, rehabilitation or modernization, yet many do not have the funds to retrofit their buildings to accommodate the present and future needs of their residents. The current Section 202 statute permits Section 202 providers to refinance and use the substantial equity in these projects to fund the much needed rehabilitation, extend the lives of these properties, and provide an enhanced supportive environment for seniors as they age in place. Unfortunately, these preservation deals have been stymied by illogical decisions from HUD. Title II of H.R. 2930 establishes a number of temporary changes in the statute to enhance the ability of organizations to recapitalize and preserve existing Section 202 housing and enhance supportive services.

This legislation would require rather than permit HUD to approve reconfiguration of obsolete efficiencies into 1-bedroom units where providers are experiencing high vacancy rates, allow the use of excess proceeds to further the non-profits’ housing and service mission, provide debt and other important tools that would make preservation easier to achieve. Most importantly, H.R. 2930 will establish a new project rental assistance program to allow those Section 202 properties built between 1959 and 1974, the oldest segment of the Section 202 inventory, that do not currently have rental assistance to be refinanced and rehabilitated and receive project based rental assistance. This will enable sponsors to prevent displacement and continue serving low-income seniors.

We want to thank Congressman Mahoney for introducing this important legislation. We believe these reforms are absolutely necessary to ensure more units are built and preserved more quickly.

The changes this legislation offers represent a comprehensive federal policy change to meet the affordable housing needs of low-income seniors. Without these reforms, our most vulnerable seniors will face displacement, homelessness, or premature institutionalization. With your support, H.R. 2930 and a national commitment to the development and preservation of supportive, affordable senior housing, Aging Services of California, Alliance for Retired Americans, American Association of Homes and Services for the Aging, Association of Jewish Aging Services of North America, Association of Jewish Family & Children’s Agencies, B’nai B’rith International, Catholic Charities, Elderly Housing Development and Operations Corporation, Florida Association of Homes and Services for the Aging, Indiana Association of Homes and Services for the Aging, Iowa Association of Homes and Services for the Aging, Jewish Federation of Metropolitan Chicago, Life Services Network of Illinois, LifeSpan Network, Local Initiatives Support Corporation, Lutheran Services in America, National Association of Area Agencies on Aging, National Affordable Housing Management Association, National Church Residences, National Council on Aging, National Housing Trust, New Jersey Association of Home and Services for the Aging, National Housing Trust, National Leased Housing Association, National Low Income Housing Coalition, New York Association of Homes and Services for the Aging, Oregon Alliance of Senior and Health Services, Stewards of Affordable Housing for the Future, United Jewish Communities, Volunteers of America, Washington Association of Housing and Services for the Aging.

In closing, I would like to thank Chairman Frank and Representative MAXINE WATERS for their leadership in this area of affordable housing. I would also like to thank their staffs, Mrs. Muriel Connelly, Scott Olson and Jonathan Harwitz, for their hard work and commitment to this legislation. Their efforts will help thousands of seniors live their lives with the dignity that they deserve.

Mr. Speaker, I would ask my colleagues to stand up for our seniors by voting ‘yes’ for H.R. 2930, the Section 202 Supportive Housing for the Elderly Act of 2007.

I reserve the balance of my time.

Mrs. CAPITO. Mr. Speaker, today I rise in strong support of H.R. 2930, the Section 202 Supportive Housing for the Elderly Act of 2007. I would like to thank my colleague from Florida for all of his good, hard work and the leadership of the committee, the Financial Services Committee, for the work they have done on this.

Affordable housing with supportive services is a key component for seniors seeking to stay in their homes and to ‘age in place. ’ The section 202 housing for the elderly program is the primary HUD support program exclusively for low-income elderly households. H.R. 2930 reforms the section 202 elderly housing program making it more effective and efficient and better able to meet the housing needs of our elderly.

Today, we are facing a growing elderly housing crisis in this country. According to the 2005 census data, there are approximately 3.6 million seniors living below the poverty line. Among senior renters, 1.29 million have worst case housing needs, meaning they spend over 50 percent of their income on housing.

The section 202 program has been an invaluable tool in addressing these serious housing needs by providing capital advance grants to non-profit housing sponsors to build new elderly housing facilities and project rental assistance contracts to subsidize very low-income elderly residents of these facilities. Many non-profit sponsors are faith-based organizations with a mission to serve the elderly. As a condition of receiving a capital advance, which does not have to be repaid, a nonprofit sponsor must maintain the facility for a period of no less than 40 years. As a result of these efforts, the section 202 program currently supplies over 320,000 units of housing to very low-income elderly citizens.

While the section 202 program has been successful at providing much-needed housing resources to our very low-income seniors, it is estimated that 10 seniors are waiting for each unit that becomes available. Participants and developers of the section 202 housing program maintain that the current regulation and HUD administration of the program can be time consuming and bureaucratic. H.R. 2930 would improve the elderly housing program by streamlining and simplifying the development and preservation of HUD’s section 202 properties and by increasing participation by non-for-profit developers, private lenders, investors and State and local funding agencies.
on the floor today includes several changes to the bill reported out of the Committee on Financial Services on September 25. While the bill as reported did have a $94 million cost for fiscal year 2008 and a $212 million cost over 5 years, these costs have been removed by the elimination of the mortgage sale demonstration program and the subordination or assumption of existing debt provisions. The Congressional Budget Office now reports the costs associated with this bill to be insignificant.

I would also like to thank my colleagues and Chairman FRANK in particular for his willingness to work with me on a provision to resolve a problem that non-metropolitan States like my home State of West Virginia have experienced when attempting to qualify for funds under the section 202 program. It is important to recognize that the need for housing for the very low-income elderly extends beyond metropolitan areas and it needs the flexibility for rural and suburban areas to be able to qualify for these funds. The very low-income elderly of rural West Virginia deserve the very same resources available in the larger areas.

H.R. 2930 now includes provisions to establish a national competition for non-metro elderly housing funds and will allow regional offices to administer elderly housing allocations. This greater flexibility will help create more elderly housing units in rural States like mine.

I would like to pause and thank the housing advocates in my State of West Virginia for bringing this issue before me in a very timely manner so we could fix this while we are dealing with the section 202 program. So I want to thank my fellow West Virginians for helping us out here.

Mr. Speaker, the affordable rental housing crisis in America is having a significant impact on our country, especially our seniors, who are opting out of the program for housing. Right now, every time, for every unit of affordable housing that is coming available, there are 10 seniors waiting and in need for every housing unit that is available, and approximately 3.6 million of our seniors who are currently in every State live in poverty. This bill is going to help make a down payment on what needs to be done. The U.S. population is aging; 12.4 percent are over 65, but in 18 years that is going to be 20 percent. We are going to need 730,000 units of housing. So I thank the sponsors, the leaders, to begin the process of moving forward.

I want to mention just in a very practical way something that Mrs. CAPITO said. Housing is a partnership. What does it do? It unleashes the activities of volunteers in our communities and housing advocates, and they brought this to our attention.

Grand Way Commons in Vermont, opened by the Cathedral Square Corporation, is going to have a housing project that is going to help 63 families, seniors, have access to housing, and they are combining it with services from United Way, AARP, and the Vermont Nurses Association.

I urge my colleagues to support H.R. 2930, the Section 202 Supportive Housing for the Elderly Act of 2007. I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. Speaker, the affordable rental housing crisis in America is having a profound effect on renters of all ages, especially our seniors, and this bill will help ease some of the affordability problems plaguing our senior population.

I urge my colleagues to support H.R. 2930, the Section 202 Supportive Housing for the Elderly Act of 2007.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to yield 2 minutes to my distinguished friend from Vermont (Mr. WELCH).

Mr. WELCH of Vermont. I thank very much my colleague, Mr. MAHONEY, for his comments on this legislation, and Mrs. CAPITO for her excellent work on this bipartisan legislation.

It is incredibly important to America's seniors, Vermont's seniors, that they have security in housing as they age. We face a challenge because we are getting more folks older and incomes are not keeping up. H.R. 2930 addresses the issue in a timely and over-due way.

It improves HUD's section 202 program, providing low-income elderly households access to affordable places to live. It is the only program that provides housing exclusively for the elderly. Established in 1959, it makes capital grants and project rental assistance available to developers so they can build housing that is affordable to lower-income elderly households. Over 320,000 housing units are currently available.

But it is not enough. There are 10 seniors waiting and in need for every housing unit that is available, and approximately 3.6 million of our seniors across the country in every State live in poverty. This bill is going to help make a down payment on what needs to be done. The U.S. population is aging; 12.4 percent are over 65, but in 18 years that is going to be 20 percent. We are going to need 730,000 units of housing. So I thank the sponsors, the leaders, to begin the process of moving forward.

I want to mention just in a very practical way something that Mrs. CAPITO said. Housing is a partnership. What does it do? It unleashes the activities of volunteers in our communities and housing advocates, and they brought this to our attention.

Grand Way Commons in Vermont, opened by the Cathedral Square Corporation, is going to have a housing project that is going to help 63 families, seniors, have access to housing, and they are combining it with services from United Way, AARP, and the Vermont Nurses Association.

Mr. Speaker, I urge a strong vote in support of moving ahead for senior housing.

Mrs. CAPITO. Mr. Speaker, I have no further speakers, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. MAHONEY of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. LYNCH).

Mr. LYNCH. Mr. Speaker, I too want to thank Mrs. CAPITO, Chairman FRANK, Chairman WATERS, and also Mr. MAHONEY from Florida for his great work on this.

Mr. Speaker, as a cosponsor of H.R. 2930, I am pleased to support this bipartisan legislation to reform and strengthen HUD's section 202 senior housing program.

Mr. Speaker, affordable rental housing is essential to low-income seniors living on fixed income. In fact, according to AARP, at least 10 seniors now on waiting lists for every unit of section 202 housing that becomes available. However, in the meantime, for every unit of affordable housing that we create, two are being lost either through the conversion process to market-rate housing or by sponsors who are opting out of the program when their contracts expire. As a result, preserving our existing section 202 senior housing is and should be a national priority.

H.R. 2930 eases the development and preservation of section 202 housing for the elderly by reducing administrative burdens while simultaneously expanding the available options for recapitalization. This bill will give the owners of these communities the ability to leverage the equity in those properties. It will also allow them to access much-needed capital and benefit from the current low interest rates being offered by many lenders.

Mr. Speaker, by delegating the processing of these capital advances to State housing agencies with staff and experience in housing development, the section 202 process will be aided and made more efficient.

Mr. Speaker, as President John F. Kennedy once said to Congress nearly 45 years ago, "The gradual increase in lifespan in our country and the number of our senior citizens who find themselves in later years dependent on affordable housing presents this Nation with increased opportunities. The increased life expectancy presents opportunities to draw upon the skills of our senior citizens and their wisdom and sagacity, and the opportunity to provide the respect and recognition that they have earned in their later years. It is not enough for a great Nation merely to have added years to their lives. Our objective must also be to add quality to those years."

I encourage my colleagues to support the growing population of seniors in our country, of these most vulnerable citizens in our country, by voting for this important bipartisan measure to aid the elderly in the section 202 program.

Again, I would like to thank my colleague from Florida, Mr. MAHONEY, for spearheading this important legislation.

Mr. MAHONEY of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Florida (Mr. MAHONEY) that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 2930, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds being in the affirmative) the rules were suspended and the bill, as amended, was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Included are the Security Act of 1934, the Investment Act of 1940 and the Trust Indenture Act of 1939.”

Mr. Speaker, periodically we in Congress should review our laws in order to ensure that they are up to date. Furthermore, this bill addresses certain changes to the Securities and Exchange Commission as a minor part of the Federal securities laws which were requested by the Securities and Exchange Commission as a minor part of a larger legislative agenda. Included are the Security Act of 1934, the Investment Act of 1940 and the Trust Indenture Act of 1939. There was no objection.
to ensure that the laws we pass are current, and periodically clarifying certain aspects of these somewhat complex and complicated laws is a very valuable undertaking.

The amendments made by this bill correct drafting errors and remove obsolete references to the Public Utilities Holding Company Act of 1935, which was repealed in 2005. It further corrects numbering and punctuation errors. There are several technical changes that need to be made to the bill, we introduced, one to correct statutory citations and punctuation and also for clarification.

Mr. Speaker, as security laws are very complicated, very complex and highly technical, and with many of these laws having been written in the 1930s and the 1940s, periodic overview is very, very important and essential to the financial security of our great Nation, and this, Mr. Speaker, is the purpose of this bill.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. ROSKAM. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong support of H.R. 3505, the Securities Law Technical Corrections Act of 2007, a measure to make technical corrections to the various securities laws, and I thank Mr. SCOTT for his support for this measure and also Chairman FRANK and Ranking Member BACHUS for advocating that this come to the floor today.

Mr. Speaker, in the aftermath of the stock market crash of 1929 and the ensuing Great Depression, Congress enacted the Federal securities laws of the 1930s and the 1940s. Over many years, Congress has amended these laws to adopt innovation and growth in the securities industry. Securities laws have become incredibly complex and technical due to the intricate and global markets we have today.

The goal of these laws is to protect investors from fraud, orderly and efficient markets, and to facilitate capital formation and promote competition. These laws range from governing over the initial issuance and registration of securities to the oversight of financial reporting and registration of people involved in the sale of securities. The laws also regulate the purchase and sale of securities, securities brokerage firms and securities exchanges, and they also have been responsive for the rules of the creation and operation of mutual funds and those laws governing the operation of investment advisors, all good things.

As Members of Congress, we have a responsibility to review laws that we pass to ensure that they are current and that they are up to date. Most importantly, Congress needs to clarify that these laws are well-crafted so that agencies who administer and enforce them are able to do so without causing unnecessary confusion to investors, to market participants and the courts.

Keeping the security laws current is a worthwhile undertaking. One such example where there is need to update our securities laws which are included in this legislation is to address the repeal of the Public Utility Holding Company Act of 1935. It was repealed, as Mr. SCOTT mentioned, in the 2005 energy bill because it was no longer necessary.

But it was originally adopted to deal with circumstances that existed in the 1930s and 1940s when the commission was restructuring the utility industry. At that point, a number of holding companies would have owned minority stakes in other holding companies and they may have held substantial equity assets that caused them to meet the investment company definition at that time.

Today, virtually all utility holding companies operate throughout wholly owned subsidiaries and, thus, do not have investment company status issues any different from any other type of holding company. So utility holding companies no longer need to be treated differently than any other type of company for purposes of determining whether they meet the definition of an investment company.

H.R. 3505 makes almost 50 technical changes to the Federal securities laws. Mr. Speaker, I want to note that the Securities and Exchange Commission supports these changes.

Once again I want to thank my colleague Mr. ROSKAM along with Ranking Member BACHUS and our chairman, Chairman FRANK, for their support of this legislation, and I urge all of my colleagues to support it.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. SCOTT of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I too want to thank my colleague Mr. ROSKAM for his hard work on this bill and for his contribution, and also the leadership of our Financial Services Committee under the chairmanship of Chairman BARNIE FRANK for his work on this measure as well.

Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. SCOTT) that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 3505, as amended.

The question was taken.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. In the opinion of the Chair, two-thirds being in the affirmative, the ayes have it.

Mr. SCOTT of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to Speaker’s rule XX and the Chair’s prior announcement, further proceedings on this motion will be postponed.

COMPELLING THE NATIONAL RENEWABLE ENERGY LABORATORY FOR ITS WORK OF PROMOTING ENERGY EFFICIENCY FOR 30 YEARS

Mr. McNERNEY. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and agree to the concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 251) commending the National Renewable Energy Laboratory for its work of promoting energy efficiency for 30 years.

The Clerk read the title of the concurrent resolution.

The text of the concurrent resolution is as follows:

H. CON. RES. 251

Whereas in 1977 the Solar Energy Research Institute opened and was designated a National Laboratory of the United States Department of Energy;

 Whereas in September 1991 President George H.W. Bush changed the institute’s name to the National Renewable Energy Laboratory (“NREL”);

 Whereas the NREL is the principal research laboratory for the United States Department of Energy’s Office of Energy Efficiency and Renewable Energy and also provides research expertise for the Office of Science and the Office of Electricity Delivery and Energy Reliability;

 Whereas the NREL is an independent national laboratory and the world’s preeminent laboratory for renewable energy and energy efficiency research and development;

 Whereas renewable energy and energy efficiency technologies are key to creating a clean energy future for not only the United States, but the world;

 Whereas the NREL’s focused research and development capabilities are positioned to advance national energy goals by developing innovations to change the way we power our homes and businesses;

 Whereas the NREL has worked vigorously through research and development to develop clean energy resulting in innovative designs, larger turbines, and increased efficiencies leading to dramatic reductions in energy costs;

 Whereas the NREL has also developed hydrogen energy scenarios that could be used to power the future and develop hydrogen infrastructure and delivery systems; and

 Whereas the NREL has developed biomass research that provides biomass-based industries with rapid analytical tools for making the highest value applications of biomass or analyzing biomass: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That Congress—

(1) commends the National Renewable Energy Laboratory for its work of promoting energy efficiency for 30 years and seeking other avenues of energy independence because it enhances national security, sustains our environment and creates jobs;

(2) recognizes the achievements of the scientists and employees of the NREL and their exemplary service to the United States for 30 years; and

(3) directs the Clerk of the House to transmit a copy of this resolution to the NREL for appropriate display.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from California (Mr. McNERNEY) and the gentleman from Texas (Mr. HALL) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from California (Mr. McNERNEY), General Leave.

Mr. McNERNEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days to revise and extend their remarks and to include extraneous material on H. Con. Res. 251, the resolution now under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

Mr. McNERNEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I would first like to thank my good friend and colleague from Colorado (Mr. Perlmutter), the sponsor of this resolution, which recognizes the invaluable contributions of the National Renewable Energy Laboratory, or NREL. The gentleman from Colorado and I both share deep concern about our Nation’s dependence on imported oil and the impact that fossil fuels have on our environment.

As someone who has worked at the national laboratory, I have spent many years at the laboratory working as an engineer, a consultant, and I certainly appreciate the work that NREL does. Tucked in the foothills of the Rockies and looking up to the scenic Flatirons, NREL has led the charge in developing and deploying cost-effective energy efficiency and renewable energy technologies for three decades.

As our country works to combat climate change and achieve energy independence, NREL’s mission is more important than ever. But staying ahead of the technology curve requires considerable resources and very smart policymaking. I am sure that the dedicated employees of NREL share my appreciation for this resolution and will continue their tireless efforts to bring energy efficiency and renewable energy technologies and practices to the marketplace.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. HALL of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H. Con. Res. 251, commending the National Renewable Energy Laboratory for its work promoting energy efficiency for 30 years. NREL, the National Renewable Energy Laboratory, based in Golden, Colorado, is the hub of our Nation’s work into renewable and alternative energy research and development.

Since 1977, when it began as the Solar Energy Research Institute before changing its name in 1991, NREL has received many awards and many accolades and many awards. In the past 30 years, NREL has received 39 R&D 100 awards, as well as hundreds of Scientific and Technical Society honors and awards, Technology Transfer awards, and Department of Energy and other agency awards.

NREL’s success has been built under the leadership of its current director, Dr. Dan Arvizu, who has made the transferring of technologies from the lab to the marketplace a real priority. It’s through this “technical transfer” that we see inventions and discoveries at work in the real world and not sitting on a proverbial shelf collecting proverbial dust.
As we have reached a time in our energy history that we are realizing more and more the importance of and the place that renewable and alternative forms of energy have in our current and future energy mix, NREL’s significance and prominence as a world leader in the field is becoming increasingly evident and appreciated. The resolution before us today recognizes NREL for its 30 years of service to our country. I am proud that such a facility exists in this great country of ours. I could only be prouder if it were in my home state of Texas.

I thank Dr. Arvizu and all the scientists and employees at NREL. You serve our country and serve our future very well.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to support House Concurrent Resolution 251.

With that, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. McNERNEY. I thank the gentleman from Texas for his remarks.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Colorado (Mr. PERLMUTTER).

Mr. PERLMUTTER. Thank you, Mr. McNERNEY. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. HALL of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. McNERNEY. Mr. Speaker, I don’t have any further speakers or any further comments, but I just want to point out that NREL has done a fine job. I want to see this institution and this government support and continue to support that kind of work that is going on in northern Colorado.

Mr. UDALL of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of H. Con. Res. 251, to commemorate the 30th anniversary of the National Renewable Energy Laboratory, NREL, in Colorado. The facility serves our Nation as the chief research laboratory for energy efficiency and renewable energy for the Department of Energy. As the co-chair of the Renewable Energy and Energy Efficiency Caucus, I am proud to celebrate this organization and its invaluable work to set our country on a course towards sustainable energy practices.

The range of research areas at NREL is remarkable; from hydrogen-storing carbon nanotubes for fuel cell powered vehicles to architectural computer design tools for low-energy construction to “smart windows” which automatically tint in order to cut the cost of air conditioning, NREL has developed cutting-edge technology for 30 years. NREL’s National Wind Technology Center, located in my district, has helped push forward development of more efficient and economic wind turbines, which are critical to making the wind industry an important player in our Nation’s energy markets. NREL will continue to be a leader on important research and development in these critical areas.

NREL continues to be an important resource for the people of Colorado. NREL is a critical participant in the Colorado Renewable Energy Collaboratory Agreement, which also includes the University of Colorado at Boulder, the Colorado School of Mines and Colorado State University. The Collaboratory will not only advance new energy research, but it will also encourage quicker transfer of new technology to energy businesses. For example, the new Colorado Center for Biorefining and Biofuels, C2B2, partners NREL and the Collaboratory with Colorado businesses to help reduce our dependence on foreign sources of oil while researching commercially viable biofuel technologies.

NREL and its employees continue a tradition of service to the community. Hundreds of NREL employees have completed over 43 community service projects in the past 5 years. NREL has focused community efforts for its 30th anniversary on helping the “Family Tree” organization, which provides assistance to the homeless and victims of domestic violence.

On a personal note, I have greatly enjoyed working with NREL scientists and staff, including NREL’s former Director, Vice Admiral Richard Truly, and NREL’s current Director, Dr. Dan Arvizu. I have great respect for both men and look forward to continuing to work with Dr. Arvizu for many years to come.

As the world demands sustainable energy solutions in a new era of energy awareness, I am confident that the talented scientists, engineers, and researchers at NREL will continue to lead our country and the world forward in expanding and improving our energy resources. I join my colleagues in recognizing NREL for its 30 years of service and look forward to many years to come.

Mr. McNERNEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from California (Mr. McNERNEY) that the House suspend the rules and agree to the concurrent resolution, H. Con. Res. 251.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds being in the affirmative) the rules were suspended and the concurrent resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Making Technical Corrections to Higher Education Act of 1965

Mrs. McCarthy of New York. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the Senate bill (S. 2371) to amend the Higher Education Act of 1965 to make technical corrections, as amended.

The Clerk read the title of the Senate bill.

Mr. Speaker, swift passage of S. 2371, as amended, will ensure that students and families will fully benefit from the programs, funding, and intent provided in the College Cost Reduction and Access Act. I urge my colleagues to support this provision.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. PLATTS. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mrs. McCARTHY of New York. Mr. Speaker, I request 5 legislative days during which Members may insert material relevant to H.R. 2517 into the RECORD.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from New York (Mrs. McCarthy), the chairwoman, for their continued leadership on this issue. Mr. LAMPSON is founder and was given permission to revise and extend her remarks.

Mrs. McCARTHY of New York. Mr. Speaker, today I rise with my colleagues to support the reauthorization of the Missing Children’s Assistance Act.

I want to thank my colleague, Mr. LAMPSON, for his continued leadership on this issue. Mr. LAMPSON is founder of the Missing Children’s Caucus and has worked tirelessly to support the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children. His passion for protecting our Nation’s children inspires others to get involved and work to create safe places for our young people, including on the Internet.

This bipartisan reauthorization continues the work of the Department of Justice Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Child Protection Division’s missing and exploited children’s programs, including funding for the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children.

Furthermore, this legislation continues the authorization for National Incidence Studies, known as NISMAT. According to CRS, the first NISMAT study “provided the first nationally representative, comprehensive data on the incidence of missing children.” The second NISMAT study resolved some methodological challenges of the first study, and included runaway or throwaway children as well.

These studies have helped law enforcement, Federal agencies, and nonprofits in their work to prevent children from going missing or to help children who are missing. Missing children are some of our most vulnerable young people, and this work is critical in protecting this population.

This legislation works to help protect not only children who go missing, but it also works to protect our children who are sexually exploited, a horrendous thought for any of us to consider, and yet it is part of our reality.

The National Center on Missing and Exploited Children serves not only as a national clearinghouse and resource center on missing children but also serves that same purpose for exploited children. Among multiple programs, NCMEC operates as a CyberTipline for tips and leads on child sexual exploitation.

The CyberTipline allows for citizens and electronic communication providers to report incidents of various types of child exploitation, including online enticement of children for sexual acts, child prostitution, and child pornography. This reauthorization expands the reach of the CyberTipline to include categories of exploitation that connect with new technologies or activities.

I want to share a success story from the Child Victim Identification Program at NCMEC. This program reviews child pornography to gain clues that will lead to the identification of a child.

In this particular case in 2005, those reviewing these horrendous images also found images of a young boy partially clothed, including a photo of him in his Boy Scout uniform. They were able to read the patches on his uniform and discovered he was in the Nassau County Boy Scout Council, which I represent here. The program has set procedure which led them to contacting law enforcement, who identified this child and later arrested a suspect.

From this story, there are two points I want to make. First, this program does wonderful, and yet very difficult, work to protect and save children who are being exploited. Secondly, these crimes happen everywhere.

Since its inception in 1984, NCMEC has received 173 reports of missing children in Nassau County, New York, and 4,319 for New York State. Of those 4,319 children, who went missing, 4,146 were recovered.

H.R. 2517 strengthens the ability of the Department of Justice Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention, OJJDP, and includes the authorization for the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children.

Every year, thousands of children are abducted or go missing. In 1984, Congress recognized the need for greater coordination of local, State, and Federal efforts to recover these children, and established the Missing and Exploited Children’s Program under the Missing Children’s Assistance Act. This act addresses the needs of missing, abducted, and sexually exploited children.

The program was created to coordinate and support various Federal programs children through the Department of Justice’s Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention, OJJDP, and includes the authorization for the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children.

The National Center is a not-for-profit corporation mandated by Congress which works in partnership with the Department of Justice. The center is funded in part by Congress and in part by the private sector and serves as a national resource center and clearinghouse for information on missing and exploited children. The National Center carries out many of the objectives of the Missing Children’s Assistance Act in collaboration with the Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention. The National Center provides assistance to families and law enforcement agencies in locating and recovering missing and exploited children, both nationally and internationally.

While the National Center receives both missing and sexually exploited youth and disseminates this information to various investigative law enforcement units, the center...
itself does not conduct the investigation of these cases. The National Center’s Federal funding supports specific operational functions mandated by Congress, including a national 24-hour toll-free hotline; a distributed system of more than 1,150 child exploitation response centers; a system of case management and technical assistance to law enforcement and families; training programs for Federal, State and local law enforcement; and programs designed to help protect the sexual exploitation of children.

Today, more missing children come home safely than ever before; however, there is still important work to be done. Hundreds of children still do not make it home each year, and many more continue to be victimized by acts of violence. In fact, children are the most victimized segment of our society and crimes committed against children of all ages are the most underreported of all crimes.

The National Center for Missing and Exploited Children has worked with law enforcement on more than 133,000 missing child cases, and has played a role in the recovery of more than 115,000 children with their families. With a 96.2 percent recovery rate, up from 62 percent in 1990, the National Center has analyzed more than 500,000 reports of crimes against children on the Internet and referred them to law enforcement, resulting in hundreds of arrests and successful prosecutions.

Today, law enforcement is responding more swiftly and effectively to reports of missing children. There is not a national network in place, and parents are more alert, more aware, and talking to their children about their safety. With the changes made through this legislation, the Missing Children’s Assistance Act and the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children will continue their important efforts focused on protecting our vulnerable missing children.

Again, I thank the gentleman from Texas, Mr. LAMPSON for his sponsorship of this bill.

I reserve the balance of my time.

Mrs. MCCARTHY of New York. Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. LAMPSON) who has been certainly at the forefront on trying to protect our children. I thank him for his work.

Mr. LAMPSON. I thank Chairwoman McCarthy for the good work that she has done and for allowing me the time to participate in this legislation and to bring it to the floor of the House of Representatives. It is critically important.

My colleagues, I rise today to ask you all to join me in voting for H.R. 2517, the Protecting Our Children Comes First Act of 2007. This bill amends the Missing Children’s Assistance Act to reauthorize the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children and the Department of Justice’s missing and exploited children’s program from 2008 to 2013.

Each year, thousands of children are abducted or removed from the control of a parent having legal custody without that parent’s consent, under circumstances which immediately place the child in grave danger. Recent cases include that of a young girl being molested time and time again. Our attention has also been captured by the mystery surrounding Baby Grace, another child who was murdered and put in a plastic box and dumped in Galveston, Texas, near my district. These gruesome acts remind us that we must do everything in our power to catch these creeps and protect our children.

Many missing children are at great risk of both physical harm and sexual exploitation, and in many cases parents and local law enforcement officials have neither the resources nor the expertise to mount expanded search efforts. Abducted children are frequently moved from one locality to another, requiring the coordinated effort of local, State, and Federal law enforcement efforts. Growing numbers of children are the victims of child sexual exploitation increasingly involving new technology to access the Internet. Six offenders will approach a child that increases as more offenders are released into the Nation’s communities each year.

On May 24, I, along with my cochair of the Congressional Missing and Exploited Children Caucus, introduced H.R. 2517. Since its establishment in 1984, the National Center has assisted law enforcement with more than 137,000 missing child cases, resulting in the recovery of more than 120,300 children. The National Center’s congressionally mandated CyberTipline, a reporting mechanism for child sexual exploitation, has handled more than 540,000 phone calls and leads.

We are fortunate that this Nation has a national clearinghouse and clearhouse such as the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children which works in partnership with the Department of Defense, the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the United States Marshals Service, the Department of the Treasury, the Department of State, the Department of Homeland Security’s Bureau of Immigration and Customs Enforcement, the United States Secret Service, and many other agencies. The effort to find missing children and prevent child victimization. The National Center operates a national and increasingly worldwide network and serves as a model for many other nations which are creating similar nonprofit organizations.

The National Center provides activities and services concerning missing children, including those abducted to or from the United States; exploited children; training and technical assistance; families of missing children; and partnerships with clearinghouses, the private sector, as well as children’s organizations. It is a primary component of the Department of Justice’s missing and exploited children’s program and employs over 300 people at its Alexandria, Virginia headquarters and its regional offices in California, Florida, Kansas, New York, and South Carolina. These regional offices provide coordination and technical support in their geographic areas. And the Austin, Texas office is scheduled to open in the very near future.

I would at this time like to recognize those staffs who have worked so diligently in bringing this legislation to fruition: Committee on Education and Labor staffs Denise Forte, Deborah Koobeck, and Ruth Friedman; Congresswoman JUDY BIGGERT, from Illinois; Dan Easley and Abby Shannon. I would also like to extend a thank you to my very strong Republican colleague and fellow caucus cochair, JUDY BIGGERT, from Illinois, for her leadership.

Again, I thank the gentleman from Texas, Ms. McCARTHY, who as has been referenced by the fellow caucus cochair, JUDY BIGGERT, from Illinois, for her leadership.

Again, I strongly urge my colleagues to support this much-needed legislation. It is time that we all step up to protect our children by authorizing resources for the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children so children are safer on and off the Internet, where they are free to learn and grow.

Thank you. I look forward to the support for this legislation.

Mr. PLATTs. I yield 4 minutes to the gentlelady from Illinois, Mrs. BIGGERT, who as has been referenced has been a true champion for protecting our Nation’s children.

Mrs. BIGGERT. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to express my strong support for H.R. 2517, the Protecting Our Children Comes First Act of 2007. I was very pleased to be a co-sponsor of this important bill which reauthorizes the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children through fiscal year 2013.
I would like to take a moment to thank my fellow cochair of the Congressional Missing and Exploited Children’s Caucus and sponsor of the bill, Representative LAMPSON, for his hard work on child protection issues, and Chairwoman MCCARTHY for her work in leading this bill through the committee.

It seems like every time I open the newspaper, I read another story of a child that has been abducted or has been sexually abused by a sexual predator. In Illinois, in my district, a city that has twice been voted "the top city in the nation to raise children", has alone experienced over 30 cases in the last 4 years involving online sexual solicitation of a child. Clearly, more can and must be done on this issue. This problem is not regional. It is not isolated to big cities. It is not isolated to rural communities. This is a real national problem that will not go away until we give organizations like the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children the tools and the resources they need to fulfill their mission and protect our children from current and emerging threats.

Since authorized by Congress in 1984, NCMEC has been extremely successful in this mission. In fact, NCMEC has received nearly 2.3 million telephone calls, printed and distributed nearly 43 million publications, trained 231,000 law enforcement, criminal justice, and health professionals, worked more than 136,000 missing children cases, and, perhaps most importantly, played a role in reuniting more than 118,700 children with their families. In fact, the National Center’s child recovery rate is an impressive 96.3 percent.

For generations, the message was simple. Parents told their children that they should never talk to strangers. My parents told me and I told my children. But times have changed. There are more threats to our children today, and our message must change with technology. Similarly the role of the National Center has changed.

This is why we need this bill passed on the floor today, to expand the National Center’s congressionally mandated mission to include recent enhancements in technology and give the center the resources to address these and other protective issues.

I urge my colleagues to support this bill.

Mrs. MCCARTHY of New York. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. PLATTS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the distinguished gentlewoman from Florida (Ms. GINNY BROWN-WAITE).

Ms. GINNY BROWN-WAITE of Florida. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of H.R. 2517, the Protecting Our Children Comes First Act of 2007, introduced by my colleague Congressman LAMPSON. I would like to thank him for his ongoing commitment to the extremely important issue of protecting our children, and I would also like to thank Chairwoman MILLER for his leadership in guiding this legislation through the Committee on the Education and Labor. I am extremely proud to join over 90 of my colleagues in cosponsoring this crucial, bipartisan legislation.

Mr. Speaker, the Protecting Our Children Comes First Act of 2007 reauthorizes the Missing Children’s Assistance Act through FY 2013, and it will increase federal resources for protecting and assisting missing children and their families. This legislation will provide the resources to ensure that the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children can continue its important work to combat child abduction and exploitation.

As Chair of the Congressional Children’s Caucus, I have been an outspoken advocate for the protection of our children against all predators, be it disease, natural disasters, or sexual deviants. While we may not be able to avoid natural disasters, there is nothing but a legislative and Congressional action on this important reauthorization which works to keep our Nation’s children safe. And I want to also thank my ranking member of the Subcommittee on Healthy Families and Communities, Mr. PLATTS, for his continued dedication to our work on the subcommittee.

I chair the Subcommittee on Healthy Families and Communities for the Committee on Education and Labor, and the Caucus is committed to helping the children of this Nation.

Our jurisdiction has led us to dealing with some of the most upsetting and challenging issues around the welfare of our Nation’s children. And this reauthorization is no exception.

None of us would like to even think about any children in our lives, whether it’s our own children, our grandchildren, our nieces or our nephews, any child in our lives going through missing or being sexually exploited. This is why this reauthorization is so critical and why this reauthorization is a bipartisan endeavor.

Through cooperation with the municipal Federal agencies, the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children makes 250 calls per day to national hotlines. It has received 5,422 tips through the CyberTipline, and has worked with countless families and organizations to raise awareness and bring children to safety. This work would not have been possible without our work here today in reauthorizing the Missing Children’s Assistance Act through H.R. 2517 sponsored by my colleague from Texas, Mr. LAMPSON.

I urge each Member to support this reauthorization. We, as a Nation, can do better to protect our children. And with that, I hope all of my colleagues will certainly vote for this.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong support of H.R. 2517, the Protecting Our Children Comes First Act of 2007, introduced by my colleague Congressman LAMPSON. I would like to thank him for his ongoing commitment to the extremely important issue of protecting our children, and I would also like to thank Chairwoman MILLER for his leadership in guiding this legislation through the Committee on the Education and Labor. I am extremely proud to join over 90 of my colleagues in cosponsoring this crucial, bipartisan legislation.

Mr. Speaker, the Protecting Our Children Comes First Act of 2007 reauthorizes the Missing Children’s Assistance Act through FY 2013, and it will increase federal resources for protecting and assisting missing children and their families. This legislation will provide the resources to ensure that the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children can continue its important work to combat child abduction and exploitation.

As Chair of the Congressional Children’s Caucus, I have been an outspoken advocate for the protection of our children against all predators, be it disease, natural disasters, or sexual deviants. While we may not be able to avoid natural disasters, there is nothing but a legislative and Congressional action on this important reauthorization which prevents us from protecting our children from known sexual predators. I am appalled that while the Department of Justice knows... the location of hundreds of thousands of sexual predators that prey on our Nation’s children within the U.S. at this very moment, the Department of Justice has consistently refused to take action or ask Congress for help despite the fact that law enforcement is investigating less than 2 percent of this criminal activity. The important piece of legislation for the accountability it will create by building the largest law enforcement army ever created for the protection of children.

While the child exploitation industry is global in scale, the majority of both supply and demand is based right here, within the United States. Due to the lack of attention to this issue by the Department of Justice, it is hard to quantify the number of child pornography traffickers that are involved in this gross violation of our children’s rights; the best estimates are that this practice involves 485,000 perpetrators in the United States alone. A 2005 Justice Department study found that:

80 percent of child pornography possessors have images and videos depicting sexual penetration.

Twenty percent of child pornography possessors have images of bondage, sadistic abuse, and torture.

Eighty-three percent of child pornography possessors have images of children aged 6–12.

Nineteen percent of child pornography possessors have images of infants or toddlers.

Only 1 percent of child pornography possessors restricted their “pay-per-view” rape of very young children.

Mr. Speaker, we must act now to protect our children from these atrocities and this legislation is an important first step in doing so. The National Center for Missing and Exploited Children’s (NCMEC) mission is to help prevent child abduction and sexual exploitation; help find missing children; and assist victims of child abduction and sexual exploitation, their families, and the professionals who serve them. Established in 1984, NCMEC is a non-profit organization that provides crucial services nationwide for families and professionals in the prevention of abducted, endangered, and sexually exploited children.

Mr. Speaker, as technology continues to evolve, there are continuously a new range of tools available to NCMEC to employ in its important work. In recent years, the Center’s workload has expanded exponentially, largely due to the growth of the Internet. Ernie Allen, president and CEO of the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children, stated that it anticipates an increase of 110,000 reports through the CyberTipline, which the public may use to report Internet-related child sexual exploitation, and provides technical assistance to individuals and law-enforcement agencies in the prevention, investigation, prosecution, and treatment of cases involving missing and exploited children, among other tasks. This is an increase of around 3,500 from last year.

Mr. Speaker, the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children has proven a crucial tool in combating the exploitation and abduction of our Nation’s children. It is vital that we continue to ensure that it continues to receive the funding that it needs to carry out its mission. This Congress has taken a firm stance on supporting legislation that protects our children, as can be seen by the passage of numerous pieces of legislation that binds our government to take meaningful action towards the protection of our children. I was a proud cosponsor of the PROTECT Our Children Act of 2007, introduced by my distinguished colleague from Florida, Representative Wasserman-Schultz. This congress successor to the CyberTipline operated by such center, by providing the mailing address, telephone number, facsimile number, electronic mail address or any other point of contact, for such electronic communication service provider or remote computing service provider.

If it would impose an undue hardship to provide these commingled digital files as part of the report, because of the volume of the digital files, or for other reasons, the reporting company shall, in lieu of providing those digital files, inform the CyberTipline of the existence of such digital files, and retain those digital files as if they were part of the report as required pursuant to subsection (b).

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. CONyers) and the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. FORbes) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Michigan.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. CONyers. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members have 5 legislative days to revise and extend their remarks, including extraneous material, on the bill under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

Mr. CONyers. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself as much time as I may consume.

Members of the House, this measure, H.R. 3791, called the SAFE Act, will improve the ability of our law enforcement officers to investigate offenses involving child pornography and the exploitation of children by the Internet.

Under current law, Internet service providers are required to file a report to the cyber tip line of the National Center of Missing and Exploited Children when the provider learns of child pornography. The center serves as a clearinghouse for leads and sends the reports to law enforcement agencies around the country, including the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Unfortunately though, many Internet companies are unaware of these obligations, and the law is unclear as to the precise information that is required to be reported to the center. This bill addresses the aforementioned problems.

First, it facilitates the reporting of child pornography from Internet service providers to the center by clarifying the information that must be reported. Then it specifies the data that must be maintained by the reporting company for law enforcement purposes. And finally, it provides certain liability waivers for the center and Internet service providers for their roles in dealing with child pornography as required by law. Therefore, H.R. 3791 makes clear the precise reporting obligations of Internet providers and, in this way, will facilitate investigation and prosecution of child pornography and other crimes against children that involve the Internet. I think this is an important measure.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. FORbes. Mr. Speaker, I’d like to, at this time yield so much time as he may consume to the gentleman from Ohio, Congressman CHABOT, who was an original cosponsor of this legislation.

Mr. CHABOT. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 3791, the Securing Adolescents From Exploitation—Online Act of 2007. The bill’s author, the distinguished gentleman from Texas (Mr. LAMPSON) and I have worked closely on this area as well. And I’m pleased to be the principal cosponsor of this bill with Mr. LAMPSON, particularly as it provides law enforcement with better information to fight the despicable act of child pornography.

We don’t have to look any further than our homes and our communities to see that predators are threatening and victimizing our children with just a simple click of a computer mouse. This bill would provide a world of opportunity to our children, has also contributed to a worldwide expansion of child pornography enabling predators to more easily abuse, exploit and prey on our most vulnerable children.

H.R. 3791 builds on the investigative tools already in place under the leadership of the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children. Through the CyberTipline, the center plays a critical role interfacing between Federal, State and foreign law enforcement and the public, providing valuable information in ongoing investigations.

H.R. 3791 recognizes that advances in technology have made electronic communication service providers the first line of defense against crimes against children, possessing the real-time information critical to child pornography investigations. By clarifying the requirements of electronic communication service providers to report this information to the CyberTipline as soon as reasonably possible and maintain this information for an investigation, this act, the SAFE Act, is giving Federal, State and foreign law enforcement and prosecutors a fighting chance to put these criminals away, no matter where they are located.

And one of the things that I found out in doing investigations into this particular area was the shocking fact that there are only 50 nations, including the United States, where child pornography is illegal. Fifty nations. There are 184 nations around the world that make it perfectly legal to have, possess, to convey child pornography. So that’s something that I think we need to have some focus and some attention directed upon, how much of the world, and that stuff gets in our children’s hands.

It may be here in the United States, it may be in Pakistan, it may be somewhere else, but it can be on our computers in our living rooms with our children very quickly, so we need to do a much better job on that, too.

But I want to again thank Mr. LAMPSON for his leadership in this area, and I again want to urge my colleagues to support H.R. 3791 today.

Mr. CONyers. Mr. Speaker, I’m pleased to recognize again Nick LAMPSON of Texas for the great work he has done in this area. I yield him as much time as he may consume.

But I do want to mention Steve CHABOT of the Judiciary Committee, who has worked with us all in the creation of this legislation.

Mr. LAMPSON. Mr. Speaker, I thank the honorable Mr. CONyers from Michigan for yielding me the time and for the great work that he has done on this legislation. And I thank the great work that you have done on this issue, and I thank you for letting me be a part of this.

And for Mr. CHABOT, the work that he has done on not just this, but other legislation having to do with child safety, child protection.

I rise today to ask my colleagues to join me in voting for H.R. 3791, the Securing Adolescents From Exploitation—Online Act of 2007, which modernizes and expands the reporting requirements relating to child pornography and expands cooperation in combating child pornography.

Stories of Internet predators prey on our children’s trust, taking their way into our children’s bedrooms with the simple click of a mouse, and they’re seen and heard all too often in our media. The age of sweet 16 used to be about parties and learning to drive, but now it marks the threshold of Internet freedom. Popular social networking Web sites allow profiles to be public, providing predators with an encyclopedia.
of pictures, personal interests and even addresses, which they can be used, or they can use to cause harm.

Well, this dangerous trend has become a feeding ground for pedophiles and convicted sex offenders. Parents, law enforcement and legislators must work to prevent children from being targeted online, from pornography, child predators, and other dangers. It is vital that we work together to ensure that our children are protected, and that the Internet is a safe place for everyone.

The Department of Justice recently announced a new initiative to expand the system for service providers to report child pornography found on the systems, we improve child safety and prevent future atrocities.

Currently, Internet service providers are mandated to report child pornography to the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children. Under the SAFE Act, all electronic service communications providers and remote computing service providers will have to report child pornography. For knowingly or willingly not filing a report after being made aware of a child pornography image, these providers will be subject to increased fines of $150,000 per image per day for the first offense and up to $300,000 per image per day for any image found thereafter.

This bill will also increase the efficiency of the CyberTipline, making it a better investigative tool for law enforcement by mandating that all information submitted by providers is consistent. The process outlined in this bill keeps law enforcement officials in the loop by making information more readily available and requires providers to retain key data that law enforcement agencies can use to investigate and prosecute child predators.

Over 10 years ago, I created the bipartisan Congressional Caucus on Missing and Exploited Children after a young girl in my district was kidnapped and murdered. And since then, I have continued to work extensively with organizations such as the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children on educating Members of Congress and others on legislation such as the SAFE Act that strengthen the National Center’s ability to keep children safer online and on our streets.

Many of us have watched Dateline’s popular series “To Catch a Predator” and organizations such as Perverse Justice that actively look for Internet child predators. We need to become partners in this fight by talking with our children about the dangers of strangers online and making Internet use a family activity.

While parents should teach their children that the Internet may offer many different types of resources, from entertainment to educational, it also poses many risks. Parents are the first line of defense against online predators, and the SAFE Act will reinforce their efforts.

Internet companies will need to do their part as well. When we begin to hold Web sites accountable for the images that they host, we’ve taken the first step toward supporting parents in their efforts to protect children. Our combined efforts will help make the Internet a safer place.

I again want to thank and recognize some of the people who have worked so hard to make this legislation what it has become, those staffs who have worked diligently in bringing this legislation to fruition: Committee on Judiciary staffers Ted Kalos and Mark Dubester; Congressman STEVE CHABOT’s staffer Kim Betz; and my staffs, Dan Easley and Abby Shannon, and a very special thank you to my distinguished Republican colleague, STEVE CHABOT, who has worked tirelessly on the issue of child safety, working with me as one of the cochairs of the Congressional Caucus on Missing and Exploited Children. I have great respect for the Institute of Justice for what has been done here in Congress as well as for the work that he has done in his congressional district, and for championing this legislation on his side of the aisle and for helping to ensure that not only are Ohio’s children protected but all of America’s children are as well.

Once again, I would like to thank John and Reve Walsh for all the time that they have spent in helping us make this legislation successful, and Ernie Allen, who has spent, along with the Walshes, a good part of this day making sure that others of our colleagues were aware of it, and to be willing to support it. I thank them for their magnificent contribution that they’ve made to protecting children across this world, not just in the United States of America. It’s because of their persistent dedication to this cause that so many of our children sleep more safely at night.

Again, I ask my colleagues to support H.R. 3791.

Mr. FORBES. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today to join those voices in support of H.R. 3791, the Securing Adolescents from Exploitation-Online Act of 2007, otherwise known as the SAFE Act. Child pornography is a profitable, global criminal enterprise and is growing rapidly in technical sophistication in response to efforts to detect and disrupt these criminal operations. It is despicable in its scope and in its vicious victims: our children.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation estimates that 50,000 child predators are online at any time searching for potential victims. The Internet is a virtual playground for sexual predators, who satiate their desire for child pornography with relative anonymity.

H.R. 3791, the SAFE Act, would, first of all, strengthen the requirements applicable to Internet service providers to report violations of child pornography laws, and second, provide limited liability to ISPs, telecommunications carriers, and the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children in connection with the reporting to law enforcement agencies of child pornography violations.

This legislation is a good first step in addressing the problem of child pornography. However, there is much more that needs to be done. In February 2007, the Judicial Committee on Crime, the Ranking Member SMITH and I introduced H.R. 837, the Internet SAFETY Act of 2007, a comprehensive proposal to provide law enforcement with the tools and resources needed to deal with the problem of child pornography. Unfortunately, the majority has chosen not to consider this vital proposal. I am hopeful that the majority will bring H.R. 837 up for consideration by the Judiciary Committee and then to the House floor.

We must ensure our children deserve the same protection as we can provide. They are vulnerable victims of the child pornography industry. We need to do more. A first step is good, but we cannot stop here. We must keep moving forward to keep our children safe.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The SPEAKER pro tempore. Mr. ROSS. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. CONYERS) that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 3791, as amended.

The question was taken.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Mr. Speaker, on that prior announcement, further proceedings on this motion will be postponed.

(A) IN GENERAL.—When evaluating whether a jurisdiction has substantially implemented this section, the Attorney General shall consider whether the jurisdiction is unable to substantially implement any section because of a demonstrated inability to implement certain provisions that would place the jurisdiction in violation of its constitution, as determined by a ruling of the jurisdiction’s highest court.

(B) EFFORTS.—If the circumstances arise under subparagraph (A), then the Attorney General and the jurisdiction involved shall make good faith efforts to accomplish substantial implementation of this section and to reconcile any conflicts between this section and the jurisdiction’s constitution. In considering whether compliance with the requirements of this section would likely violate the jurisdiction’s constitution or an interpretation thereof by the highest court, the Attorney General shall consult with the chief executive and chief legal officer of the jurisdiction concerning the jurisdiction’s interpretation of the jurisdiction’s constitution and rulings thereon by the jurisdiction’s highest court.

(C) ALTERNATIVE PROCEDURES.—If a jurisdiction is unable to substantially implement this section because of a limitation imposed by the jurisdiction’s constitution, the Attorney General may determine that the jurisdiction has substantially implemented this section if the jurisdiction has, or is in the process of implementing, reasonable alternative procedures or accommodations, which are consistent with the purposes of this section.

The Attorney General may, with the concurrence of the jurisdiction in which such grant fund is awarded, make a bonus payment to the jurisdiction for the first fiscal year beginning after the date such determination is made. The amount of the bonus payment shall be as follows:

(1) In the case of a determination that the jurisdiction has substantially implemented the requirements of section 2 but not later than the date that is one year after the date of the enactment of this Act, 10 percent of the total grant funds available to the jurisdiction under subsection (a) shall be awarded to the jurisdiction.

(2) In the case of a determination that the jurisdiction has substantially implemented such section by a date that is more than one year after the date of the enactment of this Act, but not later than the date that is two years after such date of enactment, 5 percent of such total shall be awarded to the jurisdiction.

(d) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—In addition to any amounts otherwise authorized to be appropriated, there are authorized to be appropriated to the Attorney General, to be available for carry out this section, such sums as may be necessary for each of fiscal years 2009 through 2014.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. FORBES. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 1759, the Managing Arson Through Criminal History Act of 2007. I want to first commend my colleagues from California, Congresswoman BONO and Congressman SCHIFF, for their hard work on this legislation.

My colleagues from California know all too well the devastation that arson causes. The wildfires that burned across much of southern California in October killed 14 people and injured as many as 70 others. The fires touched over a half million acres from Los Angeles to the Mexican border and displaced 513,000 people from their homes.

Costs in San Diego County alone were projected to exceed $1 billion.

Said a week ago, another fire in Malibu, California destroyed 35 homes and forced the evacuation of hundreds of residents. Two of the October fires, the Santiago fire in Orange County and the Buckweed fire in Los Angeles, we now know were set deliberately.

Many arsonists begin by starting small fires and then escalate to larger and larger fires to increase their sense of excitement. Unfortunately, only 17.1 percent of all arson convictions result in convictions nationwide because the evidence needed to convict these arsonists is often destroyed in the fire.

As arsonists become more sophisticated in their technique, identifying them and prosecuting them becomes more challenging. Each year, an estimated 267,000 fires are caused by arson.

In recent years, arson has been used to burn churches and protest urban sprawl. But the ongoing threat remains those who set fires to get a rush and feed a compulsion.

We may never be able to fully prevent wildfires, but we can implement tools to help prevent arsonists, particularly serial arsonists, from eluding law enforcement and escaping punishment.

The MATCH Act creates a national arson registry and requires criminal arsonists to report where they live, work, and go to school. The database would include photographs, fingerprints, vehicle information and other information on the arsonist. The length of time that an arsonist would be required to register is based on how many acts of arson they have committed: 5 years for one offense, 10 years for two, and lifetime for a serial arsonist who has committed three or more offenses.

The MATCH Act would create a national registry and require convicted arsonists to report where they live, work, and go to school. The database would include photographs, fingerprints, vehicle information and other information on the arsonist. The length of time that an arsonist would be required to register is based on how many acts of arson they have committed: 5 years for one offense, 10 years for two, and lifetime for a serial arsonist who has committed three or more offenses. The information would only be made available to law enforcement agencies and not the general public.

Most important, when a convicted arsonist updates his or her information with a change of residence, notification would be sent to the appropriate law enforcement agencies.

When arson has occurred, it’s critical to find and find quickly the individual involved to prevent future acts of arson and to prosecute the one responsible.

Frequently, arsonists use the same trademark tools, such as a unique incendiary device, a manner of starting a fire, or similar targets, such as houses of worship or even auto dealerships.

In a case where the arsonist may have come from one place or a State to commit the act of arson, the information in the database will give law enforcement and important tools to identify convicted arsonists that may be connected to the very similar act of arson. Most importantly, the registration can also prevent future acts of arson by requiring convicted arsonists to update their information when they move or change their modus operandi.

Putting law enforcement on notice, this also lets the convicted arsonists know they can’t hide from law enforcement for the purpose of committing another act of arson.

When I was a prosecutor in the U.S. Attorney’s office in Los Angeles, I worked on an arson investigation that really brings to mind for me the merit of how an arsonist registry would be of great benefit. This was a situation where someone was setting a string of fires in the San Bernardino forest. The individual used a unique incendiary device that he could throw in the brush line far away from homes and brush would be ignited. They couldn’t catch the culprit in the act and eventually succeeded in tracking him down through the use of video surveillance and a complex investigation. The suspect was arrested and interviewed and admitted to setting fires in the taped interview. However, the tape recording malfunctioned and the confession was lost along with most of the case. As we pursued the investigation, we found a very capable officer of the suspect from many years earlier who found his records in his basement storage. The file on the suspect detailed that many years earlier he had set fires using the same incendiary device. When confronted with the evidence, the suspect pled guilty. If we had a national arsonist registry at the time, we would have known of convicted arsonists who lived in the region. We would have known their modus operandi. We may have been able to stop him before he committed several later fires. Keeping your records in the basement is not a successful law enforcement strategy; the national arsonist registry created through the MATCH Act is.

Again, I want to compliment my colleague MARY BONO. Thank you very much for your leadership on this. It’s very important to all Californians.

And, Mr. Chairman, we are very grateful for your moving this bill through committee so quickly in such a bipartisan spirit.

Mr. FORBES. Mr. Speaker, it is now my privilege to yield such time as she may consume to the gentlewoman from California, Congresswoman BONO, who has worked so hard on this matter and seen firsthand the effects arsonists can have.

Mrs. BONO. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to rise in support of the Managing Arson Through Criminal History, or MATCH Act, H.R. 1759.

As a Member from California, I was heartened by the support that our delegation received from this House during the tragic fires that recently swept through our State. As many of you know, some of those fires are being investigated as arson. But it was not these very recent events that inspired the legislation that we are considering today.

Just a little over a year ago, my community was devastated by what became known as the Esperanza fire. That fire not only wreaked havoc on the surrounding land and homes, but ultimately cost the lives of five very brave...
United States Forest Service firefighters. The fire that cost those men their lives was a result of a despicable act of arson.

Subsequent conversations with firefighters and chiefs in my district led to the creation of this bill. They believed that a central database would provide them with invaluable information in tracking arsonists and, more especially, serial arsonists. Clearly, more help is needed in the tracking of this dangerous crime. Track arsonists account for the majority of the fires in the United States, the arrest and conviction rate is less than 20 percent.

I can share statistic after statistic about the damage caused by arson, the millions of dollars lost and grand totals of people, but what those numbers fail to convey are the stories of individuals; the hundreds of families in Southern California who will have nowhere to celebrate the holidays this year or the veteran who lost his war medals and mementos before he could share them with his grandchildren, the baby pictures, the refrigerator art, the family rocking chair, the things that no insurance policy could possibly replace and that no one else will ever truly understand.

It is our duty as Members of Congress to provide what tools and infrastructure we can to aid in both the prevention of this crime and speedy apprehension of those who choose to commit it. The MATCH Act combines the efforts of the Federal, State, and local governments to combat the crime of arson by creating a national arson registry. The registry requires criminal arsonists to report where they live, work and go to school. In addition to that information, the database will include finger and palm prints of the arsonist and an up-to-date photograph. This legislation will provide an important tool to law enforcement officers by enabling them to effectively track arsonists regardless of where they live and to share that information across jurisdictions.

I, like all of my colleagues in this House, am anxious to provide what tools and support we can to combat the despicable crime of arson. It is my sincere belief that the MATCH Act will make a meaningful difference in the way we approach and deal with arson offenders.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, it is my pleasure now to yield such time as he may consume to the chairman of the Crime Committee on the Judiciary, my good friend BOBBY SCOTT. Mr. SCOTT of Virginia. I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, arson is indeed a very serious problem, costing over $1 billion in property damage annually and endangering the lives of citizens and especially our firefighters. Arson has also become one of the lower arrest and conviction rates, and law enforcement needs new tools to enhance their capabilities to solve arson crimes.

Unfortunately, the evidence presented in committee was that the State of California already has a registry similar to the one contemplated in the bill and no arsons have been solved by that database.

Furthermore, Mr. Speaker, I would need to point out another concern I have with H.R. 1759 in its current form. That concern relates to the treatment of juveniles under the proposed bill. Juveniles who are charged and convicted as adults for arson offenses would be required to register in the newly created arson offender registry. As researchers have shown all arson offenders, juveniles are the least culpable due to immature brain development, and they have the greatest capacity for rehabilitation. Branding them as an offender in a State or national register is not only improper, it’s counter-productive.

Requiring young offenders to register in a State or national offender database counters the concept of ensuring the proper development of juveniles because it is inconsistent with rehabilitative efforts. Although H.R. 1759 properly ensures that only law enforcement will have access to information on the registries, law enforcement officers will undoubtedly use the information to identify a youth for further arrests. Once law enforcement has certain youngsters on their radar, those youngsters would be targets and more likely to be arrested and prosecuted for even minor nonviolent conduct because law enforcement officials have their names on a list.

In summary, I agree that law enforcement needs effective tools to combat the devastation of arson causes, and I want to thank the gentleman from California for her hard work in developing the bill, and for making many improvements in the bill from its original form. However, I still have concerns about the cost effectiveness of the proposal in the bill as well as concerns, the impact the legislation will have on juvenile offenders. Mr. FORBES. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, I would close by holding out my hand of cooperation to my chairman of the Crime Subcommittee because I know he has been working carefully with the leaders of this bill and we have accepted some of his recommendations, and it will be my pleasure to make sure that we consider the points that he has made here this afternoon.

So with that I am very pleased to urge the support of this measure that’s before us. I think it is important and timely and will be very constructive. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from California (Mr. CONYERS) that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 1759, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds being in the affirmative) the rules were suspended and the bill, as amended, was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

CONDEMNATION OF NOOSE INTIMIDATION

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and agree to the resolution (H. Res. 826) expressing the sense of the House of Representatives that the hanging of nooses is a horrible act when used for the purpose of intimidation and which under certain circumstances can be a criminal act that should be thoroughly investigated by Federal law enforcement authorities and that any criminal violations should be vigorously prosecuted.

The Clerk read the title of the resolution.

The text of the resolution is as follows:

H. Res. 826

Whereas the number of dead lynching victims in the United States, the arrest and conviction rate is less than 20 percent, the arrest and conviction rate is less than 20 percent.

Whereas since 2001, the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission has filed more than 30 lawsuits that involve the displaying of nooses in places of employment;

Whereas nooses are reviled by many Americans as racist symbols of lynchings that were once all too common;

Whereas according to the Mississippi Institute, more than 4,700 people were lynched between 1882 and 1959 in a campaign of terror led by the Ku Klux Klan;

That it is the sense of the House of Representatives that the hanging of nooses is a horrible act when used for the purpose of intimidation and which under certain circumstances can be a criminal act that should be thoroughly investigated by Federal law enforcement authorities and that any criminal violations should be vigorously prosecuted.

Resolved, That it is the sense of the House of Representatives that the hanging of nooses is a horrible act when used for the purpose of intimidation and which under certain circumstances can be criminal;

(1) the hanging of nooses is a horrible act when used for the purpose of intimidation and which under certain circumstances can be criminal;

(2) this conduct should be investigated thoroughly by Federal authorities; and
As I said, we know of an instance in which a hanging noose symbolizes lynching, one of the most shameful, terror-ridden, racial crimes in our history and which, sadly, can be traced back to the very founding time of the United States.

I commend my colleague from the State of Texas, our new Member, Al Green, who for his leadership on this issue should be really commended as an important contribution that he has made. And I would like to acknowledge the Judiciary Committee’s members on both sides of the aisle who helped advance this resolution with their active support. The Committee on the Constitution chairman, Jerrold Nadler; the Crime Committee chairman, Bobby Scott; also our stellar members from North Carolina, Mel Watt; and from Texas, Sheila Jackson-Lee; from California, Maxine Waters; Wisconsin, Tammy Baldwin; Georgia, Hank Johnson; Tennessee, Steve Cohen; Wisconsin, James Sensenbrenner; and Texas, Louie Gohmert. These and many other Members have been invaluable in laying the groundwork for us to come together to hearten not just the people in this country but our law enforcement agencies, particularly the Department of Justice, in trying to reduce and indeed eliminate this unfortunate system of hate that is spreading, unfortunately, in our country.

I think we can head it off, and I hope with the passage of House Resolution 826 that will be, in fact, accomplished. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. FORBES. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. CONYERS. Could I ask my colleague, the floor manager (Mr. FORBES), I would like to ask unanimous consent for 5 minutes more on each side if that would be agreeable with the gentleman.

Mr. FORBES. I would be happy to agree to that.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, I ask that we have 5 additional minutes added to each side.

Mr. Speaker, I support House Resolution 826 to condemn the vicious act of hanging a noose with the intent to intimidate and terrorize. Our country’s tragic history of brutal, racially motivated Lynchings will be forever associated with the vile symbol of the hanging noose.

The noose was used to instill fear in African Americans during our Nation’s struggle to protect the civil rights of all Americans. During our country’s period of reconstruction following the Civil War, the infamous Ku Klux Klan and others used lynching to strike fear into the hearts of African Americans. Lynchings were used to dehumanize their victims, who were often horribly mutilated before they were hung by a mob.

Today, everyone should recognize that the stark image of a dangling noose, intended to intimidate and terrify, should be condemned in the strongest of terms. And those who are ignorant of the terrifying history of the symbol of the dangling noose must be educated, such that they understand its grotesque history and come to never see its use as a harmless prank.

There have been a disturbing number of recent incidents in which nooses have been found under suspicious circumstances. Those incidents are being investigated, and must be investigated. But we should also be aware that some of those incidents may have been motivated by the perverse desire for publicity. On Sunday, the Baltimore Sun reported on a hoax in which a firefighter who reported finding a knotted rope and a threatening note with a drawing of a noose at an East Baltimore station house last month had placed the items there himself.

We also know of an instance in which another symbol of hate, a swastika, was drawn on the door of a Jewish student at George Washington University, but she later confessed to drawing the swastika herself after she was caught doing so on a security camera.

We should recognize today that those who use the symbol of hate, for any improper reason, including to get attention for one’s own cause, are contributing just as much to an atmosphere of intimidation as those who do so motivated by hate for another group.

Mr. Speaker, I urge a “yes” vote on this, and I reserve the balance of my time.
me with this idea, Mr. AL GREEN, and I will yield him 3½ minutes.

Mr. AL GREEN of Texas. I thank Chairmen CONYERS. I thank Ranking Member LAMAR SMITH. I would like to also thank the co-Lead on this piece of legislation, Mr. Ranking Majority Leader TRENDON L. WILSON, because it is a resolution of one. I consider it to be a piece of legislation, and that, of course, would be Representative LAURA RICHARDSON. I thank the floor manager, RANDY FORBES, all of the staff, and I especially thank the 60 persons that signed on as cosponsors of this resolution.

Mr. Speaker, I am proud to have sponsored H. Res. 826, the condemnation of noose intimidation. Noose intimidation. It has received bipartisan support, and it has received it because America is a country of hope, not hate. In America, we celebrate our diversity. We love knowing that we can live together and that we can have the kind of harmony and peace that America has always promised all of its citizens. Noose intimidation has no place in America. Noose intimidation is the invidious hanging or displaying of a noose for the purpose of intimidation, humiliation, or denigration. When it is done under circumstances that may constitute a crime, it ought to be investigated. And if a crime has been committed, it ought to be vigorously prosecuted.

Recently nooses have been found in North Carolina at a high school, New Jersey at a Home Depot, Louisiana on a school playground, and in Houston, Texas, at a factory. Fifty to 60 incidents involving nooses have been reported since September 7. This is per the Southern Poverty Law Center. Thirty more lawsuits have been filed by EEOC concerning nooses. Four thousand seven hundred persons were lynched. Many of these were Latinos, Jewish Americans, Italian Americans, and African Americans. This was done between 1882 and 1950. America is a country of hope, not hate. For this reason, we believe in the words of the Pledge of Allegiance “liberty and justice for all.” That is why this legislation is important. We believe in the words in the Declaration of Independence that all persons are created equal and endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights, among them life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. That is why this resolution is important.

Dr. King reminded us that it is not where you stand in times of comfort and convenience but, rather, where you stand in times of challenge and controversy. I am so proud that my colleagues have stood with us in these times of challenge, and we condemn noose intimidation. And I close with these words from Dr. King. He said, “It may be true that the law cannot make a man love me. But it can keep him from lynching me. And I think that’s pretty important. I God bless you, and I thank you.

Mr. FORBES. Mr. Speaker, it is my privilege now to yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. SHAYS).

Mr. SHAYS. Thank you for yielding me time.

There is no doubt in my mind that intimidation by using a noose is a horrific and criminal act. I want to thank Congressman AL GREEN of Texas for offering this resolution because it is critical that the victims who have been targeted, all African Americans, know that the U.S. Congress and all the people of America strongly condemn this outrageous behavior and encourage its vigorous prosecution.

In Jena, Louisiana, we have seen the case of six black men who were initially charged with attempted murder after a fight that was, in part, prompted by the hanging of nooses by three white students, none of whom were prosecuted.

This blatant form of racism has become more and more common, as the resolution notes, with nooses being found in a North Carolina high school, a Home Depot in New Jersey, a Louisiana school playground, the campus of the University of Maryland, a Columbia University professor’s office, a fan at a Houston, Texas, Major League Baseball stadium, and an Oklahoma police department parking lot in Bridgeport, Connecticut. In my own home town of Bridgeport, police sergeant Jo-anne Meekins recently found a noose under her police car.

As the NAACP Chairman Craig Kelly rightly said in discussing this outrageous incident targeting Sergeant Meekins, “The noose has become the new swastika or the new burning cross in this country and, unfortunately, people seek to relive that horror.” Conduct like this must never be tolerated, which is why I am glad that Congress is passing a bipartisan resolution against these actions and urging swift prosecution and full penalties for those who perpetrate these senseless acts.

Our brothers and sisters throughout the country need to know that all Americans stand with them in condemning the act of hanging nooses as an attempt to intimidate and terrorize and that it must not be just condemned but prosecuted to the full extent of the law.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, it is now my pleasure to call my dear friend and newest member to the Congressional Black Caucus, LAURA RICHAR-DSON, to speak, and I recognize her for 2½ minutes.

Ms. RICHARDSON. Part of what makes this Nation respected is our ability to acknowledge history, both good and bad, and make the conscious effort to not repeat those same mistakes. Make no mistake about it. The noose is an ugly symbol, and it is a painful reminder of a time period where a piece of rope was used to administer criminal injustice and to intimidate an entire population. Likewise, it is important to note that the lynchings were not limited to African Americans alone. Historians have noted and documented at least 605 cases of Hispanic Americans who were lynched between 1848 and 1928. According to the Tuskegee Institute, more than 4,700 people were lynched between 1882 and 1959 in a campaign of terror led by the Ku Klux Klan. Also noted is that white individuals were lynched during that same time period, and of that 4,700, it is believed that at least one-fourth were white members.

It is important to understand that the noose can create a memory of pain as noted by my colleague. It is a pain that is often considered similar to viewing a swastika. This is a terrible reminder to us all that intimidation, whether it be done in speech or in action or in symbols, should not be tolerated.

In my own district, just less than 20 miles from my area, we had a recent incident at the Cal State Fullerton campus. This is a State campus where the acts of intimidation surfaced.

Regarding the first amendment, this resolution does nothing to impede an individual’s right to think or utilize the right to speak differently than another. H. Res. 826 encourages the Federal Government to investigate vigorously and prosecute any noose hangings when they are done with the purpose to intimidate.

I want to thank my colleague Mr. GREEN from Texas for his leadership on this issue, and also Chairmen CONYERS for dealing with this issue in such a timely manner.

Mr. FORBES. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. CONYERS. The Chair is pleased to recognize the gentlady from California, BARBARA LEE, who has graced us with her presence in my district recently, and we yield her 2 minutes.

Ms. LEE. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the chairman for his leadership and for his friendship. Also I want to thank our colleague from Texas, Congressman AL GREEN, for introducing this very important resolution and for your spirit with which you have introduced this.

Racism is alive and well in America, regardless of how we try to sweep it under the rug. It is tragic and very sad that we need a resolution like this today, but the rash of noose hangings across America reminds us that it is necessary. Clearly, there can be no better example of these tragic incidents than in the case of the Jena Six.

What does this say about our Nation and the level of racism present when we see an increase in these times of hateful acts? As a child, I remember listening to these horror stories about the Klan and their terrorist acts, and that is what this is. These are terrorist acts against African Americans. And today, I just shiver at the thought of a country where this is for anyone, any community, any family whose race has been targeted and has been terrorized by these acts.
Every act of intimidation in the displaying of nooses must be criminally prosecuted. It is a horrible act. A noose is a racist symbol.

On behalf of the more than 4,700 people who were lynched between 1882 and 1968, I rise in strong support of the resolution. H. Res. 826, today, and vigorously prosecute those who continue to harass, intimidate and hang nooses in our country. These acts of hate have no place in America. Thank you, Mr. Chairman. Thank you Congressman Green for allowing us the privilege to say "no" to racism once again in America.

Mr. FORBES. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. CUMMINGS. Mr. Speaker, today I rise in strong support of this legislation, and I thank my colleague Mr. Green for sponsoring it.

As chairman of the Subcommittee on the Coast Guard and Maritime Transportation, I was recently outraged about an incident that happened at the Coast Guard Academy that has been referenced here earlier where a noose was left in the bag of an African American cadet, and then a training diversity officer, a noose was left in her bag as well.

Following these incidents, I went to the head of the Coast Guard, Admiral Thad Allen, and at my request he and I visited the academy to remind the cadets that despite their numerous accomplishments, they will be judged by their weakest link. I stressed that any attack against our Nation's defenders weakens and endangers us all.

I also talked to them about the strength of our Nation as a free people and of their decision to put on the uniform of the United States Coast Guard, symbolizing their duty to defend and uphold the right of every person in our Nation to live in freedom, security and respect.

In my own life, I have learned through personal experience more about the devastating impact of racial hatred than anyone should learn. And this is what I know: Racism is an evil that seeks to destroy the possibility that exists in every human being.

Mr. Speaker, it is in this time of integration and prosperity, some have regretfully forgotten the negative stigma surrounding the noose and why it cannot be displayed in jest. It is important to remind these few that over 4,700 people were lynched in the United States between 1882 and 1959. And while the majority of lynching victims were African Americans, many Italians, Jews and Mexicans have been lynched throughout this Nation's history as well.

The noose is a symbol of oppression, hatred and intimidation for many racial and ethnic groups, and we cannot tolerate its display. We must respond to these incidents with determination and clarity, and H. Res. 826 is just one positive step in that direction.

Mr. FORBES. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to recognize the Chair of the Congressional Hispanic Caucus, the Honorable Joe Baca of California, and I yield him 2 minutes.

Mr. BACA. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H. Res. 826, and I want to thank the Chair for his leadership on this issue. I want to thank my good friend Congressman Al Green for his efforts in raising this bipartisan awareness on this outrageous issue. This is the year 2007, and yet we continue to see the hanging of nooses in America, that is shameful, as a form of intimidation and racial discrimination.

Every child has the right to attend school freely. They should not live in fear. And let me tell you, when this happens, many of our children live in that kind of fear and that kind of intimidation, and that should not happen to our children, no matter who they are or what color they are.

Every American has the right to a workplace that is free from discrimination and hate. We are all children of God, and the Lord has taught us to love thy neighbor and treat each other with dignity and respect, not with hate or discrimination acts like this, but with kindness and love.

Nooses remind us of the dark chapters of the past; yet they continue to be used to create fear today, to create fear today. There have been over 40 suspected hate crimes involving nooses in the last 4 months.

As Chair of the Congressional Hispanic Caucus, I strongly support this resolution, because this type of hate affects all of our communities, not just the African American community, but all of us. We should live without fear or intimidation and allow everyone to have that kind of freedom.

Over the years, more people have died from lynching than there have been victims at Pearl Harbor, and many of them were African Americans, Italians, Jewish and Mexican Americans.

We stand together in solidarity to say the hanging of nooses will not be tolerated by anyone, anymore, for any reason, and I urge my colleagues to do the right thing and support this resolution.

Mr. FORBES. Mr. Speaker, on this bill that I think is supported by virtually every Member of this house, I continue to reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased now to recognize the gentleman from Tennessee, a distinguished member of the House Judiciary Committee, Mr. Steve Cohen, 2 minutes.

Mr. COHEN. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the chairman and Mr. Green for bringing this legislation.

It is my honor to serve on the House Judiciary Committee, where this matter had a hearing. It is unfortunate that in 2007 we have to have a hearing on such matters, but as Mr. Baca, Mr. Cummings and others have so well expressed, these are symbols of racial hatred, of intolerance and intimidation that seeks to destroy the possibility to intimidate people into not exercising their rights. Predominantly, these have been used against African Americans, but also against other ethnic minorities.

Looking back, one of the stories I heard about many times was a man named Leo Frank. Leo Frank was accused and unjustly convicted of a crime in Georgia, taken out of his jail in 1915 in Marietta, Georgia, and hung by an angry mob. Mr. Frank was later found by the courts and the Georgia system of justice to have been illegally, improperly convicted, because Mr. Frank was dead.

This was an unfortunate part of our history. The Klan was a part of it, but there were people beyond the Klan that engaged in it. And rather than being like the Statue of Liberty and welcoming people to this country, this great land of opportunity where people could pursue happiness and enjoy freedom, the symbol of the noose has told people you are not acceptable, you are not to exercise your rights, and you should be weary of trying to speak up and exercise your first amendment rights and be what America is all about.

This legislation needs to pass. When nooses are displayed, they are anti-American. They need to be investigated for criminal enforcement by our Justice Department, and they will. This resolution. Thank you, Mr. Green for bringing it. I want to say that, unfortunately, in my jurisdiction in Memphis, there was a situation in Germantown, Tennessee, where three people at the Germantown Performing Arts Center recently in August put a noose out. They were fired. They should have been prosecuted as well.

The noose does not belong in America. Mr. FORBES. Mr. Speaker, I continue to reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased now to recognize the distinguished gentleman from Louisiana, Mr. William Jefferson, who has worked very hard on matters of racial justice across his career in the Congress, and I yield him 2 minutes.

Mr. JEFFERSON. Mr. Speaker, thank you, Mr. Chairman. I rise today in strong support of H. Res. 826. I commend Representative Al Green for taking this timely and necessary step against the heinous act of noose hanging, an act that can only be described as one of racial discrimination and hate.

Now is the time for the Congress to address the well over 50 incidences of noose hangings that have occurred in the past 2½ months. In my home State of Louisiana, at least three have been reported: One in Jefferson Parish; one in St. Tammany Parish; and, of course, the most infamous of all, one in Jena, Louisiana.

Mr. Speaker, Professor Ogletree of Harvard Law School got it right when in recent testimony before the House Judiciary Committee relating to what happened in Jena, he said in part, “We have failed at basic lessons of history if an American can blithely characterize hanging nooses on a tree as an innocuous prank or practical joke, as some officials in Jena have done. This is not an act to be minimized, laughed off or chalked up to childhood shenanigans.”

With nearly 5,000 people lynched from the late 1800s to the early 1900s, a noose today is a powerful symbol of pure barbarism. Given the context, the noose to an African American who knows his history is nothing less than an expression of hatred. It is, too, a warning of impending violence and likely death.

Indeed, this is the correct reading of history and the correct context in which to view the importance of this resolution.

The composition “Strange Fruit,” Mr. Speaker, written by Lewis Allan and originally sung by Billie Holiday, lays bare the savagery of lynching and therefore what noose hanging means in real terms to African Americans. It reads:

“Southern trees bear strange fruit, Blood on the leaves and blood at the root, Black bodies swinging in the southern breeze, Strange fruit hanging from the poplar trees, Pastoral scene of the gallant South, The bulging eyes and the twisted mouth, Scent of magnolias, sweet and fresh, Then the sudden smell of burning flesh, Here is the fruit for the crows to pluck, For the sun to rot, for the trees to drop, Here is a strange and bitter crop.”

Professor Ogletree concluded his testimony by saying, “If all that emerges from these unfortunate events in Jena are educators more systematically informing community members and students about the shameful history of lynching, this will be a positive step.”

I agree, Mr. Chairman, but more is needed.

Mr. FORBES. With that advice, I would just like to again encourage all of our Members, and I believe everybody stands in support of this resolution, and I hope they will all vote in favor of it.

With that, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Virginia, and I yield finally to the Honorable STEPHANIE TURBS JONES of Ohio, a distinguished lawyer, should be judge, and now a member of the House of Representatives, to close for us.

Mrs. JONES of Ohio. Mr. Chairman, thank you for the privilege.

They say some things bear repeating. These words bear repeating. Southern trees bear strange fruit, Blood on the leaves and blood at the root, Black bodies swinging in the southern breeze, Strange fruit hanging from the poplar trees, Pastoral scene of the gallant South, The bulging eyes and the twisted mouth, Scent of magnolias, sweet and fresh, Then the sudden smell of burning flesh, Here is the fruit for the crows to pluck, For the rain to gather, for the wind to suck, For the sun to rot, for the trees to drop, Here is a strange and bitter crop.

The words of a songstress, but the words of the South, the words of African Americans from across this country and other ethnic groups. Seeing somehow in America we have begun to believe that this conduct is acceptable, that we can do things, we can do nooses, we can do crossings, we can do all kinds of things against people without believing that it has some impact or that it can hurt. It hurts like a knife. It cuts like a knife. My mama from Alabama, my daddy from Alabama, my in-laws from Georgia, Alabama; the stories go on and on about how terrible nooses can and have been.

America, this is the Congress saying “The symbol of the noose is powerful and offensive. Thousands of African Americans have been lynched in this country simply for being the ‘wrong’ color. The incident of noose hangings of Black America was not aberrational or occasional. At any moment in time, an African American could be hung at the hands of an angry white mob, and the symbol of the noose still hangs over this country like a black cloud. The noose has come to symbolize white supremacy and the subjugation of an entire race of people. It has been used as a weapon against those who dared to challenge their condition. It has been used as a weapon to silence the voice of those who dared to speak out. The ritualistic, brutal, and public murders that took place with a noose were done specifically to terrorize the African American community. The threat of lynching was used to prevent people from voting, marching, protesting, getting an education, and even starting a business. The noose as a sign of intimidation dates back to 1896 as a means of voter suppression. Today, we see the noose used to intimidate educational and law enforcement officers, community leaders and now our children.

With the passage of this resolution, our country and this Chamber will say, in no unclear terms, that we will not be intimidated and we will not allow our children to be intimidated. I applaud this important resolution for the message it sends to the country and the world, that we do not tolerate hatred and bigotry against anyone.
Let me remind those who regard the hanging of a noose from a tree in Jena, Louisiana, or anywhere else in this country as a harmless act: it is not harmless and it is not just a juvenile prank. It is a frightening and symbolic play for power, as was captured so poignantly by Billie Holiday in her unforgettable rendition of South Louisiana.

Southern trees bear strange fruit.
Blood on the leaves and blood at the root.
Black bodies swinging in the southern breeze.
Strange fruit hanging from the poplar trees.

While the use of this racist tool continues, we must not forget that over 4,700 people were lynched between 1882 and 1959 in a campaign of terror led by the Ku Klux Klan. Nor should we forget that more people died at the hands of lynching mobs than died in the attack on Pearl Harbor (2,433) and died during Hurricane Katrina (1,836) combined.

Mr. Speaker, we must act now to stop the use of this racist and evil symbol of America’s bitter past and to bring the tools of justice to me in supporting this important legislation.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. CONYERS) that the House suspend the rules and agree to the resolution, H. Res. 926.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds being in the affirmative) the rules were suspended and the resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENOCIDE ACCOUNTABILITY ACT OF 2007
Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the Senate bill (S. 888) to amend section 1091 of title 18, United States Code, to allow the prosecution of genocide in appropriate circumstances.

Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members have 5 legislative days to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material on the bill under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the request to the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker and members of the committee, the United Nations approved the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide in 1948. It was in response to Nazi Germany’s systematic murder. The Convention, to which the United States is a signatory, established genocide as an international crime which signatory nations undertook to prevent and punish. It’s the duty that we address in the Genocide Accountability Act before us at this moment.

We must remember that genocide affects all humanity, not just the direct victims, and not just the perpetrators, but all those who stand by and by their inaction allow those horrible acts to take place. These are the lessons of the Holocaust, of Cambodia, of Bosnia and, more recently, of Rwanda. In Rwanda, we shrugged our shoulders and waited until 800,000 people were killed before we were willing to call that atrocity by its rightful name, genocide.

Sadly, even after Rwanda, the world has mostly stood by while yet another genocide has unfolded before our eyes. The genocide in Darfur has thus far claimed 200,000 lives, and maybe going up to as many as 400,000 lives. Two and a half million people have been displaced as a result of the conflict in Darfur. Both President Bush and Congress have correctly described the situation in Darfur.

As history repeats itself in Darfur, it seems that we have to learn to say the right things about these atrocities, but too often we cannot seem to muster the consensus and strength of will in the United States and the international community to make our deeds match our words. Along with an increased United Nations peacekeeping force, and a long-term political agreement among its many factions, we need to expand every avenue available to stop this massacre, to bring justice, to deter and prevent similar ones in the future.

The Genocide Accountability Act is an effort to ensure that our United States laws provide adequate authority to prosecute acts of genocide. We should not have a situation where perpetrators of genocide are allowed to enter the United States and use this country as a safe haven from prosecution. What an untenable thought.

Under current law, genocide is only a crime if it’s committed within the United States or by a United States national outside of the United States. In contrast, the laws of torture, material support for terrorism, terrorism financing, hostage taking, and many other Federal crimes allow for extraterritorial jurisdiction for crimes committed outside the United States by non-United States nationals.

So there’s a gap in the law. This has led to real-life consequences. I understand that the Justice Department has identified individuals who have participated in the Rwandan and the Bosnian genocides and who have entered the United States under false pretenses. Under current law, these individuals can be deported but they can’t be arrested or prosecuted for committing genocide.

And so we bring to you on the floor today a measure to allow us to do more than send them off to another country, not knowing whether they will ever be prosecuted. This measure will allow us to bring them to justice. Amending our laws to allow for vigorous prosecution of genocide is a first, a small, but very, very important step toward ending the impunity under which those who commit genocide currently operate.

I am so proud of my colleagues on the Judiciary Committee who have worked with us on this: LAMAR SMITH; the floor manager for the Republicans, Mr. FORBES; and many others. We must remember that it cannot be the last step in this measure. This is only the first step, but all those who stand by and by the perpetrators of genocide are allowed to enter the United States and use this country as a safe haven from prosecution, we must continue to develop the humble legislative beginning that we have begun today.

I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of S. 888, the Genocide Accountability Act of 2007. I want to commend Chairman CONyers and Representatives Berman and Pence, the sponsors of the House version of this legislation, H.R. 2489, for their dedication and commitment to this issue.

Perpetrators of genocide have committed some of the most heinous crimes ever carried out. Genocide is a crime not only against specific victims targeted for extermination, but it is also a crime against humanity. History is replete with horrible images of human suffering, where victims targeted were based on their human characteristics. We need to have technological advances used for carrying out heinous acts of genocide.

The idea that individuals, hundreds, thousands, and sometimes hundreds of
In 1948, the United States was the first nation to sign the Genocide Convention. Twenty years ago, with the Proxmire Act, we added to our criminal code provisions to fulfill the dual obligations of that Convention, to prevent and to punish genocide. S. 886 will strengthen all of U.S. laws to prosecute any individuals found in our country who have taken part in acts of genocide, in Darfur or anywhere else.

Mr. Speaker, the term "genocide" was first proposed by Ralph Lemkin, a man of Polish-Jewish descent. In 1941 he came to the United States, and on the day of his arrival he gave a speech explaining to an American audience the international responsibility to respond to genocide. I'll paraphrase what he said: If you learned that a mass of women, children and old people was being murdered 10 miles from here, wouldn't you have asked their aid? Why then, if the distance were 3,000 miles instead of 100, would you restrain this decision of your heart?

By passing this bill today, we are taking Lemkin's words to heart. We will work to punish and prevent the crime of genocide not just in our own country, but wherever it occurs around the world.

I strongly urge my colleagues to support this legislation.

The obligations of the United States under the Genocide Convention are in the criminal code in title 18 beginning at section 1091. Genocide is defined as having the specific intent to destroy, in whole or in part, a national, ethnic, racial or religious group. The code offers severe punishment for anyone who commits genocide within the United States. The law also makes it a Federal crime for a U.S. national to commit genocide anywhere in the world. Fortunately, there has not been a need to use the law against anyone now covered by it. However, by only covering genocide if it is committed in this country or committed by a U.S. national, we leave a gap which allows non-U.S. persons who commit genocide elsewhere to come to this country with impunity under our laws.

To this end, the Senator from Illinois, Senator DURBIN, and the gentleman from California (Mr. Berman) introduced identical legislation designed to amend title 18 of the United States Code to expand the jurisdiction of genocide over the following categories of people who have committed genocide outside of the United States: (1) an alien lawfully admitted for permanent residence; (2) a stateless person whose habitual residence is in the United States or who is physically present in the United States. Similar to the legislation before us, many other Federal laws, including

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, the chairman of the Crime Subcommittee has played an enormously important role in the measure before us, and I am pleased to recognize Chairman Boney Scott for 3 minutes.

Mr. SCOTT of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I thank the chairman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, the slaughtering of individuals simply because they are a member of a certain ethnic or racial group has occurred throughout history, and, regrettably, continues today. As we witnessed, as many as 800,000 of the Tutsi minority, men, women and children were murdered in Rwanda. Mass violence has occurred against civilians in Bosnia, where up to 8,000 Muslim men and boys were systematically executed.

I strongly urge my colleagues to support this legislation.

Mr. FORBES. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. Shays).

Mr. Shays. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of S. 886, the Genocide Accountability Act of 2007. I cosponsored the House version of this legislation because I totally agree, U.S. law should not provide safe haven to those who are committing genocide.

As a result of this bill, prosecutors will be able to target individuals living lawfully in the U.S. who have committed genocide or aided those who have committed these crimes against humanity. I have tremendous respect for all those who have worked to raise awareness of this important issue. Student groups and faith-based organizations, especially from the African American, Jewish and Armenian communities, have done a terrific job of educating their fellow citizens and lawmakers about the crisis and the need to respond to genocide.

The world collectively agreed to "never again" allow genocide after the Holocaust and again after the mass murders in Cambodia and Rwanda, and again in Bosnia. Tragically, genocide is again taking place, and the United States must take all reasonable steps to end the killing and ensure the perpetrators of these crimes are brought to justice.

The United States has made a tremendous commitment to the people of Darfur in the form of humanitarian aid and is working hard on diplomatic efforts to end the genocide. But more must be done. We need to stop the killings.

Mr. Speaker, U.S. law only makes genocide a crime if it is committed by a U.S. citizen or within the United States. According to the Justice Department, there are individuals who participated in the Rwandan and Bosnian genocide who remain in the United States today that it will be able to prosecute with this legislation.

We will also ensure those who are committing genocide in Sudan today will not be able to look to the United States as their safe haven in the future.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, the ranking member of the Committee on Judiciary on the Democratic side, Mr. HOWARD BERMAN.

Mr. Berman. Mr. Speaker, the House Judiciary Committee has reported an identical House companion to S. 886. That bill is H.R. 2489, and the Judiciary Committee’s report for the House bill, Report No. 110-468, should be considered as part of the legislative history on S. 886, as reflecting the intent of the House.

Mr. Speaker, the first legal application of the term genocide came during the Nuremberg trials in 1945. Before then, there wasn’t a word in our language to adequately express the nature of this crime, and I think it’s wonderful that the word genocide has joined our language to adequately express the brutish nature of this evil. The purpose of the Genocide Accountability Act is to ensure that no perpetrator of genocide is able to use the United States as a safe haven for prosecution. After the Holocaust, the Genocide Convention was the embodiment of the world’s pledge, the promise of “never again.” And yet this promise has proven to be one of the world’s most unfulfilled.

Not very long ago, genocide was the scourge of Bosnia, and before that, Rwanda. Two years ago, this body passed a resolution acknowledging that the devastation and murderous violence occurring in the Darfur region of Sudan was genocide. Unfortunately, the genocide in Darfur remains an ongoing crime today. The struggle to prevent and punish genocide has been, and unfortunately will be, winding and long.

The bill we are considering today acknowledges that in some cases the perpetrators of this evil have ended up not just on the doorstep of the United States, but living inside our house. Current law allows us to deport them, but procedural limitations in our laws can keep us from delivering justice for their crimes.

Because current U.S. law lacks an extraterritorial jurisdiction clause for genocide, procedurally the Department of Justice is limited in its ability to charge an individual who is not a U.S. national for involvement in a genocide committed outside the United States, even if the victims include American citizens.
Therefore, the Department of Justice is only a crime if it is committed within the United States.

Currently under U.S. law, genocide is countably Act is straightforward. It provides America with a real and powerful tool to combat genocide around the world. The United States should have the ability to prosecute those who find safe haven in the United States for their acts of genocide.

The Genocide Accountability Act would end this impunity gap in the genocide law. Therefore, I urge my colleagues to adopt this important legislation.

Mr. FORBES. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. PENCE).

(Mr. PENCE asked and was given permission to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. PENCE. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, here in Washington, D.C., down the street from this very building is the United States Holocaust Memorial Museum, a museum that serves as a living memorial to the Holocaust and which challenges its visitors and the world in the words written in its charter to: "Confront hatred, prevent genocide, promote human dignity, and strengthen democracy." All of us serving in Congress take the challenge of those words to heart.

We have the unique ability in this institution to promulgate laws and policies that protect life, preserve liberty and confront genocide. Today, with the passage of the Genocide Accountability Act, we have an opportunity to alter the circumstances under which certain parties may be charged under the genocide statute. Our intent is to make a procedural alteration to the current law and leave everything else in the statute untouched.

In determining whether or not a law presents a violation of the ex post facto clause of the Constitution, courts have generally considered whether the new law: one, places the defendant at a substantial disadvantage compared to the law as it stood when he committed the crime of which he has been convicted; secondly, changes the definition of the crime; or three, increases the maximum penalty for it. The Genocide Accountability Act doesn’t alter in any way either the elements or the punishment for the crime of genocide.

The underlying notion here is that the defendant should be aware that his actions constituted a crime. I think it would be very difficult for anyone to argue that the world is not on notice that we consider and have considered genocide a crime. The United States has recognized genocide as a crime for nearly 60 years as a signatory of the Genocide Convention.

Neither do we make any change to a law that would deprive one charged with the crime of any defense that is now available under the law. It is important to add that the Supreme Court has found a key exception to the ex post facto rule where changes to a law are procedural in nature.

In numerous decisions, the court has held that where a law involves changes in the procedures by which a criminal case is adjudicated as opposed to changes in the substantive laws of the United States, and I quote the phrase directly, that does not deprive a defendant of substantial legal protections, then it is constitutional.

In response, I would say that the genocide in Darfur is an ongoing crime. The House recognized it as such over 2 years ago, and there is no question that this crime continues today. We believe that ex post facto clearly would not apply in this situation.

Mr. PENCE, I thank the gentleman for clarifying that.

Lastly, going back to that specific hypothesis from the witness from the Department of Justice, if this new law were used to prosecute a perpetrator of past genocide, the assumption has it may constitute an ex post facto violation of the Constitution. Do you agree with that hypothesis?

Mr. BERMAN. The gentleman raises an important issue, and I do not agree with that hypothesis. I think the witness from the Department of Justice was offering a spontaneous and personal opinion, which he was careful to label as such, and not an official interpretation by the Department.

We crafted this legislation to make it clear to the world that America will not tolerate genocide or the perpetrators of genocide, and that we will do all we can to hold them accountable who perform these heinous acts.

As Elie Wiesel stated, “Once you bring life into the world, you must protect it. We must protect it by changing the world.”

Mr. Speaker, the Genocide Accountability Act changes the world today in a very small but a profound way, in my judgment. It strengthens the hand of the most powerful free Nation on Earth in fighting and prosecuting those who would commit the crimes of genocide. It is important and necessary, and I encourage my colleagues in the House to support this legislation today so it can be sent to the President for signature.

I want to commend the chairman of the Crime Subcommittee and again the gentleman from California (Mr. Berman) for his extraordinary leadership on this important and historic measure.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to engage in a colloquy on an issue affecting this legislation with the gentleman from California, Mr. Berman.

Our legislation, H.R. 2489, and S. 888 are identical bills, as you know. But during the Crime Subcommittee hearing earlier this year, the Department of Justice theorized that the changes proposed by this bill might constitute a violation of the ex post facto clauses of article I of the Constitution in some cases. Let me ask you, if this legislation becomes law, Mr. Berman, would we be able to use it to prosecute a non-U.S. national taking part in the genocide in Darfur today?

Mr. Berman. I thank the gentleman for his question and yielding to me and appreciate his comments and partnership on this bill.
It is our conclusion that this bill falls within that exception and makes only procedural changes to the law. So it was our intent that this law be used to prosecute perpetrators of genocide who are on notice that their acts constitute a crime wherever it was committed.

Mr. PENCE. I thank the gentleman for his response. I thank him again for his leadership on this issue, to the ranking member Mr. FORBES for his leadership today, and to the chairman and ranking member of the full committee. It is important legislation, and I urge all of my colleagues to join us in a strong bipartisan vote against genocide, in favor of the Genocide Accountability Act. It is time we gave the force of American law here at home behind our commitment to end genocide in the world.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased now to recognize a distinguished member of Judiciary, STEVE COHEN of Tennessee, for such time as he may consume.

Mr. COHEN. Thank you, Mr. Chairman, and Mr. Berman for bringing this legislation.

It is obvious we need such a bill, for America should never be a haven for people who commit crimes against mankind. And that is what genocide is, a crime against mankind. It is ironic that God’s rightest creature, human beings, are the only species that created the term genocide. Animals attack each other out of need for food or for other reasons, but not to destroy and kill an entire other group of animals. Only man, with his ability to think, can create the most inhuman-like crime against mankind, which is the attempt to kill others because of ethnic differences. That is an irony and a shame. And the fact is that we should never be a country that does anything but try to make this world a better place and not find America a haven when they escape from the area, whether it be Darfur or Rwanda or any other place where genocide has been committed.

As a Jewish person, I have known about genocide because we know about the Holocaust and Jewish people have had relatives and possible would-be relatives if our ancestors had not emigrated to this country who would have been victims of this Holocaust or who were killed by the Nazis. I have been to the Holocaust Museum or Yad Vashem in Jerusalem, or other places or concentration camps and learned.

I would submit that this bill, as the previous bill about nooses, should make a strong statement from this Congress, Mr. Speaker; but to the American people and the educators of this country that what we need in this country is more education about tolerance, more education about the horrors that we have had in the past in history. Because if you don’t learn from history, you will repeat it again. And here we are, almost 2008, talking about genocide and nooses and oppressive tactics used by groups to intimidate religious and ethnic minorities and people of different backgrounds.

I commend the authors for bringing the bill, and it is a bipartisan bill and that is what we need, but there are so many other aspects that we need to look into.

Elie Wiesel, who was cited just recently by a Member on the other side, said that people who hate, hate everyone. People who hate Jews hate blacks, hate Hispanics, hate Haitians.

We have had hate crimes come up in this Congress that have passed and hopefully we will have a hate crime that passes, because hate in any form, whether it is racial, religious, or sexual orientation is just that, it is hate, and it is un-American and it is something unfortunately unique to humankind that should be stamped out and abolished in this country, and this Congress should not allow it, countenance it, or in any way condone it.

And I yield the chairman and Mr. Berman for their leadership and the other people who have worked on this bill, Mr. FORBES and others, and we should work together in a bipartisan fashion to make this country what it is supposed to be, that an area where we can work together and hopefully one day have the Age of Aquarius and a place where we don’t have these problems that we have had in the past.

Mr. FORBES. Mr. Speaker, at this time, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Michigan, Congressman EHLERS.

Mr. EHLERS. I thank the gentleman for yielding. I feel very strongly about this issue, and I want to echo the words of the previous speaker, the gentleman from Tennessee who, of course, because of his background, has a deep historical interest and feeling about genocide.

I have been appalled at the lack of advancement of the nations in dealing with the current genocide in Darfur. There is no reason in the world that our Nation, coupled with the other nations, could not have stopped this earlier. And because of the niceties of diplomatic relations worldwide, we have not done so. I believe that is a mistake, and I feel very strongly about this. Genocide should not occur. As the gentleman before me commented, that we are the only creatures who deliberately kill large numbers of our own kind. And it is not new. It started with Cain and Abel, the killing of a brother.

We must pursue genocide worldwide. We must insist that it not take place. And we must punish those who commit genocide. There is no room on God’s good Earth that should permit genocide. And we, along with the other nations, have the power to stop it and we should do so.

So I rise with great gratitude to the sponsors. Particularly the present bill is one small step forward in what we really have to do, and that is to totally and completely outlaw genocide worldwide and act expeditiously to stop it wherever it occurs.

Mr. FORBES. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume. As the gentleman from Indiana said, this is a small step but a very profound step. You have here, the voice, in almost unanimous agreement supporting this bill. I hope that would be the pleasure of the House.

I would like to yield the balance of my time to the chairman of the committee, the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. CONYERS).

Mr. CONYERS. I thank the gentleman, Mr. Speaker.

I want to close by observing that the Judiciary Committee has handled four measures on the floor this afternoon, and I have enjoyed the full, unstinting cooperation of the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. FORBES). I want to thank him very much for it. And I appreciate the kinds of issues that we have handled here on this House of Representatives. They are issues of local and global import that I think reflect in a very complimentary sense upon the things that can be accomplished in the Congress when we put our best efforts and bring our most collective spirits to the table. And so I thank all of the speakers on both sides of the aisle.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong support of S. 888, the Genocide Accountability Act of 2007, introduced by Senator Durbin. I would like to thank my colleague Representative Berman for introducing this resolution in the House, where I am proud to join over 10 of my colleagues as a co-sponsor of this important legislation.

May I also take this opportunity to thank Chairman Conyers for his leadership in guiding this legislation through the Judiciary Committee.

Mr. Speaker, it is a tragedy that the 20th century, which excelled in technological innovation and great accomplishments in arts and literature, could also be remembered for events symbolizing man’s inhumanity to man. Genocide in Rwanda, the former Yugoslavia, Cambodia, Germany, and the Ottoman Empire, to cite a few examples, showed us the monstrous potential of totalitarian regimes determined to annihilate entire ethnic, racial and religious groups.

Sadly, though the 20th century has been called “the Age of Genocide” by at least one prominent scholar, the crime has already been seen in the new 21st century, with the depravity in Darfur. For over 5 months now, I have been to Darfur, where, together with two of my colleagues, I had the tragic opportunity to see the plight of the people of Darfur, victims of the systematic annihilation attempt supported by the Government of Sudan.

Not since the Rwandan genocide of 1994 has the world seen such a systematic campaign of displacement, starvation, rape, mass murder, and terror as we are witnessing in Darfur for the last 3 years. At least 400,000 people have been killed in Darfur, more than 2 million innocent civilians have been forced to flee their homes and now live in displaced-persons camps in Sudan or in refugee camps in neighboring Chad; and more than 3.5 million ever committed if the alleged perpetrator is in their territory and any additional requirements are satisfied. This legislation will be a further step toward bringing the United States into line with its international obligations, and toward ensuring that no perpetrator of genocide living on U.S. soil can go unpunished.

I strongly urge my colleagues to join me in supporting this important legislation.

Mr. CONYERS. I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. CONYERS) that the House suspend the rules and pass the Senate bill, S. 888.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds being in the affirmative) the rules were suspended and the Senate bill was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

U.S. CAPITOL POLICE AND LIBRARY OF CONGRESS POLICE MERGER IMPLEMENTATION ACT OF 2007

Mr. BRADY of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 3690) to provide for the transfer of the Library of Congress police to the United States Capitol Police, and for other purposes, as amended.

SAVE OUR CIVIL LIBRARY OF CONGRESS POLICE

Mr. CONYERS. I thank the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. BRADY) for his remarks.

I would like to thank my colleagues Mr. BERMAN and Mr. PROXMIER for their assistance in drafting this legislation.

In a time when Congress enacted legislation to bring U.S. law into conformity with the Genocide Convention. The "Proxmire Act" (The Genocide Convention Implementation Act of 1987) is the key U.S. law implementing the Genocide Convention. When read together with other provisions of the federal criminal code concerning conspiracy and complicity, the Proxmire Act addresses the explicit obligation set forth in Article VI of the Genocide Convention concerning prosecution of genocide and related criminal acts in courts of the United States. In addition, the Proxmire Act makes it a federal crime for a U.S. national to commit genocide anywhere.

The proliferation of civil wars accompanied by ethnic cleansing and outright genocide which characterized the end of the 20th century, from Bosnia and Herzegovina to the civil war in Somalia and Liberia, produced a number of perpetrators of genocidal acts who later ended up on American shores. This revealed a longstanding in our current laws, under which the United States cannot indict someone for genocide anywhere in the world, even when the victim is an American citizen, unless the perpetrator is a U.S. national.

In contrast, laws on torture, terrorism financing, hostage taking, and many other federal crimes allow for extraterritorial jurisdiction for crimes committed outside the United States by non-U.S. nationals. In light of this legal gap in our obligations to prosecute perpetrators of genocide, I commend my colleagues Mr. BERMAN and Mr. PENCE for introducing the Genocide Accountability Act of 1999 in May of 2001.

Mr. Speaker, this legislation would close a legal loophole that prevents the U.S. Justice Department from prosecuting people in our country who have committed genocide. The bill specifically amends Title 18 to establish federal criminal jurisdiction over the crime of genocide wherever the crime is committed. This jurisdiction should be exercised when the alleged offender is present in the United States and he or she will not be vigorously and fairly prosecuted by another court with appropriate jurisdiction.

Many countries have adopted or enforced legislation establishing jurisdiction over certain international crimes, including genocide, where

(2) the term “Library Police civilian employee” means an employee of the Library of Congress Office of Security and Emergency Preparedness who provides direct administrative support to, and is supervised by, the Library of Congress Police, but shall not include an employee of the Library of Congress who performs emergency preparedness or collections control and preservation functions; and

(4) the term “transition period” means the period the first day of which is the date of the enactment of this Act and the final day of which is September 30, 2009.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. BRADY) and the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. EHLERS) will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. BRADY of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks on the bill now under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. BRADY of Pennsylvania. I yield myself such time as I may consume.
“seamless security” on Capitol Hill. The legislation called for the two agencies to develop a merger plan for congressional approval.

Since 2003, many people in both agencies devoted countless hours to this task. After 4 years of deliberations, the merger has not yet been implemented. This is unfortunate. Much valuable time has been lost.

It’s time to get on with it. If done carefully and well, this merger will make Capitol Hill safer for the millions who visit every year and the thousands privileged to work here every day.

Briefly, H.R. 3690 will implement the merger plan written by the Library and the Capitol Police and jointly recommended to our committee and our Senate counterpart. Under their plan, all Library Police employees will move to the Capitol Police by September 30, 2009.

Library officers who meet age and service requirements and who complete Capitol Police training will continue as officers. Library officers who do not meet those requirements will be offered Capitol Police civilian jobs.

This is important: under this plan, nobody will lose their job or suffer a reduction in pay, rank, leave, or other benefits. Officers now represented by the Library’s Fraternal Order of Police will transfer to the Capitol Police’s FOP who will bargain with management over seniority and other labor matters that may arise during the merger.

The plan shifts jurisdiction over Library buildings in Washington to the Capitol Police. The Librarian will retain responsibility for design of security systems and will issue regulations to develop a merger plan for congressional consideration.

Mr. Speaker, the committee believes this is a sound plan. I commend everyone involved in both agencies, especially for ensuring that nobody loses a job or pay. It has been my pleasure working with the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. EHlers) who spent much time on this matter while chairman of the committee during the last Congress. We would not be here today without his efforts. I urge an “aye” vote.

I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. EHlers. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Pennsylvania for his kind words and particularly for his leadership on this issue and finally bringing it to fruition. As he said, it has taken far too long. But now it is here and we are doing it right.

While bringing together two law enforcement bodies may seem like an easy proposition, whenever you have two entities with existing cultures, established protocols, and disparate missions, it is important to conduct a merger of these two groups thoughtfully with due diligence. This, we have attempted to do.

While the Library of Congress Police and the U.S. Capitol Police both serve and protect the Congress and its assets, they do so in very different capacities. The Library’s mission is primarily charged with securing the Capitol buildings. Members of Congress, staff and visitors and providing an emergency planning and response function in the event of a terrorist attack or other unplanned activity.

The U.S. Capitol Police is primarily focused on the safety of Congress and its employees and the security of the Capitol Complex.

Mr. Speaker, I also request that you include our exchange of letters between the Oversight Committee and the Senate counterpart. Under their plan, the Library and the Capitol Police with a means to communicate with the Congress on the progress of the merger and impart any guidance or resources that they require to achieve long-term success. I urge our colleagues to join me in supporting this bill which will help ensure that the Library’s treasures are protected from harm and preserved for generations to come.

I want to once again thank Chairman BRADY and the other members of the committee for their hard work on this very serious and difficult legislation. It was easy, but it wasn’t, and I’m pleased that we finally have achieved this good result.

I also want to thank Chief Morris of the U.S. Capitol Police who has handled this very well and gone through some very delicate negotiations. In addition, the administration of the Library has been very helpful in trying to reach agreement, and they, of course, have very legitimate concerns about their needs to protect their collection, and they, one and all, have been very helpful in working with us.

Madam Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. BRADY of Pennsylvania, Madam Speaker, for the RECORD, I include the following exchange of letters between the Committee on Oversight and Government Reform and the Committee on House Administration concerning H.R. 3690:

Hon. ROBERT A. BRADY
Chairman, Committee on House Administration, Washington, DC.

Dear Chairman Brady: I am writing to confirm our mutual understanding with respect to the consideration of H.R. 3690, the U.S. Capitol Police and Library of Congress Police Merger Implementation Act of 2007.

You are correct that both organizations will continue to maintain responsibility for design of security systems and will issue regulations to develop a merger plan for congressional consideration.

The Oversight Committee appreciates your effort to consult regarding those provisions of H.R. 3690 that fall within the Oversight Committee’s jurisdiction.

More specifically, those sections involving the federal workforce.

In the interest of expediting consideration of H.R. 3690, the Oversight Committee will not separately consider this bill. The Oversight Committee does so, however, with the understanding that this does not prejudice the Oversight Committee’s jurisdictional interests and prerogatives regarding this bill or similar legislation.

I respectfully request your support for the appointment of outside conferees from both Committees should a similar bill be considered in conference with the Senate.

I also request that you include our exchange of letters on this matter in the Congressional Record during consideration of this legislation on the House floor.

Thank you for your attention to these matters.

Sincerely,
HENRY A. WAXMAN
Chairman.
Mr. BRADY of Pennsylvania. Madam Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days to revise and extend their remarks on this joint resolution and to include an additional section.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. BRADY of Pennsylvania. Madam Speaker, I yield myself as much time as I may consume.

This joint resolution would reappoint Patricia Stonesifer to a new 6-year term as a citizen regent of the Smithsonian Institute. Her current term will expire December 22. Ms. Stonesifer is the chief executive officer of the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation, a renowned philanthropic institution based in Seattle, Washington. She was previously a senior vice president at Microsoft.

On the Smithsonian Board of Regents, Stonesifer is currently Chair of the Executive Committee, the institution’s most important internal panel which acts on behalf of the board between its meetings. She also chairs the Compensation and Human Resources Committee.

Ms. Stonesifer previously chaired the Governance Committee which guided the board’s most significant action this year, preparing its comprehensive report last June. In response to the broad range of issues emerging from the resignation of former Secretary Lawrence Small. Proper implementation of this report will be critical to the effective reform and modernization of the Smithsonian.

The House Administration Committee, as the House panel with exclusive jurisdiction over Smithsonian governance matters, will exercise vigorous oversight to ensure that the board approaches additional significant changes.

As the Smithsonian Board of Regents undertakes the urgent task of reinventing itself as a full-time management and policymaking body, Ms. Stonesifer’s expertise and willingness to communicate with Congress will continue to be a valuable asset. Members of the House Administration Committee held a briefing with her 3 weeks ago, were impressed by her continued interest and commitment to the task ahead, and agreed to move this joint resolution expeditiously.

As Chair of the Smithsonian’s Governance Committee, Ms. Stonesifer led the board’s efforts to implement best practices in the nonprofit sector, and helped develop and implement the recommendations from the independent review committee designed to strengthen the board’s oversight of the institution and reform its operations. In June, the board formally adopted the Governance Committee’s 25 recommendations, and they are on target for completion by early 2008.

She has performed incredibly well in all of these areas, and the problems that we have had at the Smithsonian are well underway to conclusion simply due to the work of Ms. Stonesifer. The resolution includes a statement of compensation, compliance with the Freedom of Information Act, and restructuring senior management to create a stronger reporting relationship with the board. Once implemented, these strengthened government practices will be an important step towards restoring faith in the Smithsonian and its management structure, and they demonstrate the positive impact of Ms. Stonesifer’s leadership in this area.

After meeting once again with Ms. Stonesifer, I am confident that her unique blend of business and philanthropic experience will continue to be a most valuable factor on the board mending Ms. Stonesifer for her initial appointment. I was very impressed with her qualifications at that time. She has not disappointed us. She has done very well.

In her role as chief executive officer of the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation, Ms. Stonesifer leads the foundation in their mission to help all peoples of the world lead healthy, productive lives. At the end of last year, under the leadership of Ms. Stonesifer, the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation had an endowment of approximately $33 billion, and remains one of the largest charitable foundations in the world.

In developing countries, the foundation focuses on improving people’s health and giving them the chance to lift themselves out of hunger and extreme poverty. In the United States, it seeks to ensure that all people, especially those with the fewest resources, have access to the opportunities they need to succeed in school and life. For all chairs of the Board of Regents and the Gates Foundation program groups, Patty Stonesifer sets strategic priorities, monitors results and facilitates relationships with key partners.

Before helping Bill and Melinda Gates launch the Gates Learning Foundation in 1997, Ms. Stonesifer was a senior vice president at Microsoft, where she was responsible for an $800 million business activity focused on interactive entertainment, news, information and service. She is active in a number of other charitable endeavors, and has served as a member of the U.S. delegation to the United Nations General Assembly Special Session on AIDS.

As Chair of the Smithsonian’s Governance Committee, Ms. Stonesifer led the board’s efforts to implement best practices in the nonprofit sector, and helped develop and implement the recommendations from the independent review committee designed to strengthen the board’s oversight of the institution and reform its operations. In June, the board formally adopted the Governance Committee’s 25 recommendations, and they are on target for completion by early 2008.

She has performed incredibly well in all of these areas, and the problems that we have had at the Smithsonian are well underway to conclusion simply due to the work of Ms. Stonesifer. The resolution includes a statement of compensation, compliance with the Freedom of Information Act, and restructuring senior management to create a stronger reporting relationship with the board. Once implemented, these strengthened government practices will be an important step towards restoring faith in the Smithsonian and its management structure, and they demonstrate the positive impact of Ms. Stonesifer’s leadership in this area.

After meeting once again with Ms. Stonesifer, I am confident that her unique blend of business and philanthropic experience will continue to be a most valuable factor on the board.
that is charged with overseeing the Nation’s attic, our fond description for the Smithsonian. I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting a very capable person, Patty Stonesifer, for reappointment to the Smithsonian’s Board of Regents.

Madam Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. BRADY of Pennsylvania. Madam Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question was taken; and (two-thirds being in the affirmative) the rules were suspended and the Senate joint resolution was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

RECOGNIZING THE 100TH ANNIVERSARY YEAR OF THE FOUNDING OF THE PORT OF LOS ANGELES

Ms. RICHARDSON. Madam Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and agree to the resolution (H. Res. 822) recognizing the 100th anniversary year of the founding of the Port of Angeles, as amended.

The Clerk read the title of the resolution.

The text of the resolution is as follows:

H. Res. 822

Whereas on December 9, 1907, the Los Angeles City Council approved City Ordinance No. 15621, creating the Board of Harbor Commissioners and officially founding the Port of Los Angeles;

Whereas the Port of Los Angeles’ earliest history was recorded by Portuguese explorer Juan Rodriguez Cabrillo who named this natural harbor “Bahia de los Fumos” or “Bay of Smoke” in 1542, when he noted that the bay “is an excellent harbor and the country is good with many plains and groves of trees”;

Whereas in the 1850s, a spirited entrepreneur named Phineas Banning began the first of a lifetime of ventures that would eventually earn him distinction as the “Father of Los Angeles Harbor” by leading the evolution of the harbor from a trading center for fur and hides to a hub for more diverse commerce, largely through a freight and passenger business that grew into a shipping firm with 15 stagecoaches and 50 wagons serving five western States;

Whereas the Los Angeles and San Pedro Railroad began surfacing in this late 1800s until 1897, when a five-man board of engineers, chaired by Rear Admiral John C. Walker, settled the great free-harbor fight by recommending continued port development in San Pedro Bay, resulting in additional improvements to the harbor including the first 8,500-foot section of the Federal breakwater that was completed in 1911, widening and dredging of the Main Channel to accommodate the largest vessels of that era, and the creation of the Port of Los Angeles Railroad of its first major wharf in San Pedro, allowing railcars to efficiently load and unload goods simultaneously;

Whereas Walker, who was involved in World War II on a massive scale, with every vessel building operation assisting in the construction, conversion, and repair of vessels for the war effort that ultimately became, and is today, the Port of Los Angeles’ prime economic activity, with California Shipbuilding Corp., Bethlehem Shipbuilding Corp., Consolidated Steel Corp., Todd Shipyards, and other enterprises collectively employing more than 90,000 workers;

Whereas in August 1968, the HAWAIIAN MERCHANT delivered its first shipment of 20 cargo containers to the Port of Los Angeles, marking the beginning of the containerized cargo revolution in California;

Whereas the Port was a principal partner of the $2,500,000,000 Alameda Corridor project which opened in April 2002 as a 20-mile rail expressway that reliably and efficiently connects the Port to America’s transcontinental rail system, which reduces the Port’s involvement in developing robust regional transportation infrastructure solutions by working in partnership with local, regional, and state agencies to improve goods movement systems;

Whereas the Port’s 2004 completion of the nearly 500-acre Pier 400 container complex is the largest single-user container terminal in the world has been acclaimed as an engineering marvel and model of operational efficiency;

Whereas the Port of Los Angeles has long recognized its responsibility for infrastructure and operational improvements that are supportive of sustainable growth and compatible with environmental stewardship, the most recent example being a historic November 2006 action by the Boards of Harbor Commissioners of Los Angeles and Long Beach in approving an aggressive plan to reduce air pollution by nearly 50 percent in 5 years, making the San Pedro Bay Ports Clean Air Action Plan the first of its kind to address all port-related emission sources to significantly reduce health risks posed by regional air pollution from port-related operations;

Whereas the Port of Los Angeles is located in San Pedro, California, and is part of the Southern California port complex which handles more than 50 percent of all goods arriving in the United States, impacting over 1,000,000 jobs nationwide;

Whereas as a premier international gateway, the Port is involved in the leading container handling port in the United States, with more than 8,500,000 TEUs’ (twenty-foot equivalent units) recorded in 2006, thus maintaining its status as the largest United States container port for the seventh consecutive year;

Whereas the Port of Los Angeles as part of the San Pedro Bay Port Complex has grown 246 percent over the past 11 years, tripling its trade-related jobs, which generated $256,000,000,000 in economic activity, and producing 28,000,000,000 in tax revenue, and is expected to triple again the amount of cargo handled by 2030;

Whereas in 2007, under the leadership of Los Angeles Mayor Antonio Villaraigosa, President of the Port of Los Angeles, Los Angeles Port Commissioner and Executive Director Geraldine Knatz, the Port is celebrating its Centennial, commemorating the great strides made over two centuries of service as an international trade hub and maritime industry leader; and

Whereas from its tradition of handling fishing, lumber, and hides at the turn of the century to today’s reputation for expeditiously moving a diverse, unprecedented amount of cargo mix, the Port of Los Angeles now looks toward its next 100 years with a legacy as an undisputed international leader in setting global standards for industry-leading efficiency, environmental stewardship, and sustainable growth: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the House of Representatives:

(1) recognizes the 100th anniversary year of the founding of the Port of Los Angeles, which is the Nation’s largest container port;

(2) congratulates the Port of Los Angeles for its achievements as a leader throughout its history in implementing modern and innovative transportation and goods movement systems that are compatible with responsible environmental stewardship; and

(3) wishes the Port of Los Angeles continued success during its next 100 years as it strives to remain the Nation’s largest and most successful conveyor of the Nation’s and the world’s commerce.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentlewoman from California (Ms. Speier) and the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. LaTourette) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentlewoman from California.

Ms. RICHARDSON. Madam Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Ms. RICHARDSON. Madam Speaker, I am proud to honor the City of Los Angeles today with the passage of House Resolution 822, which recognizes the port’s 100th anniversary. I was pleased to undertake this effort with my colleague from the Republican side of the aisle, Representative Dana Rohrabacher.

The Port of Los Angeles enjoys a meaningful history. Madam Speaker, starting in the mid-19th century as a trading center for furs and hides served by stagecoaches and wagons and transforming over time into a distinct today as the Nation’s largest container port.

In 1911, Rear Admiral John C. Walker helped push for greater development in the San Pedro Bay region, which resulted in the first Federal breakwater. In World War II, the Port of Los Angeles played a large role in our Nation’s ability to respond to the shipbuilding challenge and to arm the U.S. Navy. This effort also quickly became a part of the Port of Los Angeles’ prime economic activity.

More recently, in 2004 the port completed the 500-acre Pier 400 container complex as the largest single-user container terminal in the world, which has been acclaimed as an engineering marvel.
The Port of Los Angeles is located in the San Pedro Bay in California and is a part of the Southern California port complex. In California, both ports, Los Angeles and Long Beach, process approximately 85 percent of the State's goods movement program. For the Nation, California complex additionally handles more than 45 percent of the entire Nation's cargo arriving in the United States, impacting over 1 million jobs nationwide. As a premier international gateway, the Port of Los Angeles has been recorded as the number one largest container handling port in the United States for the last 7 consecutive years.

My colleagues, the impact of the Port of Los Angeles is monumental, and the numbers are staggering. The port has grown 246 percent over the last 11 years, tripling its trade-related jobs, generating $256 billion in commerce, and producing $28 billion in tax revenue. This growth is not likely to slow, as the port is expected to again triple the amount of cargo it handles by the year 2030.

With this progress comes great responsibility, however. In 2006, the historic Clean Air Action Plan was agreed to by the Boards of Harbor Commissioners, which seeks to reduce air pollution by 50 percent in the next 5 years. With House Resolution 822, the House now has an opportunity to bestow the appropriate recognition on the Port of Los Angeles for its years of successful operation and service to the American public and our economy.

I urge my colleagues to support House Resolution 822.

Madam Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. LA'TOURNETTE. Madam Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Madam Speaker, House Resolution 822 recognizes the 100th anniversary of the Port of Los Angeles. The Port of Los Angeles is the busiest port in the United States in terms of maritime cargo volume and, when combined with the adjoining Port of Long Beach, is the fifth busiest commercial seaport worldwide.

This trade is a critical component to our national economy, and directly and indirectly supports millions of jobs nationwide. The port has also taken action by the Boards of Harbor Commissioners on the surrounding areas and the environment by recently implementing a comprehensive strategy to reduce emissions from ships and port operations.

I join the resolution's sponsors, Congresswoman RICHARDSON of California and Congressman ROHRABACHER of California, and all of the cosponsors in recognizing the Port of Los Angeles' first 100 years and wishing the port continued success in the future.

I urge all Members to support the resolution. And I want to congratulate one of our newest Members in the House, Congresswoman RICHARDSON, on guiding this legislation to the floor in such a quick manner.

Madam Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. RICHARDSON. Madam Speaker, I wish to recognize for 3 minutes a strong ally of the Port of Los Angeles and my friend from Los Angeles County, the gentlewoman from California (Ms. HARMAN).

Ms. HARMAN. I thank the gentlewoman for yielding to me and commend her for her leadership on this legislation, along with Mr. ROHRABACHER. The Port of Los Angeles has hit the ground running, and we're all very proud to serve as your colleagues.

Madam Speaker, I rise in support of this resolution congratulating the Port of Los Angeles on its 100th anniversary.

When I first came to Congress in 1992, the Port of L.A. looked far different than it does today. It wasn't quite the sleepy port of 100 years ago, with mule-driven trains and wooden ships. It was a regional presence. But today it is the largest container port in the United States and part of the fifth busiest container complex in the world. It supports over 250,000 jobs at the port and adjacent communities and nearly 1 million jobs worldwide. It is an economic powerhouse whose importance to Southern California and the Nation cannot be overstated.

In recent years, the port has taken great strides to address the challenges that come with being a major port in the 21st century. It has dedicated millions to ensuring the quality of life for the surrounding communities, many of which are located in my congressional district. It has also taken on groundbreaking environmental initiatives to reduce the air pollution that it generates. Maybe most importantly, 100 years ago it was such things as a maritime security strategy.

Today, the issue is of paramount importance, and the port has been a national leader. In the hours after the September 11 attacks, port officials, the Coast Guard, and local law enforcement executed a pre-approved plan that quickly and efficiently secured the port. The planning, communication, and execution we saw that day became the inspiration for many of the security initiatives that have come since, including the SAFE Port Act, which I coauthored with my California colleague, DAN LUNGREN, and which became law last year.

As I mentioned, Congresswoman RICHARDSON deserves enormous applause for her leadership on an issue that was very timely but which the rest of us had overlooked. I don't think this resolution would have come to the floor without her initiative. And it really is a big deal to the San Pedro community.

I look forward to working with her as her partner when we celebrate the next 100 years. We may be feeble, but we will be here.

And at this time, I would like to insert into the RECORD an article from today's edition of the Daily Breeze.

[From the Daily Breeze, Dec. 5, 2007]

PORT OF LOS ANGELES MARKS 100 YEARS SINCE ITS CREATION

By Art Marroquin

San Pedro Bay had been struggling as a port for nearly a half-century, but the mud flats surrounding the inland harbor failed to excite railroad magnate Collis P. Huntington.

So rather than run his Southern Pacific Railroad down to San Pedro, Huntington bought more than 200 acres in Santa Monica and began laying out a vision for a Port of Los Angeles.

Huntington built a wharf that extended 4,720 feet into the Pacific Ocean, attracting more than 300 cargo ships during its first year in 1889.

"He wanted people to think his port was close to Los Angeles, when in fact it wasn't," said Ernest Marquez of West Hills, who chronicled Huntington's efforts in his 1975 book "Port of Los Angeles: A Phenomenon of the Railroad Era."

"If he was successful, then the region's economy would have been at the mercy of Southern Pacific and that would have been disastrous," Marquez said.

While Huntington tried to get his Santa Monica port recognized as the official harbor for the Los Angeles region, efforts were already under way to bulk up the port in San Pedro.

U.S. Sen. Stephen M. White, the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce and Los Angeles Times Publisher Harrison Gray Otis believed the port should be a city-operated enterprise and pushed efforts to build a "Port of Los Angeles" in San Pedro.

"Those men saw potential for the mud flats in San Pedro," Marquez said. "They believed the harbor could be developed by lots of digging and dredging."

To a lesser extent, interests in Redondo Beach and Playa del Rey had tried to enter the fray, but those efforts quickly fell by the wayside, setting the scene for an epic battle that became known as the "Free Harbor Contest."

Congress established the River and Harbor Act of 1896, which created a commission to decide whether federal funds should go to Santa Monica or San Pedro.

Three years later, Congress put its money on San Pedro and breakwater construction began a short time after.

"There was no way a harbor of this magnitude could have been developed in Santa Monica because there are too many cliffs on the beach, and it was wide open to the ocean," Marquez said. "San Pedro was favored because the harbor went inland and protected ships from the open sea."

The city of Los Angeles then annexed a 16-mile strip of land to connect to the port in 1906. The communities of San Pedro and Wilmington were annexed three years later.

The city's newfound access to the port gave rise to a new harbor commission, a three-member panel appointed in 1907 by then-Mayor A.C. Harper.

The 100th anniversary of the harbor commission's creation will be marked during a celebration at 4 p.m. Sunday.

The bash will include historical displays, refreshments, boat shows and a performance by Taiwan's Evergreen Symphony Orchestra. A fireworks display is set for 7 p.m.

First commission members—George H. Stewart, Frederick William Braun and T.E. Gibbons—regularly met in downtown Los Angeles and made "big news" during the rare occasion they traveled several miles south to San Pedro, according to Geraldine Knatz, executive director for the Port of Los Angeles.
The panel didn’t have a budget and its members often had to pay for expenses out of their own pockets, she said.

When the voters approved the annexation and port development agreements for port improvements, the money went to the Board of Public Works, not the harbor commission,” Knatz said. “It got so bad that all the commissioners resigned in disgust by 1913.

The first harbor commission faced many of the struggles that persist today, such as building new infrastructure and bolstering regional economic development, Knatz said.

“When you read through the meeting minutes from 100 years ago, you learn that nothing really got done,” Knatz said. “There will never be enough money, you’ll be lobbied by different interest groups, and you’ll always have to deal with residents who live near the port. It is really difficult.

The port has come a long way since those early years, with the arrival of cargo container ships in 1937, the advent of towering gantry cranes during the late 1960s and, more recently, an environmental push aimed at reducing diesel emissions from ships and trucks.

About 15.8 million cargo units passed through the ports of Los Angeles and Long Beach last year, accounting for more than 40 percent of the nation’s imports. That number is expected to grow by 2030, according to local economist John Husing.

Additionally, some 500,000 people in Southern California are employed directly and indirectly by port-related businesses, Husing said last month.

“The port is a vital part of our national economy, but it is just as important locally, providing good jobs for generations of local residents,” said Los Angeles City Councilwoman Jan Perry. “I have just described than to continue to pay to have containers shipped individually by truck.

Several shipping companies operating at the Port of Los Angeles are studying expansion options that call for environmentally friendly accommodations, such as AMP technology that allows container ships to “plug in” to a generator and operate on electrical power while docked, rather than idling on their diesel engines.

China Shipping was the first company to use the technology at the Port of Los Angeles, resulting in the elimination of 300 tons of particulate nitrogen oxides since 2004, according to port officials.

“Growing green is imperative if any kind of expansion is going to happen,” Knatz said. “It’s always difficult to be out front on these issues, but we can’t afford to be a follower.”

Indeed, the ports of Los Angeles and Long Beach approved a clean air plan in 2006 aimed at reducing emissions by 50 percent over the next five years.

The ports are poised in 2008 to roll out the ports’ Clean Trucks Program that calls for replacing or retrofitting about 16,000 diesel-spewing big rigs with cleaner-burning vehicles by 2012.

“The time has come for us to truly commit to cleaning up our air and limiting emissions from the port,” Hahn said. “It is my hope that working together, we can finally have both a productive and efficient port, but also clean and healthy communities.”

Mr. LATOURETTE. Madam Speaker, at this time it is my pleasure to yield as much time as he may consume to the gentleman from California (Mr. ROHRABACHER).

Mr. ROHRABACHER. Madam Speaker, next week, on December 9, as we have mentioned today, the Port of Los Angeles, which I am proud to say is located in my district, will celebrate its 100-year anniversary.

Yes, the Port of Los Angeles has had a long and distinguished history. It was the location of the first railroads in Southern California. We are also proud of the crucial role played by the Port of Los Angeles in the battle for the Pacific during the Second World War.

Throughout its history, the Port of Los Angeles has been a harbinger of prosperity and economic growth, as well as an impetus for the engineering and technology development that we have noted. In August of 1958, for example, a cargo vessel named the Hawaiian Merchant delivered its first shipment of 20 cargo containers to the Port of Los Angeles, ushering in a cargo container revolution that has had an enormous impact on the world economy.

Let us note on this 100th anniversary that there was someone who played an important role in providing the infrastructure to the ports and to the transportation systems that serve the ports. Let us pay homage to Congressman John Husing.

Let us pay homage to Congressman Husing. We will be proud, and with his influence in this House as chairman of the Transportation Committee, such support that gave us the infrastructure we needed to have the great port complex of Los Angeles and Long Beach.

When I first was a Member elected here, Glen Anderson was still serving here, and I was proud to call him my friend. He has left us a legacy that he can be proud of.

We’ve come a long way in these last 50 years, with the help of people like Glen Anderson. Those initial 20 cargo containers have grown to over 8.5 million cargo containers just last year. And as we noted, the combination of the Port of Los Angeles and Long Beach represent the fifth largest port complex in the world. More than 43 percent of all goods arriving in the United States enter through this port complex. And I guarantee you that in every congressional district represented in this Congress, there is something there that has been brought through the international gateway, which is the Port of Los Angeles.

There is a challenge in this new century. A challenge, however, that Madam Speaker, our greatest challenge is to improve the way that containers are moved through the port complex of Los Angeles and Long Beach. Over 70 percent of the containers now arriving in our ports are headed inland from Southern California to destinations and localities within the United States. Every day, thousands of these containers are hauled by truck from the port to inland rail depots. This results in unsafe road conditions,333 hazardous health conditions, pollution, and our freeways and our roadways are unacceptably crowded. And yes, that is unacceptable now. As container traffic grows, the situation will get worse unless we act.

If we continue with the current method of transporting those containers individually by truck system, that will pollute and clog Southern California’s roads and freeways. That said, however, there is a new solution on the way, a new clean and efficient way of moving containers through the ports, through the larger railroad depots, a way that will revolutionize the process. This new approach has bipartisan support. That bipartisan support ranges from myself and Governor Schwarzenegger to my Democratic colleagues, Representatives RICHARDSON and OBERSTAR.

The cutting-edge technology to which I refer is an electronic cargo conveyor system. Instead of being loaded onto trucks to sit in traffic, containers will be quickly moved to a rail depot utilizing a mag-lev-like technology, an electronic conveyor belt system of sorts. With container traffic being removed from our roads and our freeways, traffic and health conditions will dramatically improve. We will be able to move goods and pay to have containers shipped individually by truck.

The ports in Southern California will continue to prosper and lead the way as long as it is willing to innovate with the type of creativity reflected in the mag-lev system that I just discussed. I congratulate the Port of Los Angeles and its board of directors on their anniversary and the tremendous success of the last 100 years.

And on other issues as well, and let me just note one other issue as we know, and Ms. HARMAN has played a major role in trying to develop the security that we need at our ports of Los Angeles and Long Beach. There are security needs and other infrastructure needs that will cost money. Whenever you have any benefit, it will cost. We need to face the cost of these improvements with the same creativity that I just discussed technologically that we need to do in the cargo movement.

The way that I would suggest, and I hope that on this anniversary that we note that, yes, Glen Anderson played an important role in getting Federal money for the ports. That is not an unending source of revenue. But if we were to charge a container fee and base our improvements in the ports, instead of on the taxpayers of the United States channeling money to our ports, that we instead charge those using the ports a reasonable container fee so that we can continue to improve our infrastructure.

If we make this change, I hope that it will cost. We need to face the cost of these improvements with the same creativity that I just discussed technologically that we need to do in the cargo movement.

The way that I would suggest, and I hope that on this anniversary that we note that, yes, Glen Anderson played an important role in getting Federal money for the ports. It got so bad that all the comin this Nation imports or exports goods through the Los Angeles port complex. It is truly America’s gateway, and we have an opportunity provided by you to recognize the 100th anniversary, and we hope there is unanimous support for your resolution.

Mr. LATOURETTE. Madam Speaker, it’s my pleasure to yield such time as he may consume to another gentleman from California (Mr. DANIEL E. LUNGREN).

Mr. DANIEL E. LUNGREN of California, I thank the gentleman for the time.

Madam Speaker, I rise in support of the resolution. As one who grew up in the City of Long Beach and spent a great deal of time as a child being taken by parents down to the Ports of Los Angeles and Long Beach and having as a college student in the summertime worked in the Port of Los Angeles, I have had the opportunity to see that port grow, along with its sister port, the Port of Long Beach. The progress that has been made there, the advances that have been made there, the jobs that have been created there, the tremendous economic engine that that port is, is an example to not only California, but to the rest of the world how you can take a natural resource and in some ways refine it and in some ways make it better than it was before so that it enhances the entire area or the entire region.

The Port of Los Angeles has a distinguished record. It is one that is marked with achievement. It is one that is marked with advances in technology, and it is one that has always contributed to the health of the region that I used to represent in this body some 20 years ago.

I congratulate the gentlewoman for bringing this forth, and I would suggest to my colleagues not only that they support this, but if they ever have the opportunity to be in California and they want to see a magnificent engine of economic vitality, they ought to come by and see the Port of Los Angeles. It is a credit to the people of the region. It is a credit to those who had the foresight to develop it as a working port. And I join everyone else in congratulating those who now are responsible for its continued operation.

Ms. RICHARDSON. Madam Speaker, I wish to yield 2 minutes to my good friend and representative who covers the Port of San Diego, our sister port, the gentleman from California (Mr. FILNER).

Mr. FILNER. I thank the gentlelady, and I thank you for your leadership, which has come very early in your congressional career. It’s nice to be here. Thank you for allowing a Congressman from San Diego to join you in this celebration of the 100th anniversary of the Port of Los Angeles.

As a representative of San Diego, there are a lot of things we don’t want to imitate about Los Angeles, but we look with envy at the economic engine that the Port of Los Angeles represents. It is true, and I say this with some envy, Southern California’s gateway to international commerce, maintaining its competitive edge with record-setting cargo operations, groundbreaking environmental issues, progressive security measures, and diverse recreational and educational facilities.

The port’s economic contributions are far-reaching. The port is connected directly and indirectly with tens of billions of dollars in industry sales each year in the Southern California region and in the Nation, translating into hundreds of thousands of local jobs and billions of dollars in wages, salaries and State and local taxes.

One out of every 24 jobs in Southern California is generated by the port. That’s almost 260,000. One out of every $23 paid in wages and salaries, almost $9 billion, comes from the Port of Los Angeles.

Mr. L ATOURETTE. Madam Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. RICHARDSON. Madam Speaker, I also request my colleagues to join me in congratulating the Port of Los Angeles on their 100th anniversary.

Mr. LATOURETTE. Madam Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. RICHARDSON. Madam Speaker, I rise in support of House Resolution 822, recognizing the 100th anniversary of the founding of the Port of Los Angeles, and I commend Congresswoman LAURA RICHARDSON for her leadership and introduction of this resolution.

When the port opened in 1907, the population of the City of Los Angeles stood at only 300,000 residents. Today the City of Los Angeles is a thriving metropolis of more than 4 million residents, the second largest city in the Nation. This transformation into a sprawling urban giant was enhanced by the ever-growing global trade that passes through the Port of Los Angeles.

As a major gateway to the Pacific Rim, the L.A. port handles an estimated $225 billion worth of cargo a year, and with its neighboring Port of Long Beach, it is the largest container port complex in the Nation and the fifth largest in the world.

The Port of Los Angeles plays a critical role in our local and State economy. It contributes $1.4 billion in State and local tax revenues, provides 259,000 jobs, and pays $8.4 billion in wages annually. Equally as important, if not more so, the Port of Los Angeles is also a strong economic engine for our national economy.

Goods arriving through the port complex account for more than 40 percent of something that will provide us a new source of revenue in order to provide the security and infrastructure needs of the future.

So these two combination things, the new mag-lev technology conveyor belt system I described, and a new container which is basically used for those using the ports, will be the type of innovation that will ensure that the Ports of Los Angeles, and yes, the port complex in Long Beach, has a great second 100 years, and that, again, this port complex will provide us an example of innovation and forward thinking and economic prosperity that will serve all of the people of the United States.

Again, I congratulate the Port of Los Angeles on their 100th anniversary. of our Nation’s total import traffic and 24 percent of its total exports. In fact, more than 60 percent of arriving cargo has destinations outside of Southern California.

In 2005, the number of direct and indirect jobs associated with the trade activity generated by the L.A. ports was 3.3 million jobs nationwide. This is a 200 percent increase over 1994 data.

On this historic 100th anniversary, I salute the Port Authority; the City of Los Angeles; the communities of Wilmington and San Pedro, which host the port; and I especially want to salute the thousands of hardworking men and women who ensure the port’s daily operation and international movement of goods. And I urge all of my colleagues to support this resolution.

Mr. LA TOURETTE. Madam Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. RICHARDSON. Madam Speaker, I rise in support of this resolution. As a representative with a busy port in San Diego, I fully recognize the importance of this historic occasion, and I am very proud to join my colleagues in honoring the Port of Los Angeles and celebrating its 100th anniversary.

As many colleagues have cited, the Port of Los Angeles is a bastion for commerce and the economy for the region, and it provides one out of every 24 jobs in Southern California.

Madam Speaker, we know that seaports are gateways for domestic and international trade connecting us to the rest of the world. And because ports are naturally located on coasts and inland waterways, they really play a special opportunity to act as environmental stewards and caretakers for our precious coastal resources. Just last year the Ports of Los Angeles and Long Beach jointly released the San Pedro Bay Ports Clean Air Action Plan, which aims to reduce emissions by 50 percent over the next 5 years.

It’s true, economic benefits that our districts benefit from the imports and exports that flow through the Port of Los Angeles.

So I want to urge my colleagues to join me in bestowing this well-deserved honor on the Port of Los Angeles after 100 years of successful operation, and I particularly want to commend my colleagues for bringing it forward.

Mr. LA TOURETTE. Madam Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. RICHARDSON. Madam Speaker, I wish to yield 2 minutes to my dear friend and sister from the great area of Santa Barbara. She also has a port in her district, Mrs. LOIS CAPPS.

Mrs. CAPPS. Madam Speaker, I join several of my colleagues in strong support of House Resolution 822.

It’s a pleasure to honor the Port of Los Angeles on your 100th anniversary and to commend our new colleague from California, Congresswoman RICHARDSON, for calling attention to all of us the importance of our ports and for signaling this specific anniversary of the Port of Los Angeles, our Nation’s largest container port. And when you include its neighbor, the Port of Long Beach, this complex is the fifth largest in the world.

I also represent a deepwater port, a neighboring port up the coast from the Port of Los Angeles, the Port of Hueneme, so I also know how important the maritime industry is to the health of our Nation’s economy. And ports like the Port of Los Angeles are the gateway into the vastly interconnected global economy.

In fact, 95 percent of all international oversize traffic flows through our Nation’s ports, and much of it, $1 billion a day of economic activity, happens at the Ports of Los Angeles and Long Beach. In fact, at least one business in every congressional district in this country imports or exports goods through these ports.

Madam Speaker, I also want to acknowledge the port’s work to improve the region’s air quality. This is a big deal. This is a busy port with lots of traffic and has in the past produced lots of congestion. Recently, the Ports of Los Angeles and Long Beach announced a proposal to reduce diesel pollution from trucks at the facilities by installing brake retarder systems. This is a model that the rest of the Nation would do well to watch and then copy. This is good news for the people working and living near these busy complexes. And I hope other ports in California and around the country will follow their lead.

Again, I’m glad the House can recognize the important contributions of this port. I congratulate all its employees, its Members of Congress, and its successful operation of the last 100 years.

Mr. LA TOURETTE. Madam Speaker, may I inquire of the Chair the time remaining on each side.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Maryland has 9 minutes remaining. The gentlewoman from California has 2½ minutes.

Mr. LA TOURETTE. Madam Speaker, I am going to continue to reserve. But I do see the distinguished chairman of our subcommittee on the floor, and if 2½ minutes isn’t enough time for his observations, I would be happy to inquire to see if the gentlewoman needs time.

Would you like me to yield to the chairman?

Ms. RICHARDSON. Madam Speaker, actually as the manager of this bill, I was prepared to give the honor of closing this bill to the dear chairman. So since he is our last speaker, I am prepared to close at that point once you have yielded the remaining time.

Mr. LA TOURETTE. I yield 2 minutes of our time and ask unanimous consent that it be added to the gentlewoman’s time so they have 4½ minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

Mr. LA TOURETTE. I yield back the remainder of my time.

Ms. RICHARDSON. Madam Speaker, it is with great pleasure that I have the opportunity to introduce the distinguished chairman of the Coast Guard and Maritime Transportation Subcommittee, on which we both serve.

Mr. CUMMINGS. Madam Speaker, I have had an opportunity to work with in a very quick fashion, and I am very pleased to have him join us in this effort. Please welcome the gentleman from Maryland.

Mr. CUMMINGS. Madam Speaker, I rise today to urge my colleagues to adopt House Resolution 822 and to recognize the 100th anniversary of the Port of Los Angeles. I want to thank you, Mr. LATOURETTE, for yielding time, and you, Ms. RICHARDSON, for your very, very fine work which I will get back to in a moment.

During its first century, the Port of Los Angeles has grown to become a massive freight processing complex encompassing 27 cargo terminals which handle more than 43 percent of all the goods arriving in the United States. By any metric, the size of operations at the Port of Los Angeles is simply staggering. Over just the past 11 years, part of the San Pedro Bay Port Complex, the port has grown 246 percent, generating $256 billion in commerce and $238 billion in tax revenue. That is simply astounding.

Already the largest container terminal in the United States, the port handled more than 8.5 million 20-foot container units last year alone. By 2030, the port complex is expected to triple its cargo handling activities again.

Not surprisingly, the port is an industry leader in all aspects of transportation. In 2002, the port was a principal partner of the $2.5 billion Alameda Corridor project, which connected the port to the transcontinental rail system with a 20-mile rail expressway. Created through a partnership with local, regional, and statewide agencies, this project epitomizes the multimodal connections that are essential to speeding and easing freight movements through our Nation’s ports.

The port has also undertaken a dedicated effort to address the impacts of its operations on the local environment through the San Pedro Bay Ports Clean Air Action Plan, which is intended to reduce air pollution from port activities by nearly 50 percent in 5 years.

The action plan is the world’s first program proposed to significantly reduce health risks around a major port by confirming and reducing transregional air pollution from port-related operations. I also want to take a moment to salute Ms. RICHARDSON. She has, without a doubt, I think it was Ms. Lee that said that she came in and hit the ground running. I say she hit the ground flying, including her work just recently with me. When we visited San Francisco, she was the only other subcommittee member who attended the special field hearing convened by our subcommittee to examine the terrible oil spill in San Francisco Bay. Ms. RICHARDSON ably represents California’s 37th Congressional District, including the interests of the Port of Los Angeles as evidenced through her work on the resolution before us today. I shall never forget in her opening statement on the floor in the well of this House, one of the things that she mentioned, Madam Speaker, was that she wanted to make sure that the port and the port’s interests in her district were well situated to assure that they were managed better by her presence in this great House. And so I want to applaud her for her efforts.

I want to thank her for her insight, and I am so, so excited that she is part of the subcommittee which I chair. And with that, Madam Speaker, I thank her and I thank my ranking member on our subcommittee.

Ms. RICHARDSON, I yield myself the balance of my time.

The Port of Los Angeles now looks forward to its next 100 years with a legacy as a leader in terminal efficiency and setting environmental standards. It is indeed a leader and most successful conveyor of the Nation’s and the world’s commerce.

Madam Speaker, I urge all the Members to support the Port of Los Angeles and House Resolution 822 and applaud the efforts of Mr. LATOURETTE, our chairman, as you heard, Mr. CUMMINGS, and also our chairman of Transportation, Mr. OBERSTAR.

Mrs. TAUSCHER. Madam Speaker, I rise in support of House Resolution 822, which recognizes the 100th anniversary of the Port of Los Angeles.

I would like to commend my colleague from California, Congresswoman RICHARDSON, for bringing this important resolution to the floor. I am proud to serve with the Congresswoman on the Transportation and Infrastructure Committee. One hundred years ago, the Los Angeles City Council created the Port of Los Angeles, and it has since developed into one of the largest in the world. More than 43 percent of all goods arriving in the United States travel through the Port of Los Angeles. I appreciate the important role that port plays in our Nation’s economy, and the port has an important role in that process.

I would like to congratulate the port for reaching its 100th anniversary and congratulate it for being a strong provider of jobs in California. I commend my colleague on the Transportation Committee for her diligent work.

Mr. OBERSTAR. Madam Speaker, I rise in strong support of H. Res. 822, which recognizes the 100th anniversary year of the founding of the Port of Los Angeles.

The Port of Los Angeles is located in San Pedro, California, and is a part of the Southern California port complex. This complex handles more than 43 percent of all goods arriving in the United States. The complex has grown 246 percent over the past 11 years, and trade-related jobs at the complex have tripled. The amount of cargo handled by this complex is also expected to triple by the year 2030.

Although the earliest history of the Port of Los Angeles dates back to the 1500s, the Board of Harbor Commissioners was created on December 9, 1907, which officially founded the Port of Los Angeles.

Although the earliest history of the Port of Los Angeles dates back to the 1500s, the Board of Harbor Commissioners was created on December 9, 1907, which officially founded the port. In 1542, a Portuguese explorer named the natural harbor “Bahia de los Fumos” or “Bay of Smoke,” when he stated the bay “is an excellent harbor and the country is good with many plains and groves of trees.”

In 1869, a new era of development for the harbor region was marked when Los Angeles and San Pedro Railroad began service between San Pedro Bay and Los Angeles, becoming the first railroad of Southern California. In 1958, the containerized cargo revolution began on the west coast, when the Hawaiian Merchant delivered its first shipment of 20 cargo containers to the port.

A principal partner in the $2.5 billion Alameda Corridor project, which opened in April 2002, the port worked with local, regional, and statewide agencies to develop a robust regional transportation infrastructure. The project is a 20-mile expressway that connects the Port of Los Angeles to America’s transcontinental rail system, improving the transportation systems that move goods throughout the region.

Last year, the Port of Los Angeles handled more than 8.5 million twenty-foot container units, making it the leading container port in the United States for 7 consecutive years. The Port of Los Angeles is also the largest container terminal in the world. The nearly 500-acre container complex, operated by Maersk Sealand and APM Terminals, was completed in 2004 and has been acclaimed as an engineering phenomenon and a model of operational efficiency.

The port has implemented modern and innovative transportation and good movements systems, has set global standards, and is a leader in terminal efficiency and environmental initiatives. I congratulate the Port of Los Angeles on its achievements for the past 100 years and wish the port continued success in national and world commerce for the next century.

I urge my colleagues to support this resolution.

Mr. LATOURETTE. Madam Speaker, House Resolution 822 recognizes the 100th anniversary of the founding of the Port of Los Angeles. The Port of Los Angeles is the busiest port in the United States in terms of maritime cargo volume and, when combined with the adjoining Port of Long Beach, is the fifth busiest commercial seaport worldwide. This trade is a critical component to our national economy and directly and indirectly supports millions of jobs nationwide.

The port has also taken action to lessen impacts on the surrounding areas and the environment by recently implementing a comprehensive strategy to reduce emissions from ships and port operations.

I join the resolution’s sponsor, Congresswoman RICHARDSON of California, and all of the cosponsors in recognizing the Port of Los Angeles’ first 100 years and in wishing the port continued success in the future. I urge all Members to support the resolution.

Ms. RICHARDSON. I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentlewoman from California (Ms. RICHARDSON) that the House suspend the rules and agree to the resolution, H. Res. 822, as amended.

The question was taken.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. In the opinion of the Chair, two-thirds being in the affirmative, the ayes have it.

Ms. RICHARDSON. Madam Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 8 of rule XX and the Chair’s prior announcement, further proceedings on this motion will be postponed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentlewoman from New York (Ms. VELÁZQUEZ) and the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. CHABOT) each will contribute 15 minutes.

Ms. VELÁZQUEZ. Madam Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days to review, extend their remarks and include extraneous material on the bill under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from New York?

There was no objection.

Ms. VELÁZQUEZ. Madam Speaker, I yield myself as much time as I may consume.

In their service to the Nation, veterans have demonstrated strength, discipline and dedication to preserving security. At home, they have proven to be invaluable components of a strong economy.

We have already seen the impact veterans can have on communities. Currently, approximately 22 percent of servicemembers in the United States have either purchased or started a new business. These entrepreneurs are significant contributors to job growth and expansion of local economies.

I wish to commend Congressman JASON ALTMIER and Congressman VERN BUCHANAN for their leadership in crafting this bill that will further this effort. H.R. 4253 promotes veterans’ continued pursuit of self-employment and provides them with the support for growth that they deserve. It accomplishes this objective by comprehensively updating several of the Small Business Administration’s programs to better meet the current needs of veteran entrepreneurs.

The bill addresses several of the impediments to veterans’ success as entrepreneurs. Because servicemembers are removed from the workforce for an extended period of time, they can often face difficulties securing capital. They may also lack the necessary skills to become successful entrepreneurs. H.R. 4253 responds to these challenges by establishing a strong role for the Federal Government to help veteran entrepreneurs overcome obstacles to entrepreneurship. The legislation increases veterans’ access to affordable capital, enhances entrepreneurial development programs, and focuses the resources of Federal agencies on this key member of the small business community.

Veterans will have improved access to capital with specially tailored initiatives in the SBA’s 7(a) and disaster loan programs. This will help returning servicemen and women bridge the gap for financial capital that they need to start and grow a new endeavor. By increasing outreach assistance centers and entrepreneurial development programs, the bill also improves access to assistance that will help veteran entrepreneurs evaluate business ideas, conduct market research, and receive technology training.

This legislation will also establish an interagency task force to take a lead role in altering the institutional culture at the Federal level to promote increased veteran entrepreneurship. This will significantly improve the coordination of various Federal agencies’ veteran service programs. Additionally, new initiatives will improve transition assistance for separating service members, and provide customized support to service disabled, women veterans, and the members of the reserves.

This will ensure that all sectors are valued in Federal veteran policy-making.

As new troops are added to the already 13,000 that have returned home just from Iraq and Afghanistan, it is imperative that our resources and initiatives are designed to effectively prepare them for economic success.

With their tremendous potential to thrive as entrepreneurs and their critical service for which we all greatly benefit, we must continue to work to allow these budding entrepreneurs to realize the American Dream of business ownership. I believe this bill is a major step towards realizing this goal, and I strongly support this legislation.

I urge my colleagues to support H.R. 4253.

I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. CHABOT. Madam Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Today, Madam Speaker, I rise in support of the request to suspend the rules and pass H.R. 4253, the Military Reservist and Veteran Small Business Reauthorization and Opportunity Act of 2007. I would like to thank Chairwoman VELÁZQUEZ for working in a cooperative and bipartisan manner to bring this bill, which incorporates provisions of a bill authored by Mr. BUCHANAN, who is a freshman member of the Small Business Committee and who has already shown tremendous initiative and leadership on that committee, to the House floor.

While we could never adequately repay the debt we owe to America’s fighting men and women for their service and sacrifice, today’s bill takes important steps to help our Nation’s veterans make a smoother transition to civilian life.

While serving in the Armed Forces, service men and women learn and practice the technical skills valued in today’s civilian workforce, in addition to the leadership and decision-making skills that they learn on the battlefield. All of these attributes are critical to success in the business world and are particularly important traits for successful small business owners.

Despite the success that veterans have shown in starting and operating small businesses, more must be done to assist them in the starting and operation of their businesses. Outreach must improve to ensure that veterans wishing to start their own businesses will have the training and advice needed to transfer their skills to entrepreneurship without first working for someone else.

Title I of H.R. 4253 represents an excellent start in the efforts to expand and ensure that our veterans have the technical support they need to start their own businesses. I want to especially thank the chairwoman for incorporating Mr. Buchanan's interest in expanding the number of Veterans Business Outreach Centers, which will play an increased role in providing assistance to veterans wishing to start small businesses.

The technical advice and assistance are not limited to veterans continuing their service in the Reserves. Title II of the bill recognizes Reservists who operate small businesses have their own unique set of operational problems associated with their call-up to duty. They may not know how long their call-up will last and they need assistance in ensuring they have a plan in place to operate their business while they are on active duty. This legislation builds on the existing network of entrepreneurial partners to deliver key technical and operational assistance to Reservists.

Another important element of the bill is the recognition of the changing nature of the military with a greater involvement of women. The legislation requires the administrator to expand assistance to women veterans and Reservists. Given the rapid expansion and success of women-owned businesses, it makes sense to ensure that the needs of women Reservists are met when they seek to start and operate small businesses.

Our fighting men and women are the best in the world. Let us help them become the best entrepreneurs in the world by enacting this legislation, H.R. 4253.

Again, I want to thank Mr. BUCHANAN for his leadership in this effort, and I also want to thank the gentleman from Pennsylvania, Mr. ALTMIERE, who also has worked very hard in this area as well and is responsible for this bill being here today.

Madam Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. VELAZQUEZ. Madam Speaker, I recognize Mr. ALTMIERE, the sponsor of the legislation, for as much time as he may consume.

Mr. ALTMIERE. I thank the Chair and the ranking member for their continued leadership on these issues, and I especially want to thank my good friend from Florida, Mr. BUCHANAN. It was a pleasure working with him to craft this legislation. He was an equal partner in putting this bill on the floor today, and I want to recognize his leadership as well.

Madam Speaker, with nearly 25 million veterans and over 1 million Reservists in the United States, there is a need, and a growing need, for an increased commitment by the government to assist veterans and Reservists in both gaining their service to our Nation. As more and more servicemembers return to civilian life after their deployments in Iraq and Afghanistan, the opportunities and economic benefits that the Federal Government can provide will become even more critical, especially for businesses that are owned and operated by veterans.

The brave men and women that put their lives on hold to defend our Nation should not have to choose their jobs and their livelihoods. Starting and maintaining a small business presents challenges for anyone, and, unfortunately, veterans often face unique barriers as a result of their military service. This anomaly is amplified when veterans are double the overall national unemployment rate, and over half of all self-employed Reservists experience significant income loss when they are called to duty.

Over the last 3 years, we have watched as the number of returning veterans and Reservists has increased, and that number is only going to continue to grow.

While Congress has passed legislation and provided Federal agencies with some of the resources necessary to provide entrepreneurial opportunities for veterans, I believe that more can be done to relieve the burden that is placed on small business owners during and after deployment.

To ensure that the Federal Government is there to assist our country's servicemembers, I have introduced the bill that we are debating here today, the Military Reservist and Veteran Small Business Reauthorization and Opportunity Act. This legislation will support and expand entrepreneurial opportunities for veterans and Reservists to ensure that their livelihoods are not compromised because of their military service.

My bill increases funding for the Small Business Administration's Office of Veteran Business Development to $4.1 million and facilitates the coordination of all Federal agencies to focus attention on increasing the success rate of and opportunities for veteran-owned small businesses.

This legislation will make the Advisory Committee on Veterans Business Affairs permanent, strengthening the focus and input advisory committees can provide to the Federal Government to ensure continued commitment to our Nation's veterans. The Advisory Committee has been an important source of information for the Federal Government. By making the committee permanent, we can continue to improve the support provided to veteran and Reservist small business owners.

We will also increase the number of Veteran Business Outreach Centers across the country and identify areas that are in need of additional assistance to ensure that veterans and Reservists in every region are able to keep their businesses afloat.

An additional $300,000 per year made to Small Business Development Centers, this bill will establish the Reservist Enterprise Transition and Sustainability program to provide one-on-one counseling on management, financing, procurement and regulatory assistance to small business owners to help our returning service men and women successfully transition to civilian life.

Finally, my legislation makes much-needed improvements to the Military Reservist Economic Injury Disaster Loan program by requiring the SBA to extend the application deadline, raise the maximum loan amount and create a pre-consideration process for small businesses applying during military deployment. This is important, because currently Reservists can apply for a loan only after deployment, when their businesses are already in the red. A pre-deployment loan would be helpful to many small business owners during active duty when the funding is most critical.

Madam Speaker, there is no question that veterans have a unique ability to thrive as entrepreneurs. They have the leadership skills and work ethic necessary to run a small business and a successful business. But we must do more to help veteran entrepreneurs fully meet their needs and overcome the unique challenges that they face.

I want to especially thank my good friend from Florida (Mr. BUCHANAN) for helping to ensure that we do just that with the legislation that is before us today.

Mr. CHABOT. Madam Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. BUCHANAN).

Mr. BUCHANAN. Madam Speaker, I want to thank the ranking member for yielding me the time, and I rise in support of H.R. 4253. I would also like to thank the Congressman from Pennsylvania, Congressman ALTMIERE. He has worked on a bipartisan basis. I appreciate it. It has been a great partnership. And also Madam Chairman, and the ranking member, you guys have done a great job. A lot of people said we couldn’t work together, but it has been great leadership this year. I also want to thank you for the opportunity to include a lot of the provisions in this bill.

H.R. 4253 incorporates legislation I introduced in May and was passed in the House in June creating an important program within the Small Business Administration that will give our veterans a chance to succeed in business enterprises but provides them with all the help and assistance a grateful Nation can offer.

My legislation is intended to help veterans through grants, information services and contacts with professionals in fields of their endeavor. This Federal program will enhance the ability of a veteran to become a successful entrepreneur in his or her chosen field. I know from personal experience, being a veteran of 6 years and an entrepreneur for 30 years, I was able to realize the American Dream, and I think this bill does it.

H.R. 4253 puts an emphasis on providing veterans with the market research, information and technological training important to become a successful small business owner. This legislation not only expands the number and scope of the Veteran Outreach Centers, it ensures the opening of more doors and an opportunity for our women veterans. Assisting our women returning from combat is something that has long been overlooked and overdue. It is high time that we did something about it.

Today, the House will pass a bill that will help individuals make an important transition from being a veteran to a small business entrepreneur. I urge my colleagues to support H.R. 4253.

Mr. CHABOT. Madam Speaker, I have no further speakers, so I yield back the balance of my time.

Ms. VELÁZQUEZ. Madam Speaker, I would like to yield myself the balance of my time.

Madam Speaker, the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan have produced over 600,000 new veterans thus far and have created a serious challenge for the Nation: how to facilitate our returning servicemembers’ successful transition back home and into our economy. Given the ongoing nature of these conflicts, the shift in economic opportunities and the diverse needs of returning veterans, this is an unprecedented situation that will require a major and rapid response.

To leverage veterans’ abilities to be productive engines of the economy, I believe we must comprehensively modernize Federal programs designed to assist this key group through self-employment opportunities. H.R. 4253 achieves this objective by obtaining the Small Business Administration programs to ensure they are customized to meet the growing needs of this sector in a changing economy.

This Nation has a clear obligation to ensure our returning servicemembers have the assistance they need to succeed at entrepreneurship. By complementing their individual strengths with appropriate Federal resources, we can help them realize their full potential, while also growing the economy.

Madam Speaker, I want to thank the staff that worked on this bill. From the majority staff, Michael Day, Adam Minehardt and Andy Jimenez. From the minority staff, Barry Pineles and Kevin Homan. I want to recognize Max Goodman from Mr. BUCHANAN’s staff and Cara Toman and Erik Komendant from Mr. ALTmIE’s staff.

I strongly urge my colleagues to vote for H.R. 4253.

Mr. BUCHANAN. Madam Speaker, I thank the Ranking Member for yielding me the time and rise in support of H.R. 4253.

I would like to thank Congressman ALTmIE for bringing this bill to the floor today and for including in the bill a number of provisions important to me.

H.R. 4253 incorporates legislation I introduced in May and the House passed in June creating an important program within the Small Business Administration that will give our veterans a chance to succeed in a business enterprise but provide them with all the help and assistance a grateful Nation can offer.

My legislation is intended to help veterans through grants, information services, and contact with professionals in their fields of endeavor.

This federal support will enhance the ability of a veteran to become an entrepreneur in his or her own right.

H.R. 4253 puts an emphasis on providing veterans with the market research, financial options and technological training important to becoming a successful small business owner.

This legislation not only expands the number and scope of Veteran Outreach Centers, it ensures the opening of more doors and an opportunity for our women veterans. Assisting our women returning from combat has been an area long overlooked and it’s high time we did something about it.

Today, the House will pass a bill that will help individuals make an important transition from veteran to small business entrepreneur. I urge all of my colleagues to support H.R. 4253.

Ms. VELÁZQUEZ. Madam Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time, and urge its adoption.

Ms. VELÁZQUEZ. Madam Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Madam Speaker, today we will consider a short-term extension for programs in the Small Business Act and Small Business Investment Act. This bill extends the authorization of the Small Business Administration and these programs through May 23, 2008.

This short-term extension is necessary to ensure continuous operations at the agencies so that this Nation’s entrepreneurs continue to receive vital assistance. The programs at the SBA are designed to stimulate job creation and economic development across the country.

As the sole Federal agency charged with assisting this Nation’s 26 million small businesses, it is critical that the SBA be able to meet their needs through access to capital, technical assistance and increasing their ability to secure Federal contracting opportunities.
The Small Business Committee has been working to improve and revitalize these efforts through a number of bills. The committee has taken steps to provide an overhaul and improvements to ensure our Federal Government is adapting to the current economy.

With 15 bills passed out of the House, these reforms have been a collaborative and bipartisan effort to assist small firms. Four of these bills were sponsored by Members of the minority, and nearly all of these bills have passed with overwhelming bipartisan majorities. I will also note that 10 different members of the committee, six of whom are serving their first term in Congress, have been the sponsors of these bills.

These reforms include major changes to SBA programs which affect millions of small businesses. The bills that have been passed are designed to improve small business contracting programs, as well as providing needed updates to the SBA disaster program that failed so many Americans during Hurricane Katrina.

The committee and the House have also reported legislation which streamlines the SBA access to capital initiatives and increases the outreach of entrepreneurial programs. With these bills passed out of this Chamber, we are prepared to take the final step to pass a comprehensive reauthorization to the SBA and its programs.

We will continue working with the Senate to get these reforms signed into law. This extension will provide time for the Senate to move their own changes and allow us to work out any differences.

At a time when the economy is in an uncertain state, it is important that these programs continue to serve small businesses. The bills that have been passed are designed to improve small business contracting programs, as well as providing needed updates to the SBA disaster program that failed so many Americans during Hurricane Katrina.

The committee and the House have also reported legislation which streamlines the SBA access to capital initiatives and increases the outreach of entrepreneurial programs. With these bills passed out of this Chamber, we are prepared to take the final step to pass a comprehensive reauthorization to the SBA and its programs.

I look forward to working with Ranking Member CHABOT, as well as any program operated by the Small Business Administration for which Congress has already appropriated funds. This extension will last until May 23, 2008. I want to thank the distinguished chairwoman of the Small Business Committee, Ms. VELAZQUEZ, for working with me in her usual gracious manner.

With the current extension set to expire December 15, which isn’t very far away, obviously, the extension is crucial to ensuring programs designed to help our small businesses are able to continue to operate. Working in a bipartisan effort with Chairwoman VELAZQUEZ, the committee has reported 14 bills, most of which have been overwhelmingly bipartisan, and all of which have passed the House of Representatives.

While we have worked at a rather furious pace in an effort to formally reauthorize SBA programs, the other legislative body has had difficulties coming to the same bipartisan consensus. So without passage of this temporary legislation today, we find ourselves at risk of shortchanging the government contracting and capital programs for small businesses and impeding the management of the SBA.

Even with deliberations completed in the House, we operate in a bicameral legislative system. Time is needed for the legislative process in both bodies to function and, if necessary, for the two bodies to reconcile any disagreements and to ensure that the SBA and its programs are best promoting the health of America’s entrepreneurs who, after all, employ an awful lot of people in this country. The work cannot be expected to be done in a deliberative, thoughtful, and bipartisan manner with the looming deadline of midnight December 15 hanging over our heads.

Again, Madam Speaker, I want to thank my friend from New York for her very hard work on this legislation, and I urge all my colleagues to join us in supporting H.R. 4252, this bill.

I yield back the balance of my time.

Ms. VELAZQUEZ, Madam Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The question is on the motion offered by the gentlewoman from New York (Ms. VELAZQUEZ) that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 4252.

The question was taken; and (two-minute) electronic votes will be conducted as 15-minute vote. Remaining electronic votes will be conducted as 5-minute votes.

GRANTING AUTHORITY PROVIDED UNDER THE RULES OF THE HOUSE TO THE COMMITTEE ON EDUCATION AND LABOR FOR PURPOSES OF ITS INVESTIGATION INTO THE DEATHS OF 9 INDIVIDUALS THAT OCCURRED AT THE CRANDALL CANYON MINE NEAR HUNTINGTON, UTAH

Ms. SLAUGHTER, from the Committee on Rules, submitted a privileged report (Report No. 110-473) on the resolution (H. Res. 836) granting the authority provided under clause 4(c)(3) of rule X of the Rules of the House to the Committee on Education and Labor for purposes of its investigation into the deaths of nine individuals that occurred at the Crandall Canyon Mine near Huntington, Utah, which was referred to the House Calendar and ordered to be printed.

Ms. SLAUGHTER. I ask unanimous consent, Madam Speaker, for the immediate consideration of House Resolution 836.

The Clerk read the title of the resolution.

The Speaker pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from New York? There was no objection.

The Clerk read the resolution as follows:

H. Res. 836

Resolved.

SECTION 1. GRANTING AUTHORITATIVE AUTHORITY TO COMMITTEE ON EDUCATION AND LABOR.

The Committee on Education and Labor is granted the authority provided under clause 4(c)(3) of rule X of the Rules of the House to Representatives in furtherance of its investigation by such Committee into the deaths of 9 individuals that occurred during August 2007 at the Crandall Canyon Mine (also known as the Genwal Mine) near Huntington, Utah, including the events that may have led to those deaths and the administration of relevant laws by government agencies, including the Department of Labor and the Mine Safety and Health Administration, and into other related matters.

Mr. MCKEON, Madam Speaker, on August 6, 2007, a collapse at the Crandall Canyon mine in Utah took the lives of six miners. Days later, three rescuers were lost as well. We all grieved with this tragedy, and we all share a commitment to doing what we can to prevent such an event from happening in the future.

The Education and Labor Committee has initiated an investigation into possible causes of the collapse, as well as the handling of its aftermath by the mine ownership and Federal regulators. Our committee has at its disposal the leadership of the House, saying that the compromise the integrity of MSHA
violators accountable.
ardize its ability to enforce the law and hold tured in such a way as to avoid endangering our warnings and those of the Department of Labor and the State of Utah. The investigations by the Mine Safety and Health Administration are of a law enforcement nature—if it is determined that criminal conduct occurred, they can at any time make a referral to the Department of Justice.
Although our committee investigation is still in its early stages, it has already been fruitful.
In addition to the single hearing that has been held, we have requested—and the Department of Labor has produced—hundreds of thousands of pages of documents. We have conducted interviews with witnesses, and visited the site of the accident.
Despite the progress that has been made with our significant existing oversight capabilies, the majority today is seeking to confer on our committee the extraordinary power to subopon the witnesses, demand documents, interview witnesses, establish any clear need for this authority.
In fact, we are not aware of a single witness who has refused to cooperate with the committee after an official invitation. Moreover, while the majority has been unwilling to disclose exactly whom testimony this authority is intended to compel, they have indicated that just a handful of individuals are expected to require a sub-openoa. Members on our side of the aisle are more than willing to cooperate with regular committee procedures including hearings for this purpose, and as such, it remains unclear to me why this authority is necessary.
In addition to being premature and unnecessary, I believe this authority carries with it the possibility of unintended consequences.
Deposition authority will allow dozens of interviews to be conducted under oath and compelled by subpoena. This could create the possibility of conflicts of interest, privilege claims and rulings, requests for immunity, leaks, and contradictory evidence.
Previous congressional probes should serve as a cautionary tale as we head down this path. Tactics used in the congressional investigation of the Iran-Contra affair caused key testimony against Oliver North to be thrown out, and his convictions to be overturned.
The Acting Solicitor of Labor voiced concerns that this investigation could similarly imperil any civil or criminal enforcement that may be necessary in this matter. In September, he wrote to Chairman MILLER and me, along with the leadership of the House, saying that the Committee’s investigation, together . . . may compromise the integrity of MSHA’s law enforcement investigation and potentially jeop-dardize its ability to enforce the law and hold violators accountable.
Up until now, the majority has heeded
our warnings and those of the Department of Labor. Our hearing and the series of interviews that have been conducted were structured in such a way as to avoid endangering the investigations. I’m concerned that by granting this extraordinary deposition authority, the House is backing away from that cautious approach and rekindling the threat that our activities could undermine the aggressive enforcement that MSHA and other investigators have an opportunity to undertake.
The deposition authority proposed today is crafted narrowly to cover only the Crandall Canyon mine collapse, and the rules adopted in our committee to govern these depositions were developed fairly to ensure the full participation of the parties. These steps are acknowledgements by the majority that deposition authority is truly an extraordinary step, and must be undertaken with great care.
I appreciate their cooperation on these points.
As I have noted, there are serious questions about the timing and necessity of this narrowly crafted authority. Beyond that, however, I want to be perfectly clear that the specific authority being granted in this instance should in no way be viewed as precedent for future oversight functions of our comnittee or any House Committee.
Committee rules allow for a range of tools and resources that can be used to conduct rigorous oversight. Any effort to grant broader deposition authority will surely bring greater danger, and therefore greater objection.
The resolution was agreed to.
A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE
Ms. SLAUGHTER. Madam Speaker, I

bers have 5 legislative days within

SUPPORT THE VETERANS TIMELY
ACCESS TO HEALTH CARE ACT
(Ms. GINNY BROWN-WAITE of Florda asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. GINNY BROWN-WAITE of Florda, Mr. Speaker, this year I introduced H.R. 92, the Veterans Timely Access to Health Care Act. H.R. 92 makes a responsibility and reasonable commitment to veterans throughout this country.
Under the bill, if a veteran cannot get an appointment with a primary care physician within 30 days, that veteran may see a private physician at no additional cost. Unfortunately, the Vet-ers’ Affairs Committee refuses to move my bill and allow the House of Representatives to vote on it.
This year, I have witnessed the maority leadership use veterans as a political pawn. They es the Military Construction and Veterans appropriations bill hostage. I won’t allow the same thing to happen with veterans access to health care.

I ask my colleagues, regardless of their party affiliation, to stand up and protect veterans as they once stood up to protect you. And I ask the leadership to move H.R. 92.

HUMAN RIGHTS IN SAUDI ARABIA

Mr. POE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.
Mr. POE. Mr. Speaker, in Saudi Arabia, seven men abducted a 19-year-old woman and her male companion. The seven men then raped the woman. And how does Saudi Arabia treat this rape victim? By ordering lashes and imprisonment for her because they blamed her for being alone with this male companion because he wasn’t her spouse.
A Saudi Arabian court originally, listens to this, sentenced her to 90 lashes because she was alone with this individual. As if that wasn’t enough, the court just increased the victim’s sentence to 200 lashes and 6 months in prison.

The Saudi Arabian Government now seeks to quell international outrage over this sentence by saying the woman was married at the time of the rape but she was with a nonrelative male companion who wasn’t her spouse.

No explanation or excuse can justify this punishment for the victim. This woman was victimized by her own nation.
The Saudi Arabian court also removed the lawyer from the case and revoked his license because he spoke to the media. The lawyer now faces per-mance disbarment. So much for freedom of speech.

Human rights seem to be absent in Saudi Arabia, because rape victims should not be sent to jail, and even lawyers should have the right of freedom of speech.

And that’s just the way it is.
A TRIBUTE TO THE HONORABLE
HENRY HYDE

(Mr. DANIEL E. LUNGREN of California asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DANIEL E. LUNGREN of California. Mr. Speaker, last night I was unable to be here when we had a tribute to our departed colleague, Henry Hyde. I just wanted to say this about Henry Hyde: It was a privilege and an honor to serve in this House with him.

I recall a conversation I had with him a number of years ago at which time I talked to him about sometimes did he ever get tired about the fact that people beat him up on the issue of abortion. And Henry thought a minute and he said, You know, as I get older and I think of my own mortality, I look forward to the time when I might be entering those gates into heaven and the voices of all those young children that we saved welcoming me there. They’re giving you a great welcome right now, Henry. We miss you.

SPECIAL ORDERS

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. Cuellar). Under the Speaker’s announced policy of January 18, 2007, and under a previous order of the House, the following Members will be recognized for 5 minutes each.

THE SECOND AMENDMENT

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Poe) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. POE. Mr. Speaker, the Supreme Court is considering Washington, DC’s total handgun ban. It is illegal to buy, sell or own a handgun in this Nation’s Capital of ours. Of course, DC has one of the highest homicide rates in the entire country.

The center of this debate is a question that has never really been clearly answered. What exactly does the second amendment to our Constitution mean? Did the Framers intend to protect an individual right or provide for State militias?

The second amendment states, “A well regulated militia being necessary to the security of a free state, the right of the people to keep and bear arms, shall not be infringed.”

Our Founding Fathers risked their lives in the American revolution to create our Nation. They distrusted government that wouldn’t trust its own citizens.

Our Founding Fathers knew the importance of an armed citizenry from their experiences in the American War of Independence. They trusted an armed citizenry and a citizen militia as the best safeguard against the tyranny of government.

To truly understand the meaning and purpose of the second amendment, we need to understand the men that wrote the Constitution and what they said when it was ratified. The Founding Fathers were very concerned that a strong Federal Government would trample on individual freedom and individual rights because that’s what happened to them in England, and that’s what governments historically do to their people, trample on individual rights.

So after the ratification of the Constitution, the Framers knew that a declaration of rights had to be added to protect basic individual rights, rights that are inalienable, created by our creator and not created by government.

So the Founders looked at the English common law, at the English declaration of rights of 1689, which specified the guaranteed right of the people to bear arms.

Those who claim there is no individual in the second amendment ignore the most basic feature of American rights: Rights in this nation belong to individuals.

The second amendment was included in the Bill of Rights to prevent the Federal Government from disarming the public like the British Army did to American citizens. The right of the free people to defend freedom and protect themselves was so important that it was placed second in the Bill of Rights.

Thomas Jefferson knew the importance of an armed citizenry. He said, “No free man shall ever be debarred from the use of arms.”

Samuel Adams wrote that “The Constitution shall never be construed to prevent the people of the United States who are peaceable citizens from keeping their arms.”

And of course James Madison, who helped write the Bill of Rights, once wrote that the Americans had “the advantage of being armed,” and that other nations governments were “afraid to trust the people with such arms.”

So, Mr. Speaker, the second amendment is a personal right for individuals in this country, and the DC ban is a violation of the United States Constitution, specifically, the second amendment to that Constitution.

And that’s just the way it is.

THE SO-CALLED SURGE HAS FAILED

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentlewoman from California (Ms. Woolsey) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Ms. WOOLSEY. Mr. Speaker, as a member of the Foreign Affairs Committee, I was pleased to participate in a joint hearing that took testimony from General Petraeus and Ambassador Maliki. It was a turning point in the occupation of Iraq. The purpose of this hearing was to get a report from our military and diplomatic leaders about the record of the so-called surge or escalation in Iraq.

Let’s first look at what the main purpose of the escalation really was. According to the chairman of the Joint Chiefs, Admiral Michael Mullen, the purpose was to give an additional impetus to political reconciliation. I quote him here: “Security is critical to providing the Government of Iraq the breathing space it needs to work toward political national reconciliation and economic growth. Barring that, no amount of troops in no amount of time will make much of a difference.”

The President celebrates that there has been a short-term downward trend in violence. Of course that would happen when we put our fighting men and women, the best in the world, on the ground in greater and greater numbers, of course they will bring some form of order. But let’s be realistic. This is not sustainable. We cannot keep the same number of troops for very much longer. We can only do not have the resources to do so, and our troops should not have such a task.

So, yes, they are temporarily keeping a lid on the uprising and attacks. In fact, they’ve reached back to 2006 numbers at that last used us, and it should not be something we celebrate today. We are missing our ultimate goal. Like the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs said, the purpose of the surge was political reconciliation. If the White House takes our resources, political and fiscal, behind political reconciliation, we would be in a very different place right now. We would have a stable and inclusive Iraqi national government, not one propped up by the United States. It would have the support of the Iraqi people, and it would be providing strength and dependable security. That, Mr. Speaker, is not what we have. In fact, just last month, a new deal called the Declaration of Principles was inked between President Bush and Prime Minister al-Maliki. It is basically a blueprint to keep our troops in Iraq indefinitely, and it allows permanent bases.

It may even provide for arming insurgent security forces, which actually looks like arming a militia. The last time we got into the business of arming folks, we ended up with the Taliban. Are we ever going to learn the lesson not to repeat the mistakes of the past? It will be interesting to see how the two leaders will try to jam this latest agreement down the throats of the Iraqi Parliament because the Iraqi Parliament has clearly stated that they are not pleased with the agreement, to say the very least. Let’s take a good look at what’s going on: The surge has failed. The new White House agreement would keep our troops in Iraq indefinitely. This is not the road to success. This will not make America safer.

Mr. Speaker, it’s time for bold action. Our friends in the other Chamber and the resident down the road on Pennsylvania Avenue need to face up

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD — HOUSE

H14229

Mr. STUPAK. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of extending the H-2B Workforce Coalition in support of extending the H-2B returning worker program.

WORKFORCE COALITION,

DEAR REPRESENTATIVE: As representatives of tens of thousands of seasonal employers throughout the country, we urge you to support H.R. 1843, the “Save Our Small and Seasonal Business Act of 2007.”

This bipartisan bill would simply renew the highly successful relief provision for the H-2B visa program that was initially approved by the Senate by 94-6 in 2005. This provision recognizes the reliability and trustworthiness of past participants in the H-2B program by exempting those temporary seasonal workers who have participated fiscal the H-2B visa program and have completely followed the law during the past three fiscal years from counting toward the statutory cap.

The congressionally mandated 66,000 annual cap on the number of workers allowed to participate in the program that was established in 1996 does not reflect current economic realities or meet the needs of businesses which are seasonal or have peak load needs that rely on these workers.

Before employers can hire temporary seasonal workers under this program, they must advertise their job openings, work with local unemployment offices to identify potential American workers and offer the positions to them. Employers with the qualifications and experience in trying to hire American workers that they are allowed to petition the federal government for a labor certification and ultimately bring in temporary workers—their final option to run their seasonal businesses.

In fiscal year 2004, the statutory cap was reached on March 9—only six months into the fiscal year and before many summer employers had an opportunity to apply for seasonal workers. As a result, many of these businesses had to operate at partial capacity, not open parts of their businesses, or have their full-time staff work overtime to the point of burnout.

Each subsequent cap has been reached sooner as a result of the increased need for seasonal workers and an increasing labor shortage. The cap for the first half of fiscal year 2008 was reached on September 27–3 days before the fiscal year even began. Without immediate action by Congress, widespread economic consequences will severely impact diverse economic sectors throughout the country including lodging, restaurants, landscaping, clubs, amusement parks, ski resorts, food processing, stone, travel and tourism, horse sports, construction, entertainment, hospitality, recreation and many other seasonal industries.

On behalf of thousands of small businesses and seasonal employers throughout the country, we urge you to support H.R. 1843 and secure its immediate passage.

H-2B RETURNING WORKER PROGRAM

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. CUELLAR) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. CUELLAR. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of extending the H-2B returning worker program.

The H-2B visa program was created to provide access to nonimmigrant temporary workers for seasonal and peak load needs when no American workers can be found. Foreign workers offer small and seasonal businesses short-term help and return to their home country at the end of the season.

H-2B visas are capped at 66,000 visas per year. Even with 66,000 visas a year, it still does not meet the labor needs of seasonal businesses. To help fill these additional needs, Congress established the H-2B returning worker program in 2005. This program exempts returning workers who have received an H-2B visa in one of the three previous fiscal years from counting against the 66,000 cap. However, this program expired on September 30.

On September 27, 4 days before the season even started, the U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Service had already received enough visa petitions to exceed the cap for H-2B visas for the first half of fiscal year 2008. The application process for the second half of fiscal year 2008 began on December 3, two days ago.

Without extending the returning worker program, it’s expected that the visas will go quickly, leaving many businesses without the workers they need to fulfill their business needs. This demand highlights the immediate need for Congress to extend the H-2B returning worker program to help small and seasonal businesses fill their seasonal labor needs and keep full-time Americans and their businesses working.

These returning workers have provided relief to small businesses throughout the Nation, covering a broad spectrum of industries like landscapers, tourism, seafood processors and carnivals. At this time, I will enter into the RECORD a letter from the H-2B Workforce Coalition in support of extending the H-2B returning worker program.

This letter is signed by over 1,300 organizations and small businesses from every State in the union supporting this H-2B returning worker program. H-2B workers offer short-term help. They cannot and do not stay in the United States. More importantly, the H-2B program contains strong provisions to ensure American workers have the first right to work.

Without an extension of the returning worker program, small and seasonal businesses will face significant labor shortages this year. If small businesses lose their ability to hire seasonal, full-time American jobs are at stake and may be lost.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. BURTON) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. BURTON. Madam Speaker, I wish to review a recent vote that was held here in this Congress regarding the so-called Peru Free Trade Agreement, and to encourage the American people to read the fine print and to pay attention to the connection between that Peru vote and the value of the U.S. dollar and some hidden forces that may have been responsible for bringing that vote on Peru to the forefront now. Because people in my district were saying, why vote on Peru now? Why vote on another NAFTA-like accord on trade when our balance of trade is so seriously out of whack? Let me mention for the RECORD, and I will place these articles in the RECORD this evening; Peru is the world’s third largest producer of copper, zinc and tin. It is the biggest producer of silver, and is the fifth largest producer of gold. In fact, Peru has the largest gold mine in this hemisphere owned by an American company.

Many workers in the mines in Peru went on strike. Over 6,300 workers took their lives in their hands the Monday before the vote trying to send a message to the people of the United States and this Congress that they are treated unfairly, the wages they earn, conditions under which they work, their ability to share in profits, the ability to have decent pensions; all of those were very important issues. Their
The Labor Ministry attributed workers' surrender to the fact that the strike had been declared illegal and that workers had been told they could lose their jobs if they left their workplaces for more than three days.

Peru’s Labor Minister, Susana Pinilla, announced on Monday that Peru’s National Federation of Mining and Steel Workers had not formally filed any complaints and that there weren’t any issues which had to be resolved. She added that strikes and protests were rights workers had when there were formal requests pending.

Pinilla clarified that Peru’s Labor Ministry had not received any formal complaints and therefore consider the strike illegal. She suggested that workers find better ways to negotiate their demands.

Minera Yanacocha, Latin America’s largest gold mine, run by reported that the 109 workers, which had taken part in the strike, had returned to work. This was also the case in mining companies such as Chungr, Morococha and Sociedad Minera El Brocal.

According to the Mining Federation, works from Casapalca had also abandoned the strike and returned to work. Pinilla stated that the strike had not had a significant impact on mining production, explaining that just over 5 percent (6,300) of workers had taken part in the strike.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. JONES) is recognized for 5 minutes.

(Mr. JONES of North Carolina addressed the House. His remarks will appear hereafter in the Extensions of Remarks.)

HONORING THE LIFE OF SALLY SMITH, FOUNDER OF THE LAB SCHOOL IN WASHINGTON, D.C.

Mr. MEEK of Florida. Mr. Speaker, with great sadness, I come to the floor today to honor a great American by the name of Sally Smith who passed away just days ago.

Sally Smith, during her time here amongst us, was a great American and left a footprint on this country in the area of education like no other in the past.

Sally Smith ran and actually founded with her husband the Lab School of Washington. And for someone who has been not only involved in the Lab School, but has a daughter that attends the Lab School, I had an opportunity to learn more about Mrs. Sally Smith and what she did in the very early days at the Washington Lab School.

Mrs. Smith and the faculty at the Lab School have done an excellent job in protecting and nurturing all of the young people with learning differences at the Lab School, here in Washington and Baltimore.

On Saturday, December 1, 2007, Mrs. Smith died at the age of 78. Born on May 7, 1929, Mrs. Smith was a native of...
New York City and one of four daughters born to Isaac and Bertha Liberman. She graduated in 1950 from Bennington College and earned a master's degree in education from New York University in 1955.

In 1967, she became a professor in the School of Education at American University, where she led the master's degree program specializing in learning disabilities.

Tonight, I ask Members of Congress to join me in honoring her life and the gifts that she bestowed upon the world of education. Mrs. Smith's empathy, experience, and creative expression prompted her to create the internationally acclaimed Lab School in Washington, D.C. in 1967.

The Lab School is one of the Nation's premier places for students with learning disabilities and an institution that uses arts as a central component to the school's education process. In fact, the Lab School students spend half of the day in specialized, individualized classrooms and offer the other half in the arts.

Inspired by her pursuit to assure that her youngest son received a quality education, Mrs. Smith created a school designed to educate students diagnosed with one or more learning disabilities. Relying on her intuition and creativity, Mrs. Smith developed the "academic method," which serves as the core of the Lab School's curriculum. The academic method is a nontraditional academic approach founded on the belief that a child's future to learn means that the teacher has not yet found a way to help him.

Not only did her academic method lead to her youngest son's academic and professional success, but it has also left behind a gift that has enriched the lives of so many. Her great legacy will continue to live through the success of the current students and adults that have been in the Lab School of Washington, D.C., Baltimore, and Philadelphia. In addition, her excellence will live on through her literary works, many of which have earned her recognition.

Mrs. Smith was well accomplished in academia and also accomplished in awards, advisory board appointments, and was even highlighted by NBC's Today Show.

Mr. Speaker, I think it's important that the Members understand that there are many Americans, including myself and including many others, that have been honored by the Lab School of Washington. Those of us that have learning disabilities, auditory processing, dyslexia, what have you, Mrs. Smith gave young people the inspiration and adults the inspiration to pursue beyond their disabilities. Those have been honored by the Lab School because Sally was a part of lifting the hopes and the dreams not only of the students, but the parents, people like Magic Johnson, James Earl Jones, and also Danny Glover and Charles Schwab have been honored by the Lab School.

We will miss Mrs. Smith, but we know that her legacy and memory will continue.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. CUELLAR). Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. FLAKE) is recognized for 5 minutes.

(Mr. FLAKE addressed the House. His remarks will appear hereafter in the Extensions of Remarks.)

ENERGY INDEPENDENCE FOR AMERICA

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 18, 2007, the gentleman from New Mexico (Mr. PEARCE) is recognized for 60 minutes as the designer of the minority leader.

Mr. PEARCE. Mr. Speaker, I would like to address the body tonight about what we are facing in this country as we experience higher gasoline prices, higher energy prices everywhere, and there is an article that I will submit for the RECORD today: Dow Chemical announced it is going to cut jobs and close plants in the United States.

DOW CHEMICAL TO CUT JOBS AND CLOSE PLANTS

(By Bob Sechler and Ana Campoy)

Dec. 5—Dow Chemical Co. plans to cut 1,000 jobs and shutter a number of underperforming plants, saying it will put the savings into higher-growth opportunities.

The job cuts constitute about 2.3% of Dow's estimated 42,500 employees. The chemical company expects to incur a fourth-quarter charge of $500 million to $600 million, including costs for severance and asset write-downs.

The effort "reflects our commitment to prune businesses that are not delivering appropriate value and tackle tasks more efficiently across the entire organization," Chief Executive Andrew N. Liveris said in a statement.

Dow Chemical, based in Midland, Mich., has been struggling with higher prices for natural gas and oil, the main feedstock for making chemicals, commodity chemicals, or the basic building blocks for more complex chemicals. Basic chemicals account for about 50% of the company's revenue.

To reduce its costs, the company has been actively moving its commodity-chemical production to places like Asia and the Middle East, where raw materials are cheaper. It has also worked with local companies in those regions to reduce the amount of money it has to invest.

The company also is trying to expand its specialty-chemical business, which is more profitable and less exposed to the ups and downs of energy markets. Dow has been widely expected to unveil a major joint venture or acquisition that would reduce its dependence on low-margin commodity chemicals.

The company pegged the annual savings from the moves at $180 million once complete.

Among the moves announced yesterday, Dow said it will exit the auto-sealers business in North America, Asia Pacific and Latin America, and explore options for the business. Environmental will close an agricultural-chemicals manufacturing plant in Lauterbourg, France.

Now, it's not that it is cutting those jobs in the United States and simply lowering its production worldwide. What it is doing is cutting jobs in America in order to make more competitive changes to the company and have those jobs overseas.

This is a significant thing that we on the Republican side have been talking about for the last several years. It is time for us as a Nation to fight the economic fight that that we are fighting with. We cannot continue to ignore what other nations are doing and what our energy costs are or we are going to continue to see headlines like this today with Dow Chemical cutting jobs and closing plants.

Now, we had a precursor to this earlier this year. Dow Chemical announced that it was going to build a plant in Saudi Arabia that cost $22 billion, an investment that large in Saudi Arabia could end up meaning that Dow would also start in China another plant for approximately $8 billion, and they knew at that point that they would begin this transfer of jobs.

Now, we have to ask ourselves is it because Dow Chemical is just a bad corporate partner? Maybe they are just after corporate greed. They're going to make profits at the expense of the United States, because that's what we have heard. We have heard on the House floor that corporations are evil, that they don't have the interests of the country at heart.

As we look at it a little bit closer, we recognize that in the United States just today the price for natural gas are quoted at above the $8 range. We have at the same point, and natural gas is a very key component of Dow Chemical's products; in other words, about 50 percent of their costs, if I am not mistaken, come from their raw materials, of which natural gas is the key component. So there is a direct correlation between the price of natural gas and jobs in this country. Now, when we are paying above $8 for natural gas, what are they paying in Saudi Arabia? In Saudi Arabia the price is today about 75 cents. So almost one tenth, one tenth the cost for 50 percent of their raw materials in Saudi Arabia versus here.

Now, you don't have to be schooled in economics. You simply have to understand that you are not going to Wal-Mart and pay ten times the cost for something you buy when you could go down the street and get it somewhere else. You go to buy and get the best deal. Companies have to have the same incentive. If Dow Chemical stays here and pays ten times more, ultimately they become noncompetitive in the world. Someone else will set up the plant in Saudi Arabia with one tenth the cost of raw materials, and the jobs will come away from Dow Chemical and go to another plant. So all that Dow Chemical is doing is saying we have competitive forces that cause us to consider this move.

We have done nothing in this Congress to dispel those costs, to drive those costs lower. And, in fact, it is this Congress that is mandating the switch nationwide from coal production, coal-produced energy, to natural gas-produced energy. Now, that’s fine except you must realize when we drive that demand up as a regulatory agency, as a government, that we drive the demand up and we say you are going to convert for clean air purposes from coal to natural gas, you have a great increase in demand. It is simply a supply and demand problem. So we have the outcome today. We are seeing Dow Chemical ship jobs overseas.

Now, we have to then look at what the Congress is doing. Speaker Pelosi announced very early on that it was her desire to make this country independent of foreign companies. I will tell you that what we are finding now, we see this particular chart, and this is for the summer of 2007 and moving forward, we see the predictions that we have a 23 percent estimated increase in prices for the western part of the country; in the middle regions about 30 percent increase; 19 percent on the eastern seaboard; in Florida we are seeing 21 percent; Texas, 32 percent; California, 29 percent. Now, when you are seeing increases such as this, you would say that we as consumers are not seeing this energy independence. If we are, it’s not a helpful thing to us, that, in fact, it is somewhat hurtful when we see energy prices and our home heating increasing by that much. We are told these are the forecasts right now, so we are seeing the effects not only in jobs but also everyday costs.

We have passed two bills, one back in January, H.R. 6, and then we also passed H.R. 3221, and those were to deal with the problem of higher prices, and yet they still have not come back from the Senate. We still don’t have an agreement. And I will say that in the early stages, the things that we saw pass off this House floor were actually penalties to energy independence. They tax American companies but they don’t tax Hugo Chavez.

Now, we must at some point ask ourselves why we have a policy that would tax American companies and American jobs, would limit the supply so that the cost goes up and we lose jobs. Exactly why are we doing this as a country? Why are we suggesting passing policy off the floor that is causing this particular thing? That are things that we Americans should be asking, and we are asking, and yet we don’t have a good, clear answer.

It appears to me, because I am not involved in the conference, the discussions between the House and the Senate, it appears to me that special-interest groups have dominated those discussions and have said we are going to tax those high-profit oil companies because they are making $100 per barrel of oil, maybe today it is only $80, but it seems like there are strong forces out there that say we need to penalize and punish these American companies because, according to some, they are obviously doing things that are harmful.

I would say that the harmful effects are not to be found. The harmful effects are not there. They’re not documented. The oil companies are simply price takers. Exxon cannot set the price of oil worldwide. They simply take the price that’s offered to them. They have a large production. They are making quite a bit of money, but they have also got a large investment in the offshore rigs. They have got a large investment in transportation costs. Their costs are about the same as any company worldwide. But we are not taxing worldwide companies in each of the energy bills; we are only taxing American companies. And we have to ask ourselves why. Why are we driving the price of natural gas up, sending jobs overseas, and why are we taxing American companies and not taxing Hugo Chavez?

These are the questions that we are hearing about as we move very close to a discussion of what might be in the energy bill when we close this week. We were told at the beginning of the week we will have an energy bill this week; yet we have not seen it on our side. We were told that we are going to discuss it. Tomorrow is the last day of business for the week, to my knowledge, and yet we still don’t have a printed copy, we on the Republican side, and I don’t think many Democrats have seen a written bill. But we do have in front of us what has been done earlier this year.

I am joined tonight by a colleague from Pennsylvania, a classmate of mine, Congressman Tim Murphy. He has concerns also about the direction that we are taking the energy policy in this country. We are facing worldwide competition, increasing pressure from the large states of China, India, the other competitive nations in the world, and at a time when we should be all looking inwards. Democrats and Republicans alike, to protect the economic base of this country and understanding that energy is a key piece of the economic base of this country, that jobs are created around the cost of energy. At a time when we should be focused outward together, we instead have a, suggested policies that punish American producers, American oil and gas companies, and they give competitive advantage to other nations and other territories.

I would like to yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania to talk about the nuclear, the coal, and the natural gas industries. He is from a coal-producing State and has good knowledge on these.

Again, I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. TIM MURPHY of Pennsylvania. I thank the gentleman for yielding to me on this critically important issue about energy. As American families look into the next few months about how they are going to be paying their gas bills as the cold winter sets upon us, as natural gas prices go up, of how they will be paying their automobile costs as gasoline prices go up, as we look at such things as jobs such as those critical jobs that are outlined by my friend from New Mexico, it is extremely important that as Congress looks at facing an energy bill this week that we note not only what is in there but what we expect is not in the bill. Unless we take the breakthrough energy policy in America, America will be facing more brownouts, more times when the power is not there. And in a world where other countries, such as China, are opening up new coal-fired power plant every couple of weeks without the scrubbers and environmental controls we have on, they will be able to undercut us even further with our costs of manufacturing. Unless that will be able to serve us for many years to come, perhaps 250 more years, long after the Mideast is dry in its oil wells.

Closing the mines in Pennsylvania won’t be like closing the businesses in Florida or closing the harbors in New Orleans. The country can’t afford to stop using coal, either. It is a valuable economic resource for our region as other resources available in other parts of the country. So we have to take advantage of every possible resource to meet our energy demands. The messages today are quite simple. We cannot achieve energy independence without coal. We cannot achieve energy security without coal. And our coal must be clean coal, not the other option of no coal at all.

Now, listen to these numbers. They are quite compelling. Over the next 40 years or so, the electricity demand in the United States is 240 percent. These are the demands of people in their homes. They are also the demands of increasing jobs in this country. We will conserve, and we will have make great strides in efficiency. But with the growth in the population and improving quality of life, it all dictates that electricity demands will still increase substantially.
Coal accounts for about 50 percent of our electricity, and nonhydro renewables like solar and wind account for about 2 percent. We have already built as much hydroelectric as possible, and it is doubtful that people will want to see more dams built in the United States today. But even if we triple the share of renewable electricity, we will still need coal for close to half of our electricity in 2050. This means we will still have approximately to double the available coal capacity by 2050 just to meet demand.

Right now there are about 400 coal plants in the United States. Many of them are old and inefficient, outdated. Most or all of them will need to be replaced over the next 40 years. So just to maintain our current level, we are going to need to build about 400 plants to replace those. And then to meet the new electrical demands over the next 40 years, we are going to have to build an additional 400. That is 800 new coal-fired power plants between now and 2050. This is twice as many plants as have been built since the start of the Industrial Revolution. This translates to about one coal plant every 2 to 3 weeks, even if we start in 2010, just to maintain our current coal capacity. And this is not sustainable. We cannot keep building these plants at the rate needed. That is about five per month, or about one every 21/2 months start-to-finish. That is about 200 new nuclear power plants. That is 100 replacements and 100 new ones to meet the expected demands of 2050. The truth is we have already built a single nuclear power plant in the last 30 years, given all the delays and costs associated with nuclear construction. It is going to be difficult, if not impossible, to build plants in the U.S. at the rate needed to meet the needs of the future, about one every 21/2 months starting in 2010. Although the operating costs for nuclear plants are about the same or slightly cheaper than coal, the capital costs are much higher and the lead times for construction and permitting are much longer. The nuclear operating costs also do not include the long-term costs of nuclear waste disposal or storage.

As with natural gas, the enactment of greenhouse gas legislation in what we are discussing is the current form, without working to help the nuclear is going to increase the demand for nuclear power and place further strain on resources and increase costs. So there are two of our biggest renewable sources for producing electricity, coal and nuclear, are areas that Congress has got to deal with seriously.

We have 250, perhaps 300 years’ worth of coal in the ground. Scientists are predicting that if we burn half of this, we have zero emissions coal, zero greenhouse gases, massively reduce that. Right now I know in Pennsylvania about 40 percent of our coal-fired power plants have no scrubbers, or inadequate scrubbers. Unfortunately, the way new source review works is if a company says let’s work to improve efficiency, let’s put in new turbines or other things that improve efficiency by a few percent, at that point, the government comes in and says, no, we now have to rework everything. If you don’t take care of everything with all the scrubbers, you can’t do it at all. The companies say, well, we were
I would like to yield to the gentleman from Utah, a good friend of mine, Representative Bishop, who heads the National Parks Public Lands Subcommittee in the Resources Committee, is knowledgeable about national forests and also presents the opportunity that we have to help lower energy costs by using renewable fuels as the technology exists or does not exist today.

I yield to the gentleman from Utah, Mr. BISHOP of Utah. I thank the gentleman from New Mexico for offering, for allowing me an opportunity of saying a few words on what will be a significant piece of legislation that we will maybe be asked to vote upon this week.

You know, it is only intuitive that this Nation should be energy independent. If we were energy independent, not relying on foreign sources of energy from obviously other places, not only would it allow our military to have flexibility in whatever situation upon which it is called to be used, but it allows our diplomacy to be used in flexibility in any situation.

Now, how do we actually replace this foreign oil that is presently being brought in here? Everyone who understands the situation will tell you there is no simple, single silver bullet. Multiple means have to be used.

Energy conservation and efficiency in transportation, things we have talked about, those are good. That is part of the mix. But only about 16 percent of our foreign oil imports could be eliminated simply by using efficiency in transportation or energy conservation means. Other methods have to be added to the mix as well, and one of those is biomass.

Biomass by itself could produce 24 percent of all the foreign oil we are importing into this country, far more than our best efforts of conservation or efficiency. If we combined those two together, we are well on our way to trying to become energy independent.

For those of you like me that like technical talk, biomass is dead trees, dead shrubs, the stuff that burns in forests if you don’t remove it first. And as much as our friends on the other side of the aisle will continuously say they want to require biomass to be part of the fuel standards, the renewable after having fuel standards, the bill that will be brought before us this week will not allow biofuels, dead trees, to come from the one and the largest source of those dead materials, and that is Federal lands where we have unhealthy and overgrown forests. That is specifically prohibited as part of the alternative energy formula.

Now, when we limit the collection of hazardous fuels from those forests, that biomass material, what we are really doing in essence is gutting the Healthy Forest Restoration Act, a bipartisan bill that was passed last year, in an effort to prevent catastrophic fires, wildfires, those fires that we have... seen that destroy property, that actually push more pollutants into the air than any highway full of cars can ever do, and, more importantly, they destroy the lives of people who are caught in the path. This act was there to bring a new energy to people in the West and to ensure that the ecosystem would recover from a collapsed timber industry forced on them by outside sources.

This bill tries in some way to help with payment in lieu of taxes to western or rural schools; yet at the same time, some rural schools are rural districts that relied upon the timber industry and can no longer do it because of outside decisions, and therefore they are getting subsidies for their school systems. At the same time this bill tries to help those schools, it prohibits them from ever having any kind of natural recovery within those areas by prohibiting their last source of job creation in those areas, which is recovering the dead fuel in the forests.

Now, that is the hope, and that is eliminated in the bill that we will have coming before us. It isn’t enough that this energy bill prevents the use of this material that is grown in those areas; it prohibits the use that is used in private forests to maintain their health as well.

The Democrat intents of this bill seems to be clear: If you can prohibit the collection of biomass, the dead stuff in the forests, and make the provisions so unworkable, then obviously no responsible company would ever attempt to comply and go in and therefore do it. So the essence is, like Marie Antoinette of old who said, "Let them eat cake," the essence of this bill is simply let it burn. That is what will happen to our forests, when it could be being used to help us become energy independent and energy self-sufficient.

And it is a key and crucial element. Not only can we help our societies by reducing wildfires, we can help have jobs in those rural areas that need them so desperately. We can help all of society become energy independent by using a renewable source, but it is specifically prohibited by the language that you will find in this particular bill.

Now, once again, I am very simple, and I need to know who is going to be hurt by this situation. I am an old schoolhouse teacher.

We have two States in the West bordering one another, one of which puts its emphasis on proactive energy development and the other does not. A starting teacher in the school district that puts its emphasis in proactive energy development makes $4,000 a year more than a fourth-year teacher in the neighboring State will do. So who is hurt when we prohibit and eliminate the opportunity of expanding our energy production in the West? Well, the kids in the schools. And the teachers are, the road funds that you need to construct roads in those larger western areas. Those people who actually pay taxes will be hit higher when we don’t need to do it if we simply look to the resources we have.

As the gentleman from New Mexico clearly said, quoting Daniel Webster, this quote that is in this Chamber, we sit and look, we say, very few of us actually look up these words, but, once again, Daniel Webster said, “Let us develop the resources of our land, call forth its powers, build up its institutions, promote all its great interests.” And why? “And see whether we also, in our rural areas, may not perform something worthy to be remembered.”

This bill that will be before us is a bill that is not going to be worthy to be remembered. It does not move us towards energy self-sufficiency. It does not make us independent in our efforts. It does not grow our energy needs and provide jobs and provide a cleaner kind of energy for the future.

It simply doesn’t make the cut on a whole bunch of areas, one of which happens to be biomass. What could have been a great source for energy in the future is literally shut out by provisions in this bill that should not be there, ever. It is the wrong approach to take.

Now, I appreciate the chance of rambling on here for a minute, and I appreciate what my good friend from New Mexico is doing to present the concepts that are in this bill that we are glossing over, in an effort to try and rush an energy bill just before Christmas. No one is going to have the time to look at it. No one is going to have the time to study it. No one is going to have the time to simply sit down and say, you know, there is a better way. We could tweak it here and there and actually come up with a decent policy. But because we have waited and piddled around until the very end of the session when our backs are to the wall, and because we have waited and pid- dled around until the very end of the session when our backs are to the wall, we are going to be faced with an up or down vote on something that just isn’t worth it. It has too many flaws.

With that, I would yield back to the gentleman from New Mexico.

MR. PEARCE. I thank the gentleman from Utah for his compelling arguments.

The situation is, again, there appears that there will be a requirement to produce ethanol from cellulose, which is a nice thing to think about. We have had to be faced with the fact that no technology exists to do that, and it could be 20 years before that technology exists.

Now, you would ask what are the circumstances in the bill that deal with this. What if there is no technology, but there is a requirement? That is fairly simple. There is up to $2 a gallon penalty, tax, fee, on the companies, the refineries, if they can’t produce the minimum amount of ethanol from cellulose. So, first of all, we are restricted from using our relatively healthy forests and stopping them from burning down. We have all seen the wildfires in San Diego and New Mexico. We had the Los Alamos fire back in 2000. We had the Kokopelli fire up near Ruidoso that burned 30-something houses. We have seen the devastating effects of wildfires in the West, and yet we are prohibited now by this law from going in and taking those fibers. One would ask, where is the sense in that? Why are we doing that? I would say again, it is special interests, the extremists of the environmental movement who say we are not going to allow the Forest Service to cut one single tree. We are not going to throw any harvest.

We passed the healthy forest initiative back about 2004, and yet this is the way that we gut the bills. We can say on the one hand we passed the healthy forest initiative, and then we don’t quite tell the people of the country that the healthy forest initiative will not be implemented. We won’t keep our forests healthy because we are going to prevent anybody from using those materials out of them. So it is going to be a sheer cost, a cost to the government, where we could get someone to pay the government.

Mr. Speaker, I would submit the article from the Human Events paper, “America Does Not Need a San Francisco Energy Policy,” for the RECORD.

AMERICA DOES NOT NEED A SAN FRANCISCO ENERGY POLICY

(By Representative Steve Pearce)

When Democrats took control of Congress last year, they promised to do something about energy prices. They have delivered on that promise by driving the price of oil to an all-time high of $99 per barrel and forcing families to tighten their budgets. Apparently unfazed by this dramatic increase, the Democratic leadership is poised to deliver legislation that will drive prices even higher and make us more reliant on foreign sources of energy.

LEAVING AMERICANS IN THE DARK

Behind closed doors, House Speaker Nancy Pelosi (D.-Calif.) and Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid (D.-Nev.) are piecing together an energy bill that they plan to unfold sometime in December. In violating procedural rules they promised to uphold, this secretive process prevents both Republicans and Democrats from heading off offensive provisions that would otherwise receive public scrutiny. It appears it is not just the majority’s energy plan, but also the process that leaves Americans in the dark.

The mad scientists behind those locked doors are using the remains of two considerably flawed energy bills that came one each from the House and from the Senate. Every objective analysis of both bills concludes that the healthy forest initiative will be eliminated in the bill that we will have coming before us. It isn’t enough that this energy bill prevents the use of this material that is grown in those areas, which is recovering the dead fuel in the forests.

The mad scientists behind those locked doors are using the remains of two considerably flawed energy bills that came one each from the House and from the Senate. Every objective analysis of both bills concludes that they will hurt the U.S. economy. A recent study conducted by a highly respected non-partisan business consulting firm estimated that by 2030, the House and Senate energy bills will cause the loss of five million American jobs, a 4% reduction in gross domestic product annually (more than $1 trillion) and an estimated loss of $1.788 in spending power for the average household each year.

BUREAUCRATIC HURDLES

The House bill, in particular, is designed to increase bureaucratic red tape and restrict the development of clean energy production from oil, natural gas, wind, solar and biomass and punish American energy companies for being in the business of making energy.

Here are just a few of the worst examples of how Democrats would make energy more
Mr. PEARCE. Mr. Speaker, now we should talk about the components of the bill that is suggested. Again, keep in mind that we are here talking about the future of the Nation. We are talking about the philosophical underpinning of where we are going in this country with our jobs, with our economy, with our future. This bill is at the basis that the American economy is driven by affordable, cheap energy.

And what are we to say about the bill? We are having to speculate. We are told that it’s coming up this week, either today or tomorrow. It’s obvious that it’s not coming up today. So one would say that it must come up tomorrow because we had that promise from the Speaker of the House. Anyway, yet we don’t have the text of the bill that is dealing with our future as a Nation, our ability to make and create jobs, and we know nothing tonight so that we can not really talk in anything but speculative terms. But we feel fairly certain on those speculative terms because we have had leaks from behind those closed doors where this process is going on.

Mr. Speaker, now it is a very simple process that we are engaged in.

The price of gas is 75 cents, not over $8. It is a very simple process that we are engaged in.

Now, the sad thing, and this is where you really must understand that there are elements of this tax provision that include a rollback of the section 199 manufacturers’ deduction. That was a deduction that was passed in Congress back in 2004. It included oil and gas, but it was specifically there to encourage increased domestic production activities. We wanted to assure American jobs and we wanted to assure that American jobs were competitive with overseas countries. But there is going to be a rollback in the 199 taxes. I’m sorry; we established the section 199 manufacturers’ deduction but the bill that is coming before us, it has leaked out that it has a rollback in those incentives for production.

Now, the difficult thing is that the rollback hits only the top five producers. It hits BP, Chevron, ConocoPhillips, ExxonMobil, and Shell.

Now if you are listening like I am reading this list, then you are wondering who got left out of the list. Who’s not going to see a tax increase? Citgo.

Now Citgo is owned by Hugo Chavez. I do not know if it is by design, but I can say that according to the information that is out right now, there is going to be a rollback in deduction for the top five companies so that they pay more taxes, and we are not charging Hugo Chavez any more tax. One has to wonder about the value system that says don’t charge Hugo Chavez but do charge ConocoPhillips, do charge Texaco, do charge Shell and BP.

Now, what you have been led to believe, if you listen to the people on the left, they want you to believe that ExxonMobil is an evil entity; that they by themselves are driving the price of oil up that they might profit. When we look at a world assessment of size of companies, we realize the falseness of that argument.

Now, I look at this chart which begins to look at countries and companies. Many countries own their oil companies. Saudi Arabia by far has the largest oil company, you can see. It has about 10.3 million barrels per day. You go to Iran. It has a very large oil company. The Iraqi National Oil Company is actually quite large. Qatar, Kuwait, Venezuela, ADNOC, Nigeria. You notice we are not even yet to ExxonMobil.

And yet HILLARY CLINTON says, I am going to take ExxonMobil’s profits and spend them. NANCY PELOSI has said the same thing. We are going to take ExxonMobil profits and spend them. We haven’t taken yet any profits from any of these companies, and they dwarf ExxonMobil. We go all the way down to this far on the chart before we find the first privately owned companies on the list.

ExxonMobil is owned privately by you, the shareholders, the stockholders. You can buy it every day. ExxonMobil is going to be charged taxes. It’s going to make them less competitive. We are going to do away with more jobs so that these companies, these state-owned companies might have an easier time to take our jobs. I wonder at the thought process that went into that. I wonder what compelled policymakers here, the Speaker of the House to say we are going to tax American consumers, we are going to tax American companies, and we are going to let Hugo Chavez, we are going to let Nigeria, we are going to let Kuwait, Saudi Arabia go.

We also have other considerations. In the bills that we have passed, the bills that we have passed out of this Congress so far about energy, we have done kind of sort of a tricky thing. There is much discussion about Enron. That was a large power company that became synonymous with tricky dealings, double dealings. It became synonymous with Enron and tricky deal-making.

The sales looked really good until we considered the fine print. So our friends on the other side of the aisle used those offshore taxes, those 1998/1999 leases to offset, to be the PAYGO in H.R. 6. They used it in H.R. 2419. H.R. 6 we passed back on January 18. H.R. 2419, we passed July 27. They used them again on August 4 in H.R. 3221. And they used them again in H.R. 3058, which still has only passed the committee but yet has not passed the floor.

When we as policymakers begin to do round-trip sales, it’s no wonder that we have the reputation that only 9 or 10 percent of the American public really trusts what we are doing. We are doing things that do not make sense for our economy. We are doing things that are creating a false illusion about our potential to pay for things that we are saying we are going to do. We are watching our jobs leave and go away, all because we in this country need affordable energy, and yet we are doing things that hurt the chances of providing affordable energy.

Again, the point that we object to in this Congress is that we know how big your bill is and we are talking about this week, are the renewable fuel standards that are not achievable and keep us from implementing the healthy forest initiative so that we don’t burn down our forests. It’s objectionable that a renewable portfolio standard that we cannot reach. It’s objectionable that we are raising taxes by $21 billion to American consumers. It’s objectionable that we are using a tax that is going to be punitive to American companies but will not tax Hugo Chavez. At the end of the day we have to ask ourselves exactly why. Why is it that this majority is taking these stances that harm Americans so much? I don’t know an answer to that. I would like to submit for the RECORD a summary of the report, the Charles River report. In that, Charles River is suggesting that we are going to lose jobs, almost $5 million from the energy policies that are being suggested. In that, we are going to lose 5 million jobs. The average American household’s purchasing power could drop by $1,700 by 2030. Aggregate business investment in the U.S. could drop by as much as $220 billion by 2030. Higher energy costs place upward pressure on manufacturing costs, and businesses have less capital to absorb the impact. As household and business consumption fall, demand for goods and services weakens.

Our national GDP could decline by more than $1 trillion by 2030. In addition, refined fuels and home heating oil, this would likely impact quantities of energy would be needed to produce and transport many goods and services.

Costs of petroleum products could more than double by 2030. The impact would likely be felt sooner, with an estimate of more than 2 million jobs lost by the year 2020, and about 3.4 million jobs lost by the year 2025. These estimates take into account jobs that would be created by the nearly five-fold expansion of the biofuels mandate.

The average American household’s purchasing power could drop by about $1,700 by 2030. Higher energy and non-energy costs estimated in the study would mean that consumers must spend a larger percentage of their income to maintain their current level of consumption. This could force Americans to make lifestyle changes. Significant quantities of energy would be needed to produce and transport many goods and services.

In aggregate business investment in the U.S. could drop by as much as $220 billion by 2030. Higher energy costs place upward pressure on manufacturing costs, and businesses have less capital to absorb the impact. As household and business consumption fall, demand for goods and services weakens.

Our national GDP could decline by more than $1 trillion by 2030. In addition, refined fuels and home heating oil, this would likely impact the many products that have oil or natural gas components, including toothpaste, cell phones, infant seats, and pacemakers.

IOWA PRESIDENTIAL CAUCUS

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. CUELLAR). Under the Speaker’s announced policy of January 18, 2007, the Speaker recognizes Mr. King (Mr. KING) for 60 minutes.

Mr. KING of Iowa. Mr. Speaker, I very much appreciate the privilege to be recognized and address you here on the floor of the United States House of Representatives. Each time I come to the floor to address you and speak into the RECORD, I am very well aware that there are people in my district, Iowans and Americans, who are tuned in for one reason or another, who are shaping their ideas and their values as they listen to the deliberations of the House, this great deliberative and this great debate body which has 435 Members, representing 300 million of us, each of... us representing roughly 660,000 constituents. We are called upon by the Constitution and the rights that are passed from God through the Declaration and the Constitution, we are called upon to step up to those responsibilities. We are elected to represent the people in our districts with the priorities of what is good for America. First God, then country, then State, and then district.

I know, Mr. Speaker, there are Members who view their jobs simply reflecting the political will of their constituents. In other words, take a poll, wet the finger, see which way the wind is blowing, put down a vote, and determine that your longevity here in this Congress somehow puts together this vast mosaic which turns out to be a beautiful painting. I, Mr. Speaker, do not believe that.

I believe we are charged with the responsibility of leadership. We are elected for our judgment. We owe our best effort to our constituents, and part of that best effort and best judgment is to listen to them and receive their input, but exchange the information that we gather here and across the country.

We pay attention to the issues that affect this Nation. We have access to more information than most of our constituents do. We have a responsibility to process that information, give our opinion back to our constituents, and make a conclusion on how best to conduct ourselves on our public statements which affect public policy, on our votes and on our activities, on the bills that we sponsor and cosponsor and author, and the positions that we take in committee and here on the floor. All of that comes with great profound responsibility of serving people here in the United States Congress.

I came here this evening to address one of these responsibilities, and maybe a little bit outside of the realm of an official duty of a Member of Congress, but certainly implied within our duty and responsibility, and that is that all of us in this Chamber are involved in a constant conversation with each other, with our constituents, with our associates, with the press, on how we select the next leader in the free world because, Mr. Speaker, the nomination process here in America will collide two nominations, one Democrat and one Republican, and perhaps an Independent, that will be on the ballot in November. One of them will be the next leader of the free world. One of them will be the Commander in Chief of the Armed Services of the only unchallenged superpower on the globe, and with that comes a series of profound responsibilities.

So how then do we in these positions of leadership, how do we take this job, and I am going to say seriously, to make this evaluation? How do we come to the conclusion on whom we support and might consider endorsing for President of the United States?

I, Mr. Speaker, have the great privilege to represent a district in Iowa, one of five Congressional districts, where we are the first in the Nation contest. Iowans will, in the caucus on January 3, make the first recommendation to the rest of the Nation and the individual who Iowans believe will make the next President of the United States, both Democrats and Republicans.

We have had that responsibility of the first in the Nation caucus for several decades now. I believe it was Jimmy Carter that first identified the leverage and the opportunity to come to Iowa in the first in the nation caucus and engage in that process and emerge victorious and go on to New Hampshire and South Carolina and beyond and be successful in the process of nomination and be successful in the process of being elected as President.

Jimmy Carter identified that opportunity to Iowa at that time that we have had Presidential candidates constantly in Iowa over the last year and a half in particular. But this process is an open process whereby it is the first time in my memory that both the Democrats and the Republicans neither have an incumbent President that will be up for renomination for a second term or a Vice President who might have been picked or anointed by a sitting President. It is wide open. It is wide open for Democrats and Republicans for 3 years, perhaps, maybe a little more than 3 years.

So we have seen candidates come through Iowa, and I am sure the people in New Hampshire have as well, and the South Carolinians as well, and this has been going on for a year and a half. Now it is coming down to the crunch time. Iowans will be making their decision on whom they will support in the caucus within the next 30 days, 29 days, perhaps.

There are a lot of Iowans who have not yet made up their mind. I am here to say I understand why. The January 3 contest will bring 100,000 Republicans out who will go to homes across the State. Some will be sitting in living rooms and gyms where they pull the caucuses together for an entire county. Some will go to schools or other public buildings, but many will go to the homes of Iowans and sit in the living room. Sometimes they will not all fit in one room and they will flow into other rooms, but they will go through the process, Republicans and Democrats, declaring themselves. Democrats openly declare themselves for Presidential candidate. Republicans put up a candidate on a piece of paper, and they can maybe vote for a Presidential candidate in a caucus and not be identified as a supporter for a particular candidate. Generally, we listen to each other, we exchange our ideas and reach a conclusion on how best to conduct ourselves.

But before I get into that, I want to get into how important it is that we have a process of nomination that includes a contest like an Iowa caucus, an opportunity for individuals, to caucus-goers, registered voters, and they will all be registered voters who will vote for our candidates, regular people, heartland people, regular Americans from all walks of life, it is so important we have a process that allows the supporters of the candidates to get to know the Presidents.

We are in this modern cyber era where information goes with the click of a mouse and you can transfer capital around the world in a nanosecond. In that period of time, we can also transmit visual images and radio commercials and print text in the blogosphere. Anyone who has an e-mail distribution list can listen to a Presidential candidate in a living room in Davenport, Iowa, write that little quote down and pump it into their BlackBerry and send it right down their e-mail distribution list. We have those kinds of folks who do that.

These Presidential candidates are being evaluated day by day, hour by hour, minute by minute, by people who they see and how they weigh in on this nomination process very seriously.

We have developed over the generations astute people who are engaged in politics. But I don’t want to say that Iowans are the only ones that have that ability because we don’t. Obviously that ability exists in every State in significant numbers. But I do want to say that if no State has a first in the Nation caucus process, if every State, for example, if we went to Super Tuesday on the 5th of February, if everybody held the primary contest at the same time, the polls opened at 7 in the morning and closed at 9 at night, we would all go as in a Nation, 300 million of us, those who voted in the primary, at least a ballot for our selection for nominee, if we did that, we would nominate the Democrat candidate and the Republican candidate who had the deepest pockets, most ability to raise money and the most ability to buy ads and to put their chances out before the American people to convince them that on Super Tuesday, February 5, they should go to the polls and vote for them. Not a personal contest, but a media image, money raising contest is what we want to have. We will have the media image, money raising contest on Super Tuesday on February 5 and those dates beyond that other States have their primaries, and some have a caucus or convention.

Iowans this first in the Nation caucus is different. You simply cannot earn votes by running media. You simply can’t run television ads and radio ads and print and mailer and do robocalls and be able to get people to be inspired to get up on a cold January night and go to the living room or the school gymnasium and declare for a candidate for President. It takes more than that.

But before I get into that, I want to get into how important it is that we have a process of nomination that includes a contest like an Iowa caucus, an opportunity for individuals, to caucus-goers, registered voters, and they will all be registered voters who will vote for our candidates, regular people, heartland people, regular Americans from all walks of life, it is so important we have a process that allows the supporters of the candidates to get to know the Presidents.
If people are going to invest hours of their time, because it isn’t just write the name of a Presidential candidate on a piece of paper and turn it in. It also includes the initial offering of the planks for the State party platform and the election of the delegates to go to the county conventions. These nights are full of political debate and exchange of ideas.

There are people who will go to the caucuses who have more at up their mind who they will support for President, but they will listen to the speeches, whether Republicans or Democrats.

So what is this caucus process and why is it unique? It is unique because it requires organization. It requires the candidate to build an organization within the State, to identify workers within the counties and people that will go forth and profess the validity of their candidate as the best President that we could ask for in this era as President of the United States.

This statewide conversation that goes on continually is a conversation one on one, person to person. It goes on in the coffee shop and it goes on in schools and churches and over the radio and TV go on over the telephone lines from neighbor to neighbor and business conversation to business conversation. People seeking to influence others to support their candidate and others that are ambivalent, and they lay out the principles that they require a candidate to stand for, but may not be behind the personality of the individuals.

And there are components of this statewide conversation that have to do with anecdotes about each of the Presidential candidates, how they conducted themselves in private. Maybe they went to a barbecue someplace in Iowa County and when nobody was looking, they got up and cleaned off the table and helped maybe they got hired at a staff aide and cut loose and yelled at them behind the curtain and the stage when they thought nobody was listening. And maybe they walked off with some young kids when intense conversations were going on about policy and sat down over by the lake and had a conversation about God and country with young impressionable children that won’t be voting for that candidate. They might be leaders of this country at a future time. They might left behind in young people instead of likely caucus-goers.

All of these little anecdotes get added up and transferred along and retold, and they become part of the personality, part of the evaluation of each of the Presidential candidates.

This is a statewide conversation through e-mail, by telephone, in print media, word of mouth, things that are said and unsaid. Most good, some negative. But in the end, Iowans will come to a measure of a consensus and they will support different candidates, obviously. But they will make a recommendation. Some candidates will be weeded out and some candidates will be advanced. But there will be two tickets punched in New Hampshire, no more than three, maybe only one.

But to win the Iowa caucus says you have met the standards. You have held up under the bright light of public scrutiny and you have done that for more than a year, and you have not been found wanting in your character or your policy. Your faith will be measured. Your work ethic will be measured. The tempo of your work, the people who are gathered around as paid staff and volunteers, all of them become part of a team, and the personal identities of each of those players makes a difference in the evaluations process. If we do not have such a process, then again it becomes just a media campaign, just a media contest.

I would take you back, Mr. Speaker, to reflect upon the 2004 caucus when, at this stage before the caucus, a month before the caucus, the national news media had Howard Dean as the nominee for President for the Democratic Party, because Howard Dean had built up an organization based on a lot of money, he had an Internet presence there that was unique and hadn’t been matched at the time. The polls were showing that Howard Dean was way ahead and that his next closest competition would be able to overcome him or overtake him. And yet 3 weeks before the caucus, at least 2 weeks, in that period of time, 2 to 3 weeks before the caucus, we knew that Howard Dean was not going to win the Iowa caucus. He might have won the nomination elsewhere, but we knew he wasn’t going to win the Iowa caucus. We could tell on the streets of Iowa. People were starting to walk away from and back away from Howard Dean.

Mr. Speaker, I don’t come here to speak ill of the individual. He set a new standard and certainly made a name for himself in the State and across America. And many, many Iowans had the opportunity to meet Howard Dean. But I think that the conclusion that they drew and the reason that they didn’t show up in the Democrat caucus where you have to stand up and say, I’m for Howard Dean, all of us that are for him, come gather around here, well it will be the first time the number of people that showed up to support him. If there is an insufficient number, then we won’t be able to report support for Howard from this caucus. That’s the system and the rules that they have set up. And, truthfully, they did not show up to support Howard Dean. That was not because of the scream. The scream was a result of folks not showing up to support him, Mr. Speaker. I believe that Iowans came to the conclusion that Howard Dean, as of the time they had to offer, did not have the temperament to be President of the United States. I think that was the bottom line conclusion.

And as Iowans walked away from Howard Dean, John Kerry then won Iowa and went on to win the nomination. His prospects were pretty dim at this point and 4 years ago, but we know how history launched John Kerry forward and how the Iowa caucus process恋人 to let out the scream that was the scream of frustration that, of all the good things he had done as he was on the inside track and he was turning on towards victory and it collapsed, because in the end, how can we make a measurement on real people, evaluating their work ethic, their faith, their character, their personalities, how they interact with people. That’s something that only happens there and only happens in Iowa. It happens, I think, in New Hampshire also to some degree, but it is a different process. It is a primary process, not a caucus process. So it changes the dynamic in New Hampshire. And then beyond it becomes more and more of a media and less and less of an organizational effort.

But to have this unique process, this first-in-the-Nation caucus process so that Presidential candidates are meeting people face-to-face, eye-to-eye. Some might call it a relic of the old days, but I will tell you that I believe, Mr. Speaker, that it is the foundation of one of the great things about America that those of us who have the privilege to represent the people, whether it is in the White House or in the Congress or in the statehouse or through our courthouses or city hall, we face the people, we answer their questions, we let them evaluate us and believe in and we let them evaluate our work ethic and our value system, and then they make the decision. It is up to the people.

So I am a great fan of this caucus process. I will do all I can to protect and preserve it, because I do not want to see an America that is simply a paid media nomination and a paid media campaign that insulates Presidential candidates from the people. That’s something that only happens here. That’s something that launches somebody off to be President who might not meet that test if they had to look you or me in the eye. That is what the caucus does.

On the Republican side of this in the Iowa caucus, Mr. Speaker, we are evaluating a lot of different components, and we have watched the polls sort some of this through. We have some very good people there that stand solid on the issues. Some people with whom I might have invested in young people instead of likely caucus-goers.
I want to at this point, Mr. Speaker, compliment my friend Tom Tancredo for making immigration the issue of the day. When I first met him, I already knew him, I thought, because of the hours that he had spent on this floor speaking into this microphone. Mr. Speaker, about the importance of border control, about the importance of preserving our national sovereignty by controlling our borders and who comes in the United States and who does not, protecting the security of the American people from the terrorists from without. Tom Tancredo has done that job to the extent where, in the debate the other night, they spent 30 minutes or more, all of the Presidential candidates, debating on who would be the toughest on immigration and who would be the most like Tom Tancredo. I call that a victory for Tom Tancredo. I think he has implanted the issue that burns the most passionately within him, the immigration reform, border control, workplace enforcement, ending anchor babies, the automatic citizenship that comes with babies of illegal immigrants who are born here on American soil. All of those components that have been hard sold so hard for all of these years, many of which I stood on this very floor and debated with him and supported with him, and he has come forward to support me on the agenda that I brought forward. I want to compliment Tom Tancredo, because they all were there, standing there seeking to out-Tom Tancredo, Tom Tancredo. And to some extent that is what happens in a Presidential campaign when the issue that is the most important to you is adopted by the rest of the candidates.

Now, it doesn’t mean they didn’t have some opinions on it. It doesn’t mean that immigration wasn’t important to them. But what I have seen happen is, underestimating the Tom Tancredo was right, and they wanted to make sure that they had a plank in their platform that reflected the view that he brings to the immigration issue, and generally it is a no amnesty pledge.

I believe all the Presidential candidates have taken the pledge to be opposed to amnesty. Mr. Speaker, amnesty is and it needs to be defined, and I have done so here many times, to grant immunity to pardon immigration lawbreakers and reward them with the objective of their crimes.

The reason that definition is that way is because those who come into the United States across the border illegally are criminals. They are guilty of the criminal misdemeanor of illegal entry into the United States. And those who overstay their visas are unlawfully present here in the United States, and they are generally guilty of a civil misdemeanor of overstaying their visas. I think we would say those who are unlawfully present and many of those who are lawfully present and it is not lawful for them to work here, still falsify documents, still present themselves to be somebody they are not in order to get a job, in order to do some type of business here to gain the benefits of this society. Most of those who cross the border are committing a criminal misdemeanor, and most of those who overstayed their visas have also violated or committed some crime, generally document fraud, identity fraud in order to achieve access to our benefits or jobs here in the United States.

So this is a group of people who stood up and said they do not deserve amnesty. We do not want to reward immigration lawbreakers. So whether they jumped the border illegally or overstayed their visa, they are lawbreakers. And they should not be rewarded, because if we do, we will get more of them, not less. And to grant a pardon to immigration lawbreakers and reward them with the objective of their crime. What was their objective? Well, to be in the United States for one thing, obviously, because that is the definition of what they have done is found themselves unlawfully present in the United States. And their objective to be in the United States, if we grant them an amnesty that lets them stay in the United States, that’s amnesty. We have rewarded them with the objective of their crimes. Or, if they are working here unlawfully and we jigger the books so that we give them an opportunity to continue working here but we legalize it, we have granted them amnesty because we pardoned them for their crime and we gave them their objective, which is a job. Or, if they just want to live here and utilize the social benefits of this great welfare state that we have, that also could be the objective of their crime. Or, if we let them stay here in the United States and they actually are part of that small percent age who do have ill will towards Americans or who are criminals or those who do smuggle drugs, those who are part of the criminal element, if they would be allowed to stay here as well, we don’t know who the criminals are and who aren’t. And the idea that if we would just legalize them, they would all come forward, good guys and bad, and they all sign up and we give them a United States identification card, everyone knows where they are and what they are doing is just a false premise, Mr. Speaker.

The standard is Presidential candidates on the Republican side need to oppose amnesty. Presidential candidates on the Democrat side, I think we know, they have been fairly consistently for amnesty if I read their statements correctly, and I believe I do. If I am incorrect on that, I would hope that one or all of the Democrats would step forward and sign off on the “no amnesty” pledge. And I, for one, would say those who are unlawfully present and many of those who are lawfully present and it is not lawful for them to work here, still falsify documents, still present themselves to be somebody they are not in order to get a job, in order to do some type of business here to gain the benefits of this society. I don’t agree quite on what amnesty is all the way down the line, and I really would. But this process; it is a process of momentum, and many of those who are unlawfully present in the United States and they are generally guilty of a criminal misdemeanor, and most of those who overstayed their visas have also violated or committed some crime, generally document fraud, identity fraud in order to achieve access to our benefits or jobs here in the United States.

So that is the definition of amnesty. That is what has taken place here and across Iowa and New Hampshire and down into South Carolina and beyond. I want to point out also that this Presidential contest does start in Iowa January 3, the first-in-the-Nation caucuses. And immediately, within a couple of days, on the 5th of January, it goes to a convention in Wyoming. And I am glad for them being involved early in the process. It’s not very much focused on what happens in Wyoming, but after that day is their primary Tues day, January 8, just 5 days after the Iowa caucus, is the New Hampshire primary. And we all know that is the first-in-the-Nation primary, and it is significant not so much in the numbers of states that will decide there, but in the message that it sends to the rest of the country. From the 8th of January until 7 days later on the 15th of January, that is when the primary is in Michigan, and then on the 19th we have the primary in South Carolina which will take us to the fifth process. And in Nevada on the same day there is a caucus.

And so the early five contests that we have, Iowa on the 3rd of January, Wyoming on the 5th, New Hampshire on the 8th, Michigan on the 15th, Nevada and South Carolina on the 19th of January, those early races, six States actually, but the major contests will be Iowa, New Hampshire, Michigan, South Carolina. Those will set the stage for the Florida, Alabama, Alaska primary on the 29th.

As this moves forward, the momentum that comes from a victory in Iowa transcends, at least launches a candidate on the road to New Hampshire, and certainly to the primary in South Carolina. Take another look. If you were looking at this a different way, take another look and see. There was a reason Iowans made the decision that they did. Do you agree with them or do you not agree with them? And I don’t want to stir up any contrarian attitude on the part of the New Hampshirites. I have great relationships with the people and I would love to be up there with your primary. I really would. But this process; it is a process of momentum, and many of those who are unlawfully present in the United States and they are generally guilty of a criminal misdemeanor, and most of those who overstayed their visas have also violated or committed some crime, generally document fraud, identity fraud in order to achieve access to our benefits or jobs here in the United States.
January, that message will be heard around the country and around the world. And those who have not then made a decision on who they support will be taking another look. Some who have made a decision might be reassessing.

So I would ask this, let’s evaluate their character, their work ethic, their personalities, how they handle themselves in a time of stress or a time of relaxation. Let’s do that. But I like to look at this as a matter of principle, and I think we need to ask ourselves, did your life begin? And I believe that on policy needs to ask themselves, when did your life begin? Or, I would ask them if they did not, then to them I would say, when did your life begin?

The issues that I believe this Nation’s future pivots on, the most important issues, among them are life, marriage, the war on terror, illegal immigration, tax reform, second amendment, health care, and national sovereignty.

Of that list of issues that I have laid out here, Mr. Speaker, I will start with life, and that is innocent unborn human life. In particular, life from its natural beginning which I believe is from fertilization/conception until natural death. The human life is sacred in all of its forms. It begins and as I have described. Do the Presidential candidates understand that and believe that? Or, I would ask them if they did not, how to they, I would say, when did your life begin?

Mine began at conception. When did your life begin?

Madam Speaker, I believe that every American that’s going to have an opinion on policy needs to ask themselves that very question. When did your life begin? When did your life begin? I believe, began at that moment of conception. I believe that’s when I was blessed with a soul, and I have a destiny like all of us, and we’re all created in God’s image and we have a duty. And from whom much is given, much is required. And so the issue of life is an essential component, and I will say the most important issue in this race or any race because that tells us the quality and the character and the integrity and the faith, the core faith of the Presidential candidates, how they view this subject.

The second issue is marriage. And Madam Speaker, marriage is an institution that I believe is a sacrament. It’s a blessing that’s given to us from God. Adam and Eve were joined together before original sin. Marriage is as old as man and woman itself. It’s a blessing too that came from God, and marriage has survived original sin and marriage has survived the great flood, and marriage has been with us for thousands of years, and it’s been defined, defined that the relationship of a man and a woman joined together in holy matrimony. That’s marriage, according to our faith. It’s marriage according to our civil law in this country. It’s marriage according to the Defense of Marriage Act at the Federal level. It’s marriage according to the Defense of Marriage acts in all States except Massachusetts, if I have that right here, and it’s between a man and a woman. And it’s protected in the Constitutions of 27 States in America. We don’t have a difficulty understanding what marriage is. It’s between a man and a woman. And yet we have activists in the country that are using our courts to try to redefine marriage.

I would submit that if you believe differently than me, come to this Congress and make your case. If you believe differently than the law, different than the 27 Constitutions in America, different than the Defense Marriage Act here in the Federal statute, then take your case to the States and make your argument there and lobby for the representatives and the State senators to redefine what is your wish, if that is your will, if that is your conviction. That is how it’s done in this country. But when we hand over decisions to the courts when we know that we don’t have the support of the people, then the people who hire the attorneys, and it’s between the courts are asking for an activist judge that will overturn the will of the people, will overturn the Constitution and overturn the State law or the Federal law, as the case may be, that’s when we start to lose a little bit of stress in this country. That’s when we get domestic conflict in America is when the judges make the laws. But when the people’s voice is heard, we accept that as the will of the people and we move on.

If you believe differently than me, I believe marriage is between a man and a woman. I believe Iowa must pass a constitutional amendment now to fix a wrong that was committed, I believe, by an activist judge. Some judges have to do that to preserve this oldest institution between people, this institution of marriage that goes back to the Garden of Eden and Adam and Eve, before original sin and before the great flood, and has survived all of that time. And now, here in this era, I am to believe that we’re enlightened and we can look at this differently, that all of human experience, all of human history, and the Constitution and the law and our faith, if we choose, if we have modern-day people who want something different. And they would upset all of that for what? For their wish, for their will, when there are provisions that can be made within current law to make sure that people have the things in life that are necessary to respect their rights.

So life is essential. And it’s a human life. Marriage is essential for a Presidential candidate to understand and to defend it because the President sets the moral standard for America, and the words that are uttered by a President either raise the standards or lower the standards. They shift the focus. And that’s why marriage is so important that we have Presidential candidates that understand this.

The next issue that I mentioned is the war on terror. And we know that here in this city we were attacked on September 11, 2001. We’ve been conducting this global war on terror since September 11, and participated with operations within Iraq and Afghanistan. And who would have dreamed that on that day, September 11, we didn’t think we’d get through the afternoon without being attacked again, let alone all of these years and September 11, I mean, that period of time. No one would have believed that this Nation would have been without a terrorist attack on its soil, a significant terrorist attack on this soil, at least a successful one. But that has been the case because this President has carried this issue to the enemy. The global war against these terrorists must be pursued. We cannot cut and run. We cannot decide to pull our troops back to the horizon. We can wake up tomorrow and decide the horizon is Okinawa. We have a responsibility to defend this country in this global war on terror. And I believe, Madam Speaker, that at least the Republican candidates and probably the Democrat candidates will defend this Nation in this global war on terror, some more aggressively, some with more insight, some with a vision towards a final victory, some reluctantly because they don’t really believe that this is a war that we’re fighting. Some kind of thinning the other side that we just need to understand why they hate us and maybe we can take away the reasons for the hate. But we have to fight this war on terror, and our Republican candidates all will, to one degree or another, a little bit of difference in methodology, but they’ll fight this war on terror.

I mentioned the illegal immigration and how important that is. It changes our destiny, Madam Speaker.

And then the next component of this is tax reform. Now, there are people here in this Congress that believe that through money management, through tax management, regulation management, access to tax revenue and handling that money out, that we can engineer this entire society, that we can socially engineer in America with a tax structure that if we just set our tax structure right, we can grow the businesses that need to grow and shrink the businesses we’d like to shrink and reward the people that need to be rewarded and punish the people that need to be punished. Some people think that through tax policy you can do all of those things. I am not among them, Madam Speaker. I believe that tax policy should be for the purposes of raising revenue, for the legitimate functions of government, for the constitutionally legitimate functions of government and nothing else; that we should not have a thought about if we reward this behavior and punish this behavior... with our tax structure, that will maneuver this country into a direction that we like better.

We should have a tax structure that’s fair, that makes everyone a taxpayer, that rewards earning, savings and investment, and savings. We need to have a kind of a tax policy that takes the tax off of all productivity in America and puts it on consumption. If we do that, and I would remind you, Madam Speaker, that the Federal Government has the first lien on all productivity in America. If you’re going to produce in this country, if you punch the time clock at 8:00 on Monday morning, or if you go collect the interest on your passbook savings account, or if you sell the farm and you take the capital gains and you roll it over and you invest it into a factory with a production line and higher workers, wherever there’s production, wherever there is a return on an investment, the Federal Government has the first lien on what we tax, we get less of. And so we need a tax policy that rewards earning, savings and investment.

And the way, if you go over to the Smithsonian, Madam Speaker, you can walk through the collection of firearms that are there and track the history of America. If America in its wilderness is written within the firearms that have defended the balance of our freedoms, and without that defense, the ability to defend our freedoms, none of the rest of this holds together. So the second amendment became an essential evaluation and how it’s defended by a Presidential candidate.

And health care is an issue that we are constantly churning and it will be an issue in any Presidential race. It is today in the caucus and in the primary, both among Democrats and Republicans, how would these Presidential candidates deal with health care. And it is 1⁄8 of our economy that is consumed in health care. Madam Speaker. That’s a significant percentage. And I’ll come back to that perhaps in a moment.

But I wanted to mention the last issue, which is our national sovereignty. And this national sovereignty issue is one that we give away if we don’t control our borders. If we simply don’t control our borders. If we simply have 2,000 miles on the southern border and 4,000 miles on the northern border and open seashores on the Atlantic and on the Pacific, anyone who wants to come to America come, and those that want to go certainly are always free to leave. Madam Speaker, that is no sign of sovereignty. No nation that doesn’t protect its borders is a nation. And if we do not protect our borders, if people flow back and forth at will, if they carry goods and contraband back and forth across the border at will, we are no longer a sovereign nation. We’re just a location where people do business and trade, whether it’s legitimate or illegitimate. This national sovereignty has an essential component, and it must be part of our decision-making process as we evaluate the Presidential candidates.

And so, Madam Speaker, as we come to this, I began to ask these questions. How do I sort these issues? And what stands out as the essential components of this decision-making process? And I’ll remind you again. Life, marriage, the war on terror, illegal immigration, tax reform, the second amendment, health care, protecting our national sovereignty. How do these top Presidential candidates on the Republican side come to stand on these issues and what are the most important?
themselves of the habitat that breeds that kind of terror. I think that happens.

So I think I can put health care over on the side and say it’s not at risk in this nomination. Americans are going to be debating this thing in Congress on how we want to move forward with it, but let’s set it off on the side because we’re going to be all right with it. Let’s set the global war on terror off on the side because I believe that all Presidential candidates will fight that.

And as I take these issues on down then, the second amendment is another one. It’s important. It’s essential. We need to protect our right to keep and bear arms, and yet this Congress will protect our second amendment rights.

The courts, I believe we will discover in March, or if the decision comes down the following June, that they will have protected our second amendment rights and written for a long time a definitive word on the meaning and the underpinning of the second amendment to be consistent with our historical readings and understanding and the text of the Constitution. I think that happens. And I think, even with an unfriendly President on the second amendment that this Congress in the end protects our second amendment rights. So as much as I believe in the second amendment, I think I can set that over on this side with the war on terror and with health care, those three, they should not have the power to protect and defend this another way.

But what does it take a President to do? What will the next President do that will turn the destiny of the United States the most profoundly for the good, or miss that opportunity by taking a wrong turn and never being able to get back to the interstate again? And I believe the next President will make probably two appointments to the Supreme Court, maybe more, and these will be significant appointments to the Court.

I think it’s imperative that we elect a President who understands that the nominees to the Supreme Court must be originalists, they must be the kind of jurists who read the Constitution and understand that the Constitution means what it says, means the text that’s in the Constitution. They must be the kind of judiciary that look at the Constitution and understand that we need to evaluate it within the original understanding of the Constitution because, without that, without originalism, without textualism, without the original intent of the Constitution as the foundational criterion for determining the constitutionality of current law, without that, the Constitution is no guarantee at all, except a guarantee to the justices to be able to manipulate their decisions to move this society in the direction they choose, as if they were legislators. No can do.

The last people that should be amending our Constitution, whether literally amending it or de facto amending the Constitution by their decision, are the nine Justices of the Supreme Court. The next President has to understand that. And he cannot ask the question of the potential nominees for the Court, are you pro-life or are you pro gay marriage? Are you pro or are you pro gay marriage? They can’t ask that question because that would interfere with the confirmation process. It would interfere with the decision-making process. And, in fact, I don’t ask the question of the judges myself because I know they have to make a decision on the case that’s before them. We would be asking them to make a decision on a case that hasn’t been written or presented to them, perhaps.

But they need to be the kind of justices that have profound and reverent respect for this Constitution, for its meaning, for its guarantee. Because in it is the guarantee of our rights and our freedom like none other on the face of the Earth, that the President would have a justice, or five of the nine, that decide they want to social engineer by the decisions that they make.

This next President must understand this, must have advisers that will vet the potential nominees, and must come down with nominations of the kind of quality that we see in Justice Roberts, Justice Alito, two stellar appointments to the Supreme Court made by President Bush. If we can continue down that line, that becomes the kind of quality that we see in Justice Roberts and Alito. I want those decisions to come down on the Constitution, not on their will or their whim of what the policy should be; not in some legal constitutional approach to try to arrive at a conclusion that fits their social liberalism. I want a justice that can maybe come to a conclusion that, even though they disagree with the policy that unfolds, the Constitution says so, that becomes the most important thing. And life and marriage do hang in the balance on that, but those decisions will be made off the Constitution in my future world, not off the whim of the policy because we wish it so.

As I look down through this list, life and marriage, wrapped up in the original understanding of the Constitution, that being, I think, the most important, and then the issue of our national sovereignty wrapped up within the second amendment, who will defend our borders? Who is strong and who is silent? And as I evaluate the Presidential candidates, there are some who who we support for President, weighs heavily if they have supported amnesty, and weighs heavily if they've advocated policies like sanctuary cities, if they've presided over sanctuary cities. It weighs heavily if protecting that central pillar of American exceptionalism, rule of law, has been sacrificed to a whim because of a heart taking over where the head needs to rule. We need to have tough love or we will be sacrificing the rule of law. And I am quite convinced that we have a series of Presidential candidates that won't hold their ground on that issue because holding their ground on the immigration issue holds our ground on the sovereignty issue.

Now, if they would make the right appointments to the Supreme Court, that's going to be, to some degree, a re-deeming characteristic, but in the end, the right appointments to the Supreme Court and the sacrifice of our national sovereignty and the importation of dependency on foreign oil by illegal, or grant paths to citizenship to donor civilizations through the process of a legal immigration policy, and we have such a massive illegal policy that we can no longer have a debate in this Congress on a legal immigration policy. We need a President to lead us out of that, not a President that leads us into that mess even further.

To think of the idea of another 4 or 8 years of hypercompassionate conservatism that would grant a DREAM Act scholarship to people who are here illegally, or grant paths to citizenship to reward people who are unlawfully present here in the United States, that would not uphold the rule of law, undermines our sovereignty, what America do we have left?

If we have a court that would preserve life and marriage, but we don't have a national sovereignty that's protected because the heart of a presidential candidate ruled over their head, then we sacrifice our sovereignty and our destiny.

So, Mr. Speaker, I submit this: Look through the list of the issues that matter, life, marriage, the war on terror, illegal immigration, tax reform, the second amendment, health care, and our national sovereignty. Look at those issues that we can put over to the side and say, we can protect them and promote them here from Congress and we think all the Presidential candidates will stand behind them, and those would be the war on terror, the tax reform issue, which probably doesn't change our destiny right now, but we can put that off on the side because I just think that it's not a destiny changer at this moment. The second amendment will protect here in this moment. It's important, but we'll protect it. Health care is important, but we'll protect it. It's not constitutional, by the way, for those of you who are wondering. But what it comes down to is life, marriage and our national sovereignty as viewed through whether we will protect our borders. Ask yourselves: Do these Presidential candidates understand these issues? What is their focus on life and marriage? What confidence do you have in their judicial appointments all the way down the line? But ask yourselves, where are they in the end? Are they for or against amnesty? Do they stand up for amnesty, as I have defined it, or do they redefine it for their own purpose because their heart leads their head?

I hope you make some sound decisions and make a solid recommendation to America. I thank you for your attention tonight, Madam Speaker.

DELETIONS OF SPONSORS FROM PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 7 of rule XII, sponsors were deleted from public bills and resolutions as follows:

H. Res. 312: Mr. Putnam.
The Senate met at 12 noon and was called to order by the Honorable Bob Casey, Jr., a Senator from the State of Pennsylvania.

Pledge of Allegiance

The Chaplain, Dr. Barry C. Black, offered the following prayer:

Loving Lord, give our Senators an extraordinary measure of grace to accomplish Your will. As they work under the duress of time and pressure from diverse interests, give them wisdom to make ethical decisions. Be with their staff members who run the offices and provide the information to make responsible decisions. Be with those who process the mountains of business in and out of the cloakrooms. Be, also, with those who transcribe the debates for the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

Lord, bless those who monitor parliamentary order, schedule, and voting records. Protect the men and women who provide security at the doors, on the floor, and on the street. Strengthen all who are a part of the Senate’s support system.

We ask this in the name of He who is the light of the world. Amen.

Recognition of the Majority Leader

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The majority leader is recognized.

Schedule

Mr. Reid. Mr. President, today there will be a period of morning business for an hour. As normally provided, the time is equally divided and controlled with the majority controlling the first half, Republicans controlling the final portion. When that time is up, we will have to see what we can do.

Obstructionism

Mr. Reid. Mr. President, those who watch C-SPAN and people who are watching us in other ways are many times well versed in Senate procedure. People would note today that we didn’t come into session until 12 noon. With all the many things we have to do, why are we taking the morning off, so to speak? We have so much work to do. But yet most people’s work day is half completed and we are just starting.

The reason is we have another example of obstructionism. The reason we had to come in late today is because we have an extremely important piece of legislation today, a bill that will take a major step forward in the fight against global warming. If there were ever an occasion when we had to unite as a country and as a world community to fight, it would be against the scourge of global warming which is taking place everywhere. You can’t listen to the news without hearing about something global warming has affected. Yesterday on public radio there was a wonderful piece about Finland, how the glaciers are melting in Finland.

Under Senate rules, any Member has the power to object to a committee meeting after the first 2 hours after the Senate is in session. That is why we had to start the Senate late today, so that committee could go forward with its markup so they can hopefully report a bill to the floor by 2 o’clock this afternoon. Had we started at 9, they would have had to stop at 11 because we were told that Republicans would object to the hearing going forward.

Mr. McConnell. Would the majority leader yield?

Mr. Reid. I will be happy to yield.

Mr. McConnell. There were no objections on this side. I think maybe the leader was anticipating an objection that did in fact not exist.

Mr. Reid. That could be the case, Mr. President. We started at noon today because under the rules anyone can stop us from holding a hearing beyond that time and we were told that was what was going to happen and that is why we did this. It is very easy for people to say we didn’t do it. Of course they didn’t do it, but had the meeting started at 10 o’clock, they would have done it. We were told that is what they were going to do. It is easy now to come here after the fact and say we wouldn’t have done that.

We can see from what is taking place in the committee, about the amendments being offered to try to stop this bill from coming forward. The committee that is meeting has one Republican who is joining with us, JOHN WARDNER from Virginia. Every other member of that committee, unless there is some sudden light one of them sees, is going to vote against that bill and they indicate that they would do anything they could to stop the markup from being completed today.

I am very happy that now the Republicans are saying we would not have done that. The only way we can get anything done is if we convince ourselves, after having been given a direct warning that was what was going to take place, was start the Senate late.

If this were the only case if the Republicans are doing everything they could to slow us down, then maybe it would be something that would need to be looked at very closely. But this doesn’t have to be looked at very closely. It is everything that we have tried to do since we took the majority, and a slim majority it is. We know that there are 287 amendments pending on the farm bill, amendments dealing with driver's licenses for illegal immigrants, all kinds of other amendments that have nothing to do with the farm bill. It is all conversations with my friends on the other side of the aisle, it does not appear we can work anything out on the farm bill.

How much more reasonable can we be? I have said if 10 and 5 is not good, we can do it with 17 and 14, or something like that. I have just said, Senator HARKIN and CHAMBLISS, who supposedly, according to my conversation with Senator HARKIN this morning, have now worked it out to less than 40 amendments. That will be fine, too. Let’s move forward. I have even said, to show we are reasonable, have a couple of nongermane amendments. That is fine. We will be happy to take a shot at those. I don’t know what they would be. I have been told—I think one of them may be dealing with driver’s licenses. But we will be happy to do whatever needs to be done to help the American farmers and ranchers get some relief that they need.

We have also pending something that I think is pretty important. In addition to the farm bill, we have AMT. AMT is a buzzword for a tax proposal that was passed during a Republican administration, which had good intent when it started. Congress wanted to make sure that people making more than $200,000 and $500,000 would be hit with a tax they ordinarily would not get. The average tax, I understand, is less than $2,000. Somebody making $75,000 would get a very small tax; somebody making half a million a year would be paying a larger tax.

That was not the intent of the tax. The vast majority of American people don’t make 75,000 a year and they certainly don’t make a half-million dollars a year. But we want to try to change that. We want to put in a patch so it doesn’t affect those people. We have to do something that is known legislatively possible that is reasonable, to take care of this. Right now, a cloture motion is ripening, our 57th, and that would be on whether we can proceed to legislate on the House-passed bill. The House-passed bill patches it, but it is an “or” for. We know that tax cuts and any new programs should be paid for. The House has passed a bill and sent it to us which does that. I have been told by my Republican colleagues that it is extremely doubtful we will get cloture on that. I hope we can get a few brave Republicans to say we want to legislate on this.

The President said we should do something to fix AMT. That being the case, why doesn’t he place a call or have one of his staff call the Senate and say, Why don’t you let them proceed on this? We can offer some amendments once it is there. We will try to be reasonable in what amendments we offer and they offer on this AMT fix. But I think we should at least have the opportunity to move forward. They are creating the worst of all worlds. They are going around saying we have to fix AMT, but they are not allowing us to legislate on it.

The Constitution, all revenue matters have to originate in the House. We have what the House wants to do. On this, I have said let’s see what we can do. We will vote on the House version and we will go with the 60-vote margin. I am happy to do that. We will vote on what Senators GRASSLEY and BAUCUS have reported out of the Finance Committee here in the Senate, and that is the AMT is not paid for. I don’t agree with that, but that is what the committee has done so I accept that. Also as part of a package it has certain tax extenders that are paid for. I said, let’s vote on that. No.

Senator LOTT, the Republican whip, said he wanted to eliminate AMT forever. That is more than $1 trillion. But we are willing to vote on that. We have gotten no takers on that. I do not know how we can be more reasonable.

I do not want to get into the inner workings of the proposal made between Senator MCCONNELL and myself because I do not think that would be appropriate to talk about, some of the things. I would be happy to do that if he wants to, but some of the other suggestions—I do not want to do my negotiating out here on the Senate floor. But I think the suggestions they have made have been very unreasonable. I don’t know how we can be more reasonable than what we have done.

Now, I would hope we can work something on AMT. As I said to my distinguished friend, the Republican leader, today, if the President wants an AMT fix and the Republicans say they... want one, why can’t we move forward on doing something? I do not understand why we could not do that.

One of the other alternatives I have not suggested, but maybe what we can do is have a vote on not even paying for it. We will all do that if that would be the will of the Senate, fine, we could set something up in that regard. We could have those votes out of the way this afternoon. We would not have the closure vote in the morning. And we would see what the will of the Senate is. The way it is going to be, I have been told that the Republicans have been given their marching orders, as happens all of the time around here, that they are not free agents, that they cannot vote to invoke cloture on this alternative minimum tax, which I think would be a shame.

As I told my friend, the senior Senator from Kentucky, we would like to finish the business of this body by 2 weeks from Friday. That is our goal. I hope we can do that. I hope we do not have to work— we are not going to work on Christmas, but I hope we do not have to work Christmas week. It is possible we may have to do that. We have a number of important issues around here. We have an energy bill that is going to be sent either today or tomorrow from the House. I spoke to the Speaker this morning. We have to complete the alternative minimum tax. I think it would be the right thing to do to see what we are going to do on the President’s wiretapping proposal, as to whether we can finish that and get some other piece of legislation. We have gotten something that is bipartisan that has come out of the Judiciary Committee. The Judiciary Committee has met on a bipartisan basis. They have some things they want to change on that. But if we have to jump through all of the hoops and file cloture on that, that bill—the legislation that is now in force expires I believe on February 5. I think it would be good if we can complete that before we leave. There are certain other things we need to do before we leave. But it is a lot of work to do.

There is one minor little problem I did not talk about. We have to figure out a way to fund the Government for the rest of the year, either with some type of spending program to involve the Appropriations Committee or a last resort—something that both the Republican leader and I don’t want—would be a continuing resolution which, in effect, eliminates the legislative branch of Government from being involved in what money is spent in the country for the next year.

Have said that I would hope we can hold hands here a little bit in the next couple of weeks and see what we can get done: alternative minimum tax, farm bill, spending bills for our country, and if we really get fortunate, see if we can finish the PISA legislation, the wiretap legislation.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Republican leader.

AUTHORITY FOR COMMITTEE TO MEET

Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, first with regard to the suggestion by my good friend, the majority leader, that there was some kind of objection to the Environment Committee meeting this morning, I was unaware of one. No such warning was given to the other side. The committee did not request permission on the day they meet. We did not indicate there was any objection. The committee is, in fact, meeting. I am unaware of any objection to it meeting.

If it makes it more formal, I ask unanimous consent that the committee continue to meet.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I think that is a wonderful gesture. I would accept that unanimous consent request that the committee be able to continue its deliberations today past 2 o’clock.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. REID. I appreciate that very much.

MOVING FORWARD

Mr. McCONNELL. Mr. President, reclaiming the floor, I know for anybody who might be watching on the outside that all of this parliamentary talk probably makes your eyes go over. But the fundamental problem is this: As recently as a year ago, my party was in the majority, and I had the same problem—Senator Prist and I had the same problem my good friend from Nevada has: Our members do not want to cast any dangerous votes, any votes they do not want to cast.

The first session of the previous Congress, the 109th, was the most productive legislative session of my time here in the Senate. I recall Senator Prist and myself saying over and over and over again to our members that if we are going to pass this bill, we are going to have to give the minority their votes. And people were whining and complaining about having to cast votes. I recall the Democratic whip, the Senator from Illinois, saying: The Senate is not the House, and making the point that the minority is going to get its votes in order to advance legislation.

I understand that my good friend from Nevada gets complaints from his members about having to cast votes, but the fundamental responsibility of the majority is to pass legislation. In order to do that in the Senate—we do not have the votes if you have to work with the minority, and you have to give the minority side a reasonable number of amendments. That is the case on the consideration of the alternative minimum tax fix, and that is also the case with regard to the farm bill.

Now, my advice both privately and publicly to my good friend, the majority leader, on the farm bill is take it up and go forward, which is the way we have done it in the past, and it is amazing how quickly you move along. You can sometimes spend more time trying to get a consent agreement, which by its very nature requires every single Member of the Senate to agree— we could have made more progress on the farm bill by simply going to the bill, taking up amendments, and moving forward. That was my advice. It is still my advice. If we turned to the farm bill, even if we didn’t have a very narrow amendment list, we would make dramatic progress and make it quickly. Why? Because I think there are significant numbers of Members of this body on both sides of the aisle who want to pass a farm bill. There may be a few who don’t but a significant number do.

So here is where we are, December 5. We have nearly a full year’s worth of work to finish before we have Christmas. It is a little after noon, and we are talking about why we are getting started now—I gather based on some misunderstanding about phantom objections that, in fact, did not exist on this side to the Environment Committee meeting.

We have offered our good friends a path forward on the AMT, on troop funding, on appropriations, on the Energy bill, and the farm bill. Yet we cannot seem to get the kind of bipartisan agreement that allows the minority to have some say over amendments in moving forward.

On the AMT, the chair of the Finance Committee called the Republican proposal constructive and said that it was the beginning of an agreement. That was yesterday. We want to make sure 23 million people are not ensnared by this middle-class tax hike and that the tax returns of 50 million Americans are not further delayed. The consequences of a delay will be felt by millions of taxpayers who will see a delay in their refunds next year. It is, however, important to virtually every member of my conference that the alternative minimum tax, a tax that will never be levied and never be collected, not trigger a tax increase on a whole lot of other Americans. The effort to “pay for” the AMT is highly offensive to members on my side of the aisle, and I think the majority knows that, and the way to get the AMT and the extenders passed is not to “pay for” them—in other words, not to go over the $400 billion in the other extenders, that is the way we could have made more progress on the farm bill by simply going to the bill, taking up amendments, and moving forward. That was my advice. It is still my advice. If we turned to the farm bill, even if we didn’t have a very narrow amendment list, we would make dramatic progress and make it quickly. Why? Now, we know what they plan over in the House. They are going to send the AMT over there, and they are going to pay for it and send it back over here. I think that is a huge mistake; it is an excuse for raising taxes on a whole lot of Americans.

With regard to the remaining appropriations bills, the Democratic leader and I have had a number of constructive conversations. We are going to be talking to the administration later in the day on that subject. Any discussion of finishing up the year is going to have to include funding for the troops in Afghanistan and Iraq. We know we have had this debate a lot of times—last count, 63 Iraq votes in the House and Senate this year. We know that even when the war was going poorly and there was great opposition to the surge, at the end of the day the funding was there. Now the surge is succeeding, and the war is going better. Why would there be. Now the surge is succeeding, and there was great opposition to the surge, at the end of the day the funding was there. Now the surge is succeeding. I think there is much of a demand for some kind of consent agreement in probably be the intelligence measure. I think the view that the underlying bill will next year.

Are going to have troop funding into and the war is going better. Why would there be. Now the surge is succeeding, and there was great opposition to the surge, at the end of the day the funding was there. Now the surge is succeeding. I think there is much of a demand for some kind of consent agreement in probably be the intelligence measure. I think the view that the underlying bill will next year.

As to what would and what would not be in an energy bill that we would finally pass. It is my understanding that an energy bill that the Senate is going to pass. I gather today, I am not sure—is it today? Does someone know? It is likely to include tax hikes and utility rate increases for those of us in the Southeast. Now, in what way would an energy bill that raises taxes, when oil is about $100 a barrel, and has the practical effect of raising utility rates all across the Southeast be beneficial? My understanding is that the majority leader and Senator Domenici and Senator Bingaman agreed that was not going to be a part of the proposal. I do not know whether it will be a part of the proposal when it comes over from the Senate, but that agreement ought to be kept and those provisions ought to be removed.

Finally, at the risk of being redundant, let me say again on the farm bill that we have enough time. Most of the negotiations that are going on are going on off the floor. We do have floor time. It remains my advice to the majority leader to get on to the farm bill, process amendments, and move forward. I think that would be a way to make progress. It is probably going to be very challenging to get as tight a time agreement on amendments, as tight a number on amendments as the majority leader would like. We spend so much time doing that; we could be processing amendments here on the floor and moving forward with the bill.

Let me say in conclusion that we do want to be cooperative, but the reason we have had a lot of impasse this year is because a very narrow majority is, in effect, trying to dictate amendments to the minority. That will not work in the Senate. One of the prices of being in the majority—it is better to be in the majority than not. I would rather be in majority than not. But one of the prices you pay for being in the majority is you have to take votes you do not want to take in order to advance legislation.

So I would say to my good friend from Nevada, he is going to have as much cooperation as I can possibly muster. I am anxious to help us move forward on all of these issues he and I have been discussing here this morning.

ORDER OF PROCEDURE

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the time Senator McConnell and I have used not be counted against the hour for morning business.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I have been in the minority; I understand how that works. But the record is very clear that on rare occasions did we oppose motions to proceed. We did but on rare occasions.

Keep in mind, as I have said, during this period of time—not even 1 year yet—records will be broken for a 2-year session.

We have involved the minority. We did it on the minimum wage. We did it on ethics and lobbying reform. We have done it on U.S. attorneys independence. When we passed a supplemental appropriations bill, there was total involvement of House Republicans and Senate Republicans. That was good. We were able to finally get money for Katrina and wildfire relief. We have not been able to work out a veteran legislation we have done. It has been a bipartisan move forward.

One of the rewarding things for me is the work we have been able to get out of the HELP Committee. Two diametrically opposed political minds, Kennedy and Enzi, have worked together and produced a lot of good things on which we have been able to move forward—mental health parity, the Head Start Program, a number of other items.

We have passed legislation that has paid for our troops. The only words of disagreement Senator McConnell and I have had on a private basis has been over the Energy bill; that was a misunderstanding. Those things happen, and I have forgotten about that. Other than that, we do our best to represent our caucus and our country. I have no personal animosity toward my friend.

On the Energy bill, I do want to say this: We leave the issue, understand we are in the middle of a debate on the Energy bill. The issue was whether we would have a $32 billion tax on the Energy bill. There was objection from my Republican friends about very few of some of my friends, a Democratic Senator, stood and said: It doesn't matter what you do here. We will take care of it in conference.

I stood and said: This will not take place in conference. We will not have this matter in conference.

The problem is, we have never been able to get to conference. We tried numerous times to have a conference on the Energy bill, and they wouldn't let us do it. So now we are going to get from the House tomorrow something they have done. Republicans have been involved, Republicans in the House and in the Senate. But, remember, in the House they have a little different procedure. Because the power is with the party that has the most votes, they can do most anything they want.

I have kept my word. There is nothing that has been added in conference. We haven't had a conference. I can't control Speaker Pelosi. I hope everybody understands that. She is a strong, independent woman. She runs the House with an iron hand. I support what she does, but no one needs to come and tell me I didn't keep my word. You check the record, which we have. I said this matter would not be added in conference, and it has not been added in conference. We haven't had a conference.

I have spoken to Senator Domenici. He is my friend, and I have great respect for him. He has served his State and the country well. Senator Domenici and I have worked as the two leaders in the Energy and Water Subcommittee on Appropriations for a long time. He was either the chairman or I was. We get along very well. I talked to him last night. I explained to him the situation. I think he understands what took place. We have not had a conference. If that bill comes to us and those tax provisions are in it, we will take a look at it.

I do know this: As I have been told, the tax portion of that, if it is tied on to the Energy bill, would be $12 billion less than the one proposed in the Senate. I hope we can get some cooperation on the Energy bill. That would be great. It is something this country needs.

A couple of other things I want to say. On the farm bill, I say with the most genuine respect I think my friend is not being fair in his description of why we don't move forward on the farm bill. Remember, the last bill
Mr. COBURN. Mr. President, I say to the Senator from Oregon, I look forward to looking at the bill he just introduced. I, too, am very concerned. We had a hearing yesterday in the Homeland Security Oversight Subcommittee on credit card bills. There was some very revealing information. I think the Senator is addressing a problem we need to look at on the Senate floor. I will look at his legislation, and hopefully I will be able to cosponsor it with him.

LEGISLATIVE AND APPROPRIATIONS PROCESS
Mr. COBURN. Mr. President, let me, first of all, take a minute to talk about this bill for which unanimous consent was just requested. I think it is important in light of what the majority leader just said. Here we have a bill for which unanimous consent was requested. The American people need to understand what it means to get unanimous consent. It means all of us agree to it. It does not need to be further amended, it does not need to be changed, and it should be passed without ever having a vote on it.

This bill has a section in it that so far has lost over $3.5 billion of your money doing venture capital investing by the Small Business Administration. The OMB analysis says there is absolutely no need for this venture capital investment, especially because of the fact it has lost such a great amount of money. And venture capital investing itself is a highly risky business that requires tremendous acumen from the people, and people of great acumen in terms of investing, and they lose lots of money investing.

The last thing we ought to be doing at the end of a session is passing a bill without vetting it, without debating it, without talking about the problems that are in the bill. This portion of the bill, the portion that is the Small Business Venture Capital Act, if anything, should come out of this bill. We should not reauthorize something that has lost already in excess of $3 billion, and something for which we do not get to look at the results until 10 years after it happens.

The last thing we ought to be doing is investing the American people’s money in venture capital when we cannot pay for the things we need to pay for that the American people are dependent on. I look forward to working with Senator KERRY. I have had a very pleasant conversation with him. We will sit down and talk about this bill. But I think it highlights what we need to be doing and not spending time in quorum calls but spending time debating bills.

I also want to spend a minute on this issue. I think the American people ought to be asking us about this. Here we sit, and we have one appropriations bill passed for the year that started October 1. I think I am correct. Other than the THUD bill, there has been no object raised by the minority to proceeding to any of the appropriations bills. As a matter of fact, the choice was made not to bring up the appropriations bills in a timely manner and debate them because of the choice it was not a priority.

I do recall the tremendous criticism we rightly received for what happened last year in the appropriations process. Senator KERRY who was here at the time said he was happy to be here for Christmas to do the business we should have already done. But let me lay out what will happen, and then let me also give a warning. At the end of sessions, what happens is we get the Holy Christmas spirit and the requirement of legislation—much like this bill to which I just objected. Committees do good work on legislation. But a bill that has passed committee has to be agreed to by a majority of the Senators to be able to become law.

When we do unanimous consents, that means we are going to let it pass without looking at it, without amending it, and without voting on it. Well, at the end of the year, the time pressure comes. Everybody wants to get the Holy Christmas spirit. What happens is we do a poor job of legislating because we do not look at it. We do not amend it. We do not have a debate so the American people can know about it. We just pass it.

I sent a letter to all of my colleagues today outlining and reinforcing four statements I made at the first of this year. I will object to any bill coming forward by unanimous consent at the end of the session unless it meets the requirements I laid out. That means no new authorizations unless you de-authorize something else. We are not going to grow the Government any more when we cannot pay for the Government we have. No. 2, it has to be constitutional. It has to be a true duty of the Federal Government, not an obligation of the State governments that we are going to stand up for, when they have a $5 billion to $7 billion surplus. Easily, when you look at any combination of the State governments that have a $6 billion to $7 billion surplus, and are running, in real numbers—non-Enron accounting but real numbers—a $250 billion surplus.

I am not going to allow—unless we want to put it on the Senate floor, unless we want to debate it—I am not going to allow us to pass bills at the end of the session by unanimous consent. So if you have a bill that you want to try to pass by unanimous consent, you first of all have to let us sit down and talk about it. If it has this excess number and all of these earmarks, so we can look at the results until 10 years after it happens.

I will remind my colleagues again, we do not have a debate so the American people can know about it. We do not have a debate so the American people can know about it. We just pass it.
My hope is we can come together during this season and say: Let’s get it right. Let’s not spend a bunch of extra money. Let’s put it back. We could be facing some pretty severe economic times in this country in terms of how things look, especially people who were sold homes and mortgages they didn’t qualify for and now are struggling. How are we going to address that? How are we going to help them through that? How are we going to accomplish that? Do people really value the government? We need to be working on those things. We do not need to be spending the extra money now that we may, in fact, need to borrow money later. We may, in fact, need to borrow money later. So we should be doing the job right the first time, staying within our means, doing what is necessary, even though it offends people who might not get something from the Federal Government partisan games we play. They don’t want to see Republicans pointing their fingers at Democrats. They don’t want to see Democrats pointing their fingers at Republicans. What they want us to do is the job of governing within our means.

Our problem is we have difficulty identifying what is most important: Our political careers or the future of the country. What gets in front of us too often is how do we look good in America and it is real. The American people are sick and tired of the partisan games we play. They don’t want to see Republicans pointing their fingers at Democrats. They don’t want to see Democrats pointing their fingers at Republicans. What they want us to do is the job of governing within our means.

I agree with the majority leader. We shouldn’t have all of these votes that aren’t necessarily related to the farm bill, but we should certainly fix the crop insurance program. We should certainly mandate that if you are getting a government benefit as a farmer, you shouldn’t be an investor who is investing in making money off the hard-earned tax dollars of middle-class America. That is what too much of the farm program is. We shouldn’t be setting about saying that if we allow agriculture to get greater production, and then all of a sudden if somebody is successful at it, then you can’t do it anymore. If an incentive is put in place to work, then let’s make it work. We haven’t done that with ethanol. We haven’t said you can only produce so much ethanol. So if an incentive works, we ought to use it. But we ought to make sure the people getting those incentives are real farmers.

Again, I thank the Chair for his indulgence and I yield back the remainder of my time.

Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, today the Senate tried to call up and pass an amended version of S. 1662, the Small Business Innovation Research Act of 2007. There was objection to the bill based on a concern that it reauthorized the SBA’s Small Business Investment Company Participating Securities program, a program which the Office of Management and Budget has predicted will have losses of about $3 billion.

The amendment pending before the full Senate does not reauthorize the SBIC Participating Securities program. That provision was taken out of the bill in October when the committee first circulated the proposed amendment to colleagues and the parties notified their members that the committee would like to pass the bill by unanimous consent. Equity financing like the SBIC Participating Securities program is important to the continuum of small business financing, and testimony before our committee this summer emphasized the need for a reformed program to fill the void left by the private sector. However, as the report to S. 1662 clarifies, Congress could not find common ground with the administration on reforming the program and so the committee included a token reauthorization of a program that is not in the best interest of the small business community that it understood the need for small equity investments and that there was support for the Small Business Investment Company program in general. The bill reauthorizes through 2010 the Small Business Investment Company Debenture program, and the New Markets Venture Capital program. Venture capital is a critical driver of our economy and job creation. Since the creation of the SBIC program almost 30 years ago, the country has benefited from hundreds of thousands of jobs. Some examples of success stories include businesses that are now house-hold names—Calaway Golf, Intel, Jenny Craig, Outback Steakhouse, and Federal Express. Through the SBA’s New Markets Venture Capital program, which has only been making investments for a couple of years, businesses in states with the highest unemployment, such as in the Appalachian region of Kentucky, have gotten access to more than $48 million in patient investment capital and created hundreds of jobs with sustainable wages and health care benefits. Senator SNOWE and I worked with the SBA in drafting S. 1662, and the committee of jurisdiction adopted it unanimously—by a vote of 19 to 0.

Further, we understand concerns about moving legislation last minute and we try to avoid that. In this case, our committee voted out this bill in June, giving colleagues with concerns more than 5 months to review the legislation. And in anticipation of moving the bill by unanimous consent, our committee staff reached out to other offices in October. We have tried for 6 weeks to discuss the bill and identify any possible concerns. We gave those offices copies of the bill, the report, the CBO estimate, what was in the amendment to be hotlined, and provided a copy of the revised CBO cost estimate that reflected striking the section that reauthorized the SBIC participating securities program and the section that triggered direct spending. The bill has a very modest cost, reduces the historic authorization levels, and has the potential to have a very positive impact on the economy, through investment and job creation. We would be happy to work with our colleagues to try and clarify any other misunderstandings and to work through any substantive concerns. I ask unanimous consent that a copy of the amendment be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

INFLAMED Rhetoric

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, I have sought recognition to comment about a statement made by the majority leader, Senator HARRY REID, yesterday that:

President Bush, he is the man who is pulling the strings on the 49 puppets he has here in the Senate.

I have had my staff advise his staff that I intended to make some comments about that so he would be notified and could come to the floor if he chose to do so. His office is right adjacent to the floor. He is a minute or 2 away. I believe that is a very inappropriate statement.

I refer to rule XIX of the Senate rules which provides:

... No Senator in debate shall, directly or indirectly, by any form of words impute to another Senator or to other Senators any conduct or motive unworthy or unbecoming a Senator.

It is my view that being called a puppet is in direct violation of that rule. I don’t think there is much doubt about it. That is a term of derision, of ridicule, of censure, and it is an approbation of the others that state it.

I am especially concerned about it because in the immediate past there have been many Senators who have directly disagreed with the President—hardly puppets of President Bush or hardly puppets of anyone. Under our Constitution, the separation of powers makes the Congress separate from the executive branch and from the courts.

That separation and that independence is something that Senators prize so very highly. So I don’t take it lightly, and I don’t think the other 48 of my colleagues take it lightly to be called puppets.

Let’s look at the record. Within the past month, on November 8, 35 Republicans voted to override President Bush’s veto of the Water Resources and Development Act. The veto was overridden; 35 disagreed with the President. It hardly sounds like there are 35 puppets there to vote to override the President’s veto.

On April 11, 18 Republicans joined in support of the Stem Cell Enhancement Act of 2007. That is an issue that this Senate has worked on extensively since 1998, when stem cells first came upon the scene, and I was chairing the Appropriations Subcommittee on Health and Human Services. We have had some 20 hearings. Twice we enacted legislation to authorize the use of Federal funds for embryonic stem cell research. It doesn’t sound like the 18 Senators who bucked the President’s position.

On November 13, less than a month ago, 17 Republican Senators voted to support the SCHIP program, which the President was on record as opposing. He didn’t like the amount of money that was involved with children’s health. On November 7, 10 Republican Senators voted in support of passage of the Labor, Health, Human Services and Education Appropriations bill, despite the President’s promised veto. He did veto it.

So here you have 4 situations readily at hand, where 35, 18, 17, and 10 Republican Senators disagreed with the President. It doesn’t sound like the Senators are puppets in context.

Yesterday Senator Reid also complained about the necessity to file cloture some 56 times. Well, each time cloture was filed, there is a complex story behind the cloture. On a good many of those occasions, cloture was filed and the so-called tree was filled, which precluded Senators from offering amendments. There was a time when Senators proudly said that any Senator could offer any amendment on any bill at any time. There might be some limitations postcloture on germaneness or on some rules, but a practice has developed in this body to foreclose that. The jargon is the “filling the tree,” and when the tree is filled, nobody can offer an amendment.

Regrettably, that has been done by Republicans as well as Democrats. When it is hard to affix blame anywhere else, for our inability to get much done, you can usually divide it 50/50 between the parties. So to say Senator Reid has had to file cloture on 56 occasions doesn’t tell you very much.

Then the issue he took up yesterday in filing for cloture on the AMT, alternative minimum tax, Senator Reid filed for cloture on the House bill, which stands very little chance of passing the Senate because it is fully offset with controversial revenue raisers. Now it is true that Senate Democrats offered a substitute, but to keep them in place for the tax extenders. The Republican position has been that it is illogical to use permanent tax increases to offset a temporary extension of current tax policy. So there is a good reason for what is being done here.

There is no doubt the AMT has to have a fix. If it is not done, there will be some 23 million Americans who will be taxed instead of the 3 million now. So we are all dedicated to that proposition. If you take a look at the RECORD on August 2 of this year, I offered an amendment to the small business tax relief bill to repeal the 1993 AMT rate increase.

On July 23, 2007, I voted in support of a Kyl amendment to the educational reconciliation bill, which fully repealed the AMT.

On March 23 of this year, I voted in support of a Lott amendment to the budget resolution that would have allowed for repeal of the 1993 AMT rate increase.

Again, on the same day, March 23, I voted in support of a Grassley amendment to the budget resolution that would have allowed the full repeal of the AMT.

The same day, I voted in support of the Sessions amendment to the budget resolution that would have allowed families to deduct millions when calculating their AMT liability.

The RECORD is full of good-faith efforts to solve this problem. But as indicated, as stated, the course which the majority leader has taken is unsatisfactory to people on this side of the aisle. Whether it is satisfactory or unsatisfactory, it is not appropriate to call 49 Republican Senators puppets.

We are trying to move through the business of the year—the people’s business. We have 2½ weeks. Not a whole lot has been done. We were in on Monday; no votes. In yesterday; one non-controversial vote. We didn’t come in until noon today.

The Senate is asked around here a substantial period of time and I wonder how we are going to get through all of the unfinished appropriations bills and the many other matters that are pending on the calendar. When the majority leader makes a move and asks for Republican assistance, many of us have been willing to listen to what he has to say. But he doesn’t improve his case when he starts calling us puppets. I wonder if he is up to the job when he resorts to that kind of a statement, which only furthers the level of rancor and insults and animosity with that kind of an insulting comment.

I would be interested in the majority leader’s reply, if he cares to make one. I will be near by the Senator there.

I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

THE FARM BILL

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, I come to the floor to talk about the negotiations on the farm bill and to ask my Republican colleagues to think very carefully—especially the farm State colleagues—about the circumstance we face with respect to the farm bill.

The majority leader made an offer to the Republican leader during the break that we would have a chance to move forward if they could do 10 amendments on their side and we can do 5 amendments on our side; that 2 of their 10 be unrelated to the farm bill and that we have 2 additional amendments, and the bipartisan amendments that have been filed would not count against either allocation. That offer was made to Senator McCONNELL, and Senator McCONNELL has not yet answered or counteroffered.

I hope the Republican leader will indicate how we could proceed. If there is a need for additional amendments—apparently, Senator HARKIN indicated it would be reasonable if there were 17 perhaps on their side and 14 on our side. Whatever the number is that would help us reach a conclusion would be very important for our being able to advance this legislation that can go out of the committee, without a dissenting vote.

There are 21 Members of the Senate Agriculture Committee, Republicans and Democrats. This farm bill came out with a single dissenting vote. It is paid for, it is less costly than the President’s farm proposal, and it has the beginnings of reform.

This is a reasonable offer. Certainly, Senator REID made it. If you look at previous farm bills, typically the number of recorded votes have been about 20 amendments, sometimes a bit more, sometimes a bit less. On average, there have been around 20 amendments that have actually been voted on. Senator REID’s proposal would have 17 rollcall votes. So that would be a bit below the average. The leader has made clear that if there are some additional amendments that are required in order to advance this proposal, he is open to doing that.

The current farm bill expires this year. Farmers need to know and their bankers need to know what the rules of the road are going to be. So it is absolutely essential we get this legislation through the Senate and we have an opportunity to go to conference with the House to work out the differences in the early part of next year.

Let me make one final point, if I may. Some are saying just extend the current farm bill by a year or two. First of all, we know that if it is a 1-year extension, it will be 2 years because in the election year, beyond that, our colleagues should know the baseline for writing a farm bill is based on the last 5 years of experience with farm legislation. That baseline is already down substantially because the last farm bill cost $17 billion less than the estimates at the time it was written. That baseline is going to go only in one direction for the commodity provisions at least, and that is down.

So anybody who is concerned about writing a farm bill that meets the needs of the American people—not just the commodity title but nutrition, conservation, research, and all the rest—should understand this noose is going to do nothing but get tighter. It is already very tight—very tight.

I hope our colleagues on the other side bend their best efforts to come up with a response to the proposal the majority leader made to reach conclusion, and I hope they do it soon. The clock is ticking. American farm and ranch families across this country are waiting. We see them to wait past Christmas. So much needs to be done, so many decisions need to be made, but Congress needs to act now.

I yield the floor.

UNANIMOUS-CONSENTRREQUEST—

H.R. 3074

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of the conference report to accompany H.R. 3074, the Transportation-HUD, related agencies appropriations, 2008, that there be 20 minutes with respect to the conference report, with the time equally divided and controlled between Senators MURRAY and BOND or their designees; that upon the use or yielding back of time, the Senate proceed to the consideration of the conference report, without further intervening action or debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, on behalf of the Republican leadership, I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

The Senator from Washington.

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, I have come to the floor today to make sure the record is clear on the difference between what is being said in Washington, DC, today and what is actually taking place.

Yesterday, President Bush took to the microphones to complain for the second day in a row that Congress was not getting its work done. For a second day in a row, he complained that Congress is not sending him appropriations bills that fund the most basic functions of Government. And for a second day in a row, our minority leader, Senator MCCONNELL, followed suit. He came out on the Senate floor and complained that Congress has not sent the appropriations bills to the President.

Let’s be clear, I made a request to pass the final conference bill for the transportation-housing appropriations bill so it could be sent to President Bush. What was the result? The Republican Senators blocked it from going to the White House, and that was not the first time that happened. They blocked the transportation-housing appropriations bill from going to the White House twice. Mr. President, 2½ weeks ago on November 15, they blocked it; 2½ weeks ago on November 16, they blocked it; and then they blocked it again today.

Let me tell you what is going on here. President Bush and the Senate Republican leadership are trying to quietly block our progress on funding the needs of the American people, while loudly complaining about our failure to make progress.

I would understand the actions of the Senate Republican leadership if our transportation-housing bill was partisan or divisive, but the conference agreement we are trying to move again today has the support of every single Republican who sat on the conference committee. And in the Senate. That bill originally passed the Senate with 88 votes. That conference agreement has already passed the House with 270 votes.

This is not a controversial bill. It makes critical investments in some of the most urgent needs of the American people and their local communities. That bill provides $195 million to replace the I–35W bridge that collapsed in Minnesota, an issue issue of great concern to everyone on this floor and we would move rapidly to take care of. It is sitting right here in the Senate, one step away from getting it to the President to be signed into law, and the Republican leadership said no. So they are loudly complaining about our failure to make progress.

I would understand the actions of the Senate Republican leadership if they had not taken a look at this bill and realized the critical funding in it. Besides the $195 million for the I–35W bridge, we have $1 billion in enhanced highway formula funding so all our States—all 50 States—can inspect and make repairs to their most deficient bridges, an issue we all agreed was important.

We have $75 million in new housing vouchers that will shelter homeless veterans, including our struggling veterans who have returned from Iraq and Afghanistan. This is critical funding for which our communities and our veterans are waiting.

It rejects hundreds of millions of dollars in cuts that were originally proposed by the White House, cuts that would have thrown Amtrak into bankruptcy and made the congestion at our airports worse, not better.

Our bill also includes $200 million which is urgently needed to provide housing counseling services to keep struggling mortgage holders in their homes.

I wish to take a moment to talk about that last item, the $200 million for housing counseling. This Nation is in the middle of a housing crisis. Millions of homeowners are at risk of losing their homes in the next few quarters as interest rates on billions and billions of dollars in mortgages are being adjusted upward.

On Monday, a few days ago, the President’s own Treasury Secretary, Hank Paulson, and his Housing Secretary, Alphonso Jackson, made speeches on the need for Congress to address the many steps necessary to minimize this crisis. Secretary Paulson at one point explained the housing forum about the number of borrowers who were entering foreclosure without contacting either their lender or their mortgage counselor. He said:

For this public outreach campaign to be successful, there must be enough trained mortgage counselors to answer the phone when homeowners call. The administration requested funding for NeighborWorks America and other non-profit mortgage counseling operations in its budget.

EXTENSION OF MORNING BUSINESS

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator’s time under morning business has expired.
Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, I ask for 4 additional minutes to finish my statement.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. MURRIN. Mr. President, I was going to use the occasion to ask unanimous consent that following the Senator from Washington speaking, I would like to be recognized for up to 10 minutes in morning business.

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, we have a number of Senators on our side seeking recognition. Perhaps we can put that together fairly quickly.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair notes that at this time, there is 5 minutes left in morning business for the Republican side. The Democratic side has used all of its time in morning business.

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that morning business be extended to include 4 minutes for myself, the Senator from Washington—

Mr. CORNYN. I would like 10 minutes.

Mrs. MURRAY. Ten minutes to the Senator from Texas, 5 minutes to the Senator from Montana, 10 minutes to the Senator from Illinois.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I assumed we were going off morning business and onto the calendar. I was going to speak for 20 minutes, so I will speak in line of appearance on the floor for 20 minutes at whatever appropriate time that is.

Mrs. MURRAY. I add that to the consent request, that if there are Republican Senators who would like intervening, in between, we include those as well in the unanimous consent request.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas.

Mr. CORNYN. Reserving the right to object, and I will not object, I express my appreciation to the Senator from Washington for allowing Republican Senators to intervene and the extent to which Democratic Members speak, I would like to make sure we have equivalent time on our side. I think we can work that out.

Mrs. MURRAY. That is included in my request. I ask additionally that Senator MENENDEZ be allowed 10 minutes as well as the end of that unanimous subsequent request.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Senator from Montana.

Mr. BAUCUS. I ask that my 5 minutes be expanded to 10 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Does the Senator so modify her request?

Mrs. MURRAY. I do.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The request is so modified. Is there objection to the existing unanimous consent request? Without objection, it is so ordered.

THUD APPROPRIATIONS

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, as I was saying, Secretary Paulson has been complaining about the need for mortgage counseling, and he said:

For this public outreach campaign to be successful, there must be enough trained mortgage counselors to answer the phone when homeowners call or administration requested funding for NeighborWorks America and other nonprofit mortgage counseling operations in its budget. But the appropriations bill has yet to be finalized. Congress needs to get it done quickly.

That was not me, that was Secretary Paulson. We can do that right now. In fact, we could have done it last month. We are trying desperately to send this in its final stages that includes critical involvement of housing counseling to the White House, just as Secretar Paulson said he wanted us to do.

The bipartisan conferees on this bill agree that the amount the President asked for was too low to meet the demand for housing counseling, given the size of the problem. Congress acted. We increased it substantially. But even though every Republican conference on our bill signed onto that plan, we are now being asked to fund it to the White House. I only wish the Senate Republican leadership would follow the words of Secretary Paulson and Secretary Jackson about the need for this urgent initiative.

Yesterday’s Washington Post published an article on our $200 million housing counseling initiative. I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD the Washington Post article.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Washington Post, Dec. 4, 2007]

NONPROFIT GROUPS TAKE CENTER STAGE

By Renae Merle

In the middle of his speech yesterday on the administration’s efforts to fix the mortgage crisis, Treasury Secretary Henry M. Paulson Jr. paused to carefully spell out a toll-free telephone number that troubled homeowners can call to seek help.

The hotline is not staffed by government officials or mortgage lenders. Rather, the calls are answered by mortgage counselors from nonprofit groups, which are taking an increasingly high-profile role in helping borrowers with mortgage problems.

The counselors focus on diagnosing the homeowner’s problems, then direct them to a local community group for help or guide them through a call to their lender. The initial call usually lasts about 45 minutes as the counselor puts together a detailed budget analysis and creates an action plan for the homeowner, according to the foundation. That could include getting a second job or reducing spending. The foundation does not charge homeowners for the service.

In a separate program, the Neighborhood Assistance Corporation of America acts as a go-between, working out deals with lenders and borrowers with the Federal Housing Finance Board, which has restructured Countrywide, the Neighborhod Assistance Corporation of America has restructured about 200 loans.

Like many nonprofit groups, it has seen demand for its services climb in the past year and attributes most of the increase to homeowners with adjustable-rate mortgages. To keep up with demand, the organization is opening five offices around the country and is hiring about 30 employees a month.

“This is just the beginning. It is going to get far worse,” said Bruce Marks, the group’s chief executive.

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, this article describes the importance of nonprofit housing counseling agencies and all they can do to help keep our mortgage holders in their homes. Recently, I wish to say this: In the recent days, the storms in my State of Washington highlight how critical and important this bill is. Devastating mudslides and floods in my State of Washington and the State of Oregon have changed out roads all across our States. It has been devastating. Families are hurting. People cannot get to work. People cannot get to where they need to go. Many of The fact now is that we have before us an effort—a misguided effort—to protect 23 or so million Americans from a middle-class tax increase. We know that health care providers and physicians are going to be subjected to Draconian cuts in their reimbursement. Our intelligence community needs a permanent solution to the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act, which will expire in February. And we know that instead of providing the funding to our troops that they need in order to protect us and our allies in the global war on terror, we are seeing strings attached, other qualifications insisted upon by the other party, which have impeded and slowed down and, indeed, to this point stopped our ability to fund our troops.

I wish to particularly, though, focus on the tax increase that, as a result of the inaction of the majority—the so-called alternative minimum tax—is going to take place unless we find some way to stop it. We have to deal with this issue without a tremendous tax increase on other hard-working Americans.

If there were ever a misnomer for a tax, this would be it because for an innumerous number of Americans the alternative minimum tax is neither alternative, nor is it minimal.

Congress, it should be remembered, created the AMT almost 40 years ago in response to the testimony of the then-Secretary of the Treasury. The 155 taxpayers paid zero Federal income tax on their 1967 tax returns. Unfortunately, but I guess predictably, this tax, created to target the very rich, the 155 who paid no taxes, has now grown to cover roughly 6 million people today and will grow to cover roughly 23 million people next year unless action is taken. It has, in the process, grown to cover more and more taxpayers and now will capture unsuspecting middle-class taxpayers. This is because, unlike the regular income tax, the AMT is not indexed for inflation. This means that over time, economic growth and inflation have caused a steady increase in the number of middle-income taxpayers who will get hit by the AMT. Working parents who have children and qualify for deductions and credits under the standard tax system get a rude awakening when they discover they are subjected to the alternative minimum tax, which literally cancels out many of these deductions. This will add unnecessary complexity to the Tax Code and increase tax compliance costs and complicate taxpayers’ decisions.

In recent years, Congress has enacted temporary fixes to prevent the AMT from hitting millions of taxpayers with a higher tax bill. While this solution is not perfect, it did at least limit the reach of the AMT.

Now, the Senate has considered legislation on five different occasions that would have either eliminated the AMT or greatly scaled it back. In one instance, not a single member of the majority party voted to fully repeal the AMT, and only one Democrat supported a proposal that would have rolled the increase in the AMT back to rates that took place under President Clinton. Of course, history tells us that President Clinton himself vetoed the tax increase that would have eliminated the AMT back in 1999.

We know the majority leader has now filed cloture on H.R. 3996, known as the Temporary Tax Relief Act of 2007. Now, the President promises, “Temporary Tax Relief.” While the bill provides limited temporary relief for taxpayers, it, at the same time, permanently increases taxes on America’s entrepreneurs and makes it more difficult for the United States to remain competitive in the global capital market. In other words, it makes taxpayers pay for the mistake Congress made 40 years ago when it created the AMT.

The bill makes fundamental changes to the laws affecting the taxation of capital gains and dividends. The bill has been the subject of a bipartisan coalition of lawmakers who have successfully encouraged the pooling of capital, ideas, and skills in a manner that promotes entrepreneurship and risk-taking, and, not to be overlooked, jobs. The bill raises taxes on capital for our nation, and it will increase the cost of and thus decrease the availability of capital to businesses throughout the country. The bill will severely handicap a vibrant and growing part of America’s economy in terms of our ability to compete in the global economy.

International competition for capital is a driving factor for business. At a time when many of us are raising concerns regarding the competitiveness of U.S. capital markets and pointing out that our economic competitors are doing everything they can to emulate the success of our capital markets, the last thing we should want to do is to put the United States and U.S. businesses to a disadvantage by increasing taxes on capital. In the long run, we are going to have seriously depressed capital formation dollars away to other markets. We simply can’t afford for the Senate to tax long-term investments in a way that puts America at a competitive disadvantage.

Many on the other side would argue that any AMT relief should be “paid for” by raising revenue in order to neutralize the effect of the AMT cut. They say they can’t just fix the AMT because it is revenue they have already approved. This is, in fact, they need to fund the ever-increasing growth of the Federal Government, unfortunately demonstrated by Pork-laden appropriations bills and a bloated budget. At every turn throughout the year’s appropriations season, we have seen the majority push for more and more spending. Threatened with a Presidential veto, they have dared the President to veto these bloated spending bills, only to find us in the mess we are in today.

Those on the other side of the aisle have been counting on the increased revenue from the AMT to fund their growth of the Federal Government.
They seem to consider the mistaken growth of the AMT to be some kind of windfall profit, and, in fact, they seem to have forgotten where the money comes from in the first place. We all should know it comes from hard-working American taxpayers, families, people in Texas who really pay their fair share of taxes and can’t afford to bear the burden of the Government’s mistakes. So rather than fix the AMT and protect taxpayers from this unwarranted and unexpected tax increase, they preferred to replace the AMT revenue with a new tax under a new name. I have to tell you that this kind of shell game is a too typical Washington approach.

Instead of figuring out ways to keep the hands of Washington bureaucrats in the pockets of taxpayers, this Congress ought to continue to do all it can to protect millions of middle-class taxpayers from a tax that no one ever intended for them to have to pay in the first place. Taxpayers already work for 4 months out of the year to pay their local, State, and Federal taxes. The last thing Congress should be doing is increasing the number of days American taxpayers work for Uncle Sam instead.

What is worse, Congress’s inability to provide timely AMT relief will also cause unnecessary delays in processing tax returns and getting refunds to taxpayers who are entitled to them. The IRS Oversight Board, an independent board created by Congress as part of the IRS Restructuring and Reform Act of 1998, told Congress just last month that a delay threatens the IRS’s ability to process returns and issue refunds in a timely manner and will impose a significant burden on taxpayers. But that is where we find ourselves today as a result of the mismanagement of our agenda.

According to the IRS governing Oversight Board, if the filing season was delayed by just 2 weeks, it would delay the processing of 6.7 million returns, putting a hold on $17 billion in refunds owed to hard-working American taxpayers. If the tax season is delayed by 1 month, this would delay 40 million returns from being processed, and $87 billion in refund checks owed to taxpayers would remain in the Federal Treasury. This is real money to real Americans, and the political games surrounding it ought to end. We should not be using the AMT relief as hostage to be exchanged for an increase in the Federal Government’s taxes. Taxpayers can’t afford it and neither can the American economy.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, if I understand the Senator from Texas correctly, he is essentially complaining that Congress has not passed legislation to prevent the alternative minimum tax from going into effect for American taxpayers for calendar year 2007. I think that is basically what he is saying. I might say, Mr. President, there is not one Senator on the floor who disagrees with that—maybe one or two, but this Senator wants to fix AMT so Americans do not have to pay an additional tax in calendar 2007 when they are preparing their taxes next year. I daresay virtually every Member on this side of the aisle has that same belief. We do not want to force that additional tax on Americans for all the reasons he correctly stated; namely, this was a problem that was enacted in the code back in the early 1960s intended to ensure—I think there were 200 only, very wealthy Americans who were not paying income taxes and who should pay some income taxes. That was the genesis of the alternative minimum tax. Unfortunately, as has been stated by many speakers, it was not indexed, so over the years more and more middle-income taxpayers have had to pay this additional tax, and frankly, ironically perversely, the most wealthy Americans have escaped.

So this alternative minimum tax does not do what it was intended to do. It was not a posthumous tax because basically the capital gains provisions in it are so low, the net effect is the basic rate is 26 percent for the first $75,000 and 28 percent just above, and so it affects taxpayers who make between $75,000 and $500,000. That is who it hits. We want to repeal that for 2007. Virtually every Senator here wants to repeal that for 2007. We are trying to do it. We are trying to get that enacted—the repeal for 2007—so taxpayers don’t have to pay. What has happened? We are being blocked. We are being blocked. Just as the Senator from Washington was trying to get an appropriations bill up, she was blocked in her effort by the other side of the aisle. Just as the President of the United States says: Congress, do your work, do your work, pass appropriations bills, he is, in effect, instructing his minions here to do the opposite—to block. That is what is happening.

The Senator from Texas, I would daresay—and it is a presumption to say this—would probably vote against efforts here on the floor to bring up a way to fix AMT. There is a cloture motion pending right now, Mr. President. It is basically on the House-passed bill to fix AMT. The leader offered a couple suggestions. What are they? One is, well, if we can’t do that, let’s take up the Senate version and that happened; and the ranking member of the Finance Committee, Senator Grassley. What does it provide? It basically says: Okay, repeal AMT. We have the AMT patch unpaid for, 2007. In addition, we have to pay for the tax extenders for 1 or 2 years and pay for it. Nobody seems to complain about that; the complaint is whether the AMT should be paid for. We are willing, myself and Senator Grassley, to bring up and add those provisions which are not apt at this moment. What are they? President Bush’s tax cuts, extending the tax cuts, extending the 2001 tax cuts. Some Senators on the other side want to force a vote on that. That doesn’t expire until 2010. This is 2007; AMT applies to 2007. We have to act now. This isn’t 2010.

I see my time is expiring. I strongly urge people to focus on what is going on here—not the rhetoric, just look at the facts. The facts are that I, as chairman of the Finance Committee, am willing and do advocate bringing up legislation to repeal the alternative minimum tax as it applies to taxpayers for 2007. There are various ways to do it. One is the House-passed bill. If that doesn’t work, we will do the measure proposed by myself and Senator Grassley, which is AMT, not paid for, but the tax extenders paid for. If that doesn’t work, I am even willing to go so far as to see AMT alone, not paid for. That is where we should be and what I am going to do.

Finally, I don’t know if I am known as a partisan guy. I think I tend to be perceived as somebody who tries to work things out, tries to be pragmatic, tries to get things done, not fail in a partisan way, but engage in flowery rhetoric for the heck of it, getting headlines, and so forth. There comes a time when you have to call it like it is, say it like it is. That is what I am trying to do. I am trying to be practical and pragmatic here by calling it, saying what is going on here, and that is, despite the cries from the other side, despite the cries from the White House for Congress to fix AMT, they themselves, behind the scenes, indirectly, are blocking it. They are blocking it. They are saying one thing and doing something else.

As my father used to tell me, it is deeds, not words. They have the words but they also are blocking the deeds. I hope very much they change their minds. It will allow us to pass legislation here to fix AMT, because it is up to them to let us do it.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The assistant majority leader is recognized.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, I see the Senator from Georgia is on the floor. I know it is our custom to take turns on each side of the aisle, but I ask his indulgence. I have to chair a subcommittee meeting at 2:30. Unless he has a scheduling conflict, if he would allow me to go first, I would appreciate it.

Mr. ISAKSON. As a Bears fan, I will be happy to relinquish the time to the Senator from Illinois.

Mr. DURBIN. Thank you. We need all the help we can get.

Mr. President, what I have heard this afternoon on the floor of the Senate is nothing short of incredible. The Senator from Washington came to the floor bringing an appropriations bill up for us to consider. Have you noticed how much business we are doing around here? The answer is none.

So there is nothing to conflict with it. We have plenty of time. Shouldn’t we earn our paycheck today by doing something? The bill she wanted to bring is an appropriations bill and it is a conference report that has been signed by every Democrat and Republican—bipartisan. Everybody is agreed on it.

She asked to bring it to the floor to consider it, and there was an objection from the Senator from Texas. Senator JOHN CORNYN objected.

Senator SPECTER tried to explain what was in this bill, how important it is. He didn’t waiver. He said that is it, we object to considering this bill.

Eventually she yielded the floor to Senator CORNYN who stood up and said, Do you know what is wrong with this Senate? We are not considering any appropriations bills. Just minutes before it was Senator CORNYN of Texas who objected to considering an appropriations bill. That is a matter of record.

But back to my experience, look what was in that bill. It is not just—just?—transportation and housing and urban development; $200 million is in there for housing counselors across America. What are they doing moving the bill? Trying to help families work themselves out of this mortgage foreclosure crisis we are facing. This money is desperately needed. Senator MURRAY worked to put it in the bill so people would have a helping hand to save their homes when they are facing foreclosure.

How big an issue is this? Mr. President, 2.2 million Americans face foreclosure on their mortgages. If they go forward with those foreclosures, 44 million American homes will lose value.

You see, the mortgage crisis is not just your neighbor’s problem, it is your problem. If that house on your block is foreclosed upon, the value of your home goes down. That is a fact. So 44 million Americans face America is waiting to see if this Government will do anything.

Senator MURRAY comes to the floor and tries to move the bill to do something. The Republicans object.

I tell you, this is an issue that strikes home in Illinois. Cook County, where Chicago is located, has the second highest number of foreclosures of any county in America—56,000 mortgage foreclosures. As a result, two out of every five homeowners in our County, IL, will lose value. This is a crisis. It is not only a housing crisis, it has put our economy in a tailspin. We are trying to move and act and do something about it, and the Republicans say no. No, we don’t want to do that.

That is unfortunate. It is unfortunate for the homeowners who need a helping hand. It is unfortunate for their neighbors who do not realize that this kind of effort by the Republican Senators is not in the best interests of America or its economy.

It troubles me as well because this bill includes money to rebuild the bridge near Minneapolis, the one that came crashing down, with deaths involved and real concern across America about the quality and safety of our infrastructure. Senator MURRAY, on this bill, on a bipartisan basis, puts money in—$1 billion, is it?—for bridges across America, including the bridge in Minnesota.

I would beg Senator NORM COLEMAN of Minnesota to speak to Senator CORNYN of Texas and ask him to take his hold off this bill, to stop objecting for the sake of his own home State of Minnesota and for all of our States. I hope Senator CORNYN of Texas will reconsider his position; will remove his objection to this bill; will let us move to this appropriations bill in a timely fashion.

This is not the only time we have run into this. Senator CONRAD of North Dakota was here a moment ago, begging for the farm bill to come to the floor. Every 5 years we have a new farm bill. It takes a lot of work to put it together. Every 5 years it is a very big issue to Illinois and almost every State, and the Republicans have stopped it in its tracks. We waited here on this floor for 2 weeks and did nothing because the Republicans refused to reach an agreement.

The Senate rules are written so that even a minority party can stop business. Senator CONRAD said, let’s agree on a list of amendments. You can have yours, we will have ours, but let’s get going, let’s get to work. And the Republican answer is no.

It is not the first time. Fifty-six times so far this year, the Republicans have filibustered, stopping debate, stopping legislation, stopping attempts to make America better—56 times.

You might say, I am sure that goes on every day, doesn’t it? No. The record in the Senate is 61 filibusters over a 2-year period of time. The Republican Senators this year are about to break the record for filibusters in one Congress in 1 year. It tells you what they are all about. It is not doing the people’s business. It is not trying to solve the housing crisis, dealing with the farm issues. It is about stopping the business on the floor of the Senate. They are using that opportunity and that authority to do that.

I want to correct the RECORD. Staff just advised me that Senator SPECTER and not Senator CORNYN was directed to object to the earlier bill. I want to make it clear and apologize to my colleague Senator CORNYN—we are friends—and I misrepresented his position on that because it was, in fact, Senator SPECTER of Pennsylvania speaking on behalf of the Republican leadership, Senator McCONNELL of Kentucky, who objected to the transportation bill. I hope the RECORD reflects that, and my apologies to Senator CORNYN for mentioning his name improperly.

But the position still stands. A Republican leadership position, directed to stop the appropriations bill, and then Republicans coming to the floor saying, Isn’t it a shame we can’t move appropriations bills.

The last thing I want to mention is the alternative minimum tax. This will affect 19 million Americans if we don’t change it. I have been in Congress for 18 years and I think that is a responsibility. Republicans reject that. They say we want to cut taxes and we don’t want to pay for it. We want to add to the deficit and it is OK, and they can prevail because we don’t have 60 votes. It takes 60 votes to accomplish something here on the Senate floor of controversy.

So what we offered to them is their way of looking at the world. We will let you cut this tax and not pay for it, just add to the deficit, the old Republican way of doing things. You prevail. You win. And their answer? No, we won’t even let you go to the bill under those circumstances. It is pretty clear; it is a question of principle and intraprogression.

In addition to the fact that the Republicans are blocking the farm bill, an attempt to deal with the mortgage crisis in America, bridge building for the State of Minnesota and all other States. Along with the alternative minimum tax, it is pretty clear they want this Congress to end without any accomplishments. They had a nothing Congress which cost them control in the last election. They are determined to do everything they can to terminate outside of Gaza to its perimeter. Within months, Hamas took over as the leader of the Palestinian Authority, there are some simple steps steps upon which we could build to possibly get to a true roadmap to a lasting peace in the Middle East.

There is no question, from having gone there, that the first step is security. The State of Israel deserves the security to live in peace and without intimidation and without threat. Not long ago, Israel took its settlements out of Gaza, moved those settlements out of Gaza to its perimeter. Within months, Hamas took over as the leader of the Palestinian Authority. Now, instead of securing it for themselves began a method of intimidation and threat and terror against the people of Israel. Last Saturday, I stood on the last Israeli outpost overlooking Gaza, talking to an Israeli man and Israeli woman who lived in the settlement outside of Gaza, as a rocket went off and was fired into that very settlement, a practice that every day continues to take place, to intimidate, to threaten, and to terrorize. As long as there are state sponsors of terrorism, whether it be Hezbollah or Hamas or whether it be infiltration of terrorists or IEDs into Iraq, you can never truly have peace and security.

As long as terror, through the elements of Hamas and Hezbollah, continue to threaten and intimidate the people of Israel, it will never happen.

So the first step, following that agreement at Annapolis, is for the Palestinian Authority to secure Gaza and to secure the West Bank. But you do not go to the Middle East as I have four times in the last 5 years, and not realize in the end it is also all about Israel.

As long as there are state sponsors of terrorism, whether it be Hamas or whether it be infiltration of terrorists or IEDs into Iraq, you can never truly have peace and security.

So the first step, following agreement at Annapolis, is for the Palestinian Authority to secure Gaza and to secure the West Bank. But you do not go to the Middle East, from one Arab state to the other, encouraging those states to attend. It should not go unnoticed by anybody, us in America and Ahmadinejad in Iran, that when finally pressed, the 18 Arab states all came to Annapolis because, in the end, they all want peace. But in the absence of security, in the presence of terror it cannot happen.

I commend our President for bringing about the conference in Annapolis. I commend the people of Israel for making the first step in Gaza and acknowledge their concern now that that first step has only been rewarded with acts of terror against their own people and encourage the Palestinian Authority to continue to work in the West Bank, and later in Gaza, to root out terrorism and to bring about the road map for peace in the Middle East. But this President deserves great credit for setting up the conference at Annapolis. Condoleezza Rice deserves great credit for five times traveling to the Middle East, from one Arab state to the other, encouraging those states to attend. It should not go unnoticed by anybody, us in America and Ahmadinejad in Iran, that when finally pressed, the 18 Arab states all came to Annapolis because, in the end, they all want peace. I yield the floor.

OBJECTIONS

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, what is happening in the Senate is going to give frustration a new meaning. I cannot but laugh how unbelievably frustrating it is for people elected to come to this body, they say the greatest deliberative body, to be at parade rest day after day after day, unable to move because of the simple words uttered almost routinely every day by the minority: I object. I object to everything. I object. I object.

Mark Twain once was asked if he would engage in a debate. And he said: Of course, as long as I can take the negative side.

They said: We have not told you what the subject is.

He said: That does not matter. The negative side will take no preparation.

It takes no preparation to say “I object,” to take the negative side of everything. Yet that is what has happened. We have people posing as a set of human brake pads, determined to stop everything in the Senate. Maybe that would make not much difference if there were not things that were so urgent and in need of being done.

I sat here for a while this afternoon and saw something quite stunning. My colleagues and I had already objected to bringing an appropriations bill that passed the Senate by a wide margin, over 80 votes on transportation-housing and so on, she wanted to bring the conference report up to the Senate. There was an objection from the Republican leader of the Senate: I object.

Then, immediately afterwards, Senator CORNYN from Texas stood up and said: I do not understand what all of the problem is, the way the majority is running this place, why do we not get appropriations bills to the floor of the Senate?

This was immediately after his side had already objected to bringing an appropriations bill to the floor of the Senate. It is as if they think no one is watching. These are illusionists who provide no illusion. Nobody is watching, they think. This is all done in broad daylight. They say: We object to bringing appropriations bills to the floor of the Senate. Then they take it up and seek recognition and ask: Why are you not bringing appropriations bills to the floor of the Senate? Do they believe people do not watch and listen and understand?

It is absolutely beyond me. Now, let me describe this “I object” strategy. I object to appropriations bills, they say. Do you know this year we even had to file a cloture petition to shut off a filibuster on a motion to proceed to the appropriations bill that would fund homeland security needs.

We are in this process of waging a war on terrorism to protect our country, and we cannot bring a bill to the floor earlier this year on homeland security appropriations to fund the programs without having a filibuster by the other side on a motion to proceed, not even on the bill, but a motion to proceed to the bill. That describes what the other side has done.

Now, in December, they come to the floor and they say: Well, where are the appropriations bills? Well, I will tell you where they are; you objected to all of them. You took all the action needed to stop everything, from the House. I hope we can round up now we are hoping to try to be able to bring a bill to the floor earlier this year on homeland security needs.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, why do we not get appropriations bills to the floor of the Senate? Do they believe that the result has been: A blind eye. No one seems to care. You want some nails? I know where there are 50,000 pounds of nails lying in the sand. You know where it is? In the country of Iraq, 50,000 pounds of nails lying in the sands of Iraq in a pile.

You know why? Because the contractor ordered the wrong size. But it did not matter, throw them away, reorder. It is a cost-plus contract. The American taxpayers are picking up the tab. Do you want to see waste, fraud, and abuse? This is a hand towel provided to American soldiers.

I ask unanimous consent to show the item on the floor of the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DORGAN. This was provided to American soldiers by the subsidiary of Halliburton Corporation. They ordered hand towels under their contract for the American soldiers. Well, guess what. The guy who ordered these was the order manager sitting in Kuwait.

His name was Henry Bunting. He came and testified before my hearing. He said: I ordered these towels, but I ordered white towels, plain white towels. My supervisor said: You cannot do that. You need for our name, Kellogg, Brown and Root, the subsidiary of Halliburton, to be embroidered on the towel.

He said: Well, that is going to triple the cost. He was told: It does not matter. It is a cost-plus contract. The American taxpayer pays for this. Katy bar the door. Spend whatever you like. The American taxpayer will pay for it.

Two hundred and twenty million dollars to a contractor to rehabilitate health clinics in Iraq. The $220 million is gone. The contractor has it all, and there are 20 health clinics built.

We are in this process of waging a war on terrorism to protect our country, and we cannot bring a bill to the floor earlier this year on homeland security appropriations to fund the programs without having a filibuster by the other side on a motion to proceed, not even on the bill, but a motion to proceed to the bill. That describes what the other side has done.

Now, in December, they come to the floor and they say: Well, where are the appropriations bills? Well, I will tell you where they are; you objected to all of them. You took all the action needed to stop everything, from the House.

Two hundred and twenty million dollars to a contractor to rehabilitate health clinics in Iraq. The $220 million is gone. The contractor has it all, and there are 20 health clinics built.
And a physician goes to the Health Committee and says: I want to see these 220 health clinics the American taxpayer paid for; the Health Minister of Iraq said: Well, those, you have to understand, are "imaginary" clinics. Seventy-five dollars an hour a month to rent an SUV, $45 a case for a case of Coca-Cola, $85,000 trucks that have a flat tire and they are left beside the road to be torched in Iraq because they cannot fix a flat tire.

Any taxpayer is going to pay for all of that. It is a cost-plus contract. You have a truck with a plugged fuel pump, do not worry, leave it be—Yeah, it will get torched, but the American taxpayer pays for that. So I hear somebody talking about prolificate spending. I say to them: We have had four votes on the floor of the Senate to set up a Truman Committee of the type Harry Truman led dedicated to root out waste, fraud, and abuse.

Four times we lost that vote. I am proud to tell you every Member of the Senate on this side of the Senate voted with me, but four times we have lost because there are some who talk a lot about spending but do not care how much they spend.

This is the greatest waste, fraud, and abuse that has occurred in the history of this country with this prolificate contracting. I have only described the tip of the iceberg. I could spend an hour talking as we sit here I could tell you the story of the way the American taxpayer has been fleeced by the massive amount of money that is shoveled out the door and the $196 billion the President now wants: a substantial portion of it will also go to corporations and still no one is watching the store. Still no one is watching the store. In Iraq itself, $3.9 billion is missing. Think of that. I daresay no one is looking for it.

Growth in government has a pretty hollow ring, especially when you start to think about the growth of spending, the waste, fraud, and abuse that is occurring under the nose of this administration, an administration that seems unconcerned, is the most significant waste, fraud, and abuse that is occurring under the nose of this administration, an administration that seems unconcerned, is the most significant waste, fraud, and abuse in the history of this country. We need to stop it. I will offer again the issue of a Truman commission to set up a special committee to investigate this and put an end to it.

On the question of who pays taxes, my colleagues say: This is the alternative minimum tax, you are charging some others additional taxes. Let me remind my colleague who is going to pay additional taxes. The person who ran a hedge fund last year and made $1.7 billion was the highest paid person in this country that we know. If you are adding that up, if someone asked: What is your monthly salary, that person would have to say, it is about $145 million a month. Some would ask: What do you earn in a day. About $5 million a day. That is a pretty big salary.

Do you know something more interesting about that? The people earning at that level are paying an income tax rate in most cases of 15 percent. Think of that. There are no Americans going to work this morning working in ordinary jobs who are paying 15 percent income tax. I guarantee they are paying much more.

One of the richest men in the world, Warren Buffett from Omaha, said in his offices they got permission from his employees to figure out what happened with respect to the percentage of taxes paid by the employees. It turns out in that office 15 percent paid in his office is paid by the second richest man in the world, Warren Buffett. He said that is an outrage.

He said: I pay a lower percent of taxes from my income than my receptionist does. That is an outrage. Some want to correct that. I do.

My colleague from Texas would say: You are going to hurt people engaged in capital accumulation. Well, it seems to me the issue is one of fairness. Why do those who make hundreds of millions gets to pay a 15-percent tax rate. But a whole lot of other people who work hard all day, take a shower at night because their labor is important, come home with a whole lot more money to make than those who have made much progress with their salary in recent years, they look at their tax bill and are paying 25, 30, 35 percent, plus their Social Security taxes.

When my colleague talks about the growth of spending, he says: Look in the mirror. When my colleague talks about taxes, I say: Look in the mirror and ask yourself whether you want a fair tax system.

More important than that, I want to talk for a moment about priorities. When we are told that $196 billion ought to be made available, none of it paid for, for the President’s priorities, and we don’t have enough money for things at home. I ask a question about the priorities. I chair the Indian Affairs Committee. We have struggled desperately to try to get the money we need for Indian health. That money is not available. Why? Because investment at home is not the priority. The fact is that the issues of life or death for a little girl like Ta’ashon Rain Littlelight. This Congress can do something about it.

One hundred years from now, we will all be dead. But historians can understand what we did. They can look at what this country decided to do, what kind of decisions this Senate made by what we spent our money on. What did we think was important? Someone once asked the question, if you were charged with the task of writing an obituary for someone you had never met, and the only information you had was the check register from that person’s checkbook, what could you write about that person? What could you write about that person? What was important to them? What was important to them? What was their value system?

The same will be true when historians evaluate what was important to us, what our value system was. So we have this dispute these days with President Bush and those on the other side of the aisle who are loyally supporting him. They can look back at what this Senate decided to do, what kind of decisions this Senate made by what they spent their money on. What did they invest in, contribute to? What was important to them? What was their value system?

I held a hearing in Montana with Senator Tester on the Crow Reservation. This little girl’s grandmother came to the hearing and held up this picture. She said Ta’ashon died a very painful death, was in pain month after month. The kind of health care that should have been available to diagnosis an illness which later became terminal was not available to this little girl. So she lived a painful last 3 months with a terminal illness and never got the health care she should have received. Not enough money for that, just not enough. Yes, this 5-year-old girl died. Not enough money for Indian health to deal with her.

I have shown my colleagues a picture of a little girl named Avis Littlewind. She was 14. She is dead as well. She lay in bed 90 days in a fetal position, missing school, 90 days, and somehow it didn’t raise alarms anywhere. She took her own life. No mental health treatment, no mental health treatment available on that reservation for that young lady.

I have shown my colleagues a picture of a woman brought into an emergency room—a Native American woman, as she said to the hospital: If you accept any patient, understand that the contract health care money is gone for the year. You accept this patient on your own dime and at your own risk, this patient with a heart attack.

We don’t have enough money for our domestic needs. The President says: No, I want $196 billion for my priorities. I have just described the massive waste, fraud, and abuse with respect to the priorities of contracting in Iraq. I care about Indian health care for a lot of reasons. I chair the Indian Affairs Committee. We have struggled desperately to try to get the money we need for Indian health. That money is not available. Why? Because investment at home is not the priority. The fact is that the issues of life or death for a little girl like Ta’ashon Rain Littlelight. This Congress can do something about it.
agreed to or negotiated. The farm bill is an awfully good example. We have now sent to the other side a list of things that we hope perhaps they might agree to. And if they don’t agree to that, to give us a list back. Let’s find a way to have constructive discussion such as I heard this afternoon that somehow the majority is a group of profligate spenders, and the majority wants to increase taxes. What a bunch of nonsense. It is completely at odds with the facts. It is as if they believe that there are not cameras here and this isn’t being recorded.

I was thinking, as I was sitting here, about a story I heard when I was a kid of Joseph Montgolfier from rural France. The story was in 1783. He was sitting in a stuffy room with his chimney blazing at his fireplace in his country home. And as he watched the fireplace he saw sparks and smoke go up the chimney. As he contemplated the smoke and the sparks, he thought: There was something taking the smoke and sparks up the chimney. That must be some sort of energy. And so several months later he was in a meadow in rural France with burlap bags he had dampened and straw he was burning and he fashioned the first balloon. And it was the first recorded evidence of powered flight. He discovered that hot air rises and used hot air to lift a balloon.

I was thinking about hot air today because I listened to what is supposed to somehow pass for informed debate, and it is nothing but hot air. Why don’t you pass the appropriations bills. OK. Let’s try one. I object, he says.

I don’t understand that at all. Don’t ask us to pass something if you are going to object to, if you are going to continue to stall and object. If you want us to pass legislation, appropriations, energy, AMT, if you want us to pass legislation, come to the floor this afternoon. Let’s work together and work out a process by which we pass legislation that advances this country’s interests. It is not as if we don’t have significant challenges and significant interests. We do.

No one in this Chamber can suggest somehow that with the price of oil bobbing at around $90 to $100 a barrel that we don’t have serious challenges and a need to pass an energy bill. The House of Representatives is doing an energy bill. We did one in the Senate prior to this. We tried to go to conference, and there was objection. So we couldn’t even get to conference. But we will, I think and I hope, have the Energy bill the House is going to pass and then send over to the Senate next week. There may not be need to have conference, efficiency, and renewable energy, as well as continue to use fossil fuels without injuring the environment. We can do all of those things, and should, but we will need some cooperation. We are not asking for the Moon. We are just saying this country faces obvious challenges.

No one party can do it alone. We have a 51-49 majority. All we need is some cooperation. All we need is for people who continue to come day after day after day with a two-word vocabulary, “I object,” to see if they can’t add a few words and say “I accept.”

Let’s work together. Let’s join together to get these bills done. That is all we are asking. We only have a few days left in this session, probably a maximum of 12 or 13 days. I would hope all of us who are paid to work here and do the public’s business would want to make those days productive on behalf of the country. We live in a great place. We should give thanks every day for this opportunity. Let’s find a way to address these issues, invest in this country’s priorities, pass an energy bill that can be proud of that makes us less dependent on foreign oil, pass an AMT bill that is going to help avoid increased taxes for a lot of Americans who do not deserve to have an increased tax bill. We can do all of those things if we work together.

I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDENT. The clerk will call the roll.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, are we in morning business?

The PRESIDENT. The Senate is in a period of morning business.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent, if there is discussion, let my remarks be placed in the RECORD at that point.

The PRESIDENT. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMT

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I am pleased we are finally discussing solutions to the alternative minimum tax problem that is poised to swallow 19 million more filers this year. I would have done this course several months ago but better late than never.

Over the course of the year, I have given many speeches analyzing the AMT and describing the problem it poses to taxpayers. One of those speeches was in March 2007. On February 12, I gave a speech on the history of the AMT. On February 13, I highlighted how the AMT afflicts individual income tax liabilities. On February 14, I discussed the problem of the AMT.

On March 1, I explained why we need to repeal the AMT. On April 18, I made an appeal for quick action on the AMT to help tax payers making estimated payments who are already paying the price for the lack of action in Congress. On May 14, I explained why the AMT relief or repeal should not be paid for with a tax increase someplace else on other people.

On May 17, I criticized the conference report on the fiscal year 2008 budget resolution for not realistically addressing the alternative minimum tax problem. On that same day, I gave another speech exposing how Democratic offsets to the AMT relief would result in massive tax increases on other people.

On June 3, I discussed the inadequacy of the lead trial balloons House Democrats were floating as possible fixes for the AMT. This was to mark the occasion of the second quarter estimated tax payments coming due because we had taxpayers who file quarterly already being hit by the lack of action on the part of the Congress.

On July 4, I introduced legislation to protect taxpayers who should have been making estimated payments for 2007 but weren’t because they did not realize Congress was failing to protect them from the AMT. In other words, if they didn’t have to pay the AMT in 2006, why would they think they had to pay the AMT in 2007? By not doing it, they were violating our tax laws, probably innocently.

On September 19, I marked the occasion of the third quarter estimated tax payments coming due by again discussing the AMT problem and how little congressional leadership was doing about it.

I just cited 12 speeches delivered on the Senate floor over the past year. That doesn’t even include press conferences, Finance Committee meetings, and other events where I have talked about the need for repeal of the AMT or, in the case of a shorter term fix, just making sure it was fixed for this year and kicking the can down the road. I have been talking about the alternative minimum tax literally all year now. House Democrats finally moved to introduce a bill on October 30, and the majority leader turned to it in the Senate right before the Thanksgiving recess. Democratic leadership cannot blame Republicans for their own failure to act until almost literally the last minute.

As I said, I am glad we are finally discussing solutions, and the Senate leadership seems to realize that the AMT should not be offset. I also want to thank my good friend, Chairman BAUCUS, for all his hard work this year, and for several years, to protect middle-income taxpayers from the alternative minimum tax. Chairman Baucus is doing our country a great service now by trying to work out a compromise between those who want to pay for the AMT relief and extenders with tax increases and those who want to oppose tax increases to offset AMT. He has consistently, meaning Chairman Baucus, avoided bitter partisanship and always worked to do the right thing.

Those obsessed with pay-go—and for the public watching, that is pay as you go—those who are obsessed with pay-go, who want to raise more taxes to pay for a tax that was never meant to raise revenue, are punishing the American taxpayers for their obsession. Unfortunately, right now, I cannot support a package with roughly $45 billion of offsets in it for the extenders, even though the AMT relief is not offset.

I am still reviewing some of the revenue proposal issues. I will support an AMT patch and extenders only when the taxpayers themselves, against the AMT, increasing taxes on others to pay for a tax that was never meant to be collected, I still have not gotten the extenders passed, as we should be passing them right now.

The House has shown it does not respect the need to get 60 votes in the Senate, and I do not expect that to change right now. If the majority leader is serious about reaching a compromise, and really respects the minority, as he claims, he needs to get his colleagues in the House on board. I have been around long enough not to make a joke to stab me in the back by having things that even leadership in the House has suggested could happen with this tax-ping-pong operation that might go on here.

It is unfortunate congressional leadership took so long to deal with the alternative minimum tax and that some are still putting an obsession with pay-go and narrow partisan interests over the wellbeing of their own constituents. We can talk until we are blue in the face, but the bottom line is we need to change the tax laws with respect to the alternative minimum tax. That law change needs congressional action and a Presidential signature, and anything else is just plain talk.

I would like to end this part of the remarks I am making today with a suggestion. I hope we get all parties to an agreement by changing the law on the AMT patch. By all parties, I am referring to House Democrats, House Republicans, Senate Democrats, Senate Republicans, Senate Finance Committee, and those within the Administration. Nothing is going to happen if the President can’t sign it. Without an agreement, we will not get a law. And without a law change, this is what is going to happen: 23 million families face an unexpected tax increase that is going to average about $2,000 per family. Without a law change, we make worse the filing season fiasco for yet another 27 million families and individual taxpayers. That is one of the reasons for the first time, are being hit by the alternative minimum tax.

So here is my suggestion. It is simple. It is black and white. It is in a letter from Chairman Rangel and Chairman Baucus to the Republicans in the Senate Finance Committee. We are the senior tax-writing committee members from the Congress. That letter was dated October 31 this year assuring Treasury Secretary Paulson and Acting IRS Commissioner Stiff that we would work to pass an AMT patch bill expeditiously. That letter contains the test that ought to be applied to any proposal in substance and process. Let me remind you, this is a bipartisan letter by the most senior tax-writing Members of the Congress. And it starts with "we," meaning Chairman Rangel, Chairman Baucus, and ranking Republican members, McCrery and Grassley. Here is what that sentence says:

We plan to do everything possible to enact AMT relief legislation in a form mutually agreeable to the Congress and the President before the end of the year. That is the end of the quote, but I want to put emphasis within that quote on these words: Passing legislation in a form mutually agreeable to the Congress and to the President before the end of the year, meaning the end of 2007. Chairman Rangel and Baucus and their ranking members made it clear in this letter.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent the letter I have been referring to be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

TAKE WRITERS NOTIFY IRS OF UPCOMING AMT FIX

WASHINGTON, DC.—Leaders of the congressional tax-writing committees notified the American people when it comes to the upcoming filing season. Senate Finance Committee Chairman Max Baucus (D-Mont.), House Ways and Means Chairman Charles Rangel (D-N.Y.), Finance Ranking Republican Chuck Grassley (R-Iowa), and Ways and Means Ranking Republican Member Jim McCrery (R-La.) sent a letter to Acting IRS Commissioner Linda Stiff, indicating their intention to continue prevention of the AMT from affecting more American taxpayers for 2007. The AMT was originally meant to ensure that wealthy taxpayers pay their fair share of tax, but without indexing for inflation it has begun to affect middle-income American taxpayers.

The text of the Tuesday letter follows here.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Now, our leaders in both the House and the Senate need to back up the tax writers. We Senators need to pass a package that is agreeable to the President, to the White House, to the Administration. What do we all agree on? We agree the patch needs to get done right now. So that is the base of what should pass the Senate, if we are to get a law enacted. House and Senate Democrats insist on offsets for a patch.

The old joke is that you better make certain the light at the end of the tunnel isn’t a train coming toward you. Unfortunately, the joke is on the American people who write these taxes to the upcoming tax-filing season. Because of the failure of the Congress to act, the taxpayers are going to feel as if they have been hit by a freight train come April 15. The sad part is this was not necessary. Congress could have done the right thing. Congress could have acted. We have never in this century gone this late without passing the AMT patch and having it in place. The IRS and the Treasury have made it clear that the failure to act would cause the AMT to affect those in the filing season, in terms of confusion and in terms, especially, of a delay in providing taxpayers their refunds.
I am astonished when | hear that | some in the Democratic leadership | are telling reporters these claims | of a filing fiasco are all somehow a bluff. | The Democratic leadership certainly didn't think the problems of the filing season were delayed by | a wrong leadership. But Democrats, now in the majority, | back then in the minority, joined me in those statements. | Now the consensus is much smaller with the alternative | minimum tax which will affect 25 million taxpayers | to be in many ways, significantly more disruptive to | the filing season than the extenders delay last year.

As you can see from a chart | I have here—I am going to ask my staff | to hold up. We all know the story of Chicken Little. | But every once in a while, Chicken Little is right. | When it comes to the filing season, the sky is falling.

It is important that my colleagues | understand that by failure before Thanksgiving, | we have already gummed up the works. As my colleagues | can see in this next chart, the deadline | of October 15 for finalizing forms and instructions has already | passed. We have passed the November 7 deadline | for printing tax forms—just as you can also see in the chart—and the absolute drop dead date for printing was November 16.

Every week that we don't act, this | problem will get worse and worse.

I should make it clear that we are | not only hearing from the IRS that the delays have created a filing fiasco; the tax preparer community is making it clear that the problems are real and they will continue.

We recently received a letter from | the independent IRS Oversight Board that voiced | grave concerns about the serious risks to the 2008 filing season if legislation to change the AMT is delayed."

The IRS Oversight Board makes it | clear that there is a big, big difference | from Congress pinning AMT relief this week | as opposed to the third week of March. The board specifically says that another 2 or 3 week delay by Congress would mean that another $21 billion taxpayers will face a delay in filing returns and another approximately $70 billion in refunds could be delayed.

These numbers would be on top of the | 6.7 million taxpayers who already face a delay in filing returns and the $17 billion in refunds that are going to be delayed because we have not acted to pass the AMT "patch."

So the tax filing will be a dilly-dally and | delay on AMT relief until Christmas, it will be a total of 37.7 million return filers delayed and $86.9 billion in refunds delayed. These delayed refunds are not just paper; they represent real money that many working families are counting on to help them to pay the bills, make an important purchase or even have an important medical procedure done.

To be blunt, we are already in the soup and it is a question of how bad it is going to get.

I recently joined the ranking member | of the Ways and Means Committee in writing to the Acting Commissioner of the Internal Revenue Service, asking that the IRS do the following:

1. Take steps to educate taxpayers about the possible changes in the law and tax forms.
2. Work closely with the tax preparation community to keep them aware of the IRS to update programming and minimize delays and to encourage the tax preparation community to inform their clients and consumers about likely delays in processing returns and distributing refunds.
3. Ensure that all IRS call center employees are fully informed about the status of the 2008 filing season and can provide accurate and timely information to callers.
4. Within available resources, increase staffing of IRS call centers to accommodate the increased call volume that will likely result from taxpayer confusion.

I think these steps will allow us to do | the best we can with a very bad hand. But there should be no doubt, the real answer is to pass AMT relief and pass it now.

For many years now, and certainly | many times this year, I have tried to shed light on the monstrosity that is the alternative minimum tax and how the failure to index the AMT for inflation threatens middle-class taxpayers.

While I have consistently fought for | full repeal of the alternative minimum tax, I have had to be content with enacting a series of provisions, since 2001, to freeze the exemption amounts pertaining to the AMT to prevent new taxpayers from being caught by it. However, similar action has not yet been taken for tax year 2007. Despite plenty of advanced warning, congressional leadership’s failure to act means that time for proactive action has already passed.

The IRS is printing tax forms and | making other arrangements to process tax returns in the upcoming filing season. Any legislative fix undertaken now to check the advance of the AMT will not eliminate a problem, but will only manage it. Despite being deeply disappointed that congressional leadership has not seen fit to act faster, I hope that the magnitude of around 19 million additional tax filers paying the AMT for tax year 2007 was finally beginning to hit home. The AMT finally seemed to be getting the attention it deserved, but recent rhetoric has put me into a negative frame of mind.

Rather than offer new ideas and insights into how to solve the AMT problem, which in the case of many would be to offer any ideas at all, some of my colleagues are merely recyling the same old and tired talking points of years past. More specifically, I’m referring to the accusation, made by left-leaning think tanks and also by the House leadership, that the Democrats, majority, that advocates of tax relief in 2001 and 2003 deliberately—I want to emphasize they are accusing use of deliberately using the AMT as a trick to minimize the revenue cost to the Federal Treasury as a part of their policies. While it is true that some families benefit less from 2001 and 2003 tax relief than they otherwise would have, to say this is by design, as is indeed done in a Committee on Ways and Means press release issued on November 14, is absolutely ridiculous.

Republicans have consistently | fought, even before the 2001 tax relief bill, to curtail and eradicate the alternative minimum tax. In 1999, congressmen Republicans fought the Taxpayer Refund and Relief Act of 1999, which completely repealed the AMT, and this bill was vetoed by President Clinton.

Getting back to the Ways and Means press release of November 14, in it I myself am cited as critiquing President Bush for not doing more in his 2001 and 2003 tax packages to counteract AMT effects. I do absolutely want to make clear that despite my belief that the AMT was also a problem at that time, I wholeheartedly supported tax relief in 2001 and 2003 and still think it was absolutely the right thing to do. In fact, I think the provisions in both bills should be made permanent.

In order to counteract the effect of | the AMT, Congress passed and President Bush signed into law a series of provisions to increase AMT exemption amounts to keep inflation from pushing new tax filers into the clusters of AMT. But Democrats were serious in their implied concern for the effectiveness of 2001 and 2003 tax relief, they could do two very simple things: First, House Democrats could make 2001 and 2003 tax relief permanent; second, they could fully repeal the AMT. Of course they have shown no sign of doing either of these two things. In fact, opposition to the 2003 tax relief package was so intense among Democrats that the Vice President was called upon to break a tie during a vote in the Senate.

The provisions of the 2001 and 2003 tax relief bills were not made permanent because doing so might have made it impossible for the bills to overcome Democratic opposition. I believe that including AMT repeal in those bills would have had the same effect.

Aside from being quoted in the No- | vember 14 Ways and Means press release, I found it unintentionally humorous in that it reveals that House Democrats are doing exactly what they accuse Republicans of having done since 2001. While they accuse Republicans of using the AMT as a budgeting gimmick, they are using the AMT as a gimmick to make it appear they are easing the tax burden when they are not.

In the release, Ways and Means Chairman Rangel is quoted saying "The house passed a bill to prevent the AMT from hitting 23 million families this year without hurting the economy by adding to the national debt."

What this means is that the House is protecting some people from the AMT by subjecting other filers to additional taxes. This is the same as if your community's animal control officer caught a rabid dog on your street and let it go someplace else across town. Your problem appears to have been immediately solved, but in the longer-term, the fundamental problem still exists. The fundamental problem with the AMT is the massive amount of unintended revenue it is forecast to collect, and the unwillingness of many of my colleagues to forego that revenue.

If Ways and Means Democrats are serious in their appeal to the administration regarding the AMT to "work with Congress to do the right thing and kill it," they will abandon any notion that revenues not collected because of AMT relief or repeal ought to be offset.

Finally, I want to address the baseless claim that the Bush administration's tax priorities were responsible for the AMT problem on a technical level.

This exact point was raised in 2005 by Democratic Ways and Means staffers in a letter to "Tax Note," a prominent publication for tax professionals. At the time I requested that the non-partisan Joint Committee on Taxation look into this matter. Their analysis showed that, as I have long maintained, the biggest problem with the alternative minimum tax was it was never indexed for inflation.

In response, I received from the Joint Committee on Taxation a letter dated October 3, 2005. I have requested an update of that document and will discuss the updated numbers as soon as they are available. That estimate could be interpreted to indicate that if the Bush tax cuts were repealed, alternative minimum tax revenues could be expected to drop by $302 billion, or 27 percent.

At the time, the Joint Committee on Taxation estimate also found that extending and indexing the hold-harmless provision in effect at the time would reduce the alternative minimum tax revenues by around $667 billion, or 59 percent. Of course, the analysis of this question is complicated by the fact that the variables we are examining overlap and interact with each other. But responsible analysis of available information certainly does not support the allegation that the tax relief packages signed by the President in 2001 and 2003 are responsible for the explosion of the alternative minimum tax. If anything, House Democrats and their pet think tanks have illustrated the fallacy of using projected revenue reductions as a proxy for percentage causation.

Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the October 2005 Joint Committee on Taxation revenue estimate I referred to be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

In the information provided to you on August 31, 2005 and September 16, 2005, we analyzed the portion of the AMT effect attributable to the tax cuts. In the analysis described above, we identified the portion of the AMT effect attributable to failure to adjust the AMT exemption amount to inflation. There is, however, interaction between these two contributing factors to the AMT effect. In order to avoid double counting of interactions, a stacking order is imposed. The apportionment of effects to each contributing factor will vary depending on the stacking order, even though the total effect remains constant.

This phenomenon is illustrated by Tables 2 and 3 below. The first two columns of Table 2 show the portion of the AMT effect attributable to the tax cuts, consistent with the information provided on August 31, 2005 and September 16, 2005. The second two columns of Table 2 show the portion of the AMT effect attributable to failure to adjust the AMT exemption amount to inflation and the hold-harmless provision, consistent with the information provided in Table 1 above. Note that if these two contributing factors were completely independent of one another, the information in Table 2 would suggest that the two factors together contribute to more than 100 percent of the AMT effect. In fact, as shown in Table 3, the two factors together contribute to only 83 percent of the AMT effect. Thus, there is substantial overlap between these two factors.

Mr. Grassley. Madam President, as I said, I will discuss those updated numbers when they are given to me by JCT.

I mentioned earlier that the argument that our recent tax policies are responsible for the wild growth in the alternative minimum tax is an old and a very tired argument, intellectually dishonest. The Ways and Means press release of November 14, 2007 refers to a letter of March 6, 2001, sent by Mr. Rangel to President Bush.
tax. If House Democrats were concerned about the tax burden, they would repeal the alternative minimum tax without raising taxes on other taxpayers to replace revenue that was never supposed to come into the Federal Treasury, because these 23 million middle-income taxpayers were never supposed to be hit by the alternative minimum tax, because it was only meant to be paid by the superrich. I have made the point many times, that this alternative minimum tax was never meant as a revenue source, and I do not care if I made it twice in a row, three times in a row, it is a fact of life: These 23 million people were never meant to pay it. The alternative minimum tax is only supposed to hit the superrich—it was an unsuccessful attempt—when the alternative minimum tax was passed in 1969, to promote tax fairness. This point has not been challenged.

Rather, my friends in the House and elsewhere have distorted that argument into a claim that Republicans intended to use the alternative minimum tax to secretly diminish the impact of the 2001 and 2003 tax relief packages. I have shown how that argument is flawed every time it is dug out of the closet by someone. The alternative minimum tax certainly is not a secret. But it is a mystery how so many people can engage in so much pointless discussion when we need now right now, actually several months late, is urgent action. I yield the floor, and I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mrs. McCASKILL). The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. SALAZAR. I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. SALAZAR. Madam President, what is the pending business?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate is in morning business.

Mr. SALAZAR. I ask unanimous consent to speak for up to 15 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

THE FARM BILL

Mr. SALAZAR. Madam President, I come to the floor to plead with my colleagues that we move forward to address the issues of agriculture and rural communities and food security for our country in moving forward with consideration and passage of the 2007 farm bill. In this Chamber, there needs to be more champions of rural America and agriculture. Those farmers and ranchers around our Nation who today are the ones working to provide food for the tables of all America, those farmers and ranchers, when you meet them—because when you shake their hand in communities in my State, places such as Lamar or Craig or down in Dove Creek, in my home area of the San Luis Valley, Manassa, it is a rough hand. It is a rough hand that is weathered through the difficult times of having to eke out a living from the soil and what oftentimes is a very difficult time.

Rural America, in my opinion, is part of the forgotten America. Rural America has been forgotten by Washington, DC for far too long. Rural America has been forgotten by this President and what he allowed this administration for far too long. Now we have an opportunity with legislation crafted in the spirit of bipartisanship, through the leadership of Senators Harkin and Chambliss and a number of other members of the Agriculture Committee and the Finance Committee, under the leadership of Senators Baucus and Grassley, to make sure that rural America is not forgotten. We have an opportunity to open a new chapter of opportunity for rural America. We can do this with the 2007 farm bill.

Rural America is in trouble. When you look at this map of the United States, when you look at both the red and yellow zones, they are all part of rural America. There are about 1,700 counties in what is characterized as rural America in this great land of ours, the United States. More than half of those counties have been declining in population. Across the heartland of the United States, you see great swathes of red where we see towns and communities that are withering on the vine. This 2007 farm bill will help revitalize rural America in a way that has not happened before.

When we look at the towns and counties across each one of the 50 States, I am sure any one of us could find many places such as this storefront in Brush, CO where half of the main street in many of the communities have closed down. This is the main street of Brush. There is a for sale sign on this building. When you go to the towns in my native valley, in Conejos County, Costilla County, I can tell you that in the town of Antonito, CO, at one point in time, 15 years ago, there were four or five gas stations on the main street. Today there is one gas station. I remember a few years ago there were multiple grocery stores. Today there is one small supermarket. Today there is one school. It has not changed. It is the count when I have gone through the main street of Antonito, as I often do back in the San Luis Valley, but I would guess that 60 to 70 percent of the entire main street of the town has been boarded up and is either not being used or is for sale.

The town of Antonito, like the town of Brush, like so many towns and communities across rural America, is calling out for Congress to do something to help revitalize rural America. We, in the 2007 farm bill that has been crafted in the best spirit of bipartisanship, are attempting to do so. It will be a shame for Washington, DC and for this Chamber to allow the politics of obstructionism we see going on here to essentially kill the promise of rural America represented in the 2007 farm bill.

Over the last several days and over the last month, we have seen many efforts to try to move to conclusion. Yet we haven't been able to move forward because there is a fillibuster in place. I have heard the majority leader come to the floor and say: Let's move forward and consider the farm bill. And that means where we will allow 10 Republican amendments and 5 Democratic amendments and 2 other amendments, a total of 17 amendments. What has happened when he has propounded that unanimous consent request? It has been objected to. He has said, as Senator Harkin has suggested, let's take 10 amendments on either side or 12 amendments on either side. Let's come up with an agreement that puts us on the pathway of making the farm bill even better than the amendment process but getting the farm bill passed.

Yet what is happening in our inability to move forward? There are objections on the other side because there is a paradigm that has become evident in this place. And that is, to try to slow any kind of progress we might be able to make on this legislation, on AMT, on the Energy bill, or anything else.

We hopefully will find the courage in this Chamber to make sure that the public purposes for which we were elected will ultimately triumph over the politics of division which we see taking place. Doing nothing is not an option. Obstructionism essentially is leading to that result of doing nothing.

The farmers and ranchers of America don't see this as a Democratic and Republican issue. They want results. They want us to work together to try to get results and to pass this 2007 farm bill.

I urge my colleagues to redouble their efforts to try to find agreement so we can move forward, so we can have a farm bill that is good for America.

As we talk about the farm bill, it is also important, as my good friend from North Dakota, Senator Conrad, has said, to understand that this is much more than just about conservation and energy and rural development, the things I care so much about. It is also about another thing all of us care a lot about, and that is the nutrition of those who are most vulnerable in society. That is why in this farm bill about 67 percent of all the money that goes into this farm bill actually goes into nutrition programs for America. Yes, newspapers across the country that sometimes are critical of the commodity parts of the farm bill are wrong, because they don't focus on the other parts of the legislation. They don't talk about nutrition in this farm bill. They don't talk about what we are trying to do with the fresh fruits and vegetables program.
included in this bill at a level which has never been done before.

For my small State of Colorado, what it basically means is there is going to be $65 million available to provide fresh fruits and vegetables to those schools or the areas where the children can grow up healthy and learn in the schools they currently attend. What we are doing is, we are spreading what has been a pilot program for fresh fruits and vegetables across the entire 50 States. That is a Good Fruit, Vegetable Program. We should remind Americans that when we talk about the farm bill, we are talking about nutrition.

I also want to talk a bit about one aspect of this farm bill and that is title 9, the energy part. When I look at what is happening across America today, I think that the energy opportunity for America presents one of the signature opportunities for this Nation and for this world in the 21st century. There is no doubt that we have come to realize, probably more so than ever before, the importance of energy independence and, yes, this farmer and rancher, that the addiction we have to foreign oil is something that must end. It is in the fields of rural America that we will find a significant part of the answer to get rid of our reliance on foreign oil. My conclusion is one that will sustain a clean energy revolution in our country for not only years but for decades to come. We will find ways of harnessing the power of the Sun, the power of the wind, the hydro, the geothermal heat to get us, to the point of energy independence.

When I think about the fact that Brazil, a Third World country in South America, could become an energy-independent country and we here, the most powerful Nation on the globe, have not been able to do that, we have gone in reverse, we have had a failed energy policy. When we have gone from a point in time in the 1970s when Richard Nixon, called the energy policy in our country “energy independence” and President Jimmy Carter stood before the Nation and said we had to attack our energy addiction with the moral imperative of war, at that point we were importing 30 percent of the oil from foreign countries. Today, in March of this year, we imported 67 percent of the oil from foreign countries. So we need to become energy independent and, yes, this farm bill in title 9 invests significant resources in rural America that will help us become energy independent.

This picture is a wind farm in Prowers County, CO. We invest significant resources in wind power in my State, not only for these larger wind farms which can produce several hundred megawatts of power but also for small farms and industrial areas where you see these small windmills that can actually produce enough electric generation to meet all the needs of a farm or a small business area or to help make sure we are providing electricity to places that are remote and far away.

When we look at this 2007 farm bill, one of the marquis aspects of this bill is that it helps create a new opportunity for rural America and helps us grow our way to energy independence. On that one ground alone, we should all be willing to move forward to come up with an agreement that will allow us to move this farm bill forward.

Two years went back to Colorado, shortly after having been elected to the Senate, I asked people to try to find a place where I could go and visit an ethanol plant. There were none at that time. Today we now have four ethanol plants that are located in Sterling, CO in this picture. We are just beginning to see the energy revolution that is revitalizing that whole red part of the eastern plains of the State of Colorado. This farm bill will help us move forward in that continuing positive direction.

Another aspect of this bill which is so important, and we must keep reminding people, is conservation. When you think about conservation and what we have done in this bill is the most significant investment ever made in conservation in the history of the United States under this farm bill. Through these investments we will be able to help make sure the water—which is the lifeblood of our agricultural communities; which is the lifeblood, certainly, of my State, which is the mother of rivers in the western part of the United States of America—that we are able to take advantage of using the water resources of our country in a positive and constructive way.

Shown in this picture is an EQIP project which is in northern Colorado, where you can actually see an EQIP project which is conserving water in the livestock tanks that have been placed out here on this ranch.

But it goes beyond water tanks and water conservation. There are also a whole host of other programs that we deal with in conservation. There is a Grassland Reserve Program. There is a Conservation Reserve Program. There is a CSP. There is a Wetlands Reserve Program.

This picture is taken of a pond which has been restored in the northern part of my State which is part of the Wetlands Reserve Program that helps us make sure we have quality wetlands.

I want to make this quick point about conservation. When you think about conservation and what we have done in this bill, you will see how important it is that we look at the whole picture. The next year’s crop is not going to be taken away from them. So farmers and ranchers know about the importance of land and water because they know that is their way of life. If they do not take care of their land and water, they know the next year’s crop is not going to be there because their way of living is taken away from them. So farmers and ranchers are among the best environmentalists, among the best conservationists we know.

Seventy percent of our lands across this great United States of America are owned by farmers and ranchers. So the conservation program that we have in the national farm bill, in this 2007 farm bill, is absolutely essential for us to be able to protect the lands and waters of these United States.

So I hope all of the conservation organizations that are out there, knowing we are working on the farm bill today, and the millions of Americans who care about conservation make sure their Senators know we should move forward on this farm bill in order to achieve the conservation objectives of this farm bill. They should let their Senators know this gridlock, this obstructionism we see is allowing politics to triumph over the very important public purposes which we are trying to achieve in conservation.

Let me finally say there are many other aspects of this farm bill which are important, including the safety net which takes a small portion, about 13 percent or so, of the entire farm bill budget, and that is the support system to make sure we are able to keep farmers and ranchers on the land.

As part of what we have done in trying to be innovative and moving forward with programs that will help rural America and will help farmers and ranchers, we, under the leadership of Senator BAUCUS and Senator GRASSLEY, have included a fund to be able to deal with the disasters that affect rural America so often.

In this picture behind me, you see what has become the norm in my State over the last 6 years, where we have seen some of the record droughts in Colorado. In fact, we had the most severe drought in my State of Colorado for almost 500 years. Almost a few years ago which devastated agriculture across the State from corner to corner.

Shown in this picture is a cornfield in Washington County. Now, some people will see this cornfield, and they will say: It looks like a bunch of dead plants. A farmer looks at this cornfield, and a farmer sees a dream—a dream that will not be realized.

In this picture, a farmer will look at it the day when he went out and tilled the soil, when he planted the seed. The farmer will look at this picture, and he will remember this day when he saw the first green come through the soil as these corn seeds became plants.

In this picture, he also will see the dream he had at that point, which was that he would be able to produce enough corn from his farm to be able to meet his obligations, to buy the cotton off of the operating line at the bank, to be able to make the mortgage payment for the land. The farmer will see a lot in this picture. Yet we have not had a responsible disaster program for agriculture in the past 60 to 70 years.

We have been through that effort dozens of times over the last 20 years. So it is time we fund a permanent disaster fund, which is included in this legislation, thanks to the leadership of Senator Baucus and Senator Grassley and other members of the Finance Committee who have worked on this issue so hard.

Let me, in conclusion, say once again that we have to speak about the farm bill because it is something we can easily do. We have 2½ weeks before Christmas. This is legislation we have worked on for a very long time. Under the leadership of Senator Chambliss, several years ago, he held hearings on reforms to the farm bill all over this country. Under the leadership of Chairman Harkin, this year, the first hearing on the farm bill was held in my State in Brighton, CO, in Adams County, one of the largest agricultural counties in my State. The effort has yielded a farm bill which is a good farm bill which should allow us to move forward to have a final farm bill coming out of the Senate.

Now we have seen, again, Senator Reid come to this floor, and he has said he wants to move forward on the farm bill. Senator Reid has said: We will take 10 Republican amendments to 5 Democratic amendments. Let’s have a debate on those. Let’s get up some time constraints on that debate, and let’s get down to the point where we can have a final vote on this very important bill. Yet the answer is: We object—on the other side—to anything happening here on this farm bill.

I hope the champions of rural America, the champions of agriculture on the Republican side, come over to join us to help us move this farm bill forward.

I hope the people of America put pressure on the Members of the Senate to move forward to bring us to a conclusion on this 2007 farm bill so at the end of the session we can go home for Christmas and we can say we have done something good for the food security of our Nation.

We ought to remember that sign on my desk that says: “No Farms, No Food.” “No Farms, No Food.” Every American eats. This farm bill is essential to make sure we maintain the independence and the food security we have had with food in America.

I am very hopeful we are able to move forward with this farm bill.

PAYING FOR THE ALTERNATIVE MINIMUM TAX

Mr. LEVIN. Madam President, I rise today to urge my colleagues to support fairness in our Tax Code and fiscal responsibility in our budgets and appropriations.

Sometime in the next 2 weeks, the Senate will likely be asked to vote on legislation to fix the alternative minimum tax—what we call the AMT. The issue before us is not whether the AMT ought to be fixed. Fixing it is the only fair thing to do for America’s middle-class families. The real issue is whether we are going to fix it in a way that is fiscally responsible, so that we do not leave our children and our children’s children to foot the bill—yet again—for our spending.

After 6 years of runaway deficits and tax code revisions that have disproportionately benefited the wealthiest among us, Democrats committed during the 2006 election that we would reinstitute fiscal responsibility. We pledged to play it straight with taxpayers; we said we would not run up deficits with the cost of new legislation; for that we have voted. That pledge applied to program increases, to new programs, and to tax cuts. The Democrats’ fiscally responsible, pay-as-you-go pledge is the only way we have been able to temper deficit spending that has once again become the norm in Washington over the past 7 years.

So far we have held firm on the so-called “pay-go” commitment. But fixing the AMT carries a cost of $51 billion. It includes AMT class adjustments. The Senate to break that commitment and add to the record $9 trillion national debt that is already threatening future generations. In the name of fairness and fiscal responsibility, the Senate should act.

President Bush has recently used the rhetoric of fiscal responsibility. President Bush said, “You have to have some fiscal discipline if you want to balance the federal budget.”

The distinguished minority leader, Senator McConnell added that it is time “to get us out of the business of political theater and back to the business of governing in a fiscally responsible way.”

I agree with those sentiments even if they are 6 years too late. But being fiscally responsible as we fix the AMT will require the Senate to do more than talk the talk about fiscal discipline; it will require the Senate to walk the walk by paying our fair share, and not paying for them by increasing the national debt.

Unfortunately, some of our Republican colleagues have a blind spot: they call for fiscal discipline when Congress wants to pay for an earmark or a new program, but when tax cuts are on the line, fiscal discipline is suddenly tossed into the legislative trash can. True fiscal discipline means we have to look at the bottom line for taxpayers no matter what kind of legislation we are debating, including a fix for the AMT.

The AMT was intended, when adopted in 1969, to ensure that every American with significant income contributing to the national debt. It was designed to stop the richest income taxpayers from using tax loopholes to escape contributing one thin dime to Uncle Sam, ensuring that they shoulder their fair share of the tax burden.

The AMT was not included exemptions to make sure that middle class Americans were not forced to pay higher AMT taxes instead of their normal tax burden. But in recent years the AMT has gone wrong. The problem is that the AMT’s exemptions protecting the middle class have not been adjusted for inflation, and the AMT is now loading additional taxes onto the backs of working families who already pay their fair share.

In 2006, 4 million taxpayers had to pay higher taxes due to the AMT. In 2007, with no fix, 23 million Americans will have their taxes increased because of the AMT. That includes 830,000 taxpayers in Michigan, which is 18 percent of all taxpayers in Michigan. Only a few of these Michigan taxpayers are upper income, and most are not taking advantage of unfair tax loopholes. But if they are caught by the AMT, all 830,000 Michiganders could be hammered with hundreds or even thousands of dollars in additional taxes.

There is a consensus in Washington that the AMT exemptions ought to be expanded so that the AMT impacts only upper income Americans, and not 23 million. Only bipartisan legislation will make this happen. The House bill includes three fiscally responsible provisions that would raise $32 billion to pay for the AMT fix. These measures would ensure fairness in the taxes levied on stock profits and in the taxes paid by hedge fund managers. Each provision represents an important tax reform in its own right that merits our support as a matter of tax fairness.

The first of the House measures would impose stock brokers to start reporting the cost basis of the securities they sell for their clients on the 1099 forms that brokers already send to those clients and to the Internal Revenue Service, IRS. Reporting the cost basis on these forms is a simple way to help ensure that the stock owners accurately report to the IRS any profits earned from the sales of the stock, and it enjoys broad, bipartisan support. It is expected to generate about $3.4 billion in added tax revenues over the next 10 years.

The next two House provisions would affect the income taxes paid by hedge fund managers, a small group of investment advisers who are among the wealthiest in America today.

Hedge fund managers are private investment funds accessible only to wealthy individuals and large institutional investors. The experts who decide how to invest these dollars are typically called hedge fund managers. In 2006, there were about 2,500 hedge funds registered with the Securities and Exchange Commission, SEC. Hedge funds take money only from sophisticated investors such as as pension funds, university endowments, and individuals who have at least $5 million in investments. By taking investment dollars only from sophisticated investors, hedge funds can avoid complying with SEC regulations that apply to mutual funds and other investment funds available to the general public.

Last year, press reports indicate that the top U.S. hedge fund manager made $1.7 billion in compensation. That’s billion. The average compensation for the top 25 hedge fund managers was $570 million. Each. Think about that.

For comparison, the 2006 median income for U.S. households was less than $49,000, which is less than one tenth thousandth of the income collected by those top hedge fund managers.

Hedge fund managers make their money by charging their clients a management fee equal to 2 percent of the funds provided to the hedge fund for investment and, in addition, by taking 20 percent of profits earned from those investments. The 20 percent share of the investment returns from hedge funds is known as “carried interest.” Under current law, most hedge fund managers claim that this carried interest is capital gains subject to a maximum tax rate of 15 percent, rather than as ordinary income subject to a maximum tax rate of 35 percent.

When hedge fund managers take 20 percent of their clients’ investment returns, they are being compensated for managing those client funds; they are not collecting profits from investing their own money. Characterizing this compensation as capital gains is a tax dodge that has been allowed to go on for too long. This tax loophole allows hedge fund managers to pay a 15-percent capital gains rate on millions—or even billions—of dollars in income. Meanwhile, a receptionist in the same office earning $49,000 pays at a regular tax rate. Making a salaried worker pay a higher tax rate than the managers who are making hundreds of millions of dollars is a tax travesty, and it has got to stop.

The House bill would restore fairness by putting an end to this tax loophole. The second provision of the House bill would make it clear that the 20 percent carried interest is, in fact, taxable as ordinary income, making hedge fund managers pay the same income tax rates as Americans. If enacted, it would raise about $23.8 billion over 10 years, half the cost of fixing the AMT.

The third provision in the House bill would address a smaller group of hedge fund managers—those routing their compensation through offshore corporations located in tax havens. The hedge fund managers participating in this tax dodge typically don’t live or work in the tax haven where the offshore corporation is incorporated. The offshore corporation often doesn’t have any physical presence in the tax haven either—it functions as a shell company with no full-time employees or physical office. The whole arrangement is a phony setup to enable the hedge fund manager to appear to get paid outside the United States, direct the offshore corporation to place the compensation in an offshore retirement plan, and pay the U.S. income taxes on that compensation until sometime in the future. In the meantime, the offshore corporation can invest the funds tax free and accumulate investment returns for the hedge fund manager. The bottom line is that hedge fund managers are able to defer U.S. income taxes and circumvent parts of the U.S. Tax Code that limit tax free contributions to retirement plans. Some are able to defer paying taxes on hundreds of millions of dollars of annual income.

The House bill would put an end to this offshore tax dodge by requiring hedge fund managers to pay taxes on any earnings from their deferred offshore investments, as those earnings accrue. The tax-free ride would be over. If enacted, this provision would raise $23.8 billion over 10 years.

Requiring accurate reporting of stock profits, applying the same tax rates to the income of ordinary Americans, and taxing deferred offshore investment income are provisions that promote tax fairness and make a lot of sense. Together, these three House provisions would raise more than $52 billion over 10 years, enough to pay for the entire $51 billion AMT fix so that we can protect middle class Americans from the AMT’s sledgehammer without running up the national debt.

So why is the Senate hesitating to enact the House bill? Some claim that forcing hedge fund managers to pay their fair share of taxes would somehow put an end to the capitalist spirit in America. Whatever the merits of the argument for lower taxes on capital gains, those arguments certainly do not make any sense when applied to income earned for servicing and managing other peoples’ capital. Surely the person who earned $1.7 billion would have had that same capitalist spirit and zeal for investing whether his take home pay was $1.7 billion or $1.1 billion.

Some of my colleagues argue that the Senate just should add the $51 billion cost of AMT to the deficit and leave it at that. But when some taxpayers are given a free ride, the rest will inevitably be asked to make up the difference, whether it is through increased debt or higher taxes down the road. We all know that there is no free lunch, and there is no free tax cut. And history shows that when upper income groups avoid paying taxes, the middle income groups end up footing the tax bill. Unfortunately, some continue to grasp onto the fiscally irresponsible argument that the $51 billion cost of AMT over 10 years has added $3.5 trillion to the $9 trillion debt ditch already threatening the economic well-being of the next generation. And they would dig that debt ditch deeper—instead of paying for the AMT tax cut—primarily to protect hedge fund managers from paying their fair share of taxes.

I don’t understand how some can claim that the deficit matters when the $22 trillion in appropriations for health, education or veterans, but not when the issue is $51 billion in tax benefits for the wealthiest Americans.

The bottom line is that the Senate found the political will to impose tax fairness on hedge funds when they passed H.R. 3996. The Senate can and should do the same. If we don’t—if we give in to the pressure to break the pay-as-you-go rules that have so far held firm in the Senate—it will be that much easier to break the rules again in the future. Giving up on pay-go would let down American taxpayers who are counting on us to act responsibly and pay for what we legislate.

If the Republican filibuster continues and succeeds, and if we cannot muster 60 votes to break it, we would then be forced with the choice of raising taxes on 23 million working families or violating our pay-as-you-go rules. I would protect my constituents at the expense of an even deeper national debt. But we don’t have to go that way, and we shouldn’t. With the House bill we can protect our constituents from unintended tax increases, we can ensure fairness in the tax code, and we can avoid increasing the Federal deficit.

I urge my colleagues, Republicans and Democrats, to take a look at the tradeoffs presented in the House bill. The House bill will allow us to fix the AMT for a year, and at the same time ensure that the wealthiest among us contribute their fair share to this great country. I urge my colleagues to take seriously Congress’s commitment to fiscal responsibility as well as fairness, and to pass H.R. 3996.

I yield the floor.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

We, the undersigned Senators, in accordance with the provisions of rule XXII of the Standing Rules of the Senate, do hereby move to bring to a close debate on the Harkin substitute amendment No. 3500 to H.R. 2419, the farm bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. PROYOR). Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I move to proceed to calendar No. 487, H.R. 3996—

I am happy to see my friend, the distinguish Senator from Georgia on the floor. I believe my friend from Georgia knows how hard I have tried to get some way to proceed forward on this farm bill. We don't have farms in Nevada. We do have some. We have lots of ranches. We have lots of alfalfa. We have lots of some of the trees in Nevada. For some ranchers, the one crop we are very proud of is onions. We are the largest white onion producer in the world—in the United States—I am sorry. And in Lyon County, we produce lots of stuff: onions, garlic, and in Mason Valley, lots and lots of alfalfa. The greenbelts of Nevada are shrinking because of the population growth we have. But we still have ranches—ranches that were owned by Bing Crosby—I mean that that were famous ranches. They still are. But even they are being hit by the population growth.

We are very proud of our ranching community. There are things in this farm bill that have direct impact on my constituency in the State of Nevada, and I say that is something we will have to see what can be done about this. We have a lot of nongermane amendments: Some of them are famous, some of them are not. They would have to be germane amendments. But what would be wrong with that?

We have had one cloture motion. It has been a number of weeks now. We have offered all kinds of suggestions to move forward. We have not heard a single proposal back from the Republicans other than to say: Well, open it up for amendments. Open it up for amendments so we can ask that we initiate a flat tax, or open it up to an amendment that we push forward on Bush's tax cuts that have put this country into such a terrible hole financially. That is what the plan is, and we are not going to be a part of that plan. We want that bill. We want it. We want to do it fairly and reasonably.

While we are talking about schedule, I have spoken to the Speaker several times today and she is going to complete either today or tomorrow an energy bill. That being the case, that will come here as a message from the House and we will have a cloture vote on that. The way things now are, if it gets here tomorrow, we will file a cloture motion on that and we will have a vote on that Saturday. That is not much of a majority, but we have the Senate. And everyone should know that unless there is an agreement to change that, we will have a vote on Saturday. We have Senators leaving for Bali and Senators wanting to go to some celebration at Pearl Harbor, and a lot of other places people want to go. But the country has a lot of business that needs to be attempted to be completed, and we are going to do that. I hope we can work together to solve some of these issues.

But to show the flexibility of our trying to move forward take, for example, the AMT, this tax proposal which was passed by a former Republican administration. Unless we place a so-called

Mr. CHAMBLISS. Mr. President, first, I thank the majority leader for coming down to the floor and providing one more chance to discuss this. I regret the majority leader has taken this action to file cloture. But I can tell you what the answer is and I can tell you how to complete the farm bill. This is our fifth week on this bill, literally. We had 2 weeks before the Thanksgiving recess. We have been out 2 weeks, and our staff has been working extremely hard during those 2 weeks, and here we are back in the fifth week. If we had had an open process initially, this farm bill would be in conference today. I think that still can happen. The majority leader referred to the number of amendments that are out there. I don’t remember what the number was, but 286. I believe, is what he said, and I think that is correct. A little over half of those were Democratic amendments and about half were Republican amendments. We have hotlined our bill once again today, and through work of the staff on both sides, we have cut our bill in half. If I dare say I can cut it by two-thirds in very short order. So we are moving south. We are moving in the direction of getting amendments not only that are germane, but as the distinguished majority leader said, we have always had amendments. What we are talking about here is a couple of non-germane amendments on farm bills. As I looked at the list of the Democratic amendments, there were a number—I daresay more non-germane amendments on there than there were amendments that are germane to the farm bill. So I don’t think it serves any purpose for us to argue about the germanness or nongermaneness, obviously, with the exception of the cloture vote, what effect it will have on that.

But here is my point. This has been a bipartisan effort, as the majority leader knows. I worked very closely with Senator HARKIN and Senator CONRAD and we have developed not only a bipartisan farm bill, but we, in a bipartisan way, have been whittling down the amendments, and I am willing to continue to do that, in spite of the cloture motion being filed, and I am very hopeful that whether it is Friday of this week or Monday of next week or Tuesday of next week, whatever the date may be, we can come back to the majority leader as well as the minority leader and say: OK, here is where we are. This is the final number of amendments that we can finally have votes on, and if no agreement can be negotiated on that basis, then perhaps we can’t come to some conclusion of it. But we have stood ready from day 1 to have an open process of amendments being filed, amendments being debated, and votes on those amendments, and some of those amendments I have significant disagreements with. But I was willing to debate those amendments and if we win, we win; if we don’t win, we don’t win, and we move on, but we get a bill off the floor of the Senate. The House passed their bill in July, and here we are in December and our work has not been completed.

I would simply say to the majority leader, if he asks me, as he did, how can we get a farm bill? Let’s start it. Call it up. Let’s let amendments be voted on, and votes on those amendments, and some of those amendments I have significant disagreements with. But I was willing to debate those amendments and if we win, we win; if we don’t win, we don’t win, and we move on, but we get a bill off the floor of the Senate. The House passed their bill in July, and here we are in December and our work has not been completed.

I would simply say to the majority leader, if he asks me, as he did, how can we get a farm bill? Let’s start it. Call it up. Let’s let amendments be filed, debated, and voted on. I assure you we will move this farm bill. I am here Saturday, Sunday, nights, holidays, whatever the majority leader suggests.

We are here to do a farm bill, and I think I also speak for Senator HARKIN that he will be here, and we will get this done.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, Senator HARKIN told me today Senator CHAMBLISS and he had agreed to about 40 amendments; is that valid?
that is now in existence. Let’s try to do something with AMT, rather than walk out of here and have people saying it is too bad the Democrats didn’t do AMT.

I have said that I defy anybody to come up with a way to do AMT other than the proposal that was sent from the House bill, which is fully paid for; do the Lott proposal, which eliminates it and costs a trillion dollars; do what Senators GRASSLEY and BAUCUS reported, that we pay for the extenders, not for the AMT. This morning I suggested we don’t pay for it. But, no. Silence.

I am disappointed but not surprised at how we have been treated today.

Mr. CHAMBLISS. Mr. President, let me respond to the distinguished majority leader by saying that when he says I don’t want a farm bill, nothing could be further from the truth. I already voted for this farm bill. I am ready to vote for this farm bill that came out of the Agriculture Committee tonight.

But he says also that there are the advocates of change, what he is proposing is a change in the process when it comes to farm bills. We do think the status quo on farm bills is the direction we ought to go, which is a free and open amendment process, to let the will of the Senate operate relative to farm policy.

This is a critical 5-year bill for every farmer and rancher in America. If we limit the ability of folks to certain farm policy.

Regarding floor time, we have spent the whole day doing nothing. Today, we could have been on the farm bill, why not be doing the farm bill on the floor, why not be doing the farm bill on the floor to do the business of the American farm bills work. Anybody can look at the record. Farm bills have been handled in a way where we have had a discussion today about 40 amendments. I am not sure where that came from. There has been absolutely no conversation between Senator HARKIN and myself about that.

I am prepared to move forward. If the majority leader will call up the farm bill, let’s start the amendment process, debate, and votes. I am here to do it.

Thank you.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I appreciate the Senator from Georgia talking about his experience here. But I have a little bit of experience, too. I have been here a quarter century. I know how farm bills work. Anybody can look at the record. Farm bills have been handled in a way where I have talked about them being handled.

If the Senator from Georgia so likes this bill that he voted for, what would be wrong with voting cloture with us and allowing people who have germane amendments to the farm bill to offer them? What in the world is wrong with that? I say, respectfully, that the Senator is speaking out of both sides of his mouth when he is saying he supports this bill, when he is not willing to vote for cloture and accept germane amendments. It is all the other people, they can deal with driver’s licenses for illegal immigrants and other issues that have nothing to do with the farm bill. They are trying to send a message. I have said we will accept x number of amendments, and I spoke to Senator HARKIN and he said they worked on this today. I thought he had spoken to the Senator from Georgia. Maybe it was staff driven. He should have agreed to four amendments. I said sign the deal up. Or let’s agree to 50 amendments. But we cannot get any agreement. We are in a rope-a-dope, Mr. President.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Republican leader is recognized.

Mr. MCCONNELL. Mr. President, this sounds somewhat similar to the discussion the majority leader and I had earlier today, so I will not belabor this. Sometimes it is harder to get a consent agreement limiting Members’ opportunities to offer amendments than it is to call up a bill and process amendments, which is the way we have done farm bills in the past.

Six years ago, a Democratic majority filed cloture, the two times and cloture was not invoked. The bill was put aside, and we came back later and finished it in a week, with no consent agreements, no limitations, nothing. We disposed of the amendments. That is the way the majority leader wants to go.

With regard to the AMT, this is a bill upon which there is a possibility of a consent agreement limiting amendments. In fact, I offered one yesterday that would limit the AMT consideration to four amendments. So we can get, on the AMT, a consent agreement that would make that possible to be dealt with in short order.

I repeat my request of the majority leader to take a look at that and see if we cannot enter into a consent agreement to wrap up the AMT.

Regarding floor time, we have spent the whole day doing nothing. Today, we could have been on the farm bill processing amendments and moving us forward. I spoke to the majority leader, before I came to the floor, that the list on our side could be significantly narrowed. Why don’t we, at some point, look at that, and we will have fewer and fewer amendments to deal with. I don’t know what we intend to do on the floor next week, but if most of the work of the Senate right now is going on in negotiations off the floor, why not be doing the farm bill on the floor and processing amendments and moving forward like the Senate normally does?

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Illinois is recognized.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, it is interesting that when you offer to the Republicans the opportunity to have a farm bill and debate the issues on the bill, they reject it. They want to debate a lot of other things. They want to bring up a lot of other issues. I recall the list of amendments, including one for the AMT, regarding the Exxon Valdez litigation. That is an important issue, but is it a farm bill issue? Would the Senator from Georgia argue with me that that has no place on the farm bill? Why would that be on the list? I am sure it is a valid idea.

When it comes to AMT, 19 million Americans are going to get hit with this tax if we don’t do something. The Senator from Kentucky says we should engage in debate on the Senate floor on the flat tax. What? Yes, the flat tax. That is one of their amendments. They want to toss out the entire Internal Revenue Code and replace it with a flat tax. We have to argue that before we take the AMT. That is what we are hearing from the Republicans.

Does that sound like it is responsible, like it addresses the issues we were sent to deal with? Every time we get to a substantive issue, Senator REID comes to the floor and says let’s narrow the amendments, have the debate, and decide it up or down. We will give you your chance to offer amendments related to the bill, and we will see how it ends. How much fairer can that be? They reject it.

Time and again, they reject it because they don’t want us to achieve anything in this session. Fifty-six times this year they have created a filibuster situation. Now, people who don’t know how the Senate may not know what that means, but if you saw “Mr. Smith Goes to Washington” and watched Jimmy Stewart crumple at his desk when he had run out of steam and could not talk anymore, that is what a filibuster is all about. That is what the Republicans are all about—talk, talk, talk—or in the modern era, recess, quorum call, recess, quorum call.

Some Senator said to me it reminds him of when Abraham Lincoln contacted a general during the Civil War and said: If you are not going to use the Army, can you let me use it to execute the war?

If we are not going to use the Senate floor to do the business of the American farm bills, can we engage in a debate on the flat tax or something, so that something positive is happening?

The Republicans are determined to stop anything substantive from happening. We want to take up the AMT tax and protect 19 million taxpayers. They are going to stop us. When they stop us, they are going to blame us. We saw that earlier in the day. The Republican leadership stopped a bill, and a Senator said we are just not taking up appropriations bills. They cannot have it both ways.

I listened to Senator REID, and I detected a note of frustration. How many weeks have we wasted trying to get through a farm bill that passed overwhelmingly on a bipartisan basis? They want to consider an amendment on the Exxon Valdez spill on the farm bill. I am sorry, but there are important things in that bill that need to pass, and they should not be held hostage to the whim of every Senator on the Republican side. I am sure we could have a spirited debate about the future of the flat tax. But it is getting close to Christmas, and we

county payments
mr. wyden. mr. president, i thank my colleagues, especially senator murray and senator menendez, for their courtesy. i will be brief.

today the house and senate announced a historic package to address the energy crisis facing our nation. but in addition, as part of that important legislation, the agreement contains more than $1.8 billion in desperately needed funding for our nation's rural schools, counties, and communities.

without the safety net funding provided as part of the energy legislation, rural communities across this country could literally be wiped off the map. without this critical funding, rural counties across america will once again be staring down into a precipice and a future filled with closed schools, terminated services, and deteriorating roads. within months, pink slips could again be sent to teachers and to county workers.

fortunately, some help for those rural communities is now on the way. the energy package contains an extension of the secure rural schools program that i authored in 2000. this proposal closely mirrors the legislative proposal that was crafted with senators baucus, bingaman, reid, and myself, a proposal that passed overwhelmingly in this body by a 74-to-23 vote as an amendment that i offered to the war emergency supplemental spending bill last spring.

specifically, the new energy package provides 4 more years of funding for the secure rural schools program, commonly known as the county payments program. a year of full funding for the payment in lieu of taxes program has also been included. by providing funds through 2011, this deal gets our rural counties off the fiscal roller coaster and back to stable funding so they can get at the real work of planning for the future. today's announcement would mean $1.8 billion in critical funding for school and road programs across america.

in our home state of oregon, particularly when folks are suffering because of the bad weather, it would mean hundreds of millions of dollars for schools and public safety, roads, and other essential county services. this program has been a successful one. it has been built around collaboration among counties, environmentalists, timber interests, and others, and the funds are absolutely critical to our rural communities.

the legislation that has been agreed to today, the energy bill, is very important to our country's future. but equally important is the legislation known as the county payments program for rural communities.

i am grateful to my colleague, senator murray, and senator menendez, who have been waiting patiently for the chance to make this announcement, and it is my hope that with the unflagging support of rural folks from across the country that this much-needed energy legislation will move forward and the country can look to a better future for rural communities.

washington state floods
mrs. murray. mr. president, i thank my colleague from new jersey for allowing me to speak before he does. i wish to speak today because, as we all know, in the last several days, the pacific northwest has been hit by devastating storms. we have seen wind and dangerous floods and mud slides that have cut off our roads, our homes, cut off power to literally thousands in my state.

today, the pouring rain thankfully has subsided a bit, but thousands of people are coping with the damage in my state, in my region. we will not know the full impact of this storm for some time, but our governor has already estimated that the cost is going to be in the billions of dollars.

my heart goes out to everyone in my home state of washington and in oregon who are coping with the aftermath of this tremendous storm. those people are in my thoughts constantly. i am working with all of our state, local, and federal entities to be sure everyone gets all the service and support they need at this critical time.

i especially thank and mention our governor, governor kerry heisler of washington state. she has been very strong in her leadership throughout this disaster and has been working tirelessly to coordinate the rescue efforts.

i especially today send a very heartfelt thanks to all of our rescue workers. they have been working out in these torrential rains, night and day, rescuing people from flooded homes and vehicles. they have been flying in supplies to people who are stranded. they have been working very hard to clear roads and railways that are still tonight swamped.

so far, the navy, the coast guard, the national guard, and all of our... agencies have rescued about 300 people by helicopter alone. This is our State’s largest aerial search-and-rescue operation in over a decade.

Let me paint a picture for all my colleagues of the damage that has occurred so far.

Parts of southwest Washington now look like a sea of brown water. Homes are flooded up to their roofs. Entire communities have been isolated by swamped roads. Out on our coast, winds of up to 100 miles an hour have knocked out power to literally thousands of homes. People feel very isolated and don’t have power; they don’t have telephones, and, in some areas, it is very tough to even assess how bad the damage is yet because we cannot even get to these people who do not have power or telephones.

I know a lot of relatives in the region and across the country are desperately trying this evening to reach their loved ones who have been affected, and our colleagues, along with Governor Gregoire, Senator Cantwell, and others, is doing everything we can to help.

Finally, I wish to mention one of the hardest hit and that is Interstate 5. This is the major artery that links Portland, OR, and Seattle, WA. That highway has been closed since Monday, and some are saying it is going to be several more days before we even get it open. This has forced cars and trucks that are traveling from Seattle to Portland or Portland to Seattle to detour through the Tri-Cities. For those who don’t know my State, that means they have to go over a mountain pass that is snow packed right now, take 4 extra hours, if the roads are good, and the snow and ice has not stopped them on the pass used to get to Portland. So this is a major nightmare in our area.

It is very hard to explain the impact of all this damage, but estimates of cost to businesses from delays on that highway alone have been placed at $1 million a day to our businesses that rely on this major artery to get their goods quickly and safely back and forth.

As I said in a speech earlier today on the floor, the impact of these storms reinforces how important our transportation infrastructure is to absolutely everyone. We are all one rainstorm, one bridge disaster away from huge impacts to our economy and to families’ lives.

Again, I wished to come to the floor this evening to send my heartfelt thanks to everyone who is working so hard in my State of Washington and to all those people who have been affected so devastatingly by these storms. They are all in my thoughts every minute.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Jersey.

COST OF THE IRAQ WAR

Mr. MENENDEZ. Mr. President, for more than 4 years now, President Bush has been declaring victory or progress in Iraq. The thousands of soldiers who have lost their legs, gone blind or suffered horrible nightmares might be finding it hard to celebrate. The families of those soldiers might not be cheering very loud about the President’s view of success. Thousands more whose children, whose mothers and fathers are lost forever might be finding it hard to share in the latest cries of victory.

Yes, the number killed last month dropped to 37, and we certainly rejoice in the fact that fewer soldiers are dying. That is still another 37 families who have no reason to rejoice. More American troops have died this year than any other year.

No matter how much military progress has been made in Iraq, that kind of security can only go so far. No amount of troops will force Iraqi politicians to redistribute the country’s oil revenues. No Abrams tank can build trust between Shiites and Sunnis.

The whole point of this surge was to create the conditions necessary for Iraqis to make political progress. But 2 weeks ago, the Washington Post ran a headline that said: “Iraqis Wasting an Opportunity, U.S. Officers Say.”

Iraqi security forces are still unable to operate on their own. Any cease-fire between factions could evaporate in minutes. Withdrawing down to pre-surge levels, but we have to wonder whether we are going to be told again we have to re-surge, do it all over again because the Iraqi Government and security forces are largely still at square one.

Our generals in Iraq have been the first to admit that a solution to the country’s conflict has to be more than a military solution; it has to be a political solution. A political solution is up to the Iraqis to chart. But now there has been practical zero progress on the core critical issues necessary to bring a lasting peace.

The administration set 18 benchmarks for the Iraqi Government to meet. They have barely met three. So is it time to turn up the pressure or let them keep squabbling while Americans pay and Americans die?

There is more corruption in Iraq than almost anywhere else on the face of the Earth. We simply don’t know where our money is going. It is a pit of quicksand when it comes to money. Some estimates say that as much as a third of the money we spend on Iraqi contracts and grants winds up unaccounted for or stolen—a third of billions of dollars, with a lot of it going straight to Shiite or Sunni militias. Let me repeat that: $1 out of every $3 we pay gets either lost or stolen—lost or stolen. Even after billions and billions and billions of dollars flowing, Iraqi society is still dysfunctional.

American money went toward improving, for example, municipal water systems in Iraq. The Iraqis now break open the pipes and steal the water. American money went toward books for schools. Iraqis steal them from the Ministry of Education and sell them on the street at three times the price.

Government officials and contractors were buying furniture right out of their offices. That is what the American taxpayers are funding.

So is it time to change our strategy, or do we ignore the reality? While Americans pay and Americans die? Here is the message we send to Iraqi politicians by sending them a blank check with no expiration date: Continue your squabbles. We will continue to see the loss of American life and continue to empty our treasury for you. For as long as you like. That message is: You can sit back while Americans pay and Americans die. I think it is time for a different message, Mr. President.

After seeing a surge in the military that has lasted for months do nothing about a splurge of corruption that has lasted for years, the conclusion we have to draw from this is: The only way Iraqis will take charge of their own country and make the tough compromises necessary to form a functional society is when they believe we won’t be there forever. That is the only way. It is long past time for the Iraqi Government to take charge, and the only way they are going to step up is if we begin to transition out. A reduction in fighting is not an excuse for a reduction in planning for our involvement to end.

The fact is, the violence has not stopped and the costs of this war have only gone up. The war is costing us $10 billion or so per month. The debt our Government is taking on, and that taxpayers are going to be responsible for, is exploding at the rate of $1 million a minute. I heard our colleagues earlier today, when I was Presiding Officer, talk about fiscal responsibility and what we bequeath to the next generation. Well, we are bequeathing them $1 million a minute of debt, because none of the money the President asked for is paid for—none of it. Yet when we try to invest in America, we are told there is no money for it. But it is okay to continue to saddle the next generation of Americans with a huge debt, $1 million a minute.

When the numbers are that high, every American taxpayer has to ask him or herself a basic question: How does the President plan to pay for the war?

Well, last week, we got a small part of that answer. He wants to cut funding for counterterrorism at home. According to a leaked administration document, President Bush wants to cut counterterrorism funding for cities by more than half. When I saw that article, I had to do a double-take. When I read that, I thought the report had to be wrong. It had to be wrong. Coming from the State of New Jersey, which lost 700 people—700 of my fellow citizens on that fateful day, and coming from a nation that lost 3,000 fellow Americans—to hear that we are going to continue to pump money into this war, a blank check, unpaid for, but that we will not take care of our security here at home, that had to be wrong.

His reported budget would slash funding for police, firefighters, and rescue workers. It could mean fewer security guards at ports, less reliable detection of explosives, and less training for security personnel. Basically, it could undermine the entire effort to prevent terrorism that our Nation realized that September day, one of the most urgent challenges we have ever faced. Cutting counterterrorism funding is simply outrageous.

Now I certainly hope the Congress is not going to stand for it, and the people who live in those cities definitely will not stand for it. But is it necessary to remind the President how important it is to protect our homes and families from these attacks? Do we have to say that we must do everything within the bounds of possibility and the law to prevent a terrorist attack from happening again? And this suggestion that we are ultimately spending our efforts and dollars on terrorism here at home so we don’t have to spend it elsewhere is a falsehood. That is a falsehood.

Is anyone here in America going to feel safer at the end of the day when counterterrorism funding is cut for their hometown security, when we found out on that fateful day on September 11 how we responded—with local police, local firefighters, local emergency management? It was not the Federal Government but the local public safety entities. Is that a risk President Bush wants to take, to cut what amounts to .06 percent of the Federal budget, especially when the war in Iraq has eaten up $455 billion and counting; when the amount he wants to cut off of homeland security here at home, so we don’t have to spend it elsewhere is a falsehood? That is a falsehood.

According to the best estimates by the International Labor Organization, ILO, there are at least 218 million child laborers between the ages of 5 and 17 in today’s global economy. Of these 218

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD — SENATE

S14779

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I am a longtime supporter of policies designed to open foreign markets to our Na-
Mr. President, I rise today to welcome the passage of S. 1327, which will reestablish temporary judgeships where needed in the district courts and extend other temporary judgeships that are about to expire. The bill will reestablish a 10-year temporary judgeship in the Eastern District of California, which is desperately needed. It will also reestablish temporary judgeships in Nebraska and extend the terms of existing temporary judgeships in Hawaii, Kansas, and Ohio.

The Eastern District of California had a temporary judgeship from 1992 to 2004. At the end of that period, the caseload in the district was the second-highest in the Nation: 787 filings per judge. That was almost 50 percent more than the national average.

Still, the temporary judgeship expired in the fall of 2004 as required by law. Since then the situation in the Eastern District has grown even more dire. Average caseloads across the Nation have declined, but in the Eastern District they have increased by 18 percent.

The most recent statistics show that the Eastern District of California has the fifth busiest caseload: 927 filings per judge. That is twice as many cases as the national average.

It is no exaggeration to say that the judges of the Eastern District are in desperate need of relief. They have continued to serve with distinction in the face of the crushing caseloads. Two of the court’s senior judges still carry full caseloads after taking senior status. Two other senior judges are also continuing to hear cases.

In recent months, the caseload has become even more crushing with the departure of chief judge David Levi. He stepped down from the bench after 17 years of service to become the dean of the Duke University School of Law. It is clear that the Eastern District of California needs our help to ensure that cases continue to be handled with the care, attention, and promptness that are essential to the fair administration of justice. Reestablishing the temporary judgeship is one way to help.

This bill is also a crucial first step toward getting California all of the

I believe every American should have the opportunity to volunteer overseas and experience firsthand, like Claudia, how crucial this kind of assistance is to building meaningful personal understanding and international relationships as well as contributing to the development of nations. For this reason, I introduced the Global Service Fellowship Act, S. 1464, which creates an international volunteer program designed to provide more opportunities for people-to-people engagement. The bill removes two key barriers that Americans face when volunteering overseas—cost and time limitations. First, the Global Service Fellowship Act reduces financial barriers by awarding fellowships that can be applied towards airfare, housing, or program costs, to name a few examples. By providing financial assistance, the Global Service Fellowship Program opens the door for every American to be a program participant—not just those with the resources to pay for it. Second, the bill removes the length of time for which an individual can volunteer. I often hear from constituents who do not seek opportunities to participate in Federal volunteer programs because they cannot leave their jobs or family for years at a time. The Global Service Fellowship Program provides a commonsense approach to the time constraints of many Americans who seek volunteer opportunities by offering a timeframe that works for them—from a month up to a year.

My bill would broaden the spectrum of Federal volunteer opportunities already made available by our Government. Given the increasingly negative perception of the United States overseas, we need more support for international volunteerism now more than ever. My constituents who engage in such opportunities are proof of how we can both inform ourselves of the needs and nature of our foreign neighbors and also directly contribute about the United States for the better. For these reasons, today marks a special day for me and, in particular, for my constituents who have shared with me their stories of hope and fulfillment from their international experiences. It is my wish that all of us will have these types of experiences and that this day will remind us of—and encourage us to participate in—the very meaningful opportunities and benefits offered by international volunteer initiatives.

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

TRIBUTE TO ED SHINODA

• Mr. AKAKA. Mr. President, I would like to commend Ed Shinoda for receiving the prominent Asian American OCA annual Pacific American Corporate Achievement Award. October 19, 2007, he was recognized in Las Vegas, NV, for his work at the United States Parcel Service, UPS, as a Pacific region manager. He has been at UPS since 1975, where he started as a part-time loader.

The OCA was founded in 1973 to advance the social, political, and economic well-being of all Pacific Americans. With 50 chapters across the Nation, including one in Hawaii, OCA helps citizens achieve their aspirations and improve their lives. The organization also facilitates the development of leadership and involvement in the community.

The Asia Pacific American Corporate Achievement Award was given to twelve individuals this year. This national program recognizes the achievements of Asian Pacific Americans in the corporate world, and their service to the community. Those honored were nominated by their employers, and then selected by a panel of judges.

Ed is currently the UPS Hawaii Operations Manager and is responsible for all UPS operations in Hawaii. Throughout his time at UPS, Ed has served in various leadership positions and is now one of the highest ranking Asian Pacific Americans at UPS. Ed not only works hard at UPS, but also in the community. He has supported programs such as Neighbor-to-Neighbor, Global Volunteer Week, and the United Way campaign.

In addition to working hard and being involved in the community, Ed also supports fellow Asian Pacific American communities. He has served in organizations such as the Honolulu Japanese Chamber of Commerce, the Honolulu Chamber of Commerce, and the Hong Kong Business Association. He helped found “A Safe Place,” an organization which works with children whose parents have been incarcerated. Ed is a hard-working individual, and I wish him and his family a warm aloha and best wishes.

HALEIWA SUPER MARKET CENTENNIAL

• Mr. AKAKA. Mr. President, I would like to take this opportunity to congratulate the Haleiwa Super Market of Haleiwa, HI, on celebrating its 100-year anniversary. The store was opened by Kasaku Sakai, a Japanese plantation contract worker, and has since been run by four generations of the Sakai family.

Since opening in 1907, the store has expanded from a small grocery store to a full service supermarket. The business has changed locations several times in order to accommodate the store’s increasing size. It has provided the residents of Haleiwa town with an invaluable resource throughout its many years. For example, during WWII, the store operated by credit, and its customers were not required to pay interest on their outstanding balances. Debts were often forgiven for families that were unable to pay. Now, both tourists and locals stroll the aisles of the Haleiwa Super Market for its fresh... produce, fish, wines, and its line of Haleiwa Super Market logo items.

For 100 years, the Haleiwa store has remained a family run business. Everyone in the family has contributed to the business since the time they were young. The family business is managed by Roy and Roy Sakai. They credit the success of the company to their great employees.

People continue to enjoy the Haleiwa Super Market for its friendly employees and atmosphere. Many people have helped to keep the market a flourishing business, and although we cannot name them all, we honor them through the celebration of the centennial anniversary. Without the support and dedication of the owners, employees and customers of the Haleiwa Super Market, the store could not have survived these 100 years.

REMEMBERING BROTHER J. STEPHEN SULLIVAN

Mrs. CLINTON
President, Manhattan College, Barrytown, New York

"What is so rare as a day in June?" says the poet. June 25, 1920 was a rare day, indeed, as all good things do, came to an end. In September 1943, Brother Stephen and his classmates set forth to face the challenges of the classroom, extracurricular activities, graduate study and community life. For Brother Stephen, the venue was St. Peter's in Staten Island, where he taught mostly Latin, his major, and also algebra, geometry, English, history and French. After school and during summers, he pursued success- fully a degree in Latin at Manhattan College under the direction of the rigorous and relentless Brother Alban Dooley. In 1948, Brother Stephen was assigned to St. Mary's in Waltham, Massachusetts, as teacher and sub-director of the community. He was, thus, able to be close to his family and at the same time attend courses at Boston College, earning a second M.A., this time in philosophy.

With such a strong background in classical languages and philosophy, in 1953 Brother Stephen entered Catholic University to study for the doctorate in sacred theology, a program only recently made available to the Brothers. In addition to full-time academic programming, he also involved in full-time teaching of the classics and theology to the scholastics and, in due time, administrative duties as pro-director and director of scholasticate courses.

In 1959, he was awarded the honorary doctorate in humane letters. At Thanksgiving, programs for teaching the handicapped were introduced, as well as an M.B.A. program and courses in professional ethics, biochemistry and computer technology. In 1966, he was awarded an honorary doctorate of laws by La Salle College in Philadelphia. Determined to keep the Brothers in the forefront of commission, he was able to paint a new mural for the reredos in the College chapel, which was renamed the Chapel of De La Salle and his Brothers. He had the satisfaction do a murals in the president's dining room depicting the successive Brother Presidents and their contributions to the College. For the tercentenary of the Institute in 1980, he sponsored a series of lectures that were then published. In addition, he made arrangements to have the St. John Baptist de La Salle and his Brother John, a Jesuit priest at Boston College, and Sister Margaret de Sales, who was then principal at Paramus Catholic High School. He felt very deeply the deaths of his brother, his older sister, and that of his brother John. In 1980, Brother Stephen suffered the first of a series of heart attacks that eventually required surgery. After he had recovered from surgery and the first heart attack, he was awarded an honorary doctorate of philosophy.

At Manhattan, Brother Stephen was an important addition to the department of theology, still in the process of becoming an academic department with a qualified and dedicated faculty. Brother Stephen regularly attended the meetings of the Catholic Theological Society of America. Through the 1960s, he served as treasurer from 1960 to 1970. He authored the article on merit for the New Catholic Encyclopedia and his collection of articles entitled Beacons of Theological Theology was published by Prentice-Hall. Meanwhile, Brother Abdon Lewis was nudging Brother Stephen in the direction of administrative offices. In the late 1960s, Brother Stephen had almost made his decision to become president of the College when Brother Gregory Nuret resigned in 1975.

By that time, the student unrest of the late 1960s had pretty well quieted down, the cooperative program with the College of Mount St. Vincent in New York, and Manhattan itself had officially gone coed, bringing in ever-increasing number of female students to the College. Brother Stephen presided over the celebration of the College's 125th anniversary that was followed in the next year by the construction of the Draddy Gymnasium. From 1960 to 1975, he was awarded an honorary doctorate of laws by La Salle College in Philadelphia. Determined to keep the Brothers in the forefront of commission, he was able to paint a new mural for the reredos in the College chapel, which was renamed the Chapel of De La Salle and his Brothers. He had the satisfaction do a murals in the president's dining room depicting the successive Brother Presidents and their contributions to the College. For the tercentenary of the Institute in 1980, he sponsored a series of lectures that were then published. In addition, he made arrangements to have the St. John Baptist de La Salle and his Brother John, a Jesuit priest at Boston College, and Sister Margaret de Sales, who was then principal at Paramus Catholic High School. He felt very deeply the deaths of his brother, his older sister, and that of his brother John. In 1980, Brother Stephen suffered the first of a series of heart attacks that eventually required surgery. After he had recovered from surgery and the first heart attack, he was awarded an honorary doctorate of philosophy.
Lasallian family, especially relatives of the Brothers and former Brothers, based on the concept of stewardship for the Lasallian tradition. “Associates in Stewardship” was a cornerstone quarterly publication called Lasallian Notes. He took special care to celebrate the lives of the deceased Brothers and to keep in contact with their families, including Father Robert (Father Robert’s Art Festival). He spoke frequently of the Lasallian Memorial Mass. Involved as he was in public relations for the College, Brother Stephen never lost his association with Manhattan College, and he was a staunch supporter of the Rockhurst University arts programs.

As he left his work, I am thankful for the opportunity to meet this man and to listen to him talk about his life and his work. Brother Stephen was a vital part of the Lasallian tradition, and his contributions to the College will be remembered with gratitude.

Mr. SANDERS. Mr. President, I wish to acknowledge the lifetime work of the artist George Tooker. Earlier this month, President Bush presented him with the National Medal of Arts, our Nation’s highest and most prestigious award for artistic excellence.

George Tooker, born in New York City, is a resident of Hartland, VT. After studying English literature at Harvard and then studying painting at the Art Students League of New York, he found a world of modern possibilities in the medieval and Renaissance medium of egg tempera, helping to begin a revitalization of that technique. The choice of egg tempera gave his paintings an archaic and otherworldly feel, creating wonderfully rich juxtapositions as Tooker often used contemporary subjects and circumstances as the theme of his work. For instance, many of his paintings convey images of modernity and alienation while using colors, surface finishes, and techniques that hearken back to the long tradition of art history. But they do more, of course, the reference to that long tradition of culture foregrounds the current manifestations of that culture, which George Tooker addresses as his subject.

Although some have seen elements of fantasy in his paintings, George Tooker has been explicit; he seeks not an escape into a dream world but, rather, the creation of a new approach to realism. “I am after painting reality impressed on the mind so hard that it returns as a dream, but I am not after painting dreams as such, or fantasy,” he once said.

His haunting works often highlight the increased social isolation that has accompanied the pressures of modernization on everyday life. He deals with society and its very real consequences; although many of his paintings are abstracted, the faces and bodies of the people at their heart are images that have the capacity to reveal and reflect many of the deepest feelings each viewer of Tooker’s work encounters in his or her own life in the contemporary world.

I commend Mr. George Tooker for his important contributions to American art and congratulate him on receiving the National Medal of Arts. We in Vermont are proud of his accomplishment.

RECOGNIZING MAINE MACHINE PRODUCTS COMPANY

Ms. SNOWE. Mr. President, with tremendous enthusiasm, I recognize Maine Machine Products Company, a phenomenal small business from my home State of Maine that manufactures products for various hi-tech industries. Because of its hard work and dedication to leading its field, Maine Machine Products was recognized with the Maine Development Foundation’s Champion of Economic Development Award at the Foundation’s annual meeting in December 2007. Headquartered in South Paris, Maine Machine Products has a history replete with innovation and success, and is a company highly deserving of such an aptly titled award.

Founded in 1939 by Roland Sutton, Maine Machine Products is a custom precision manufacturer of components and assemblies whose products are sent to global high-technology markets including those serving the defense and aerospace, telecom and fiber optic, and semiconductor markets. Located in a temperature-controlled 75,000-square-foot building in western Maine, Maine Machine Products employs roughly 150 highly skilled workers who consistently produce products of the finest quality for these vital industries. Always seeking to be on the cutting edge of technology, Maine Machine Products earlier this year began working with the Mazak Integrex e-Series, which is the most advanced multitasking machine in precision manufacturing. The machine allows the company to complete all operations, such as turning, boring, and drilling, in a single setup, increasing productivity and efficiency. Additionally, the firm has upgraded its Clean Room, where it tests and finishes semiconductor equipment, by expanding it and making other improvements.

More than merely adding to its existing infrastructure, Maine Machine Products has made significant contributions to both its employees and the western Maine community. Two programs, in particular, demonstrate the attention that the company pays to its workers and aspiring manufacturing personnel. First, Maine Machine Products provides a work-study program that assists firms with the training of their computer numerical control, or CNC, operators. In addition, the program attempts to fill open CNC positions with nontraditional workers by training individuals and matching them with employers. In MOST’s inaugural season, 52 incumbent Maine Machine Products employees received training through the program, and the company hired 6 new employees who participated.

Through a second program, Maine Machine Products gives scholarships to students who are enrolled in the Machine Tool Program at Central Maine Community College based in Auburn. Since its inception in 1974, Maine Machine Products’ scholarship program has sponsored 47 scholarships. The program provides a work-study program to students who qualify, and—most fittingly—many graduates of the scholarship program are presently employed at Maine Machine Products.

Maine Machine Products has filled a specific niche in the precision custom manufacturing industry for over five decades, and it continues to be a market leader. With measured expansion and sustained growth throughout the years, Maine Machine Products has established itself as a highly competitive and competitive field. I wish everyone at Maine Machine Products continued success and growth in the years to come.

STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLS AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Mr. Kerry (for himself, Mr. Ensign, Ms. Stabenow, and Mr. Menendez):

S. 2408. A bill to amend title XVIII of the Social Security Act to require physician utilization of the Medicare electronic prescription drug program; to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, seven thousand Americans die every year because of preventable adverse drug events. Tens of thousands of more are injured. Meanwhile, of the three billion prescriptions that are written each year, billions of dollars a year. That is why I am pleased to join my colleagues Senator Ensign, Senator Stabenow and Senator Menendez to introduce critical legislation to help bring our health care system into the 21st century through electronic prescribing, e-prescribing, of medications in the Medicare program.

The benefits of e-prescribing are clear and compelling. When a doctor “writes” an electronic prescription, a computer or handheld device warns of potentially dangerous interactions or allergies or informs the physician whether a particular drug is covered by a patient’s insurance. It also tells the physician whether a chemically identical generic alternative is available at a fraction of the price. The path to a modern, accountable health care system starts with health information technology. The path to robust health information technology starts with e-prescribing.

This legislation would provide permanent funding for physician payment bonuses in Medicare to help offset the costs of acquiring e-prescribing systems and to incentivize the use of the technology. The bill would also require all physicians in Medicare to use e-prescribing starting in 2011—1 year later than the Institute of Medicine recommended in their recent study. We have talked long enough about using technology to perpetually rising health care costs and poor quality, and our legislation takes an important step to do something about it.

I want to give particular credit to Mark Merritt and his team at pharmaceutical management Association, PCMA, for their hard work and leadership. PCMA created a strong and diverse coalition of health care stakeholders to advocate for this legislation, including business, labor, consumer advocates, physicians, health plans, pharmacists, and drug manufacturers. The PCMA-led coalition has worked diligently on Capitol Hill in support of this important issue. They have educated Congress on e-prescribing and are helping to make sure that we get the policy right.

The Medicare E-MEDS Act gets it right. The standards and interoperability for e-prescribing are in place; the technology is affordable; and, most importantly, the dramatic benefits for patients and health care purchasers—especially the Federal Government—are overwhelmingly clear. This bill is a solid step towards addressing these important issues in the delivery of our Nation’s health care. It is time that Congress act to save lives and increase efficiency in America’s health care system.

Mr. President, I ask for unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the text of the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

SEC. 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the “Medicare Electronic Medication and Safety Protection (E-MEDS) Act of 2007.”

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

Congress finds the following:

(1) Adverse drug events are defined by the Institute of Medicine as “any injury due to medication.”

(2) Adverse drug events are defined by the Institute of Medicine as “any injury due to medication.”

(3) According to the Institute of Medicine, more than 1.5 million preventable adverse drug events occur every year in the United States.

(4) Studies indicate that at least 530,000 preventable adverse drug events occur each year among the Medicare population, and cost the Federal Government upwards of $807,000,000 per year.

(5) Electronic prescription drug programs, or e-prescribing, provide for the electronic transmittal of prescription information from the prescribing health care provider to the dispensing pharmacy and pharmacist.

(6) Electronic prescribing provides formula and coverage information before a prescription is written to better inform the patient and prescriber of lower cost options, including generics.

(7) E-prescribing can help to eliminate medical errors, injuries, hospitalizations, and even death that can result from illegible prescriptions and bad drug interactions, in addition to reducing patient medication non-adherence.

(8) The Institute of Medicine recommends that all physicians create a plan to implement and use e-prescribing technology by 2010.

By Mr. WYDEN (for himself and Mr. OBAMA):

S. 2411. A bill to require the establishment of a credit card safety star rating system for the benefit of consumers, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

Mr. WYDEN. Mr. President, credit card debt is hitting American families like a wrecking ball, with our families already being hammered by skyrocketing fuel prices and the subprime mortgage mess. We have seen credit card debt go up almost 25 percent in the last 3 years. I have brought to the floor a typical credit card agreement that millions of our citizens enter into. It is 44 pages long. You can’t see it from the chair, but it goes on and on and on with small print. It is very obvious to me that buried in all of this legalese, buried in all of this technical jargon, is a variety of sneaky terms that are so complex, they are almost impossible to understand. It is not possible to understand what is in much of the key provisions of these agreements. For example, we understand folks in New Jersey, Oregon, or anywhere else pay a lot of attention to the interest rate provision. They pay a lot of attention to the annual fee provision. But they don’t notice a lot of the little disclosures that end up hidden in the legalese that can end up making the real cost of credit significantly higher.

December 5, 2007

Last week, I met with students across the State of Oregon. A lot of them, with the financial aid cutbacks, are now walking on an economic tightrope. They balance their food bills against their fuel bills and their fuel bills against their housing costs. They are on an economic tightrope. They are getting buried in credit card debt. Very often they find, for example, that if they have a credit card, and they are late one time with someone else, their credit card interest rate ends up going up as a result. There may be a small provision in their existing credit card agreement that allows it, but nobody, for the most part, knows about it.

Students would say their interest rates would double almost overnight with virtually no notice. They would not be given any clear communication about what is going on. They would just find their costs would arbitrarily skyrocket, and they would again be unable to pay their bills.

Now, I recognize in a free society folks have a constitutional right to be foolish, to rack up charges that would not normally a small provision buried in a free society. I do not think most people will do that. Certainly not the students I met with in Oregon last week, if it is possible to understand the terms of these credit cards in straightforward, plain and simple English rather than see the key provisions buried in all kinds of legalese that you would have to be a wizard to sort out.

So I am proposing today, with the support of our colleague, Senator Obama, that the Federal Reserve, which has great expertise in this area, set up a safety rating system for credit cards—not one that evaluates credit card companies on provisions that are appropriately evaluated in the marketplace, but on safety matters—for example, whether a credit card company gives the consumer adequate notice before they change terms; whether, for example, they highlight the key kinds of changes rather than bury them in the small print.

I think the Federal Reserve, with the technical expertise they have and the independent judgment they bring to these financial questions, is the ideal place to develop and operate a safety rating system. Such a system has worked quite well for new cars. When you have a rating system for cars, people can understand how they would be treated in a crash. The legislation I am offering will tell people whether credit card companies are treating them fairly and disclosing the key provisions so that a free market can work.

So under the rating system I propose today with Senator Obama, it would be required for credit card companies to put a rating system on the card itself, put on the various promotional materials they are using, stars which, in effect, would be granted on the basis of the Federal Reserve’s independent judgment as to whether the key safety criteria are being met.

I am very hopeful that at a time when our citizens are being pounded by powerful economic forces, particularly in the energy and housing field, there could at least be bipartisan agreement and support that that kind of transparency, disclosure, changes in the credit card business, so our consumers—and millions are using these credit cards during this holiday season—can understand the agreements they are getting into.

The students I met with last week are taking steps now to better police what is going on in the credit card field. On several campuses in Oregon, they have moved the credit card companies off campus. Yet the credit card companies contain the students with promotional material.

I was told, for example, about one program where students were brought into a room where money was essentially floating in the air, where it was as if you would be going to a financial paradise if you just signed up for one of these credit card agreements.

I am not proposing heavy-handed regulation. I am not proposing one-size-fits-all government. I am proposing that an agency with the expertise to make sure there is disclosure, that the forms and agreements are printed in simple English—that that kind of information be rewarded in the marketplace. If companies are not willing to do it, the American people could find that out as well.

That is the kind of simple, straightforward approach—with disclosure, transparency, in simple English—that makes sense for the digital age. With the Federal Reserve completing the first safety rating, all Americans could get that kind of information quickly and conveniently. That is what is in the interest of the American people with respect to this credit card debt issue at a critical time.

I hope my colleagues will support the legislation I introduce today with Senator Obama.

By Mr. FEINGOLD (for himself, Ms. COLLINS, Mr. OBAMA, Mr. DURBIN, Mrs. CLINTON, Mr. BIDEN, Mr. DODD, and Mr. KERRY):

S. 2412. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to reform the system of public financing for Presidential elections, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, today I will reintroduce a bill to repair and strengthen the presidential public financing system. Bipartisan support is a key element of successful campaign finance reform efforts, and I am therefore delighted that so many of my colleagues from Maine, Senator COLLINS, has agreed to be the principal cosponsor of the bill.

The Presidential Funding Act of 2007 will ensure that this system will continue to fulfill its promise in the 21st century. The bill will take effect in January 2009, so it will first apply in the 2012 presidential election.

The presidential public financing system was put into place in the wake of the Watergate scandal as part of the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1974. It was held to be constitutional by the Supreme Court in Buckley v. Valeo. The system, of course, is voluntary, as the Supreme Court in Buckley made clear. Every major party nominee for President since 1976 has participated in the system for the general election and, prior to 2000, every major party nominee had participated in the system for the primary election as well.

In the 2004 election, President Bush and two Democratic candidates, Howard Dean and the eventual nominee JOHN KERRY, opted out of the system for the presidential primaries. President Bush and Senator Kerry are expected to take the taxpayer-funded grant in the general election. President Bush also opted out of the system for the Republican primaries in 2000 but accepted the general election grant. Several of the leading candidates for President in the 2008 election are not participating in the primary system, and it remains to be seen whether either major party candidate will accept public funds in the general election. This is fortunate that the matching funds system for the primaries has become less practicable. The system protects the integrity of the electoral process by allowing candidates to run viable campaigns without becoming overly dependent on private donors. The system has worked well in the past, and it is worth repairing so that it can work in the future. If we don’t repair it, the pressures on candidates to opt out will take over until the system collapses from disuse.

This bill makes changes to both the primary and general election public financing system to address the weaknesses and problems that have been identified by parties and experts on the system, experts on the presidential election financing process, and an electorate that is increasingly dismayed by the influence of money in politics. First and most important, it eliminates the $250 million spending limits in the current law and substantially increases the overall primary spending limit from the current limit of approximately $45 million to $150 million, of which up to $100 million can be spent before April 1 of the election year. This should make the system much more viable for serious candidates facing opponents who are capable of raising significant sums outside the system. The bill also makes available substantially more public money for participating candidates by increasing the match of small contributions from 1:1 to 1:1.5.

One very important provision of this bill ties the primary and general election systems together and requires candidates to make a single decision on whether to participate. Candidates who opt out of the primary system and decide to rely solely on private money cannot return to the system for the general election. Candidates must commit to participate in the system in the general election if they want to receive Federal matching funds in the primaries. The bill also increases the spending limits for participating candidates in the primaries who face a nonparticipating opponent if that opponent raises more than 20 percent more than the spending limit. This provides some protection against being far outspent by a nonparticipating opponent. Additional grants of public money are also available to participating candidates who face a nonparticipating candidate spending substantially more than the spending limit.

The bill also sets the general election spending limit at $100 million, indexed for inflation. If a primary candidate does not participate in the system and spends more than 20 percent more than the combined primary and general election spending limits, a participating opposing candidate will receive twice the general election spending limit.

This bill also addresses what some have called the "gap" between the primary and general election seasons. Presidential candidates have emerged earlier in the election year over the life of the public financing system. This has led to some nominees being essentially out of money between the time that they nail down the nomination and the convention when they are formally nominated and become eligible for the general election grant. For a few cycles, soft money raised by the parties filled in that gap, but the Bipartisan Campaign Reform Act of 2002 finally has closed that loophole. This bill allows candidates who are still in the primary race as of April 1 to spend an additional $50 million until funds for the general election are made available. In addition, the bill allows the political parties to spend up to $25 million between April 1 and the date that a candidate is nominated and an additional $25 million after the nomination. The total amount of $50 million is over three times the amount allowed under current law. This should allow the "gap" to be more than adequately filled.

Obviously, these changes make this a more generous system. So the bill also makes the requirement for qualifying more difficult. To be eligible for matching funds, a candidate must raise $25,000 in matchable contributions—up to $200,000 in the case of the 2008 primary—plus an amount equal to twice the general election spending limit. This provides some protection against being far outspent by a nonparticipating opponent, that's approximately 6 months earlier than is currently the case. For another, it sets a single date for release of the public grants for the general election—the Friday before Labor Day. This addresses an inequity in the current system, under which the general election grants are released after each nominating convention, which can be several weeks before the general election.

The bill also provides that Federal elected officials and candidates from soliciting soft money for use in funding the party conventions and requiring presidential candidates to disclose bundled contributions. The bundling provision builds on a provision contained in ethics and lobbying reform bill enacted earlier this year. It requires presidential candidates to disclose all bundlers of $5,000 or more.

The purpose of this bill is to improve the campaign finance system, not to advance one party's interests. In fact, this is an excellent time to make changes in the Presidential public funding system. The 2008 presidential campaign, which is already underway, will undoubtedly be the most expensive in history. A number of candidates from both parties have opted out of the primary matching funds system, and some experts predict that one or both of the major party candidates may even refuse public grants for the general election period. It is too late to make the changes needed to repair the system for the 2008 election. But if we act now, we can make sure that an updated and revised system is in place for the 2012 election. If we act now, I am certain that the 2008 campaign cycle will confirm our foresight. If we do nothing, 2008 will continue and accelerate the slide of the current system into irrelevancy.

Fixing the presidential public financing system will cost money, but our best calculations at the present time indicate that the changes to the system in this bill can be paid for by raising the income tax check-off on an individual return from $3 to just $10. The total cost of the changes to the system, based on data from the 2004 elections, is projected to be around $365 million over the 4-year election cycle. To offset that increase, I have been working closely with the Senate Finance Committee to work out a compromise in which the Senate Ways and Means Committee to which both the Senate and House Ways and Means Committees have been working closely. I think we can work out a compromise that will allow the public financing system to work and to provide the American people with a clear choice.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill and a section-by-section analysis be printed in the Record.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

SECTION-BY-SECTION ANALYSIS

SECTION 1: SHORT TITLE

SECTION 2: REVISIONS TO SYSTEM OF PRE-DETERMINED MATCHING PAYMENTS

(a) Matching Funds: Current law provides for a 1-to-1 match, where up to $250 of each individual’s contributions for the primaries is matched with $250 in public funds. Under the new matching system, individual contributions of up to $200 from each individual will be matched at a 4-to-1 ratio, so $200 in individual contribution can be matched with $800 from public funds.

(b) Eligibility for matching funds: Current law requires candidates to raise $5,000 in matching public funds in public funds. Under the new matching system, individual contributions of up to $200 from each individual will be matched at a 4-to-1 ratio, so $200 in individual contribution can be matched with $800 from public funds.

Candidates who remain in the primary race can also receive an additional 1-to-1 match of up to $500 contributions received after March 31 of a presidential election year. This additional match applies both to an initial contribution made after March 31 and to contributions from individuals who already gave $200 or more prior to April 1.

The bill defines “contribution” as “a gift of money made by a written instrument which is signed by the person making the contribution by full name and mailing address.”

(b) Eligibility for matching funds: Current law requires candidates to raise $5,000 in matching public funds. Under the new matching system, individual contributions of up to $200 will be matched at a 4-to-1 ratio, so $200 in individual contribution can be matched with $800 from public funds.

In addition, to receive matching funds in the primary, candidates must pledge to apply for public money in the general election immediately and to not exceed the general election spending limits.

(c) Timing of payments: Current law makes matching funds available on January 1 of a presidential election year. The bill makes such funds available six months prior to the first state caucus or primary.

SECTION 3: REQUIRING PARTICIPATION IN PRIMARY AS CONDITION OF ELIGIBILITY FOR GENERAL ELECTION PAYMENTS

Currently, candidates can participate in either the primary or the general election public financing system for both. Under the bill, a candidate must participate in the primary matching system in order to be eligible to receive public funds in the general election.

SECTION 7: REGULATIONS OF SPECIAL EXPENDITURE LIMITS

(a) Spending limits for candidates: In 2004, under current law, candidates participating in the public funding system had to abide by a primary election spending limit of about $45 million and a general election spending limit of about $75 million (all of which was public money). The bill sets a total primary spent limits of up to $100 million for candidates who spend more than 120 percent of the limit in 2008 or $150 million, of which only $100 million can be spent before April 1. State by state spending limits are eliminated. The new limit will be $200 million for the two major parties, and the party candidates will receive in public funds, will be $100 million.

(b) Spending limits for parties: Current law requires candidates who spend more than 120 percent of the spending limit to be the presidential candidate be paired with a nonpartisan candidate to receive matching funds for national party committees based on population. In 2004 that limit was about $15 million. The bill provides two limits of $25 million for a party that is paired with a nonpartisan candidate.

(c) Inflation adjustment: Party and candidate spending limits will be indexed for inflation, with 2008 as the base year.

(d) Fundraising expenses: Under the bill, all the costs of fundraising by candidates are subject to the limits.

SECTION 3: REQUIRING PARTICIPATION IN PRI-MARY AS CONDITION OF ELIGIBILITY FOR GENERAL ELECTION PAYMENTS

Currently, candidates can participate in either the primary or the general election public financing system for both. Under the bill, a candidate must participate in the primary matching system in order to be eligible to receive public funds in the general election.

SECTION 4: ADDITIONAL PAYMENTS AND INCREASED EXPENDITURE LIMITS FOR CANDIDATES PARTICIPATING IN PUBLIC FINANCING WHO FACE CERTAIN NONPARTICIPATING OPPONENTS

(a) Primary candidates: When a participating candidate is opposed in a primary by a nonparticipating candidate who spends more than 120 percent of the primary spending limit (limit paid $100 million prior to April 1 and $150 million after April 1), the participating candidate will receive a 5-to-1 match, instead of the 4-to-1 match for contributions of less than $200 per donor. That additional match applies to all contributions received by the participating candidate both before and after the nomination. The entire cost of a coordinated spending limit is eliminated entirely. In addition, the participating candidate’s primary spending limit is raised by $50 million when a nonparticipating candidate spends more than 120 percent of the primary spending limit. Therefore, the nonparticipating candidate’s spending limit is raised by $50 million when a nonparticipating candidate spends more than 120 percent of the increased limit.

(b) General election candidates: When a participating candidate is opposed in a general election by a nonparticipating candidate who spends more than 120 percent of the combined primary and general election spending limits, the participating candidate will receive an additional grant of public money equal to the amount otherwise provided for that election—$100 million in 2008. Minor party candidates are also eligible for an additional grant equal to the amount they otherwise receive (which is at least the 5-to-1 matching of $25 million for a host committee, civic committee, or municipality).

SECTION 5: DISCLOSURE OF BUNDLED CONTRIBUTIONS

This section builds on the bundling disclosure provision of the Treasury to Bidding and Open Government Act of 2007 (“HLOGA”) to require presidential campaigns to disclose... the name, address, and employer of all indigruals or groups that bundle contributions totaling more than $50,000 in the four year election cycle. Individuals who are registered lobbyists would have to be separately identified. HLOGA’s definition of bundling would apply to bundling disclosure by the presidential candidates, and no change is made to the requirements of HLOGA with respect to congressional campaigns.

SECTION 12: OFFSET

This section adopts the offset for the increased cost of the presidential public funding system. The total increased cost is estimated to be $365 million over four years. The bill (1) establishes a system of public fund-agement to implement new user fees for processing oil and gas permits; (2) increases the yearly maintenance fee and one-time location fees; (3) allows entering of more than 10 clalm claims on federal land to $150 and $50 per claim, respectively, and imposes a 4% royalty on the gross income from mining on ex-sting claims; and (3) uses state formulas to set federal grazing fees.

SECTION 13: EFFECTIVE DATE

Provides that the amendments will apply to presidential elections occurring after Jan-

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President. I rise to join my friend from Wisconsin, Senator FEINGOLD, in introducing the Presi-idential Funding Act of 2007.

It was 100 years ago that the reformer President Theodore Roosevelt proposed “a very rational measure” in his State of the Union message to Congress. He envisioned a system of camaign financing that would include a congres-sional appropriation to support national campaigns so that, as he said, “The fools who would spend large camaign funds would vanish.”

When the campaign financing reforms of the 1970s were enacted, it was hoped that we would draw closer to achieving Theodore Roosevelt’s goal of funding the pursuit of our highest public office largely from public rather than private funds.

Our Presidential-campaign finance system still suffers from serious defects, however, and current events are dramatically highlighting the need for continued reform and improvement.

The current Presidential campaign is already shaping up as the most expensive in history by far. Candidate after candidate has chosen to forego public funds due to fundamental flaws in the system. Fund-raising tai-lies have already shattered records. If a candidate decides to seek public funding, he or she risks running out of funds to counter candidates who can attract large amounts of private contributions.

Current estimates are that the 2008 contest for the Presidency of the U.S. will cost more than $1 billion. Much of that cost will be incurred in delivering messages to the electorate through advertising and publications of all sorts.

One billion dollars is a huge sum. Yet we cannot expect modern campaigns to be run on budgets that might have sufficed for William McKinley, whose suc-scessful 1896 campaign relied heavily on speeches from his front porch in Canton, Ohio, to admirers who came by train to hear him. This idyllic but limited approach to campaigning is long gone.

Unless we wish to return to the crononym, influence peddling, and restricted suffrage of the 19th century, large expenditures on broadcasting and other media are essential for any campaign that hopes to prevail. That financial fact obliges candidates to spend a great deal of time appearing at exclusive, big-ticket fundraisers.

To allow candidates to spend less time raising money, Congress established a system of public funding for Presidential candidates that started with the 1976 Presidential election.

That system has not been substantially changed since 1984, and its limitations have only become more evident with time.

The central problem is that the system does not provide enough public funds to permit a credible contest against well-bankrolled candidates who have opted out of the public-financing system.

In November 2003, Governor Dean announced that he would opt out of pubclic financing, saying “floods of special-interest money have forced us to abandon a broken system.” Senator KERRY also felt obliged to opt out so that he could lend his campaign $6 million rather than be restricted to the use of $50,000 in personal funds.

Citing Senator Dole’s campaign in 1996, Senator McCAIN’s campaign in 2000, and Senator EDWARDS’s campaign in 2004, the Committee has noted that voters have spoken of the public system’s “devil’s bargain” for candidates: “To get matching funds, they have to accept a spending limit that will leave them bankrupt if the contest continues into March. . . . With the underdogs boxed in by the limits, the frontrunners, and others who can afford it, have additional incentive to opt out.”

The bill we introduce today would make a number of important changes.

I recognize that some of our colleagues and some members of the public are wary of taxpayer-supported funding for Presidential candidates. I can only respond that the alternative—a complete reliance on private contributions—is worse.

I would also reassure doubters that this bill is no giveaway or an induc-ment to fringe candidates of narrow appeal. Its provisions are predicated upon matches for individual contributions, not absolute grants, and it requires achieving significant levels of individual contributions in at least 20 States.

We all understand that the current system of public funding for campaigns has defects. The growing inclination of candidates to opt out of the system underscores that fact. The Presidential Funding Act of 2007 would cure some serious problems and help restore the appeal of public funding.

If enacted, this bill would take effect in January 2009. By moving toward virtually full realization of Theodore Roosevelt’s “very radical measure,” we can take a big step toward making the fincancing, the conduct, and the outcome of the 2012 presidential campaign a genuine source of pride for American citi-zans of all political affiliations.

By Mr. ENZI (for himself and
benefits. That is the reason that we have introduced the Aerial Firefighter Relief Act of 2007. This important legislation will remedy this problem and makes aerial firefighters eligible for death benefits.

The Department of Justice’s Bureau of Justice Assistance, BJA, the agency that administers the PSOB, has ruled that aerial pilots are ineligible because they are contractors and not employed directly by the federal and state agencies involved in wildland fire management and suppression. The 1980 official finding that prohibits the pilots and their families from receiving benefits states that pilots are not “a ‘public safety officer’ as this term is defined in the PSOB Act” because they are serving a public agency in an official capacity . . . as a fireman.”

Unfortunately, pilots also often do not receive benefits from their employers. Federal agencies outsource aerial tanker missions to the lowest-cost private operators who do not provide benefits to keep their costs down. Some companies do offer a minimal amount of life insurance. However, it is expensive, and not pilots and the contractor. In the “low cost” competitive bid situation they are in, the contractors cannot afford to add more expenses to the payroll or they reduce their chances of winning a fire suppression contract—and go out of business. Other forms of life insurance are also difficult to obtain because of the dangerous nature of aerial firefighting.

It is common sense legislation that deserves the support of my colleagues, and I am pleased to have Senator Feinstein as an original cosponsor. In the coming months, I look forward to working with the appropriate committees to move this legislation forward so that our brave aerial firefighters can take comfort knowing that their families will be taken care of if they pass away taking care of our country.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, today I am pleased to cosponsor Senator Enzi’s Aerial Firefighter Relief Act of 2007.

On August 27, 2001, a California pilot named Larry Groff took off from Ukiah in a State Air Tanker 87, doing what he loved, flying and fighting fires. Like thousands of other contract firefighters hired by the Government, he figured that if anything ever happened to him, his family would be taken care of. But that day, while maneuvering above a fire started by a couple of Hellas Angels who had blown up their methamphetamine lab, Larry Groff died in a midair collision.

Faced with the prospect of raising their 6 children alone, his widow, Christine Wells-Groff, filed a claim for survivor benefits under the Public Safety Officers’ Benefit Program. This PSOB Program provides a lump-sum payoff to survivors of any “public safety officer,” a term which can include not only actual government employees but also any volunteer or any person acting in a “similar relationship of performing services as part of a public agency.” At the time of his death, Larry Groff had been flying a State-operated air tanker. He was wearing a California Department of Forestry uniform. And after his death, the California agency for which he had worked issued an opinion stating that he was an officially recognized member of that agency. But he was also a contract employee.

Because of that, Ms. Wells-Groff’s PSOB claim was initially denied by the Bureau of Justice Affairs, based on its opinion that contract employees cannot qualify for PSOB benefits. Ms. Wells-Groff then appealed, and she later convinced a trial court that despite being a contract employee, her husband had held a “similar relationship of performing services as part of a public agency,” thereby qualifying him as a “public safety officer” entitled to PSOB benefits.

Unfortunately, on July 3, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit reversed the lower court. The appellate court agreed that Mr. Groff’s facts might fall within the applicable regulation’s key definition of a “similar relationship” but it said that the question of whether he had met this standard was not entirely clear and that it would defer to the Government’s narrow interpretation of that language, absent further clarification from Congress.

Following this decision, Ms. Wells-Groff petitioned the Supreme Court to take her case. However, it is unclear if the Court will hear the case, let alone decide in her favor. So today, I want to go on record to support the policy that these contract employees should be entitled to the same PSOB benefits as other injured firefighters and volunteers.

The bill that Senator Enzi is introducing and that I am pleased to cosponsor will make it clear that survivors of aerial firefighters like Larry Groff who make the ultimate sacrifice should qualify for PSOB benefits. In addition, this legislation will clarify that the district court was right in the Wells-Groff case. Brave firefighters like Larry Groff, who regularly put their lives on the line in officially sanctioned aerial firefighting activities to protect us, do this country a great service.

This bill will clarify that when actually up in the air carrying out official firefighting functions, contract employees will be deemed to hold a “similar relationship of performing services as part of a public agency”—and meet the regulatory standard already in place—so that they are covered by the PSOB laws, and their survivors can receive the benefits they need and deserve.

I urge my colleagues to support this legislation.

By Mr. REID (for Mrs. CLINTON): S. 2415. A bill to require the President and the Office of the Global AIDS Coordinator to establish a comprehensive and integrated HIV prevention strategy to address the vulnerabilities of women and girls in countries for which the United States provides assistance to combat HIV/AIDS, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mrs. CLINTON. Mr. President, today I am pleased to introduce the Protection Against Transmission of HIV for Women and Youth, PATHWAY, Act of 2007, legislation that is a companion to the bill introduced by Representative Barbara Lee. Women and girls account for about half of the 33 million infections worldwide. But in the places that are hardest hit by epidemic, AIDS has a disproportionate impact upon women. In sub-Saharan Africa, women account for more than 60 percent of those living with HIV/AIDS. Young women account for 3 out of every 4 new HIV infections among sub-Saharan youth. Our prevention messages are not reaching youth—in studies completed in 17 countries in 2003, more than 75 percent of young men and 95 percent of young women surveyed could not identify ways to protect themselves against HIV infection.

Clearly, we need to do more to stem the rising tide of HIV infection in women, particularly in sub-Saharan Africa. But what doing more requires is an examination of the factors that contribute to women’s vulnerability to HIV infection. There are links between gender-based violence and increased risk for HIV infection, lack of education and economic opportunity, and increased risk for HIV infection, links between human trafficking and sexual exploitation and increased risk for HIV infection.

Unfortunately, our current policies do not allow us to take these factors into account. The law governing funding of the President’s Emergency Plan for AIDS Relief, PEPFAR, requires half of all prevention funding to be spent on abstinence-until-marriage programs. In addition, a 2005 guidance from the Office of the Global AIDS Coordinator found that countries were directed to spend half of their prevention funds on sexual transmission prevention, with a full 70 percent of that funding to be spent on “abstinence and be faithful” programs, rather than comprehensive HIV prevention education efforts.

More than 40 percent of women in Africa and South Asia are married before the age of 15. Directing funding to abstinence-until-marriage programs fails to address their needs. Exhorting them to “be faithful” in relationships where they may not have control over their partners’ behavior is short-sighted. Making it the official policy of the U.S. Government to restrict funding for efforts that could help these women learn about female-controlled prevention methods is unconscionable.

In 2003, President Bush pledged to prevent 1 million new HIV infections through PEPFAR. But we cannot let that promise go unmet due to ideology. The legislation I am introducing today will lift restrictions on funding... for our prevention efforts. It will also require the President to develop and implement a coordinated, comprehensive HIV strategy to address gender disparities in HIV infection, with a focus on the stigma surrounding HIV, the health of women — gender-based violence and HIV infection, the ways in which increasing educational and economic opportunities for women can prevent HIV infection, and ways in which to improve access to female-controlled prevention methods. This strategy is also to address the disproportionate risks faced by too many women are taken into account in our global AIDS efforts.

I look forward to working with my colleagues to ensure that women’s vulnerability to HIV infection is addressed as we work to reauthorize PEPFAR.

By Mr. CASEY (for himself, Mr. GRASSLEY, and Mrs. FEINSTEIN):

S. 2418. A bill to ensure the safety of imported food products for the citizens of the United States, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry.

Mr. President, I rise today to introduce the EAT SAFE Act of 2007. I am pleased to be joined by my colleague on the Agriculture Committee, Senator GRASSLEY, to introduce this important piece of food safety legislation.

As we have all seen this past year, in the wake of massive recalls of pet food manufactured using contaminated Chinese gluten and consumer warnings about the safety of various imported food products, ensuring the safety of food products and food ingredients being brought into this country from other nations has taken on a greater urgency.

A report issued in September by the President’s Advisory Working Group on Import Safety acknowledged that “aspects of our present import system must be strengthened to promote security, safety, and trade for the benefit of American consumers.” The EAT SAFE Act that we are introducing today is designed to address one of those critical aspects of the food and agricultural import system that, in the face of the mounting food safety crisis, has received little public focus. That issue is food and other agricultural products that are being smuggled into the U.S.

When many people think of food smuggling, they likely think of it as something that occurs when travelers attempt to bring small amounts of foreign food or agricultural products into the U.S. by concealing it in their vehicles, luggage, or other personal affects. While this type of smuggling is unquestionably a problem that U.S. authorities must and do address, the larger threat of smuggled food and agricultural products comes from the companies, importers, and individuals who circumvent U.S. inspection requirements or restrictions on imports of certain products from a particular country.

The ways in which these companies, importers, and individuals circumvent the system can happen in any number of ways. Many times smuggled products are intentionally mislabeled and bear the identification of a product that can legally enter the country. Other times, smuggled products gain import entry through falsifying the products’ countries of origin. And, some smuggled products that have previously been denied entry are later “shopped around,” that is, presented to another U.S. port of entry in the effort to gain importation undetected.

Just some examples of prohibited products discovered in commerce in the United States in recent years include duck parts from Vietnam and poultry products from China, both nations with confirmed human cases of avian influenza; unpasteurized raw cheeses from Mexico containing a bacterium that causes tuberculosis; strawberries from Mexico contaminated with hepatitis A; and mislabeled puffer fish from China containing a potentially deadly toxin. The inability to detect food and agriculture products present safety risks to our food, plants, and animals, and pose a threat to our Nation’s health, economy, and security.

The EAT SAFE Act addresses these serious risks by proposing commonsense measures to protect our food and agricultural supply. This legislation authorizes funding for the U.S. Department of Agriculture and the Food and Drug Administration to bolster their efforts by hiring additional personnel to detect and track smuggled products. It also authorizes funding to provide food safety cross training for Homeland Security Agricultural Specialists and agricultural cross training for Customs and Border Patrol agents. It ensures that those men and women working on the front lines are knowledgeable about these serious food and agricultural threats.

In addition to focusing on increased personal and training, the EAT SAFE Act also seeks to increase importer accountability. The legislation requires private laboratories conducting tests on FDA-regulated products on behalf of importers to apply for and be certified by FDA. It also imposes civil penalties for laboratories or importers who knowingly or conspire to falsify imported product laboratory sampling and for importers who circumvent the USDA import reinspection system.

Finally, the EAT SAFE Act will also ensure increased public awareness of smuggled products, as well as recalled food products, by requiring the USDA and FDA to provide this information to the public in a timely and easily searchable manner.

These commonsense measures are an important first step towards safeguarding Americans’ food and agricultural supply and ensuring our Nation’s health, economy, and security. I urge all of my colleagues to support this legislation.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the text of the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

AMENDMENTS SUBMITTED AND PROPOSED

SA 3803. Mr. McCONNELL submitted an amendment intended to be proposed to amendment SA 3500 proposed by Mr. HARKIN (for himself, Mr. CHAMBLLISS, Mr. BAUCUS, and Mr. GRASSLEY) to the bill H.R. 2191, for the purpose of providing for the continuation of agricultural programs through fiscal year 2012, and for other purposes; which was ordered to lie on the table.

TEXT OF AMENDMENTS

SA 3803. Mr. McCONNELL submitted an amendment intended to be proposed to amendment SA 3500 proposed by Mr. HARKIN (for himself, Mr. CHAMBLLISS, Mr. BAUCUS, and Mr. GRASSLEY) to the bill H.R. 2191, for the purpose of providing for the continuation of agricultural programs through fiscal year 2012, and for other purposes; which was ordered to lie on the table:

At the appropriate place, insert the following:

SEC. 2. [AMENDMENT.]

SEC. 2. [AMENDMENT.]
amend the Horse Protection Act to prohibit the shipping, transporting, moving, delivering, receiving, possessing, purchasing, selling, or donation of horses and other equines to be slaughtered for human consumption, and for other purposes.

The bill would prohibit the shipping, transporting, moving, delivering, receiving, possessing, purchasing, selling, or donation of horses and other equines to be slaughtered for human consumption. In short, it would further limit the already limited options for disposal of unwanted horses.

An unwanted horse is one that has reached the useful end of its economic or recreational life. There are numerous reasons for the existence of unwanted horses, not the least of which are economic reasons such as loss of job, price of feed or stabling, relocation, poor health of the horse or its owner.

It must be recognized that no one has adequately addressed the fate of the estimated 90,000 unwanted horses that were formerly slaughtered on an annual basis. Animal welfare groups and rescue organizations can only do so much to shoulder the load of aiding the adoption or care of these horses. They are currently stretched to capacity, and we expect an increase in need. As a result, we are witnessing a significant increase in abandonment and neglect of horses in this country. Particularly in the West, growing numbers of unwanted horses are being dumped on public or private rangelands.

I believe that we should take the time to examine this growing issue of the unwanted horse before passing legislation that ties the hands of horse owners, public and private land managers, and others.

THE FARM BILL

Mr. THUNE. Madam President, for the past 5 weeks now, my colleagues and I have spent literally hours on the Senate floor talking about the 2007 farm bill. Unfortunately, talking about the farm bill for over 5 weeks is all we have done. We could have spent all the days and hours since November 5 productively debating this farm bill. Instead, the distinguished leader on the other side of the aisle made a decision the very first day of the farm bill debate when the farm bill was brought to the floor and the debate ensued to not allow any amendments to reach the floor. Not one single farm bill amendment has been discussed.

Farm bill authority spans 5 years. This legislation impacts every man, woman, and child in America. My colleagues in the minority, who are not members of the Agriculture Committee and who have not had an opportunity to help craft this legislation, deserve a chance to offer their suggested changes.

The farm bill before us totals 1,600 pages. It reauthorizes over $280 billion in spending on commodity, conservation, nutrition, trade, energy, and rural development programs. This bill is far too important to be held hostage by partisan tactics. However, the majority leader made a decision, as I said, nearly 2 weeks ago, to prohibit amendments from being offered to this landmark legislation.

I am a member of the Senate Agriculture Committee, and I am proud of the farm bill we passed out of the committee, the Harkin substitute. Yet the ranking member, Senator CHAMBLISS, great credit. I believe they deserve to be given great credit for the efforts they made in committee deliberations. The majority leader held an open and productive debate. Several amendments were offered, debated, and voted on. At the end of the day, Senate Democrats and Republicans set aside their differences and reported out a bill to meet America’s food and energy needs over the next 5 years.

Is the committee-reported bill perfect? No, of course not. But that being said, my colleagues all deserve an op-ed in the editorial sections of their local papers, an op-ed about the farm bill. There are only 21 of us who serve on the Senate Agriculture Committee, 11 Democrats, 10 Republicans. Senator DOMENICI, Senator NELSON, and I authored an amendment that would add a renewable fuels standard to the 2007 farm bill on the floor because it didn’t get added in the committee and because there were questions about whether an energy bill was ultimately going to pass the Senate. Therefore, we thought it would be good to improve and strengthen the energy title of the farm bill by adding the RFS to the farm bill. That is one of the amendments that, of course, could have been debated. In fact, there were an open debate process.

As I travel across my State and met with farmers and agricultural leaders, the message to me is very clear. No single policy is more important to our agricultural community than this farm bill and the accompanying Energy bill. If we can get a farm bill passed with a renewable fuels standard, I think our farmers would be very pleased with the work Congress has done to promote American agriculture and move the renewable fuels industry forward.

This renewable fuels standard will create jobs in rural America, give our producers an alternative market for our crops, spur billions of dollars in renewable fuels investment, and save over $600 million in taxpayer dollars in the underlying bill.

However, we have not had an opportunity to debate any of these amendments, including a renewable fuels standard amendment. I listened all day while accusations have flown back and forth. There has been all this hand wringing going on finger pointing, and the blame game being played. I have to say, as someone who voted for cloture the first time we had a cloture vote on the farm bill, I voted for cloture because I need this bill to move forward—my farmers and my ranchers want a new farm bill—but not because the process has been fair to Members on my side of the aisle.

Senators on the minority side, on the Republican side of the aisle—as I said, there are only 21 of us who serve on the Senate Agriculture Committee. That means there are 79 other Senators who would like to weigh in on this important legislation. We have had the bill on the floor literally for a 2-week period and we didn’t debate or vote upon one single amendment.

As I said before, you are talking about a 1,600-page bill that authorizes $280 billion in spending over the next 5 years, and there has not been one single amendment voted on. The majority leader decided when the bill came to the floor he was going to fill the amendment tree, which in effect said no amendment can be offered unless it is approved by the majority leader. I don’t happen to disagree with the notion that amendments that are brought to the floor of the Senate ought to be somewhat germane to the underlying legislation. But it is a reality, a practical reality every single day in this institution, that amendments are brought to the floor that are not germane to the underlying bill. I will hold up a case in point because I have heard my colleagues on the other side get up and say: The Republicans want to offer all these nongermane amendments and what are we supposed to do about that, these need to be germane to the underlying farm bill? I would like to see amendments that are germane to the underlying farm bill, but it is a reality in the Senate that瘆—In fact it is often the case—amendments are offered to all kinds of legislation that are not germane to that underlying legislation.

A case in point: We are now stalled on the Defense authorization bill, a bill that was debated and voted upon a long time ago. The House passed it, the Senate passed it, we went to conference, we resolved all the differences. I serve as a Member of the Senate Armed Services Committee, and one of the issues that were being debated in the conference were somewhat contentious, but they all got resolved. Most of them were related to the underlying bill. Most of them were related to our national security programs, our readiness and that sort of thing. What is holding up the conference on the Defense authorization bill is hate crimes legislation because hate crimes was put on the bill in the Senate before it left the House. My colleagues who didn’t feel it was relevant or germane to the underlying Defense authorization bill. But nevertheless we didn’t have the votes. It went to conference.

Now the debate over whether we are going to have a Defense authorization bill doesn’t hinge on anything having to do with national security. It hinges on hate crimes legislation. How is that germane to the Defense authorization bill? Yet my colleagues on the other side have continually gotten up today and said, if we had to do this because Republicans, of all things, want a vote on a death tax amendment to the farm bill.
In my State, most farmers and ranchers think the death tax is relevant to their everyday lives because it is probably the single biggest barrier to multigenerational transfers of cattle operations. There is not anything that is a bigger barrier to larger impediments to the types of transfers in involving farm operations and ranching operations down to the next generation than is the death tax. In most cases, these people are asset rich but cash poor, when someone dies and they wanted to pass it on, they have to liquidate all their assets in order to pay the death tax.

My point simply is this. I would like to see us move forward. We need a farm bill. We need an energy bill. As I said before, I voted for cloture on the farm bill, but I have to say this process has been very tilted in favor of a procedure that the majority leader adopted on the first day that is very much without precedent—in terms of what happens on the floor. I am sure it has been done. I am sure it has been done under Republican majorities. But the fact is, filling the amendment tree and prohibiting amendments from being offered, in a place such as the Senate which allows open amendment process, I think is undermining the very foundation, the rules and procedures on which the Senate is based.

I would like to see us be able to get to a vote on the farm bill, but we can’t do that unless we have some agreement on amendments, and we can’t get to the amendments on the floor until such time as the majority leader agrees we will be able to offer amendments. Until that happens, our side is going to continue to object to proceeding to the farm bill because, in fairness to them, as I said, this is a 1,600-page bill that spends $280 billion over 5 years and was debated by 21 of the 100 Senators. In the Agriculture Committee, I think we produced a very good bill. I would like to see it—as I said, if it went through unamended, that would be fine by me because I think we got as good a consensus in the farm committee as we could. But there are 79 other Members of the Senate on both sides of the aisle who want to strengthen and make this bill better, and right now the process has precluded that opportunity to a point where we are at a standstill on national priorities, regional interests, and frankly less and less of the overall funding in the farm bill is going to production agriculture. More of it now, 68 percent of it, is going to nutrition and food stamps and other aspects of the farm bill; 9 percent toward conservation. All of those are important. But my point simply is this: it is a bill important to all Americans, who want to strengthen and make this bill better, and of which benefit from the farm bill and all of whom benefit from the Senate work and function effectively to address the challenges and the problems we face as a country.

The process employed by the majority leader on the farm bill completely precludes us from having anything that resembles an open debate. As I pointed out earlier, if you go back to the 1985, 1990, 1996 or 2002 farm bills, there were ample opportunities for amendments. There was vigorous and spirited debate and lots of rollcall votes. This is really historic in terms of the precedent it sets and the message it sends to American agriculture, which desperately needs a farm bill.

I hope in the next day or two, and next week—which in my view is about what we have left to work with. I am frankly happy to stay here this weekend. I would stay here Saturday, Sunday, and beyond if we could get a farm bill on the floor, actually debate it, actually have amendments offered and voted on. I am happy to stay. I would be willing to bet that many of my colleagues would be happy to stay.

But the clock is a-running, time is wasting. All the American people see is finger pointing and hand wringing and bickering and gridlock. That is not in their best interests. Certainly, it is not fair to them, the people by whom we were elected. They sent us to do a job. We need to get about that job. That means allowing the Senate to function, to work, to allow Senators to offer amendments to these bills and to get to final action and completion and to get some legislation passed that will hopefully improve the lives of many Americans.

I yield the floor.

A TRIBUTE TO CHRISTOPHER MICHALSKI

HON. EDOLPHUS TOWNS
OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, December 5, 2007

Mr. TOWNS. Madam Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to Mr. Christopher Michalski of New York City, New York. Mr. Michalski is an asset to our fair city and a testament to the American dream.

Mr. Michalski was born on July 12, 1949 in a small city in Poland where he grew up with huge dreams of coming to America. While in school he studied architecture extensively and eventually received a master's degree in structural engineering. He instantly put his knowledge to good use by following in his family's footsteps to become a third generation church builder.

While Mr. Michalski was in his midtwenties, he was afforded an opportunity to migrate to America of which he eagerly took advantage. With perseverance and hard work, Chris was able to build a new life for himself and his family in New York City. He married his longtime love Dorothy and had two beautiful children, Monica and Eric.

Today, Chris Michalski can be found running his company, Solution New York Contracting Inc., while interacting with people from all over the world. He is a dog lover, a church builder, and a one-of-a-kind individual.

Madam Speaker, I urge my colleagues to join me in paying tribute to the intrepid individual who is fine example of the entrepreneurial spirit upon which America was built.

HONORING THE LIFE OF CAPTAIN TIMOTHY McGOVERN, U.S. ARMY, OF IDAVILLE, INDIANA

HON. JOE DONELLY OF INDIANA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, December 5, 2007

Mr. DONELLY. Madam Speaker, I rise today to honor U.S. Army Captain Timothy McGovern of Idaville, Indiana, who died on October 31, 2007 while serving in Mosul, Iraq.

Since the war in Iraq started, and when he came home, (he) didn’t hesitate to do another,” his uncle Mike recalls. Although Tim was in the process of buying a house in El Paso, Texas, his heart remained with his family in Idaville and with the Chicago Bears. During his second tour of duty in Iraq, Tim set off to serve the first of his two tours of duty in Iraq. “He was on his very first tour when the war in Iraq started, and when he came home,” his grandmother. That’s going to stay in our minds for a really long time.”

But if his heart was with his family, his passion and purpose was with the Army. As captain of a ninety-member company, Tim showed exemplary dedication to his duties as an officer and to the safety and well-being of his men. His mother noted, “He said the thing he was the most proud of was that he had not sent anybody home injured and that nobody had been killed from his group. To him, that meant he was doing his job.” Safety did not mean staying away from where the action was, however. He assumed command of Company E from Captain Tim Hudson, who said “We both chose to go to El Paso and Fort Bliss, and we both came here for the same reason. And that was to come out here and command soldiers in combat.”

Honor of an officer and to the safety and well-being of his men.

Mr.BURGESS. Madam Speaker, I rise today to congratulate Erica French, a teacher at Lowery Road Elementary School in Fort Worth, Texas. Ms. French was chosen as one of fourteen recipients of the 2007-2008 Chairs for Teaching Excellence award.

Tribute to Mack Harmon

HON. SAM GRAVES OF MISSOURI
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, December 5, 2007

Mr. GRAVES. Madam Speaker, I proudly pause to recognize Mack Harmon, a very special young man who has exemplified the finest qualities of citizenship and leadership by taking an active part in the Boy Scouts of America, Troop 412, and in earning the most prestigious award of Eagle Scout.

Mack has been very active with his troop, participating in many Scout activities. Over the many years Mack has been involved with Scouting, he has not only earned numerous merit badges, but also the respect of his family, peers, and community.

Madam Speaker, I proudly ask you to join me in commending Mack Harmon for his accomplishments with the Boy Scouts of America and for his efforts put forth in achieving the highest distinction of Eagle Scout.
legislation making the property tax deduction an “above-the-line” deduction. This simple change makes the property tax deduction available to homeowners who do not file an itemized tax return.

The Property Tax Deduction for All Act will help millions of Americans who struggle with high property taxes, but because they do not itemize, are unable to take advantage of the Federal deduction for property taxes. Extending the property tax deduction to all home-owners will especially benefit senior citizens, whose homes often are the major part of their wealth, and young families struggling to cope with the costs of owning a new home. I respectfully urge my colleagues to help ensure all homeowners can take advantage of the tax deduction for property taxes by cosponsoring this legislation.

IN RECOGNITION OF OPERATION COMMUNITY SHIELD

HON. PETE SESSIONS
OF TEXAS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, December 5, 2007

Mr. SESSIONS. Madam Speaker, I rise today to proudly recognize the Dallas Field Office of Immigration and Customs Enforcement, and the Detention and Removal Operations agents who participated in Operation Community Shield—an annual, national law enforcement initiative that brings together federal, state, and local law enforcement to fight gang violence, drug smuggling and organized crime linked to illegal immigration.

I applaud the remarkable accomplishments they produced in just seven days of Operation Community Shield: 120 gang members arrested, including members from 28 alien state, and local law enforcement to fight gang gangs, 63 criminal arrests, and 8 firearms and over 4,000 grams of marijuana and cocaine seized.

Thanks to Operation Community Shield, numerous murderers, rapists, and drug dealers have been taken off our streets. With the collaborative work of federal, state, and local law enforcement, Operation Community Shield enables officers to more effectively communicate between agencies, developing a “force multiplier” effect in fighting against violent gangs and criminal illegal immigrants. Consequently, I believe that this important initiative represents a critical step in addressing the illegal immigration problem facing our community and nation.

Madam Speaker, I would further like to give recognition to the leadership of John Chakwir, ICE Special Agent-in-Charge, and Mrs. Nuria T. Prendes, Director for Detention and Removal Operations. Both have remarkable staffs that support the mission in light of the challenging times in our nation, and their steadfast commitment is one we can all be proud of in Dallas, Texas.

HON. SHELLEY BERKLEY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, December 5, 2007

Ms. BERKLEY. Madam Speaker, I rise today to recognize Jackie and Mollie Singer, remarkable twin sisters from my district in Las Vegas, Nevada. At the age of four, Mollie was diagnosed with diabetes. Since that time, both sisters, now eighteen, have worked tirelessly to raise money and promote awareness of the disease which afflicts more than 20 million Americans.

The Singer sisters first came to my attention nearly ten years ago on their first visit to my office for the important advocacy work they began at such a young age. As part of their spirited efforts, Mollie and Jackie organize annual walks and numerous other events to benefit the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation. Altogether their efforts have raised more than $500,000 for the cause. The sisters have also formed the Diabetic Angels, an international support group for those suffering from juvenile diabetes.

The Singer sisters have put a memorable face to this alarming medical crisis through speaking engagements, meetings with policy makers, and numerous print and television interviews. They have compiled many of their experiences into a booklet entitled “The Road to a Cure,” which gives pointers to parents and kids on fundraising, health fairs, and public speaking. Members of my staff and I have had the pleasure of meeting with Mollie and Jackie and their family on many occasions through the years.

CONGRATULATING KAZAKHSTAN ON ITS ELECTION AS CHAIR OF OSCE

HON. EDOLPHUS TOWNS
OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, December 5, 2007

Mr. TOWNS. Madam Speaker, I welcome the unanimous decision of the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe (OSCE) to elect Kazakhstan its Chair-in-Office for 2010, reached on November 30, 2007 in Madrid.

This is undoubtedly a monumental event not only in the history of modern Kazakhstan, but also of the OSCE of which the United States is a member. For the first time, a country which in recent past was part of the Soviet Empire will lead this international institution. This vividly shows that Kazakhstan has managed to make a breakthrough from its communist past to a democratic future in a short time. This is also testimony to the evolutionary development of the OSCE itself. The Madrid decision, helps the OSCE strengthen its unity and become an organization of equal partners who sincerely believe in and are committed to ideals of democracy and freedom.

This is a stellar moment for the people of Kazakhstan, and a recognition of the long-standing efforts of their leader, President Nursultan Nazarbayev, on building a truly democratic and free society. President Nazarbayev has managed to achieve things leaders of many other countries can only dream of. To pull the country from the chaos of Soviet era and lead it towards the ranks of economically strong and democratically developed nations of the world in a little more than a decade takes incredible efforts, strategic vision and endless care for one’s people.

Today, Kazakhstan is a recognized leader in Central Asia, and I believe that, as Chair-in-Office, Kazakhstan will not only strengthen its leadership in that key region but will also help strengthen the OSCE’s authority internationally, as well as improve mutual understanding and cooperation between East and West.

Madam Speaker, next week the people of Kazakhstan will celebrate the 16th anniversary of their independence and mark the establishment of Kazakhstan-U.S. diplomatic relations. We are proud that in these 16 years our relations have developed into a true strategic partnership. Kazakhstan has always been true to its commitments and has never wavered in its support for our nation.

I join my colleagues in congratulating our strategic ally and friend with its Chairmanship of OSCE in 2010 and with the 16th anniversary of independence. I strongly believe the opportunities Kazakhstan and our strategic partnership have to offer have not been fully explored yet by the wise people of Kazakhstan and their leader Nursultan Nazarbayev happiness, well-being, and further prosperity.

HONORING MRS. HELENA SNYDER
ON THE CELEBRATION OF HER 100TH BIRTHDAY

HON. DANIEL LIPINSKI
OF ILLINOIS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, December 5, 2007

Mr. LIPINSKI. Madam Speaker I rise today to honor Mrs. Helena Snyder, an outstanding American, on her 100th birthday. A resident of Riverside, Illinois, for over fifty years, Helena celebrated 100 years on November 7th of this year.

Born in Pekin, Illinois, to Sicilian parents, Helena grew up dreaming of a career in Chicago. After graduating high school, Helena left Pekin to pursue her dream and was hired by the offices of the U.S. District Attorney in Chicago. She remained employed there until 1939, when she married her husband Bernard Snyder.

Shortly after their first child was born, World War II began and Bernard enlisted in the Navy. Helena and their son Brad moved to California with him until he was sent overseas. Upon Bernard’s return, Helena became a full-time homemaker and spent much of her valuable time volunteering for a number of different groups in her community. Notably, Helena has held many offices as a member of the Riverside Women’s Club and served as president of the organization for two years.

Madam Speaker, it is my honor to recognize Mrs. Helena Snyder, an exceptional woman and pillar in the community, on the celebration of her 100th birthday. I am honored to have such an outstanding individual in my district and wish Helena and her family a joyous celebration.

TRIBUTE TO ELIZABETH SIMONE
HON. RON PAUL OF TEXAS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, December 5, 2007

Mr. PAUL. Madam Speaker, I regret that I was unavoidably out of town on October 23, 2007, when a vote was taken on H.R. 1955, the Violent Radicalization and Homegrown Terrorism Prevention Act. Had I been able to vote, I would have voted against this misguided and dangerous piece of legislation.

There were many causes for concern in H.R. 1955. The legislation specifically singles out the Internet for radicalization, ideologically based violence, and the homegrown terrorism process guided and dangerous piece of legislation. Had I been able to vote, I would have voted against this misguided and dangerous piece of legislation.

I would like to note that this legislation was brought to the floor for a vote under suspension of regular order. These so-called “suspension” bills are meant to be non-controversial, thereby negating the need for the more complete and open debate allowed under regular order. It is difficult for me to believe that none of my colleagues in Congress view H.R. 1955, with its troubling civil liberties implications, as “non-controversial.”

There are many causes for concern in H.R. 1955. The legislation specifically singles out the Internet for “facilitating violent radicalization, ideological recruitment, and the homegrown terrorism process” in the United States. Such language may well be the first step toward U.S. government regulation of what we are allowed to access on the Internet. Are we, for our own good, to be subjected to the kind of governmental control of the Internet that we see in unfree societies? This bill certainly sets us on that course. This seems to be an unwise and dangerous solution in all seriousness of a real problem. Previous acts of ideologically-motivated violence, though rare, have been resolved successfully using law enforcement techniques, existing laws against violence and our court system. Even if there were a surge of "violent radicalization"—a claim for which there is no evidence—there is no reason to believe that our criminal justice system is so flawed and weak as to be incapable of trying and punishing those who perpetrate violent acts. This legislation will set up a new government bureaucracy to monitor and further study the as-yet undemonstrated pressing problem of homegrown terrorism and radicalization. It will no doubt prove to be another bureaucracy that artificially inflates problems so as to guarantee its future existence and funding. But it may do so at great further expense to our civil liberties. What disturbs me most about this legislation is that it leaves the door wide open for the broadest definition of what constitutes "radicalization." Could otherwise non-violent anti-tax, anti-war, or anti-abortion groups fall under the watchful eye of this new government commission? Assurances otherwise in this legislation are unconvincing. In addition, this legislation will create a Department of Homeland Security-established university-based body to further study radicalization and to "contribute to the establishment of training, written materials, information, analytical assistance and professional resources to aid in combating violent radicalization and homegrown terrorism." I wonder whether this is really a legitimate role for institutes of higher learning in a free society. Legislation such as this demands heavy-handed governmental action against American citizens where no crime has been committed. It is yet another attack on our Constitutionally-protected civil liberties. It is my sincere hope that we will reject such approaches to security, which will fail at the stated goal at a great cost to our way of life.

Mr. ORTIZ. Madam Speaker, I rise today to commemorate one of the great bands to come out of South Texas, Los Chamacos. Led by renowned maestro of the accordion, Jaime de la Anda, the band’s success can be directly attributed to 15 years of combined talent and continues to live up to the stage name with youthful energy that appeals to audiences of all ages.

The distinct music of the Texas border—whether known as norteno, tejano, or conjunto—has grown together in the modern Mexican-American community. The genres emerged during the late 19th century in northern Mexico, when local bands blended traditional Mexican folk music with the accordion sounds and polka music brought by German immigrants. What emerged were the lively sounds that continue to be heard at family gatherings, beer hall, or fiesta.

Los Chamacos combine all these genres with a pop sensibility and a dynamic stage presence. Though proud of their Texas roots, Los Chamacos now boasts of their international appeal, having performed in venues all across the United States and Mexico. They have made numerous appearances on popular television shows and even had the honor of performing for President Bill Clinton and First Lady Hillary Rodham Clinton in Corpus Christi, Texas.

Their accolades and awards also speak for themselves: numerous hits on the Billboard Records’ Hot Latin Charts, 5 Grammy nominations, the Texas Talent Management Association Show Band of the Year, and the Tejano Music Awards Traditional Album of the Year.

Despite their success, the band has remained humble and appreciative of their loyal fans, having appeared in several public service announcements and numerous community events. More importantly, Los Chamacos and their music represent all the aspects that make the culture of South Texas so unique.

Mr. BURGESS. Madam Speaker, I rise today to recognize the superior community service and dedication of the 5th grade students from Pecan Creek Elementary School in Denton, Texas. These students volunteered many hours to illustrate a children's book, More Than Just a Mvule Tree, which raised money to plant trees in Uganda.

The students' teacher, Ms. Natalie Mead, helped with the project, which sold 600 copies of the 24-page first edition book. The sales of those books, along with sponsorships, filled the village of Wonkonge in Uganda with 170 Mvule trees.

Madam Speaker, it is with great honor that I stand here today to recognize these students and their teacher. The students of Pecan Creek Elementary School's 5th Grade class have shown commitment to their local and international community. I am honored to represent them in the 26th District of Texas.

Mr. SPACE. Madam Speaker:

Whereas, Casey Cliff competed in England's largest youth soccer tournament; and

IN RECOGNITION OF COMMANDER PAMELA MELROY

Mr. WALSH of New York. Madam Speaker, I rise today on behalf of myself and Mr. Kuhl of New York to recognize Pamela Melroy, Commander of the Space Shuttle Discovery Mission STS-120.

Ms. Melroy has become just the second female shuttle commander in NASA's history. Despite NASA being comprised of approximately 19 percent women, there are currently no other female pilot-astronauts within the agency, which makes it probable that Commander Melroy may also be the last woman to command a space shuttle before the program ends in 2010.

As a member of a military family, Melroy spent her childhood living in many towns, but considers Rochester, NY, her hometown. She graduated from Bishop Kearney High School in Rochester and earned her bachelor's degree in physics and astronomy from Wellesley College. Melroy continued her education and received her masters of science degree from Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

Commander Melroy served in the United States Air Force from 1983 until 2007. During her career in the Air Force, she flew combat missions in Iraq, and eventually graduated from the Air Force's exclusive test-pilot school. Over the span of her 24-year career, she logged 5,000 hours of flight time in 45 different aircrafts.

Pamela Melroy became the second female space shuttle commander on October 23, 2007 when mission STS-120 launched. This delivered the Harmony module to the International Space Station in order to prepare the station for future missions. Melroy follows in the footsteps of fellow Upstate New York native Eileen Collins, who was the first female space shuttle commander.

Throughout her career Commander Melroy has served as a valuable co-worker and leader and is highly respected by those who work with her. Her contributions to her country as a member of the Air Force and as an astronaut are invaluable. Inspired by Apollo missions when she was younger, Melroy herself serves as an inspiration by showing how far women have come in the space program.

Representative Kuhl and I thank Pamela Melroy for her dedication and service to her country as a member of the Air Force and as an astronaut and congratulate her on a successful career thus far. She has and will continue to be a true leader and an excellent role model for young people today.

A TRIBUTE TO MRS. MAGGIE BAKER

Mr. TOWNS. Madam Speaker, I rise today to pay to Mrs. Maggie Baker.

Mrs. Baker was born in Alabama and migrated to Brooklyn, NY, where she married Jessie Baker, Sr. She and her husband of 45 years are the proud parents of 5 sons, 1 daughter, and 20 grandchildren.

Mrs. Baker is most recognized for her years of service with the board of education until 2004. A dedicated member of New Canaan Baptist Church, Mrs. Baker has served as president of the usher board and as a Sunday school teacher for more than 31 years. Although she is actively involved in other community organizations, Mrs. Baker enjoys spending quality time with her family and traveling.

Madam Speaker, I would like to recognize the impressive achievements of Mrs. Maggie Baker for her commitment to the Brooklyn community.

Madam Speaker, I urge my colleagues to join me in paying tribute to a great individual of high morals, ethics, and integrity.

CELEBRATING THE 50TH ANNIVERSARY OF ST. CATHERINE OF ALEXANDRIA PARISH IN OAK LAWN, ILLINOIS

Mr. LIPINSKI. Madam Speaker, I rise today to honor St. Catherine of Alexandria Catholic Parish as they celebrate 50 years of community, faith, and service. Throughout their history, the parishioners of St. Catherine’s have served commendably as a pillar of the Oak Lawn community, and I am pleased to honor their 50th anniversary.
The story of St. Catherine of Alexandria Catholic Parish began in 1957, when the Roman Catholic population of the Ranch Manor District of Oak Lawn began looking for a new place to worship. They petitioned the Archdiocese of Chicago to establish a new church in their area, and on August 21, 1957, St. Catherine of Alexandria Parish was canonically erected.

While men in the parish built a chapel and an office, services were temporarily held at Brother Rice High School. Through hard work and dedication throughout the years, the parish has expanded to accommodate the large increase of worshippers. When the parish was dedicated on November 23, 1958, the parish facilities consisted of the church and an eight-room school for 367 families. Today, there are 12 additional classrooms, a convent, and a rectory to serve the 2200 families who worship there.

From their first pastor, Reverend John M. Kane, to their current pastor, Father Patrick Henry, the parishioners of St. Catherine’s have enriched the lives of their fellow citizens by providing community outreach, a strong grade school, and an unwavering commitment to their faith. The members of St. Catherine’s continue to develop their community, building gyms, kitchens, and meeting rooms to provide a safe environment for area children and a focal point for their community. I rise today, Madam Speaker, to commend the hard work, dedication, and faith that have characterized the first 50 years of St. Catherine’s Church in their area, and on August 21, 1957, St. Catherine of Alexandria Parish was canonically erected.

RECOGNIZING CARNegie HALL’S CULTURAL EXCHANGE PROGRAM
HON. CAROLYN B. MALONEY
OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, December 5, 2007

Mrs. MALONEY of New York. Madam Speaker, I rise today to bring attention to a very special occasion that will take place in New York’s 14th Congressional District this week. Eight New York City high schools, including the Life Sciences Secondary School and Company High School for Theatre Art, will participate in a musical and cultural exchange event at New York City’s world-renowned Carnegie Hall on December 5, 2007.

Carnegie Hall’s cultural exchange program will bring together a select group of eight classrooms in New York City and an equal number in Istanbul, Turkey. Students from both countries have worked in their respective classrooms for the past ten weeks to learn about each other’s nation and culture. On Wednesday, students and teachers will meet face to face via teleconferencing technology to share a real-time cultural exchange using music as the common language. American and Turkish teachers and students in the program will continue to communicate with one another on a dedicated internet space for the duration of the school year. Carnegie Hall has developed this unique exchange program in partnership with the U.S. Department of State, and I am pleased that this public-private partnership will produce a meaningful, enriching and lasting experience for students in New York City and Istanbul.

Music is a universal language through which improved understanding among our nation’s respective citizenry can be found. I commend Carnegie Hall, the U.S. Department of State, and the private sector sponsors of this program. Most importantly, I congratulate the young men and women participating in this program on their continued pursuit of improved cultural understanding through music and the arts.

AN EXTRAORDINARY CAREER, AN EXTRAORDINARY CITIZEN
HON. STENY H. HOYER
OF MARYLAND
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, December 5, 2007

Mr. HOYER. Madam Speaker, I stand today to recognize the career and contributions of a longtime friend and newspaperman in Maryland’s Fifth Congressional District John Rouse, the editor of the Bowie Blade News. For 36 years, the citizens of the City of Bowie, Prince George’s County, and the State of Maryland have benefited from John’s skill as an editor, insight as a writer, and dedication to the community that he has served for so long. Many in Bowie recognize John by his long association with the Editor’s View column he wrote for the paper. Through his column and other writings, John has earned distinction for his thoughtful, objective style of journalism that has helped the Bowie Blade-News to significant acclaim.

After serving in the Air Force during the Vietnam era, John joined the Bowie News as editor in 1971 and became the editor and general manager of the new Bowie-Blade News in 1978 when the Bowie News merged with the Bowie Blade. Madam Speaker, under John’s leadership, the Bowie-Blade News has earned numerous recognitions, among them the Newspaper of the Year award in 1999 from the SEQ Chapter of the Maryland-Delaware-District of Columbia Press Association. The paper has also won the Bird and I have sometimes seven or eight distinctive pieces over the years as well as awards for newspaper design.

John has earned several accolades of his own for his individual achievements in the newspaper industry, including the Pulitzer Prize for his Editor’s View column. He has been a longtime member of the Society of Professional Journalists (Sigma Delta Chi). John is also a lifetime member of both the Disabled American Veterans and the American Legion.

During John’s 36 years in Bowie, he has remained resolute in his commitment to truth and fairness as guiding journalistic principles. John has served as an effective watchdog of the public interest in his community, and for that alone, he should be lauded.

Madam Speaker, I ask you to join me in recognizing John’s most admirable qualities is his keen sense of humor. Although sometimes the target of that humor, I recognize that John is an equal opportunity satirist who adeptly uses the power of the writer’s pen to make sound and insightful observations. And while John and I have sometimes fallen on different sides of a debate, we have grown to be friends over the years, and hold each other in high mutual respect and esteem.

After all, Madam Speaker, we have both witnessed the City of Bowie’s growth and development into the vibrant and diverse community that John is proud to call home, and I am proud to represent in Congress. All the while, John has maintained an innate ability to keep his finger firmly pressed on the pulse of the community, knowing better than most what makes Bowie such a great place to work and live.

As a resident of Bowie, John has served with countless community organizations and played a pivotal role in the formation of the Bowie YMCA. For his work in the community, John has been honored by a number of civic groups, including the Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. Commemorative Committee of Bowie, the Bowie Civic Affairs Committee, and the Maryland-National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

Madam Speaker, John’s career is significant not only in years and accomplishments, but also for the impact he has had in the City of Bowie. For three and a half decades, he has dedicated himself to working for the interests of his fellow Bowie residents and the good of the community. In recognition of his retirement as editor of the Bowie Blade-News and a public life filled with distinction, I ask my colleagues to join me in offering him our

HON. MICHAEL C. BURGESS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, December 5, 2007

Mr. BURGESS. Madam Speaker, I rise today to congratulate four members of the Denton County Correctional Health Team for being accredited “Certified Correctional Health Providers” by the National Commission on Correctional Health Care. The four health care providers are Medical Lt. John Kissinger, Medical Sgt. The National Commission on Correctional Health Care certification is the highest level of certification for correctional health providers. The Health Department runs a full medical facility in the Denton County facility, and provides emergency, routine and chronic care for over 1,000 inmates.

The individual and team accomplishments of these members contribute greatly to the safety and security of all inmates of the facility. I am very proud of their dedication to their community and country. It is my honor to represent these men and women, and I wish them continued successes in the future. Their persistence and commitment should serve as an inspiration to us all.

COMMENDING Q’S CREW FOR ITS COMMITMENT TO THE PEOPLE AND FAMILIES AFFECTED BY MULTIPLE SCLEROSIS

HON. SCOTT GARRETT
OF NEW JERSEY
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, December 5, 2007

Mr. GARRETT of New Jersey. Madam Speaker:

Whereas, Q’s Crew is comprised of the team members of Q’s Crew, which was recently honored by the Greater North Jersey Chapter of the National MS Society for raising the most money as a rookie team during the annual MS walk this past April. They also received the Mission Possible Award for raising more than $20,000 in this July 4th walk. Q’s Crew gets its name from Gloria Marquis, who succumbed to MS just prior to the walk. Her son, Joe, and his then-fiancee, now-wife, Tatiana, jointly captained this team, Gloria lived with MS for many years. And, her family lived through it with her with courage and grace and dignity. In the end, Gloria regretfully was unable to make it to Joe and Tatiana’s wedding in August; but her spirit was ever-present and she will surely be watching over this young couple’s life together.

Tatiana also serves as my district director and I know firsthand of her extraordinary sense of public service. The energy and determination that Tatiana and Joe have demonstrated in raising funds for and awareness of multiple sclerosis is something that they have provided for other families living with MS are a tremendous contribution to the community in which they have grown up and now live as husband and wife.

I was proud to join Tatiana, Joe, and the rest of Q’s Crew at the MS walk in April. And, I continue to be proud of all that they do to fight MS.

A MOMENT OF SILENCE IN MEMORY OF FORMER REPRESENTATIVE HENRY HYDE OF ILLINOIS

SPEECH OF
HON. DANIEL LIPINSKI
OF ILLINOIS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, December 4, 2007

Mr. LIPINSKI. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to offer my deepest condolences on the loss of Congressman Henry Hyde. It is a great honor to have known him and served with Henry, a dedicated public servant whose devotion to his constituency, values, and country was rivaled by few.

Though I only shared a single term in the House of Representatives with Congressman Hyde, I felt privileged to serve with him in the Illinois congressional delegation. A man well-known for his eloquent speeches, Henry Hyde was a legend throughout Illinois and the entire country.

Throughout his 32-year tenure in the House of Representatives, Congressman Hyde proved to be an intellectual powerhouse, commanding respect for the strong arguments and stimulating debate that he brought to the House. A true statesman, Henry was known for his ability to bring opposing sides of a debate together to find a consensus for the good of the country.

In the House, Congressman Hyde was influential on matters of international importance, having chaired both the Committee on the Judiciary and the Committee on International Relations. I have particularly great respect for his eloquent voice on American foreign policy during the Cold War.

For his public service and great contributions to America throughout his career, not the least of which was his brave service in the Navy during World War II, Congressman Hyde was recently recognized with the Presidential Medal of Freedom. Awarded by the President and given only to those individuals who have made an especially meritorious contribution to the security or national interests of the United States, this is the Nation’s highest civilian honor.

A man who always stayed true to his faith, Henry Hyde was unwavering in defending his values and beliefs with every word he spoke.
In the end, I will always admire Henry for his basic belief that the law exists to protect the weak from the strong, and his willingness to fight for this principle.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today not only to honor Henry Hyde, a great man, but to recognize the impact he has made on our country. America no doubt will feel the loss of this man who so deeply committed himself to his country. I count myself lucky that I had the opportunity to serve with him. My thoughts and prayers are with his wife and family.

HONORING THE 50TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE GREATER SPRINGFIELD CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

HON. TOM DAVIS OF VIRGINIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Mr. DAVIS of Virginia. Madam Speaker, I rise today to honor the Greater Springfield Chamber of Commerce as it celebrates its 50th anniversary.

Since its inception in 1957, the chamber has continued to play a key role in promoting economic prosperity in the greater Springfield region. Currently, the organization is comprised of 280 businesses that are involved in a variety of local ventures, ranging from restaurants to government contracting. Drawing from a wealth of business knowledge and experience, member companies work in concert with local government officials and residents on behalf of the Springfield community.

The greater Springfield region is home to a vibrant economy where small and large businesses are forced to contend with a number of challenging economic issues. Recognizing these challenges, the chamber remains committed to aiding business as they navigate this dynamic economic landscape. President Stubbs has led a recent initiative to analyze the Base Realignment and Closure, BRAC, program and to assess its potential impact on local businesses. Another recent chamber study has focused on helping small businesses cope with the threat of pandemic flu.

Strong leadership and solid organization have contributed to the chamber’s record of success. Under the guidance of current chamber president Vincent Stubbs and executive director Nancy-Jo Manney, chamber membership and activities have continued to expand. Chamber executives and officers work alongside the organization’s executive advisory council and the chamber board to identify areas of interest and chart the course of economic progress.

Madam Speaker, in closing, I would like to congratulate the Greater Springfield Chamber of Commerce on 50 years of success. They have become a strong organization committed to serving the interests of their members and their community. I call upon my colleagues to join me in applauding the chamber members’ past accomplishments and in wishing them the best of luck in the many years to come.

She has served as president of the New Canaan’s Christian Women’s Fellowship; vice president of the Pastor’s Aide Club Ministry; chaplain of the Sunday school department; and as a member of the block association.

Madam Speaker, I urge my colleagues to join me in paying tribute to this wonderful woman.

IN REMEMBRANCE OF LATE CONGRESSMAN AUGUSTUS FREEMAN “GUS” HAWKINS

HON. LUCILLE ROYBAL-ALLARD
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Ms. ROYBAL-ALLARD. Madam Speaker, it is with a heavy heart that I rise to recognize the passing of my former colleague and my friend, Augustus Freeman Hawkins.

I had the privilege of meeting Congressman Hawkins on several occasions during the years he served with my father, Congressman Edward R. Roybal, and I was struck by his warmth, intelligence, courage, and his dedication to serving the people of his Los Angeles congressional district.

Known affectionately as “Gus” to his colleagues and friends, Congressman Hawkins served his Los Angeles-area community, the State of California, and the Nation with distinction. Dedicating his life to public service, Congressman Hawkins served for 27 years in the California Assembly and 28 years in the U.S. House of Representatives.

His entry into Congress in 1962 could not have come at a more auspicious time. With the Civil Rights Movement already coming to the forefront of our Nation’s consciousness, Congressman Hawkins became a powerful advocate for civil rights for all Americans. As the first African-American from the western United States to serve in the House of Representatives, he keenly understood the importance of the minority voice in American politics, and he worked to magnify this voice by becoming a founding member of the Congressional Black Caucus. The CBC’s current success can be traced back to Congressman Hawkins’ vision and commitment to the organization in its formative years.

His achievements during his nearly three-decade tenure as a legislator are too numerous to recount. He was chairman of the powerful House Education and Labor Committee and the House Administration Committee, and he used his role as chairman to champion critical civil rights measures that expanded opportunities for millions of Americans.
was to simply limitless determination and impressive humility. His recent passing marks the culmination of a life spent sprinting towards goal after goal, and reaching every one of them. New York fans were treated to the sight of the 6-foot-1 dynamo whizzing down the indoor tracks at the old Madison Square Garden for the Millrose Games. He set the then-world record for a 440-yard sprint in 1947, finishing it in 46.3 seconds at a time when tracks were clay or dirt—not the artificial surfaces of today. His second world record was set a year later, when he ran 440 yards in 45.9 seconds. He nabbed a Silver Medal in the 1948 London Olympics and two more in the 1952 Olympics in Helsinki, missing the gold in all three to heartbreak, photo finishes. The powerfully built man with an 8-foot stride is forever memorialized in Jamaica by the Herb McKenley Crescent, and not long before his passing, he was awarded its third highest honor, the Order of Merit.

His life’s achievements read as oneamous letter to his native Jamaica. Born in the city of Clarendon on July 10, 1922, he sometimes skipped the bus after discovering that running got him places faster. One of those places was to college, when he became the first Jamaican sprinter to receive a college scholarship in the United States for the University of Illinois. After racking up his world-renowned honors, he coached Jamaica’s national team for between 1954 and 1973, and served as president of Jamaica’s Amateur Athletic Association for 12. A celebration of his life is, ultimately, a celebration of Jamaica, and the permanent stamp it has left on the cultural, athletic, and historic narrative of the world.

It is in the spirit of great mourning but also, of great pride that we commemorate his legacy. He has forever etched his story into the Jamaican consciousness, impressing upon us the need for unapologetically persistent and passionate.

HON. GEORGE RADANOVICH
OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, December 5, 2007

Mr. RADANOVICH. Madam Speaker, I rise today to honor the achievements of Tim Madden and to commend him for his service to the Eastern Madera community. On Friday, November 30, 2007, the Oakhurst Area Chamber of Commerce recognized Mr. Madden for his continued dedication to not only his chamber, but to the North Fork Chamber of Commerce and Eastern Madera County.

Tim Madden is a 17-year resident of Eastern Madera County. His continued commitment to his community is evident by his service in a multitude of leadership positions throughout the area. Within the Oakhurst Area Chamber of Commerce, Mr. Madden’s positions include past president, 2007; president 2006; president elect 2005; and member of the board of directors. In service with the chamber, the efforts of Mr. Madden enabled the chamber to authorize the inaugural trade mission to China, regain fiscal solvency, create a county-wide promotion system, promote local commerce and further downtown development and maintenance for the Oakhurst Business District.

Tim Madden also served as president of the North Fork Chamber of Commerce from 1998 to 2000, and as a member of the board of directors for 6 years. The list of community positions and appointments held by Mr. Madden continues, as does the esteem and gratitude of Eastern Madera County. Concerning the relationship Mr. Madden shares with his community, he remarked, “Our connection to each other extends far beyond our business relationships. We are much more like a very large extended family.”

Madam Speaker, I stand today to honor Tim Madden and the respect his community has shown for his dedicated service. I invite my colleagues to join me in wishing Mr. Madden many years of continued success.

HON. EDOLPHUS TOWNS
OF NEW YORK

Mr. TOWNS. Madame Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to Perry Pettus. He was elected in March of 2002 to the Village of Hempstead Board of Trustees. Mr. Pettus represents residents of the incorporated village of Malverne.

Mr. Pettus immediately began exercising his leadership as he took on Hempstead landlords over poor conditions in apartment buildings. He utilized his negotiating skills to bring the two sides together to help resolve tenant issues. He has effectively used the media to bring issues to light, not only for exposure but also for problem solving.

As a successful local businessman, Mr. Pettus has brought effective business skills to his position. He has already built business/government partnerships which have benefited the community.

Mr. Pettus resurrected legislation requiring the village to contract a portion of its business with minority contractors and continues to fight for its passage. He has gotten legislation

CELEBRATING JAMAICA THROUGH THE LIFE AND TIMES OF NATIVE SON HERB MCKENLEY

HON. CHARLES B. RANGEL
OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, December 5, 2007

Mr. RANGEL. Madam Speaker, I rise today to salute one of Jamaica’s favorite sons, Herb McKenley—a world-class track star whose awe-inspiring skills thrilled the hearts of Jamaica with pride. Noted as one of the island’s greatest athletes ever, McKenley brought home an Olympic gold medal in 1952 as part of the country’s relay team. A man of limitless determination and impressive humility—once claiming that his running philosophy was to run as fast as I can—McKenley set a slew of world records and earned myriad accolades to his name. His recent passing marks the culmination of a life spent sprinting towards goal after goal, and reaching every one of them. New York fans were treated to the sight of the 6-foot-1 dynamo whizzing down the indoor tracks at the old Madison Square Garden for the Millrose Games. His second world record was set a year later, when he ran 440 yards in 45.9 seconds. He nabbed a Silver Medal in the 1948 London Olympics and two more in the 1952 Olympics in Helsinki, missing the gold in all three to heartbreak, photo finishes. The powerfully built man with an 8-foot stride is forever memorialized in Jamaica by the Herb McKenley Crescent, and not long before his passing, he was awarded its third highest honor, the Order of Merit.

His life’s achievements read as oneamous letter to his native Jamaica. Born in the city of Clarendon on July 10, 1922, he sometimes skipped the bus after discovering that running got him places faster. One of those places was to college, when he became the first Jamaican sprinter to receive a college scholarship in the United States for the University of Illinois. After racking up his world-renowned honors, he coached Jamaica’s national team for between 1954 and 1973, and served as president of Jamaica’s Amateur Athletic Association for 12. A celebration of his life is, ultimately, a celebration of Jamaica, and the permanent stamp it has left on the cultural, athletic, and historic narrative of the world.

It is in the spirit of great mourning but also, of great pride that we commemorate his legacy. He has forever etched his story into the Jamaican consciousness, impressing upon us the need for unapologetically persistent and passionate.

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, December 5, 2007

Mr. RADANOVICH. Madam Speaker, I rise today to honor the achievements of Tim Madden and to commend him for his service to the Eastern Madera community. On Friday, November 30, 2007, the Oakhurst Area Chamber of Commerce recognized Mr. Madden for his continued dedication to not only his chamber, but to the North Fork Chamber of Commerce and Eastern Madera County.

Tim Madden is a 17-year resident of Eastern Madera County. His continued commitment to his community is evident by his service in a multitude of leadership positions throughout the area. Within the Oakhurst Area Chamber of Commerce, Mr. Madden’s positions include past president, 2007; president 2006; president elect 2005; and member of the board of directors. In service with the chamber, the efforts of Mr. Madden enabled the chamber to authorize the inaugural trade mission to China, regain fiscal solvency, create a county-wide promotion system, promote local commerce and further downtown development and maintenance for the Oakhurst Business District.

Tim Madden also served as president of the North Fork Chamber of Commerce from 1998 to 2000, and as a member of the board of directors for 6 years. The list of community positions and appointments held by Mr. Madden continues, as does the esteem and gratitude of Eastern Madera County. Concerning the relationship Mr. Madden shares with his community, he remarked, “Our connection to each other extends far beyond our business relationships. We are much more like a very large extended family.”

Madam Speaker, I stand today to honor Tim Madden and the respect his community has shown for his dedicated service. I invite my colleagues to join me in wishing Mr. Madden many years of continued success.

A TRIBUTE TO PERRY PETTUS

HON. EDOLPHUS TOWNS
OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, December 5, 2007

Mr. TOWNS. Madame Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to Perry Pettus. He was elected in March of 2002 to the Village of Hempstead Board of Trustees. Mr. Pettus represents residents of the incorporated village of Malverne.

Mr. Pettus immediately began exercising his leadership as he took on Hempstead landlords over poor conditions in apartment buildings. He utilized his negotiating skills to bring the two sides together to help resolve tenant issues. He has effectively used the media to bring issues to light, not only for exposure but also for problem solving.

As a successful local businessman, Mr. Pettus has brought effective business skills to his position. He has already built business/government partnerships which have benefited the community.

Mr. Pettus resurrected legislation requiring the village to contract a portion of its business with minority contractors and continues to fight for its passage. He has gotten legislation passed that would lower speed limits in school zones, and proposed legislation to beautify the business district by removing unsightly security gates. Campaigning on quality of life issues, Mr. Pettus has worked to ensure that all of the residents of Hempstead can enjoy the quality of life they deserve.

Perry Pettus strongly believes in community policing and that an effective police force is there to serve and protect all of the village’s residents. He recently provided scholarships to individuals from the community who were interested in taking the NCPD test. His efforts will help give the Hempstead Village Police Department a list of community-based candidates.

Perry Pettus and his wife Kennetha have five children.

Madam Speaker, I would also like to recognize the impressive achievements of Perry Pettus. He has received numerous awards and citations from organizations like the Hempstead NAACP, Hofstra University, 100 Black Men, the Central Nassau Club, the Black and Puerto Rican Caucus, and the Chamber of Commerce, Operation Get Ahead, and the Emmanuel Church of God, Rock Shepher.

Madam Speaker, I urge my colleagues to join me in paying tribute to this outstanding citizen and all the great things he stands for.

RECOGNIZING FORMER CHIEF OF STAFF JULIA E. HUDSON

HON. ELEANOR HOLMES NORTON OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, December 5, 2007

Ms. NORTON. Madam Speaker, I ask the House to recognize Julia Hudson, who served as my chief of staff for 8 years and has been a member of my staff throughout most of my own service in the Congress. On September 5, 2007, Julia left the House of Representatives to pursue a career in public relations, the field for which she prepared herself in graduate school. With her loss to my office, to me personally, and to the people of the District of Columbia is immense. However, Julia has spent nearly her entire professional life in my office serving the people of this city with excellence and special dedication to her job and to me in pursuit of my work in the House. It is understandable that she would want to pursue her chosen profession.

Julia’s career here in the House of Representatives demonstrates the opportunities for upward mobility that are available based on hard work and proven capability. Starting as a staff assistant, an entry level job, she was promoted to legislative correspondent and to a sub-committee staff position before leaving for a short time to work in the Clinton administration in 1999. Because of her great skill, initiative and hard work, I later asked her to return, and she continued to work her way up to become my chief of staff when political guru Donna Brazile resigned after 10 years with me to spearhead the Gore-Lieberman 2000 presidential bid.

In addition to her non-stop work leading “Team Norton,” as Julia christened our staff, Julia, a native Washingtonian, has always performed outside public service here in her hometown. She is a member of the Links, Incorporated and serves as the chair of the Links’ High Expectations Mentoring Program. The Links is an organization of accomplished, dedicated women who are active in their community here and nationwide. The Links members are activists, volunteers, mentors, role models and newsmakers who make the name “Links” mean not only a chain of friendship, but also of purposeful service. Over the years, I have watched Julia serve as a mentor and role model for the aspiring professionals who interned in our office. She set the perfect example for them to strive for the best and to take every opportunity from their internship to learn all that they could.

Julia’s cordial relations with others in the Congress was an added asset to us in our work. She was always as agreeable and collegial as she was efficient and able. She is remembered for her friendships and for her professionalism, dedication, generosity, patience and her willingness to always “go that extra mile” in performing her chief of staff duties. She set a gold standard for staff. I ask my colleagues to join me in recognizing Julia Hudson for outstanding service to the House of Representatives and to the residents of the District of Columbia. Julia will remain a dear friend to us all, and of course, a life member of Team Norton.

RECOGNIZING THE RETIREMENT OF SUE LARRIMORE

HON. JEFF MILLER
OF FLORIDA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, December 5, 2007

Mr. MILLER of Florida. Madam Speaker, it is an honor for me to rise today and recognize the retirement of Sue Larrimore, a great educator.

For three decades, Sue has dedicated her work toward helping students realize their full potential. Teaching elementary, middle, and junior high school students, she has touched the lives of countless individuals through different parts of the country. These students are our Nation’s future, and I am confident that her influence upon their lives will steer them toward working toward the betterment of society.

Sue has worked tirelessly as an educator for over 25 years in my district in northwest Florida, and has served as the principal of Destin Elementary School for the last 5 years. During those 5 years, Destin Elementary received an “A” grade every year for providing an exceptional educational experience. With an undergraduate degree in early childhood education and a master’s degree in educational leadership, there is no question that Sue knew what she wanted to do early on in her life, and her successes at both Destin Elementary as well as all the other schools at which she served are a testament to her achieving that goal.

Madam Speaker, Sue’s leadership and effectiveness will be missed by past and current students as well as all others that work with her in the educational community. She is a model citizen who set out and achieved the goal of making our Nation and the world a better place, and I know many will look to her as a great educator for a long time to come.

INTRODUCTION OF THE PRO IP ACT OF 2007

HON. JOHN CONYERS, JR.
OF MICHIGAN
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, December 5, 2007

Mr. CONYERS. Madam Speaker, today I am introducing the Prioritizing Resources and Organization for Intellectual Property (“PRO IP”) Act of 2007, legislation that highlights the importance of intellectual property enforcement by making several changes to substantive civil and criminal laws; providing for more efficient and direct coordination efforts among the various agencies; and allocating more resources towards enforcement efforts. I am joined by Representatives BERMAN, SMITH, SCHIFF, FEENEY, ISSA, CHABOT, COHEN, KELLER, JACKSON-LEE and GOODLATTE.

The objectives and content of this legislation are supported by a broad range of interests. Many unions and guilds, such as the Teamsters, Directors Guild of America, SEIU, AFTRA, Unite Here, AFM, Laborers, OPEN, IAETSE, and others, have sent letters in support of comprehensive IP enforcement legislation, in general, and more specifically, of many of the provisions contained in this bill. On the industry side, the Coalition Against Counterfeiting and Piracy, which represents 500 companies and trade associations, from the Motor Equipment Manufacturing Association and PHARMA to NBC Universal and Cleveland Golf, issued a June 2007 set of legislative objectives that are largely captured in this bill.

This legislation is an important and necessary step in the fight to maintain our competitive edge in a global marketplace. By providing additional resources for enforcement of intellectual property, we ensure that innovation and creativity will continue to prosper in our society.
The need for this legislation is clear. Counterfeiting and piracy costs the global economy between $500 and $600 billion a year in lost sales. That’s around 5 to 7 percent of global trade. It costs the United States between $200 and $250 billion a year in lost sales, including 750,000 lost jobs.

And it’s not just about money. Counterfeiting and piracy can place human lives at risk. As counterfeiters proliferate in sectors such as pharmaceuticals, aircraft, and auto parts, the harm can be a matter of life and death. For example, the World Health Organization estimates that the prevalence of counterfeit pharmaceuticals ranges from less than 1 percent in developed countries to over 30 percent in developing countries, and over 50 percent of counterfeit pharmaceuticals are obtained from illicit websites. The Center for Medicine in the Public Interest estimates that counterfeit drug commerce will grow 13 percent annually through 2010, nearly twice the rate of legitimate pharmaceuticals. As we read stories about people being harmed by counterfeit toothpaste, toys, or drugs, we see the real effects of these practices on American lives.

This legislation attempts to address these intellectual property offenses in a broad and encompassing manner. It does not take only one approach toward bolstering our intellectual property laws but rather tackles the challenges in several key areas. One approach is to strengthen the substantive civil and criminal laws relating to copyright and trademark infringement. For example, the legislation addresses several issues related to registration of a copyright and the manner in which damages are calculated, and it is designed to address infringement claims as well as tackling some of the problems that occur at our Nation’s borders and harmonizing the various forfeiture laws for the different intellectual property offenses.

Second, Title III of the legislation establishes the Office of the United States Intellectual Property Enforcement Representative, USIPER, in the Executive Office of the President, to handle nationwide and international coordination of intellectual property enforcement efforts. This legislation provides that the USIPER shall work with the Intergovernmental Intellectual Property Advisory Committee, composed of every federal agency with expertise in either Intellectual Property protection or enforcement, to generate a joint strategic plan to marshal the disparate resources and expertise of United States enforcement efforts and coordinate law enforcement efforts.

Third, Title IV of the legislation provides for the appointment of intellectual property attaches to work with foreign countries in their efforts to combat counterfeiting and piracy. The attaches will be responsible for coordinating training and technical assistance programs with the host country.

Finally, Title V of the legislation raises the level of intellectual property enforcement coordination within the Department of Justice by placing the functions of the existing Computer Crime and Intellectual Property Section related to enforcement of intellectual property laws and trade secrets under the auspices of a new Intellectual Property Division, and also transfers the International Intellectual Property Enforcement Coordinators to this new Division. This bill also provides for additional law enforcement resources, including local law enforcement grants and additional CHIPS and dedicated FBI personnel, and requires DOJ to provide an annual report of its efforts in intellectual property enforcement. Finally, the bill promotes transparency in the prosecutorial process by directing the DOJ to review and consider modifying their standards for accepting or declining prosecution of the intellectual property laws, including procedures for advising complainants and victims of intellectual property crimes.

If the United States is to maintain its position in the increasingly competitive global economy, we must fulfill our obligation to American intellectual property rights holders and ensure that their inventions, creations, writings, and discoveries are not stolen without effective recourse. This comprehensive piece of legislation goes a long way toward protecting that creativity and ingenuity that is vital to the U.S. economy.

A TRIBUTE TO MARTY MARKOWITZ

HON. EDOLPHUS TOWNS
OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, December 5, 2007

Mr. TOWNS. Madam Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to a man I have the great privilege of calling a friend—our generous and hardworking Borough President Marty Markowitz.

Marty has been a tireless advocate for bringing the promise of returning a national sports team to Brooklyn for the first time since the Dodgers left for Los Angeles in 1957 when the New York Jets were put up for sale in 2002. He has actively supported moving the team from New York to a new downtown arena at Atlantic Yards. The team hopes to play its first games in Brooklyn by the end of 2009.

Marty has also assisted in creating jobs for Brooklynites. He oversaw a historic community benefits agreement for Atlantic Yards, guaranteeing that the majority of the new jobs generated by the project would go to those Brooklynites who needed them most, including residents of nearby public housing. He has been a tireless advocate for bringing the cruise-ship industry to Brooklyn, and in April 2006 the Queen Mary II will begin docking in Red Hook, followed by the Crown Princess in June, creating new jobs and introducing thousands of visitors to this great borough.

Madam Speaker, I would like to recognize the impressive achievements of our Borough President Marty Markowitz for his commitment to the residents of Brooklyn. After Marty set an ambitious agenda as Borough President elected in the new millennium, Marty saw a chance to fulfill his campaign promise of returning a national sports team to Brooklyn who needed them most, including residents of nearby public housing. He has been a tireless advocate for bringing the cruise-ship industry to Brooklyn, and in April 2006 the Queen Mary II will begin docking in Red Hook, followed by the Crown Princess in June, creating new jobs and introducing thousands of visitors to this great borough.

Madam Speaker, I urge my colleagues to join me in paying tribute to this business savvy man who loves Brooklyn so very much.

UNETHICAL IMPRISONMENT OF PABLO PACHECO AVILA

HON. ALBIO SIRES
OF NEW JERSEY
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, December 5, 2007

Mr. SIRES. Madam Speaker, I rise today to bring attention to the continued injustice facing a Cuban prisoner of conscience, Pablo Pacheco Avila. In March of 2003, Cuban authorities led a crackdown on dissident movements. One of their victims was independent political journalist, Pablo Pacheco. Under Law 88, persons found guilty of destabilizing the Cuban regime by supporting the policy of the United States can be sentenced to many years in prison. Pablo Pacheco was sentenced to 20 years in prison under Cuban Law 88. By simply expressing political opinions and exercising the right to free speech, Pablo Pacheco and over 70 other people were arrested.

Pablo Pacheco began his prison sentence in Prison de Aguice in Colon, but has since been transferred several times. During this time, the prisoner’s health has been declining, as Pablo suffers from renal ectopia of his right kidney. In a country renowned for its medical care, it appears difficult for Pablo to receive the attention he needs. He continues to suffer from severe pain. His medical conditions have been exacerbated by the harassment he has experienced in the prison system. While in prison, Pablo Pacheco has continued his fight to expose the failings of the Cuban regime, resulting in further punishments.

I urge the Cuban regime to end this unethical imprisonment of Pablo Pacheco Avila. His status as a prisoner of conscience and his declining health urgently call for his immediate release.

RECOGNIZING 200 YEARS OF RESEARCH, SERVICE, AND STEWARDSHIP BY NOAA AND ITS PREDECESSOR AGENCIES

SPEECH OF
HON. SOLOMON P. ORTIZ
OF TEXAS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, December 4, 2007

The House in Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union has under consideration the bill (H. Con. Res. 147) recognizing 200 years of research, service, to the people of the United States, and stewardship of the marine environment by the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration and its predecessor agencies, and for other purposes.

Mr. ORTIZ. Mr. Speaker, I rise to honor the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, NOAA, for their 200 years of dedicated research and service to the United States.

NOAA and its predecessors conducted some of the earliest oceanographic research and have continued to serve the United States for commerce, defense, and environmental purposes. NOAA is a leader for scientific research and environmental monitoring and protection, providing an outstanding example to the international community.

NOAA continues that storied legacy in the 21st century with and oceanographic monitoring, the protection of our natural resources, its stewardship of the marine environment, and as our first line of warning for storms and hurricanes.

NOAA programs have provided invaluable services to commerce and defense, serving throughout the country’s history in war and peacetime; more than 100 million maps and charts for U.S. and Allied Forces.

Their programs promote safe and efficient commerce/transportation and work toward the advancement of environmental observation programs. Programs also include missions for the conservation of marine resources, coastal management, and protection from storms and other hazards—especially Gulf Coast hurricanes.

NOAA’s National Weather Service/Weather Forecast Offices at the Corpus Christi International Airport and the Brownsville/South Padre Island International Airport provide weather and flood warnings, daily forecasts, and meteorological and hydrologic data for the South Texas Gulf Coast area.

NOAA’s National Marine Fisheries Service/Seafood Inspection Program in Brownsville offers a voluntary inspection program for fishery products on a fee-for-service basis, as well as other services to local fishermen and fish processors.

NOAA’s National Ocean Service operates seven tide stations in Texas to monitor sea level trends, provide real-time data for storm surge warning, including South Texas locations in Corpus Christi and Port Isabel.

This week I will greet NOAA researchers in my district who are seeking a new location for a weather research center. I look forward to welcoming these distinguished researchers and discussing their needs for the future weather research center.

TRIBUTE TO MR. WILLIAM DONALD SCHAEFER

HON. CHRIS VAN HOLLEN
OF MARYLAND
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, December 5, 2007

Mr. VAN HOLLEN. Madam Speaker, it is my pleasure to recognize a true Maryland legend, Mr. William Donald Schaefer, on the occasion of his 86th birthday.

Mr. Schaefer was born in Baltimore, a city upon which he would come to have a lasting impact, on November 21, 1921. Following service in the U.S. Army during WWII, Mr. Schaefer returned to Maryland to work in law and eventually enter politics.

Over the course of 50 years, Mr. Schaefer would serve several years on the Baltimore City Council, four terms as Baltimore mayor, two terms as Maryland governor, and two terms as State Comptroller. He has left an indelible mark on Maryland and its people from his 50 years of public service.

He has been known for his colorful personality, but his tireless efforts and dedication to public service have never wavered. He has acquired friends and admirers from both sides of the aisle because of this commitment.

His famous mantra as Baltimore mayor, “Do It Now,” reflects his ability to get things done. The redeveloped and rejuvenated Baltimore, which so many of us today enjoy, is largely a result of his efforts during that time. Today, there are few Marylanders who can say that they haven’t been positively affected by his leadership.

On a personal note, I had the great privilege of working for Governor Schaefer. His “do it now” philosophy provided a very valuable lesson for all of us in public office. He wanted to make sure that Maryland government addressed the needs of every Maryland resident regardless of their circumstances. He has always been one with little patience for pomp and circumstance.

On behalf of the residents of Maryland’s Eighth Congressional District, I am proud to offer my best wishes to Mr. Schaefer.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

HON. JOHN CONYERS, JR.
OF MICHIGAN
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, December 5, 2007

Mr. CONYERS. Madam Speaker, yesterday, I mistakenly voted against H. Res. 37, providing for the concurrence by the House in the Senate amendment to H.R. 710, with amendments. In fact, I support this critical legislation, which would make paired kidney donation legal and allow organizations like the United Network for Organ Sharing to track eligibility for paired donation.

INTRODUCING A RESOLUTION TO COMMEMORATE THE 60TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE EVERGLADES NATIONAL PARK

HON. ALCEE L. HASTINGS
OF FLORIDA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, December 5, 2007

Mr. HASTINGS of Florida. Madam Speaker, I am pleased to rise today to introduce significant bipartisan legislation with my colleague and fellow co-chair of the Everglades Caucus, Representative MARIO DIAZ-BALART to commemorate the 60th anniversary of Everglades National Park.

For years, Representative Diaz-Balart and I have been working together to preserve and restore the Everglades, and I am pleased to be introducing this resolution with him.

Sixty years ago tomorrow, President Harry S. Truman dedicated Everglades National Park. Today, this vast subtropical wilderness in the United States is habitat to many endangered species as well as an international center for business, agriculture, and tourism. Everglades National Park has been designated an International Biosphere Reserve, a World Heritage Site, and a Wetland of International Importance in recognition of its significance to all the people of the world.

Over time, however, management and development activities have destroyed our nation’s majestic wetlands. Today the River of Grass is only half of its original size.

Sadly, the ecosystem’s tree islands and mangroves have been largely destroyed and its estuaries have become barren.

In response to threats to this pristine ecosystem, in 2000, Congress passed an ambitious restoration plan called the Comprehensive Everglades Restoration Plan (CERP). In doing so, we commit the Federal government to become an equal partner with the State of Florida to restore the Everglades and protect the River of Grass. Regrettably, since the passage of this legislation, restoration efforts in Congress have been stymied for 7 years under Republican rule. Congress failed to afford Everglades revitalization efforts the priority they deserved and failed to properly fund restoration programs.

As a result of Congress’ delays in authorizing financing and developmental pressures in South Florida, the costs of repairing the Everglades have drastically soared.

Today we have a new Congress with new priorities. This Democratic Congress has worked relentlessly—in a bipartisan fashion—to keep the Federal government’s end of the bargain and restore its commitment to the River of Grass.

Just last month, Congress overrode a President Bush veto and passed the Water Resources Development Act of 2007, authorizing $1.8 billion in Everglades restoration funding, including funding the two long awaited and critical projects: the Indian River Lagoon and the Picayune Strand.

As we pause to celebrate the anniversary of the Everglades National Park tomorrow, we enhance our vigilant efforts to restore and conserve the Park to the pristine ecosystem it once was.

As Marjory Stoneman Douglas wrote in The Everglades: River of Grass, “There is a balance in man also, one which has set against his greed and its inertia and its foolishness. . . . Perhaps even in this last hour, in a new relation of usefulness and beauty, the vast magnificent, noble and unique region of the Everglades may not be utterly lost.”

Today, I rise to ensure that these majestic wetlands will forever be remembered, preserved and protected for all future generations of Americans to enjoy.

Ms. CASTOR. Madam Speaker, I rise today to herald the life and philanthropic contributions of Richard ‘Dick’ Bowers, and to express our gratitude for his achievements at the University of South Florida as well as all of Florida.

Bowers, a native of Tennessee, served in the United States Army and retired with the rank of captain. He received his bachelor’s and master’s degrees from the University of Tennessee and his doctorate in education from Vanderbilt-Peabody College. Bowers taught at various institutions ranging from King College in Bristol, TN, to the University of Rangone, in Burma, on a Fulbright scholarship.

In 1963, Bowers moved to the Tampa area, where he assumed the University of South Florida’s first ever athletics director position. During his tenure, Bowers oversaw the creation of the university’s baseball field, golf course, and SunDome basketball arena. After 17 years, Bowers moved from the athletic director position and became involved in the University of South Florida’s college of business, where he was associate dean, professor, and director of development.

Bowers was also very influential in the Tampa Bay area through his philanthropic work. He served as president of the Gold Shield Foundation for 18 years, which raises money for families of fallen police officers and firefighters. In addition, Bowers took leadership roles in numerous other community organizations including the United Way, the National Youth Sports Program, the Tampa Chapter National Football Foundation, the Hall of Fame Bowl Selection Committee, the Northside Bank Board, the Florida State Department of Education Task Force in Physical Education, the American Heart Association, the American Cancer Society, the Tampa Sports Club, and the Hispanic Business Institute.

We honor the life of Richard ‘Dick’ Bowers for his outstanding contribution to our wonderful Tampa Bay community, the University of South Florida and the entire State of Florida. Dick Bowers’ life serves as an inspiration to all who knew him and his contributions and achievements will impact the lives of all Floridians in the future.

TRIBUTE TO THE NATIONAL ANTHEM PROJECT

HON. C.A. DUTCHE RUPPERSBERGER
OF MARYLAND

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, December 5, 2007

Mr. RUPPERSBERGER. Madam Speaker, I rise before you today to recognize The National Anthem Project a 3-year national education campaign led by our Nation’s music educators, to raise awareness of the importance of music programs in our Nation’s schools.

The National Anthem Project was launched by the National Association for Music Education in 2005, in response to a survey conducted by Harris Interactive. The Harris Poll showed that two out of three Americans did not know the words to “The Star-Spangled Banner.” The National Association for Music Education believes that this lack of knowledge, concerning the words and history of our national anthem, is a direct reflection of the quality of music education in our Nation’s schools.

Music programs are considered an important part of a well-rounded education. Research shows that music programs help students perform better in math and science. Music education also provides students with a greater appreciation of America’s musical heritage and history, as most Americans learn the national anthem and other patriotic songs at school.

The goal of the National Anthem Project was to “restore America’s voice,” by re-teaching Americans to sing “The Star-Spangled Banner” and by spotlighting the important role of music programs in our Nation’s schools.

The 3-year project began on March 10, 2005, with a kick-off celebration on Capital Hill. The kick-off was followed by a nationwide Road Show tour in 2006 and hundreds of additional project-inspired events. The National Anthem Project came to a close in June of 2007, with a 3-day Grand Finale on the grounds of the Washington Monument featuring over 5,000 participants, including celebrities, Drum Corps International, music teachers, and students from all across the United States, who gathered together to celebrate the achievements of the National Anthem Project and, of course, to sing the anthem.

The National Anthem Project has been a great success. Not only has the project succeeded in re-teaching the words and history of our national anthem, but it has also inspired people all over the country to have a greater appreciation of America’s musical heritage and the importance of music education in our Nation’s schools. The National Anthem Project has garnered significant news coverage from thousands of news outlets across the country, including Fox News, CNN, and Good Morning America. The success of the National Anthem Project has even received the attention of the Senate, which passed a Resolution in July of 2007 in support of the project’s goals and ideals. It is my pleasure to share with you today the achievements of the National Anthem Project.

MOMENT OF SILENCE IN MEMORY OF FORMER REPRESENTATIVE HENRY HYDE OF ILLINOIS

SPEECH OF
HON. VERNON J. EHLERS
OF MICHIGAN
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, December 4, 2007

Mr. EHLERS. Mr. Speaker, I rise to pay my respects to our departed colleague, Representative Henry Hyde. I am saddened by the death of this exceptionally fine and honorable man. It is so ably served his constituents and interests of his constituents but, indeed, the entire nation for over 30 years in this House. Henry Hyde will be remembered in many different ways—as a skilled attorney who respected and defended the rule of law; as a stout champion of the rights of the unborn; and as a distinguished statesman who promoted peaceful and just international relations and agreements.

As I remember the life and service of Henry Hyde, one personal experience stands out in mind. In 1984, I was involved in a closely contested race for an empty federal State Senate seat. A prominent pro-life organization endorsed my opponent, based not on my record or his, but on unrelated reasons. This was done despite my own consistent pro-life voting record and ardent pro-life policy stance. The pro-life endorsement carried considerable weight in the district and was a noteworthy point about this development, and he was outraged. He traveled up from Illinois to campaign for me, to correct what he considered a grave injustice. Of course, given the passage of the Hyde amendment to the federal health care system in 1974—Henry Hyde was a hero in the pro-life movement. His public endorsement of my campaign was a significant factor in my close victory.

Mr. Speaker, I consider it an honor to have known and worked closely with Henry Hyde. I know many of us feel the same way. I hope we will uphold his legacy of defending the rule of law, promoting just international relations, and protecting the sanctity of all life.

TRIBUTE TO FRANK B. SOLLARS

HON. MARION BERRY OF ARKANSAS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, December 5, 2007

Mr. BERRY. Madam Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to an honorable lifelong farmer, fine American and dear friend who made significant contributions to the agricultural community for our nation.

Frank Sollars was born in 1921 in Concord Township, Ohio, to Walter Eugene and Mabel Blanche Bowers Sollars and graduated from Washington High School in 1939. Although he was a farmer by profession, Frank was also a leader in agricultural cooperatives, the insurance business and agricultural financing. As an International Cooperative Alliance Central Committee member, Frank hosted delegations from Russia, Poland, Hungary, Czechoslovakia, China, Japan, and Taiwan on the farm. Frank served as president of the Ohio Farm Bureau Federation, the Ohio Federation of Soil and Water Conservation Districts and the Ohio Agricultural Marketing Association. He served as a board member of the American Farm Bureau Federation, the American Agricultural Marketing Association and served on the Board of Governors of the National Agricultural Hall of Fame. He was a board member on the first Soil Conservation Service Board in Fayette County for ten years and was chairman for five years.

Frank held numerous leadership roles in the finance industry including Chairman of the Board of Nationwide Insurance, Chairman of the Board of the National Cooperative Business Association, a director of the Ohio Chamber of Commerce, a member of the Ohio Consumers council and a director of the Fifth Third Bank of Columbus. He served on the Federal Reserve Bank Advisory Committee and was instrumental in establishing the National Cooperative Bank in Washington, D.C. where he served as Board Chairman from 1980–1998 after being appointed by Presidents Carter, Reagan and Bush.

Commonly referred to as the “Founding Father of the National Cooperative Banks.” Frank was awarded the Stanley W. Dreyer Spirit of Cooperation Award in 2006 for his commitment and dedication to banking. In recognition of Frank as an international cooperative mentor, the Frank B. Sollars Fund for International Cooperation was established in 1998.

Locally, Frank was a member of the Fayette County Farm Bureau, Fayette County Agronomy Committee and Agronomy Club, and the Concord Township Farm Bureau Advisory Council. He was a board member of the American Red Cross of Greater Columbus representing Fayette County and was a trustee of the Southern State Community College Foundation. Frank served on the board as chairman of the Fayette County Bank and Sollars Brothers Corporation.

Frank received numerous honors throughout his life including being inducted into the Ohio Agricultural Hall of Fame, Fayette Agricultural Hall of Fame, National Cooperative Business Association Hall of Fame and the Ohio Soil and Water Conservation Hall of Fame. He received the Distinguished Service Award from the Ohio Farm Bureau and was named the Outstanding Young Farmer by the OhioJaycees in 1956.

Although Frank has been recognized for numerous honors, he always believed his family was his greatest accomplishment. Frank gave many years of his life to improve and promote the agricultural industry he loved, because he truly believed it was his duty to serve his family and his country. He was a member of the Grace United Methodist Church.

A devout public servant, Frank was a man of honor and compassion. On behalf of the Congress, I extend sympathies to his family and gratitude for all he did to improve agriculture for our nation. His service and friendship will be missed by all.

TRIBUTE TO THE UNITED REPUBLIC OF TANZANIA

HON. PAUL RYAN OF WISCONSIN
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, December 5, 2007

Mr. RYAN of Wisconsin. Madam Speaker, I rise to mark the 46th anniversary of independence for the United Republic of Tanzania, and to congratulate the leaders and citizens of that great nation for all that they have achieved.

It’s impossible to talk about Tanzania’s history and development without remembering the nation’s founder and first president, Julius Nyerere, a man affectionately known as a great man among African leaders of his time. He dedicated his life to building a sense of national identity and unity. He wanted his countrymen to think of themselves as Tanzanians first and foremost, and not to set themselves apart because of their religion or ethnicity. Nearly a half century later, it is clear that his dream is alive and well.

We should also commend Tanzania’s president, Jakaya Kikwete, for all of his efforts to carry on the good work of Mwalimu and other Tanzanian leaders. From his leadership of Tanzania’s National Testing Campaign, his AIDS/HIV to his calls for greater transparency in government and an end to corruption, President Kikwete has tirelessly dedicated himself to a brighter future for his country and his people.

As Tanzania enters its 47th year of independence on December 9, 2007, let us celebrate Tanzania’s legacy of peace and stability, thank Tanzania for its close friendship with the United States, and pledge ourselves to work closely with President Kikwete and his people as they move boldly into the future.

COMMENDING TRIANGLE STUDENTS FOR PARTICIPATING IN DARFURFAST

HON. DAVID E. PRICE OF NORTH CAROLINA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Wednesday, December 5, 2007

Mr. PRICE of North Carolina. Madam Speaker, I rise to commend the students, friends and family members from the Carolina Friends School community in Durham, North Carolina who are making a simple but powerful, statement today to raise awareness of a topic that compels the attention of this body—the plight of Sudanese citizens driven to camps for refugees and internally displaced persons, or IDPs, by the horrible genocide occurring in Darfur.

The Carolina Friends School community members, along with others from across the country and around the world, have given up one luxury item today—something like a restaurant dinner, a movie, or a cup of coffee—and will donate the money they would have spent to the Genocide Intervention Network’s Civilian Protection program.

Individually, these are small sacrifices, but collectively, these donations will make a tremendous difference. Tanzania residents are under tremendous threats, despite the relative protection the camps offer. Residents must venture from the camps to obtain simple items, such as the firewood needed to cook food. But camp residents have routinely been attacked, raped, or killed by Janjaweed militia members and others when they leave the confines of the camps.

Just three dollars—the price of a cup of coffee in many places—can fund protection for UN-African Union peacekeepers for firewood gathering patrols for one camp resident over the course of an entire year. Just one cup of coffee can make a life-saving difference.

Beyond simply generating donations, the activism of these concerned citizens sends a powerful message, a cry for help in confronting a horrible tragedy. As their simple actions demonstrate, hundreds of thousands of Darfuris are dying for items we often take for granted. While the DarfurFast volunteers are asked to give up a luxury item for one day, many Darfuris go without food for days at a time. Thousands of camp residents have died from malnutrition, from preventable disease, and from lack of access to clean water. These victims are just as much casualties of the genocide as are the Darfuris killed by marauding militias.

I applaud these students and community members for their message, and urge my colleagues to listen to it closely. Let us ask ourselves, what could we, here in Congress, give up for Darfur? Would we be willing to give up one day of spending in Iraq—worth about $200 million—to save lives in Darfur? Would we forego eating a few too many meals for the wealthy? What are we willing to sacrifice to stop the genocide and save the lives of millions of innocent civilians threatened every day by savage militias and a heartless regime in Khartoum that refuses to stop them?

Madam Speaker, once again, let me commend these students and community members—and the individuals around the world participating in DarfurFast—for their activism. I hope we will all heed their call.

RECOGNIZING THE 35TH ANNIVER-
ARY OF FLINT ODYSSEY HOUSE

HON. DALE E. KILDEE
OF MICHIGAN
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, December 5, 2007

Mr. KILDEE. Madam Speaker, I rise today to recognize the achievements of Flint Odyssey House. On December 6th Flint Odyssey House will be holding an open house to celebrate the 35th anniversary of the Odyssey Institute.

Dr. Judianne Densen-Gerber began her career in substance abuse treatment in 1966 working with 17 heroin addicts. She quickly realized that for successful rehabilitation, the root causes of addiction had to be addressed. She developed a model of treatment that tackled the traumatic experiences in an addict’s life and its impact on a person’s well-being and self-image. The treatment methodology consists of five stages: Orientation, Cocoon Phase, Incubator Phase, Self-Awareness and Reformation Phase, and Butterfly Post-Treatment. From her treatment model, the Odyssey Institute was born and now operates in com-unities around the world.

Started in 1979 by Ronald Sahara Brown, Flint Odyssey House was a satellite program of the Detroit Rubicon Odyssey House. When the Detroit program was forced to close its doors, Ronald Brown kept the Flint Odyssey House open. He had $300 in food stamps and the determination to make the program a success. As a former addict and a graduate of the program, Ronald knew firsthand how benef-ci al the Odyssey House concept of treatment could be to a recovering substance abuser. He invited clients of the closed Detroit Rubicon Odyssey House to join him in the Flint program. With a skeleton crew, he operated the program on a shoestring. His perseverance paid off, and the Michigan Department of Social Services and the Genesee County Commission on Substance Abuse started to provide financial assistance. From that first adult treatment center, the program has grown to provide a wide range of services.

Ronald Brown has expanded Flint Odyssey House to meet the needs of the community. The treatment facility was located in a drug-and crime-infested neighborhood, and Ronald took to the streets, reclaiming and renovating the crack houses in the area. Starting the Treat the Streets Program, Flint Odyssey House reclaimed the area and earned Ronald Sahara Brown the title of Chief of Odyssey Village. Flint Odyssey House has moved from being a substance abuse treatment agency to a human development agency and is a model for programs throughout the United States. It operates many programs, and treats hundreds of persons, including pregnant addicts and mothers with children. Accredited through the Commission on Accreditation of Rehabilitation Facilities, Flint Odyssey House has expanded and now operates a program in Saginaw Michigan.

In 1993, Flint Odyssey House received the Martin Luther King, Jr. Award from the Michigan Department of Public Health and the Clayton R. Stroup Award. In 1996 Ronald Sahara Brown was the recipient of the Robert Wood Johnson Community Health Leadership Award. Ronald used the $100,000 stipend that came with this award to purchase and operate an old-age home in the neighborhood that was about to close. This kept the residents from being evicted and provided one more service to the community.

Madam Speaker, I ask the House of Representatives to rise with and applaud the work of Ronald Sahara Brown, the staff, volunteers and the clients of Flint Odyssey House. Their courage and determination to bring out the pot-tential in every human being is a brilliant example of the power in each and every one of us to effect change in our world. May they continue to provide service and compassion for many, many more years.

TRIBUTE TO MR. SANFORD HELLER

HON. CHRIS VAN HOLLEN
OF MARYLAND
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Mr. VAN HOLLEN. Madam Speaker, it is with great pleasure that I congratulate my constituent, Mr. Sanford Heller of Rockville, Maryland, as he prepares to celebrate his 100th birthday. Mr. Heller was born on December 27, 1907 in The Bronx, New York and lived in New York City until he has 95. He owned his own home, mortgage free, for more than 50 years.

Mr. Heller has dedicated his life to public service and took part in events that shaped our nation. During the 1930s, he processed the arrival of new immigrants at Ellis Island. He served in the U.S. Navy during World War II. After his military service, he held positions in Federal, State, and city government.

To this day, Mr. Heller keeps himself busy. He reads the New York Times cover to cover, has traveled to over 35 countries, and can still fit into the same tuxedo he bought during the Great Depression. He is in excellent health, takes no medication, and walks every day.

Mr. Heller, a mandolin player, also enjoys entertaining for friends, family, and fellow residents of the Ring House, where he now resides. He was married to Ethel Heller for over 64 years until her death at age 92 in 2005. He has two children, five grandchildren, and ten great grandchildren. I join with Mr. Heller’s family and friends in wishing him a most joyous birthday. He has my warmest congratulations and best wishes.

AS AN OUTSTANDING ADVOCATE FOR CHILDREN

HON. TED POE
OF TEXAS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Wednesday, December 5, 2007

Mr. POE. Madam Speaker, It has been said that “child abuse casts a shadow the length of a lifetime.” Nancy Chandler has dedicated her life to changing this. For over 25 years, Nancy has advocated for children and improved their futures.

After receiving her Masters in Social Work from the University of Georgia, Nancy was the founding Executive Director of the Memphis Child Advocacy Center. This Center helps “victims become children again.”

Since April 1994, Nancy Chandler has served as the Executive Director of the National Children’s Alliance (NCA), a not-for-profit membership organization that represents more than 700 Children’s Advocacy Centers. For 13 years, Nancy has led and managed NCA’s finances, and developed resources, training, programs, communications, and membership services. Nancy also led and inspired a staff of dedicated advocates. As Executive Director of NCA, Nancy educated and motivated advocates at over 400 conferences and workshops across the United States.

Throughout her remarkable career in children’s advocacy, Nancy was a member of Leadership Memphis and a founding board member of the National Network of Children’s Advocacy Centers. She also served on the National Advisory Committee for Darkness to Light, a primary prevention program aimed at reducing the incidence and consequence of child sexual abuse, and as Senior Warden of The Church of the Epiphany in Washington, DC. Nancy has proven herself as an experice dna leader and a compassionate advocate for children.

And that’s just the way it is.
