of the Oregon Short Line Railroad. In order to take greater advantage of commercial opportunities provided by the railroad, the main town site was moved a mile west. Within a decade several businesses sprang up around the railroad tracks and the community beyond began to take shape. On April 11, 1911, it was officially incorporated as the city of Ucon.

In the ensuing decades, changes in the railroad and the effects of the Great Depression transitioned Ucon from a commercial hub to a residential community. Today, many in southeastern Idaho can trace their roots to the pioneers and patriots who settled Ucon. Congratulations to the people of Ucon for 100 years of success.

REMEMBERING JUSTICE DOUGLAS GRAY

• Ms. AYOTTE. Mr. President, today I honor the memory of the late Douglas Gray, a former New Hampshire Superior Court justice and an extraordinary public servant who dedicated his life to serving the Granite State.

Originally from Portsmouth, Justice Gray moved at the age of seven to Rye, where he resided for the remainder of his life. He graduated from Portsmouth High School and served his country in the U.S. Army from 1951 to 1954. After graduating from the University of New Hampshire in 1959, he earned his juris doctor from Boston College Law School, and went on to pursue a successful career practicing law in Portsmouth. During 1973–1983, he served as part-time special justice in the New Hampshire Supreme Court.

In 1983, he was appointed by Governor John H. Sununu to serve as associate justice of the New Hampshire Superior Court, where he presided until 1998. He was then elected to serve as a senior justice and presided on a part-time basis until his retirement in 2003.

As a judge, Justice Gray possessed exceptional intelligence and a deep respect for upholding the rule of law. And as a prosecutor, I had the privilege of trying cases before him. In fact, I tried my first murder case before Justice Gray. He was tough, but always fair, and I know that I and many of my peers in the New Hampshire bar learned a great deal from him. I deeply admired his integrity and his principled dedication to the law.

With Justice Gray’s passing, New Hampshire has lost a devoted public servant and Rye has lost a beloved member of the community. My thoughts and prayers are with his wife Cornelia and his entire family. At this sad time, I am grateful to have known a person who exemplified the very best of New Hampshire’s tradition of public service.

TRIBUTE TO JOSEPH CONKLIN LANIER, II

• Mr. BENNET. Mr. President, today, August 2, 2011, I wish to thank Joseph Conklin Lanier, II for his service to the United States of America as a member of the U.S. Navy during World War II, and for choosing to make Colorado his home. He has been a life of service for Colorado and for all Americans.

A native Southerner, Mr. Lanier was among the first African Americans to serve on the bench of the United States Supreme Court. During his tenure, President Truman signed the Executive order that desegregated the Armed Forces. He fought with the 23rd Special CB, “Seabees,” a unit of the 3rd Marine Division, in some of the most horrific battles of the South Pacific.

I had the honor of meeting Mr. Lanier this past week during his visit to Washington, DC, with The Greatest Generations Foundation, a Colorado nonprofit organization which organizes trips for WWII veterans to return to locations where they have served.

We can all learn from Mr. Lanier. He entered the Armed Forces at the age of 17 in order to help support his family. He served honorably from 1944 to 1946, supporting operations in Iwo Jima and Okinawa, and achieved a rank not commonly held by African Americans at the time.

Upon returning home from the war and finding strict laws and practices of segregation still in place throughout the South, Mr. Lanier followed the advice of his father regarding the importance of education as the primary tool for bettering one’s future, and finished high school. With the aid of the G.I. bill, he enrolled in the Pharmacy School at Xavier University in New Orleans and took heavy course loads to make sure he completed his degree in 4 years. Despite the challenges of segregation, he excelled and succeeded in his career, while keeping a constructive attitude, a trait he attributes to the teachings of his father.

Mr. Lanier is a role model for the many servicemen who reside in Colorado and the veterans who elect to make Colorado their home after serving in the Armed Forces. His story exemplifies the successful transition that many returning veterans have made from active duty to civilian life.

Although he is a native of the South, and has traveled to a number of locations in the United States, it struck me as interesting that, out of all the places he traveled while in the Navy, Mr. Lanier chose to make Denver, CO, his home. In his autobiographical essay, “My War on Two Fronts,” Lanier recollects that during a period of leave, he had a stopover in Denver, where in a relatively brief period of time, the State showed him its character. A White female clerk at a drugstore, sensing his hesitation about sitting down, and invited him to take a seat and enjoy his ice cream. Later, when visiting a local movie theatre, he was surprised and delighted to find that there was no sign directing him to sit in segregated seating in the balcony. Mr. Lanier felt so welcomed by our State that he decided to make Colorado his home after the Navy. Following his graduation from pharmacy school, he worked in pharmacies and in hospitals, and eventually opened up his own drug store. Mr. Lanier found that, in Colorado, his voice could be heard on critical issues of the day, including the fight for fair housing measures to end discrimination in housing. Today, Mr. Lanier and his wife of more than 50 years, Eula Inez Long, continue to make Colorado their home.

Mr. President and all other Members here today, please join me in honoring the life and continued work of Joseph Conklin Lanier, II. A man who, despite all the discrimination he faced, is proud to be an American. A man who, despite returning home after the war and being denied his right to vote while wearing his uniform, is proud of his distinguished service in the Navy. A man who recognizes that even in the face of adversity, one can find a way forward and help our country to become a better place, a more perfect union. We should be proud of our service and patriotism. I thank and commend Joseph Lanier, a great citizen of Colorado.

TRIBUTE TO PAUL SANDOVAL

• Mr. BENNET. Mr. President, on behalf of all Coloradans, I want to recognize the extraordinary character and lifetime achievements of Colorado native Paul Sandoval. His far-reaching accomplishments—from civil rights to community organizing to business and political expression, and an unwavering commitment to making Colorado a better place, and reflect, in noblest form, the enterprising spirit of the West.

I am sad to tell my colleagues that Paul has contracted locally advanced pancreatic cancer, and the Sandoval family is going through a difficult time now. And as he struggles to beat this terrible disease—and we need him to prevail—I cannot help but be reminded of all he has achieved in life, and all the social change he has helped bring about. To honor Paul and his many contributions, I would like to share a few moments from his life.

Paul and his wife Paula have for decades run a tamale shop in Denver—La Casita—that has served as the city’s unofficial epicenter of political activity. According to Wellington Webb, the former Denver mayor whom Sandoval first met while the two worked delivering groceries, Paul could always be found “holding court” at his restaurant with firemen and city officials.

“T’m just a lowly tamale maker,” Sandoval has grown accustomed to saying. But his life suggests there is
