health care to be privatized? Overwhelmingly, no.

In recent years, the Senator from Ohio, I, and others have worked to substantially increase funding for federally qualified community health centers, like ours in our country. These are the most cost-effective ways of providing quality health care, dental care, low-cost prescription drugs, mental health counseling.

The people of this country want those of us who have success in expanding that program. But I get a little bit tired of hearing from some of our friends on the other side who tell us: Oh, people do not want government involved in health care. Well, you tell that to seniors. Tell them you want to privatize Medicare. Tell that to the veterans, that you want to privatize the VA.

The fact is, as the Senator from Ohio indicated, we are wasting tens and tens of billions of dollars every year in bureaucracy, in billing. In excessive CEO salaries through private health insurance companies. At the very least, the people of this country are demanding, and we must bring forth, a strong—underline “strong”—public option within any health care reform program we develop.

Mr. BROWN. I thank the Senator from Vermont. It is pretty clear, and I think this Congress is going to do the right thing. The President, when he met with the leaders of both parties in his campaign, was strongly in favor of purchasing insurance from the Medicare look-alike plan or private plans or either one or keeping what they already have.

The President has spoken strongly on it for months. The majority of this Congress wants to do the same. I am hopeful that is what we will do in the months ahead.

HONORING OUR ARMED FORCES

SERGEANT JUSTIN DUFFY

Mr. NELSON of Nebraska. Mr. President, I rise today to honor Army SGT Justin J. Duffy, age 31, who was killed in Iraq on June 2, 2009.

Sergeant Duffy was born in Moline, IL. As a child, his family moved to Cozad, NE, where he graduated from high school in 1995. He earned a degree in criminal justice from the University of Nebraska. Duffy worked at the Eaton Corporation for 5 years, where he was recognized for his work ethic and leadership ability and promoted to a supervisor position. His colleagues and friends said Duffy was the kind of person who never missed a day on the job and was always on time and ready to work. This young man stood out among his peers and always sought a challenge, so it came as no surprise to his friends and family when he decided to join the Army, enlisting in May 2008.

Sergeant Duffy’s father Joe said the U.S. Army had attracted his son because he wanted adventure and needed more of a challenge and he believed that desire would be fulfilled by serving in the military. His time with the U.S. Army was marked by success; one of his proudest accomplishments was his quick rise to Sergeant, beating the standard time it normally takes to achieve that rank. Sergeant Duffy was assigned to the 4th Battalion, 320th Field Artillery Regiment of the 101st Airborne Division. While in Iraq, Sergeant Duffy’s team was responsible for escort security for high-ranking military leadership.

Sergeant Duffy was serving in eastern Baghdad after an improvised explosive device detonated near the humvee he was driving; three of his fellow soldiers were also wounded in the blast. Sergeant Duffy served his country honorably and made the ultimate sacrifice for his fellow Americans. His life and service represents an example we should all strive to emulate.

SOT Justin Duffy leaves behind his parents Joe and Janet Duffy of Cozad, NE; his grandfather LeRoy Hood of Motlow, TN; his grandmother Jackie of Grand Island, NE, and Jackie of Yuma, AZ. He will forever be remembered by his family and friends as the kind of person who was quick to jump in wherever he was needed; some even labeled him a shepherd, and he always looked out for family, friends, and even strangers. I join all Nebraskans today in mourning the loss of Sergeant Duffy and offering our deepest condolences to his family.

SFC Jeremy R. Gullett

Mr. BUNNING. Mr. President, I would like to invite my colleagues to join me in recognizing Greenup County, KY, for paying tribute to Army SPC Jeremy R. Gullett.

SPC Jeremy R. Gullett served in the 4th Battalion, 320th Field Artillery Regiment of the 101st Airborne Division based out of Fort Campbell. He lost his life in the line of duty on May 7, 2008, in the Sabari District of Afghanistan.

This evening Greenup County will have a dedication ceremony to name a local bridge after Specialist Gullett, honoring his life and service to our Nation. The bridge will serve as a reminder to all of those who live or travel through Greenup County of the sacrifice Specialist Gullett made for our freedom.

A member of the Greenup County High School Class of 2003, Specialist Gullett participated in his high school Junior ROTC program and joined our Nation’s Armed Forces soon after earning his diploma. In addition to serving under our Nation’s armed services, Specialist Gullett was a member of Little Sandy Volunteer Fire Department and Veterans of Foreign Wars, dedicating his life to service domestically and internationally.

Specialist Gullett’s sacrifice for our Nation will forever be a reminder that freedom comes at a high cost. We should never take for granted the sacrifices service men and women make daily in all branches of the Armed Forces.

As we commemorate the life and service of SPC Jeremy Gullett, my thoughts and prayers are with his friends and family. All Kentuckians and Americans are deeply indebted to Specialist Gullett.

DECEPTIVE MARKETING

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, last month the Senate passed and the President signed H. R. 627, the Credit CARD Act of 2009. Thanks to the hard work of Senator Dodd, Senator Shelby, Representatives Maloney, many other Members of Congress, and the multitude of fed-up citizens who protested unfair treatment by credit card companies, this landmark bill to protect consumers from abusive credit card practices was passed over the objections of powerful lobbies. Millions of Americans will benefit now that some balance of power is being restored between card holders and card issuers.

Today, I want to thank Senator Dodd and Senator Shelby for including in the Credit CARD Act a provision that I authored and that was cosponsored by Senator Collins and Senator Menendez, to stop the deceptive marketing of free credit reports. I would also like to thank Senator Pryor for working with me to address his concerns about the provision.

Credit reports are a record of an individual’s history of receiving and repaying loans, and they frequently contain errors. At the same time, these credit reports are used to calculate the credit scores that have become so central to evaluating a person’s creditworthiness. Credit scores are used to determine whether someone will qualify for a credit card, what interest rate they will get, and whether and when that rate will increase. Credit scores perform a similar function for home mortgages, car loans, and consumer lines of credit. Some companies use these scores to screen applicants for apartments, insurance, security clearances, and even jobs. The important role a credit score plays in our everyday lives makes it all the more critical that the reports used to calculate these scores are accurate and accessible to consumers.

In the United States, three large nationwide credit reporting companies, often called “credit bureaus,” compile and maintain credit reports for the vast majority of consumers. Until Congress passed the Fair and Accurate Credit Transactions, FACT, Act of 2003, consumers had to pay a fee in order to access or attempt to correct the information in their credit reports.

The FACT Act gave consumers the right to a free annual report from each of the nationwide consumer reporting companies. The FTC mandated the establishment of a website, AnnualCreditReport.com, to provide consumers access to their federally mandated free credit reports. In these difficult economic times, it is critical that consumers have a clear understanding of their right to get a free annual report, an easy way to obtain
