Project Name: Mid-West/Mid-South Irrigation, Columbia, MO

Bill Number: H.R. 1105

Account: Agricultural Research Service; Salaries and Expenses

Legal Name of Requesting Entity: Curators of the University of Missouri

Address of Requesting Entity: 316 University Hall, Columbia, MO 65211

Description of Request: Provide an earmark of $645,000 to conduct research on irrigation in the Midwest/Mid-South (Mw/MS), the region experiencing the highest increase in irrigated acreage in the USA. Irrigation research had traditionally been done in dry parts of the country. However, results from these arid studies from areas where it is continuously dry are not always appropriate to the Mw/MS conditions, which can experience droughty periods followed by heavy rains, has hard pan soils, and disease pressure from high humidity. Since the Mw/MS is a historically underserved area in regards irrigation research, its farmers were not as able to grow irrigated crops as profitably as they could. It is imperative that research be conducted to answer the question of how best to irrigate in a semi-humid area. Research is being done on crop response to water logging, on scheduling irrigation using sensors, on row configurations, on conserving energy, on managing field variability, and growing rice more profitably. The project is a cooperative effort between USDA/ARS and the University of Missouri. Approximately, 80% is for salary and benefits, 12% for supplies, 7% for domestic travel, and 1% for soil and plant tissue testing. The data gathered from these studies have already made a difference in the financial situation of area farmers. Approximately 20% of the irrigators are using scientific irrigation scheduling, which is a much higher rate than most other regions of the USA. This has led to increases in yield that are worth about $13,000,000 annually. The trend line of the regional averaged yield for irrigated crops is increasing at a higher rate than is the trend line for dryland yields. This is an excellent indication that irrigators are becoming more proficient, due in large part to the Midwest/Mid-South Irrigation Project.
