Our great leader, the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. GEPHARDT), has eloquently referred to issues that impact everyday people as kitchen table issues. Across kitchen tables of our Air Force pilots, spouses wonder why, with our surplus, why given their outstanding valor, we place their husbands and wives at risk.

Across the kitchen tables in my own hometown, for the people who work at Pratt & Whitney Aircraft, who wonder why, with the largest defense budget in recent memory, why they will be laid off after competing for and winning an engine contract that the Air Force assured them would be built, why is the House cutting what the Air Force assured would be their top priority.

In so many ways, Mr. Chairman, this is a great defense budget, and it has done much for our troops and it has done much more the defense of this Nation.

Members are going to bring home much to their districts, but for me over the break I will be sitting down across kitchen tables, on shop floors, in living rooms, trying to explain to people I grew up with, my neighbors, that their fate lies in the hands of a conference committee. It is my sincere hope that this end story will be one we can be proud of, but I cannot, in good conscience, vote for this bill.

Mr. Chairman, I rise to address a very serious issue of national security raised by the cutting of the F-22 and virtual elimination of the number one priority of the U.S. Air Force.

Let me first acknowledge and thank the leadership of the Armed Services Committee and the fine job that Mr. SPENCE and Mr. SKELTON have done and I commend them for the mark on the F-22. The issue of cost associated with the program is one the committee addressed and requires the Secretary of the Air Force to report on their continuing efforts to meet the mandated spending caps.

I'm heartened as well by the actions of the Senate Armed Services Committee, the Senate Appropriation Committee, the Defense Department, and the Clinton Administration, all who support the F-22 for the strategic importance, air superiority, and dominance it provides our troops. Most recently demonstrated by those brave Air Force warriors who won the war in Kosovo.

Let me also acknowledge the great respect I have for JACK MURTHA, JERRY LEWIS, NORM DICKS, DUKE CUNNINGHAM and others on Appropriations, Subcommittee on Defense who have felt the program is too costly to continue given our budgetary constraints and cost overruns in the project. I rise without malice, and ask these fine appropriators who are headed to conference hear the concerns not only of legislators, but from the guys in the front lines, the men and women who put their lives on the line, the ones we ask to fly in harm's way.

Their first concern is the nation they protect, and the comrades they fly with. They know little of politics, budget caps, and conference committees. They only know they have a job to perform, they are given orders, and they execute. In Kosovo that was over 30,000 sorties, without a single life lost. They are the heroes, they are the nation's Jedi warriors. In gratitude for their service, we are preparing today to cut the only program that guarantees them air dominance, while trying to persuade them that retrofitting F-15 is the answer for the future.

I visited several of these pilots at Langley Air Force Base, I told them how proud I was of their effort. They asked me why we are cutting the F-22 and stressed their dismay at how counter productive it is to try to bolt on technology to the F-15. To quote Major Jake Timm, "We would get only 1/3 the capability of the F-22 at 90% of the cost—it will cost $41 billion to retrofit the F-15 and $40 billion to go forward with the F-22." Or as another young warrior said, "How many of us coming home in coffins will it take for Congress to understand how important tactical superiority and advanced avionics are to the pilots who carry out these missions." Their classified presentations were even more vivid, and it seems incomprehensible to them and frankly to me, that knowing our enemies capability, we would place troops in harms way of enemy constructed death zones of the 21st Century with 20th Century technology. We have talked all year long about morale and retention, our pilots are the best trained fighters in the world and would fly anything into battle for their country, now to come home only to find cuts in their top priority fighter, turning Congressional commitment into a hollow promise. For them, this is not some frill or back bench item. This is their future. Our great leader Dick Gephardt has eloquently referred to issues that impact every day people as kitchen table issues, across the kitchen tables of our Air Force pilots' spouses wonder why with our surplus, why given their outstanding valor, would we place their husbands and wives at risk. And across the kitchen tables in my home town, people who work at Pratt & Whitney wonder why with the largest defense budget in recent memory. Why they will be laid off, why the engine they competed for and won, will not be built. Why the House is cutting what the Air Force assured them was their top priority.

In so many ways the defense bill has done much for our troops and for the defense of the nation and Members will bring home much to their Districts. But for me over the break, I'll be sitting down across kitchen tables, on shop floors, and living rooms trying to explain to the people I grew up with, that their fate lies in the hands of a conference committee. It is my sincere hope that the end story is one we can be proud of. But I cannot in good conscience vote for this bill.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. BARR of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Texas (Mr. SAM JOHNSON).

Mr. SAM JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I am appalled at this discussion.

I think so much of the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. MURTHA) and the gentleman from California (Mr. LEWIS). I know they are patriots of the first degree. We are all interested in the best for this Nation. For 50 years, every American soldier has gone to war confident that the United States had air superiority. Cancelling the F-22, and that is what this is, means we cannot guarantee air supremacy in future conflict, supremacy over the battlefield, and any new aircraft needs it. Without the F-22, I do not think the joint strike fighter will be able to carry out its primary mission, and the Air Force backs that, and they say that it will cost just as much to retrofit that airplane as to buy an aircraft that is already there.

Our Nation's joint forces must be free from attack, free to maneuver, and free to attack on the battlefield whenever. That is what this airplane does. It has already been delayed 9 years. We need it now, as the gentleman from California (Mr. CUNNINGHAM) pointed out earlier, and we should have had it now. There is no alternative to the F-22. The joint strike fighter was not designed for air superiority and redesigning it will dramatically increase the cost.

We have already done away with some of our electronic warfare defense in the Air Force. We will have to regenerate that.

They are planning to do away with the F-117 because the F-22 is a stealth fighter. They are going to have to keep that around. That is going to cost more. An upgraded F-15 does not provide the same dominance that the F-22 program would provide. The Secretary of Defense vehemently disagrees with the decision to defund the F-22, and he stated he cannot accept a defense bill that kills this cornerstone program.

The cancellation of the F-22 will adversely affect over 151,000 jobs in the coming years. Billions of dollars in contracts will be canceled. It affects 42 States.

I flew the F-15 when I was active in the Air Force. That has been over 25 years ago. Can my colleagues believe that we are trying to retrofit an F-15 that will be in service for over 33 years by the time the F-22 achieves initial operational capability? And if a 33-year-old aircraft had been used in Korea, we would have been fighting migs with Sopwith Camel bi-planes. If the 33-year-old aircraft had been used just in the Gulf War, we would have been fighting third-generation Soviet fighters with Vietnam era F-4s.

Do we think our active fighters would have fled from that threat? I do not think so.

The American people will not tolerate parity or an aerial war of attrition. Parity is not acceptable. Our Air Force must have the capability to dominate the sky. Let us build this airplane. It is a stroke for freedom.

Mr. LARSON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from California (Ms. SANCHEZ).

Ms. SANCHEZ. Mr. Chairman, I want to thank the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. LARSON) for yielding me this time.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of continued funding for the U.S. Air Force's F-22 advanced tactical program. The House passed H.R. 1401, the fiscal year 2000 defense authorization bill, on June 10 and fully supported the F-22 program. In fact, the program was fully funded by both the defense authorization and appropriation bills acted on by the Senate.

I believe the F-22 program is critical to our country's defense. If the decision to cut funding is enacted, we lose the cornerstone of our Nation's global air strategy for the next century. Budget cuts are tough today. We must choose how we spend our resources and act prudently. It is an opportunity cost. We cannot have everything. We must choose wisely to spend our resources, but we should not do that unilaterally.

What happened to the people who deal in committee and try to understand these programs? That decision-making process has been taken away from us.

What do we lose when we give up the F-22 program? Well, let me say the proposed cuts jeopardize our next century's warfighting capability. It places our forces at higher risk. The F-22 is the first stealthy fighter attack aircraft that permits our pilots to destroy enemy aircraft and ground-based air defenses at greater stand-off ranges than the current F-15 fighter. An upgraded F-15 does not have that technology. We must have the F-22 for the next century.

There are at least five foreign fighters already starting to eclipse the F-15 and many of these planes are on the international market. Let us work together. Let us look back at this.

The F-22's attributes of stealth, supercruise and integrated avionics are essential for enabling air dominance to counter advanced SAMs, emerging threat aircraft, and advanced air-to-air missiles.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, I yield what time he may consume to the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. SAXTON).

Mr. SAXTON. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of the F-22 program.

Mr. Chairman, I rise to express my concern about the potential decision to eliminate funding for production of the F-22 Raptor.

Our Department of Defense has consistently expressed a need for the development of the F-22 for many years. Indeed, Secretary Cohen has called the F-22 program "the cornerstone of our nation's global air power in the 21st century."

I agree that the F-22 program has faced unusual development challenges due to its many advances in aviation technology. I also recognize the need for the Armed Services Committee and this Congress to engage in continuing and intensive oversight of the program.

Yet it is premature to close the production line and effectively end the F-22 program at this time. Congress should allow the Air Force sufficient time and aircraft for the intensive flight-testing and evaluation needed to assess the F-22's value. Only then can the Congress make an informed decision on the future of such an important component of our national security plans.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from California (Mr. CUNNINGHAM).

Mr. CUNNINGHAM. Mr. Chairman, first of all, the authors of this amendment I want to congratulate in the most professional way, and I think it is a good debate. Saying the F-15 does not have the same capability as the F-22, no one disputes that. That is like saying that when I was flying the F-4 phantom it was as good as the F-14 that we were building, but I would not want to put so much money in the F-14 that it kept me from surviving in the combat that I was flying in today.

The question is, I would not want to fly the F-22. I think it is going to combat the SU-35 and the SU-37 out, but I have talked to the F-15 drivers. I have also flown the F-15 and the F-16 and the Phantom and some of these assets.

Our F-15 drivers are saying, "Go Duke."

My colleagues say that these bolt-on equipment that they are spending, the Air Force is already investing in the A9X and the helmet site and the radar that will keep up with the jammer, but they are doing it at this level because the funding is not there.

What I would recommend is that General Ryan goes to the President and says, Mr. President, is this really an emergency? I talked to the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. SKELTON) about it. We have all of these unfunded requirements. Now, these unfunded requirements mean life and death.

I have a program here that is costing $200 million an airplane; and what I need is the emergency supplemental, maybe for Kosovo, to add money; but at the same time, if there is an airplane that costs $200 million here and only 5 percent of it has been tested and the cost traditionally has gone to here, can any of my colleagues justify paying $250 million or $300 million for one airplane? I cannot.

I need Lockheed to come down on the price, and I need the extra funding to fund these things so that the kids that are flying today, I agree, I hated politicians when I was flying. I thought they only got us killed, and I am dead serious. They do not care about politicians. They want to survive, and that is what I am trying to do, is make sure that these F-14, F-15, F-18 drivers that are going to have to fly in this 10-year span until the F-22 comes on the line in full procurement, that they live; that they have a chance against those assets.

I have told the people, I have a plant that may close down in my own district if the F-22 does not close. If it comes between jobs in my district and the security of this country, I will choose security 100 percent of the time, and the lives of these kids.

This is not political for us. It is something that we believe desperately in. Yes, this is high stakes poker, and I think that costs in expensive aircraft and equipment, we need to hold industry's toe to the line so that our kids will be safe and we need the additional funds that we do not have in the defense budget.

Mr. LARSON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1½ minutes to the gentleman from Mississippi (Mr. SHOWS).

Mr. SHOWS. Mr. Chairman, our Nation's top guns are being put into jeopardy. Like great balls of fire, the F-22, men and women who fly them, have responded courageously, faithfully, and successfully in an instant's notice around our globe. They have protected U.S. interests and U.S. citizens, and they have done so with precision and accuracy that no other plane or pilot has ever been capable of doing.

Without the F-22 air power, our air power is greatly diminished. Any arguments against funding the F-22 just do not hold water. An F-15 upgraded would still lack F-22 capabilities and cost essentially the same, and the joint strike fighter was not designed for the missions carried out by the F-22 and costs dramatically more to redesign.

All of these combat-ready aircraft complement each other and are needed. Some want to question the costs and they want to question the cost of the F-22 program that senior Air Force officials say is the best managed program in the Department of Defense today. Some want to close the books on a program for 15 years of effort and $16 billion in investment has already been spent on the F-22. What a waste it would be to shut down the F-22 program.

Some want to stop the F-22 program even though a firm fixed price on the first eight aircraft has been established. Contractors cannot change the price tag, so this means no risk to the taxpayers.

This program means, and this is close to my heart, $60 million over the life of the program in my district. We have lost 3,000 jobs in my district because of NAFTA. Now we stand a chance of losing more jobs. I think any way one breaks it down, it is a good important program. The F-22 should be funded.

Mr. BARR of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, I am proud to yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Georgia (Mr. ISAKSON).

Mr. ISAKSON. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. BARR) for the opportunity to share in this 2 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, I want to acknowledge at the outset of my remarks how much I have appreciated the gentleman from Florida (Mr. YOUNG), the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. MURTHA), and the gentleman from California (Mr. LEWIS) in the past 10 days. They have allowed me the opportunity to express my opinion, and they have done so sincerely and not just as a token and a pat on the head.

I want to take the remarks of the gentleman from California (Mr. CUNNINGHAM), and I want to share it precisely with him for a second. He said he may lose a plant in his district. But if he, rather, had the choice between jobs in his district and the United States security, he would always choose security.

Although this plant is not in my district, it is in the district of the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. BARR), many of its employees are. The gentleman from Georgia and I share this thing close. So it is natural for me as a Congressman of the Sixth District to argue for jobs in my district. But I am here to argue for the security of America.

I just give my colleagues a couple of points. In the 21st Century, tactical theater attacks like we have had in Iraq, like we have had in the Balkans, will be the prototype. Our ability to knock out radar early, surface-to-air-missiles early, anti-aircraft early is what allows the rest of the United States military to act precisely without the loss of American lives or ground troops.

The 15, the 14, the 15X will not have stealthy capability equal to the 22. They will not have capacity equal to the F-22. America will be sacrificing if it turns its back and pauses, if I give my colleagues the word "pause," or kills, which could be in fact the correct word, the F-22, then we are placing the security of our country at a higher risk than it would be if we fully funded the F-22.

So while I thank the chairman, the subcommittee chairman, and the ranking member for the courtesy they have shown me, and I mean that, I hope that, during the weeks ahead as we go to conference, they, too, will think of the security of the United States of America because we must always put it above even a job in our own district. I rise for precisely that reason today.

Mr. LARSON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Connecticut (Ms. DELAURO).

Ms. DELAURO. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the Defense Appropriations bill overall, which includes a number of very vital items, including a 4.8 percent pay raise for military personnel, additional funds to enhance troop recruitment and retention, 36 Black Hawks which are the premier helicopter in the sky today.

The bill also includes over $180 million for breast cancer, ovarian cancer, research, and prostate cancer. Items that are so critically important to the future of this Nation.

But let me express my concern today, as my colleagues have, about the $1.8 billion cut for six F-22s, which are vital to long-term U.S. national security. The Secretary of Defense, Bill Cohen, seven former Secretaries of Defense have stated that, if we cancel the F-22, we cannot guarantee air superiority in future conflicts.

The F-22 was the world's first stealth air superiority fighter. Replacing the F-15 is critical to maintaining our defense superiority in the next century. Its stealth technology, speed, and ability to counter advanced surface-to-air and air-to-air missiles is unsurpassed.

The F-22 engine is easier to fix than any other fighter's engine. The engine allows the aircraft to fly farther and faster on less fuel.

Our first priority must always be the long-term safety and the security of American families. With the F-22, our Air Force will be able to protect America from the threats to our national security in the next century.

I urge my colleagues to address this critical issue in the conference in the weeks ahead.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Arkansas (Mr. DICKEY).

Mr. DICKEY. Mr. Chairman, I support the bill.

Mr. Chairman, I am pleased today to stand in support of the Fiscal Year 2000 Defense Appropriations bill. The subcommittee and the full committee worked long and hard to build the best mix between current readiness needs and future capability requirements, no small task in the face of recent force reductions and increased operational tempo. For that effort I would like to congratulate Chairman LEWIS, for his leadership; Mr. MURTHA, for his bipartisan efforts; and Mr. YOUNG, who as chairman of the full committee and former chairman of this subcommittee, provided helpful guidance.

I do not need to add to the long list of anecdotes, Mr. Chairman, about our serious readiness shortfall. We have no need to remind Members of the aircraft that sit idle awaiting replacement parts, of the combat ships that head out understaffed, or even of the serious recruiting shortfalls that foretell of future readiness problems. These examples are all a matter of public record, even if they are not currently a matter of public awareness.

So the subcommittee comes to the floor today with what we think is the best solution available to solve these problems. The bill reported by the full committee provides a total of $266.1 billion for the next fiscal year, which meets both the budget caps and the funding levels set in the 302(b) allocation. This represents a $15.5 billion increase over the previous fiscal year, and a $2.8 billion increase over the President's budget request.

Highlights include a pay increase of nearly five percent for our soldiers, sailors, airmen, and marines, $225 million for basic housing allowances so that military families can share part of the American Dream, $163.6 million to make up for training shortfalls, and $50 million for domestic defense against weapons of mass destruction. The subcommittee has also recommended the procurement of important readiness items to combat immediate threats to global security, and the continuation of vital R&D, an area that the President continues to under fund.

Now much has been made of our decision to reallocate the procurement dollars requested for the F-22 raptor to other, more pressing, readiness needs. For years we have told the Pentagon that they could not support all of their needs with the money they requested. For years we told them that procurement, research and development, and readiness will suffer. Despite the minimalist requests, we continued to add billions to the budget, all the while under constant fire for "porking up the defense budget."

This year, we have continued to increase the defense bill by $2.8 billion over the President's request. These increases include pay raises to get military families off of welfare, new EA-6B radar jamming aircraft so that missiles cannot track our pilots, and $500 million to clear the backlog of base maintenance requests. At the same time, we asked Department of Defense to get serious about their fiscal management and force modernization plans. I am particularly interested in learning why the Department will request six planes that are only five percent flight tested, and no new KC-130's to replace units that could fall out of the sky tomorrow.

With an eye on recent conflicts, we must consider the course for American Military Might in the twenty-first century, and whether that course will steer us toward the vigilante peace that we so desperately desire. I believe that a healthy debate will lead us to determine whether the F-22 is a viable part of our military future, or whether we should focus our efforts elsewhere. Paramount to any decision will be our ability to respond to current and future conflicts and decisive and overwhelming force.

At the turn of the century, on the edge of a new millennium, we face a complex world and a muddled global security picture. The cold war is over, but we find ourselves increasingly engaged in regional conflicts with global implications. I urge Members to support his bill as a responsible preparation to continue our efforts to expand democracy, and as an opportunity to address current readiness and force modernization problems.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, it is my pleasure to yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. SKELTON).

Mr. SKELTON. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman from California for yielding and giving me this moment to speak.

Let me first compliment and congratulate this committee and this subcommittee on this defense bill.

I started out this year in a comparable committee, the Committee on Armed Services, saying that this should be the year of the troops. To everyone's credit on the Committee on Armed Services and on the Subcommittee on Defense and the full Committee on Appropriations, they have helped make that come true.

The young men and young women of our military will not only receive pension reform, but they will receive pay increases long overdue. On the subject of this particular issue which is before us, there is the old saying: The more emotion, the less reason. Let us look in the past and take a chapter from the past and particularly B-2, which by the way, as the gentleman from Washington (Mr. DICKS) pointed out so clearly, what a wonderful job it did in the recent Kosovo conflict. I am so proud of what they did, the young men and women assigned in the Whiteman Air Force base and the B-2 509th Wing.

The B-2 debate was over several years. It was arduous, hair pulling, and difficult. But at the end of the day, there was a decision made by the committees and backed up by this Congress on what we needed. This is not a matter of F-15Es versus the F-22, because we are comparing apples to oranges. The F-22 is the air-to-air fighting. The F-15E is an air-to-ground system. So let us not look at it that way. Of course, would I like to have F-15Es? We would like to have more, of course.

But what I think we should do is, with as much reason as we can, look at the dollars that are available, look at the need that is necessary for our national interests, and make that decision along the lines that we did for the B-2. America will come out well.

Mr. LARSON. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. GEJDENSON), the dean of our delegation.

Mr. GEJDENSON. Mr. Chairman, I join with my colleagues. We are at an interesting part of this process. As the review of this system has gone, there is obviously both national security issues here and parochial issues, and all of us are suspect to some of that.

But when we look at the legislative process here, the Executive Branch thought it made sense to continue with this plane. Three of the other committees with jurisdiction, both the authorizing committee at the House and the two committees in the Senate thought it made sense to go forward with this plane. Miraculously, the money disappeared from the House Committee on Appropriations to other worthy causes.

That is what we always have to juggle here. There are lots of worthy causes we face. The kinds of arguments against the system are the kinds of arguments we always hear on new systems: Well, it is not quite as good as it is going to be, it really does not give us that additional benefit. The experts have said it does give us that additional benefit.

Frankly, as we read today in the paper, the same arguments were made as new generations of planes were brought forward in the past. The F-14, the F-15, the F-16, the F-18, in each case, there was a chorus that said these planes did not give us the additional capabilities that we needed.

The one lesson it seems to me that is clear that we should have learned in the last several conflicts is air power is one of the critical ingredients, that strikes of missiles from planes and other systems, that those systems that can deliver our force, without putting our own servicemen and women in harm's way, are of a critical nature.

It seems to me that this process has kind of jumped the rails that, through the executive, the two Senate committees, and the authorizing committee in the House, this system was deemed to be worthy. When we got to the appropriation process, it suddenly lost all that merit.

I think we have to go back and take a harder look at it. I think there is nothing wrong with trying to get a better price out of defense contractors. All of us have them in our districts. They do an important part for our country. Their prime goal is to make sure we have good systems. But we have to make sure those systems come to the taxpayers at reasonable cost.

I hope this process will force us to re-examine all the costs across the board, but to make sure that we do not abandon this system that, in the general recognition, has been a system that would advance our capabilities and give our servicemen and women a far better system than they have today.

Mr. Chairman, I rise to express grave concerns about the cut of $1.8 billion in F-22 production funding in this bill—a move that many believe signals the end of the program.

Mr. Chairman, one of the things that makes the American armed forces so powerful is our unquestioned supremacy in the skies. Our military chiefs base their doctrine on our ability to achieve this.

The F-22 is the Air Force's number one priority, because it will ensure air dominance far out into the future.

Let me quote Richard Hallion, the Air Force Historian, who has an op-ed in the Washington Post today:

... After Korea we took air supremacy for granted, and Vietnam showed the sorry results. Over North Vietnam, American airmen barely had air superiority ...

He also notes:

Many of the same arguments made against the F-22 were made in the 1970s against the F-14, F-15, F-16 and F-18: They were too advanced, too complex, too costly, etc. The wisdom of producing them has since been proven repeatedly over the Middle East and the Balkans.

But what of the future, Mr. Chairman? Surface-to-air missile systems, radars, and tactical fighters are still being developed in other nations around the world. In twenty years, who knows where they might have proliferated? The answer—we can't know.

Sure, today our dominance is unquestioned. But if we decide not to prepare for the future, we jeopardize our future.

It's the Air Force's job to seize the skies, Mr. Chairman. It's also the Air Force's job to make sure we can keep seizing them—tomorrow, in a year, in ten or twenty years.

We have to recall the wisdom we had in the 1970s when we went with the F-15. We need to ensure that the air dominance we rely on will still be there for us in the unforeseeable crises that loom two decades away.

Mr. BARR of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from Nevada (Mr. GIBBONS).

Mr. GIBBONS. Mr. Chairman, I rise to tell my colleagues that this bill does a lot for our troops around America. But I just cannot support the elimination of the F-22.

Readiness, my colleagues, is the key issue, and it is based upon modernization of our forces. The issue is whether or not we are going to give our young men and women who are fighting on the front line the technology to win that fight.

I remember one time when I was a young boy, someone came to me when I was first learning about defense; and he said, "Son, you never want to bring a knife to a gun fight. You lose every time." This saying came to mind when I looked at this issue about the F-22 because it is an issue about technology.

In that debate over this technology, we have heard about U.S. successes in the Persian Gulf and even in Kosovo that provided a rationale to "pause" production of the F-22. Upon further and closer examination, that argument just does not fly, and let me tell my colleagues why. Because the Serbian as well as the Iraqi Air Forces never truly engaged our pilots in a fight or sustained aerial combat. In any future combat, it would be foolish of us to presuppose the bad guys would be afraid to challenge our forces.

Mr. Chairman, we have heard arguments that the U.S. successes in the Persian Gulf War and the Kosovo Conflict provide the rationale to "pause" the production of the F-22. However, upon closer inspection, this argument does not fly, most notably because neither the Iraqis nor the Serbian Air Forces actually engaged our fighters in sustained aerial combat.

There is no doubt in anyone's mind that our forces performed brilliantly, however it would be tactically inept to pre-suppose that future "bad guys" will be afraid to send fighters up to challenge our air forces, as the Iraqis and Serbians were.

Further, we should not penalize the U.S. Air Force for being "without peer" in the world by not funding the technology to keep them there in the future. It is incumbent upon Congress to ensure that when the next adversary we face decides to fight, and not run away, our pilots are equipped with the aircraft and the technology that will allow continued dominance in the air.

I would like to read an excerpt from a statement written by seven former Secretaries of Defense, men who were chosen to lead our nation's armed forces, and whose commitment to national security is without question.

These men, William Perry, Caspar Weinberger, Frank Carlucci, Donald Rumsfeld, Richard Cheney, Harold Brown and James Schlesinger, all comprehend the importance of preserving American command of the air and state:

It is not enough to say that something better may be available in the future. Something better is always available in the future. Serious threats to American air superiority may arise sooner, and the nation's security cannot tolerate a loss of command of the air. Congress and the Administration must focus on this fundamental reality, and fully fund the nation's only truly stealthy air superiority fighter.

That fighter is the F-22 Raptor.

Secretary of Defense Cohen stated last week that, "The proposed cut jeopardizes our future warfighting capability and will place our forces at higher risk." He went on to say that he could not accept a defense bill that kills this cornerstone program. A pretty powerful statement from the man who has been chosen to lead our armed forces today and into the millennium.

Let me also point out Mr. Chairman, that this is not simply an Air Force program. This fighter provides the basis for all joint warfighting in the future. Why? No U.S. soldier has been killed by hostile air power in over forty years. In order to assure that we provide our Army, Navy, Marine and Air Force ground personnel this same level of protection, we must provide for the future of air dominance today.

We must be far-sighted in our modernization efforts and cutting of $1.8 billion from the F-22 account is myopic, at best.

I'll close by saying that it's interesting to note that the $1.8 billion spent on the F-22 Raptor this year is equivalent to roughly 10 hours' worth of Federal spending. In my mind, a bargain to bring air dominance to our nation's armed forces in the future.

Mr. Chairman, I urge all my colleagues to support the funding level for the F-22 Raptor that was passed in the House Defense Authorization Bill and the other Chamber's Defense Authorization and Appropriations Bills. The time is now.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. PORTER) from the Committee on Appropriations for purposes of a colloquy.

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman from California (Mr. LEWIS), the distinguished chairman of the subcommittee for this opportunity to raise my concerns with section 8128 of the bill.

This provision would accelerate the auction for certain frequency spectrum, and I want to be sure that, in doing so, Congress sends the signal that it is not releasing the FCC from its existing obligations to perform a proper allocation and licensing process. If not, important public safety uses like police and fire services operating in adjacent bands would be exposed to serious harm. Further, by ensuring that the FCC completes a responsible evaluation of the public interest in allocating spectrum for this auction, the FCC can help to secure a more successful auction for the American taxpayer.

Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from California (Mr. LEWIS).

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman from Illinois for yielding to me. It is correct to say the FCC does have an obligation under law to make a public interest determination, prior to auctioning this spectrum, concerning which telecommunications services should be eligible to operate on it. The FCC must structure its service and auction rules so as to implement the public interest determination.

It is important to ensure that the FCC may not, for example, permit any use of this spectrum that might result in harmful interference to public safety systems, especially those used by States and localities in their important crime and fire prevention pursuits which operate on adjacent bands to what would be auctioned here.

Mr. PORTER. Mr. Chairman, I commend the distinguished gentleman from California, the chairman of the Subcommittee on Defense, for bringing this bill to the floor, and I seek his commitment to ensure that the resolution of our shared concerns are clarified in conference.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, I am very pleased to work with the gentleman as we go towards conference. I am delighted to have his cooperation in this matter.

Mr. BARR of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentlewoman from Connecticut (Mrs. JOHNSON).

Mrs. JOHNSON of Connecticut. Mr. Chairman, I have the greatest respect for the gentleman from California (Mr. LEWIS), subcommittee chairman, and the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. MURTHA), ranking member.

However, I must rise to express my grave reservations and concerns about the decision to cut $1.8 billion in procurement funding the F-22.

The Air Force and the Department of Defense developed the F-22 as a modern air superiority fighter to seize and hold air dominance in future conflicts. The F-22 is the cornerstone of our Nation's global air power in the 21st century and will ensure our technological lead for the next 30 years, just like the F-15 did 25 years ago.

Pausing or delaying production puts our forces at higher risk and hurts thousands of workers whose skills are critical in fighter sophistication and safety and reliability. In addition, delaying the program just 2 years will add approximately $8 billion in completely unnecessary costs to the F-22 program.

No matter how much money this bill throws at the F-15, the cost of sustaining the current F-15 fleet will increasingly compromise Air Force modernization.

Mr. Chairman, I urge support of the amendment.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. BUYER).

Mr. BUYER. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time, and first of all I would like to discuss the appropriations bill from the standpoint of the authorizers looking at this bill out of the personnel accounts.

With regard to recruiting and retention and retirement, I extend great compliments to the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. MURTHA) and also to the gentleman from California (Mr. LEWIS) as the chairman. Without the military personnel recruiting initiatives in the bill, the request for military services, I think, would fall way short.

I would like to extend great compliments on the pay initiatives, not only the reforming of the pay tables but the 4.8 percent pay raise will go a long way. We also have many different retention bonuses, pro-pays and flight pays which will be very meaningful not only in the NCO mid-grade officer level but throughout the force.

Mr. MURTHA. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BUYER. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. MURTHA. Mr. Chairman, I just want to compliment the gentleman for his effort in making sure that the troops did get their pay raise and the way it was apportioned. All of us are indebted, including the military services, for the gentleman's work in that particular area.

Mr. BUYER. Reclaiming my time, Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for those comments.

What will also be very important on the retention issue is the retirement initiatives. Repeal of the REDUX will go a long way. When I think about this bill, I just want to say to every soldier, sailor, airman and marine, "This bill is about you."

But, Mr. Chairman, I have a question for the gentleman from California (Mr. LEWIS). As I reviewed the appropriations, the mark, I noticed that there were some, well, I do not want to be as strong as to say inequities, but I cannot find a better word for it. Out of the guard and reserve equipment accounts I compliment both the chairman and ranking member for almost an $800 million plus-up for their accounts, but 83 percent of that is dedicated right now for the air guard and the army guard, with only 17 percent for all other reserve components.

For instance, Mr. Chairman, the Air Force National Guard. Forty-three percent of that pot goes to them, while only 3 percent goes to the Air Force Reserve. What I would like to do with the chairman is have an assurance that he can work with myself and the gentleman from California (Mr. HUNTER) to bring equity to the report language as we move to conference.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BUYER. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, let me say to my colleague that I not only appreciate his work on the authorizing committee, but also on the subcommittee he chairs and has these serious responsibilities of which we speak.

I want to assure the gentleman that I intend to work closely with him, as well as the gentleman from California (Mr. HUNTER), following our debate today as we go to conference, as well as in the years ahead.

Mr. BUYER. I thank the gentleman for his time, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. LARSON) so that he might distribute that time.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. LARSON) has 5 additional minutes.

There was no objection.

Mr. LARSON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from South Carolina (Mr. SPRATT), and I want to thank him personally for the help and mentorship that he has provided me throughout the year, and especially on this issue.

I also want to thank the gentleman from California (Mr. LEWIS) for his generosity with the time, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. SPRATT. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time, and let me say first of all that I do not have a dog in this fight. I represent Shaw Air Force Base and I represent flyers who fought in the Gulf and flyers who fought from Aviano, General Dan Leaf, and they believe in stealth and they have convinced me it is the way to go. They also believe in the mission of air superiority, and I am here to speak for them.

I am also here to speak as an old cost analyst. That is where I cut my teeth in the Pentagon. And what we were taught as cost analysts is, the first rule of analysis is forget sunk cost. If we get to the sunk cost of this program, and I am told it is about $20 billion, I do not know as much as I should to be talking, the numbers change dramatically. Because the relevant comparison is not the program unit cost, in procurement parlance, the relevant cost comparison for F-15X purposes is procurement costs.

Program unit cost includes everything, divided by the number of units we are going to buy. Procurement unit cost includes just those costs we are going to procure, spare parts and air-space ground equipment, prospectively. The difference in this case is $183 billion to $187 billion for program unit cost, but $117 billion then-year dollars for procurement unit cost. At $117 billion, this airplane becomes very, very competitive, just in cost dollars, with anything the F-15X would look like.

Secondly, we were taught to look at life cycle cost. That is critically important. What are we worried about right now? O&M. That is where life cycle cost gets captured. The life cycle cost of this system, if it comes in as planned, is supposed to be significantly less. About 37 percent less.

The gentleman from California (Mr. CUNNINGHAM) is smiling. I do not know whether it will be retained, but at least that is the program objective, 37 percent less. We are supposed to be able to get 8½ sorties per airplane before major maintenance with this airplane, as opposed to about five with the F-15. Over time that makes a big difference, if indeed that objective is realized.

Finally, Mr. Chairman, we need to look at commonality. One of the things that is being developed in this program in conjunction with other programs is the engine. The gentleman from California (Mr. CUNNINGHAM) was just pointing out to us that the engine in this airplane is the same engine as in the JSF. If we buy fewer units of this engine, because we are not buying 400 or 500 of these airplanes, the JSF is going up significantly, let me tell my colleagues.

So this is a way of spreading cost, buying the new engine for the same airplane, and we should really commend the Air Force and all the services for trying to get together in one common airframe and using one common engine as well.

Finally, there are related costs, associated costs. Don Wright, as the Secretary of the Air Force, when he was trying to sell the B-2, had a favorite chart. He had all the things that did not have to fly when the B-2 flew a mission, all the escorts and the chasers and the associated aircraft that did not have to fly when the B-2 flew, because it made the single-unit cost of the B-2 look like a much better deal. Just keep that in mind. Air superiority matters when it keeps the AWACS flying, the JSTARS flying, because it makes all the rest of this conventional stuff work.

Mr. BARR of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. FOLEY).

Mr. FOLEY. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the bill we are considering today but in opposition to the portion that cuts all funding for procurement of the F-22 aircraft. If the F-22 is eliminated, it could be decades before we are able to replace our standard air superiority aircraft, the F-15, with a suitable replacement.

In future conflicts this could mean American pilots in combat flying planes as old as their fathers. I fear the path we are headed down will lead to many more American pilots at risk, because they will be going up against potentially superior enemy aircraft.

I received a letter last week, Mr. Chairman, from a constituent who wrote he was attending a World War II veteran survivors meeting, and he wrote, "We will conduct a memorial service for those who died in the past year with a roll call, candle lighting and prayers, and also remember those who gave their lives and never came home from the war." He continues, "We need the F-22 program to keep our air power the best in the world, both for our pilots and for our country."

Mr. Chairman, let us give our military personnel the best equipment possible. I sincerely hope that this program will be fully restored in conference.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Ms. GRANGER).

Ms. GRANGER. Mr. Chairman, I rise today in support of H.R. 2561, because I believe it is very important that we continue to move the appropriations process forward and because I salute the hard work of the gentleman from California (Mr. LEWIS) on this issue.

However, I have some strong reservations about the legislation before us.

Let me say that I recognize the very difficult budgetary challenges that the gentleman from California and the Subcommittee on Defense faced in assembling this bill. Every Member of Congress who follows defense closely is concerned with our defense needs and knows that they are underfunded, and I join my colleagues in wanting to see our Armed Services remain the best in the world. So knowing that we share the same goals, I look forward to continuing to work with the chairman to improve this legislation as we proceed to conference.

One element of the bill I hope the committee will improve in conference is the decision to pause procurement of the F-22. But make no mistake, there is no pause. A pause in this program will result in the death of this program. A pause tells our enemies the United States has stopped reaching ahead to the future.

Some have argued that we do not need the F-22 because there are no other enemy aircraft that can challenge the fighter planes we have today. Others have said the Joint Strike Fighter is all we need for the future. I am here to say that both of those arguments are wrong. Many of the Members here today have attended the Air Force's classified briefings where we have had outlined the current and future threats to our air superiority. I believe the top officers in the Air Force, men who have given their entire careers to the safety of this country, know what they are talking about. I believe the threats that they have outlined are real, and I believe the Air Force is right to make the F-22 its priority, and the Congress should too.

Members should also know the Joint Strike Fighter is not a substitute for the F-22. The F-22 is designed for absolute air superiority; to engage and destroy enemy aircraft at greater stand-off distances, to operate at supersonic speeds without using afterburners, to be stealth, and to save the lives of our pilots. Do not be misled, the F-15 is not stealth. It does not have the same performance range. It is 30 years old. It does a good job, but it cannot be modified endlessly into the future. It cannot be the advanced technology for the 21st century.

Likewise, do not be misled into believing that the Joint Strike Fighter is a substitute for the F-22. They are designed to enhance each other's capabilities. The Joint Strike Fighter is a multi-role tactical aircraft, not an air superiority aircraft. It is meant to follow the F-22 into combat, not lead the charge. In fact, we need both planes.

And that leads me to my final point, Mr. Chairman. We cannot just skip the F-22 and go on to the Joint Strike Fighter. Killing the F-22 means the Joint Strike Fighter will also be killed, or at least seriously injured and delayed. Too much of the technology for both planes is being developed simultaneously. If the F-22 is dropped, the Joint Strike Fighter goes too. It is not possible to separate those contracts.

My colleagues, the defense budget is simply inadequate. We should not have to choose between today and tomorrow for our armed forces. While it is difficult to balance these needs, it is still possible. We should not be penny-wise and pound-foolish when it comes to our national security. I ask my colleagues to please help us work with the gentleman from California (Mr. LEWIS) and the gentleman from Florida (Mr. YOUNG) to restore the F-22 in conference.

In conclusion, I commend the gentleman from California (Mr. LEWIS) for including some very good measures for our military personnel, and I thank him for his commitment to our Armed Services.

Mr. LARSON. Mr. Chairman, may I inquire of the time remaining?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. LARSON) has 2 minutes remaining.

Mr. LARSON. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. WELDON).

Mr. WELDON of Florida. Mr. Chairman, I rise acknowledging the difficult task the chairman of the full committee and subcommittee have, as well as our ranking members, but I must rise in support of continued funding for procurement of the F-22.

Basic knowledge of warfare states that one must have undisputed air superiority before introduction of ground troops. Achieving air superiority is the first order of business for any joint force commander. Opponents of the F-22 say that the current stable of fighter aircraft will be able to handle any foreign opponent aircraft. This argument does not address the growing sophistication of the surface-to-air-missiles that are currently available on the market today and their cheap availability.

The F-22 will stand a much better chance against such threats than the F-15 in the future. I support continued funding of the F-22 and the full procurement. The Secretary of Defense has come out in support of this position and the Air Force has made it their number one modernization priority.

Mr. BARR of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from Florida (Mr. STEARNS), the cochair of the Air Force Caucus.

Mr. STEARNS. Mr. Chairman, I think, like others, I am coming down here to urge the Committee on Appropriations to restore the needed funding for the F-22 in their upcoming conference.

I think the F-22 advanced fighter aircraft represents, of course, the next generation of superior American military aircraft; 1974 was the last time we started with an advanced fighter aircraft.

There is no alternative to the F-22 in the Air Force inventory for future combat operations that can provide or evolve to provide the capabilities that are inherent in the F-22, nor is there an alternative in development.

Richard Hallion writes in today's Washington Post, "Failure to procure the F-22 would mark the first time since World War II that the United States has consciously chosen to send its soldiers, sailors, and airmen into harm's way while knowingly conceding the lead in modern fighter development to a variety of foreign nations that may sell their products on the world's arms market."

America needs the F-22 and it needs it now.

Mr. Chairman, I rise to speak in support of the most fundamental component of America's future defense needs in maintaining our air dominance during military combat—the F-22 Raptor fighter aircraft.

I cannot speak on behalf of the F-22 any better than Richard Hallion has done in an op-ed that appears in today's Washington Post.

Mr. Hallion writes that, "It takes more than a decade to develop a fighter, and it is imperative that we make the right choice. The hallmarks of a dominant fighter are the ability to evade and minimize detection, transit threat area quickly and exploit information warfare to react more quickly than one's foes. Only one aircraft contemplated for service today can do that: the F-22."

The F-22 advanced fighter aircraft represents the next generation of superior American military aircraft. The F-22 combines "radar-evading stealth with the ability to cruise at supersonic speeds and to exploit and display data from various sources to better inform the pilot about threats and opportunities."

The U.S. Air Force has become victim to their own military success. The action by the Defense Appropriations Subcommittee and the full Appropriations Committee to cut funding for the procurement of the F-22 comes on the heels of the Air Force's dominant performance against the Yugoslavian military and their air defense systems.

The Yugoslavian success has been the third consecutive military campaign since 1990 that the U.S. military has been able to dominate the air. Mr. Hallion writes that, "exploiting dominant aerospace power is the irreplaceable keystone of our post-Cold War strategy for successful quick-response crisis intervention."

"Seeking air superiority should never be what we choose to live with. Rather, air supremacy should be the minimum we seek, and air dominance our desired goal. Control of the air is fragile and can be lost from a variety of causes, including poor doctrine and tactics, deficient training, poor strategy and rules of engagement. But worst of all, it can be lost through poor aircraft."

As a rest of the world continues to develop advance military aircraft and continues to develop high-quality surface-to-air and other missiles, America's ability to continue to dominate the air in military engagements with the existing arsenal of aircraft will be greatly diminished.

There is no alternative to the F-22 in the Air Force inventory for future combat operations that can provide or evolve to provide the capabilities inherent in the F-22. Nor is there an alternative in development. The F-22 will clear the skies of enemy aircraft and destroy enemy air defenses.

The F-22 will breach enemy defenses, bomb highly defended strategic targets and interdict enemy forces. No other aircraft in the U.S. inventory or in development can meet that need.

The actions to withhold sufficient funding for the F-22 by the Appropriations Committee will in fact increase the cost to the American taxpayer. The reduction of the FY 2000 funding for the F-22 has a net impact of terminating the current production program and increases total Air Force costs by $8.4 billion or roughly the current cost of 85 additional F-22 aircraft.

Finally, I would like to close with more words from Richard Hallion. "Failure to procure the F-22 would mark the first time since the Second World War that the United States has consciously chosen to send its soldiers, sailors and airmen into harm's way while knowingly conceding the lead in modern fighter development to a variety of foreign nations that may sell their products on the world's arms market. America needs the F-22, and needs it now.

I urge Chairman YOUNG, Chairman LEWIS and all future conferees to the Defense Appropriations bills to accede to the Senate position on fully funding for FY 2000 for America's most significant next generation fighter aircraft that will preserve America's national security and protect our national security interests around the world. Work to protect the F-22.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Washington (Mr. METCALF).

Mr. METCALF. Mr. Chairman, I thank the chairman for yielding me the time.

Mr. Chairman, I rise today to support the continuation of the procurement of the F-22 because it is vital to the continued air dominance for the United States.

Mr. Chairman, air superiority has become the essential piece of military action, and the F-22 will guarantee our success into the next century.

This program must remain on schedule to ensure that the U.S. forces responsible to keep this country's vital interests safe have the absolute best technology available.

The proliferation of advanced surface-to-air weapons, systems as seen in Kosovo, serve to underscore the need for the F-22 now. At a time when we are uniquely aware of the challenges and demands placed on our military, we must go forward with this program.

I ask my colleagues to support the F-22.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, I am pleased to yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. CHAMBLISS) my colleague.

Mr. CHAMBLISS. Mr. Chairman, I first of all want to thank my friends, the gentleman from Florida (Chairman YOUNG), the gentleman from California (Chairman LEWIS), and the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. MURTHA), the ranking member, for the great job that they have done in a very tough environment. We have all had very difficult budget issues to resolve, and this is yet another one.

But I also rise to talk about securing America's future. Part of the cornerstone of securing America's future is to provide for a strong national defense. In order for our continued strong national defense in this country, we have got to maintain air superiority.

Now, what we are doing by reducing the funding of $1.8 billion for the F-22 program is to move the F-15 into an upgrade status. The F-15, make no mistake about it, has been a great airplane for the United States Air Force. But the threat out there today, as my friend from California has already alluded to, is the SU-27, which is on parity with the F-15.

If you upgrade the F-15, we are looking at the SU-35 that is a Russian-made airplane coming down the line that will be superior to the upgraded F-15. Yet they have another airplane on the drawing board already. We simply will not be in parity if we do not have the F-22.

Sure, cost is a problem. But can cost measure saving lives of our young men and women? The F-22 is an absolute necessity to maintain air superiority. There are three things that the F-22 has as an asset that no other airplane has. It has integrated avionics. It has supercruise capability. And it has stealth.

The F-15 has none of these. The upgrade will have none of these. The F-22 has the capability of first-day, first-shot, first-kill. Against the other airplanes that are out there today, the F-15, even with its upgrades and modifications, will not have that capability.

If we are going to maintain air superiority that has been so valuable and such an absolute necessity in the Persian Gulf and in Kosovo and other areas of the Balkans, we have got to have the F-22.

I urge the chairman to really negotiate hard in conference on this issue.

Mr. LARSON. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, let me start by saying how much I appreciate the efforts especially of the gentleman from California (Mr. CHAMBLISS) who helped put together a working group of concerned Members of Congress who I think have demonstrated this afternoon on both sides of this issue concern about national security and safety.

It is my sincere hope that, as we move forward with the conference, that the conferees from the House take into consideration the concerns that have

Mr. Chairman, I would like to thank especially the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. MURTHA) for his kindness and mentoring through this process.

Mr. BARR of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to my distinguished colleague, the gentleman from the great State of Georgia (Mr. KINGSTON), a member of the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, I also yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. KINGSTON).

Mr. KINGSTON. Mr. Chairman, I thank both gentlemen for yielding me the time.

Let me say that I am going to support this bill. The ranking member and the chairman of the committee have worked hard on a bill that balances quality of life, readiness, and modernization in the face of a budget shortfall in a long list of very many needs.

There are three reasons that I am standing in support of including the F-22 in the final bill. And that is, number one, the threat. That has been outlined fairly well by previous speakers, but let me just put it this way:

When George Washington was President, the Congress had a bill that said that our standing military would never be more than 5,000 troops; and the President at that time said that would be great, but let us also pass a bill that we cannot be invaded by any country that has more than 3,000 troops.

We do want a fair fight in America. And our enemies are not cooperating. While we may pause on the F-22, they may not pause on their development of stealth fighters. We know from our classified briefings, that the threat is real.

The second reason I support the F-22 is because of the slippage. If we hold back because of a very complicated purchasing system that involves over 200 contracts by the producer, it will cost us an additional $6 billion to get up and running again. It also will cost us some soft costs.

For example, with the F-22, the Air Force does not need the EF-111s. But without it, they will need them. And so, we are going to have to start spending money on that again. The slippage cost is real, and again it is about $6 billion.

The third reason I support the F-22 is because the Joint Strike Fighter, as the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. GRANGER) said very articulately, is a complement to the F-22. It is not a replacement.

I believe there is some other money out there. We did not spend all our money that we had appropriated in the bombing of Kosovo. Maybe we should look at going back into that supplemental bill and bringing some of this money back to make this happen. I am not sure.

But I appreciate the gentleman listening to us, and I appreciate the leadership on the issue and hope we can get this done in the final version of the bill.

The House Department of Defense Appropriations Bill for FY00 provides an extremely important allocation of resources in a serious effort to improve critical shortcomings affecting the readiness of our armed forces. This bill meets the budget authority and outlay limits set in the Committee's 302(b) allocation, provides a critical $15.5 billion increase over appropriations in FY99, and provides $2.8 billion above the President's request. This legislation goes a long way to address critical readiness, recruitment, retention, operational maintenance, and quality of life needs that are so important for our military. However, I am concerned about one aspect of the legislation's strategy, cutting programmed funding for the initial production of the Air Force's number one development priority, the F-22, Raptor.

We expect our military to remain the world's best, head and shoulders above any potential aggressor. We demand that our armed forces reign supreme in personnel, training, professionalism, and equipment. We do not want parity with our enemies, we demand superiority. We do not want to win conflicts by attrition but by overwhelming our foes. A most critical aspect of our superiority is our ability to achieve and maintain all superiority in any conflict. Furthermore, today Americans have grown to expect to win conflicts with minimal or even no casualties. The best trained pilots in the most advanced aircraft are the great enabler in any conflict whether to protect our Navy, or to allow the introduction and free maneuver of our ground forces. Air superiority is vital. Experience in modern warfare has continued to reflect the importance of this from success in World War II to operations during Desert Storm and Operation Allied Force.

The F-22 aircraft is being produced to replace the F-15 fighter and to accomplish its air superiority mission beginning in 2005. The F-15 currently represents 1960's technology and the aging fleet will average 26 years old when the F-22 is scheduled to be operational. Today's F-15's have served our country well, but in the future our pilots will be at risk. Its capabilities today are at parity with the Russian SU-27, MIG-29 and by 2005 will be at a disadvantaged facing the Russian SU-35 or the French Rafal, and the European Fighter 2000 aircraft that will be available on the world market. Additionally, the surface to air missile threat continues to advance world wide. today, the SA-10 and SA-12 missile availability pose a threat to the F-15. Proliferation of SA-10 and SA-12 capability has increased from four countries in 1985 to fourteen in 1995 and an estimated 22 by 2005. The F-22 will have the capability to counter the surface to air missile threat through stealth technology, supercruise capability that will significantly reduce missile engagement opportunity, maneuverability and unequalled pilot awareness.

The F-22 aircraft does bear costs, $19 billion have been invested to date, but the cost and advanced technology provide significant efficiencies and long term savings. The F-22 will reduce by half the number of maintenance personnel for each aircraft. It is expected to have 30 percent reduction in direct operations and sustainment costs per squadron per year when compared to the F-15. A quicker combat turnaround time will allow higher sorties rates during a conflict. The F-22 program costs are under control and are within the Congressional mandated cost caps for both development and production. This plane utilizes cutting edge technology to ensure our Air Force continues to maintain our nation's superiority in air combat.

Based upon the status of the current F-22 program, a pause in funding the F-22 procurement requested for FY00 would put the entire program at serious risk. Contract obligations would be breached if aircraft procurement is not funded. This would result in at least a three year delay in the program, would increase costs by $6-8 billion, and exceed the caps set by Congress. The production delay could seriously affect numerous suppliers that could not afford to stop and restart production causing significant erosion of the program's industrial base. Such a pause would seriously disrupt an intricate supply system established in all but a few states.

A pause or end of the F-22 program would have a very negative impact on the future of an important complementary aircraft, the Joint Strike Fighter (JSF). The JSF also under development is being designed as a multi-role aircraft for three services to replace the capabilities of the F-16 and A-10 fleet, with fielding goals in FY10. It is being developed to perform as an air-to-ground combat aircraft to complement the air-to-air combat role of the F-22. The characteristics of these plans will differ greatly. If the F-22 program is killed, the U.S. will have a void in the capabilities required by the F-22, the action could cause great changes to JSF, or require development of a whole new kind of aircraft, all of which would delay the fielding of the JSF. Additionally, the JSF leverages certain technologies from the F-22, including avionics and engines that use the F-22 as a stepping stone for advancements. Setback of the F-22 program will degrade progress on the JSF. Ultimately, this action could place our air supremacy capability in extreme danger.

Finally, as the F-22 harnesses and employs superb, advanced technology, the development and testing of the aircraft does the same. Flight testing of two test aircraft has proceeded well. Avionics testing has been ongoing through three bench labs and one flying test bed, a 757 aircraft with all avionics including a full cockpit from an F-22. Advanced computer models have also enhanced the ability to hone the technical aspects of the plane. Nine aircraft are funded in the Engineering and Manufacturing Development (EMD) phase of this program. All nine aircraft will be delivered by FY01. Production aircraft that have been requested by the Air Force to be funded in FY00 will not complete production until FY03. This low rate initial production is necessary to efficiently utilize the open delivery line. Testing will be 90% complete and initial operational testing and evaluation will complete in mid-year 2003. The program minimizes risks and employs efficiency and responsible costing to meet delivery milestones. When compared with previous aircraft production such as the F-15 and F-16, the F-22 minimizes, by a large degree, the number of production aircraft during the EMD phase.

In closing, the House Department of Defense Appropriations Bill for FY00 is a good bill that will provide relief for many aspects of our services needs. It goes far to take care of the men and women who serve in America's Army, Navy, Air Force, and Marine Corps. I will vote in favor of this legislation, but with apprehension that this bill does an injustice to the number one Air Force development priority and a critical Department of Defense program that has vital implications on how we remain the undisputed air superiority and air supermacy power in the world.

This amendment was offered in the Appropriations Committee by Mr. KINGSTON, but was withdrawn and not offered on the floor.

NEW GENERAL PROVISIONS RESTORING F-22 FUNDS AND PROVIDING ADVANCE APPROPRIATIONS FOR SEVERAL PROGRAM INCREASES

In the appropriate place in the Committee Print Bill, insert the following new general provision:

SEC. XXXX. Notwithstanding any other provision in this Act, the total amounts appropriated in this Act for Titles III and IV is hereby reduced by $1,852,075,000 to reflect the deletion of the following amounts for the following programs: $208,000,000 for eight KC-135 re-enginings; $440,000,000 for eight F-15E aircraft; $564,000,000 for KC-130J aircraft; $250,000,000 for one JSTARS aircraft; $98,000,000 for five F-16 C/D aircraft; $63,000,000 for one Operational Support Aircraft; $100,000,000 for additional AMRAAM procurement; $50,000,000 for additional JDAM procurement; $79,075,000 for B-2 upgrades; Provided, in addition to the amounts provided elsewhere in this or any other act, $1,852,075,000 is hereby appropriated to be available October 1, 2000, until expended, in the following amounts for the following programs: $208,000,000 for eight KC-135 re-enginings; $440,000,000 for eight F-15E aircraft; $564,000,000 for KC-130J aircraft; $250,000,000 for one JSTARS aircraft; $98,000,000 for five F-16 C/D aircraft; $63,000,000 for one Operational Support Aircraft; $100,000,000 for additional AMRAAM procurement; $50,000,000 for additional JDAM procurement; $79,075,000 for B-2 upgrades; Provided further, in addition to the amounts appropriated elsewhere in title II of this Act, $1,574,981,000 is provided for F-22 procurement and $277,094,000 for F-22 Advance Procurement.

WHY WE NEED THE F-22

THREAT

- Need F-22 to counter future and current surface-to-air missile (SA 10/12) threats. The F-15 cannot operate in this environment by itself
- 21 countries expected to possess SA 10/12's (advanced SAMS) by 2005
- 237 of world's 267 nations have surface to air missiles
- There will be a five fold increase in the number of countries with radar guided air to air missiles
- As many as 700 MIG-21's may be upgraded between 1995 and 2000
- F-15 began service in early 1970's (almost 25 years ago)
- When F-22 becomes operational in FY06, the F-15 will average 26 years old
- When JSF becomes operational in FY10, the F-16 will be 24 years old
- 30-40 year old F-15's put our pilots at risk
- Today the F-15 is just at parity with the SU-27 and MIG-29

By 2005 the F-15 will be disadvantage to the SU-35 and the export versions of the Rafale and European Fighter 2000
Air to air missiles are proliferating and becoming more capable

IMPACT OF SLIPPING PROGRAM

3 year delay in program, voids contracts, and kills program
This is not a pause, it kills the production program
Increase in costs breaks the contract price and the Congressional costs caps
Increases Air Force costs by $6.5 billion Set back for Army's number one priority the Comanche helicopter since they have some common systems)
$16 billion already invested to date
Loss of industrial base to support F-22 program Upgrading the F-15 would cost about $26 million per plane

F-22

F-22 replaces the F-15 for all weather air superiority and deep attack
Increased capabilities: stealth, supercruise, maneuverability, avionics, weapons payload
First look, first shot, first kill against multiple targets
Flight tests have gone well
Costs are controlled, costs are within funding caps set by Congress
The F-22 will reduce by half the number of maintenance personnel for each aircraft
F-22 will cost $500 million less to operate and support over 20 years than an F-15 squadron
F-15 afterburner operations are limited to 5-7 minutes, F-22 can operate at supercruise for a significant period of time without afterburners
20% lower combat turnaround time for the F-22/higher sortie rate
Lower deployment requirements (14 C-17s to deploy F-15 vs. 4 C-17s for F-22)

JSF

JSF leverages technologies from the F-22 (avionics, engines)
JSF is a multi-role air to ground fighter to complement (not replace) the air-to-air role of F-22
JSF replaces the F-16 and A-10 and meets requirements for other military services
Without the F-22, the requirements for JSF change and will delay JSF by several years

POINT PAPER ON HAC-D MARK TO F-22 PROCUREMENT

BACKGROUND—WHY THE USAF NEEDS THE F-22

The 21st Century Force Structure—The Air Force's modernization strategy is built on the proper mix of "High" capability F-22s and "Low" cost Joint Strike Fighters (JSF) to achieve the dominant capability and operations tempo to support Joint Vision 2010's goal of full spectrum dominance.

F-22 is the high-capability force enabler designed to accomplish the most demanding missions of air superiority and attack of high-value, highly defended targets.

A combination of stealth, supercruise, integrated avionics, and larger internal air-to-air weapons payload are its primary attributes.

The JSF is the low-cost majority of the force—balance of affordability and capability allows procurement of greater numbers to perform a variety of missions and sustain the required high tempo of modern warfare.

JSF will rely on the F-22 for air superiority.

JSF will modernize the largest part of our fleet providing an affordable replacement for the F-16 and A-10.

JSF is dependent upon F-22 technologies and will complement the F-22 in the future as the F-16 complements the F-15 today.

The Need for the F-22—Joint Vision 2010 requires the Air Force to achieve Air Dominance—the ability to completely control adversary's vertical battlespace.

The current air superiority fighter, the F-15, is at parity today with the SU-27 and MIG-29; by IOC for F-22 in 2005, the F-15 will be at a disadvantage with the fielding of the SU-35 and export versions of the Rafale and Typhoon, and the proliferation of advanced air-to-air missiles such as the AA-11, AA-X-12, and MICA.

The development and proliferation of advanced surface-to-air missiles (SAMs) such as the SA-10 and SA-12 result in a sanctuary for the enemy because the F-15 will be unable to operate in this environment without a protracted, asset intensive, defense suppression campaign.

F-22's attributes of stealth, supercruise, and integrated avionics will allow it to operate in the presence of the total threat—emerging threat aircraft, advanced SAMs, and advanced air-to-air missiles.

Provides American forces the freedom from attack, freedom to maneuver and freedom to attack.

The Time is Now—The current Air Force fighter modernization program is an affordable and effective solution demanded by the increasing age of our current fighter force structure.

By F-22 ICO in 2005, the average age of the F-15 will be 26 years old.

By JSF IOC in 2010, the average age of the F-16 will be 24 years old.

F-22 is an essential investment to achieve air dominance—the key enabler for 21st Century Combat Operations.

DISCUSSION—IMPACT OF THE HAC-D REDUCTION ON THE CURRENT F-22 PROGRAM

The proposed reduction of the F-22 FY00 funding has a net impact of terminating the current production program and increases total Air Force costs by $6.5 Billion (does not include costs for Service Life Extension of F-15 to accommodate 2 year slip to F-22 Initial Operational Capability).

Termination of the current production program—The current F-22 production strategy to procure all 339 aircraft within the Congressional Cost cap of $39.8B Key elements of this strategy are: fixed price options for the PRTV and Lot 1; target price curve (TPC) for Lots 2-5; and multi-year contracts for lots 5-12.

Impact: Termination of the Lot 1 buy voids the fixed price agreement for the PRTV/Lot 1 buy and contractually requires termination of the PRTV aircraft buy. This in turn breaks the TPC and results in a production cost increase over the Congressional cost caps. A new production strategy initiated in FY02 with an 8 aircraft buy (requires Advance Buy in FY01) and a new production profile (8, 10, 16, 24, 36) results in a production cost increase of $5.3B, which breaks the Congressionally mandated production cost cap of $39.8B.

Extension of the EMD program by 15 months—The cancellation of the PRTV aircraft drives the requirement to retrofit the EMD aircraft to a production configuration for dedicated initial operational test and evaluation, which would have been accomplished by the PRTVs.

An additional $500M is required for EMD to fund for Out-of-Production parts associated with these aircraft due to the lack of an active production program.

Impact: With the EMD stretchout and above considerations the total cost impact to the EMD program is $1.2B, which breaks Congressionally mandated EMD cost cap of $18.8B.

Delay to Initial Operating Capability (IOC)—F-22 IOC is currently scheduled for December 2005, the change to the production profile would delay IOC (stand up of the first F-22 squadron) to Dec 2007.

Delay in IOC would force the Air Force to execute an F-15 Service Life Extension Program (SLEP) on one Fighter Wing (72 aircraft).

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to my colleague, the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN).

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Chairman, I think the question today is, what kind of Air Force do we want? If it is not the Air Force today, it is an Air Force 10, 20, 30, 40 years from now. That is what we are looking at.

Our choice in this thing is tomorrow's Air Force needs to be stealthy, needs to be survivable, supportable, deployable, and lethal; and the future of that rests with the F-22.

It is kind of hard, and I think there is nothing we can do but to hurt retention and morale by giving these kids a plane that is old. When they are flying 90-year-old bombers and 80-year-old tankers and 30-year-old fighters, that is the worst thing we can do for retention and morale of people.

We kind of have to laugh in a way, Mr. Chairman, because it was just a little while ago we were fighting this argument with the B-2 bomber. Do my colleagues remember that one? It cannot fly. The technology is wrong. It cannot fly in the rain. It will not do it.

And then this last thing in Kosovo, what happened? It did it all. And then the same people who vetoed the bill, the same people who opposed it are now standing there with air crews with the B-2 behind them. Politicians are rushing to have their pictures taken with the B-2 that could not fly and could not work and made the same arguments.

I think it is reasonable to go with the F-22. That is the future of the Air Force. Let us support that.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Mississippi (Mr. TAYLOR) my colleague, for purposes of a colloquy.

Mr. TAYLOR of Mississippi. Mr. Chairman, I wish to engage in a colloquy with the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. MURTHA).

Mr. Chairman, as the gentleman well knows, the armed services have recently conducted a survey for the purpose of identifying which ships should be used as a centerpiece of the 12 Marine amphibious assault groups.

A study was done comparing building an additional LHD as opposed to taking an LHD-8 and schlepping it. The study came back very much in favor of taking an LHD and putting turbines in the next version of it as opposed to schlepping it.

I notice there were no funds in this bill for that, although the Senate has funded this program.

My question to my colleague and I seek his assurance that, at the end of the day, when this bill comes back from conference committee, will there be funds for LHD-8 in the bill.

Mr. MURTHA. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TAYLOR of Mississippi. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. MURTHA. Mr. Chairman, I can assure the gentleman that all of us in the subcommittee discussed this at great length. We know the importance to our national security. We know the importance to the Marine Corps. We will make every effort to bring back an LHD-8.

I know the gentleman has been pushing this for a long time. And the same here as the F-22, it is a matter of money. We hope we can work it out, and we expect to have more money down the road.

Mr. BARR of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, that is one beautiful aircraft. But do not be deceived. That is one mean SOB when it comes to air superiority.

That, my colleagues, is the only way the United States of America can maintain what has always been an essential pillar of our national security for so long as American men and women have been flying, and that is the F-22.

But do not take my word for it. Take the Washington Post's word for it. We heard earlier, as referenced by the gentleman from Florida, do not take my word for it. Take the word of seven, count them, seven former Secretaries of Defense: Bill Perry, Cap Weinberger, Frank Carlucci, Don Rumsfeld, Dick Cheney, Harold Brown, and James Schlesinger.

All of these men, who have served their country under administrations on both sides of the aisle, have told us and told us very clearly, America must have the F-22 if it is to maintain air superiority.

Over 200 years ago, a gentleman universally recognized as one of the great military generals of all time, George Washington, said, "To be prepared for war is one of the most effectual means of preserving peace."

Do not just take his word for it. Go back 2,000 years before that to Mr. Sun Tzu who said, "Victorious warriors win first and then go to war. It is defeated warriors who go to war first and then seek to win."

The way we prepare for war is to win war first and then go to war. The way we do that is what we did in the Gulf War, what we did in Kosovo; and that is to use air superiority.

Before our men and women went to war in the air in Desert Storm or in Kosovo, they had already won. They had already won because the F-15 and the F-18 were superior to anything that the enemy had.

That will prevail today. It will prevail tomorrow. But 5 years from now, it will not prevail. There are fighters being developed by a consortium of three countries that can defeat the F-15. The only way we can demand and contain air superiority in the future is to fund the F-22. We need to do that.

I appreciate the gentleman from California hearing these arguments out. I appreciate the support of Members on both sides of the aisle to fund the F-22.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume, not by way of responding to the comments of the gentleman from Georgia or to others who have taken a position today in support of the F-22, but rather to make certain that all of our colleagues understand exactly how we got to this point preceding this debate.

Earlier on in the year when I suddenly found myself with this chairmanship, my friend, the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. MURTHA) said to me, "Jerry, you're going to shortly realize there's only so much money to go around, and it's our job to make the tough choices." In that connection as we looked over the whole array of requirements and needs of our national defense, it became very clear, in competition with other programs that are a Federal responsibility, that indeed this is a very challenging responsibility.

Among those items that came before me in the early days of homework regarding this bill was the fact that we were on a line that would take us to three production lines of tactical fighter needs for the future. That involved the development further of the F-18E/F, the F-22, and the Joint Strike Fighter in the near future. It is the F-22 which we have discussed rather extensively today. If we follow through on the development of all three of those lines, we will eventually commit somewhere near $340 billion of expenditure. If we can, after reexamination, reduce that by just one aircraft line, we will save as much as $60 billion and at the end we will still have the finest tactical fighter force in the entire world. That is our entire objective.

I can assure my colleagues that we are going to do everything necessary to ensure that no nation will be able to threaten us in terms of tactical air in the future.

Having said that, Mr. Chairman, this has been a very difficult process. I want my colleagues to know how much I appreciate their serious cooperation regarding this amendment. Between now and the time that we go to conference with the Senate, we will be carefully evaluating that request for $3 billion for the tactical fighters in the future. Presently the bill provides for $1.2 billion for research and development. This funding will give us all the flexibility we need to have adequate discussions with the Senate. Between now and then, we are expecting serious responses from the Air Force and others as to how we can develop these programs and make sense out of our conflicting budgetary problems.

And so with that, Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time, with the exception of yielding a minute to the gentleman from Georgia for purposes of a motion to withdraw.

Mr. SMITH of Washington. Mr. Chairman, air power is critical for how we fight wars and respond to international incidents. Americans place an immeasurable value on life, and in war. Mr. Speaker, air dominance saves lives. Sweeping the skies clean of enemy air craft is essential for protecting our most vulnerable troops on the ground, and the pilots who fly follow-on strike missions. Air dominance cannot be guaranteed with aircraft on par with the enemy—it can only be achieved with superior capabilities. Mr. Speaker, the F-22 is the American guarantor of air supremacy.

In scenarios where the United States need to respond to a rogue nation or terrorist group with a punitive strike, advanced fighters can deliver the message with precision. This is an important factor in lowering collateral damage and limiting the number of allied lives put at risk. As in Kosovo and the Gulf War, I believe air power will continue to be the primary player in how the United States responds to conflict.

Mr. Chairman, we cannot cut funding for F-22 procurement. Tactical fighters take 15 years to research, develop, and mature. If we want to maintain our air dominance in the future, say in the year 2010, we need to develop and test these air dominance fighters today. Currently, no other tactical air program combines the breakthrough technologies of integrated avionics, supercruise, thrust vectoring engines, and stealth into one aircraft. With the world-wide proliferation of SAMs, our pilots must take advantage of the F-22's supercruise, speed and stealth to complete their mission and return home safely. By investing in leap-ahead technologies, we can save the lives of our future war fighters; we cannot invest in yesteryear technology.

The F-22 is our top fighter program, no near term or long term substitute exists. Mr. Chairman, I urge my colleagues to support full funding of the F-22 program.

Mr. STENHOLM. Mr. Chairman, I rise today to express my support for the F-22—the key to maintaining air dominance in the 21st Century.

The F-22 is the first new U.S. air superiority fighter to be built in more than thirty years, and it is scheduled to join the Air Force inventory at a crucial time. Despite the ongoing upgrade of existing U.S. fighter aircraft, our tactical aircraft are facing increasingly sophisticated foreign fighters and more lethal air defense missiles.

The F-22 is crucial to maintaining air superiority. History has shown us that air dominance is crucial to controlling the battlefield; it allows our forces and other aircraft to operate against our enemies with impunity. Proven success in attaining air superiority is the reason that no American soldier has died from enemy air attack in over forty years.

We must continue development and acquisition of the F-22. Pausing this process is equal to cancellation of the program. Development of the aircraft system is on-track, and modern technology means that we can have a high-level of confidence in flight-tests, computer simulation, and other testing.

I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting funding for the F-22. It is important to our defense industry but most importantly it is crucial to the men and women who defend our Nation.

Mr. BARR of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, if allowed to stand, the decision to cut $1.8 billion in funding for the production of six F-22s would be a grave mistake. This cut in the F-22 program will adversely impact the security of this nation.

Defense experts agree the F-22 performs a vital role in maintaining air superiority in future conflicts. As witnessed in the recent strikes in Kosovo and the Persian Gulf, air superiority provides an essential element in the protection of our nation and our interests abroad. Without the complete development of stealth technology and advanced avionics features, we put our soldiers at risk.

The F-22 is America's next generation air superiority fighter, and has been developed to counter any future threats posed by foreign advanced surface-to-air missiles (SAMs). As we witnessed over the skies of Iraq, SAMs and other advanced fire-controlled radars pose a real threat to U.S. combat air fighters. The only real defense against those systems is the F-22 program, which has the ability to operate against multiple targets and use advanced avionics. As foreign countries continue to develop and purchase increasingly advanced air defense systems, our nation must continue advancement of our own fighters to preserve future air superiority.

The goal of the F-22 program is to maintain the dominance of aerodynamic stealth performance and will enable the Department of Defense to continue its air superiority. Creating a "pause" in the program may in all likelihood, kill future production of this magnificent plan. Once the production is stopped, contracts will be broken as will the congressional cost caps. Since the early 1980s, Congress has continued to appropriate the necessary funding for the research and development of this plane, which has resulted in the investment of $19 billion in taxpayer funds and 13 years of development. As the F-22 program continues to exceed every technical and programmatic challenge, the U.S. Air Force continued to give its strong, explicit support for the projects continuation.

From the start, the F-22 has been designed for minimal maintenance and will provide a reliable aircraft which is far superior than any other aircraft today. Compared to the F-15, which requires an average of 23 maintenance personnel, the F-22 will require a mere 15 personnel, which represents a substantial cost savings when calculated over the 20-to-30 year life of an aircraft. Through the use of advanced technology, several benefits will be gained by developing a cost efficient design strategy, creating substantial savings and improving operational flexibility throughout the life of this program.

Limiting this nation's defense in the 21st century to only one new fighter—the smaller, sub-sonic tactical Joint Strike Fighter, or JSF—would put us in serious risk and force us to waste vital defense monies updating current aircraft (F-15 and F-18) that will be outdated and outperformed by foreign produced aircraft as soon as they are upgraded. While some suggest we rely on the future development of the Joint Strike Fighter (JSF) program, the JSF production is expected to begin around 2005 and operational service to begin around 2010. In March 1999, the Congressional Budget Office estimated the total acquisition cost of these JSF aircraft over a 27-year period at some $223 billion. The estimates of the JSF's ultimate price may cost more than the F-22 when the program finally reaches its programmatic maturity. The alternative JSF has been developed as a joint-service fighter/attack plane to complement—not replace the F-22. The JSF was never envisaged to take the place of the F-22 and it cannot be modified to do so.

As other foreign countries begin to develop and acquire combat aircraft equal to our current fighters, the F-22 program is the best hope—the only hope—to beat the encroachment of advanced foreign arsenals. Countries such as Russia are developing advanced fighters for their foreign customers such as Syria, China and India. The F-15 began service over 25 years ago, and when the F-22 becomes operational in FY06, the F-15 will average 26 years of service. The F-15's flight characteristics are well known, making it even more susceptible to the next generation of foreign missiles and fighters.

The history of warfare is clear—whoever owns the sky and space above it will own the future. The F-22 is the only opportunity our nation has to ensure America's military continues to control the sky for this century and the 21st century. There is no other tactical combat aircraft in service today that has similar capacity to successfully operate amid our growing future foreign threats.

I urge the House to re-consider supporting such a defense initiative which will adversely affect future conflict capability and would put our nation's air superiority in jeopardy. We must continue to guarantee air superiority through the continued support and funding of the F-22 program. There is no other American aircraft that can offer the insurance and protection our soldiers and their families desperately need.

Mr. BARR of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to withdraw amendment No. 4.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to the order of the House, the amendment is withdrawn.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. LEWIS OF CALIFORNIA

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

On page 8, line 20, after the word "facilities", add the following proviso:

"Provided, That of the funds made available under this heading, $7,000,000 shall only be available to the Secretary of the Army, acting through the Chief of Engineers, only for demolition and removal of facilities, buildings, and structures used at MOTBY (a Military Traffic Management Command facility)".

On page 9, line 7, after the word "Fund" add the following proviso:

"Provided, That of the funds available under this heading, $300,000 shall be available only for site design and planning, and materials and equipment acquisition for the Maritime Fire Training Center at MERTS".

On page 10, line 6, delete "$11,401,733,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$11,402,733,000".

On page 11, line 25, after "tractors" at the end of line 25, add the following proviso:

"Provided further, That of the amounts provided under this heading, $6,300,000 is available only for the Department of Defense STARBASE program".

On page 32, line 7, delete "$6,964,227,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$6,958,227,000".

On page 32, line 8, after "2002" insert the following new proviso:

"Provided, That of the amounts provided under this heading, $82,363,000 shall be available only for procurement of the 60K A/C Loader program: Provided further, That of the amounts provided under this heading, $179,339,000 is available only for the Base Information Infrastructure program".

On page 36, line 10, delete "$8,930,149,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$8,935,149,000".

On page 37, line 12, after the word "proviso", insert the following proviso:

"Provided further, That of the amounts provided under this heading, $5,000,000 is only for a technology insertion program, to be carried out by a federally funded research and development center and other units it affiliates with, to demonstrate the cost savings and efficiency benefits of applying commercially available software and information technology to the manufacturing lines of small defense firms".

"(as defined in section 381(d) of title 10, United States Code)."

At the end of the bill, insert after the last section (preceding the short title) the following new section.

"SEC. . None of the funds provided in this Act may be used to transfer to any non-governmental entity ammunition held by the Department of Defense that has a center-fire cartridge and a United States military nomenclature designation of "armor penetrator", "armor piercing (AP)", "armor piercing incendiary (API)", or "armor-piercing incendiary-tracer (API-T)"."

Mr. LEWIS of California (during the reading). Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, I offer a manager's amendment on behalf of myself and the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. MURTHA). As I mentioned, this has been cleared on both sides, and I thank the gentleman from Pennsylvania for his cooperation.

Mr. MURTHA. We have no objection to the amendment.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, I move the amendment be adopted.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from California (Mr. LEWIS).

The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the remainder of the bill, through page 138, line 23, be considered as read, printed in the RECORD, and open to amendment at any point.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

The text of the remainder of the bill is as follows:

TITLE V

REVOLVING AND MANAGEMENT FUNDS

DEFENSE WORKING CAPITAL FUNDS

For the Defense Working Capital Funds; $90,344,000: Provided, That during fiscal year 2000, funds in the Defense Working Capital Funds may be used for the purchase of not to exceed 295 passenger motor vehicles for replacement only for the Defense Security Service.

NATIONAL DEFENSE SEALIFT FUND

For National Defense Sealift Fund programs, projects, and activities, and for expenses of the National Defense Reserve Fleet, as established by section 11 of the Merchant Ship Sales Act of 1946 (50 U.S.C. App. 1744); $729,700,000, to remain available until expended: Provided, That none of the funds provided in this paragraph shall be used to award a new contract that provides for the acquisition of any of the following major components unless such components are manufactured in the United States: auxiliary equipment, including pumps, for all shipboard services; propulsion system components (that is; engines, reduction gears, and propellers); shipboard cranes; and spreaders for shipboard cranes: Provided further, That the exercise of an option in a contract awarded through the obligation of previously appropriated funds shall not be considered to be the award of a new contract: Provided further, That the Secretary of the military department responsible for such procurement may waive the restrictions in the first proviso on a case-by-case basis by certifying in writing to the Committees on Appropriations of the House of Representatives and the Senate that adequate domestic supplies are not available to meet Department of Defense requirements on a timely basis and that such an acquisition must be made in order to acquire capability for national security purposes.

TITLE VIII

GENERAL PROVISIONS

SEC. 8001. No part of any appropriation contained in this Act shall be used for publicity or propaganda purposes not authorized by the Congress.

SEC. 8002. During the current fiscal year, provisions of law prohibiting the payment of compensation to, or employment of, any person not a citizen of the United States shall not apply to personnel of the Department of Defense: Provided, That salary increases granted to direct and indirect hire foreign national employees of the Department of Defense funded by this Act shall not be at a rate in excess of the percentage increase authorized by law for civilian employees of the Department of Defense whose pay is computed under the provisions of section 5332 of title 5, United States Code, or at a rate in excess of the percentage increase provided by the appropriate host nation to its own employees, whichever is higher: Provided further, That this section shall not apply to Department of Defense foreign service national employees serving at United States diplomatic missions whose pay is set by the Department of State under the Foreign Service Act of 1980: Provided further, That the limitations of this provision shall not apply to foreign national employees of the Department of Defense in the Republic of Turkey.

SEC. 8003. No part of any appropriation contained in this Act shall remain available for obligation beyond the current fiscal year, unless expressly so provided herein.

SEC. 8004. No more than 20 per centum of the appropriations in this Act which are limited for obligation during the current fiscal year shall be obligated during the last 2 months of the fiscal year: Provided, That this section shall not apply to obligations for support of active duty training of reserve components or summer camp training of the Reserve Officers' Training Corps.

(TRANSFER OF FUNDS)

SEC. 8005. Upon determination by the Secretary of Defense that such action is necessary in the national interest, he may, with the approval of the Office of Management and Budget, transfer not to exceed $2,000,000,000 of working capital funds of the Department of Defense or funds made available in this Act to the Department of Defense for military functions (except military construction) between such appropriations or funds or any subdivision thereof, to be merged with and to be available for the same purposes, and for the same time period, as the appropriation or fund to which transferred: Provided, That such authority to transfer may not be used unless for higher priority items, based on unforeseen military requirements, than those for which originally appropriated and in no case where the item for which funds are requested has been denied by Congress: Provided further, That the Secretary of Defense shall notify the Congress promptly of all transfers made pursuant to this authority or any other authority in this Act: Provided further, That no part of the funds in this Act shall be available to prepare or present a request to the Committees on Appropriations for reprogramming of funds, unless for higher priority items, based on unforeseen military requirements, than those for which originally appropriated and in no case where the item for which reprogramming is requested has been denied by the Congress: Provided further, That the Department of the Army, Department of the Air Force, Defense-Wide Agencies, and the Office of the Secretary of Defense may not reprogram funds within any appropriation in title III or IV of this or prior annual Department of Defense Acts under the authority of the Department of Defense Financial Management Regulation without prior written approval from the Appropriations Committees of Congress.

(TRANSFER OF FUNDS)

SEC. 8006. During the current fiscal year, cash balances in working capital funds of the Department of Defense established pursuant to section 2208 of title 10, United States Code, may be maintained in only such amounts as are necessary at any time for cash disbursements to be made from such funds: Provided, That transfers may be made between such funds: Provided further, That transfers may be made between working capital funds and the "Foreign Currency Fluctuations, Defense" appropriation and the "Operation and Maintenance" appropriation accounts in such amounts as may be determined by the Secretary of Defense, with the approval of the Office of Management and Budget, except that such transfers may not be made unless the Secretary of Defense has notified the Congress of the proposed transfer. Except in amounts equal to the amounts appropriated to working capital funds in this Act, no obligations may be made against a working capital fund to procure or increase the value of war reserve material inventory, unless the Secretary of Defense has notified the Congress prior to any such obligation.

SEC. 8007. Funds appropriated by this Act may not be used to initiate a special access program without prior notification 30 calendar days in session in advance to the congressional defense committees.

SEC. 8008. None of the funds provided in this or any other Act hereafter shall be available to initiate: (1) a multiyear contract that employs economic order quantity procurement in excess of $20,000,000 in any one year of the contract or that includes an unfunded contingent liability in excess of $20,000,000; or (2) a contract for advance procurement leading to a multiyear contract that employs economic order quantity procurement in excess of $20,000,000 in any one year; or (3) a contract for any systems or component thereof if the value of the multiyear contract would exceed $100,000,000: Provided, That the limitations in the preceding provisos of this section do not apply to multiyear contracts awarded prior to the date of enactment of this Act or to multiyear contracts for which authority is specifically provided in subsequent defense authorization acts and appropriation acts: Provided further, That no funds in this or any other Act may be used to initiate, expand, or extend a multiyear contract unless the Secretary of Defense has specifically notified the congressional defense committees in writing thirty days in advance of contract award that such a contract is in the national interest: Provided further, That no multiyear contract may be terminated without ten day prior notification to the congressional defense committees: Provided further, That the execution of multiyear authority shall require the use of a present value analysis to determine lowest cost compared to an annual procurement.

SEC. 8009. Within the funds appropriated for the operation and maintenance of the Armed Forces, funds are hereby appropriated pursuant to section 401 of title 10, United States Code, for humanitarian and civic assistance costs under chapter 20 of title 10, United States Code. Such funds may also be obligated for humanitarian and civic assistance costs incidental to authorized operations and pursuant to authority granted in section 401 of chapter 20 of title 10, United States Code, and these obligations shall be reported to Congress on September 30 of each year: Provided, That funds available for operation and maintenance shall be available for providing humanitarian and similar assistance by using Civic Action Teams in the Trust Territories of the Pacific Islands and freely associated states of Micronesia, pursuant to the Compact of Free Association as authorized by Public Law 99-239: Provided further, That upon a determination by the Secretary of the Army that such action is beneficial for graduate medical education programs conducted at Army medical facilities located in Hawaii, the Secretary of the Army may authorize the provision of medical services at such facilities and transportation to such facilities, on a nonreimbursable basis, for civilian patients from American Samoa, the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands, the Marshall Islands, the Federated States of Micronesia, Palau, and Guam.

SEC. 8010. (a) During fiscal year 2000, the civilian personnel of the Department of Defense may not be managed on the basis of any end-strength, and the management of such personnel during that fiscal year shall not be subject to any constraint or limitation (known as an end-strength) on the number of such personnel who may be employed on the last day of such fiscal year.

(b) The fiscal year 2001 budget request for the Department of Defense as well as all justification material and other documentation supporting the fiscal year 2001 Department of Defense budget request shall be prepared and submitted to the Congress as if subsections (a) and (b) of this provision were effective with regard to fiscal year 2001.

(c) Nothing in this section shall be construed to apply to military (civilian) technicians.

SEC. 8011. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, none of the funds made available by this Act shall be used by the Department of Defense to exceed, outside the 50 United States, its territories, and the District of Columbia, 125,000 civilian workyears: Provided, That workyears shall be applied as defined in the Federal Personnel Manual: Provided further, That workyears expended in dependent student hiring programs for disadvantaged youths shall not be included in this workyear limitation.

SEC. 8012. None of the funds made available by this Act shall be used in any way, directly or indirectly, to influence congressional action on any legislation or appropriation matters pending before the Congress.

SEC. 8013. (a) None of the funds appropriated by this Act shall be used to make contributions to the Department of Defense Education Benefits Fund pursuant to section 2006(g) of title 10, United States Code, representing the normal cost for future benefits under section 3015(c) of title 38, United States Code, for any member of the armed services who, on or after the date of the enactment of this Act, enlists in the armed services for a period of active duty of less than three years, nor shall any amounts representing the normal cost of such future benefits be transferred from the Fund by the Secretary of the Treasury to the Secretary of Veterans Affairs pursuant to section 2006(d) of title 10, United States Code; nor shall the Secretary of Veterans Affairs pay such benefits to any such member: Provided, That these limitations shall not apply to members in combat arms skills or to members who enlist in the armed services on or after July 1, 1989, under a program continued or established by the Secretary of Defense in fiscal year 1991 to test the cost-effective use of special recruiting incentives involving not more than nineteen noncombat arms skills approved in advance by the Secretary of Defense: Provided further, That this subsection applies only to active components of the Army.

(b) None of the funds appropriated by this Act shall be available for the basic pay and allowances of any member of the Army participating as a full-time student and receiving benefits paid by the Secretary of Veterans Affairs from the Department of Defense Education Benefits Fund when time spent as a full-time student is credited toward completion of a service commitment: Provided, That this subsection shall not apply to those members who have reenlisted with this option prior to October 1, 1987: Provided further, That this subsection applies only to active components of the Army.

SEC. 8014. None of the funds appropriated by this Act shall be available to convert to contractor performance an activity or function of the Department of Defense that, on or after the date of the enactment of this Act, is performed by more than ten Department of Defense civilian employees until a most efficient and cost-effective organization analysis is completed on such activity or function and certification of the analysis is made to the Committees on Appropriations of the House of Representatives and the Senate: Provided, That this section and subsections (a), (b), and (c) of 10 U.S.C. 2461 shall not apply to a commercial or industrial type function of the Department of Defense that: (1) is included on the procurement list established pursuant to section 2 of the Act of June 25, 1938 (41 U.S.C. 47), popularly referred to as the Javits-Wagner-O'Day Act; (2) is planned to be converted to performance by a qualified nonprofit agency for the blind or by a qualified nonprofit agency for other severely handicapped individuals in accordance with that Act; or (3) is planned to be converted to performance by a qualified firm under 51 per centum Native American ownership.

(TRANSFER OF FUNDS)

SEC. 8015. Funds appropriated in title III of this Act for the Department of Defense Pilot Mentor-Protege Program may be transferred to any other appropriation contained in this Act solely for the purpose of implementing a Mentor-Protege Program developmental assistance agreement pursuant to section 831 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1991 (Public Law 101-510; 10 U.S.C. 2301 note), as amended, under the authority of this provision or any other transfer authority contained in this Act.

SEC. 8016. None of the funds in this Act may be available for the purchase by the Department of Defense (and its departments and agencies) of welded shipboard anchor and mooring chain 4 inches in diameter and under unless the anchor and mooring chain are manufactured in the United States from components which are substantially manufactured in the United States: Provided, That for the purpose of this section manufactured will include cutting, heat treating, quality control, testing of chain and welding (including the forging and shot blasting process): Provided further, That for the purpose of this section substantially all of the components of anchor and mooring chain shall be considered to be produced or manufactured in the United States if the aggregate cost of the components produced or manufactured in the United States exceeds the aggregate cost of the components produced or manufactured outside the United States: Provided further, That when adequate domestic supplies are not available to meet Department of Defense requirements on a timely basis, the Secretary of the service responsible for the procurement may waive this restriction on a case-by-case basis by certifying in writing to the Committees on Appropriations that such an acquisition must be made in order to acquire capability for national security purposes.

SEC. 8017. None of the funds appropriated by this Act available for the Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services (CHAMPUS) shall be available for the reimbursement of any health care provider for inpatient mental health service for care received when a patient is referred to a provider of inpatient mental health care or residential treatment care by a medical or health care professional having an economic interest in the facility to which the patient is referred: Provided, That this limitation does not apply in the case of inpatient mental health services provided under the program for the handicapped under subsection (d) of section 1079 of title 10, United States Code, provided as partial hospital care, or provided pursuant to a waiver authorized by the Secretary of Defense because of medical or psychological circumstances of the patient that are confirmed by a health professional who is not a Federal employee after a review, pursuant to rules prescribed by the Secretary, which takes into account the appropriate level of care for the patient, the intensity of services required by the patient, and the availability of that care.

SEC. 8018. Funds available in this Act may be used to provide transportation for the next-of-kin of individuals who have been prisoners of war or missing in action from the Vietnam era to an annual meeting in the United States, under such regulations as the Secretary of Defense may prescribe.

SEC. 8019. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, during the current fiscal year, the Secretary of Defense may, by executive agreement, establish with host nation governments in NATO member states a separate account into which such residual value amounts negotiated in the return of United States military installations in NATO member states may be deposited, in the currency of the host nation, in lieu of direct monetary transfers to the United States Treasury: Provided, That such credits may be utilized only for the construction of facilities to support United States military forces in that host nation, or such real property maintenance and base operating costs that are currently executed through monetary transfers to such host nations: Provided further, That the Department of Defense's budget submission for fiscal year 2001 shall identify such sums anticipated in residual value settlements, and identify such construction, real property maintenance or base operating costs that shall be funded by the host nation through such credits: Provided further, That all military construction projects to be executed from such accounts must be previously approved in a prior Act of Congress: Provided further, That each such executive agreement with a NATO member host nation shall be reported to the congressional defense committees, the Committee on International Relations of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Foreign Relations of the Senate 30 days prior to the conclusion and endorsement of any such agreement established under this provision.

SEC. 8020. None of the funds available to the Department of Defense may be used to demilitarize or dispose of M-1 Carbines, M-1 Garand rifles, M-14 rifles, .22 caliber rifles, .30 caliber rifles, or M-1911 pistols.

SEC. 8021. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, none of the funds appropriated by this Act shall be available to pay more than 50 per centum of an amount paid to any person under section 308 of title 37, United States Code, in a lump sum.

SEC. 8022. No more than $500,000 of the funds appropriated or made available in this Act shall be used during a single fiscal year for any single relocation of an organization, unit, activity or function of the Department of Defense into or within the National Capital Region: Provided, That the Secretary of Defense may waive this restriction on a case-by-case basis by certifying in writing to the congressional defense committees that such a relocation is required in the best interest of the Government.

SEC. 8023. A member of a reserve component whose unit or whose residence is located in a State which is not contiguous with another State is authorized to travel in a space required status on aircraft of the Armed Forces between home and place of inactive duty training, or place of duty in lieu of unit training assembly, when there is no road or railroad transportation (or combination of road and railroad transportation between those locations): Provided, That a member traveling in that status on a military aircraft pursuant to the authority provided in this section is not authorized to receive travel, transportation, or per diem allowances in connection with that travel.

SEC. 8024. (a) In addition to the funds provided elsewhere in this Act, $8,000,000 is appropriated only for incentive payments authorized by section 504 of the Indian Financing Act of 1974 (25 U.S.C. 1544): Provided, That contractors participating in the test program established by section 854 of Public Law 101-189 (15 U.S.C. 637 note) shall be eligible for the program established by section 504 of the Indian Financing Act of 1974 (25 U.S.C. 1544).

SEC. 8025. During the current fiscal year, funds appropriated or otherwise available for any Federal agency, the Congress, the judicial branch, or the District of Columbia may be used for the pay, allowances, and benefits of an employee as defined by section 2105 of title 5, United States Code, or an individual employed by the government of the District of Columbia, permanent or temporary indefinite, who—

(1) is a member of a Reserve component of the Armed Forces, as described in section 10101 of title 10, United States Code, or the National Guard, as described in section 101 of title 32, United States Code;

(2) performs, for the purpose of providing military aid to enforce the law or providing assistance to civil authorities in the protection or saving of life or property or prevention of injury—

(A) Federal service under sections 331, 332, 333, or 12406 of title 10, or other provision of law, as applicable; or

(B) full-time military service for his or her State, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, or a territory of the United States; and

(3) requests and is granted—

(A) leave under the authority of this section; or

(B) annual leave, which may be granted without regard to the provisions of sections 5519 and 6323(b) of title 5, if such employee is otherwise entitled to such annual leave:

Provided, That any employee who requests leave under subsection (3)(A) for service described in subsection (2) of this section is entitled to such leave, subject to the provisions of this section and of the last sentence of section 6323(b) of title 5, and such leave shall be considered leave under section 6323(b) of title 5, United States Code.

SEC. 8026. None of the funds appropriated by this Act shall be available to perform any cost study pursuant to the provisions of OMB Circular A-76 if the study being performed exceeds a period of 24 months after initiation of such study with respect to a single function activity or 48 months after initiation of such study for a multi-function activity.

SEC. 8027. Funds appropriated by this Act for the American Forces Information Service shall not be used for any national or international political or psychological activities.

SEC. 8028. Notwithstanding any other provision of law or regulation, the Secretary of Defense may adjust wage rates for civilian employees hired for certain health care occupations as authorized for the Secretary of Veterans Affairs by section 7455 of title 38, United States Code.

SEC. 8029. None of the funds appropriated or made available in this Act shall be used to reduce or disestablish the operation of the 53rd Weather Reconnaissance Squadron of the Air Force Reserve, if such action would reduce the WC-130 Weather Reconnaissance mission below the levels funded in this Act.

SEC. 8030. (a) Of the funds for the procurement of supplies or services appropriated by this Act, qualified nonprofit agencies for the blind or other severely handicapped shall be afforded the maximum practicable opportunity to participate as subcontractors and suppliers in the performance of contracts let by the Department of Defense.

(b) During the current fiscal year, a business concern which has negotiated with a military service or defense agency a subcontracting plan for the participation by small business concerns pursuant to section 8(d) of the Small Business Act (15 U.S.C. 637(d)) shall be given credit toward meeting that subcontracting goal for any purchases made from qualified nonprofit agencies for the blind or other severely handicapped.

(c) For the purpose of this section, the phrase "qualified nonprofit agency for the blind or other severely handicapped" means a nonprofit agency for the blind or other severely handicapped that has been approved by the Committee for the Purchase from the Blind and Other Severely Handicapped under the Javits-Wagner-O'Day Act (41 U.S.C. 46-48).

SEC. 8031. During the current fiscal year, net receipts pursuant to collections from third party payers pursuant to section 1095 of title 10, United States Code, shall be made available to the local facility of the uniformed services responsible for the collections and shall be over and above the facility's direct budget amount.

SEC. 8032. During the current fiscal year, the Department of Defense is authorized to incur obligations of not to exceed $350,000,000 for purposes specified in section 2350j(c) of title 10, United States Code, in anticipation of receipt of contributions, only from the Government of Kuwait, under that section: Provided, That upon receipt, such contributions from the Government of Kuwait shall be credited to the appropriations or fund which incurred such obligations.

SEC. 8033. Of the funds made available in this Act, not less than $26,588,000 shall be available for the Civil Air Patrol Corporation, of which $22,888,000 shall be available for Civil Air Patrol Corporation operation and maintenance to support readiness activities which includes $1,418,000 for the Civil Air Patrol counterdrug program: Provided, That funds identified for "Civil Air Patrol" under this section are intended for and shall be for the exclusive use of the Civil Air Patrol Corporation and not for the Air Force or any unit thereof.

SEC. 8034. (a) None of the funds appropriated in this Act are available to establish a new Department of Defense (department) federally funded research and development center (FFRDC), either as a new entity, or as a separate entity administrated by an organization managing another FFRDC, or as a nonprofit membership corporation consisting of a consortium of other FFRDCs and other non-profit entities.

(b) LIMITATION ON COMPENSATION—FEDERALLY FUNDED RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT CENTER (FFRDC).—No member of a Board of Directors, Trustees, Overseers, Advisory Group, Special Issues Panel, Visiting Committee, or any similar entity of a defense FFRDC, and no paid consultant to any defense FFRDC, except when acting in a technical advisory capacity, may be compensated for his or her services as a member of such entity, or as a paid consultant by more than one FFRDC in a fiscal year: Provided, That a member of any such entity referred to previously in this subsection shall be allowed travel expenses and per diem as authorized under the Federal Joint Travel Regulations, when engaged in the performance of membership duties.

(c) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, none of the funds available to the department from any source during fiscal year 2000 may be used by a defense FFRDC, through a fee or other payment mechanism, for construction of new buildings, for payment of cost sharing for projects funded by government grants, for absorption of contract overruns, or for certain charitable contributions, not to include employee participation in community service and/or development.

(d) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, of the funds available to the department during fiscal year 2000, not more than 6,206 staff years of technical effort (staff years) may be funded for defense FFRDCs: Provided, That of the specific amount referred to previously in this subsection, not more than 1,105 staff years may be funded for the defense studies and analysis FFRDCs.

(e) Within 60 days after the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report presenting the specific amounts of staff years of technical effort to be allocated by the department for each defense FFRDC during fiscal year 2000: Provided, That, after the submission of the report required by this subsection, the department may not reallocate more than 5 per centum of an FFRDC's staff years among other defense FFRDCs until 30 days after a detailed justification for any such reallocation is submitted to the congressional defense committees.

(f) The Secretary of Defense shall, with the submission of the department's fiscal year 2001 budget request, submit a report presenting the specific amounts of staff years of technical effort to be allocated for each defense FFRDC during that fiscal year.

(g) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, none of the reductions for advisory and assistance services contained in this Act shall be applied to defense FFRDCs.

SEC. 8035. None of the funds appropriated or made available in this Act shall be used to procure carbon, alloy or armor steel plate for use in any Government-owned facility or property under the control of the Department of Defense which were not melted and rolled in the United States or Canada: Provided, That these procurement restrictions shall apply to any and all Federal Supply Class 9515, American Society of Testing and Materials (ASTM) or American Iron and Steel Institute (AISI) specifications of carbon, alloy or armor steel plate: Provided further, That the Secretary of the military department responsible for the procurement may waive this restriction on a case-by-case basis by certifying in writing to the Committees on Appropriations of the House of Representatives and the Senate that adequate domestic supplies are not available to meet Department of Defense requirements on a timely basis and that such an acquisition must be made in order to acquire capability for national security purposes: Provided further, That these restrictions shall not apply to contracts which are in being as of the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 8036. For the purposes of this Act, the term "congressional defense committees" means the Armed Services Committee of the House of Representatives, the Armed Services Committee of the Senate, the Subcommittee on Defense of the Committee on Appropriations of the Senate, and the Subcommittee on Defense of the Committee on Appropriations of the House of Representatives.

SEC. 8037. During the current fiscal year, the Department of Defense may acquire the modification, depot maintenance and repair of aircraft, vehicles and vessels as well as the production of components and other Defense-related articles, through competition between Department of Defense depot maintenance activities and private firms: Provided, That the Senior Acquisition Executive of the military department or defense agency concerned, with power of delegation, shall certify that successful bids include comparable estimates of all direct and indirect costs for both public and private bids: Provided further, That Office of Management and Budget Circular A-76 shall not apply to competitions conducted under this section.

SEC. 8038. (a)(1) If the Secretary of Defense, after consultation with the United States Trade Representative, determines that a foreign country which is party to an agreement described in paragraph (2) has violated the terms of the agreement by discriminating against certain types of products produced in the United States that are covered by the agreement, the Secretary of Defense shall rescind the Secretary's blanket waiver of the Buy American Act with respect to such types of products produced in that foreign country.

(2) An agreement referred to in paragraph (1) is any reciprocal defense procurement memorandum of understanding, between the United States and a foreign country pursuant to which the Secretary of Defense has prospectively waived the Buy American Act for certain products in that country.

(b) The Secretary of Defense shall submit to Congress a report on the amount of Department of Defense purchases from foreign entities in fiscal year 2000. Such report shall separately indicate the dollar value of items for which the Buy American Act was waived pursuant to any agreement described in subsection (a)(2), the Trade Agreement Act of 1979 (19 U.S.C. 2501 et seq.), or any international agreement to which the United States is a party.

(c) For purposes of this section, the term "Buy American Act" means title III of the Act entitled "An Act making appropriations for the Treasury and Post Office Departments for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1934, and for other purposes", approved March 3, 1933 (41 U.S.C. 10a et seq.).

SEC. 8039. Appropriations contained in this Act that remain available at the end of the current fiscal year as a result of energy cost savings realized by the Department of Defense shall remain available for obligation for the next fiscal year to the extent, and for the purposes, provided in section 2865 of title 10, United States Code.

(INCLUDING TRANSFER OF FUNDS)

SEC. 8040. Amounts deposited during the current fiscal year to the special account established under 40 U.S.C. 485(h)(2) and to the special account established under 10 U.S.C. 2667(d)(1) are appropriated and shall be available until transferred by the Secretary of Defense to current applicable appropriations or funds of the Department of Defense under the terms and conditions specified by 40 U.S.C. 485(h)(2)(A) and (B) and 10 U.S.C. 2667(d)(1)(B), to be merged with and to be available for the same time period and the same purposes as the appropriation to which transferred.

SEC. 8041. During the current fiscal year, appropriations available to the Department of Defense may be used to reimburse a member of a reserve component of the Armed Forces who is not otherwise entitled to travel and transportation allowances and who occupies transient government housing while performing active duty for training or inactive duty training: Provided, That such members may be provided lodging in kind if transient government quarters are unavailable as if the member was entitled to such allowances under subsection (a) of section 404 of title 37, United States Code: Provided further, That if lodging in kind is provided, any authorized service charge or cost of such lodging may be paid directly from funds appropriated for operation and maintenance of the reserve component of the member concerned.

SEC. 8042. The President shall include with each budget for a fiscal year submitted to the Congress under section 1105 of title 31, United States Code, materials that shall identify clearly and separately the amounts requested in the budget for appropriation for that fiscal year for salaries and expenses related to administrative activities of the Department of Defense, the military departments, and the Defense agencies.

SEC. 8043. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, funds available for "Drug Interdiction and Counter-Drug Activities, Defense" may be obligated for the Young Marines program.

SEC. 8044. During the current fiscal year, amounts contained in the Department of Defense Overseas Military Facility Investment Recovery Account established by section 2921(c)(1) of the National Defense Authorization Act of 1991 (Public Law 101-510; 10 U.S.C. 2687 note) shall be available until expended for the payments specified by section 2921(c)(2) of that Act.

SEC. 8045. Of the funds appropriated or otherwise made available by this Act, not more than $119,200,000 shall be available for payment of the operating costs of NATO Headquarters: Provided, That the Secretary of Defense may waive this section for Department of Defense support provided to NATO forces in and around the former Yugoslavia.

SEC. 8046. During the current fiscal year, appropriations which are available to the Department of Defense for operation and maintenance may be used to purchase items having an investment item unit cost of not more than $100,000.

SEC. 8047. (a) During the current fiscal year, none of the appropriations or funds available to the Department of Defense Working Capital Funds shall be used for the purchase of an investment item for the purpose of acquiring a new inventory item for sale or anticipated sale during the current fiscal year or a subsequent fiscal year to customers of the Department of Defense Working Capital Funds if such an item would not have been chargeable to the Department of Defense Business Operations Fund during fiscal year 1994 and if the purchase of such an investment item would be chargeable during the current fiscal year to appropriations made to the Department of Defense for procurement.

(b) The fiscal year 2001 budget request for the Department of Defense as well as all justification material and other documentation supporting the fiscal year 2001 Department of Defense budget shall be prepared and submitted to the Congress on the basis that any equipment which was classified as an end item and funded in a procurement appropriation contained in this Act shall be budgeted for in a proposed fiscal year 2001 procurement appropriation and not in the supply management business area or any other area or category of the Department of Defense Working Capital Funds.

SEC. 8048. None of the funds appropriated by this Act for programs of the Central Intelligence Agency shall remain available for obligation beyond the current fiscal year, except for funds appropriated for the Reserve for Contingencies, which shall remain available until September 30, 2001: Provided, That funds appropriated, transferred, or otherwise credited to the Central Intelligence Agency Central Services Working Capital Fund during this or any prior or subsequent fiscal year shall remain available until expended.

SEC. 8049. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, funds made available in this Act for the Defense Intelligence Agency may be used for the design, development, and deployment of General Defense Intelligence Program intelligence communications and intelligence information systems for the Services, the Unified and Specified Commands, and the component commands.

SEC. 8050. Of the funds appropriated by the Department of Defense under the heading "Operation and Maintenance, Defense-Wide", not less than $8,000,000 shall be made available only for the mitigation of environmental impacts, including training and technical assistance to tribes, related administrative support, the gathering of information, documenting of environmental damage, and developing a system for prioritization of mitigation and cost to complete estimates for mitigation, on Indian lands resulting from Department of Defense activities.

SEC. 8051. Amounts collected for the use of the facilities of the National Science Center for Communications and Electronics during the current fiscal year pursuant to section 1459(g) of the Department of Defense Authorization Act, 1986, and deposited to the special account established under subsection 1459(g)(2) of that Act are appropriated and shall be available until expended for the operation and maintenance of the Center as provided for in subsection 1459(g)(2).

SEC. 8052. None of the funds appropriated in this Act may be used to fill the commander's position at any military medical facility with a health care professional unless the prospective candidate can demonstrate professional administrative skills.

SEC. 8053. (a) None of the funds appropriated in this Act may be expended by an entity of the Department of Defense unless the entity, in expending the funds, complies with the Buy American Act. For purposes of this subsection, the term "Buy American Act" means title III of the Act entitled "An Act making appropriations for the Treasury and Post Office Departments for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1934, and for other purposes", approved March 3, 1933 (41 U.S.C. 10a et seq.).

(b) If the Secretary of Defense determines that a person has been convicted of intentionally affixing a label bearing a "Made in America" inscription to any product sold in or shipped to the United States that is not made in America, the Secretary shall determine, in accordance with section 2410f of title 10, United States Code, whether the person should be debarred from contracting with the Department of Defense.

(c) In the case of any equipment or products purchased with appropriations provided under this Act, it is the sense of the Congress that any entity of the Department of Defense, in expending the appropriation, purchase only American-made equipment and products, provided that American-made equipment and products are cost-competitive, quality-competitive, and available in a timely fashion.

SEC. 8054. None of the funds appropriated by this Act shall be available for a contract for studies, analysis, or consulting services entered into without competition on the basis of an unsolicited proposal unless the head of the activity responsible for the procurement determines—

(1) as a result of thorough technical evaluation, only one source is found fully qualified to perform the proposed work;

(2) the purpose of the contract is to explore an unsolicited proposal which offers significant scientific or technological promise, represents the product of original thinking, and was submitted in confidence by one source; or

(3) the purpose of the contract is to take advantage of unique and significant industrial accomplishment by a specific concern, or to insure that a new product or idea of a specific concern is given financial support:

Provided, That this limitation shall not apply to contracts in an amount of less than $25,000, contracts related to improvements of equipment that is in development or production, or contracts as to which a civilian official of the Department of Defense, who has been confirmed by the Senate, determines that the award of such contract is in the interest of the national defense.

SEC. 8055. (a) Except as provided in subsections (b) and (c), none of the funds made available by this Act may be used—

(1) to establish a field operating agency; or
(2) to pay the basic pay of a member of the Armed Forces or civilian employee of the department who is transferred or reassigned from a headquarters activity if the member or employee's place of duty remains at the location of that headquarters.

(b) The Secretary of Defense or Secretary of a military department may waive the limitations in subsection (a), on a case-by-case basis, if the Secretary determines, and certifies to the Committees on Appropriations of the House of Representatives and Senate that the granting of the waiver will reduce the personnel requirements or the financial requirements of the department.

(c) This section does not apply to field operating agencies funded within the National Foreign Intelligence Program.

SEC. 8056. Funds appropriated by this Act and in Public Law 105-277, or made available by the transfer of funds in this Act and in Public Law 105-277 for intelligence activities are deemed to be specifically authorized by the Congress for purposes of section 504 of the National Security Act of 1947 (50 U.S.C. 414) during fiscal year 2000 until the enactment of the Intelligence Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2000.

SEC. 8057. Notwithstanding section 303 of Public Law 96-487 or any other provision of law, the Secretary of the Navy is authorized to lease real and personal property at Naval Air Facility, Adak, Alaska, pursuant to 10 U.S.C. 2667(f), for commercial, industrial or other purposes: Provided, That notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Secretary of the Navy may remove hazardous materials from facilities, buildings, and structures at Adak, Alaska, and may demolish or otherwise dispose of such facilities, buildings, and structures: Provided further, That notwithstanding any other provision of law, not more than $4,650,000 of the funds provided under the heading "Operation and Maintenance, Army" in title II of this Act shall be available to the Secretary of the Army, acting through the Chief of Engineers, only for demolition and removal of facilities, buildings, and structures formerly used as a District Headquarters Office by the Corps of Engineers (Northwest Division, CENWW, Washington State), as described in the study conducted regarding the headquarters pursuant to the Energy and Water Development Appropriations Act, 1992 (Public Law 102-104; 105 Stat. 511).

(RESCISSIONS)

SEC. 8058. Of the funds provided in Department of Defense Appropriations Acts, the following funds are hereby rescinded as of the date of the enactment of this Act, or October 1, 1999, whichever is later, from the following accounts and programs in the specified amounts:

“Other Procurement, Navy, 1998/2000”, $6,384,000;

“Research, Development, Test and Evaluation, Defense-Wide, 1999/2000”, $23,500,000.

SEC. 8059. None of the funds available in this Act may be used to reduce the authorized positions for military (civilian) technicians of the National Guard, the Air National Guard, Army Reserve and Air Force Reserve for the purpose of applying any administratively imposed civilian personnel ceiling, freeze, or reduction on military (civilian) technicians, unless such reductions are a direct result of a reduction in military force structure.

SEC. 8060. None of the funds appropriated or otherwise made available in this Act may be obligated or expended for assistance to the Democratic People's Republic of North Korea unless specifically appropriated for that purpose.

SEC. 8061. During the current fiscal year, funds appropriated in this Act are available to compensate members of the National Guard for duty performed pursuant to a plan submitted by a Governor of a State and approved by the Secretary of Defense under section 112 of title 32, United States Code: Provided, That during the performance of such duty, the members of the National Guard shall be under State command and control: Provided further, That such duty shall be treated as full-time National Guard duty for purposes of sections 12602(a)(2) and (b)(2) of title 10, United States Code.

SEC. 8062. Funds appropriated in this Act for operation and maintenance of the Military Departments, Unified and Specified Commands and Defense Agencies shall be available for reimbursement of pay, allowances and other expenses which would otherwise be incurred against appropriations for the National Guard and Reserve when members of the National Guard and Reserve provide intelligence or counterintelligence support to Unified Commands, Defense Agencies and Joint Intelligence Activities, including the activities and programs included within the National Foreign Intelligence Program (NFIP), the Joint Military Intelligence Program (JMIP), and the Tactical Intelligence and Related Activities (TIARA) aggregate: Provided, That nothing in this section authorizes deviation from established Reserve and National Guard personnel and training procedures.

SEC. 8063. During the current fiscal year, none of the funds appropriated in this Act may be used to reduce the civilian medical and medical support personnel assigned to military treatment facilities below the September 30, 1999 level: Provided, That the Service Surgeons General may waive this section by certifying to the congressional defense committees that the beneficiary population is declining in some catchment areas and civilian strength reductions may be consistent with responsible resource stewardship and capitation-based budgeting.

(INCLUDING TRANSFER OF FUNDS)

SEC. 8064. (a) None of the funds appropriated in this Act may be transferred to or obligated from the Pentagon Reservation Maintenance Revolving Fund, unless the Secretary of Defense certifies that the total cost for the planning, design, construction and installation of equipment for the renovation of the Pentagon Reservation will not exceed $1,222,000,000.

(b) The Secretary shall, in conjunction with the Pentagon Renovation, design and construct secure secretarial offices and support facilities and security-related changes to the subway entrance at the Pentagon Reservation.

SEC. 8065. (a) None of the funds available to the Department of Defense for any fiscal year for drug interdiction or counter-drug activities may be transferred to any other department or agency of the United States except as specifically provided in an appropriations law.

(b) None of the funds available to the Central Intelligence Agency for any fiscal year for drug interdiction and counter-drug activities may be transferred to any other department or agency of the United States except as specifically provided in an appropriations law.

(TRANSFER OF FUNDS)

SEC. 8066. Appropriations available in this Act under the heading “Operation and Maintenance, Defense-Wide” for increasing energy and water efficiency in Federal buildings may, during their period of availability, be transferred to other appropriations or funds of the Department of Defense for projects related to increasing energy and water efficiency, to be merged with and to be available for the same general purposes, and for the same time period, as the appropriation or fund to which transferred.

SEC. 8067. None of the funds appropriated by this Act may be used for the procurement of ball and roller bearings other than those produced by a domestic source and of domestic origin: Provided, That the Secretary of the military department responsible for such procurement may waive this restriction on a case-by-case basis by certifying in writing to the Committees on Appropriations of the House of Representatives and the Senate, that adequate domestic supplies are not available to meet Department of Defense requirements on a timely basis and that such an acquisition must be made in order to acquire capability for national security purposes.

SEC. 8068. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, funds available to the Department of Defense shall be made available to provide transportation of medical supplies and equipment, on a nonreimbursable basis, to American Samoa: Provided, That notwithstanding any other provision of law, funds available to the Department of Defense shall be made available to provide transportation of medical supplies and equipment, on a non-reimbursable basis, to the Indian Health Service when it is in conjunction with a civil-military project.

SEC. 8069. None of the funds in this Act may be used to purchase any supercomputer which is not manufactured in the United States, unless the Secretary of Defense certifies to the congressional defense committees that such an acquisition must be made in order to acquire capability for national security purposes that is not available from United States manufacturers.

SEC. 8070. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Naval shipyards of the United States shall be eligible to participate in any manufacturing extension program financed by funds appropriated in this or any other Act.

SEC. 8071. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, each contract awarded by the Department of Defense during the current fiscal year for construction or service performed in whole or in part in a State which is not contiguous with another State and has an unemployment rate in excess of the national average rate of unemployment as determined by the Secretary of Labor, shall include a provision requiring the contractor to employ, for the purpose of performing that portion of the contract in such State that is not contiguous with another State, individuals who are residents of such State and who, in the case of any craft or trade, possess or would be able to acquire promptly the necessary skills: Provided, That the Secretary of Defense may waive the requirements of this section, on a case-by-case basis, in the interest of national security.

SEC. 8072. During the current fiscal year, the Army shall use the former George Air Force Base as the airhead for the National Training Center at Fort Irwin: Provided, That none of the funds in this Act shall be obligated or expended to transport Army personnel into Edwards Air Force Base for training rotations at the National Training Center.

SEC. 8073. (a) The Secretary of Defense shall submit, on a quarterly basis, a report to the congressional defense committees, the Committee on International Relations of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Foreign Relations of the Senate setting forth all costs (including incremental costs) incurred by the Department of Defense during the preceding quarter in implementing or supporting resolutions of the United Nations Security Council, including any such resolution calling for international sanctions, international peacekeeping operations, and humanitarian missions undertaken by the Department of Defense. The quarterly report shall include an aggregate of all such Department of Defense costs by operation or mission.

(b) The Secretary of Defense shall detail in the quarterly reports all efforts made to seek credit against past United Nations expenditures and all efforts made to seek compensation from the United Nations for costs incurred by the Department of Defense in implementing and supporting United Nations activities.

SEC. 8074. (a) LIMITATION ON TRANSFER OF DEFENSE ARTICLES AND SERVICES.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, none of the funds available to the Department of Defense for the current fiscal year may be obligated or expended to transfer to another nation or an international organization any defense articles or services (other than intelligence services) for use in the activities described in subsection (b) unless the congressional defense committees, the Committee on International Relations of the House of Representatives, and the Committee on Foreign Relations of the Senate are notified 15 days in advance of such transfer.

(b) COVERED ACTIVITIES.—This section applies to—

(1) any international peacekeeping or peace-enforcement operation under the authority of chapter VI or chapter VII of the United Nations Charter under the authority of a United Nations Security Council resolution; and

(2) any other international peacekeeping, peace-enforcement, or humanitarian assistance operation.

(c) REQUIRED NOTICE.—A notice under subsection (a) shall include the following:

(1) A description of the equipment, supplies, or services to be transferred.

(2) A statement of the value of the equipment, supplies, or services to be transferred.

(3) In the case of a proposed transfer of equipment or supplies—

(A) a statement of whether the inventory requirements of all elements of the Armed Forces (including the reserve components) for the type of equipment or supplies to be transferred have been met; and

(B) a statement of whether the items proposed to be transferred will have to be replaced and, if so, how the President proposes to provide funds for such replacement.

SEC. 8075. To the extent authorized by subchapter VI of chapter 148 of title 10, United States Code, the Secretary of Defense may issue loan guarantees in support of United States defense exports not otherwise provided for: Provided, That the total contingent liability of the United States for guarantees issued under the authority of this section may not exceed $15,000,000,000: Provided further, That the exposure fees charged and collected by the Secretary for each guarantee, shall be paid by the country involved and shall not be financed as part of a loan guaranteed by the United States: Provided further, That the Secretary shall provide quarterly reports to the Committees on Appropriations, Armed Services and Foreign Relations of the Senate and the Committees on Appropriations, Armed Services and International Relations in the House of Representatives on the implementation of this program: Provided further, That amounts charged for administrative fees and deposited to the special account provided for under section 2540(c)(d) of title 10, shall be available for paying the costs of administrative expenses of the Department of Defense that are attributable to the loan guarantee program under subchapter VI of chapter 148 of title 10, United States Code.

SEC. 8076. None of the funds available to the Department of Defense shall be obligated or expended to make a financial contribution to the United Nations for the cost of an United Nations peacekeeping activity (whether pursuant to assessment or a voluntary contribution) or for payment of any United States arrearage to the United Nations.

SEC. 8077. None of the funds available to the Department of Defense under this Act shall be obligated or expended to pay a contractor under a contract with the Department of Defense for costs of any amount paid by the contractor to an employee when—

(1) such costs are for a bonus or otherwise in excess of the normal salary paid by the contractor to the employee; and

(2) such bonus is part of restructuring costs associated with a business combination.

SEC. 8078. (a) None of the funds appropriated or otherwise made available in this Act may be used to transport or provide for the transportation of chemical munitions or agents to the Johnston Atoll for the purpose of storing or demilitarizing such munitions or agents.

(b) The prohibition in subsection (a) shall not apply to any obsolete World War II chemical munition or agent of the United States found in the World War II Pacific Theater of Operations.

(c) The President may suspend the application of subsection (a) during a period of war in which the United States is a party.

SEC. 8079. None of the funds provided in title II of this Act for “Former Soviet Union Threat Reduction” may be obligated or expended to finance housing for any individual who was a member of the military forces of the Soviet Union or for any individual who is or was a member of the military forces of the Russian Federation.

(INCLUDING TRANSFER OF FUNDS)

SEC. 8080. During the current fiscal year, no more than $5,000,000 of appropriations made in this Act under the heading “Operation and Maintenance, Defense-Wide” may be transferred to appropriations available for the pay of military personnel, to be merged with, and to be available for the same time period as the appropriations to which transferred, to be used in support of such personnel in connection with support and services for eligible organizations and activities outside the Department of Defense pursuant to section 2012 of title 10, United States Code.

SEC. 8081. For purposes of section 1553(b) of title 31, United States Code, any subdivision of appropriations made in this Act under the heading “Shipbuilding and Conversion, Navy” shall be considered to be for the same purpose as any subdivision under the heading “Shipbuilding and Conversion, Navy” appropriations in any prior year, and the 1 percent limitation shall apply to the total amount of the appropriation.

SEC. 8082. During the current fiscal year, in the case of an appropriation account of the Department of Defense for which the period of availability for obligation has expired or which has closed under the provisions of section 1552 of title 31, United States Code, and which has a negative unliquidated or unexpended balance, an obligation or an adjustment of an obligation may be charged to any current appropriation account for the same purpose as the expired or closed account if—

(1) the obligation would have been properly chargeable (except as to amount) to the expired or closed account before the end of the period of availability or closing of that account;

(2) the obligation is not otherwise properly chargeable to any current appropriation account of the Department of Defense; and

(3) in the case of an expired account, the obligation is not chargeable to a current appropriation of the Department of Defense under the provisions of section 1405(b)(8) of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1991, Public Law 101-510, as amended (31 U.S.C. 1551 note): Provided, That in the case of an expired account, if subsequent review or investigation discloses that there was not in fact a negative unliquidated or unexpended balance in the account, any charge to a current account under the authority of this section shall be reversed and recorded against the expired account: Provided further, That the total amount charged to a current appropriation under this section may not exceed an amount equal to 1 percent of the total appropriation for that account.

(TRANSFER OF FUNDS)

SEC. 8083. Upon enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense shall make the following transfers of funds: Provided, That the amounts transferred shall be available for the same purposes as the appropriations to which transferred, and for the same time period as the appropriation from which transferred: Provided further, That the amounts shall be transferred between the following appropriations in the amount specified:

SEC. 8084. The Under Secretary of Defense (Comptroller) shall submit to the congressional defense committees by February 1, 2000, a detailed report identifying, by amount and by separate budget activity, activity group, subactivity group, line item, program element, program, project, subproject, and activity, any activity for which the fiscal year 2001 budget request was reduced because Congress appropriated funds above the President's budget request for that specific activity for fiscal year 2000.

SEC. 8085. Funds appropriated in title II of this Act and for the Defense Health Program in title VI of this Act for supervision and administration costs for facilities maintenance and repair, minor construction, or design projects may be obligated at the time the reimbursable order is accepted by the performing activity: Provided, That for the purpose of this section, supervision and administration costs includes all in-house Government cost.

SEC. 8086. The Secretary of Defense may waive reimbursement of the cost of conferences, seminars, courses of instruction, or similar educational activities of the Asia-Pacific Center for Security Studies for military officers and civilian officials of foreign nations if the Secretary determines that attendance by such personnel, without reimbursement, is in the national security interest of the United States: Provided, That costs for which reimbursement is waived pursuant to this subsection shall be paid from appropriations available for the Asia-Pacific Center.

SEC. 8087. (a) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Chief of the National Guard Bureau may permit the use of equipment of the National Guard Distance Learning Project by any person or entity on a space-available, reimbursable basis. The Chief of the National Guard Bureau shall establish the amount of reimbursement for such use on a case-by-case basis.

(b) Amounts collected under subsection (a) shall be credited to funds available for the National Guard Distance Learning Project and be available to defray the costs associated with the use of equipment of the project under that subsection. Such funds shall be available for such purposes without fiscal year limitation.

SEC. 8088. Using funds available by this Act or any other Act, the Secretary of the Air Force, pursuant to a determination under section 2690 of title 10, United States Code, may implement cost-effective agreements for required heating facility modernization in the Kaiserslautern Military Community in the Federal Republic of Germany: Provided, That in the City of Kaiserslautern such agreements will include the use of United States anthracite as the base load energy for municipal district heat to the United States Defense installations: Provided further, That at Landstuhl Army Regional Medical Center and Ramstein Air Base, furnished heat may be obtained from private, regional or municipal services, if provisions are included for the consideration of United States coal as an energy source.

SEC. 8089. Notwithstanding 31 U.S.C. 3902, during the current fiscal year, interest penalties may be paid by the Department of Defense from funds financing the operation of the military department or defense agency with which the invoice or contract payment is associated.

SEC. 8090. None of the funds appropriated in title IV of this Act may be used to procure end-items for delivery to military forces for operational training, operational use or inventory requirements: Provided, That this restriction does not apply to end-items used in development, prototyping, and test activities preceding and leading to acceptance for operational use: Provided further, That this restriction does not apply to programs funded within the National Foreign Intelligence Program: Provided further, That the Secretary of Defense may waive this restriction on a case-by-case basis by certifying in writing to the Committees on Appropriations of the House of Representatives and the Senate that it is in the national security interest to do so.

(RESCISSIONS)

SEC. 8091. Of the funds provided in the Department of Defense Appropriations Act, 1999 (Public Law 105-262), $452,100,000, to reflect savings from revised economic assumptions, is hereby rescinded as of the date of enactment of this Act, or October 1, 1999, whichever is later, from the following accounts in the specified amounts:

"Aircraft Procurement, Army", $8,000,000;
 "Missile Procurement, Army", $7,000,000;
 "Procurement of Weapons and Tracked Combat Vehicles, Army", $9,000,000;
 "Procurement of Ammunition, Army", $6,000,000;
 "Other Procurement, Army", $19,000,000;
 "Aircraft Procurement, Navy", $44,000,000;
 "Weapons Procurement, Navy", $8,000,000;
 "Procurement of Ammunition, Navy and Marine Corps", $3,000,000;
 "Shipbuilding and Conversion, Navy", $37,000,000;
 "Other Procurement, Navy", $23,000,000;
 "Procurement, Marine Corps", $5,000,000;
 "Aircraft Procurement, Air Force", $46,000,000;
 "Missile Procurement, Air Force", $14,000,000;
 "Procurement of Ammunition, Air Force", $2,000,000;
 "Other Procurement, Air Force", $44,400,000;
 "Procurement, Defense-Wide", $5,200,000;
 "Chemical Agents and Munitions Destruction, Army", $5,000,000;
 "Research, Development, Test and Evaluation, Army", $20,000,000;
 "Research, Development, Test and Evaluation, Navy", $40,900,000;
 "Research, Development, Test and Evaluation, Air Force", $76,900,000; and
 "Research, Development, Test and Evaluation, Defense-Wide", $28,700,000:
Provided, That these reductions shall be applied proportionally to each budget activity, activity group and subactivity group and each program, project, and activity within each appropriation account.

SEC. 8092. The budget of the President for fiscal year 2001 submitted to Congress pursuant to section 1105 of title 31, United States Code, and each annual budget request thereafter, shall include budget activity groups (known as "subactivities") in all appropriations accounts provided in this Act, as may be necessary, to separately identify all costs incurred by the Department of Defense to support the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and all Partnership For Peace programs and initiatives. The budget justification materials submitted to Congress in support of the budget of the Department of Defense for fiscal year 2001, and subsequent fiscal years, shall provide complete, detailed estimates for all such costs.

SEC. 8093. None of the funds made available in this Act may be used to approve or license the sale of the F-22 advanced tactical fighter to any foreign government.

SEC. 8094. (a) The Secretary of Defense may, on a case-by-case basis, waive with respect to a foreign country each limitation on the procurement of defense items from foreign sources provided in law if the Secretary determines that the application of the limitation with respect to that country would invalidate cooperative programs entered into between the Department of Defense and the foreign country, or would invalidate reciprocal trade agreements for the procurement of defense items entered into under section 2531 of title 10, United States Code, and the country does not discriminate against the same or similar defense items produced in the United States for that country.

(b) Subsection (a) applies with respect to—
(1) contracts and subcontracts entered into on or after the date of the enactment of this Act; and

(2) options for the procurement of items that are exercised after such date under contracts that are entered into before such date if the option prices are adjusted for any reason other than the application of a waiver granted under subsection (a).

(c) Subsection (a) does not apply to a limitation regarding construction of public vessels, ball and roller bearings, food, and clothing or textile materials as defined by section 11 (chapters 50-65) of the Harmonized Tariff Schedule and products classified under headings 4010, 4202, 4203, 6401 through 6406, 6505, 7019, 7218 through 7229, 7304.41 through 7304.49, 7306.40, 7502 through 7508, 8105, 8108, 8109, 8211, 8215, and 9404.

SEC. 8095. Funds made available to the Civil Air Patrol in this Act under the heading "Drug Interdiction and Counter-Drug Activities, Defense" may be used for the Civil Air Patrol Corporation's counterdrug program, including its demand reduction program involving youth programs, as well as operational and training drug reconnaissance missions for Federal, State and local government agencies; for administrative costs, including the hiring of Civil Air Patrol Corporation employees; for travel and per diem expenses of Civil Air Patrol Corporation personnel in support of those missions; and for equipment needed for mission support or performance: Provided, That of these funds, $300,000 shall be made available to establish and operate a distance learning program: Provided further, That the Department of the Air Force should waive reimbursement from the Federal, State and local government agencies for the use of these funds.

SEC. 8096. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the TRICARE managed care support contracts in effect, or in final stages of acquisition as of September 30, 1999, may be extended for two years: Provided, That any such extension may only take place if the Secretary of Defense determines that it is in the best interest of the Government: Provided further, That any contract extension shall be based on the price in the final best and final offer for the last year of the existing contract as adjusted for inflation and other factors mutually agreed to by the contractor and the Government: Provided further, That notwithstanding any other provision of law, all future TRICARE managed care support contracts replacing contracts in effect, or in the final stages of acquisition as of September 30, 1999, may include a base contract period for transition and up to seven one-year option periods.

SEC. 8097. None of the funds in this Act may be used to compensate an employee of the Department of Defense who initiates a new start program without notification to the Office of the Secretary of Defense, the Office of Management and Budget, and the congressional defense committees, as required by Department of Defense financial management regulations.

SEC. 8098. Section 8118 of the Department of Defense Appropriations Act, 1999 (Public Law 105-262; 112 Stat. 2331; 10 U.S.C. 2241 note) is amended by striking "convicted" and inserting "debarred by the Department of Defense based upon a conviction".

SEC. 8099. In addition to the amounts provided elsewhere in this Act, notwithstanding any other provision of law, $5,000,000 is hereby appropriated to the Office of the Secretary of Defense, and is available only for a grant to the Women in Military Service for America Memorial Foundation, Inc., only for costs associated with completion of the "Women in Military Service For America" memorial at Arlington National Cemetery.

TRAINING AND OTHER PROGRAMS

SEC. 8100. (a) PROHIBITION.—None of the funds made available by this Act may be used to support any training program involving a unit of the security forces of a foreign country if the Secretary of Defense has received credible information from the Department of State that the unit has committed a gross violation of human rights, unless all necessary corrective steps have been taken.

(b) MONITORING.—The Secretary of Defense, in consultation with the Secretary of State, shall ensure that prior to a decision to conduct any training program referred to in subsection (a), full consideration is given to all credible information available to the Department of State relating to human rights violations by foreign security forces.

(c) WAIVER.—The Secretary of Defense, after consultation with the Secretary of State, may waive the prohibition in subsection (a) if he determines that such waiver is required by extraordinary circumstances.

SEC. 8101. Notwithstanding any other provision in this Act, the total amount appropriated in this Act is hereby reduced by $171,000,000 to reflect savings from favorable foreign currency fluctuations, to be distributed as follows:

"Military Personnel, Army", $19,100,000;
"Military Personnel, Navy", $2,200,000;
"Military Personnel, Air Force", $9,900,000;
"Operation and Maintenance, Army", $80,700,000;
"Operation and Maintenance, Navy", $13,700,000;
"Operation and Maintenance, Air Force", $26,900,000;
"Operation and Maintenance, Defense-Wide", $8,700,000; and

"Defense Health Program", $9,800,000.

SEC. 8102. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Secretary of Defense may retain all or a portion of the family housing at Fort Buchanan, Puerto Rico, as the Secretary deems necessary to meet military family housing needs arising out of the relocation of elements of the United States Army South to Fort Buchanan.

U.S. ARMY NATIONAL TRAINING CENTER ACCESS AND TRAINING ENHANCEMENTS

SEC. 8103. From within amounts made available in title II of this Act, under the heading "Operation and Maintenance, Army", and notwithstanding any other provision of law, $12,500,000 shall be available only for repairs and safety improvements to the segment of Fort Irwin Road which extends from Interstate 15 northeast toward the boundary of Fort Irwin, California and the originating intersection of Irwin Road: Provided, That these funds shall remain available until expended: Provided further, That the authorized scope of work includes, but is not limited to, environmental documentation and mitigation, engineering and design, improving safety, resurfacing, widening lanes, and replacing signs and pavement markings: Provided further, That these funds may be used for advances to the Federal Highway Administration, Department of Transportation, for the authorized scope of work.

SEC. 8104. Funds appropriated to the Department of the Navy in title II of this Act may be available to replace lost and canceled Treasury checks issued to Trans World Airlines in the total amount of $255,333.24 for which timely claims were filed and for which detailed supporting records no longer exist.

SEC. 8105. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, section 112 of Public Law 105-261 shall apply only to phase III of the Army's second source acquisition strategy for medium tactical vehicles.

SEC. 8106. None of the funds appropriated or made available in this Act to the Department of the Navy shall be used to develop, lease or procure the ADC(X) class of ships unless the main propulsion diesel engines are manufactured in the United States by a domestically operated entity: Provided, That the Secretary of Defense may waive this restriction on a case-by-case basis by certifying in writing to the Committees on Appropriations of the House of Representatives and the Senate that adequate domestic supplies are not available to meet Department of Defense requirements on a timely basis and that such an acquisition must be made in order to acquire capability for national security purposes or there exists a significant cost or quality difference.

SEC. 8107. From within amounts made available in title II of this Act under the heading "Operation and Maintenance, Defense-Wide", and notwithstanding any other provision of law, $2,500,000 shall be available only for a grant for "America's Promise—The Alliance for Youth, Inc.", only to support, on a dollar-for-dollar matching basis with non-departmental funds, efforts to mobilize individuals, groups and organizations to build and strengthen the character and competence of the Nation's youth.

SEC. 8108. Of the funds made available in this Act, not less than $47,100,000 shall be available to maintain an attrition reserve force of 23 B-52 aircraft, of which $3,000,000 shall be available from "Military Personnel, Air Force", $34,500,000 shall be available from "Operation and Maintenance, Air Force", and $9,600,000 shall be available from "Air-craft Procurement, Air Force": Provided,

That the Secretary of the Air Force shall maintain a total force of 94 B-52 aircraft, including 23 attrition reserve aircraft, during fiscal year 2000: Provided further, That the Secretary of Defense shall include in the Air Force budget request for fiscal year 2001 amounts sufficient to maintain a B-52 force totaling 94 aircraft.

SEC. 8109. Notwithstanding any other provision in this Act, the total amount appropriated in title II is hereby reduced by $100,000,000 to reflect savings resulting from reviews of Department of Defense missions and functions conducted pursuant to Office of Management and Budget Circular A-76, to be distributed as follows:

“Operation and Maintenance, Army”, $34,300,000;

“Operation and Maintenance, Navy”, $22,800,000;

“Operation and Maintenance, Marine Corps”, $1,400,000; and “Operation and Maintenance, Air Force”, $41,500,000.

Provided, That none of the funds appropriated or otherwise made available by this Act may be obligated or expended for the purpose of contracting out functions directly related to the award of Department of Defense contracts, oversight of contractors with the Department of Defense, or the payment of such contractors including, but not limited to: contracting technical officers, contact administration officers, accounting and finance officers, and budget officers.

SEC. 8110. (a) REPORT ON OMB CIRCULAR A-76 REVIEWS OF WORK PERFORMED BY DOD EMPLOYEES.—The Secretary of Defense shall submit a report not later than 90 days after the enactment of this Act which lists all instances since 1995 in which missions or functions of the Department of Defense have been reviewed by the Department of Defense pursuant to OMB Circular A-76. The report shall list the disposition of each such review and indicate whether the review resulted in the performance of such missions or functions by Department of Defense civilian and military personnel, or whether such reviews resulted in performance by contractors. The report shall include a description of the types of missions or functions, the locations where the missions or functions are performed, the name of the contractor performing the work (if applicable), the cost to perform the missions or functions at the time the review was conducted, and the current cost to perform the missions or functions.

(b) REPORT ON OMB CIRCULAR A-76 REVIEWS OF WORK PERFORMED BY DOD CONTRACTORS.—The report shall also identify those instances in which work performed by a contractor has been converted to performance by civilian or military employees of the Department of Defense. For each instance of contracting in, the report shall include a description of the types of work, the locations where the work was performed, the name of the contractor that was performing the work, the cost of contractor performance at the time the work was contracted in, and the current cost of performance by civilian or military employees of the Department of Defense. In addition, the report shall include recommendations for maximizing the possibility of effective public-private competition for work that has been contracted out.

(c) COMPTROLLER GENERAL REVIEW.—Not later than 90 days after the date on which the Secretary submits the annual report, the Comptroller General shall submit to the House and Senate Committees on Appropriations the Comptroller General's views on whether the Department has complied with the requirements for the report.

SEC. 8111. The budget of the President for fiscal year 2001 submitted to Congress pursuant to section 1105 of title 31, United States Code, and each annual budget request thereafter, shall include separate budget justification documents for costs of United States armed forces' participation in contingency operations for the Military Personnel accounts, the Procurement accounts, and the Overseas Contingency Operations Transfer Fund: Provided, That these budget justification documents shall include a description of the funding requested for each anticipated contingency operation, for each military service, to include active duty and Guard and Reserve components, and for each appropriation account: Provided further, That these documents shall include estimated costs for each element of expense or object class, a reconciliation of increases and decreases for ongoing contingency operations, and programmatic data including, but not limited to troop strength for each active duty and Guard and Reserve component, and estimates of the major weapons systems deployed in support of each contingency.

SEC. 8112. In addition to amounts otherwise appropriated or made available by this Act, $20,000,000 is appropriated to the Army National Guard and shall be available only for the purpose of the procurement or lease of fire-fighting aircraft or systems.

(INCLUDING TRANSFER OF FUNDS)

SEC. 8113. In addition to amounts appropriated or otherwise made available in this Act, $50,000,000 is hereby appropriated, only to initiate and expand activities of the Department of Defense to prevent, prepare for, and respond to a terrorist attack in the United States involving weapons of mass destruction: Provided, That funds made available under this section shall be transferred to the following accounts:

“Reserve Personnel, Army”, $2,000,000;

“National Guard Personnel, Army”, $4,310,000;

“National Guard Personnel, Air Force”, $1,080,000;

“Operation and Maintenance, Army”, $12,110,000;

“Operation and Maintenance, Army National Guard”, $12,320,000;

“Other Procurement, Army”, $12,180,000; and “Research, Development, Test and Evaluation, Army”, $6,000,000.

Provided further, That funds transferred pursuant to this section shall be merged with and be available for the same purposes and for the same time period as the appropriation to which transferred: Provided further, That the transfer authority provided in this section is in addition to any other transfer authority available to the Department of Defense: Provided further, That of the funds transferred to “Operation and Maintenance, Army National Guard”, not less than $3,000,000 shall be made available only to establish cost effective counter-terrorism training of first responders and concurrent testing of response apparatus and equipment at the Memorial Tunnel Facility as part of the WMD Study under the WMD Task Force: Provided further, That of the funds transferred to “Operation and Maintenance, Army National Guard”, not less than $2,000,000 shall be made available only to support development of a structured undergraduate research program designed to produce graduates with specialized laboratory training and scientific skills required by military and industrial laboratories engaged in combating the threat of biological and chemical terrorism: Provided further, That of the funds transferred to “Operation and Maintenance, Army National Guard”, not less than $3,500,000 shall be made available only to enhance distance learning technologies and develop related courseware to provide training for counter-terrorism and related concerns: Provided further, That of the funds transferred to “Research, Development, Test and Evaluation, Army”, not less than $3,000,000 shall be made available only to continue development and presentation of advanced distributed learning consequence management response courses and conventional courses.

(INCLUDING TRANSFER OF FUNDS)

SEC. 8114. In addition to the amounts made available elsewhere in this Act, $150,000,000, to remain available until expended, is hereby appropriated to “Operation and Maintenance, Defense-Wide”, only for information assurance programs, to include protection from non-authorized access to information technology systems and computer systems, and for related infrastructure expenses: Provided, That funds under this heading may only be obligated after the approval of the Deputy Secretary of Defense: Provided further, That none of the funds provided by this provision may be obligated or transferred to other appropriations accounts until fifteen days after the Deputy Secretary of Defense has submitted to the House and Senate Committees on Appropriations a proposed funding allocation and a plan for the Department of Defense to achieve information superiority and information assurance: Provided further, That the Deputy Secretary of Defense shall provide written notification to the House and Senate Committees on Appropriations prior to the transfer of any amount in excess of $10,000,000 to a specific program or project: Provided further, That funds made available under this heading may be transferred only to operation and maintenance accounts, procurement accounts, the Defense Health Program appropriation, and research, development, test and evaluation accounts: Provided further, That the funds transferred shall be merged with and shall be available for the same purposes and for the same time period as the appropriation to which transferred: Provided further, That the transfer authority provided in this section shall be in addition to the transfer authority provided to the Department of Defense in this Act or any other Act.

SEC. 8115. (a) The Secretary of Defense shall, along with submission of the fiscal year 2001 budget request for the Department of Defense, submit to the congressional defense committees a report, in both unclassified and classified versions, which contains an assessment of the advantages or disadvantages of deploying a ground-based National Missile Defense system at more than one site.

(b) This report shall include, but not be limited to, an assessment of the following issues:

(1) The ability of a single site, versus multiple sites, to counter the expected ballistic missile threat;

(2) The optimum basing locations for a single and multiple site National Missile Defense system;

(3) The survivability and redundancy of potential National Missile Defense systems under a single or multiple site architecture;

(4) The estimated costs (including development, construction and infrastructure, and procurement of equipment) associated with different site deployment options; and

(5) Other issues bearing on deploying a National Missile Defense system at one or more sites.

SEC. 8116. The Secretary of the Navy and the Secretary of the Air Force each shall submit a report to the congressional defense committees within 90 days of enactment of this Act in both classified and unclassified form which shall provide a detailed description of the dedicated aggressor squadrons used to conduct combat flight training for the Navy, Marine Corps and Air Force covering the period from fiscal year 1990 through the present. For each year of the specified time period, each report shall provide a detailed description of the following: the assets which comprise dedicated aggressor squadrons including both aircrews, and the types and models of aircraft assigned to these squadrons; the number of training sorties for all forms of combat flight training which require aggressor aircraft, and the number of sorties that the dedicated aggressor squadrons can generate to meet these requirements; the ratio of the total inventory of attack and fighter aircraft to the number of aircraft available for dedicated aggressor squadrons; a comparison of the performance characteristics of the aircraft assigned to dedicated aggressor squadrons compared to the performance characteristics of the aircraft they are intended to represent in training scenarios; an assessment of pilot proficiency by year from 1986 to the present; Service recommendations to enhance aggressor squadron proficiency to include number of dedicated aircraft, equipment, facilities, and personnel; and a plan that proposes improvements in dissimilar aircraft air combat training.

SEC. 8117. None of the funds appropriated or otherwise made available by this or other Department of Defense Appropriations Acts may be obligated or expended for the purpose of performing repairs or maintenance to military family housing units of the Department of Defense, including areas in such military family housing units that may be used for the purpose of conducting official Department of Defense business: Provided, That the Department of Defense Office of the Inspector General shall provide a report to the House and Senate Committees on Appropriations not later than 60 days after the enactment of this Act which assesses the compliance of each of the military services with applicable appropriations law, Office of Management and Budget circulars, and Undersecretary of Defense (Comptroller) directives which govern funding for maintenance and repairs to flag officer quarters: Provided further, That this report shall include an assessment as to whether there have been violations of the Anti-Deficiency Act resulting from instances of improper funding of such maintenance and repair projects.

SEC. 8118. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, funds appropriated in this Act under the heading "Research, Development, Test and Evaluation, Defense-Wide" for any advanced concept technology demonstration project may only be obligated thirty days after a report, including a description of the project and its estimated annual and total cost, has been provided in writing to the congressional defense committees: Provided, That the Secretary of Defense may waive this restriction on a case-by-case basis by certifying to the congressional defense committees that it is in the national interest to do so: Provided further, That none of the funds appropriated under the heading "Research, Development, Test and Evaluation, Defense-Wide" in the Department of Defense Appropriations Act, 1999 (Public Law 105-262) are available for the Line of Sight Anti-Tank Program: Provided further, That of the funds appropriated under the heading "Research, Development, Test and Evaluation, Defense-Wide" in Public Law 105-262, $10,027,000 shall be available only for the Air Directed Surface to Air Missile.

SEC. 8119. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, none of the funds appropriated or otherwise made available by this Act may be used for concept development, pre-engineering management and development, engineering management and development, risk reduction, program office operations, travel of Department of Defense personnel, or contributions to international cooperative efforts for the Medium Extended Air Defense System, or successor systems: Provided, That none of the funds appropriated under the heading "Research, Development, Test and Evaluation, Defense-Wide" in the Department of Defense Appropriations Act, 1999 (Public Law 105-262) are available for the Medium Extended Air Defense System or successor systems.

SEC. 8120. None of the funds in this Act may be used to conduct a Defense Acquisition Board oversight review of a major weapon system acquisition unless the Commander-in-Chief of the United States Atlantic Command is a fully participating member of the Board which is conducting the review: Provided, That none of the funds in this Act may be used for the Defense Acquisition Board to approve a major weapon system acquisition to proceed into a subsequent phase of development or production unless the Commander-in-Chief of the United States Atlantic Command certifies to the congressional defense committees that the acquisition fully meets joint service interoperability requirements as determined by the theater Commanders-in-Chief: Provided further, That no additional funds or personnel beyond those contained in the fiscal year 2000 President's budget for ongoing United States Atlantic Command activities are available to support participation by the Commander-in-Chief of the United States Atlantic Command in Defense Acquisition Board weapon system reviews.

SEC. 8121. Of the funds appropriated in title II of this Act under the heading "Operation and Maintenance, Army", $250,000 shall be available only for a grant to the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission for the purpose of locating, identifying the boundaries of, acquiring, preserving, and memorializing the cemetery site that is located in close proximity to Fort Atkinson, Nebraska. The Secretary of the Army shall require as a condition of such grant that the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission, in carrying out the purposes of which the grant is made, work in conjunction with the Nebraska State Historical Society. The grant under this section shall be made without regard to section 1301 of title 31, United States Code, or any other provision of law.

SEC. 8122. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, for the purpose of establishing all Department of Defense policies governing the provision of care provided by and financed under the military health care system, the term "custodial care" shall be defined as care designed essentially to assist an individual in meeting the activities of daily living and which does not require the supervision of trained medical, nursing, paramedical or other specially trained individuals.

SEC. 8123. During the current fiscal year—

(1) refunds attributable to the use of the Government travel card and refunds attributable to official Government travel arranged by Government Contracted Travel Management Centers may be credited to operation and maintenance accounts of the Department of Defense which are current when the refunds are received; and

(2) refunds attributable to the use of the Government Purchase Card by military personnel and civilian employees of the Department of Defense may be credited to accounts of the Department of Defense that are current when the refunds are received and that are available for the same purposes as the accounts originally charged.

SEC. 8124. During the current fiscal year and hereafter, any Federal grant of funds to an institution of higher education to be available solely for student financial assistance or related administrative costs may be used for the purpose for which the grant is made without regard to any provision to the contrary in section 514 of the Departments of Labor, Health and Human Services, Education, and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 1997 (10 U.S.C. 503 note), or section 983 of title 10, United States Code.

INFORMATION TECHNOLOGY SYSTEMS

SEC. 8125. (a) REGISTERING WITH DOD CHIEF INFORMATION OFFICER.—After March 31, 2000, none of the funds appropriated in this Act may be used for an information technology system that is not registered with the Chief Information Officer of the Department of Defense. A system shall be considered to be registered with that officer upon the furnishing to that officer of notice of the system, together with such information concerning the system as the Secretary of Defense may prescribe.

(b) MILESTONE CERTIFICATIONS TO CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEES.—An information technology system may not receive Milestone I approval, Milestone II approval, or Milestone III approval until the Chief Information Officer of the Department of Defense provides to the congressional defense committees written certification, with respect to that milestone, that the system is being developed in accordance with the sections 5122 and 5123 of the Clinger-Cohen Act of 1996 (40 U.S.C. 1422, 1423). The Chief Information Officer shall include with any such certification a report providing, at a minimum, the funding baseline and milestone schedule for the system and confirmation that the following steps have been taken with respect to the system:

- (1) Business process reengineering.
 - (2) An analysis of alternatives.
 - (3) An economic analysis that includes a calculation of the return on investment.
 - (4) Performance measures.
 - (5) Effective information security measure.
- (c) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section:

(1) The term "Chief Information Officer" means the senior official of the Department of Defense designated by the Secretary of Defense pursuant to section 3506 of title 44, United States Code.

(2) The term "information technology" has the meaning given that term in section 5002 of the Clinger-Cohen Act of 1996 (40 U.S.C. 1401), but does not include a national security system.

(3) The term "national security system" has the meaning given that term in section 5142 of such Act (40 U.S.C. 1452).

SEC. 8126. During the current fiscal year, none of the funds available to the Department of Defense may be used to provide support to another department or agency of the United States if such department or agency is more than 90 days in arrears in making payment to the Department of Defense for goods or services previously provided to such department or agency on a reimbursable basis: Provided, That this restriction shall not apply if the Department is authorized by law to provide support to such department or agency on a nonreimbursable basis, and is providing the requested support pursuant to such authority: Provided further, That the Secretary of Defense may waive this restriction on a case-by-case basis by certifying in writing to the Committees on Appropriations of the House of Representatives and the Senate that it is in the national security interest to do so.

SEC. 8127. (a) RECOVERY OF CERTAIN DOD ADMINISTRATIVE EXPENSES IN CONNECTION WITH FOREIGN MILITARY SALES PROGRAM.—Charges for administrative services calculated under section 21(e) of the Arms Export Control Act (22 U.S.C. 2761(e)) in connection with the sale of defense articles or defense services shall (notwithstanding paragraph (3) of section 43(b) of such Act (22 U.S.C. 2792(b))) include recovery of administrative expenses incurred by the Department of Defense during fiscal year 2000 that are attributable to (1) salaries of members of the Armed Forces, and (2) unfunded estimated costs of civilian retirement and other benefits.

(b) REIMBURSEMENT OF APPLICABLE MILITARY PERSONNEL ACCOUNTS.—During the current fiscal year, amounts in the Foreign Military Sales Trust Fund shall be available in an amount not to exceed $63,000,000 to reimburse the applicable military personnel accounts in title I of this Act for the value of administrative expenses referred in subsection (a)(1).

(c) REDUCTIONS TO REFLECT AMOUNTS EXPECTED TO BE RECOVERED.—(1) The amounts in title I of this Act are hereby reduced by an aggregate of $63,000,000 (such amount being the amount expected to be recovered by reason of subsection (a)(1)).

(2) The amounts in title II of this Act are hereby reduced by an aggregate of $31,000,000 (such amount being that amount expected to be recovered by reason of subsection (a)(2)).

SEC. 8128. (a) The Communications Act of 1934 is amended in section 337(b) (47 U.S.C. 337(b)), by deleting paragraph (2). Upon enactment of this provision, the FCC shall initiate the competitive bidding process in fiscal year 1999 and shall conduct the competitive bidding in a manner that ensures that all proceeds of such bidding are deposited in accordance with section 309(j)(8) of the Act not later than September 30, 2000. To expedite the assignment by competitive bidding of the frequencies identified in section 337(a)(2) of the Act, the rules governing such frequencies shall be effective immediately upon publication in the Federal Register, notwithstanding 5 U.S.C. 553(d), 801(a)(3), 804(2), and 806(a). Chapter 6 of such title, 15 U.S.C. 632, and 44 U.S.C. 3507 and 3512, shall not apply to the rules and competitive bidding procedures governing such frequencies. Notwithstanding section 309(b) of the Act, no application for an instrument of authorization for such frequencies shall be granted by the Commission earlier than 7 days following issuance of public notice by the Commission of the acceptance for filing of such application or of any substantial amendment thereto. Notwithstanding section 309(d)(1) of such Act, the Commission may specify a period (no less than 5 days following issuance of such public notice) for the filing of petitions to deny any application for an instrument of authorization for such frequencies.

(b)(1) Not later than 15 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Director of the Office of Management and Budget and the Federal Communications Commission shall each submit to the appropriate congressional committees a report which shall—

(A) set forth the anticipated schedule (including specific dates) for—

(i) preparing and conducting the competitive bidding process required by subsection (a); and

(ii) depositing the receipts of the competitive bidding process;

(B) set forth each significant milestone in the rulemaking process with respect to the competitive bidding process;

(C) include an explanation of the effect of each requirement in subsection (a) on the schedule for the competitive bidding process and any post-bidding activities (including the deposit of receipts) when compared with the schedule for the competitive bidding and any post-bidding activities (including the deposit of receipts) that would otherwise have occurred under section 337(b)(2) of the Communications Act of 1934 (47 U.S.C. 337(b)(2)) if not for the enactment of subsection (a);

(D) set forth for each spectrum auction held by the Federal Communications Commission since 1993 information on—

(i) the time required for each stage of preparation for the auction;

(ii) the date of the commencement and of the completion of the auction;

(iii) the time which elapsed between the date of the completion of the auction and the date of the first deposit of receipts from the auction in the Treasury; and

(iv) the dates of all subsequent deposits of receipts from the auction in the Treasury; and

(E) include an assessment of how the stages of the competitive bidding process required by subsection (a), including preparation, commencement and completion, and deposit of receipts, will differ from similar stages in the auctions referred to in subparagraph (D).

(2) Not later than October 5, 2000, the Director of the Office of Management and Budget and the Federal Communications Commission shall each submit to the appropriate congressional committees the report which shall—

(A) describe the course of the competitive bidding process required by subsection (a) through September 30, 2000, including the amount of any receipts from the competitive bidding process deposited in the Treasury as of September 30, 2000; and

(B) if the course of the competitive bidding process has included any deviations from the schedule set forth under paragraph (1)(A), an explanation for such deviations from the schedule.

(3) The Federal Communications Commission may not consult with the Director in the preparation and submittal of the reports required of the Commission by this subsection.

(4) In this subsection, the term “appropriate congressional committees” means the following:

(A) The Committees on Appropriations, the Budget, and Commerce of the Senate.

(B) The Committees on Appropriations, the Budget, and Commerce of the House of Representatives.

DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE REPORT ON THE CONDUCT OF OPERATION DESERT FOX AND OPERATION ALLIED FORCE

SEC. 8129. (a) REPORT REQUIRED.—Not later than January 31, 2000, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the congressional defense committees in both classified and unclassified form a report on the conduct of Operation Desert Fox and Operation Allied Force (also referred to as Operation Noble Anvil). The Secretary of Defense shall submit to such committees a preliminary report on the conduct of these operations not later than October 15, 1999. The report (including the preliminary report) should be prepared in consultation with the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, the Commander in Chief of the United States Central Command, and the Commander in Chief of the United States European Command.

(b) REVIEW OF SUCCESSES AND DEFICIENCIES.—The report should contain a thorough review of the successes and deficiencies of these operations, with respect to the following matters:

(1) United States military objectives in these operations.

(2) With respect to Operation Allied Force, the military strategy of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) to obtain said military objectives.

(3) The command structure for the execution of Operation Allied Force.

(4) The process for identifying, nominating, selecting, and verifying targets to be attacked during Operation Desert Fox and Operation Allied Force.

(5) A comprehensive battle damage assessment of targets prosecuted during the conduct of the air campaigns in these operations, to include—

(A) fixed targets, both military and civilian, to include bridges, roads, rail lines, airfields, power generating plants, broadcast facilities, oil refining infrastructure, fuel and munitions storage installations, industrial plants producing military equipment, command and control nodes, civilian leadership bunkers and military barracks;

(B) mobile military targets such as tanks, armored personnel carriers, artillery pieces, trucks, and air defense assets;

(C) with respect to Operation Desert Fox, research and production facilities associated with Iraq's weapons of mass destruction and ballistic missile programs, and any military units or organizations associated with such activities within Iraq; and

(D) a discussion of decoy, deception and counter-intelligence techniques employed by the Iraqi and Serbian military.

(6) The use and performance of United States military equipment, weapon systems, munitions, and national and tactical reconnaissance and surveillance assets (including items classified under special access procedures) and an analysis of—

(A) any equipment or capabilities that were in research and development and if available could have been used in these operations' respective theater of operations;

(B) any equipment or capabilities that were available and could have been used but were not introduced into these operations' respective theater of operations; and

(C) any equipment or capabilities that were introduced to these operations' respective theater of operations that could have been used but were not.

(7) Command, control, communications and operational security of NATO forces as a whole and United States forces separately during Operation Allied Force, including the ability of United States aircraft to operate with aircraft of other nations without degradation of capabilities or protection of United States forces.

(8) The deployment of United States forces and supplies to the theater of operations, including an assessment of airlift and sealift

(to include a specific assessment of the deployment of Task Force Hawk during Operation Allied Force, to include detailed explanations for the delay in initial deployment, the suitability of equipment deployed compared to other equipment in the U.S. inventory that was not deployed, and a critique of the training provided to operational personnel prior to and during the deployment).

(9) The use of electronic warfare assets, in particular an assessment of the adequacy of EA-6B aircraft in terms of inventory, capabilities, deficiencies, and ability to provide logistics support.

(10) The effectiveness of reserve component forces including their use and performance in the theater of operations.

(11) The contributions of United States (and with respect to Operation Allied Force, NATO) intelligence and counterintelligence systems and personnel, including an assessment of the targeting selection and bomb damage assessment process.

(c) The report should also contain:

(1) An analysis of the transfer of operational assets from other United States Unified Commands to these operations' theater of operations and the impact on the readiness, warfighting capability and deterrence value of those commands.

(2) An analysis of the implications of these operations as regards the ability of United States armed forces and intelligence capabilities to carry out the current national security strategy, including—

(A) whether the Department of Defense and its components, and the intelligence community and its components, have sufficient force structure and manning as well as equipment (to include items such as munitions stocks) to deploy, prosecute and sustain operations in a second major theater of war as called for under the current national security strategy;

(B) which, if any aspects, of currently programmed manpower, operations, training and other readiness programs, and weapons and other systems are found to be inadequate in terms of supporting the national military strategy; and

(C) what adjustments need to be made to current defense planning and budgets, and specific programs to redress any deficiencies identified by this analysis.

This Act may be cited as the "Department of Defense Appropriations Act, 2000".

AMENDMENT NO. 7 OFFERED BY MR. KUCINICH

Mr. KUCINICH. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment No. 7 offered by Mr. KUCINICH: At the end of the bill insert after the last section (preceding the short title) the following new section:

SEC. —. None of the funds made available in this Act may be used to procure a munition of a type referred to as a "cluster bomb" (also known as "combined effects munitions", "CBU munitions", "sensor-fused weapons", "area-impact munitions", "anti-personnel bomblets", "anti-material bomblets", and "anti-armor bomblets").

Mr. KUCINICH. Mr. Chairman, I rise today to offer an amendment that would prohibit any funds for the procurement of cluster bombs. Cluster bombs come in all types, sizes, colors and labels. But they all do two things. They often fail to explode when dropped in wartime, and they kill innocent civilians long after the war is over.

These weapons are dropped either by aircraft or rocket launchers. They break open in midair and disperse hundreds of bomblets that saturate an area with flying shards of steel. Cluster bombs turn into land mines when some of the bomblets fail to explode right away. The failure rate in cluster weapons is extremely high, between 5 percent to 30 percent. A GAO report on Desert Storm states that during the Gulf War, the Army's MLRS, the military launch rocket system, failed to explode when dropped more than 5 percent of the time, with some reaching a failure rate as high as 23 percent.

These unexploded bombs essentially become land mines and wreak havoc and kill civilians long after the war is over. About 1,100 cluster bombs containing more than 200,000 bomblets rained down on Yugoslavia and the Kosovo province. More than 1,100 unexploded bomblets are lying in fields in Kosovo. Usually these weapons come in various colors and toy-sized shapes to designate their type. They are very attractive to young children. Many of these children that play or are curious about these bombs are either killed or maimed. A recent example of this took place Saturday, April 24, when five ethnic Albanian children ages 3 to 15 were killed by unexploded cluster bombs trying to pry one open with a knife. According to the World Health Organization, in the past month over 170 people, that is over 170 people, have been killed or maimed by unexploded cluster bombs. Only last month, two British soldiers were killed trying to defuse an unexploded cluster bomb.

During the Gulf War, more than one-quarter of the total number of weapons dropped by aircraft in Iraq and Kuwait were cluster bombs. This means that 24 million to 30 million bomblets were dropped during the Gulf War. More than 1.2 million of these bombs failed to explode during the Gulf War and are now killing people, even though the war is over. More than 1,600 civilians were killed and over 2,500 injured in the first 2 years after the end of the Gulf War from cluster bombs. A Kuwaiti doctor said that 60 percent of those killed were children.

During the Vietnam War, more than 2.3 million tons of bombs fell on Laos. Many of them were cluster bombs. With a failure rate of 30 percent, an estimated 4 million cluster bomblets are still lying in rice fields, villages and on roadsides in Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia.

I want to bring my colleagues' attention to a young boy who fell victim to a cluster bomb explosion just 2 years ago, in 1996, 20 years after the end of the Vietnam War. While tilling the family rice paddy behind a water buffalo Ton Kemla's plow hit a long-hidden cluster bomblet that exploded and ripped him apart. My colleagues, because of cluster bombs, a young man in Laos became a victim of the war 20 years after the conclusion of the war. He had not even been born when the war officially ended. No difference, cluster bombs destroyed him even after the troops stopped fighting. He is not alone. There are many like him.

I ask why do we buy weapons and use weapons that have such a high incidence of failure and a high likelihood of killing after the war is over? We have much more sophisticated weaponry that is smarter and more effective in fighting a war. We will have spent more than $4.8 billion between 1995 and 1999 buying cluster bombs. We should not spend another penny on weapons that fail and that kill children after a war is over.

In addition to that, we have incidents where cluster bombs were dropped on populated areas during the war. What is NATO doing letting cluster bombs fall on populated areas?

Mr. MURTHA. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the amendment.

I appreciate what the gentleman from Ohio is saying. I appreciate the tragedy in every war. Having been on the ground in combat myself, I have seen the mutilation of people affected by the wars themselves. It is not a pretty sight. We have had some record that we have had some problems with cluster bombs. It seems to me, though, that to ban them completely would endanger our own troops. I would have to oppose this strongly until we had an opportunity to maybe work out something, where in case we are fighting the type of war we did lately, that we would not use them in that type of war. I do not even know that I could agree to that. But I certainly could not agree to not using them at a time when it protects our own forces.

Mr. KUCINICH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MURTHA. I yield to the gentleman from Ohio.

Mr. KUCINICH. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding. One of the things that called this to my attention is there was a dropping of cluster bombs at a downtown area of Nice, killing and injuring scores of shoppers and destroying about 20 homes.

Mr. MURTHA. I understand what the gentleman is saying, and I appreciate what he is saying. I think it is something we should look into. I would like to get this to a vote so we can move on with the bill.

Mr. KUCINICH. I respect the gentleman.

I would ask the gentleman, finally, if the gentleman would be interested in at least reviewing this policy related to cluster bombs being dropped near populated areas.

Mr. MURTHA. I think that is a legitimate request, and, working with the committee, I am sure we can work something out here.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. KUCINICH).

The amendment was rejected.

AMENDMENT NO. 8 OFFERED BY MR. KUCINICH

Mr. KUCINICH. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment No. 8 offered by Mr. KUCINICH:

At the end of the bill, insert after the last section (preceding the short title) the following new section:

SEC. . (a) The Comptroller General, the Director of the Congressional Budget Office, and the Director of the Congressional Research Service of the Library of Congress shall conduct such studies as appropriate and within their respective capabilities to assist Congress in evaluating the air campaign conducted by the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) against the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia during Operation Allied Force in 1999. Those studies shall, at a minimum, identify the following matters:

(1) The damage that the NATO plan for the air campaign identified as necessary.

(2) The reasons why that damage was identified as being necessary.

(3) The military forces that the plan required and the extent to which those forces were committed.

(4) The extent to which the air campaign achieved the desired level of damage.

(5) The extent to which the damage caused by the air campaign had the predicted effects in terms of reducing capabilities of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia in Kosovo.

(6) The extent to which the damage caused by the air campaign had the predicted effects in terms of undermining command and control capabilities of the ruling regime of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia.

(7) The role of the bombing in obtaining the agreement of the regime of the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia to the Military Technical Agreement of June 10, 1999.

(8) Any other factors that led to the decision by the regime of the Federal Republic to the Military Technical Agreement of June 10, 1999.

(b) The studies under subsection (a) shall be submitted to Congress not later than one year after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(c) All data that would be declassified in the course of the studies under subsection (a) shall be electronically published on the Internet, and statistical data shall be electronically published in spreadsheet form, for use by the public, academicians, and non-governmental organizations.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order on the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from California reserves a point of order.

Mr. KUCINICH. Mr. Chairman, the amendment I am offering today should not be controversial. The purpose of the amendment is to direct the Congressional Research Service, the Congressional Budget Office, and the General Accounting Office to coordinate a study that would evaluate the effectiveness of the air campaign in the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia and in Kosovo.

Astonishingly, no one is now conducting a study of such depth. Indeed, the Department of Defense is undertaking its own study of its performance in Yugoslavia. I commend them for doing that. But in my opinion their review will not go far enough. It will not completely answer an important question that many of us are asking: Was the bombing campaign effective in achieving our strategic and tactical goals in the Balkans?

Many lessons will be learned from the Kosovo war. But will they be the right lessons? Will they be correct or will they be clouded in bias by various interests? The study I propose would allow for a truly independent study conducted by various independent organizations. After 1 year, the report would be given to Congress and the data would be published on the Internet so that the public could have free and open access to it.

Mr. MURTHA. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. KUCINICH. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. MURTHA. If the gentleman would consider withdrawing this amendment, I would coordinate with him a letter from he and I to the GAO to get the kind of independent study he wants. I think it is a legitimate request, I think it is something we should do, and I think we should find out exactly what somebody outside the services believes about the bombing campaign and how effective it was and the other things that he has talked about.

Mr. KUCINICH. I am interested in doing that. Could we also ask the GAO to perform this study quickly so that important evidence would not be lost?

Mr. MURTHA. Absolutely.

Mr. KUCINICH. Then I would gratefully express my appreciation to the gentleman from Pennsylvania. I look forward to writing that letter with him.

Mr. Chairman, I withdraw my amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the amendment is withdrawn.

There was no objection.

Mr. TERRY. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

I rise to engage the gentleman from California in a colloquy on a matter of concern that was brought to my attention by members of the Guard and Reserve. They believe that some savings may be realized by conversion of positions.

I had planned to offer an amendment to clarify the scope of the Defense Department's study of contracting out military and civilian positions pursuant to OMB Circular A-76. As the gentleman from California knows, the Department of Defense announced in 1995 that it could save approximately $10 billion over the next 10 years by contracting out 230,000 jobs to the private sector. While I support the savings, I want to make sure that privatization does not harm war-fighting capability of the United States Armed Forces.

According to this week's "Defense News," Department of Defense officials are beginning to rethink their policy of planned competitions because some of the services have asked if they could achieve the required manpower and cost savings through their own re-engineering.

This is what I believe we need to address. The Department of Defense has moved rapidly towards outsourcing, without allowing the individual service chiefs or base commanders the opportunity to meet manpower reductions and cost savings through other means. The Congress should encourage defense officials to consider savings that might be realized by giving greater consideration to retaining members of the military service and civilian personnel to perform required Department of Defense workload. I believe that cost savings can still be realized without affecting our war-fighting capability.

I want to commend the gentleman from California for his efforts in assessing the privatization issue. I ask him if he agrees that section 8109 and 8110 of the bill before us would cause the Department of Defense to give greater consideration to retaining government civilian employees and military members when considering whether to contract out support functions.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TERRY. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, I want to thank my colleague from Nebraska for bringing his concern to my attention, and I share his concern about the potential consequences that the current outsourcing initiative may have on the Department of Defense. I would also like to assure the gentleman that the intent of sections 8109 and 8110 is to give greater consideration to government employees and military service members as the Department of Defense continues its outsourcing initiative.

Mr. TERRY. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. STARK

Mr. STARK. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. STARK:

At the end of the bill, insert after the last section (preceding the short title) the following new section:

SEC.—. None of the funds made available in this Act may be used by the Armed Forces to participate in, or to provide support for, any airshow or trade exhibition held outside the United States.

Mr. STARK (during the reading). Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

Mr. STARK. Mr. Chairman, this is a simple amendment, and it does not save much money, but we learned from years ago from H. R. Gross that we save a little bit at a time and it adds up to a big amount.

But we have been subsidizing defense contractors at air shows designed to sell our weapons to foreign governments. I have no quarrel, and I am not here to debate the value or the validity of air shows, but I am suggesting that we have had a long history with this, and it culminated in 1992 when a U.S. Marine aircraft crashed on its way back from the Singapore airport, and in response to that misuse of taxpayers' money, because we had subsidized that air show by sending our planes, our men to basically be demonstrators or sales people—

Mr. MURTHA. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STARK. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. MURTHA. Mr. Chairman, there is no question we banned this at one time, we have had an erosion on the plan, we agree with what the gentleman is trying to do, and on behalf of the minority Democrat side I certainly would be glad to accept the amendment.

Mr. STARK. I appreciate the gentleman.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STARK. I yield to the distinguished gentleman from California.

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Chairman, I very much appreciate my colleague bringing this matter to our attention. I have a very similar interests that he has here, and we are happy to accept the gentleman's amendment.

Mr. STARK. The gentleman's record is well known in that regard, and I deeply appreciate his support of this amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from California (Mr. STARK).

The amendment was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. Are there any further amendments?

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of H.R. 2561, the Defense Appropriations Act. I would like to thank Chairman LEWIS and Ranking Member MURTHA for their excellent work on this bill. And while thanking the Chairman and Ranking Member is customary, I believe that the Committee this year was able, through congressional oversight and additional funding, to begin the process of helping the Department of Defense fix those parts of the Defense budget which are broken. Wherever you stand on the larger issue of defense spending and on particular programs and weapons systems, fixing the Defense budget is good news, and it will improve the national security of this country.

This bill begins the process of fixing both long term budget problems, and near term problems identified during the recent conflict in Yugoslavia. The conflict in Kosovo was, in my view, an important triumph for U.S. ideals over the worst kind of repression seen in Europe in decades. But more centrally for the purposes of this bill, it also demonstrated and revealed much about the tremendous capabilities of several U.S. weapons systems including the B-2 bomber, and our deficiencies in other areas like electronic jamming. This bill seeks to emphasize and enhance those capabilities that performed well, and address those areas that revealed weaknesses.

H.R. 2561 includes funding for a 15th JSTARS aircraft, which performed magnificently in Kosovo. The Air Force has a requirement for 19 JSTARS, but only budgeted for 13. It increases funding for the EA-6B force, which was extremely effective but was strained to its limits flying continual sorties every day. And it continues the process of weaponizing the most advanced and effective bomber force in the world.

The work done by the House of Representatives over the last several years to support the heavy bomber force was dramatically vindicated in this recent conflict. As many of you know, the B-2 was the star of the air campaign over Kosovo, but it was not the only star. JDAM, the Joint Direct Attack Munition, was also a tremendous success. This simple weapon costs only about $15,000 a copy to buy. But combined with the radar and accuracy of the B-2, it performed flawlessly, and demolished almost every target it was assigned to destroy. Compared to the over $1 million cost of the CALCM cruise missiles also used in Kosovo, the JDAM was nothing short of a miracle for capability compared to cost. But as many of you know, JDAMs have only recently entered the U.S. arsenal. Boeing delivered the first production model of JDAM to the Air Force on June 24, 1998. The B-2 was still able to use JDAMs flawlessly, however, because Congress had appropriated funding for an early version, GATS/GAM. Congress accelerated the GATS/GAM program in FY93 by over a year, and it was successfully tested in October of 1996. Without the experience of testing and training with GATS/GAM, we might not have been as successful in the early days of the air campaign in Kosovo, when the B-2 was the only plane that could access the skies over Belgrade, and the only plane that could attack anywhere in bad weather.

We must continue to weaponize both the bomber and tac-air forces for conventional all-weather combat. We saw in Kosovo the importance of being able to forward deploy bombers closer to the theater of combat to get sortie rates up. We also saw the importance of in-theater communications. This highlights the need for Link 16 and in-flight reprogramming capabilities on all of the bombers.

H.R. 2561 fully funds those needs. For this reason, it enjoys my strong support, and I urge all members to vote "aye."

The CHAIRMAN. Are their further amendments?

If there are no further amendments, the Committee rises.

Accordingly, the Committee rose; and the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. HANSEN) having assumed the chair, Mr. CAMP, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill (H.R. 2561) making appropriations for the Department of Defense for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2000, and for other purposes, pursuant to House Resolution 256, he reported the bill back to the House with sundry amendments adopted by the Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the rule, the previous question is ordered.

Is a separate vote demanded on any amendment? If not, the Chair will put them en gros.

The amendments were agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was read the third time.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on passage of the bill.

Pursuant to clause 10 of rule XX, the yeas and nays are ordered.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 379, nays 45, not voting 10, as follows:

NOT VOTING—10

Becerra	McDermott	Towns
Dunn	McInnis	Whitfield
Kasich	Peterson (PA)

□ 1726

Mr. COBURN, Mr. CONYERS, and Mrs. JONES of Ohio changed their vote from "yea" to "nay."

Mr. DEUTSCH, Mrs. MINK of Hawaii, Mr. WEYGAND and Ms. WOOLSEY changed their vote from "nay" to "yea."

So the bill was passed.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Stated for:

Mr. PORTMAN. Mr. Speaker, because I was in my District, I was absent for Rollcall vote 334. Had I been in attendance, I would have voted "yea" on rollcall vote 334.

Stated against:

Mr. BECERRA. Mr. Speaker, on July 22, 1999, I was unavoidably detained during a rollcall vote; number 334, on passage of H.R. 2561, the Department of Defense Appropriations for F.Y. 2000. Had I been present for the vote, I would have voted "no."

PERMISSION FOR COMMITTEE ON APPROPRIATIONS TO HAVE UNTIL MIDNIGHT, FRIDAY, JULY 23, 1999 TO FILE PRIVILEGED REPORT FOR ENERGY AND WATER DEVELOPMENT APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 2000

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Appropriations may have until midnight, Friday, July 23, 1999 to file a privileged report on a bill making appropriations for energy and water development for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2000, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. PETRI). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 1 of rule XX, all points of order are reserved on the bill.

PERMISSION FOR COMMITTEE ON APPROPRIATIONS TO HAVE UNTIL MIDNIGHT, JULY 23, 1999 TO FILE PRIVILEGED REPORT ON DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 2000

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Appropriations may have until midnight, Friday, July 23, 1999 to file a privileged report on a bill making appropriations for the government of the District of Columbia and other activities chargeable, in whole or in part, against the revenues of said District for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2000, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 1 of rule XX, all points of order are reserved on the bill.

PERMISSION FOR COMMITTEE ON APPROPRIATIONS TO HAVE UNTIL MIDNIGHT, JULY 23, 1999 TO FILE PRIVILEGED REPORT ON FOREIGN OPERATIONS APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 2000

Mr. LEWIS of California. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Appropriations may have until midnight, Friday, July 23, 1999 to file a privileged report on a bill making appropriations for foreign operations, export financing and related programs for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2000, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 1 of rule XX, all points of order are reserved on the bill.

LEGISLATIVE PROGRAM

(Mr. BONIOR asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Speaker, I rise for the purposes of inquiring as to what the schedule may be for the remainder of this week and next week.

Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from New York for the purpose of answering the inquiry.

Mr. LAZIO of New York. Mr. Speaker, I thank the distinguished Democratic whip for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to announce that the legislative business for this week has been completed.

The House will meet on Monday, July 26 at 12:30 p.m. for morning hour, and 2 o'clock p.m. for legislative business. We will consider a number of bills under suspension of the rules, a list of which will be distributed to all Members' offices tomorrow. After suspensions, we will begin consideration of H.R. 1074, the Regulatory Right to Know Act. Members should be aware that there will be recorded votes after 6 o'clock p.m. on Monday, July 26.

On Tuesday and the balance of next week, the House will take up the following measures: H.J. Resolution 57, a joint resolution disapproving China NTR; the Energy and Water Appropriations Act, the District of Columbia Appropriations Act, and the Foreign Operations Appropriations Act.

Mr. Speaker, I would also like to remind the House of the memorial arrangements that have been made to honor the life of our great colleague, the gentleman from California (Mr. Brown).

On Wednesday July 28 at 12:30 p.m. there will be a memorial service in California. We, therefore, will not schedule any votes on Wednesday in order to allow Members to attend that ceremony.

On Friday, July 30, at 11:00 a.m., there will be a service in Statutory Hall open to all Members as well.

I wish all Members safe travels back to their district, and thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Speaker, I have a couple of inquiries of the gentleman from New York (Mr. LAZIO). First, I would like to ask the gentleman what time on Tuesday will the China MFN be considered?

Mr. LAZIO. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BONIOR. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. LAZIO. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

My expectation is that it will be earlier in the day rather than later, although, of course, there is no certainty. I would expect that it would be earlier on Tuesday.

Mr. BONIOR. I thank my colleague on that.

Then let me also ask the gentleman from New York (Mr. LAZIO), we assume that no votes will occur or any debate would occur on Wednesday, in honor of our late colleague, the gentleman from California (Mr. Brown), because of the services. Am I correct on that?

Mr. LAZIO. Yes. If the gentleman would yield again, I expect that all recorded or requested votes will be rolled or postponed. We do not expect any votes, but we do expect legislative business on that day, including debate and possible other committee consideration, but there will be no votes, recorded votes, that will be held on that day.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BONIOR. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. OBEY. Let me simply strenuously object to that proposition. The fact is that the gentleman from California (Mr. Brown) was a distinguished Member of this House. He had a good many friends, and a lot of those friends were on the Committee on Appropriations. I do not believe it is right, when one of the most senior Members of the House and one of the most distinguished members of the House has a memorial service and a number of us would be denied the opportunity to attend that memorial service because they want our committees to stay here debating appropriation bills that day.

It just seems to me that there ought to be another way that a civilized institution could honor one of its own without preventing some of his oldest friends from attending that memorial service.

I would say that if we cannot find that kind of accommodation that there are a lot of things that could be slowed down next week.

Mr. LAZIO. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BONIOR. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. LAZIO. Mr. Speaker, I would be happy to try and respond to that, if the gentleman would like a response.

Mr. BONIOR. I would be very happy to yield and would tend to agree with my friend, the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. OBEY), on his point.

Mr. LAZIO. I thank the gentleman. I thank both gentlemen. It is certainly true that our colleague, the gentleman from California (Mr. Brown), deserves all the honor that he will be given on Wednesday. I can say that this House is trying to accommodate Members by ensuring that there will be no recorded votes on Wednesday, and we will be in discussions with the Committee on Appropriations to see the best we can do to ensure that Members are not put in a position where they need to choose; but as both gentlemen know, we are trying to get our appropriations work done.

We are trying to work around Wednesday. We have scheduled no votes on that day. We are trying to ensure that Members can get out and make that flight in the morning so they can attend the service. That will be accommodated. There will be no votes, and we will take up the other remaining appropriations bills, working around that Wednesday; and we will do the very best we possibly can in terms of committee considerations. I do not know that I can say more than that.

Mr. BONIOR. I would just remind my friend that the tradition of the House is to accommodate the Members when a Member of this body has passed away and services are held. That has been the long tradition in this House.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BONIOR. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. OBEY. Let me simply point out there are a number of Members in the California delegation who would need to be involved in the debate that would go on if they were here. It is unfair to them to expect that they ought to be here while they would like to be in California at the last opportunity to bid adieu to one of their colleagues.

So it just seems to me that this House has adjourned fully for hundreds of Members in its history, and it ought to do the same for the gentleman from California (Mr. Brown).

Mr. BONIOR. We would ask, again, that the majority revisit this issue and talk about it.

Mr. DREIER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BONIOR. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. DREIER. I would simply like to say that I have the privilege of representing the district that adjoins the gentleman from California (Mr. Brown) in California, and he was a very dear friend to me. I am looking forward to the memorial service that we are going to have here in Statutory Hall and we are going to be participating in special orders for the gentleman from California (Mr. Brown) at some point, I think that is sometime next week, but I think that as my friend, the gentleman from New York (Mr. LAZIO) has said, that it is very important for us to proceed with our work here.

We appreciate the input that has come from a number of Members.

Mr. STENHOLM. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BONIOR. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. STENHOLM. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. BONIOR) for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to pose an additional question. I did not hear any mention of H.R. 402, a bill sponsored by the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. BLUNT) and 228 other cosponsors, a dairy bill, that has overwhelmingly passed the House Committee on Agriculture. I did not hear whether or not it might be scheduled next week.

Mr. LAZIO. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BONIOR. I yield to the gentleman from New York.

Mr. LAZIO. I am just informed that the bill which the gentleman references is under consideration by the House leadership. It is not expected to be scheduled for next week; but it is under consideration, and I will try to ensure that the gentleman receives some update during the course of next week.

Mr. STENHOLM. Might it possibly be scheduled the following week then? I am hearing that it might be postponed until September, and there is a little anxiety among the dairy community if that would be the fact. We would hope that it would and could be scheduled prior to our August break.

Mr. LAZIO. Well, I would say to the gentleman that I am happy to try and give the gentleman an update sometime next week and we will do the very best we can. I know that the bill is under consideration by leadership now.

Mr. STENHOLM. I thank the gentleman for that.

Mr. LAZIO. The gentleman is welcome.

Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Speaker, just to conclude, I thank my friend, the gentleman from New York (Mr. LAZIO) and my friend, the gentleman from California (Mr. DREIER), for their input and would ask once again that they go back and revisit this with the rest of their leadership, the question of Wednesday. I understand their need to move forward; and we appreciate that, having been in a similar situation ourselves, but with all due respect, especially for someone who has served with such great distinction in this body and who had so many friends, it will present a terrible conflict for Members to choose. That should not be the case. It has not been the tradition to have to face that choice, and I hope that we can revisit that decision.

I thank the gentleman for the comments this evening.

Mr. LAZIO. I thank the gentleman.

MAKING IN ORDER ON JULY 27, 1999, OR ANY DAY THEREAFTER, CONSIDERATION OF H.J. RES. 57 DISAPPROVING EXTENSION OF NONDISCRIMINATORY TREATMENT TO PRODUCTS OF PEOPLE'S REPUBLIC OF CHINA

Mr. DREIER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that it be in order at any time on July 27, 1999, or any day thereafter, to consider in the House the joint resolution (H.J. Res. 57) disapproving the extension of nondiscriminatory treatment (normal trade relations treatment) to the products of the People's Republic of China; that the joint resolution be considered as read for amendment; that all points of order against the joint resolution and against its consideration be waived; that the joint resolution be debatable for 3 hours equally divided and controlled by the chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means in opposition to the joint resolution, and a Member in support of the joint resolution; that pursuant to sections 152 and 153 of the Trade Act of 1974, the previous question be considered as ordered on the joint resolution to final passage without intervening motion; and that the provisions of sections 152 and 153 of the Trade Act of 1974 shall not otherwise apply to any joint resolution disapproving the extension of most-favored-nation treatment to the People's Republic of China for the remainder of the first session of the 106th Congress.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. PETRI). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

Ms. PELOSI. Mr. Speaker, reserving the right to object, could the gentleman from California (Mr. DREIER) clarify the intent of this unanimous consent regarding the distribution of debatable time?

Mr. DREIER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentlewoman yield?

Ms. PELOSI. Further reserving the right to object, I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. DREIER. Mr. Speaker, it is the intention for us to proceed, recognizing that there are Members of the Committee on Ways and Means who both support and oppose this resolution, with an equal division of debate so that Members on both sides of this issue will have an equal opportunity to participate in this, and we are looking forward to a very interesting, fascinating, full, vigorous 3 hours of debate on this issue.

Ms. PELOSI. Further seeking clarification, when the gentleman says recognizing that Members of the Committee on Ways and Means in both parties agree or disagree on this, does that mean that only a Member of the Committee on Ways and Means of the majority or minority party can control the time?

Mr. DREIER. It is not our intention to make that decision as far as recognition. It will be up to the Chair. Again, there are Members of both the majority and the minority on the Committee on Ways and Means who are on both sides of this question, but it is clear that another Member could be recognized. In fact, the author of the resolution of disapproval is not, in fact, a Member of the Committee on Ways and Means, and it is quite possible that he could be recognized.

Ms. PELOSI. I thank the gentleman for his clarification.

Mr. DREIER. I thank the gentleman for yielding and would encourage acceptance of my unanimous consent request and again look forward to a vigorous debate.

Ms. PELOSI. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

There was no objection.

ADJOURNMENT TO MONDAY, JULY 26, 1999

Mr. DREIER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that when the House adjourns today, it adjourn to meet at 12:30 p.m. on Monday next for morning hour debates.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I object.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Objection is heard.

DISPENSING WITH CALENDAR WEDNESDAY BUSINESS ON WEDNESDAY NEXT

Mr. DREIER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the business in order under the Calendar Wednesday rule be dispensed with on Wednesday next.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I object.

WATER RESOURCES DEVELOPMENT ACT OF 1999

Mr. BOEHLERT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the Senate bill (S. 507) to provide for the conservation and development of water and related resources, to authorize the Secretary of the Army to construct various projects for improvements to rivers and harbors of the United States, and for other purposes, and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the Senate bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I object.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Objection is heard.

REMOVAL OF NAME OF MEMBER AS COSPONSOR OF H.R. 798

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that my name be removed as a cosponsor of H.R. 798.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I object.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Objection is heard.

PROVIDING FOR CONSIDERATION OF H.R. 1074, REGULATORY RIGHT-TO-KNOW ACT OF 1999

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 258 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 258

Resolved, That at any time after the adoption of this resolution the Speaker may, pursuant to clause 2(b) of rule XVIII, declare the House resolved into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for consideration of the bill (H.R. 1074) to provide Government-wide accounting of regulatory costs and benefits, and for other purposes. The first reading of the bill shall be dispensed with. General debate shall be confined to the bill and shall not exceed one hour equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Government Reform. After general debate the bill shall be considered for amendment under the five-minute rule. It shall be in order to consider as an original bill for the purpose of amendment under the five-minute rule the amendment in the nature of a substitute recommended by the Committee on Government Reform now printed in the bill. The committee amendment in the nature of a substitute shall be considered as read. No amendment to the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute shall be in order except those printed in the portion of the Congressional Record designated for that purpose in clause 8 of rule XVIII and except pro forma amendments for the purpose of debate. Each amendment so printed may be offered only by the Member who caused it to be printed or his designee and shall be considered as read. The chairman of the Committee of the Whole may: (1) postpone until a time during further consideration in the Committee of the Whole a request for a recorded vote on any amendment; and (2) reduce to five minutes the minimum time for electronic voting on any postponed question that follows another electronic vote without intervening business, provided that the minimum time for electronic voting on the first in any series of questions shall be 15 minutes. At the conclusion of consideration of the bill for amendment the Committee shall rise and report the bill to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted. Any Member may demand a separate vote in the House on any amendment adopted in the Committee of the Whole to the bill or to the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute. The previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommend with or without instructions.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Texas (Mr. SESSIONS) is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. Speaker, for the purposes of debate only, I yield the customary 30 minutes to the gentlewoman from New York (Ms. SLAUGHTER), pending which I yield myself such time as I may consume. During the consideration of this amendment, all time is yielded for the purpose of debate only.

Mr. Speaker, the legislation before us is a modified open rule providing for the consideration of H.R. 1074, the Regulatory Right-To-Know Act of 1999.

This open rule provides for 1 hour of general debate, equally divided between the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Government Reform.

The rule provides that it shall be in order to consider as an original bill for the purposes of amendment under the 5-minute rule the amendment in the nature of a substitute recommended by the Committee on Government Reform now printed in the bill.

The bill provides that the amendment in the nature of a substitute shall be open for amendment at any point.

The rule provides for the consideration of only those amendments preprinted in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, which may be offered only by the Member who caused it to be printed or that designee, and pro forma amendments offered for the purpose of debate only.

The rule allows the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole to postpone votes during consideration of the bill and to reduce voting time to 5 minutes on a postponed question if the vote follows a 15-minute vote.

Finally, the rule provides one motion to recommit with or without instructions.

Mr. Speaker, the underlying legislation, the Regulatory Right-to-Know Act is important legislation. The purpose of this legislation is to increase public awareness about the costs and benefits of Federal regulations to increase accountability of the government and to improve the Federal program and rules.

The bill achieves these goals by requiring the Office of Management and Budget to prepare an annual accounting statement containing cost and benefit estimates of Federal regulatory programs.

Furthermore, this report would require an analysis of the cumulative impact of regulations on various sectors and functional areas, including the private sector.

The Regulatory Right-To-Know Act is yet another significant step towards making this government more efficient and more accountable. A more efficient and accountable government provides us with a Nation with more freedom, liberty, and integrity.

Mr. Speaker, since 1995, Congress has changed the direction of the Federal Government from the endless burden of more taxes and spending to the new fiscal discipline of balance and responsibility and accountability.

Congress has passed legislation to prevent unfunded mandates from being passed from the Federal Government to State and local governments. This legislation is now law.

Congress has passed the Small Business Paperwork Reduction Act as another incremental step toward relieving governmental burdens on small businesses and their employees.

The Regulatory Right-To-Know Act builds on these successes and provides a straight cost benefit analysis of Federal regulations.

Finally, a full and accurate accounting of regulations and their impact on the economy will now be readily available. The United States has become the global leader in technological development which, in turn, has created efficiencies in our economy and made life better for all of us.

But the Federal Government remains the largest impediment to continued growth and development. Federal regulatory programs impose tremendous cost and restrictions on innovation in the private sector and on State and local governments. That is why this legislation is so important.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to continue the bipartisan manner in which this legislation was crafted and support this rule.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

MOTION TO ADJOURN

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. PETRI). The question is on the motion to adjourn.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the yeas appeared to have it.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I demand a recorded vote.

A recorded vote was refused.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will count for a quorum.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my objection.

So the motion to adjourn was rejected.

PROVIDING FOR CONSIDERATION OF H.R. 1074, REGULATORY RIGHT-TO-KNOW ACT OF 1999

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair recognizes the gentlewoman from New York (Ms. SLAUGHTER).

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Texas (Mr. SESSIONS) for yielding me the time, and I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, this is an almost open rule, for the majority has again relied on a preprinting requirement for amendments which may affect some Members of the House.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 1074 is a bill which sorely needs improvement. Amendments to protect taxpayers from runaway spending and to analyze the cost/benefit ratio of corporate welfare were not included in the bill during its consideration in the Committee on Government Reform.

My friends on the other side are more than willing to belabor the value of and insist on a bottom line for rules which protect the life, the health, and the safety of the American people.

But when the question is restated to ask how much corporate America benefits from Federal programs, the majority is far less interested in the answer. I expect we will see that issue revisited when we take up the Hoeffel-Kucinich amendment.

H.R. 1074, the Regulatory Right-To-Know Act, has a "feel good" title to disguise the potential harm buried in its details.

As envisioned by my friends on the other side, every time the Federal Government proposes to take even the most routine action, it would be viewed through 1,000 different green eye shades.

There is little if any leeway given for action which is clearly necessary, decisions which are "no-brainers."

It is like the pedestrian whose reflex is to leap from the crosswalk to avoid a car running a red light, but first he asks how many calories will be burned and how much shoe leather will be used and how the impact of the car would impact their productivity at the office.

Now, if our pedestrian is faced with a different set of circumstances, such as deciding whether to buy a car so that they do not have to walk to work, then that requires a different approach, and rightly so. Because, by Executive Order, we already analyze the cost and benefits of the 60 or more major rules which are proposed each year. That is sensible and reasonable.

My concern is that my friends on the other side who so often talk about government which is small and smart are now proposing to make government big and dull.

A cost benefit analysis is useful when applied in the appropriate circumstances. But with the approach advanced by this legislation, they are killing the dog to stop the fleas.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. MCINTOSH).

Mr. MCINTOSH. Mr. Speaker, I am speaking today in support of the rule for a bipartisan bill to promote the public's right to know the cost benefits and impacts of Federal regulatory programs, H.R. 1074, Regulatory Right-To-Know Act of 1999.

This bill is the product of the leadership of the gentleman from Virginia (Chairman BLILEY) from the Committee on Commerce over the last several years. He really deserves a great deal of credit for bringing forward the basic idea of this bill. It also builds on the provisions offered by Senator STEVENS and Senator THOMPSON in the 1997, 1998, 1999 Treasury, General Government and Postal Appropriations Act. They put in a temporary 1-year provision very similar to what this bill does.

This bill, along with the companion bill, S. 59, also designed to establish a permanent and stronger regulatory accounting requirement, would make that year-by-year appropriations bill unnecessary.

H.R. 1074 is a good government bill, which requires the Office of Management and Budget to prepare an annual accounting statement and an associated report. This accounting statement, which is the core provision of this bill, would provide estimates ever the costs and benefits of Federal regulatory programs in the aggregate, by agency, by agency program, by program component, and by major rule.

The bill requires that accurate information be provided for the same 7-year time series as the budget of the United States, the current year, 2 years preceding this year, and the 4 years following.

The associated report would analyze the impacts of Federal rules and all the paperwork that goes along with these rules on various sectors in our economy, for example, on small businesses and on functional areas, for example, in the health care and our public health in this country.

In the associated report, OMB would identify and analyze overlaps, duplications, and potential inconsistencies among the Federal regulatory programs and offer recommendations to reform inefficient or ineffective regulatory programs.

The gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. RYAN), who is Vice Chairman of our Subcommittee on National Economic Growth, Natural Resources, and Regulatory Affairs, will go into more detail about some of the examples of those overlapping and duplicative regulations.

Now, currently, there is no report that analyzes the cumulative impact of Federal regulations. Americans, we believe, have a right to know what are the cumulative costs, what are the benefits, and what is the impact of Federal regulations on their sector of the economy and on various areas throughout the United States.

Current estimates of the "off budget," if you will, compliance costs on Americans by Federal regulatory programs are close to $700 billion each year. By the way, that is a 25 percent increase from 10 years ago.

Broken down for each family in the United States, they pay, on average, $6,900 in additional costs simply because of the compliance with Federal regulations. By the way, to put that in perspective, that is more than the typical family pays in Federal taxes, which we cut earlier today here on the House floor.

The bill requires OMB to issue guidelines to standardize agency estimates of the costs and the benefits and to use an accounting format that can be analyzed across different sectors. The bill also requires OMB to quantify the net benefits or the net costs for each alternative considered in a regulatory impact analysis accompanying a major rule. By the way, this is already required under President Clinton's executive order on regulatory review.

This information will help the public understand how and why major decisions affecting them are made by the executive branch. It will disclose that the Federal agencies chose the most effective, least costly regulatory approach.

To ensure a fair and balanced estimate of the costs and benefits, the bill also requires that this report by OMB be peer-reviewed by two or more experts and that the public have an opportunity to comment on a draft report relating to the impact of sectors. This way the bill ensures that the public can know whether OMB is doing its job to keep a lid on the stupid, silly, sometimes costly regulations that are often promulgated.

Mr. Speaker, our oversight hearings in my subcommittee, and the GAO reports, show that OMB, quite frankly, in recent years, has not done a very good job of supervising these type of regulatory impact analyses. So this bill will make that a legal mandate for OMB.

H.R. 1074 requires that they compile some new and improved information about these regulatory programs. However, we believe that fundamentally the bill will not pose an undue burden on OMB if they are doing their job under the current executive order, since much of the needed information is already available.

Since Ronald Reagan issued his historic executive order in 1981, Federal agencies have been required to perform cost-benefit analyses on major rules. These are the rules that constitute the bulk of that $700 billion of cost for the regulatory programs. Also, OMB can use many other sources of information, including private regulatory accounting studies and government studies done by the agencies.

The bill, as it was reported by the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. BURTON), the Chairman of the Committee on Government Reform, made many changes on the initial draft that we have proposed to lessen the burden on the Office of Management and Budget and to address some of the Clinton administration's concerns, including a phase-in of several of the key requirements. The Congressional Budget Office estimated that the cost of this bill will be in its lowest category, less than $500,000 each year.

Frankly, I think that is a pretty good deal. For less than $500,000, we have the potential to save the American citizens billions of dollars in unnecessary, duplicative, and costly regulatory burdens.

There is wide support for this bill, Mr. Speaker. It is bipartisan, and it has been endorsed by many organizations, including the seven major bipartisan State and local organizations: the National Governors' Association, the National Conference of State Legislatures, the Council of State Governments, the U.S. Conference of Mayors, the National League of Cities, the National Association of Counties, and the International City/County Management Association.

Some other organizations, Mr. Speaker, that are endorsing this bill include Alliance USA; the American Farm Bureau Federation; Americans For Tax Reform; Associated Builders and Contractors; the Business Roundtable; the Center for Study for American Business; the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, which has key voted this bill on its legislative calendar; the Chemical Manufacturers Association; Citizens for a Sound Economy, which has also key voted this bill; National Association of Manufacturers; National Federation of Independent Businesses; the Seniors Coalition; the 60 Plus Association; and the Small Business Survival Committee, which, once again, has key voted this bill on their legislative calendar.

Now, unfortunately, there have been some views that have been stated about this bill that ended up being reflected in the minority report, and so we had to issue a correction and clarification on some of those. But I want to stress, for example, that some of the opposition to this bill incorrectly states that it would "require a cost-benefit analysis of every major and minor rule."

This bill, quite frankly, does not require any new regulatory impact analyses, RIAs, no new rule-by-rule cost-benefit analyses, and no new rule-by-rule impact analyses. So that the exceptions that are currently in place under President Clinton's executive order for minor routine regulations would also apply for this bill.

Instead, the bill provides for combining a set of related rules into broad categories. Except for the regulatory impact analysis already required for major rules, the various analytical requirements relate to information after the rules are issued. So it should not require any greater regulatory burden in actually issuing those rules.

The difference may be that the administration currently, under OMB's guidance, does not always follow their own executive order. And so some of these regulatory impact analyses that are required under the President's Executive Order, in fact, are not being done. But the bill provides OMB with substantial discretion in ways to address the various analytical requirements. It makes no changes in the standard of law. It cannot slow down a rulemaking, since the analysis will be done in the aggregate, after those rules are issued; but what it will do is give the American people a very precise comprehensive view of what the benefits and what the costs are of our Federal regulations.

I strongly support the rule that has come forth from the Committee on Rules, and I believe fundamentally the public has a right to know what are the impact of our Federal regulations. We need to have open and accountable government. OMB's accounting statement and associated report will give Americans the tools to fully analyze how legislation on regulatory matters will affect them and how rules today are, in fact, impacting their lives.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to vote for the rule and vote for the bill when it comes up on Monday.

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. OBEY).

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time, and I use the time to ask the gentleman from Texas (Mr. SESSIONS) whether it is not correct that there is now an understanding that the House will not be in session on Wednesday so that we can attend the memorial service for the distinguished former Member from California, Mr. Brown.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. OBEY. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. Speaker, to respond to the gentleman, and I am going to read what I have been given, it is my understanding the House will be in pro forma session and that no votes will be held, in accommodation of Republican and Democrat Members who wish to attend services for our colleague, George Brown.

Mr. OBEY. Reclaiming my time, Mr. Speaker, my understanding is correct, then, that there will be no committees asked to be running bills on the floor while that is going on?

Mr. SESSIONS. If the gentleman will continue to yield, it is my understanding that there will not be any legislative business on the floor of the House of Representatives.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman and I thank the leadership for reconsidering that position. I am sorry to take the time of the House, but given the fact that George Brown was the ranking member of a committee, that he served here 35 years, and that he was one of the two people who were driving forces behind the first teach-ins in Vietnam, a very historic occasion in our Nation's history, and I think that is very important.

Mr. SESSIONS. I thank the gentleman for his concern and feel like we have responded appropriately.

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. KUCINICH).

Mr. KUCINICH. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from New York for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the gentleman from California (Mr. DREIER), the Chairman of the Committee on Rules, and the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. MOAKLEY), the ranking minority member, as well as the gentleman from New York (Ms. SLAUGHTER), for their work on this rule for H.R. 1074, the so-called Regulatory Right-to-Know Act of 1999.

I also want to express my appreciation to the chairman of the subcommittee, the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. MCINTOSH), the committee on which I serve as the ranking member. The gentleman from Indiana and I have developed a good working relationship. We do not always agree on the substance of some of the bills, but I think we have been able to at least have an exchange of ideas, which I hope has resulted in a better bill. We are pleased on this side of the aisle that we will have the opportunity to offer our amendment, which we believe significantly improves the bill.

While I support the underlying goal of the bill to give taxpayers information on the costs and benefits of government regulations, with the hope of improving government accountability, and effectiveness, I am concerned that the bill, as offered, fails to adequately protect the taxpayers. That is why, the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. HOEFFEL), the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. VISLOSKEY), and myself will be offering the Taxpayer Protection and Corporate Welfare Disclosure Amendment.

This amendment will improve the bill in three ways. First, it will require the Office of Management and Budget to identify and analyze the costs and benefits of corporate subsidies given out by the Federal Government. H.R. 1074 is supposed to provide the American people with better information about how much money Federal laws and regulations cost American businesses and what benefits are derived from those programs.

But this misses the fact that each year the Federal Government provides billions of dollars in corporate welfare to regulated businesses. This amendment would require corporate welfare to be disclosed to the American public so that they can have a complete accounting of the cost and benefits imposed on businesses by the Federal Government, not just the cost and benefits of regulations.

Second, this amendment would cap reporting expenditures by the Office of Management and Budget and Federal agencies required by H.R. 1074 to $1 million a year. According to the Congressional Budget Office, H.R. 1074 should only cost $500,000 a year to implement. So limiting these expenditures to double that amount, or $1 million, should provide plenty of funds for both the regulatory and the corporate welfare components of the bill, while making sure the taxpayers do not pay the price if programs end up costing much more than anticipated by Congress.

Third, the Hoeffel amendment, the amendment that I am pleased to sponsor with that gentleman and the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. VISLOSKEY), would sunset the bill after 4 years. Let us make sure that the information we are asking for is actually useful before we make this an open-ended requirement. If we find that the accounting required under H.R. 1074 is worthwhile, Congress can reauthorize the report at that time and make changes to it to make it better.

Mr. Speaker, I want to again thank those on the other side of the aisle who have worked on this, the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. RYAN) and all the others who have worked on it, and we look forward to the debate on Monday.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 10 minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. RYAN), who is the vice chairman on the Committee on Government Reform.

Mr. RYAN of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Texas for yielding me this time, and I also want to thank the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. KUCINICH), who is the ranking member of this subcommittee. I must admit that as a new Member of Congress it is nice to see people who really like to cooperate on a bipartisan basis, and I think the gentleman from Ohio is a person who is of strong conscience and serves this body very well, and I just wanted to commend him for his attitude in working with us on passage of this legislation. We may disagree on some of these amendments, but I would like to thank the gentleman from Ohio for his attitude on this.

I rise in support of the rule, Mr. Speaker, for H.R. 1074. I would also like to voice my support for passage of H.R. 1074, the Regulatory Right-to-Know Act. This is a bipartisan initiative. This point is made obvious by the groups that have voiced their support of this bill. It has the support of numerous groups, from the National Governors' Association to the Seniors Coalition. The U.S. Conference of Mayors, the American Farm Bureau and the U.S. Chamber of Commerce have all publicly endorsed this legislation. These diverse groups have endorsed this bill because they recognize the benefits this legislation could provide to Congress and to the citizens of this country.

This legislation will increase understanding and, therefore, public confidence in all Federal regulations and agencies. The public has the right to know the factors that affect agency decision-making. The Congress has the right to know that the intent of the legislation we pass here in Congress is being carefully considered by the agencies who promulgate these regulations, taking into account and implementing the laws we pass here in this body.

Through this legislation, the public will have access to information regarding the cost and benefits including the social health, safety, environment, and economic effects of major agency action.

Mr. Speaker, the key to accountability in Government is providing information. Information is vital to effective governing. The more accessible information is to the public and to the Congress, the more efficient and productive our system of Government will be.

This bill does not change the existing process for adopting agency regulations. Moreover, it helps us change the environment in which these agencies adopt regulations by fostering an atmosphere of openness and accountability.

Some groups have likened this to the annual accounting most companies do for their shareholders. Well, Mr. Speaker, the American people are the shareholders of our Government of our country and they deserve to be provided an accounting of the impact of Federal regulations.

But I would like to make one more point that is very important in the Regulatory Right-to-Know Act, which will require OMB to do an annual study looking at duplicative regulations. And believe me, Mr. Speaker, we have a lot of duplicative regulations in our Federal Government today.

Just to point out a few examples: Agriculture's Natural Resource and Conservation Service and the Army Corps of Engineers had conflict requirements over wetlands regulations. I am going to go into that in just a second.

The grantees for so many different programs are required by Federal rules to provide nearly identical information to many Federal grant-making agencies for similar grant programs, including the same type of information to various agencies.

The USDA and FDA have issued overlapping food safety regulations regarding tainted food products. Many agency programs, and thus their regulatory requirements, sometimes overlap. Just in the area of job training and employment there are 14 departments that delve into this area.

Among the 14 departments and agencies that have programs, rules, and regulations with respect to job training and employment are the Agriculture Department, the Commerce Department, the Education Department, HHS, HUD, Interior, Justice, Labor, Transportation, Treasury, Veterans' Affairs, EPA, the NRC, and the SSA.

All of these agencies promulgate regulations on job training and employment. Many of them duplicate and overlap each other. An accounting of these regulations is going to do nothing but help us get good Government, get good information to the citizens we represent.

Going back to the area of wetlands regulations, there is a great example of how overlapping and duplicative regulations can actually do a lot of harm to our constituents when we are simply trying to make sure that they comply with the Federal law.

I would like to take an example of a turf fight between two agencies over wetlands regulations. The turf fight is between the Army Corps of Engineers and the Natural Resources Conservation Service. There is a farmer named Dave Pechan who farms near Linden, California. He wanted to convert 40 acres of his land into a vineyard.

In accordance with the law, Mr. Pechan asked the Natural Resources Conservation Service to evaluate his property for possible wetlands. The Conservation Service is one of those Federal agencies that is charged with enforcing wetlands regulations.

After inspecting Mr. Pechan's land on two occasions, the Conservation Service determined that only a .3 acre swale could be considered a wetland.

He was instructed to go ahead with his vineyard plans as long as he plowed around that tiny little wetland.

Well, that seemed to settle the matter. Until one week later, when Mr. Pechan saw representatives from the Army Corps of Engineers and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service on his property taking pictures. They told Mr. Pechan that he may be violating the law when he farmed in wetlands.

When Pechan produced the documentation from the Conservation Service showing that he was in compliance with these regulations, the agencies rudely rejected his claim.

It seems that the Army Corps of Engineers and the Conservation Service are locked into a bureaucratic turf fight over which agency would have the lead role in enforcing wetlands laws.

Well, in 1994, the Corps of Engineers signed a memorandum of agreement that ostensibly recognized the Conservation Service as the lead Federal agency. However, the Corps of Engineers reneged on that agreement because they refused to give up on enforcement of wetlands policy.

The end result is this: The farmer in California, Dave Pechan, is snared in the middle of a bureaucratic turf fight. The Corps has told him that regardless of what the Conservation Service had determined allowing him to go through with his vineyard plans, he will be subjected to civil and criminal penalties if he continues to work his land.

He is now in limbo while the Corps conducts its own wetlands evaluations of his property.

Mr. Speaker, the Regulatory Right-to-Know Act is very common sense. It is bipartisan. This is a good Government bill. This simply says, let us get a handle on all of these regulations we are passing on to our constituents. Let us make sure they do not duplicate each other or overlap or send conflicting messages to our constituents.

Lastly, it does not do one thing to change the regulations. It simply says, let us measure the cost and benefits of these regulations, what are they costing our economy, what are they doing to our constituents.

This is clearly a good Government measure. I urge all of my colleagues to support the rule on this measure. And next week when we vote on this bill, I urge all of my colleagues to vote in favor of H.R. 1074, the Regulatory Right-to-Know Act.

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. HOEFFEL).

Mr. HOEFFEL. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman for yielding me the time and I thank her for her cooperation and her leadership.

I compliment the gentleman from California (Mr. DREIER) the chairman of the Committee on Rules and the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. MOAKLEY) the ranking member for bringing forward this bill with the rule that permits through the preprinting mechanism the opportunity for the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. KUCINICH) and I to offer an amendment that we believe is necessary to improve this bill so that it really provides a good service for the American taxpayer.

H.R. 1074, the Regulatory Right-to-Know Act, is the subject of this rule. As the previous speaker, the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. RYAN) and the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. MCINTOSH) before him have described, this bill is designed to tell Congress and the American people how much it costs to produce regulations pursuant to the laws we pass every year.

A cost benefit analysis of Federal regulation is a concept that has been debated for some time. I am pleased that this bill is before us. I think the bill needs improvement, but I think it is the right thing for Congress to address this and to make sure we have an opportunity to get the information we need to do our jobs properly and to get to the American people a clear statement of the cost of Federal regulation and the benefit of Federal regulation.

I, for one, believe there are many benefits to the rules and regulations that are promulgated based upon our statutes. But we need to know the cost on business and the benefit to business in order to do our job properly.

Unfortunately, I think that there are some areas of this bill that need to be improved. I will be offering, along with the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. KUCINICH), the Hoeffel-Kucinich amendment, entitled the taxpayer protection and corporate welfare disclosure amendment, when we have an opportunity on Monday to debate and amend this bill.

Our amendment is designed to get even more information available to Congress and to the American people regarding the impact of the Federal Government on American business.

If we want to find out the costs and benefits of Federal regulations, then let us also find out the costs and benefits of the so-called corporate welfare, the Federal subsidies, the tax preferences, the below market values of Federal lands that are granted to many of our corporations in this country.

Historically, we have given these kind of corporate benefits to many industries, some of them mature, successful, highly profitable industries. If we are to determine how much the regulations cost these industries to get a fair and complete picture, we surely need to know the benefits, if any, of the corporate welfare they receive.

Secondly, the amendment that the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. KUCINICH) and I will offer will make sure that the cost of this bill will not be unlimited.

The Congressional Budget Office has estimated that to conduct the regulatory review of the underlying bill will cost something less than $500,000 per year. So we are putting in the Hoeffel-Kucinich amendment an overall cap of $1 million a year to conduct both the regulatory review and the corporate welfare review that the amended bill will call for.

I think this is a wise and sensible limitation to make sure that, in the process of determining costs and benefits, we do not waste the taxpayers' dollars with unnecessary expenditures.

Finally, the Hoeffel-Kucinich amendment will put a 4-year sunset provision on both the regulatory review and the corporate welfare review called for in the amended bill.

I will ask for support of the amendment on Monday.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. Speaker, may I inquire as to the time remaining on both sides?

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. TERRY). The gentleman from Texas (Mr. SESSIONS) has 8½ minutes remaining. The gentlewoman from New York (Ms. SLAUGHTER) has 19 minutes remaining.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. RYAN).

Mr. RYAN of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I think it is very important as we debate the rule and the Regulatory Right-to-Know Act that we put this in its proper perspective.

We would debate what I would like to call the "killer Kucinich amendment" a little bit later when it is up next week.

But let us put this in proper perspective. Regulations are good. They are necessary. But regulations do pose what we often call a hidden tax on the American economy. It is widely estimated that Federal regulations cost the American taxpayers about $700 billion annually.

This is a tax that we do not see right on our paychecks. We do not see it in front of our faces in our businesses. This is a tax that comes to us through the various overlapping and duplicative rules and regulations, costing our American families and businesses about $700 billion annually.

So when we talk about the Regulatory Right-to-Know Act, it is really let us see what these taxes are costing us, let us get openness in Government, let us make sure that we know when we are imposing $700 billion of hidden tax on our Government, let us make these open taxes so we actually see really what these taxes are, what the cost and benefits of these hidden taxes on our families and businesses impose.

Placing a cap on that to me seems to be very, very much disingenuous in the spirit of the public's right to know. We will debate the merits of that amendment next week.

But I think it is very important to put this whole thing in perspective, that the Regulatory Right-to-Know

Act is a bipartisan solution at getting openness in Government at taking a look at what really is this hidden tax being placed on our families and our businesses.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. HOEFFEL).

Mr. HOEFFEL. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman for yielding me the time.

If I could just respond quickly to my friend the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. RYAN) who spoke about the "killer Kucinich amendment".

Many people have said that I am a pretty tough guy, but no one has ever called me "killer" before. It is actually the "Hoeffel-Kucinich amendment."

Mr. RYAN of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HOEFFEL. I yield to the gentleman from Wisconsin.

Mr. RYAN of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I said "killer Kucinich," not "killer Hoeffel."

Mr. HOEFFEL. Mr. Speaker, we will debate this amendment Monday, known as the "Hoeffel-Kucinich amendment." I look forward to the debate with the gentleman.

If I would simply add, he appropriately identified the estimated cost of regulations on American business. Let me add to this debate today that Time Magazine has estimated that the cost of corporate welfare to the Federal Government is $125 billion a year, which they describe as being the equivalent of the income taxes paid each year by 60 million Americans. Or another way of looking at it, the equivalent of two weeks' pay for every working American is distributed and paid by the Federal Government in corporate welfare.

So I simply stand with the Hoeffel-Kucinich amendment for the proposition that we ought to know where that $125 billion goes when we find out where the $700 billion that the gentleman is concerned about and that I am concerned about goes.

We ought to see the whole package at the same time to get a clear picture.

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume to close.

Mr. Speaker, I want to add to what the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. HOEFFEL) said about the corporate welfare costing us $125 billion a year. That is handed out despite the fact that the economy has been strong and that corporate profits have totaled more than $4.5 trillion this decade.

Proponents of corporate welfare say that it encourages economic development and job growth. A good example is a tax break for a company that relocates to the inner city. But the biggest recipients are Fortune 500 companies that have cut, Mr. Speaker, more jobs than they created this decade.

As stated by Time, "The rationale to curtail traditional welfare programs was compelling because the old system did not work. It was unfair and destroyed incentive and perpetuated dependence and distorted the economy."

"The same indictment, almost to the word, applies to corporate welfare. In some ways, it represents pork-barrel legislation of the worst order. The difference, of course, is that instead of rewarding the poor, it rewards the powerful."

I agree with the gentleman from Pennsylvania that corporate welfare deserves all the attention we can give it to bring it into the light.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume. I would like to echo the comments that were made by the gentleman from Wisconsin and give a quote so that we know where the figure came from. Professor Thomas D. Hopkins, Interim Dean, College of Business at the Rochester Institute of Technology is the gentleman that estimated the total regulatory cost in the United States will be over $700 billion a year.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to support this fair rule so that the House may continue this important legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time, and I move the previous question on the resolution.

The previous question was ordered.

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

REMOVAL OF NAME OF MEMBER AS COSPONSOR OF H.R. 798

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to be removed from cosponsorship of H.R. 798.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. TERRY). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

ADJOURNMENT TO MONDAY, JULY 26, 1999

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that when the House adjourns today, it adjourn to meet at 12:30 p.m. on Monday next for morning hour debates.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

DISPENSING WITH CALENDAR WEDNESDAY BUSINESS ON WEDNESDAY NEXT

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the business in order under the Calendar Wednesday rule be dispensed with on Wednesday next.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

WATER RESOURCES DEVELOPMENT ACT OF 1999

Mr. BOEHLERT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the Senate bill (S. 507) to provide for the conservation and development of water and related resources, to authorize the Secretary of the Army to construct various projects for improvements to rivers and harbors of the United States, and for other purposes, and ask for its immediate consideration in the House.

The Clerk read the title of the Senate bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the Senate bill, as follows:

S. 507

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE; TABLE OF CONTENTS.

(a) SHORT TITLE.—This Act may be cited as the "Water Resources Development Act of 1999".

(b) TABLE OF CONTENTS.—The table of contents of this Act is as follows:

Sec. 1. Short title; table of contents.

Sec. 2. Definition of Secretary.

TITLE I—WATER RESOURCES PROJECTS

Sec. 101. Project authorizations.

Sec. 102. Project modifications.

Sec. 103. Project deauthorizations.

SEC. 2. DEFINITION OF SECRETARY.

In this Act, the term "Secretary" means the Secretary of the Army.

TITLE I—WATER RESOURCES PROJECTS

SEC. 101. PROJECT AUTHORIZATIONS.

(a) PROJECTS WITH CHIEF'S REPORTS.—The following projects for water resources development and conservation and other purposes are authorized to be carried out by the Secretary substantially in accordance with the plans, and subject to the conditions, described in the respective reports designated in this section:

(1) SAND POINT HARBOR, ALASKA.—The project for navigation, Sand Point Harbor, Alaska: Report of the Chief of Engineers dated October 13, 1998, at a total cost of $11,760,000, with an estimated Federal cost of $6,964,000 and an estimated non-Federal cost of $4,796,000.

(2) RIO SALADO (SALT RIVER), ARIZONA.—The project for environmental restoration, Rio Salado (Salt River), Arizona: Report of the Chief of Engineers dated August 20, 1998, at a total cost of $88,048,000, with an estimated Federal cost of $56,355,000 and an estimated non-Federal cost of $31,693,000.

(3) TUCSON DRAINAGE AREA, ARIZONA.—The project for flood damage reduction, environmental restoration, and recreation, Tucson drainage area, Arizona: Report of the Chief of Engineers dated May 20, 1998, at a total cost of $29,900,000, with an estimated Federal cost of $16,768,000 and an estimated non-Federal cost of $13,132,000.

(4) AMERICAN RIVER WATERSHED, CALIFORNIA.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The project for flood damage reduction described as the Folsom Stepped Release Plan in the Corps of Engineers Supplemental Information Report for the American River Watershed Project, California, dated March 1996, at a total cost of $505,400,000, with an estimated Federal cost of $329,300,000 and an estimated non-Federal cost of $176,100,000.

(B) IMPLEMENTATION.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Implementation of the measures by the Secretary pursuant to subparagraph (A) shall be undertaken after completion of the levee stabilization and strengthening and flood warning features authorized by section 101(a)(1) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1996 (110 Stat. 3662).

(i) FOLSOM DAM AND RESERVOIR.—The Secretary may undertake measures at the Folsom

Dam and Reservoir authorized under subparagraph (A) only after reviewing the design of such measures to determine if modifications are necessary to account for changed hydrologic conditions and any other changed conditions in the project area, including operational and construction impacts that have occurred since completion of the report referred to in subparagraph (A). The Secretary shall conduct the review and develop the modifications to the Folsom Dam and Reservoir with the full participation of the Secretary of the Interior.

(iii) REMAINING DOWNSTREAM ELEMENTS.—

(I) IN GENERAL.—Implementation of the remaining downstream elements authorized pursuant to subparagraph (A) may be undertaken only after the Secretary, in consultation with affected Federal, State, regional, and local entities, has reviewed the elements to determine if modifications are necessary to address changes in the hydrologic conditions, any other changed conditions in the project area that have occurred since completion of the report referred to in subparagraph (A) and any design modifications for the Folsom Dam and Reservoir made by the Secretary in implementing the measures referred to in clause (ii), and has issued a report on the review.

(II) PRINCIPLES AND GUIDELINES.—The review shall be prepared in accordance with the economic and environmental principles and guidelines for water and related land resources implementation studies, and no construction may be initiated unless the Secretary determines that the remaining downstream elements are technically sound, environmentally acceptable, and economically justified.

(5) LLAGAS CREEK, CALIFORNIA.—The project for completion of the remaining reaches of the Natural Resources Conservation Service flood control project at Llagas Creek, California, undertaken pursuant to section 5 of the Watershed Protection and Flood Prevention Act (16 U.S.C. 1005), substantially in accordance with the requirements of local cooperation as specified in section 4 of that Act (16 U.S.C. 1004) at a total cost of $45,000,000, with an estimated Federal cost of $21,800,000 and an estimated non-Federal cost of $23,200,000.

(6) SOUTH SACRAMENTO COUNTY STREAMS, CALIFORNIA.—The project for flood control, environmental restoration, and recreation, South Sacramento County streams, California: Report of the Chief of Engineers dated October 6, 1998, at a total cost of $65,500,000, with an estimated Federal cost of $41,200,000 and an estimated non-Federal cost of $24,300,000.

(7) UPPER GUADALUPE RIVER, CALIFORNIA.—Construction of the locally preferred plan for flood damage reduction and recreation, Upper Guadalupe River, California, described as the Bypass Channel Plan of the Chief of Engineers dated August 19, 1998, at a total cost of $137,600,000, with an estimated Federal cost of $44,000,000 and an estimated non-Federal cost of $93,600,000.

(8) YUBA RIVER BASIN, CALIFORNIA.—The project for flood damage reduction, Yuba River Basin, California: Report of the Chief of Engineers dated November 25, 1998, at a total cost of $26,600,000, with an estimated Federal cost of $17,350,000 and an estimated non-Federal cost of $9,250,000.

(9) DELAWARE BAY COASTLINE: DELAWARE AND NEW JERSEY-BROADKILL BEACH, DELAWARE.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The project for hurricane and storm damage reduction and shore protection, Delaware Bay coastline: Delaware and New Jersey-Broadkill Beach, Delaware, Report of the Chief of Engineers dated August 17, 1998, at a total cost of $9,049,000, with an estimated Federal cost of $5,674,000 and an estimated non-Federal cost of $3,375,000.

(B) PERIODIC NOURISHMENT.—Periodic nourishment is authorized for a 50-year period at an estimated average annual cost of $538,200, with an estimated annual Federal cost of $349,800 and an estimated annual non-Federal cost of $188,400.

(10) DELAWARE BAY COASTLINE: DELAWARE AND NEW JERSEY-PORT MAHON, DELAWARE.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The project for ecosystem restoration and shore protection, Delaware Bay coastline: Delaware and New Jersey-Port Mahon, Delaware: Report of the Chief of Engineers dated September 28, 1998, at a total cost of $7,644,000, with an estimated Federal cost of $4,969,000 and an estimated non-Federal cost of $2,675,000.

(B) PERIODIC NOURISHMENT.—Periodic nourishment is authorized for a 50-year period at an estimated average annual cost of $234,000, with an estimated annual Federal cost of $152,000 and an estimated annual non-Federal cost of $82,000.

(11) HILLSBORO AND OKEECHOBEE AQUIFER STORAGE AND RECOVERY PROJECT, FLORIDA.—The project for aquifer storage and recovery described in the Corps of Engineers Central and Southern Florida Water Supply Study, Florida, dated April 1989, and in House Document 369, dated July 30, 1968, at a total cost of $27,000,000, with an estimated Federal cost of $13,500,000 and an estimated non-Federal cost of $13,500,000.

(12) INDIAN RIVER COUNTY, FLORIDA.—Notwithstanding section 1001(a) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1986 (33 U.S.C. 579a(a)), the project for shoreline protection, Indian River County, Florida, authorized by section 501(a) of that Act (100 Stat. 4134), shall remain authorized for construction through December 31, 2002.

(13) LIDO KEY BEACH, SARASOTA, FLORIDA.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The project for shore protection at Lido Key Beach, Sarasota, Florida, authorized by section 101 of the River and Harbor Act of 1970 (84 Stat. 1819) and deauthorized by operation of section 1001(b) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1986 (33 U.S.C. 579a(b)), is authorized to be carried out by the Secretary at a total cost of $5,200,000, with an estimated Federal cost of $3,380,000 and an estimated non-Federal cost of $1,820,000.

(B) PERIODIC NOURISHMENT.—Periodic nourishment is authorized for a 50-year period at an estimated average annual cost of $602,000, with an estimated annual Federal cost of $391,000 and an estimated annual non-Federal cost of $211,000.

(14) TAMPA HARBOR-BIG BEND CHANNEL, FLORIDA.—The project for navigation, Tampa Harbor-Big Bend Channel, Florida: Report of the Chief of Engineers dated October 13, 1998, at a total cost of $12,356,000, with an estimated Federal cost of $6,235,000 and an estimated non-Federal cost of $6,121,000.

(15) BRUNSWICK HARBOR, GEORGIA.—The project for navigation, Brunswick Harbor, Georgia: Report of the Chief of Engineers dated October 6, 1998, at a total cost of $50,717,000, with an estimated Federal cost of $32,966,000 and an estimated non-Federal cost of $17,751,000.

(16) BEARGRASS CREEK, KENTUCKY.—The project for flood damage reduction, Beargrass Creek, Kentucky: Report of the Chief of Engineers dated May 12, 1998, at a total cost of $11,172,000, with an estimated Federal cost of $7,262,000 and an estimated non-Federal cost of $3,910,000.

(17) AMITE RIVER AND TRIBUTARIES, LOUISIANA, EAST BATON ROUGE PARISH WATERSHED.—The project for flood damage reduction and recreation, Amite River and Tributaries, Louisiana, East Baton Rouge Parish Watershed: Report of the Chief of Engineers, dated December 23, 1996, at a total cost of $112,900,000, with an estimated Federal cost of $73,400,000 and an estimated non-Federal cost of $39,500,000.

(18) BALTIMORE HARBOR ANCHORAGES AND CHANNELS, MARYLAND AND VIRGINIA.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The project for navigation, Baltimore Harbor Anchorages and Channels, Maryland and Virginia, Report of the Chief of Engineers dated June 8, 1998, at a total cost of $28,426,000, with an estimated Federal cost of $18,994,000 and an estimated non-Federal cost of $9,432,000.

(B) CREDIT OR REIMBURSEMENT.—If a project cooperation agreement is entered into, the non-Federal interest shall receive credit or reimbursement of the Federal share of project costs for construction work performed by the non-Federal interest before execution of the project cooperation agreement if the Secretary finds the work to be integral to the project.

(C) STUDY OF MODIFICATIONS.—During the preconstruction engineering and design phase of the project, the Secretary shall conduct a study to determine the feasibility of undertaking further modifications to the Dundalk Marine Terminal access channels, consisting of—

(i) deepening and widening the Dundalk access channels to a depth of 50 feet and a width of 500 feet;

(ii) widening the flares of the access channels; and

(iii) providing a new flare on the west side of the entrance to the east access channel.

(D) REPORT.—

(I) IN GENERAL.—Not later than March 1, 2000, the Secretary shall submit to Congress a report on the study under subparagraph (C).

(ii) CONTENTS.—The report shall include a determination of—

(I) the feasibility of performing the project modifications described in subparagraph (C); and

(II) the appropriateness of crediting or reimbursing the Federal share of the cost of the work performed by the non-Federal interest on the project modifications.

(19) RED LAKE RIVER AT CROOKSTON, MINNESOTA.—The project for flood damage reduction, Red Lake River at Crookston, Minnesota: Report of the Chief of Engineers, dated April 20, 1998, at a total cost of $8,950,000, with an estimated Federal cost of $5,720,000 and an estimated non-Federal cost of $3,230,000.

(20) NEW JERSEY SHORE PROTECTION, TOWNSENDS INLET TO CAPE MAY INLET, NEW JERSEY.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The project for hurricane and storm damage reduction, ecosystem restoration, and shore protection, New Jersey coastline, Townsends Inlet to Cape May Inlet, New Jersey: Report of the Chief of Engineers dated September 28, 1998, at a total cost of $56,503,000, with an estimated Federal cost of $36,727,000 and an estimated non-Federal cost of $19,776,000.

(21) PARK RIVER, NORTH DAKOTA.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Subject to the condition stated in subparagraph (B), the project for flood control, Park River, Grafton, North Dakota, authorized by section 401(a) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1986 (100 Stat. 4121) and deauthorized under section 1001(a) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1986 (33 U.S.C. 579a), at a total cost of $28,100,000, with an estimated Federal cost of $18,265,000 and an estimated non-Federal cost of $9,835,000.

(B) CONDITION.—No construction may be initiated unless the Secretary determines through a general reevaluation report using current data, that the project is technically sound, environmentally acceptable, and economically justified.

(22) SALT CREEK, GRAHAM, TEXAS.—The project for flood control, environmental restoration, and recreation, Salt Creek, Graham, Texas: Report of the Chief of Engineers dated October 6, 1998, at a total cost of $10,080,000, with an estimated Federal cost of $6,560,000 and an estimated non-Federal cost of $3,520,000.

(b) PROJECTS SUBJECT TO A FINAL REPORT.—The following projects for water resources development and conservation and other purposes are authorized to be carried out by the Secretary substantially in accordance with the plans, and subject to the conditions recommended in a final report of the Chief of Engineers as approved by the Secretary, if a favorable report of the Chief is completed not later than December 31, 1999:

(1) NOME HARBOR IMPROVEMENTS, ALASKA.—The project for navigation, Nome Harbor Improvements, Alaska, at a total cost of $24,608,000, with an estimated first Federal cost of $19,660,000 and an estimated first non-Federal cost of $4,948,000.

(2) SEWARD HARBOR, ALASKA.—The project for navigation, Seward Harbor, Alaska, at a total cost of $12,240,000, with an estimated first Federal cost of $4,364,000 and an estimated first non-Federal cost of $7,876,000.

(3) ARROYO PASAJERO, CALIFORNIA.—The project for flood damage reduction, Arroyo Pasajero, California, at a total cost of $260,700,000, with an estimated first Federal cost of $170,100,000 and an estimated first non-Federal cost of $90,600,000.

(4) HAMILTON AIRFIELD WETLAND RESTORATION, CALIFORNIA.—The project for environmental restoration at Hamilton Airfield, California, at a total cost of $55,200,000, with an estimated Federal cost of $41,400,000 and an estimated non-Federal cost of $13,800,000.

(5) OAKLAND, CALIFORNIA.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The project for navigation and environmental restoration, Oakland, California, at a total cost of $214,340,000, with an estimated Federal cost of $143,450,000 and an estimated non-Federal cost of $70,890,000.

(B) BERTHING AREAS AND OTHER LOCAL SERVICE FACILITIES.—The non-Federal interests shall provide berthing areas and other local service facilities necessary for the project at an estimated cost of $42,310,000.

(6) SUCCESS DAM, TULE RIVER BASIN, CALIFORNIA.—The project for flood damage reduction and water supply, Success Dam, Tule River basin, California, at a total cost of $17,900,000, with an estimated first Federal cost of $11,635,000 and an estimated first non-Federal cost of $6,265,000.

(7) DELAWARE BAY COASTLINE: DELAWARE AND NEW JERSEY-ROOSEVELT INLET-LEWES BEACH, DELAWARE.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The project for navigation mitigation, shore protection, and hurricane and storm damage reduction, Delaware Bay coastline: Delaware and New Jersey-Roosevelt Inlet-Lewes Beach, Delaware, at a total cost of $3,393,000, with an estimated Federal cost of $2,620,000 and an estimated non-Federal cost of $773,000.

(B) PERIODIC NOURISHMENT.—Periodic nourishment is authorized for a 50-year period at an estimated average annual cost of $196,000, with an estimated annual Federal cost of $152,000 and an estimated annual non-Federal cost of $44,000.

(8) DELAWARE COAST FROM CAPE HENELOPEN TO FENWICK ISLAND, BETHANY BEACH/SOUTH BETHANY BEACH, DELAWARE.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The project for hurricane and storm damage reduction and shore protection, Delaware Coast from Cape Henelopen to Fenwick Island, Bethany Beach/South Bethany Beach, Delaware, at a total cost of $22,205,000, with an estimated Federal cost of $14,433,000 and an estimated non-Federal cost of $7,772,000.

(B) PERIODIC NOURISHMENT.—Periodic nourishment is authorized for a 50-year period at an estimated average annual cost of $1,584,000, with an estimated annual Federal cost of $1,030,000 and an estimated annual non-Federal cost of $554,000.

(9) JACKSONVILLE HARBOR, FLORIDA.—The project for navigation, Jacksonville Harbor, Florida, at a total cost of $26,116,000, with an estimated Federal cost of $9,129,000 and an estimated non-Federal cost of $16,987,000.

(10) LITTLE TALBOT ISLAND, DUVAL COUNTY, FLORIDA.—The project for hurricane and storm damage prevention and shore protection, Little Talbot Island, Duval County, Florida, at a total cost of $5,915,000, with an estimated Federal cost of $3,839,000 and an estimated non-Federal cost of $2,076,000.

(11) PONCE DE LEON INLET, VOLUSIA COUNTY, FLORIDA.—The project for navigation and recreation, Ponce de Leon Inlet, Volusia County, Florida, at a total cost of $5,454,000, with an estimated Federal cost of $2,988,000 and an estimated non-Federal cost of $2,466,000.

(12) SAVANNAH HARBOR EXPANSION, GEORGIA.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Subject to subparagraph (B), the Secretary may carry out the project for navigation, Savannah Harbor expansion, Georgia, substantially in accordance with the plans, and subject to the conditions, recommended in a final report of the Chief of Engineers, with such modifications as the Secretary deems appropriate, at a total cost of $230,174,000 (of which amount a portion is authorized for implementation of the mitigation plan), with an estimated Federal cost of $145,160,000 and an estimated non-Federal cost of $85,014,000.

(B) CONDITIONS.—The project authorized by subparagraph (A) may be carried out only after—

(i) the Secretary, in consultation with affected Federal, State, regional, and local entities, has reviewed and approved an Environmental Impact Statement that includes—

(I) an analysis of the impacts of project depth alternatives ranging from 42 feet through 48 feet; and

(II) a selected plan for navigation and associated mitigation plan as required by section 906(a) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1986 (33 U.S.C. 2283); and

(ii) the Secretary of the Interior, the Secretary of Commerce, and the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, with the Secretary, have approved the selected plan and have determined that the mitigation plan adequately addresses the potential environmental impacts of the project.

(C) MITIGATION REQUIREMENTS.—The mitigation plan shall be implemented in advance of or concurrently with construction of the project.

(13) TURKEY CREEK BASIN, KANSAS CITY, MISSOURI AND KANSAS CITY, KANSAS.—The project for flood damage reduction, Turkey Creek Basin, Kansas City, Missouri, and Kansas City, Kansas, at a total cost of $42,875,000 with an estimated Federal cost of $25,596,000 and an estimated non-Federal cost of $17,279,000.

(14) DELAWARE BAY COASTLINE, OAKWOOD BEACH, NEW JERSEY.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The project for hurricane and storm damage reduction, Delaware Bay coastline, Oakwood Beach, New Jersey, at a total cost of $3,380,000, with an estimated Federal cost of $2,197,000 and an estimated non-Federal cost of $1,183,000.

(B) PERIODIC NOURISHMENT.—Periodic nourishment is authorized for a 50-year period at an estimated average annual cost of $90,000, with an estimated annual Federal cost of $58,000 and an estimated annual non-Federal cost of $32,000.

(15) DELAWARE BAY COASTLINE, REEDS BEACH AND PIERCES POINT, NEW JERSEY.—The project for environmental restoration, Delaware Bay coastline, Reeds Beach and Pierces Point, New Jersey, at a total cost of $4,057,000, with an estimated Federal cost of $2,637,000 and an estimated non-Federal cost of $1,420,000.

(16) DELAWARE BAY COASTLINE, VILLAS AND VICINITY, NEW JERSEY.—The project for environmental restoration, Delaware Bay coastline, Villas and vicinity, New Jersey, at a total cost of $7,520,000, with an estimated Federal cost of $4,888,000 and an estimated non-Federal cost of $2,632,000.

(17) LOWER CAPE MAY MEADOWS, CAPE MAY POINT, NEW JERSEY.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The project for navigation mitigation, ecosystem restoration, shore protection, and hurricane and storm damage reduction, Lower Cape May Meadows, Cape May Point, New Jersey, at a total cost of $15,952,000, with an estimated Federal cost of $12,118,000 and an estimated non-Federal cost of $3,834,000.

(B) PERIODIC NOURISHMENT.—Periodic nourishment is authorized for a 50-year period at an estimated average annual cost of $1,114,000, with an estimated annual Federal cost of $897,000 and an estimated annual non-Federal cost of $217,000.

(18) NEW JERSEY SHORE PROTECTION, BRIGANTINE INLET TO GREAT EGG HARBOR, BRIGANTINE ISLAND, NEW JERSEY.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The project for hurricane and storm damage reduction and shore protection, New Jersey Shore protection, Brigantine Inlet to Great Egg Harbor, Brigantine Island, New Jersey, at a total cost of $4,970,000, with an estimated Federal cost of $3,230,000 and an estimated non-Federal cost of $1,740,000.

(B) PERIODIC NOURISHMENT.—Periodic nourishment is authorized for a 50-year period at an estimated average annual cost of $465,000, with an estimated annual Federal cost of $302,000 and an estimated annual non-Federal cost of $163,000.

(19) COLUMBIA RIVER CHANNEL DEEPENING, OREGON AND WASHINGTON.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The project for navigation, Columbia River channel deepening, Oregon and Washington, at a total cost of $176,700,000, with an estimated Federal cost of $116,900,000 and an estimated non-Federal cost of $59,800,000.

(B) BERTHING AREAS AND OTHER LOCAL SERVICE FACILITIES.—The non-Federal interests shall provide berthing areas and other local service facilities necessary for the project at an estimated cost of $1,200,000.

(20) MEMPHIS HARBOR, MEMPHIS, TENNESSEE.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Subject to subparagraph (B), the project for navigation, Memphis Harbor, Memphis, Tennessee, authorized by section 601(a) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1986 (100 Stat. 4145) and deauthorized under section 1001(a) of that Act (33 U.S.C. 579a(a)) is authorized to be carried out by the Secretary.

(B) CONDITION.—No construction may be initiated unless the Secretary determines through a general reevaluation report using current data, that the project is technically sound, environmentally acceptable, and economically justified.

(21) JOHNSON CREEK, ARLINGTON, TEXAS.—The project for flood damage reduction, environmental restoration, and recreation, Johnson Creek, Arlington, Texas, at a total cost of $20,300,000, with an estimated Federal cost of $12,000,000 and an estimated non-Federal cost of $8,300,000.

(22) HOWARD HANSON DAM, WASHINGTON.—The project for water supply and ecosystem restoration, Howard Hanson Dam, Washington, at a total cost of $75,600,000, with an estimated Federal cost of $36,900,000 and an estimated non-Federal cost of $38,700,000.

SEC. 102. PROJECT MODIFICATIONS.

(a) PROJECTS WITH REPORTS.—

(1) SAN LORENZO RIVER, CALIFORNIA.—The project for flood control, San Lorenzo River, California, authorized by section 101(a)(5) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1996 (110 Stat. 3663), is modified to authorize the Secretary to include as a part of the project streambank erosion control measures to be undertaken substantially in accordance with the report entitled "Bank Stabilization Concept, Laurel Street Extension", dated April 23, 1998, at a total cost of $4,000,000, with an estimated Federal cost of $2,600,000 and an estimated non-Federal cost of $1,400,000.

(2) ST. JOHNS COUNTY SHORE PROTECTION, FLORIDA.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The project for hurricane and storm damage reduction and shore protection, St. Johns County, Florida, authorized by section 501(a) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1986 (100 Stat. 4133) is modified to authorize the Secretary to include navigation mitigation as a purpose of the project in accordance with the report of the Corps of Engineers dated November 18, 1998, at a total cost of $16,086,000, with an estimated Federal cost of $12,949,000 and an estimated non-Federal cost of $3,137,000.

(B) PERIODIC NOURISHMENT.—Periodic nourishment is authorized for a 50-year period at an estimated average annual cost of $1,251,000, with an estimated annual Federal cost of $1,007,000 and an estimated annual non-Federal cost of $244,000.

(3) WOOD RIVER, GRAND ISLAND, NEBRASKA.—The project for flood control, Wood River, Grand Island, Nebraska, authorized by section 101(a)(19) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1996 (110 Stat. 3665) is modified to authorize the Secretary to construct the project in accordance with the Corps of Engineers report dated June 29, 1998, at a total cost of $17,039,000, with an estimated Federal cost of $9,730,000 and an estimated non-Federal cost of $7,309,000.

(4) ABSECON ISLAND, NEW JERSEY.—The project for Absecon Island, New Jersey, authorized by section 101(b)(13) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1996 (110 Stat. 3668) is amended to authorize the Secretary to reimburse the non-Federal interests for all work performed, consistent with the authorized project.

(5) ARTHUR KILL, NEW YORK AND NEW JERSEY.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The project for navigation, Arthur Kill, New York and New Jersey, authorized by section 202(b) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1986 (100 Stat. 4098) and modified by section 301(b)(11) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1996 (110 Stat. 3711), is further modified to authorize the Secretary to construct the project at a total cost of $276,800,000, with an estimated Federal cost of $183,200,000 and an estimated non-Federal cost of $93,600,000.

(B) BERTHING AREAS AND OTHER LOCAL SERVICE FACILITIES.—The non-Federal interests shall provide berthing areas and other local service facilities necessary for the project at an estimated cost of $38,900,000.

(6) WAURIKA LAKE, OKLAHOMA, WATER CONVEYANCE FACILITIES.—The requirement for the Waurika Project Master Conservancy District to repay the $2,900,000 in costs (including interest) resulting from the October 1991 settlement of the claim of the Travelers Insurance Company before the United States Claims Court related to construction of the water conveyance facilities authorized by the first section of Public Law 88-253 (77 Stat. 841) is waived.

(b) PROJECTS SUBJECT TO REPORTS.—The following projects are modified as follows, except that no funds may be obligated to carry out work under such modifications until completion of a final report by the Chief of Engineers, as approved by the Secretary, finding that such work is technically sound, environmentally acceptable, and economically justified, as applicable:

(1) FORT PIERCE SHORE PROTECTION, FLORIDA.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The Fort Pierce, Florida, shore protection and harbor mitigation project authorized by section 301 of the River and Harbor Act of 1965 (79 Stat. 1092) and section 506(a)(2) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1996 (110 Stat. 3757) is modified to include an additional 1-mile extension of the project and increased Federal participation in accordance with section 101(c) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1986 (93 U.S.C. 2211(c)), as described in the general reevaluation report approved by the Chief of Engineers, at an estimated total cost of $9,128,000, with an estimated Federal cost of $7,074,000 and an estimated non-Federal cost of $2,054,000.

(B) PERIODIC NOURISHMENT.—Periodic nourishment is authorized for a 50-year period for the modified project, at an estimated annual cost of $559,000, with an estimated annual Federal cost of $433,000 and an estimated annual non-Federal cost of $126,000.

(2) THORNTON RESERVOIR, COOK COUNTY, ILLINOIS.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The Thornton Reservoir project, an element of the project for flood control, Chicagoland Underflow Plan, Illinois, authorized by section 3(a)(5) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1988 (102 Stat. 4013), is modified to authorize the Secretary to include additional permanent flood control storage attributable to the Natural Resources Conservation Service Thornton Reservoir (Structure 84), Little Calumet River Watershed, Illinois, approved under the Watershed Protection and Flood Prevention Act (16 U.S.C. 1001 et seq.).

(B) COST SHARING.—Costs for the Thornton Reservoir project shall be shared in accordance with section 103 of the Water Resources Development Act of 1986 (33 U.S.C. 2213).

(C) TRANSITIONAL STORAGE.—The Secretary of Agriculture may cooperate with non-Federal interests to provide, on a transitional basis, flood control storage for the Natural Resources Conservation Service Thornton Reservoir (Structure 84) project in the west lobe of the Thornton quarry.

(D) CREDITING.—The Secretary may credit against the non-Federal share of the Thornton Reservoir project all design and construction costs incurred by the non-Federal interests before the date of enactment of this Act.

(E) REEVALUATION REPORT.—The Secretary shall determine the credits authorized by subparagraph (D) that are integral to the Thornton Reservoir project and the current total project costs based on a limited reevaluation report.

(3) WELLS HARBOR, WELLS, MAINE.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The project for navigation, Wells Harbor, Maine, authorized by section 101 of the River and Harbor Act of 1960 (74 Stat. 480), is modified to authorize the Secretary to realign the channel and anchorage areas based on a harbor design capacity of 150 craft.

(B) DEAUTHORIZATION OF CERTAIN PORTIONS.—The following portions of the project are not authorized after the date of enactment of this Act:

(i) The portion of the 6-foot channel the boundaries of which begin at a point with coordinates N177,992.00, E394,831.00, thence running south 83 degrees 58 minutes 14.8 seconds west 10.38 feet to a point N177,990.91, E394,820.68, thence running south 11 degrees 46 minutes 47.7 seconds west 991.76 feet to a point N177,020.04, E394,618.21, thence running south 78 degrees 13 minutes 45.7 seconds east 10.00 feet to a point N177,018.00, E394,628.00, thence running north 11 degrees 46 minutes 22.8 seconds east 994.93 feet to the point of origin.

(ii) The portion of the 6-foot anchorage the boundaries of which begin at a point with coordinates N177,778.07, E394,336.96, thence running south 51 degrees 58 minutes 32.7 seconds west 15.49 feet to a point N177,768.53, E394,324.76, thence running south 11 degrees 46 minutes 26.5 seconds west 672.87 feet to a point N177,109.82, E394,187.46, thence running south 78 degrees 13 minutes 45.7 seconds east 10.00 feet to a point N177,107.78, E394,197.25, thence running north 11 degrees 46 minutes 25.4 seconds east 684.70 feet to the point of origin.

(iii) The portion of the 10-foot settling basin the boundaries of which begin at a point with coordinates N177,107.78, E394,197.25, thence running north 78 degrees 13 minutes 45.7 seconds west 10.00 feet to a point N177,109.82, E394,187.46, thence running south 11 degrees 46 minutes 15.7 seconds west 300.00 feet to a point N176,816.13, E394,126.26, thence running south 78 degrees 12 minutes 21.4 seconds east 9.98 feet to a point N176,814.09, E394,136.03, thence running north 11 degrees 46 minutes 29.1 seconds east 300.00 feet to the point of origin.

(iv) The portion of the 10-foot settling basin the boundaries of which begin at a point with coordinates N177,018.00, E394,628.00, thence running north 78 degrees 13 minutes 45.7 seconds west 10.00 feet to a point N177,020.04, E394,618.21, thence running south 11 degrees 46 minutes 44.0 seconds west 300.00 feet to a point N176,726.36, E394,556.97, thence running south 78 degrees 12 minutes 30.3 seconds east 10.03 feet to a point N176,724.31, E394,566.79, thence running north 11 degrees 46 minutes 22.4 seconds east 300.00 feet to the point of origin.

(C) REDESIGNATIONS AS PART OF THE 6-FOOT ANCHORAGE.—The following portions of the project shall be redesignated as part of the 6-foot anchorage:

(i) The portion of the 6-foot channel the boundaries of which begin at a point with coordinates N177,990.91, E394,820.68, thence running south 83 degrees 58 minutes 40.8 seconds west 94.65 feet to a point N177,980.98, E394,726.55, thence running south 11 degrees 46 minutes 22.4 seconds west 962.83 feet to a point N177,038.40, E394,530.10, thence running south 78 degrees 13 minutes 45.7 seconds east 90.00 feet to a point N177,020.04, E394,618.21, thence running north 11 degrees 46 minutes 47.7 seconds east 991.76 feet to the point of origin.

(ii) The portion of the 10-foot inner harbor settling basin the boundaries of which begin at a point with coordinates N177,020.04, E394,618.21, thence running north 78 degrees 13 minutes 30.5 seconds west 160.00 feet to a point N177,052.69, E394,461.58, thence running south 11 degrees 46 minutes 45.4 seconds west 299.99 feet to a point N176,759.02, E394,400.34, thence running south 78 degrees 13 minutes 17.9 seconds east 160 feet to a point N176,726.36, E394,556.97, thence running north 11 degrees 46 minutes 44.0 seconds east 300.00 feet to the point of origin.

(D) REDESIGNATION AS PART OF THE 6-FOOT CHANNEL.—The following portion of the project shall be redesignated as part of the 6-foot channel: the portion the boundaries of which begin at a point with coordinates N178,102.26, E394,751.83, thence running south 51 degrees 59 minutes 42.1 seconds west 526.51 feet to a point N177,778.07, E394,336.96, thence running south 11 degrees 46 minutes 26.6 seconds west 511.83 feet to a point N177,277.01, E394,232.52, thence running south 78 degrees 13 minutes 17.9 seconds east 80.00 feet to a point N177,260.68, E394,310.84, thence running north 11 degrees 46 minutes 24.8 seconds east 482.54 feet to a point N177,733.07, E394,409.30, thence running north 51 degrees 59 minutes 41.0 seconds east 402.63 feet to a point N177,980.98, E394,726.55, thence running north 11 degrees 46 minutes 27.6 seconds east 123.89 feet to the point of origin.

(E) REALIGNMENT.—The portion of the project described in subparagraph (D) shall be realigned to include the area located south of the inner harbor settling basin in existence on the date of enactment of this Act beginning at a point with coordinates N176,726.36, E394,556.97, thence running north 78 degrees 13 minutes 17.9 seconds west 160.00 feet to a point N176,759.02, E394,400.34, thence running south 11 degrees 47 minutes 03.8 seconds west 45 feet to a point N176,714.97, E394,391.15, thence running south 78 degrees 13 minutes 17.9 seconds 160.00 feet to a point N176,682.31, E394,547.78, thence running north 11 degrees 47 minutes 03.8 seconds east 45 feet to the point of origin.

(F) RELOCATION.—The Secretary may relocate the settling basin feature of the project to the outer harbor between the jetties.

(G) CONSERVATION EASEMENT.—The Secretary of the Interior, acting through the Director of the United States Fish and Wildlife Service, may accept a conveyance of the right, but not the obligation, to enforce a conservation easement to be held by the State of Maine over certain land owned by the town of Wells, Maine, that is adjacent to the Rachel Carson National Wildlife Refuge.

(4) NEW YORK HARBOR AND ADJACENT CHANNELS, PORT JERSEY, NEW JERSEY.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The project for navigation, New York Harbor and adjacent channels, Port Jersey, New Jersey, authorized by section 201(b) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1986 (100 Stat. 4091), is modified to authorize the Secretary to construct the project at a total cost of $102,545,000, with an estimated Federal cost of $76,909,000 and an estimated non-Federal cost of $25,636,000.

(B) BERTHING AREAS AND OTHER LOCAL FACILITIES.—The non-Federal interests shall provide berthing areas and other local service facilities necessary for the project at an estimated cost of $722,000.

(5) WILLAMETTE RIVER TEMPERATURE CONTROL, MCKENZIE SUBBASIN, OREGON.—The project for environmental restoration, Willamette River Temperature Control, McKenzie Subbasin, Oregon, authorized by section 101(a)(25) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1996 (110 Stat. 3665), is modified to authorize the Secretary to construct the project at a total Federal cost of $64,741,000.

(6) WHITE RIVER BASIN, ARKANSAS AND MISSOURI.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The project for flood control, power generation and other purposes at the White River Basin, Arkansas and Missouri, authorized by section 4 of the Act of June 28, 1938 (52 Stat. 1218, chapter 795), and modified by House Document 917, Seventy-sixth Congress, Third Session, and House Document 290, Seventy-seventh Congress, First Session, approved August 18, 1941, and House Document 499, Eighty-third Congress, Second Session, approved September 3, 1954, and by section 304 of the Water Resources Development Act of 1996 (110 Stat. 3711) is modified to authorize the Secretary to provide minimum flows necessary to sustain tail water trout fisheries by reallocating the following amounts of project storage: Beaver Lake, 3.5 feet; Table Rock, 2 feet; Bull Shoals Lake, 5 feet; Norfolk Lake, 3.5 feet; and Greers Ferry Lake, 3 feet. The Secretary shall complete such report and submit it to the Congress by July 30, 2000.

(B) REPORT.—The report of the Chief of Engineers, required by this subsection, shall also include a determination that the modification of the project in subparagraph (A) does not adversely affect other authorized project purposes, and that no Federal costs are incurred.

(C) BEAVER LAKE, ARKANSAS, WATER SUPPLY STORAGE REALLOCATION.—The Secretary shall reallocate approximately 31,000 additional acre-feet at Beaver Lake, Arkansas, to water supply storage at no cost to the Beaver Water District or the Carroll-Boone Water District, except that at no time shall the bottom of the conservation pool be at an elevation that is less than 1,076 feet, NGVD.

(D) TOLCHESTER CHANNEL S-TURN, BALTIMORE, MARYLAND.—The project for navigation, Baltimore Harbor and Channels, Maryland, authorized by section 101 of the River and Harbor Act of 1958 (72 Stat. 297), is modified to direct the Secretary to straighten the Tolchester Channel S-turn as part of project maintenance.

(E) TROPICANA WASH AND FLAMINGO WASH, NEVADA.—Any Federal costs associated with the Tropicana and Flamingo Washes, Nevada, authorized by section 101(13) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1992 (106 Stat. 4803), incurred by the non-Federal interest to accelerate or modify construction of the project, in cooperation with the Corps of Engineers, shall be considered to be eligible for reimbursement by the Secretary.

(f) REDIVERSION PROJECT, COOPER RIVER, CHARLESTON HARBOR, SOUTH CAROLINA.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The redirection project, Cooper River, Charleston Harbor, South Carolina, authorized by section 101 of the River and Harbor Act of 1968 (82 Stat. 731) and modified by title I of the Energy and Water Development Appropriations Act, 1992 (105 Stat. 517), is modified to authorize the Secretary to pay the State of South Carolina not more than $3,750,000, if the State enters into an agreement with the Secretary providing that the State shall perform all future operation of the St. Stephen, South Carolina, fish lift (including associated studies to assess the efficacy of the fish lift).

(2) CONTENTS.—The agreement shall specify the terms and conditions under which payment will be made and the rights of, and remedies available to, the Secretary to recover all or a portion of the payment if the State suspends or terminates operation of the fish lift or fails to perform the operation in a manner satisfactory to the Secretary.

(3) MAINTENANCE.—Maintenance of the fish lift shall remain a Federal responsibility.

(g) TRINITY RIVER AND TRIBUTARIES, TEXAS.—The project for flood control and navigation, Trinity River and tributaries, Texas, authorized by section 301 of the River and Harbor Act of 1965 (79 Stat. 1091), is modified to add environmental restoration as a project purpose.

(h) BEACH EROSION CONTROL AND HURRICANE PROTECTION, VIRGINIA BEACH, VIRGINIA.—

(1) ACCEPTANCE OF FUNDS.—In any fiscal year that the Corps of Engineers does not receive appropriations sufficient to meet expected project expenditures for that year, the Secretary shall accept from the city of Virginia Beach, Virginia, for purposes of the project for beach erosion control and hurricane protection, Virginia Beach, Virginia, authorized by section 501(a) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1986 (100 Stat. 4136), such funds as the city may advance for the project.

(2) REPAYMENT.—Subject to the availability of appropriations, the Secretary shall repay, without interest, the amount of any advance made under paragraph (1), from appropriations that may be provided by Congress for river and harbor, flood control, shore protection, and related projects.

(i) ELIZABETH RIVER, CHESAPEAKE, VIRGINIA.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, after the date of enactment of this Act, the city of Chesapeake, Virginia, shall not be obligated to make the annual cash contribution required under paragraph 1(9) of the Local Cooperation Agreement dated December 12, 1978, between the Government and the city for the project for navigation, southern branch of Elizabeth River, Chesapeake, Virginia.

(j) PAYMENT OPTION, MOOREFIELD, WEST VIRGINIA.—The Secretary may permit the non-Federal interests for the project for flood control, Moorefield, West Virginia, to pay without interest the remaining non-Federal cost over a period not to exceed 30 years, to be determined by the Secretary.

(k) MIAMI DADE AGRICULTURAL AND RURAL LAND RETENTION PLAN AND SOUTH BISCAYNE, FLORIDA.—Section 528(b)(3) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1996 (110 Stat. 3768) is amended by adding at the end the following:

“(D) CREDIT AND REIMBURSEMENT OF PAST AND FUTURE ACTIVITIES.—The Secretary may afford credit to or reimburse the non-Federal sponsors (using funds authorized by subparagraph (C)) for the reasonable costs of any work that has been performed or will be performed in connection with a study or activity meeting the requirements of subparagraph (A) if—

“(i) the Secretary determines that—

“(I) the work performed by the non-Federal sponsors will substantially expedite completion of a critical restoration project; and

“(II) the work is necessary for a critical restoration project; and “(ii) the credit or reimbursement is granted pursuant to a project-specific agreement that prescribes the terms and conditions of the credit or reimbursement.”.

(1) LAKE MICHIGAN, ILLINOIS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The project for storm damage reduction and shoreline protection, Lake Michigan, Illinois, from Wilmette, Illinois, to the Illinois-Indiana State line, authorized by section 101(a)(12) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1996 (110 Stat. 3664), is modified to provide for reimbursement for additional project work undertaken by the non-Federal interest.

(2) CREDIT OR REIMBURSEMENT.—The Secretary shall credit or reimburse the non-Federal interest for the Federal share of project costs incurred by the non-Federal interest in designing, constructing, or reconstructing reach 2F (700 feet south of Fullerton Avenue and 500 feet north of Fullerton Avenue), reach 3M (Meigs Field), and segments 7 and 8 of reach 4 (43rd Street to 57th Street), if the non-Federal interest carries out the work in accordance with plans approved by the Secretary, at an estimated total cost of $83,300,000.

(3) REIMBURSEMENT.—The Secretary shall reimburse the non-Federal interest for the Federal share of project costs incurred by the non-Federal interest in reconstructing the revetment structures protecting Solidarity Drive in Chicago, Illinois, before the signing of the project cooperation agreement, at an estimated total cost of $7,600,000.

(m) MEASUREMENTS OF LAKE MICHIGAN DIVERSIONS, ILLINOIS.—Section 1142(b) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1986 (100 Stat. 4253) is amended by striking “$250,000 per fiscal year for each fiscal year beginning after September 30, 1986” and inserting “a total of $1,250,000 for each of fiscal years 1999 through 2003”.

(n) PROJECT FOR NAVIGATION, DUBUQUE, IOWA.—The project for navigation at Dubuque, Iowa, authorized by section 101 of the River and Harbor Act of 1960 (74 Stat. 482), is modified to authorize the development of a wetland demonstration area of approximately 1.5 acres to be developed and operated by the Dubuque County Historical Society or a successor nonprofit organization.

(o) LOUISIANA STATE PENITENTIARY LEVEE.—The Secretary may credit against the non-Federal share work performed in the project area of the Louisiana State Penitentiary Levee, Mississippi River, Louisiana, authorized by section 401(a) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1986 (100 Stat. 4117).

(p) JACKSON COUNTY, MISSISSIPPI.—The project for environmental infrastructure, Jackson County, Mississippi, authorized by section 219(c)(5) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1992 (106 Stat. 4835) and modified by section 504 of the Water Resources Development Act of 1996 (110 Stat. 3757), is modified to direct the Secretary to provide a credit, not to exceed $5,000,000, against the non-Federal share of the cost of the project for the costs incurred by the Jackson County Board of Supervisors since February 8, 1994, in constructing the project, if the Secretary determines that such costs are for work that the Secretary determines was compatible with and integral to the project.

(q) RICHARD B. RUSSELL DAM AND LAKE, SOUTH CAROLINA.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as otherwise provided in this paragraph, the Secretary shall convey to the State of South Carolina all right, title, and interest of the United States in the parcels of land described in paragraph

(2)(A) that are currently being managed by the South Carolina Department of Natural Resources for fish and wildlife mitigation purposes for the Richard B. Russell Dam and Lake, South Carolina, project authorized by the Flood Control Act of 1966 and modified by the Water Resources Development Act of 1986.

(2) LAND DESCRIPTION.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The parcels of land to be conveyed are described in Exhibits A, F, and H of Army Lease No. DACW21-1-93-0910 and associated supplemental agreements or are designated in red in Exhibit A of Army License No. DACW21-3-85-1904, excluding all designated parcels in the license that are below elevation 346 feet mean sea level or that are less than 300 feet measured horizontally from the top of the power pool.

(B) MANAGEMENT OF EXCLUDED PARCELS.—Management of the excluded parcels shall continue in accordance with the terms of Army License No. DACW21-3-85-1904 until the Secretary and the State enter into an agreement under paragraph (6).

(C) SURVEY.—The exact acreage and legal description of the land shall be determined by a survey satisfactory to the Secretary, with the cost of the survey borne by the State.

(3) COSTS OF CONVEYANCE.—The State shall be responsible for all costs, including real estate transaction and environmental compliance costs, associated with the conveyance.

(4) PERPETUAL STATUS.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—All land conveyed under this paragraph shall be retained in public ownership and shall be managed in perpetuity for fish and wildlife mitigation purposes in accordance with a plan approved by the Secretary.

(B) REVERSION.—If any parcel of land is not managed for fish and wildlife mitigation purposes in accordance with the plan, title to the parcel shall revert to the United States.

(5) ADDITIONAL TERMS AND CONDITIONS.—The Secretary may require such additional terms and conditions in connection with the conveyance as the Secretary considers appropriate to protect the interests of the United States.

(6) FISH AND WILDLIFE MITIGATION AGREEMENT.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary may pay the State of South Carolina not more than $4,850,000 subject to the Secretary and the State entering into a binding agreement for the State to manage for fish and wildlife mitigation purposes in perpetuity the lands conveyed under this paragraph and excluded parcels designated in Exhibit A of Army License No. DACW21-3-85-1904.

(B) FAILURE OF PERFORMANCE.—The agreement shall specify the terms and conditions under which payment will be made and the rights of, and remedies available to, the Federal Government to recover all or a portion of the payment if the State fails to manage any parcel in a manner satisfactory to the Secretary.

(r) LAND CONVEYANCE, CLARKSTON, WASHINGTON.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall convey to the Port of Clarkston, Washington, all right, title, and interest of the United States in and to a portion of the land described in the Department of the Army lease No. DACW68-1-97-22, consisting of approximately 31 acres, the exact boundaries of which shall be determined by the Secretary and the Port of Clarkston.

(2) ADDITIONAL LAND.—The Secretary may convey to the Port of Clarkston, Washington, such additional land located in the vicinity of Clarkston, Washington, as the Secretary determines to be excess to the needs of the Columbia River Project and appropriate for conveyance.

(3) TERMS AND CONDITIONS.—The conveyances made under paragraphs (1) and (2) shall be subject to such terms and conditions as the Secretary determines to be necessary to protect the interests of the United States, including a requirement that the Port of Clarkston pay all administrative costs associated with the conveyances, including the cost of land surveys and appraisals and costs associated with compliance with applicable environmental laws (including regulations).

(4) USE OF LAND.—The Port of Clarkston shall be required to pay the fair market value, as determined by the Secretary, of any land conveyed pursuant to paragraphs (1) and (2) that is not retained in public ownership and used for public park or recreation purposes, except that the Secretary shall have a right of reverter to reclaim possession and title to any such land.

(s) WHITE RIVER, INDIANA.—The project for flood control, Indianapolis on West Fork of the White River, Indiana, authorized by section 5 of the Act entitled "An Act authorizing the construction of certain public works on rivers and harbors for flood control, and other purposes", approved June 22, 1936 (49 Stat. 1586, chapter 688), as modified by section 323 of the Water Resources Development Act of 1996 (110 Stat. 3716), is modified to authorize the Secretary to undertake the riverfront alterations described in the Central Indianapolis Waterfront Concept Plan, dated February 1994, for the Canal Development (Upper Canal feature) and the Beveridge Paper feature, at a total cost not to exceed $25,000,000, of which $12,500,000 is the estimated Federal cost and $12,500,000 is the estimated non-Federal cost, except that no such alterations may be undertaken unless the Secretary determines that the alterations authorized by this subsection, in combination with the alterations undertaken under section 323 of the Water Resources Development Act of 1996 (110 Stat. 3716), are economically justified.

(t) FOX POINT HURRICANE BARRIER, PROVIDENCE, RHODE ISLAND.—The project for hurricane-flood protection, Fox Point, Providence, Rhode Island, authorized by section 203 of the Flood Control Act of 1958 (72 Stat. 306) is modified to direct the Secretary to undertake the necessary repairs to the barrier, as identified in the Condition Survey and Technical Assessment dated April 1998 with Supplement dated August 1998, at a total cost of $3,000,000, with an estimated Federal cost of $1,950,000 and an estimated non-Federal cost of $1,050,000.

(u) LEE COUNTY, CAPTIVA ISLAND SEGMENT, FLORIDA.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The project for shoreline protection, Lee County, Captiva Island segment, Florida, authorized by section 506(b)(3)(A) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1996 (110 Stat. 3758), is modified to direct the Secretary to enter into an agreement with the non-Federal interest to carry out the project in accordance with section 206 of the Water Resources Development Act of 1992 (33 U.S.C. 4261-1).

(2) DECISION DOCUMENT.—The design memorandum approved in 1996 shall be the decision document supporting continued Federal participation in cost sharing of the project.

(v) COLUMBIA RIVER CHANNEL, WASHINGTON AND OREGON.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The project for navigation, Columbia River between Vancouver, Washington, and The Dalles, Oregon, authorized by the first section of the Act of July 24, 1946 (60 Stat. 637, chapter 595), is modified to authorize the Secretary to construct an alternate barge channel to traverse the high span of the Interstate Route 5 bridge between Portland, Oregon, and Vancouver, Washington, to a depth of 17 feet, with a width of approximately 200 feet through the high span of the bridge and a width of approximately 300 feet upstream of the bridge.

(2) DISTANCE UPSTREAM.—The channel shall continue upstream of the bridge approximately 2,500 feet to about river mile 107, then to a point of convergence with the main barge channel at about river mile 108.

(3) DISTANCE DOWNSTREAM.—

(A) SOUTHERN EDGE.—The southern edge of the channel shall continue downstream of the bridge approximately 1,500 feet to river mile 106+10, then turn northwest to tie into the edge of the Upper Vancouver Turning Basin.

(B) NORTHERN EDGE.—The northern edge of the channel shall continue downstream of the bridge to the Upper Vancouver Turning Basin.

SEC. 103. PROJECT DEAUTHORIZATIONS.

(a) BRIDGEPORT HARBOR, CONNECTICUT.—The portion of the project for navigation, Bridgeport Harbor, Connecticut, authorized by section 101 of the River and Harbor Act of 1958 (72 Stat. 297), consisting of a 2.4-acre anchorage area 9 feet deep and an adjacent 0.60-acre anchorage area 6 feet deep, located on the west side of Johnsons River, Connecticut, is not authorized after the date of enactment of this Act.

(b) BASS HARBOR, MAINE.—

(1) DEAUTHORIZATION.—The portions of the project for navigation, Bass Harbor, Maine, authorized on May 7, 1962, under section 107 of the River and Harbor Act of 1960 (33 U.S.C. 577) described in paragraph (2) are not authorized after the date of enactment of this Act.

(2) DESCRIPTION.—The portions of the project referred to in paragraph (1) are described as follows:

(A) Beginning at a bend in the project, N149040.00, E538505.00, thence running easterly about 50.00 feet along the northern limit of the project to a point, N149061.55, E538550.11, thence running southerly about 642.08 feet to a point, N148477.64, E538817.18, thence running southwesterly about 156.27 feet to a point on the westerly limit of the project, N148348.50, E538737.02, thence running northerly about 149.00 feet along the westerly limit of the project to a bend in the project, N148489.22, E538768.09, thence running northwesterly about 610.39 feet along the westerly limit of the project to the point of origin.

(B) Beginning at a point on the westerly limit of the project, N148118.55, E538689.05, thence running southeasterly about 91.92 feet to a point, N148041.43, E538739.07, thence running southerly about 65.00 feet to a point, N147977.86, E538725.51, thence running southwesterly about 91.92 feet to a point on the westerly limit of the project, N147927.84, E538648.39, thence running northerly about 195.00 feet along the westerly limit of the project to the point of origin.

(c) BOOTHBAY HARBOR, MAINE.—The project for navigation, Boothbay Harbor, Maine, authorized by the Act of July 25, 1912 (37 Stat. 201, chapter 253), is not authorized after the date of enactment of this Act.

(d) CARVERS HARBOR, VINALHAVEN, MAINE.—

(1) DEAUTHORIZATION.—The portion of the project for navigation, Carvers Harbor, Vinalhaven, Maine, authorized by the Act of June 3, 1896 (commonly known as the "River and Harbor Appropriations Act of 1896") (29 Stat. 202, chapter 314), described in paragraph (2) is not authorized after the date of enactment of this Act.

(2) DESCRIPTION.—The portion of the project referred to in paragraph (1) is the portion of the 16-foot anchorage beginning at a point with coordinates N137,502.04, E895,156.83, thence running south 6 degrees 34 minutes 57.6 seconds west 277,660 feet to a point N137,226.21, E895,125.00, thence running north 53 degrees, 5 minutes 42.4 seconds west 127,746 feet to a point N137,302.92, E895,022.85, thence running north 33 degrees 56 minutes 9.8 seconds east 239,999 feet to the point of origin.

(e) EAST BOOTHBAY HARBOR, MAINE.—Section 364 of the Water Resources Development Act of 1996 (110 Stat. 3731) is amended by striking paragraph (9) and inserting the following:

"(9) EAST BOOTHBAY HARBOR, MAINE.—The project for navigation, East Boothbay Harbor, Maine, authorized by the first section of the Act entitled 'An Act making appropriations for the construction, repair, and preservation of certain public works on rivers and harbors, and for other purposes', approved June 25, 1910 (36 Stat. 657)."

(f) SEARSPORT HARBOR, SEARSPORT, MAINE.—

(1) DEAUTHORIZATION.—The portion of the project for navigation, Searsport Harbor, Searsport, Maine, authorized by section 101 of the River and Harbor Act of 1962 (76 Stat. 1173), described in paragraph (2) is not authorized after the date of enactment of this Act.

(2) DESCRIPTION.—The portion of the project referred to in paragraph (1) is the portion of the 35-foot turning basin beginning at a point with coordinates N225,008.38, E395,464.26, thence running north 43 degrees 49 minutes 53.4 seconds east 362,001 feet to a point N225,269.52, E395,714.96, thence running south 71 degrees 27 minutes 33.0 seconds east 1,309,201 feet to a point N224,853.22, E396,956.21, thence running north 84 degrees 3 minutes 45.7 seconds west 1,499,997 feet to the point of origin.

SEC. 104. STUDIES.

(a) CADDO LEVEE, RED RIVER BELOW DENISON DAM, ARIZONA, LOUISIANA, OKLAHOMA, AND TEXAS.—The Secretary shall conduct a study to determine the feasibility of undertaking a project for flood control, Caddo Levee, Red River Below Denison Dam, Arizona, Louisiana, Oklahoma, and Texas, including incorporating the existing levee, along Twelve Mile Bayou from its juncture with the existing Red River Below Denison Dam Levee approximately 26 miles upstream to its terminus at high ground in the vicinity of Black Bayou, Louisiana.

(b) BOYDSVILLE, ARKANSAS.—The Secretary shall conduct a study to determine the feasibility of reservoir and associated improvements to provide for flood control, recreation, water quality, water supply, and fish and wildlife purposes in the vicinity of Boydsville, Arkansas.

(c) UNION COUNTY, ARKANSAS.—The Secretary shall conduct a study to determine the feasibility of municipal and industrial water supply for Union County, Arkansas.

(d) WHITE RIVER BASIN, ARKANSAS AND MISSOURI.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall conduct a study of the project for flood control, power generation, and other purposes at the White River Basin, Arkansas and Missouri, authorized by section 4 of the Act of June 28, 1938 (52 Stat. 1218, chapter 795), and modified by H. Doc. 917, 76th Cong., 3d Sess., and H. Doc. 290, 77th Cong., 1st Sess., approved August 18, 1941, and H. Doc. 499, 83d Cong., 2d Sess., approved September 3, 1954, and by section 304 of the Water Resources Development Act of 1996 (110 Stat. 3711) to determine the feasibility of modifying the project to provide minimum flows necessary to sustain the tail water trout fisheries.

(2) REPORT.—Not later than July 30, 2000, the Secretary shall submit to Congress a report on the study and any recommendations on reallocation of storage at Beaver Lake, Table Rock, Bull Shoals Lake, Norfolk Lake, and Greers Ferry Lake.

(e) FIELDS LANDING CHANNEL, HUMBOLDT HARBOR, CALIFORNIA.—The Secretary—

(1) shall conduct a study for the project for navigation, Fields Landing Channel, Humboldt Harbor and Bay, California, to a depth of minus 35 feet (MLLW), and for that purpose may use any feasibility report prepared by the non-Federal sponsor under section 203 of the Water Resources Development Act of 1986 (33 U.S.C. 2231) for which reimbursement of the Federal share of the study is authorized subject to the availability of appropriations; and

(2) may carry out the project under section 107 of the River and Harbor Act of 1960 (33 U.S.C. 577), if the Secretary determines that the project is feasible.

(f) FRAZIER CREEK, TULARE COUNTY, CALIFORNIA.—The Secretary shall conduct a study to determine—

(1) the feasibility of restoring Frazier Creek, Tulare County, California; and

(2) the Federal interest in flood control, environmental restoration, conservation of fish and wildlife resources, recreation, and water quality of the creek.

(g) STRAWBERRY CREEK, BERKELEY, CALIFORNIA.—The Secretary shall conduct a study to determine the feasibility of restoring Strawberry Creek, Berkeley, California, and the Federal interest in environmental restoration, conservation of fish and wildlife resources, recreation, and water quality.

(h) WEST SIDE STORM WATER RETENTION FACILITY, CITY OF LANCASTER, CALIFORNIA.—The Secretary shall conduct a study to determine the feasibility of undertaking measures to construct the West Side Storm Water Retention Facility in the city of Lancaster, California.

(i) APALACHICOLA RIVER, FLORIDA.—The Secretary shall conduct a study for the purpose of identifying—

(1) alternatives for the management of material dredged in connection with operation and maintenance of the Apalachicola River Navigation Project; and

(2) alternatives that reduce the requirements for such dredging.

(j) BROWARD COUNTY, SAND BYPASSING AT PORT EVERGLADES, FLORIDA.—The Secretary shall conduct a study to determine the feasibility of constructing a sand bypassing project at the Port Everglades Inlet, Florida.

(k) CITY OF DESTIN-NORIEGA POINT BREAKWATER, FLORIDA.—The Secretary shall conduct a study to determine the feasibility of—

(1) restoring Noriega Point, Florida, to serve as a breakwater for Destin Harbor; and

(2) including Noriega Point as part of the East Pass, Florida, navigation project.

(l) GATEWAY TRIANGLE REDEVELOPMENT AREA, FLORIDA.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall conduct a study to determine the feasibility of undertaking measures to reduce the flooding problems in the vicinity of Gateway Triangle Redevelopment Area, Florida.

(2) STUDIES AND REPORTS.—The study shall include a review and consideration of studies and reports completed by the non-Federal interests.

(m) CITY OF PLANT CITY, FLORIDA.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall conduct a study to determine the feasibility of a flood control project in the city of Plant City, Florida.

(2) STUDIES AND REPORTS.—In conducting the study, the Secretary shall review and consider studies and reports completed by the non-Federal interests.

(n) BOISE, IDAHO.—The Secretary shall conduct a study to determine the feasibility of undertaking flood control on the Boise River in Boise, Idaho.

(o) GOOSE CREEK WATERSHED, OAKLEY, IDAHO.—The Secretary shall conduct a study to determine the feasibility of undertaking flood damage reduction, water conservation, ground water recharge, ecosystem restoration, and related purposes along the Goose Creek watershed near Oakley, Idaho.

(p) LITTLE WOOD RIVER, GOODING, IDAHO.—The Secretary shall conduct a study to determine the feasibility of restoring and repairing the Lava Rock Little Wood River Containment System to prevent flooding in the city of Gooding, Idaho.

(q) BANK STABILIZATION, SNAKE RIVER, LEWISTON, IDAHO.—The Secretary shall conduct a study to determine the feasibility of undertaking bank stabilization and flood control on the Snake River at Lewiston, Idaho.

(r) SNAKE RIVER AND PAYETTE RIVER, IDAHO.—The Secretary shall conduct a study to determine the feasibility of a flood control project along the Snake River and Payette River, in the vicinity of Payette, Idaho.

(s) ACADIANA NAVIGATION CHANNEL, LOUISIANA.—The Secretary shall conduct a study to determine the feasibility of assuming operations and maintenance for the Acadiana Navigation Channel located in Iberia and Vermillion Parishes, Louisiana.

(t) CAMERON PARISH WEST OF CALCASIEU RIVER, LOUISIANA.—The Secretary shall conduct a study to determine the feasibility of a storm damage reduction and ecosystem restoration project for Cameron Parish west of Calcasieu River, Louisiana.

(u) BENEFICIAL USE OF DREDGED MATERIAL, COASTAL LOUISIANA.—The Secretary shall conduct a study to determine the feasibility of using dredged material from maintenance activities at Federal navigation projects in coastal Louisiana to benefit coastal areas in the State.

(v) CONTRABAND BAYOU NAVIGATION CHANNEL, LOUISIANA.—The Secretary shall conduct a study to determine the feasibility of assuming the maintenance at Contraband Bayou, Calcasieu River Ship Canal, Louisiana.

(w) GOLDEN MEADOW LOCK, LOUISIANA.—The Secretary shall conduct a study to determine the feasibility of converting the Golden Meadow floodgate into a navigation lock to be included in the Larose to Golden Meadow Hurricane Protection Project, Louisiana.

(x) GULF INTRACOASTAL WATERWAY ECOSYSTEM PROTECTION, CHEF MENTEUR TO SABINE RIVER, LOUISIANA.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall conduct a study to determine the feasibility of undertaking ecosystem restoration and protection measures along the Gulf Intracoastal Waterway from Chef Menteur to Sabine River, Louisiana.

(2) MATTERS TO BE ADDRESSED.—The study shall address saltwater intrusion, tidal scour, erosion, compaction, subsidence, wind and wave action, bank failure, and other problems relating to water resources in the area.

(y) LAKE PONTCHARTRAIN, LOUISIANA, AND VICINITY, ST. CHARLES PARISH PUMPS.—The Secretary shall conduct a study to determine the feasibility of modifying the Lake Pontchartrain Hurricane Protection Project to include the St. Charles Parish Pumps and the modification of the seawall fronting protection along Lake Pontchartrain in Orleans Parish, from New Basin Canal on the west to the Inner Harbor Navigation Canal on the east.

(z) LAKE PONTCHARTRAIN AND VICINITY SEAWALL RESTORATION, LOUISIANA.—The Secretary shall conduct a study to determine the feasibility of undertaking structural modifications of that portion of the seawall fronting protection along the south shore of Lake Pontchartrain in Orleans Parish, Louisiana, extending approximately 5 miles from the new basin Canal on the west to the Inner Harbor Navigation Canal on the east as a part of the Lake Pontchartrain and Vicinity Hurricane Protection Project, authorized by section 204 of the Flood Control Act of 1965 (79 Stat. 1077).

(aa) MUDDY RIVER, BROOKLINE AND BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall evaluate the January 1999 study commissioned by the Boston Parks and Recreation Department, Boston, Massachusetts, and entitled "The Emerald Necklace Environmental Improvement Master Plan, Phase I Muddy River Flood Control, Water Quality and Habitat Enhancement", to determine whether the plans outlined in the study for flood control, water quality, habitat enhancements, and other improvements to the Muddy River in Brookline and Boston, Massachusetts, are cost-effective, technically sound, environmentally acceptable, and in the Federal interest.

(2) REPORT.—Not later than December 31, 1999, the Secretary shall report to Congress the results of the evaluation.

(bb) DETROIT RIVER, MICHIGAN, GREENWAY CORRIDOR STUDY.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall conduct a study to determine the feasibility of a project for shoreline protection, frontal erosion, and associated purposes in the Detroit River shoreline area from the Belle Isle Bridge to the Ambassador Bridge in Detroit, Michigan.

(2) POTENTIAL MODIFICATIONS.—As a part of the study, the Secretary shall review potential project modifications to any existing Corps projects within the same area.

(cc) ST. CLAIR SHORES FLOOD CONTROL, MICHIGAN.—The Secretary shall conduct a study to determine the feasibility of constructing a flood control project at St. Clair Shores, Michigan.

(dd) WOODTICK PENINSULA, MICHIGAN, AND TOLEDO HARBOR, OHIO.—The Secretary shall conduct a study to determine the feasibility of utilizing dredged material from Toledo Harbor, Ohio, to provide erosion reduction, navigation, and ecosystem restoration at Woodtick Peninsula, Michigan.

(ee) DREDGED MATERIAL MANAGEMENT, PASCAGOULA HARBOR, MISSISSIPPI.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall conduct a study to determine an alternative plan for dredged material management for the Pascagoula River portion of the project for navigation, Pascagoula Harbor, Mississippi, authorized by section 202(a) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1986 (100 Stat. 4094).

(2) CONTENTS.—The study under paragraph (1) shall—

(A) include an analysis of the feasibility of expanding the Singing River Island Disposal Area or constructing a new dredged material disposal facility; and

(2) identify methods of managing and reducing sediment transport into the Federal navigation channel.

(ff) TUNICA LAKE WEIR, MISSISSIPPI.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall conduct a study to determine the feasibility of constructing an outlet weir at Tunica Lake, Tunica County, Mississippi, and Lee County, Arkansas, for the purpose of stabilizing water levels in the Lake.

(2) ECONOMIC ANALYSIS.—In carrying out the study, the Secretary shall include as a part of the economic analysis the benefits derived from recreation uses at the Lake and economic benefits associated with restoration of fish and wildlife habitat.

(gg) PROTECTIVE FACILITIES FOR THE ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI, RIVERFRONT AREA.—

(1) STUDY.—The Secretary shall conduct a study to determine the optimal plan to protect facilities that are located on the Mississippi River riverfront within the boundaries of St. Louis, Missouri.

(2) REQUIREMENTS.—In conducting the study, the Secretary shall—

(A) evaluate alternatives to offer safety and security to facilities; and

(B) use state-of-the-art techniques to best evaluate the current situation, probable solutions, and estimated costs.

(3) REPORT.—Not later than April 15, 2000, the Secretary shall submit to Congress a report on the results of the study.

(hh) YELLOWSTONE RIVER, MONTANA.—

(1) STUDY.—The Secretary shall conduct a comprehensive study of the Yellowstone River from Gardiner, Montana to the confluence of the Missouri River to determine the hydrologic, biological, and socioeconomic cumulative impacts on the river.

(2) CONSULTATION AND COORDINATION.—The Secretary shall conduct the study in consultation with the United States Fish and Wildlife Service, the United States Geological Survey, and the Natural Resources Conservation Service and with the full participation of the State of Montana and tribal and local entities, and provide for public participation.

(3) REPORT.—Not later than 5 years after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall submit a report to Congress on the results of the study.

(ii) LAS VEGAS VALLEY, NEVADA.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall conduct a comprehensive study of water resources located in the Las Vegas Valley, Nevada.

(2) OBJECTIVES.—The study shall identify problems and opportunities related to ecosystem restoration, water quality, particularly the quality of surface runoff, water supply, and flood control.

(jj) OSWEGO RIVER BASIN, NEW YORK.—The Secretary shall conduct a study to determine the feasibility of establishing a flood forecasting system within the Oswego River basin, New York.

(kk) PORT OF NEW YORK-NEW JERSEY NAVIGATION STUDY AND ENVIRONMENTAL RESTORATION STUDY.—

(1) NAVIGATION STUDY.—The Secretary shall conduct a comprehensive study of navigation needs at the Port of New York-New Jersey (including the South Brooklyn Marine and Red Hook Container Terminals, Staten Island, and adjacent areas) to address improvements, including deepening of existing channels to depths of 50 feet or greater, that are required to provide economically efficient and environmentally sound navigation to meet current and future requirements.

(2) ENVIRONMENTAL RESTORATION STUDY.—The Secretary, acting through the Chief of Engineers, shall review the report of the Chief of Engineers on the New York Harbor, printed in the House Management Plan of the Harbor Estuary Program, and other pertinent reports concerning the New York Harbor Region and the Port of New York-New Jersey, to determine the Federal interest in advancing harbor environmental restoration.

(3) REPORT.—The Secretary may use funds from the ongoing navigation study for New York and New Jersey Harbor to complete a reconnaissance report for environmental restoration by December 31, 1999. The navigation study to deepen New York and New Jersey Harbor shall consider beneficial use of dredged material.

(ll) CLEVELAND HARBOR, CLEVELAND, OHIO.—The Secretary shall conduct a study to determine the feasibility of undertaking repairs and related navigation improvements at Dike 14, Cleveland, Ohio.

(mm) CHAGRIN, OHIO.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall conduct a study to determine the feasibility of undertaking flood damage reduction at Chagrin, Ohio.

(2) ICE RETENTION STRUCTURE.—In conducting the study, the Secretary may consider construction of an ice retention structure as a potential means of providing flood damage reduction.

(nn) TOUSSAINT RIVER, CARROLL TOWNSHIP, OHIO.—The Secretary shall conduct a study to determine the feasibility of undertaking navigation improvements at Toussaint River, Carroll Township, Ohio.

(oo) SANTEE DELTA WETLAND HABITAT, SOUTH CAROLINA.—Not later than 18 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall complete a comprehensive study of the ecosystem in the Santee Delta focus area of South Carolina to determine the feasibility of undertaking measures to enhance the wetland habitat in the area.

(pp) WACCAMAW RIVER, SOUTH CAROLINA.—The Secretary shall conduct a study to determine the feasibility of a flood control project for the Waccamaw River in Horry County, South Carolina.

(qq) UPPER SUSQUEHANNA-LACKAWANNA, PENNSYLVANIA, WATERSHED MANAGEMENT AND RESTORATION STUDY.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall conduct a study to determine the feasibility of a comprehensive flood plain management and watershed restoration project for the Upper Susquehanna-Lackawanna Watershed, Pennsylvania.

(2) GEOGRAPHIC INFORMATION SYSTEM.—In conducting the study, the Secretary shall use a geographic information system.

(3) PLANS.—The study shall formulate plans for comprehensive flood plain management and environmental restoration.

(4) CREDITING.—Non-Federal interests may receive credit for in-kind services and materials that contribute to the study. The Secretary may credit non-Corps Federal assistance provided to the non-Federal interest toward the non-Federal share of study costs to the maximum extent authorized by law.

(rr) CONTAMINATED DREDGED MATERIAL AND SEDIMENT MANAGEMENT, SOUTH CAROLINA COASTAL AREAS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall review pertinent reports and conduct other studies and field investigations to determine the best available science and methods for management of contaminated dredged material and sediments in the coastal areas of South Carolina.

(2) FOCUS.—In carrying out subsection (a), the Secretary shall place particular focus on areas where the Corps of Engineers maintains deep draft navigation projects, such as Charleston Harbor, Georgetown Harbor, and Port Royal, South Carolina.

(3) COOPERATION.—The studies shall be conducted in cooperation with the appropriate Federal and State environmental agencies.

(ss) NIOBRARA RIVER AND MISSOURI RIVER SEDIMENTATION STUDY, SOUTH DAKOTA.—The Secretary shall conduct a study of the Niobrara River watershed and the operations of Fort Randall Dam and Gavins Point Dam on the Missouri River to determine the feasibility of alleviating the bank erosion, sedimentation, and related problems in the lower Niobrara River and the Missouri River below Fort Randall Dam.

(tt) SANTA CLARA RIVER, UTAH.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall conduct a study to determine the feasibility of undertaking measures to alleviate damage caused by flooding, bank erosion, and sedimentation along the watershed of the Santa Clara River, Utah, above the Gunlock Reservoir.

(2) CONTENTS.—The study shall include an analysis of watershed conditions and water quality, as related to flooding and bank erosion, along the Santa Clara River in the vicinity of the town of Gunlock, Utah.

(uu) MOUNT ST. HELENS ENVIRONMENTAL RESTORATION, WASHINGTON.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall conduct a study to determine the feasibility of ecosystem restoration improvements throughout the Cowlitz and Toutle River basins, Washington, including the 6,000 acres of wetland, riverine, riparian, and upland habitats lost or altered due to the eruption of Mount St. Helens in 1980 and subsequent emergency actions.

(2) REQUIREMENTS.—In carrying out the study, the Secretary shall—

(A) work in close coordination with local governments, watershed entities, the State of Washington, and other Federal agencies; and

(B) place special emphasis on—

(i) conservation and restoration strategies to benefit species that are listed or proposed for listing as threatened or endangered species under the Endangered Species Act of 1973 (16 U.S.C. 1531 et seq.); and

(ii) other watershed restoration objectives.

(vv) AGAT SMALL BOAT HARBOR, GUAM.—The Secretary shall conduct a study to determine the feasibility of undertaking the repair and reconstruction of Agat Small Boat Harbor, Guam, including the repair of existing shore protection measures and construction or a revetment of the breakwater seawall.

(ww) APRA HARBOR SEAWALL, GUAM.—The Secretary shall conduct a study to determine the feasibility of undertaking measures to repair, upgrade, and extend the seawall protecting Apra Harbor, Guam, and to ensure continued access to the harbor via Route 11B.

(xx) APRA HARBOR FUEL PIERS, GUAM.—The Secretary shall conduct a study to determine the feasibility of undertaking measures to upgrade the piers and fuel transmission lines at the fuel piers in the Apra Harbor, Guam, and measures to provide for erosion control and protection against storm damage.

(yy) MAINTENANCE DREDGING OF HARBOR PIERS, GUAM.—The Secretary shall conduct a study to determine the feasibility of Federal maintenance of areas adjacent to piers at harbors in Guam, including Apra Harbor, Agat Harbor, and Agana Marina.

(zz) ALTERNATIVE WATER SOURCES STUDY.—
(1) IN GENERAL.—The Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency shall conduct a study of the water supply needs of States that are not currently eligible for assistance under title XVI of the Reclamation Projects Authorization and Adjustment Act of 1992 (43 U.S.C. 390h et seq.).

(2) REQUIREMENTS.—The study shall—
(A) identify the water supply needs (including potable, commercial, industrial, recreational and agricultural needs) of each State described in paragraph (1) through 2020, making use of such State, regional, and local plans, studies, and reports as are available;

(B) evaluate the feasibility of various alternative water source technologies such as reuse and reclamation of wastewater and stormwater (including indirect potable reuse), aquifer storage and recovery, and desalination to meet the anticipated water supply needs of the States; and

(C) assess how alternative water sources technologies can be utilized to meet the identified needs.

(3) REPORT.—The Administrator shall report to Congress on the results of the study not more than 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act.

(aaa) GREAT LAKES NAVIGATIONAL SYSTEM.—In consultation with the St. Lawrence Seaway Development Corporation, the Secretary shall review the Great Lakes Connecting Channel and Harbors Report dated March 1985 to determine the feasibility of any modification of the recommendations made in the report to improve commercial navigation on the Great Lakes navigation system, including locks, dams, harbors, ports, channels, and other related features.

TITLE II—GENERAL PROVISIONS

SEC. 201. FLOOD HAZARD MITIGATION AND RIVERINE ECOSYSTEM RESTORATION PROGRAM.

(a) IN GENERAL.—

(1) AUTHORIZATION.—The Secretary may carry out a program to reduce flood hazards and restore the natural functions and values of riverine ecosystems throughout the United States.

(2) STUDIES.—In carrying out the program, the Secretary shall conduct studies to identify appropriate flood damage reduction, conservation, and restoration measures and may design and implement watershed management and restoration projects.

(3) PARTICIPATION.—The studies and projects carried out under the program shall be conducted, to the extent practicable, with the full participation of the appropriate Federal agencies, including the Department of Agriculture, the Federal Emergency Management Agency, the Department of the Interior, the Environmental Protection Agency, and the Department of Commerce.

(4) NONSTRUCTURAL APPROACHES.—The studies and projects shall, to the extent practicable, emphasize nonstructural approaches to preventing or reducing flood damages.

(b) COST-SHARING REQUIREMENTS.—

(1) STUDIES.—The cost of studies conducted under subsection (a) shall be shared in accordance with section 105 of the Water Resources Development Act of 1986 (33 Stat. 2215).

(2) PROJECTS.—The non-Federal interests shall pay 35 percent of the cost of any project carried out under this section.

(3) IN-KIND CONTRIBUTIONS.—The non-Federal interests shall provide all land, easements, rights-of-way, dredged material disposal areas, and relocations necessary for the projects. The value of the land, easements, rights-of-way, dredged material disposal areas, and relocations shall be credited toward the payment required under this subsection.

(4) RESPONSIBILITIES OF THE NON-FEDERAL INTERESTS.—The non-Federal interests shall be responsible for all costs associated with operating, maintaining, replacing, repairing, and rehabilitating all projects carried out under this section.

(c) PROJECT JUSTIFICATION.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary may implement a project under this section if the Secretary determines that the project—

(A) will significantly reduce potential flood damages;

(B) will improve the quality of the environment; and

(C) is justified considering all costs and beneficial outputs of the project.

(2) SELECTION CRITERIA; POLICIES AND PROCEDURES.—Not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall—

(A) develop criteria for selecting and rating the projects to be carried out as part of the program authorized by this section; and

(B) establish policies and procedures for carrying out the studies and projects undertaken under this section.

(d) REPORTING REQUIREMENT.—The Secretary may not implement a project under this section until—

(1) the Secretary provides to the Committee on Environment and Public Works of the Senate and the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives a written notification describing the project and the determinations made under subsection (c); and

(2) a period of 21 calendar days has expired following the date on which the notification was received by the Committees.

(e) PRIORITY AREAS.—In carrying out this section, the Secretary shall examine the potential for flood damage reductions at appropriate locations, including—

(1) Los Angeles County drainage area, California;

(2) Napa River Valley watershed, California;

(3) Le May, Missouri;

(4) the upper Delaware River basin, New York;

(5) Mill Creek, Cincinnati, Ohio;

(6) Tillamook County, Oregon;

(7) Willamette River basin, Oregon;

(8) Delaware River, Pennsylvania;

(9) Schuylkill River, Pennsylvania; and

(10) Providence County, Rhode Island.

(f) PER-PROJECT LIMITATION.—Not more than $25,000,000 in Army Civil Works appropriations may be expended on any single project undertaken under this section.

(g) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section $75,000,000 for the period of fiscal years 2000 and 2001.

(2) PROGRAM FUNDING LEVELS.—All studies and projects undertaken under this authority from Army Civil Works appropriations shall be fully funded within the program funding levels provided in this subsection.

SEC. 202. SHORE PROTECTION.

Section 103(d) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1986 (33 U.S.C. 2213(d)) is amended—

(1) by striking “Costs of constructing” and inserting the following:

“(1) CONSTRUCTION.—Costs of constructing”; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

“(2) PERIODIC NOURISHMENT.—In the case of a project authorized for construction after December 31, 1999, or for which a feasibility study is completed after that date, the non-Federal cost of the periodic nourishment of projects or measures for shore protection or beach erosion control shall be 50 percent, except that—

“(A) all costs assigned to benefits to privately owned shores (where use of such shores is limited to private interests) or to prevention of losses of private land shall be borne by non-Federal interests; and

“(B) all costs assigned to the protection of federally owned shores shall be borne by the United States.”.

SEC. 203. SMALL FLOOD CONTROL AUTHORITY.

Section 205 of the Flood Control Act of 1948 (33 U.S.C. 701s) is amended—

(1) in the first sentence, by striking “construction of small projects” and inserting “implementation of small structural and nonstructural projects”; and

(2) in the third sentence, by striking “$5,000,000” and inserting “$7,000,000”.

SEC. 204. USE OF NON-FEDERAL FUNDS FOR COMPILING AND DISSEMINATING INFORMATION ON FLOODS AND FLOOD DAMAGES.

Section 206(b) of the Flood Control Act of 1960 (33 U.S.C. 709a(b)) is amended in the third sentence by inserting before the period at the end the following: “, but the Secretary of the Army may accept funds voluntarily contributed by such entities for the purpose of expanding the scope of the services requested by the entities”.

SEC. 205. AQUATIC ECOSYSTEM RESTORATION.

Section 206(c) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1996 (33 U.S.C. 2330(c)) is amended—

(1) by striking “Construction” and inserting the following:

“(1) IN GENERAL.—Construction”; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

“(2) NONPROFIT ENTITIES.—Notwithstanding section 221 of the Flood Control Act of 1970 (42 U.S.C. 1962d-5b), for any project carried out under this section, a non-Federal interest may include a nonprofit entity, with the consent of the affected local government.”.

SEC. 206. BENEFICIAL USES OF DREDGED MATERIAL.

Section 204 of the Water Resources Development Act of 1992 (33 U.S.C. 2326) is amended by adding at the end the following:

“(g) NONPROFIT ENTITIES.—Notwithstanding section 221 of the Flood Control Act of 1970 (42 U.S.C. 1962d-5b), for any project carried out under this section, a non-Federal interest may include a nonprofit entity, with the consent of the affected local government.”.

SEC. 207. VOLUNTARY CONTRIBUTIONS BY STATES AND POLITICAL SUBDIVISIONS.

Section 5 of the Act of June 22, 1936 (33 U.S.C. 701h), is amended by inserting “or environmental restoration” after “flood control”.

SEC. 208. RECREATION USER FEES.

(a) WITHHOLDING OF AMOUNTS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—During fiscal years 1999 through 2002, the Secretary may withhold from the special account established under section 4(i)(1)(A) of the Land and Water Conservation Fund Act of 1965 (16 U.S.C. 4601-6a(i)(1)(A)) 100 percent of the amount of receipts above a baseline of $34,000,000 per each fiscal year received from fees imposed at recreation sites under the administrative jurisdiction of the Department of the Army under section 4(b) of that Act (16 U.S.C. 4601-6a(b)).

(2) USE.—The amounts withheld shall be retained by the Secretary and shall be available, without further Act of appropriation, for expenditure by the Secretary in accordance with subsection (b).

(3) AVAILABILITY.—The amounts withheld shall remain available until September 30, 2005.

(b) USE OF AMOUNTS WITHHELD.—In order to increase the quality of the visitor experience at public recreational areas and to enhance the protection of resources, the amounts withheld under subsection (a) may be used only for—

- (1) repair and maintenance projects (including projects relating to health and safety);
- (2) interpretation;
- (3) signage;
- (4) habitat or facility enhancement;
- (5) resource preservation;
- (6) annual operation (including fee collection);
- (7) maintenance; and
- (8) law enforcement related to public use.

(c) AVAILABILITY.—Each amount withheld by the Secretary shall be available for expenditure, without further Act of appropriation, at the specific project from which the amount, above baseline, is collected.

SEC. 209. WATER RESOURCES DEVELOPMENT STUDIES FOR THE PACIFIC REGION.

Section 444 of the Water Resources Development Act of 1996 (110 Stat. 3747) is amended by striking “interest of navigation” and inserting “interests of water resources development (including navigation, flood damage reduction, and environmental restoration)”.

SEC. 210. MISSOURI AND MIDDLE MISSISSIPPI RIVERS ENHANCEMENT PROJECT.

(a) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

(1) MIDDLE MISSISSIPPI RIVER.—The term “middle Mississippi River” means the reach of the Mississippi River from the mouth of the Ohio River (river mile 0, upper Mississippi River) to the mouth of the Missouri River (river mile 195).

(2) MISSOURI RIVER.—The term “Missouri River” means the main stem and floodplain of the Missouri River (including reservoirs) from its confluence with the Mississippi River at St. Louis, Missouri, to its headwaters near Three Forks, Montana.

(3) PROJECT.—The term “project” means the project authorized by this section.

(b) PROTECTION AND ENHANCEMENT ACTIVITIES.—

(1) PLAN.—

(A) DEVELOPMENT.—Not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall develop a plan for a project to protect and enhance fish and wildlife habitat of the Missouri River and the middle Mississippi River.

(B) ACTIVITIES.—

(i) IN GENERAL.—The plan shall provide for such activities as are necessary to protect and enhance fish and wildlife habitat without adversely affecting—

(I) the water-related needs of the region surrounding the Missouri River and the middle Mississippi River, including flood control, navigation, recreation, and enhancement of water supply; and

(II) private property rights.

(ii) REQUIRED ACTIVITIES.—The plan shall include—

(I) modification and improvement of navigation training structures to protect and enhance fish and wildlife habitat;

(II) modification and creation of side channels to protect and enhance fish and wildlife habitat;

(III) restoration and creation of island fish and wildlife habitat;

(IV) creation of riverine fish and wildlife habitat;

(V) establishment of criteria for prioritizing the type and sequencing of activities based on cost-effectiveness and likelihood of success; and

(VI) physical and biological monitoring for evaluating the success of the project, to be performed by the River Studies Center of the United States Geological Survey in Columbia, Missouri.

(2) IMPLEMENTATION OF ACTIVITIES.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Using funds made available to carry out this section, the Secretary shall carry out the activities described in the plan.

(B) USE OF EXISTING AUTHORITY FOR UNCONSTRUCTED FEATURES OF THE PROJECT.—Using funds made available to the Secretary under other law, the Secretary shall design and construct any feature of the project that may be carried out using the authority of the Secretary to modify an authorized project, if the Secretary determines that the design and construction will—

(i) accelerate the completion of activities to protect and enhance fish and wildlife habitat of the Missouri River or the middle Mississippi River; and

(ii) be compatible with the project purposes described in this section.

(c) INTEGRATION OF OTHER ACTIVITIES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—In carrying out the activities described in subsection (b), the Secretary shall integrate the activities with other Federal, State, and tribal activities.

(2) NEW AUTHORITY.—Nothing in this section confers any new regulatory authority on any Federal or non-Federal entity that carries out any activity authorized by this section.

(d) PUBLIC PARTICIPATION.—In developing and carrying out the plan and the activities described in subsection (b), the Secretary shall provide for public review and comment in accordance with applicable Federal law, including—

- (1) providing advance notice of meetings;
- (2) providing adequate opportunity for public input and comment;
- (3) maintaining appropriate records; and
- (4) compiling a record of the proceedings of meetings.

(e) COMPLIANCE WITH APPLICABLE LAW.—In carrying out the activities described in subsections (b) and (c), the Secretary shall comply with any applicable Federal law, including the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (42 U.S.C. 4321 et seq.).

(f) COST SHARING.—

(1) NON-FEDERAL SHARE.—The non-Federal share of the cost of the project shall be 35 percent.

(2) FEDERAL SHARE.—The Federal share of the cost of any 1 activity described in subsection (b) shall not exceed $5,000,000.

(3) OPERATION AND MAINTENANCE.—The operation and maintenance of the project shall be a non-Federal responsibility.

(g) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is authorized to be appropriated to pay the Federal share of the cost of carrying out activities under this section $30,000,000 for the period of fiscal years 2000 and 2001.

SEC. 211. OUTER CONTINENTAL SHELF.

(a) SAND, GRAVEL, AND SHELL.—Section 8(k)(2)(B) of the Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act (43 U.S.C. 1337(k)(2)(B)) is amended in the second sentence by inserting before the period at the end the following: “or any other non-Federal interest subject to an agreement entered into under section 221 of the Flood Control Act of 1970 (42 U.S.C. 1962d-5b)”.

(b) REIMBURSEMENT FOR LOCAL INTERESTS.—Any amounts paid by non-Federal interests for beach erosion control, hurricane protection, shore protection, or storm damage reduction projects as a result of an assessment under section 8(k) of the Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act (43 U.S.C. 1337(k)) shall be fully reimbursed.

SEC. 212. ENVIRONMENTAL DREDGING.

Section 312(f) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1990 (33 U.S.C. 1272(f)) is amended by adding at the end the following:

“(6) Snake Creek, Bixby, Oklahoma.

“(7) Willamette River, Oregon.”

SEC. 213. BENEFIT OF PRIMARY FLOOD DAMAGES AVOIDED INCLUDED IN BENEFIT-COST ANALYSIS.

Section 308 of the Water Resources Development Act of 1990 (33 U.S.C. 2318) is amended—

(1) in the heading of subsection (a), by striking “BENEFIT-COST ANALYSIS” and inserting “ELEMENTS EXCLUDED FROM COST-BENEFIT ANALYSIS”;

(2) by redesignating subsections (b) through (e) as subsections (c) through (f), respectively;

(3) by inserting after subsection (a) the following:

“(b) ELEMENTS INCLUDED IN COST-BENEFIT ANALYSIS.—The Secretary shall include primary flood damages avoided in the benefit base for justifying Federal nonstructural flood damage reduction projects.”; and

(4) in the first sentence of subsection (e) (as redesignated by paragraph (2)), by striking “(b)” and inserting “(d)”.

SEC. 214. CONTROL OF AQUATIC PLANT GROWTH.

Section 104(a) of the River and Harbor Act of 1958 (33 U.S.C. 610(a)) is amended in the first sentence by striking “water-hyacinth, alligatorweed, Eurasian water milfoil, melaleuca,” and inserting “Alligatorweed, Aquaticum, Arundo Dona, Brazilian Elodea, Cabomba, Melaleuca, Myriophyllum, Spicatum, Tarmarix, Water Hyacinth.”.

SEC. 215. ENVIRONMENTAL INFRASTRUCTURE.

Section 219(c) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1992 (106 Stat. 4835) is amended by adding at the end the following:

“(19) LAKE TAHOE, CALIFORNIA AND NEVADA.—Regional water system for Lake Tahoe, California and Nevada.

“(20) LANCASTER, CALIFORNIA.—Fox Field Industrial Corridor water facilities, Lancaster, California.

“(21) SAN RAMON, CALIFORNIA.—San Ramon Valley recycled water project, San Ramon, California.”.

SEC. 216. WATERSHED MANAGEMENT, RESTORATION, AND DEVELOPMENT.

Section 503 of the Water Resources Development Act of 1996 (110 Stat. 3756) is amended—

(1) in subsection (d)—

(A) by striking paragraph (10) and inserting the following:

“(10) Regional Atlanta Watershed, Atlanta, Georgia, and Lake Lanier of Forsyth and Hall Counties, Georgia.”; and

(B) by adding at the end the following:

“(14) Clear Lake watershed, California.

“(15) Fresno Slough watershed, California.

“(16) Hayward Marsh, Southern San Francisco Bay watershed, California.

“(17) Kaweah River watershed, California.

“(18) Lake Tahoe watershed, California and Nevada.

“(19) Malibu Creek watershed, California.

“(20) Truckee River basin, Nevada.

“(21) Walker River basin, Nevada.

“(22) Bronx River watershed, New York.

“(23) Catawba River watershed, North Carolina.

“(24) Columbia Slough watershed, Oregon.”;

(2) by redesignating subsection (e) as subsection (f); and

(3) by inserting after subsection (d) the following:

“(e) NONPROFIT ENTITIES.—Notwithstanding section 221(b) of the Flood Control Act of 1970 (42 U.S.C. 1962d-5b(b)), for any project undertaken under this section, with the consent of the affected local government, a non-Federal interest may include a non-profit entity.”.

SEC. 217. LAKES PROGRAM.

Section 602(a) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1986 (100 Stat. 4148) is amended—

(1) in paragraph (15), by striking “and” at the end;

(2) in paragraph (16), by striking the period at the end; and

(3) by adding at the end the following:

“(17) Clear Lake, Lake County, California, removal of silt and aquatic growth and development of a sustainable weed and algae management program;

“(18) Flints Pond, Hollis, New Hampshire, removal of excessive aquatic vegetation; and “(19) Osgood Pond, Milford, New Hampshire, removal of excessive aquatic vegetation.”.

SEC. 218. SEDIMENTS DECONTAMINATION POLICY.

Section 405 of the Water Resources Development Act of 1992 (33 U.S.C. 2239 note; Public Law 102-580) is amended—

(1) in subsection (a), by adding at the end the following:

“(4) PRACTICAL END-USE PRODUCTS.—Technologies selected for demonstration at the pilot scale shall result in practical end-use products.

“(5) ASSISTANCE BY THE SECRETARY.—The Secretary shall assist the project to ensure expeditious completion by providing sufficient quantities of contaminated dredged material to conduct the full-scale demonstrations to stated capacity.”; and

(2) in subsection (c), by striking the first sentence and inserting the following: “There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section a total of $22,000,000 to complete technology testing, technology commercialization, and the development of full scale processing facilities within the New York/New Jersey Harbor.”.

SEC. 219. DISPOSAL OF DREDGED MATERIAL ON BEACHES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 145 of the Water Resources Development Act of 1976 (33 U.S.C. 426j) is amended in the first sentence by striking “50” and inserting “35”.

(b) GREAT LAKES BASIN.—The Secretary shall work with the State of Ohio, other Great Lakes States, and political subdivisions of the States to fully implement and maximize beneficial reuse of dredged material as provided under section 145 of the Water Resources Development Act of 1976 (33 U.S.C. 426j).

SEC. 220. FISH AND WILDLIFE MITIGATION.

Section 906(e) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1986 (33 U.S.C. 2283(e)) is amended by inserting after the second sentence the following: “Not more than 80 percent of the non-Federal share of such first costs may be in kind, including a facility, supply, or service that is necessary to carry out the enhancement project.”.

SEC. 221. REIMBURSEMENT OF NON-FEDERAL INTEREST.

Section 211(e)(2)(A) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1996 (33 U.S.C. 701b-13(e)(2)(A)) is amended by striking “subject to amounts being made available in advance in appropriations Acts” and inserting “subject to the availability of appropriations”.

SEC. 222. NATIONAL CONTAMINATED SEDIMENT TASK FORCE.

(a) DEFINITION OF TASK FORCE.—In this section, the term “Task Force” means the National Contaminated Sediment Task Force established by section 502 of the National Contaminated Sediment Assessment and Management Act (33 U.S.C. 1271 note; Public Law 102-580).

(b) CONVENING.—The Secretary and the Administrator shall convene the Task Force not later than 90 days after the date of enactment of this Act.

(c) REPORTING ON REMEDIAL ACTION.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Task Force shall submit to Congress a report on the status of remedial actions at aquatic sites in the areas described in paragraph (2).

(2) AREAS.—The report under paragraph (1) shall address remedial actions in—

(A) areas of probable concern identified in the survey of data regarding aquatic sediment quality required by section 503(a) of the National Contaminated Sediment Assessment and Management Act (33 U.S.C. 1271);

(B) areas of concern within the Great Lakes, as identified under section 118(f) of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act (33 U.S.C. 1268(f));

(C) estuaries of national significance identified under section 320 of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act (33 U.S.C. 1330);

(D) areas for which remedial action has been authorized under any of the Water Resources Development Acts; and

(E) as appropriate, any other areas where sediment contamination is identified by the Task Force.

(3) ACTIVITIES.—Remedial actions subject to reporting under this subsection include remedial actions under—

(A) the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act of 1980 (42 U.S.C. 9601 et seq.) or other Federal or State law containing environmental remediation authority;

(B) any of the Water Resources Development Acts;

(C) section 404 of the Federal Water Pollution Control Act (33 U.S.C. 1344); or

(D) section 10 of the Act of March 3, 1899 (30 Stat. 1151, chapter 425).

(4) CONTENTS.—The report under paragraph (1) shall provide, with respect to each remedial action described in the report, a description of—

(A) the authorities and sources of funding for conducting the remedial action;

(B) the nature and sources of the sediment contamination, including volume and concentration, where appropriate;

(C) the testing conducted to determine the nature and extent of sediment contamination and to determine whether the remedial action is necessary;

(D) the action levels or other factors used to determine that the remedial action is necessary;

(E) the nature of the remedial action planned or undertaken, including the levels of protection of public health and the environment to be achieved by the remedial action;

(F) the ultimate disposition of any material dredged as part of the remedial action;

(G) the status of projects and the obstacles or barriers to prompt conduct of the remedial action; and

(H) contacts and sources of further information concerning the remedial action.

SEC. 223. JOHN GLENN GREAT LAKES BASIN PROGRAM.

(a) STRATEGIC PLANS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 18 months after the date of enactment of this Act, and every 2 years thereafter, the Secretary shall report to Congress on a plan for programs of the Corps of Engineers in the Great Lakes basin.

(2) CONTENTS.—The plan shall include details of the projected environmental and navigational projects in the Great Lakes basin, including—

(A) navigational maintenance and operations for commercial and recreational vessels;

(B) environmental restoration activities;

(C) water level maintenance activities;

(D) technical and planning assistance to States and remedial action planning committees;

(E) sediment transport analysis, sediment management planning, and activities to support prevention of excess sediment loadings;

(F) flood damage reduction and shoreline erosion prevention;

(G) all other activities of the Corps of Engineers; and

(H) an analysis of factors limiting use of programs and authorities of the Corps of Engineers in existence on the date of enactment of this Act in the Great Lakes basin, including the need for new or modified authorities.

(b) GREAT LAKES BIOHYDROLOGICAL INFORMATION.—

(1) INVENTORY.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 90 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall request each Federal agency that may possess information relevant to the Great Lakes biohydrological system to provide an inventory of all such information in the possession of the agency.

(B) RELEVANT INFORMATION.—For the purpose of subparagraph (A), relevant information includes information on—

(i) ground and surface water hydrology;

(ii) natural and altered tributary dynamics;

(iii) biological aspects of the system influenced by and influencing water quantity and water movement;

(iv) meteorological projections and weather impacts on Great Lakes water levels; and

(v) other Great Lakes biohydrological system data relevant to sustainable water use management.

(2) REPORT.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 18 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary, in consultation with the States, Indian tribes, and Federal agencies, and after requesting information from the provinces and the federal government of Canada, shall—

(i) compile the inventories of information;

(ii) analyze the information for consistency and gaps; and

(iii) submit to Congress, the International Joint Commission, and the Great Lakes States a report that includes recommendations on ways to improve the information base on the biohydrological dynamics of the Great Lakes ecosystem as a whole, so as to support environmentally sound decisions regarding diversions and consumptive uses of Great Lakes water.

(B) RECOMMENDATIONS.—The recommendations in the report under subparagraph (A) shall include recommendations relating to the resources and funds necessary for implementing improvement of the information base.

(C) CONSIDERATIONS.—In developing the report under subparagraph (A), the Secretary, in cooperation with the Secretary of State, the Secretary of Transportation, and other relevant agencies as appropriate, shall consider and report on the status of the issues described and recommendations made in—

(i) the Report of the International Joint Commission to the Governments of the United States and Canada under the 1977 reference issued in 1985; and

(ii) the 1993 Report of the International Joint Commission to the Governments of Canada and the United States on Methods of Alleviating Adverse Consequences of Fluctuating Water Levels in the Great Lakes St. Lawrence Basin.

(c) GREAT LAKES RECREATIONAL BOATING.—Not later than 18 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall, using information and studies in existence on the date of enactment of this Act to the maximum extent practicable, and in cooperation with the Great Lakes States, submit to Congress a report detailing the economic benefits of recreational boating in the Great Lakes basin, particularly at harbors benefiting from operation and maintenance projects of the Corps of Engineers.

(d) COOPERATION.—In undertaking activities under this section, the Secretary shall—

(1) encourage public participation; and
(2) cooperate, and, as appropriate, collaborate, with Great Lakes States, tribal governments, and Canadian federal, provincial, tribal governments.

(e) WATER USE ACTIVITIES AND POLICIES.—The Secretary may provide technical assistance to the Great Lakes States to develop interstate guidelines to improve the consistency and efficiency of State-level water use activities and policies in the Great Lakes basin.

(f) COST SHARING.—The Secretary may seek and accept funds from non-Federal entities to be used to pay up to 25 percent of the cost of carrying out subsections (b), (c), (d), and (e).

SEC. 224. PROJECTS FOR IMPROVEMENT OF THE ENVIRONMENT.

Section 1135(c) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1986 (33 U.S.C. 2309a(c)) is amended—

(1) by striking “The Secretary” and inserting the following:

“(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary”; and
(2) by adding at the end the following:
“(2) CONTROL OF SEA LAMPREY.—Congress finds that—

“(A) the Great Lakes navigation system has been instrumental in the spread of sea lamprey and the associated impacts to its fishery; and

“(B) the use of the authority under this subsection for control of sea lamprey at any Great Lakes basin location is appropriate.”.

SEC. 225. WATER QUALITY, ENVIRONMENTAL QUALITY, RECREATION, FISH AND WILDLIFE, FLOOD CONTROL, AND NAVIGATION.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary may investigate, study, evaluate, and report on—

(1) water quality, environmental quality, recreation, fish and wildlife, flood control, and navigation in the western Lake Erie watershed, including the watersheds of the Maumee River, Ottawa River, and Portage River in the States of Indiana, Ohio, and Michigan; and

(2) measures to improve water quality, environmental quality, recreation, fish and wildlife, flood control, and navigation in the western Lake Erie basin.

(b) COOPERATION.—In carrying out studies and investigations under subsection (a), the Secretary shall cooperate with Federal, State, and local agencies and nongovernmental organizations to ensure full consideration of all views and requirements of all interrelated programs that those agencies may develop independently or in coordination with the Corps of Engineers.

SEC. 226. IRRIGATION DIVERSION PROTECTION AND FISHERIES ENHANCEMENT ASSISTANCE.

The Secretary may provide technical planning and design assistance to non-Federal interests and may conduct other site-specific studies to formulate and evaluate fish screens, fish passages devices, and other measures to decrease the incidence of juvenile and adult fish inadvertently entering into irrigation systems. Measures shall be developed in cooperation with Federal and State resource agencies and not impair the continued withdrawal of water for irrigation purposes. In providing such assistance priority shall be given based on the objectives of the Endangered Species Act, cost-effectiveness, and the potential for reducing fish mortality. Non-Federal interests shall agree by contract to contribute 50 percent of the cost of such assistance. Not more than one-half of such non-Federal contribution may be made by the provision of services, materials, supplies, or other in-kind services. No construction activities are authorized by this section. Not later than 2 years after the date of enactment of this section, the Secretary shall report to Congress on fish mortality caused by irrigation water intake devices, appropriate measures to reduce mortality, the extent to which such measures are currently being employed in the arid States, the construction costs associated with such measures, and the appropriate Federal role, if any, to encourage the use of such measures.

SEC. 227. SMALL STORM DAMAGE REDUCTION PROJECTS.

Section 3 of the Act of August 13, 1946 (33 U.S.C. 426g), is amended by striking “$2,000,000” and inserting “$3,000,000”.

SEC. 228. SHORE DAMAGE PREVENTION OR MITIGATION.

Section 111 of the River and Harbor Act of 1968 (33 U.S.C. 426(i)) is amended—

(1) in the first sentence, by striking “The Secretary” and inserting “(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary”;

(2) in the second sentence, by striking “The costs” and inserting the following:
“(b) COST SHARING.—The costs”;

(3) in the third sentence—
(A) by striking “No such” and inserting the following:
“(c) REQUIREMENT FOR SPECIFIC AUTHORIZATION.—No such”; and

(B) by striking “$2,000,000” and inserting “$5,000,000”; and
(4) by adding at the end the following:
“(d) COORDINATION.—The Secretary shall—

“(1) coordinate the implementation of the measures under this section with other Federal and non-Federal shore protection projects in the same geographic area; and
“(2) to the extent practicable, combine mitigation projects with other shore protection projects in the same area into a comprehensive regional project.”.

SEC. 229. ATLANTIC COAST OF NEW YORK.

Section 404(c) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1992 (106 Stat. 4863) is amended by inserting after “1997” the following: “and an additional total of $2,500,000 for fiscal years thereafter”.

SEC. 230. ACCELERATED ADOPTION OF INNOVATIVE TECHNOLOGIES FOR CONTAMINATED SEDIMENTS.

Section 8 of the Water Resources Development Act of 1988 (33 U.S.C. 2314) is amended—

(1) by redesignating subsections (b) and (c) as subsections (c) and (d), respectively; and

(2) by inserting after subsection (a) the following:

“(b) ACCELERATED ADOPTION OF INNOVATIVE TECHNOLOGIES FOR MANAGEMENT OF CONTAMINATED SEDIMENTS.—

“(1) TEST PROJECTS.—The Secretary shall approve an appropriate number of projects to test, under actual field conditions, innovative technologies for environmentally sound management of contaminated sediments.

“(2) DEMONSTRATION PROJECTS.—The Secretary may approve an appropriate number of projects to demonstrate innovative technologies that have been pilot tested under paragraph (1).

“(3) CONDUCT OF PROJECTS.—Each pilot project under paragraph (1) and demonstration project under paragraph (2) shall be conducted by a university with proven expertise in the research and development of contaminated sediment treatment technologies and innovative applications using waste materials.”.

SEC. 231. MISSISSIPPI RIVER COMMISSION.

Notwithstanding any other provision of law, a member of the Mississippi River Commission (other than the president of the Commission) shall receive annual pay of $21,500.

SEC. 232. USE OF PRIVATE ENTERPRISES.

(a) INVENTORY AND REVIEW.—The Secretary shall inventory and review all activities of the Corps of Engineers that are not inherently governmental in nature in accordance with the Federal Activities Inventory Reform Act of 1998 (31 U.S.C. 501 note; Public Law 105-270).

(b) CONSIDERATIONS.—In determining whether to commit to private enterprise the performance of architectural or engineering services (including surveying and mapping services), the Secretary shall take into consideration professional qualifications as well as cost.

TITLE III—PROJECT-RELATED PROVISIONS

SEC. 301. DREDGING OF SALT PONDS IN THE STATE OF RHODE ISLAND.

The Secretary may acquire for the State of Rhode Island a dredge and associated equipment with the capacity to dredge approximately 100 cubic yards per hour for use by the State in dredging salt ponds in the State.

SEC. 302. UPPER SUSQUEHANNA RIVER BASIN, PENNSYLVANIA AND NEW YORK.

Section 567(a) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1996 (110 Stat. 3787) is amended by adding at the end the following:
“(3) The Chemung River watershed, New York, at an estimated Federal cost of $5,000,000.”.

SEC. 303. SMALL FLOOD CONTROL PROJECTS.

Section 102 of the Water Resources Development Act of 1996 (110 Stat. 3668) is amended—

(1) by redesignating paragraphs (15) through (22) as paragraphs (16) through (23), respectively;

(2) by inserting after paragraph (14) the following:

“(15) REPAUPO CREEK AND DELAWARE RIVER, GLOUCESTER COUNTY, NEW JERSEY.—Project for tidegate and levee improvements for Repaupo Creek and the Delaware River, Gloucester County, New Jersey.”; and
(3) by adding at the end the following:

“(24) IRONDEQUOIT CREEK, NEW YORK.—Project for flood control, Irondequoit Creek watershed, New York.

“(25) TIOGA COUNTY, PENNSYLVANIA.—Project for flood control, Tioga River and Cowanquesque River and their tributaries, Tioga County, Pennsylvania.”.

SEC. 304. SMALL NAVIGATION PROJECTS.

Section 104 of the Water Resources Development Act of 1996 (110 Stat. 3669) is amended—

(1) by redesignating paragraphs (9) through (12) as paragraphs (11) through (14), respectively; and

(2) by inserting after paragraph (8) the following:

“(9) FORTESCUE INLET, DELAWARE BAY, NEW JERSEY.—Project for navigation for Fortescue Inlet, Delaware Bay, New Jersey.

SEC. 305. STREAMBANK PROTECTION PROJECTS.

(a) ARCTIC OCEAN, BARROW, ALASKA.—The Secretary shall evaluate and, if justified under section 14 of the Flood Control Act of 1946 (33 U.S.C. 701r), carry out storm damage reduction and coastal erosion measures at the town of Barrow, Alaska.

(b) SAGINAW RIVER, BAY CITY, MICHIGAN.—The Secretary may construct appropriate control structures in areas along the Saginaw River in the city of Bay City, Michigan, under authority of section 14 of the Flood Control Act of 1946 (33 Stat. 701r).

(c) YELLOWSTONE RIVER, BILLINGS, MONTANA.—The streambank protection project at Coulson Park, along the Yellowstone River, Billings, Montana, shall be eligible for assistance under section 14 of the Flood Control Act of 1946 (33 U.S.C. 701r).

SEC. 306. AQUATIC ECOSYSTEM RESTORATION, SPRINGFIELD, OREGON.

Under section 206 of the Water Resources Development Act of 1996 (33 U.S.C. 2330), the Secretary shall conduct measures to address water quality, water flows, and fish habitat restoration in the historic Springfield, Oregon, millrace through the reconfiguration of the existing millpond, if the Secretary determines that harmful impacts have occurred as the result of a previously constructed flood control project by the Corps of Engineers.

SEC. 307. GUILFORD AND NEW HAVEN, CONNECTICUT.

The Secretary shall expeditiously complete the activities authorized under section 346 of the Water Resources Development Act of 1992 (106 Stat. 4858), including activities associated with Sluice Creek in Guilford, Connecticut, and Lighthouse Point Park in New Haven, Connecticut.

SEC. 308. FRANCIS BLAND FLOODWAY DITCH.

(a) REDESIGNATION.—The project for flood control, Eight Mile Creek, Paragould, Arkansas, authorized by section 401(a) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1986 (100 Stat. 4112) and known as “Eight Mile Creek, Paragould, Arkansas”, shall be known and designated as the “Francis Bland Floodway Ditch”.

(b) LEGAL REFERENCES.—Any reference in any law, map, regulation, document, paper, or other record of the United States to the project and creek referred to in subsection (a) shall be deemed to be a reference to the Francis Bland Floodway Ditch.

SEC. 309. CALOOSAHATCHEE RIVER BASIN, FLORIDA.

Section 528(e)(4) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1996 (110 Stat. 3770) is amended in the first sentence by inserting before the period at the end the following: “, including potential land acquisition in the Caloosahatchee River basin or other areas”.

SEC. 310. CUMBERLAND, MARYLAND, FLOOD PROJECT MITIGATION.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The project for flood control and other purposes, Cumberland, Maryland, authorized by section 5 of the Act of June 22, 1936 (commonly known as the “Flood Control Act of 1936”) (49 Stat. 1574, chapter 688), is modified to authorize the Secretary to undertake, as a separate part of the project, restoration of the historic Chesapeake and Ohio Canal substantially in accordance with the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal National Historic Park, Cumberland, Maryland, Rewatering Design Analysis, dated February 1998, at a total cost of $15,000,000, with an estimated Federal cost of $9,750,000 and an estimated non-Federal cost of $5,250,000.

(b) IN-KIND SERVICES.—The non-Federal interest for the restoration project under subsection (a)—

(1) may provide all or a portion of the non-Federal share of project costs in the form of in-kind services; and

(2) shall receive credit toward the non-Federal share of project costs for design and construction work performed by the non-Federal interest before execution of a project cooperation agreement and for land, easements, and rights-of-way required for the restoration and acquired by the non-Federal interest before execution of such an agreement.

(c) OPERATION AND MAINTENANCE.—The operation and maintenance of the restoration project under subsection (a) shall be the full responsibility of the National Park Service.

SEC. 311. CITY OF MIAMI BEACH, FLORIDA.

Section 5(b)(3)(C)(i) of the Act of August 13, 1946 (33 U.S.C. 426h), is amended by inserting before the semicolon the following: “, including the city of Miami Beach, Florida”.

SEC. 312. SARDIS RESERVOIR, OKLAHOMA.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall accept from the State of Oklahoma or an agent of the State an amount, as determined under subsection (b), as prepayment of 100 percent of the water supply cost obligation of the State under Contract No. DACW56-74-JC-0314 for water supply storage at Sardis Reservoir, Oklahoma.

(b) DETERMINATION OF AMOUNT.—The amount to be paid by the State of Oklahoma under subsection (a) shall be subject to adjustment in accordance with accepted discount purchase methods for Government properties as determined by an independent accounting firm designated by the Director of the Office of Management and Budget.

(c) EFFECT.—Nothing in this section shall otherwise affect any of the rights or obligations of the parties to the contract referred to in subsection (a).

SEC. 313. UPPER MISSISSIPPI RIVER AND ILLINOIS WATERWAY SYSTEM NAVIGATION MODERNIZATION.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds that—

(1) exports are necessary to ensure job creation and an improved standard of living for the people of the United States;

(2) the ability of producers of goods in the United States to compete in the international marketplace depends on a modern and efficient transportation network;

(3) a modern and efficient waterway system is a transportation option necessary to provide United States shippers a safe, reliable, and competitive means to win foreign markets in an increasingly competitive international marketplace;

(4) the need to modernize is heightened because the United States is at risk of losing its competitive edge as a result of the priority that foreign competitors are placing on modernizing their own waterway systems;

(5) growing export demand projected over the coming decades will force greater demands on the waterway system of the United States and increase the cost to the economy if the system proves inadequate to satisfy growing export opportunities;

(6) the locks and dams on the upper Mississippi River and Illinois River waterway system were built in the 1930s and have some of the highest average delays to commercial tows in the country;

(7) inland barges carry freight at the lowest unit cost while offering an alternative to truck and rail transportation that is environmentally sound, is energy efficient, is safe, causes little congestion, produces little air or noise pollution, and has minimal social impact; and

(8) it should be the policy of the Corps of Engineers to pursue aggressively modernization of the waterway system authorized by Congress to promote the relative competitive position of the United States in the international marketplace.

(b) PRECONSTRUCTION ENGINEERING AND DESIGN.—In accordance with the Upper Mississippi River-Illinois Waterway System Navigation Study, the Secretary shall proceed immediately to prepare engineering design, plans, and specifications for extension of locks 20, 21, 22, 24, 25 on the Mississippi River and the LaGrange and Peoria Locks on the Illinois River, to provide lock chambers 110 feet in width and 1,200 feet in length, so that construction can proceed immediately upon completion of studies and authorization of projects by Congress.

SEC. 314. UPPER MISSISSIPPI RIVER MANAGEMENT.

Section 1103 of the Water Resources Development Act of 1986 (33 U.S.C. 652) is amended—

(1) in subsection (e)—

(A) by striking “(e)” and all that follows through the end of paragraph (2) and inserting the following:

“(e) UNDERTAKINGS.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—

“(A) AUTHORITY.—The Secretary, in consultation with the Secretary of the Interior and the States of Illinois, Iowa, Minnesota, Missouri, and Wisconsin, is authorized to undertake—

“(i) a program for the planning, construction, and evaluation of measures for fish and wildlife habitat rehabilitation and enhancement; and “(ii) implementation of a program of long-term resource monitoring, computerized data inventory and analysis, and applied research.

“(B) REQUIREMENTS FOR PROJECTS.—Each project carried out under subparagraph (A)(i) shall—

“(i) to the maximum extent practicable, simulate natural river processes;

“(ii) include an outreach and education component; and

“(iii) on completion of the assessment under subparagraph (D), address identified habitat and natural resource needs.

“(C) ADVISORY COMMITTEE.—In carrying out subparagraph (A), the Secretary shall create an independent technical advisory committee to review projects, monitoring plans, and habitat and natural resource needs assessments.

“(D) HABITAT AND NATURAL RESOURCE NEEDS ASSESSMENT.—

“(i) AUTHORITY.—The Secretary is authorized to undertake a systemic, river reach, and pool scale assessment of habitat and natural resource needs to serve as a blueprint to guide habitat rehabilitation and long-term resource monitoring.

“(ii) DATA.—The habitat and natural resource needs assessment shall, to the maximum extent practicable, use data in existence at the time of the assessment.

“(iii) TMING.—The Secretary shall complete a habitat and natural resource needs assessment not later than 3 years after the date of enactment of this subparagraph.

“(2) REPORTS.—On December 31, 2005, in consultation with the Secretary of the Interior and the States of Illinois, Iowa, Minnesota, Missouri, and Wisconsin, the Secretary shall prepare and submit to Congress a report that—

“(A) contains an evaluation of the programs described in paragraph (1);

“(B) describes the accomplishments of each program;

“(C) includes results of a habitat and natural resource needs assessment; and

“(D) identifies any needed adjustments in the authorization under paragraph (1) or the authorized appropriations under paragraphs (3), (4), and (5).”;

(B) in paragraph (3)—

(i) by striking “paragraph (1)(A)” and inserting “paragraph (1)(A)(i)”;

(ii) by striking “Secretary not to exceed” and all that follows and inserting “Secretary not to exceed $22,750,000 for each of fiscal years 1999 through 2009.”;

(C) in paragraph (4)—

(i) by striking “paragraph (1)(B)” and inserting “paragraph (1)(A)(ii)”;

(ii) by striking “$7,680,000” and all that follows and inserting “$10,420,000 for each of fiscal years 1999 through 2009.”;

(D) by striking paragraphs (5) and (6) and inserting the following:

“(5) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out paragraph (1)(C) not to exceed $350,000 for each of fiscal years 1999 through 2009.

“(6) TRANSFER OF AMOUNTS.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—For each fiscal year beginning after September 30, 1992, the Secretary, in consultation with the Secretary of the Interior and the States of Illinois, Iowa, Minnesota, Missouri, and Wisconsin, may transfer appropriated amounts between the programs under clauses (i) and (ii) of paragraph (1)(A) and paragraph (1)(C).

“(B) APPORTIONMENT OF COSTS.—In carrying out paragraph (1)(D), the Secretary may apportion the costs between the programs authorized by paragraph (1)(A) in amounts that are proportionate to the amounts authorized to be appropriated to carry out those programs, respectively.”; and

(E) in paragraph (7)—

(i) in subparagraph (A)—

(I) by inserting “(i)” after “paragraph (1)(A)”;

(II) by inserting before the period at the end the following: “and, in the case of any project requiring non-Federal cost sharing, the non-Federal share of the cost of the project shall be 35 percent”; and

(ii) in subparagraph (B), by striking “paragraphs (1)(B) and (1)(C) of this subsection” and inserting “paragraph (1)(A)(ii)”;

(2) in subsection (f)(2)—

(A) in subparagraph (A), by striking “(A)”;

and
(B) by striking subparagraph (B); and
(3) by adding at the end the following:

“(k) ST. LOUIS AREA URBAN WILDLIFE HABITAT.—The Secretary shall investigate and, if appropriate, carry out restoration of urban wildlife habitat, with a special emphasis on the establishment of greenways in the St. Louis, Missouri, area and surrounding communities.”.

SEC. 315. RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM FOR COLUMBIA AND SNAKE RIVERS SALMON SURVIVAL.

Section 511 of the Water Resources Development Act of 1996 (16 U.S.C. 3301 note; Public Law 104-303) is amended by striking subsection (a) and all that follows and inserting the following:

“(a) SALMON SURVIVAL ACTIVITIES.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—In conjunction with the Secretary of Commerce and Secretary of the Interior, the Secretary shall accelerate ongoing research and development activities, and may carry out or participate in additional research and development activities, for the purpose of developing innovative methods and technologies for improving the survival of salmon, especially salmon in the Columbia/Snake River Basin.

“(2) ACCELERATED ACTIVITIES.—Accelerated research and development activities referred to in paragraph (1) may include research and development related to—

“(A) impacts from water resources projects and other impacts on salmon life cycles;

“(B) juvenile and adult salmon passage;

“(C) light and sound guidance systems;

“(D) surface-oriented collector systems;

“(E) transportation mechanisms; and “(F) dissolved gas monitoring and abatement.

“(3) ADDITIONAL ACTIVITIES.—Additional research and development activities referred to in paragraph (1) may include research and development related to—

“(A) studies of juvenile salmon survival in spawning and rearing areas;

“(B) estuary and near-ocean juvenile and adult salmon survival;

“(C) impacts on salmon life cycles from sources other than water resources projects;

“(D) cryopreservation of fish gametes and formation of a germ plasm repository for threatened and endangered populations of native fish; and “(E) other innovative technologies and actions intended to improve fish survival, including the survival of resident fish.

“(4) COORDINATION.—The Secretary shall coordinate any activities carried out under this subsection with appropriate Federal, State, and local agencies, affected Indian tribes, and the Northwest Power Planning Council.

“(5) REPORT.—Not later than 3 years after the date of enactment of this section, the Secretary shall submit to Congress a report on the research and development activities carried out under this subsection, including any recommendations of the Secretary concerning the research and development activities.

“(6) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is authorized to be appropriated $10,000,000 to carry out research and development activities under paragraph (3).

“(b) ADVANCED TURBINE DEVELOPMENT.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—In conjunction with the Secretary of Energy, the Secretary shall accelerate efforts toward developing and installing in Corps of Engineers-operated dams innovative, efficient, and environmentally safe hydropower turbines, including design of fish-friendly turbines, for use on the Columbia/Snake River hydrosystem.

“(2) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is authorized to be appropriated $35,000,000 to carry out this subsection.

“(c) MANAGEMENT OF PREDATION ON COLUMBIA/SNAKE RIVER SYSTEM NATIVE FISHES.—

“(1) NESTING AVIAN PREDATORS.—In conjunction with the Secretary of Commerce and the Secretary of the Interior, and consistent with a management plan to be developed by the United States Fish and Wildlife Service, the Secretary shall carry out methods to reduce nesting populations of avian predators on dredge spoil islands in the Columbia River under the jurisdiction of the Secretary.

“(2) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is authorized to be appropriated $1,000,000 to carry out research and development activities under this subsection.

“(d) IMPLEMENTATION.—Nothing in this section affects the authority of the Secretary to implement the results of the research and development carried out under this section or any other law.”.

SEC. 316. NINE MILE RUN HABITAT RESTORATION, PENNSYLVANIA.

If the Secretary determines that the documentation is integral to the project, the Secretary shall credit against the non-Federal share such costs, not to exceed $1,000,000, as are incurred by the non-Federal interests in preparing the environmental restoration report, planning and design-phase scientific and engineering technical services documentation, and other preconstruction documentation for the habitat restoration project, Nine Mile Run, Pennsylvania.

SEC. 317. LARKSPUR FERRY CHANNEL, CALIFORNIA.

The Secretary shall work with the Secretary of Transportation on a proposed solution to carry out the project to maintain the Larkspur Ferry Channel, Larkspur, California, authorized by section 601(d) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1986 (100 Stat. 4148).

SEC. 318. COMPREHENSIVE FLOOD IMPACT-RESPONSE MODELING SYSTEM.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary may study and implement a Comprehensive Flood Impact-Response Modeling System for the Coralville Reservoir and the Iowa River watershed, Iowa.

(b) STUDY.—The study shall include—

(1) an evaluation of the combined hydrologic, geomorphic, environmental, economic, social, and recreational impacts of operating strategies within the watershed;

(2) creation of an integrated, dynamic flood impact model; and

(3) the development of a rapid response system to be used during flood and emergency situations.

(c) REPORT TO CONGRESS.—Not later than 5 years after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall transmit a report to Congress on the results of the study and modeling system and such recommendations as the Secretary determines to be appropriate.

(d) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is authorized to be appropriated a total of $2,250,000 to carry out this section.

SEC. 319. STUDY REGARDING INNOVATIVE FINANCING FOR SMALL AND MEDIUM-SIZED PORTS.

(a) STUDY.—The Comptroller General of the United States shall conduct a study and analysis of various alternatives for innovative financing of future construction, operation, and maintenance of projects in small and medium-sized ports.

(b) REPORT.—Not later than 270 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Comptroller General shall submit to the Committee on Environment and Public Works of the Senate and Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives and the results of the study and any related legislative recommendations for consideration by Congress.

SEC. 320. CANDY LAKE PROJECT, OSAGE COUNTY, OKLAHOMA.

(a) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

(1) FAIR MARKET VALUE.—The term “fair market value” means the amount for which a willing buyer would purchase and a willing seller would sell a parcel of land, as determined by a qualified, independent land appraiser.

(2) PREVIOUS OWNER OF LAND.—The term “previous owner of land” means a person (including a corporation) that conveyed, or a descendant of a deceased individual who conveyed, land to the Corps of Engineers for use in the Candy Lake project in Osage County, Oklahoma.

(3) SECRETARY.—The term “Secretary” means the Secretary of the Army.

(b) LAND CONVEYANCES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall convey, in accordance with this section, all right, title, and interest of the United States in and to the land acquired by the United States for the Candy Lake project in Osage County, Oklahoma.

(2) PREVIOUS OWNERS OF LAND.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall give a previous owner of land first option to purchase the land described in paragraph (1).

(B) APPLICATION.—

(i) IN GENERAL.—A previous owner of land that desires to purchase the land described in paragraph (1) that was owned by the previous owner of land, or by the individual from whom the previous owner of land is descended, shall file an application to purchase the land with the Secretary not later than 180 days after the official date of notice to the previous owner of land under subsection (c).

(ii) FIRST TO FILE HAS FIRST OPTION.—If more than 1 application is filed for a parcel of land described in paragraph (1), first options to purchase the parcel of land shall be allotted in the order in which applications for the parcel of land were filed.

(C) IDENTIFICATION OF PREVIOUS OWNERS OF LAND.—As soon as practicable after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall, to the extent practicable, identify each previous owner of land.

(D) CONSIDERATION.—Consideration for land conveyed under this subsection shall be the fair market value of the land.

(3) DISPOSAL.—Any land described in paragraph (1) for which an application has not been filed under paragraph (2)(B) within the applicable time period shall be disposed of in accordance with law.

(4) EXTINGUISHMENT OF EASEMENTS.—All flowage easements acquired by the United States for use in the Candy Lake project in Osage County, Oklahoma, are extinguished.

(c) NOTICE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall notify—

(A) each person identified as a previous owner of land under subsection (b)(2)(C), not later than 90 days after identification, by United States mail; and

(B) the general public, not later than 90 days after the date of enactment of this Act, by publication in the Federal Register.

(2) CONTENTS OF NOTICE.—Notice under this subsection shall include—

(A) a copy of this section;

(B) information sufficient to separately identify each parcel of land subject to this section; and

(C) specification of the fair market value of each parcel of land subject to this section.

(3) OFFICIAL DATE OF NOTICE.—The official date of notice under this subsection shall be the later of—

(A) the date on which actual notice is mailed; or

(B) the date of publication of the notice in the Federal Register.

SEC. 321. SALCHA RIVER AND PILEDRIVER SLOUGH, FAIRBANKS, ALASKA.

The Secretary shall evaluate and, if justified under section 205 of the Flood Control Act of 1948 (33 U.S.C. 701s), carry out flood damage reduction measures along the lower Salcha River and on Piledriver Slough, from its headwaters at the mouth of the Salcha River to the Chena Lakes Flood Control Project, in the vicinity of Fairbanks, Alaska, to protect against surface water flooding.

SEC. 322. EYAK RIVER, CORDOVA, ALASKA.

SEC. 323. NORTH PADRE ISLAND STORM DAMAGE REDUCTION AND ENVIRONMENTAL RESTORATION PROJECT.

The Secretary shall carry out a project for ecosystem restoration and storm damage reduction at North Padre Island, Corpus Christi Bay, Texas, at a total estimated cost of $30,000,000, with an estimated Federal cost of $19,500,000 and an estimated non-Federal cost of $10,500,000, if the Secretary finds that the work is technically sound, environmentally acceptable, and economically justified. The Secretary shall make such a finding not later than 270 days after the date of enactment of this Act.

SEC. 324. KANOPOLIS LAKE, KANSAS.

(a) WATER SUPPLY.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary, in cooperation with the State of Kansas or another non-Federal interest, shall complete a water supply reallocation study at the project for flood control, Kanopolis Lake, Kansas, as a basis on which the Secretary shall enter into negotiations with the State of Kansas or another non-Federal interest for the terms and conditions of a reallocation of the water supply.

(2) OPTIONS.—The negotiations for storage reallocation shall include the following options for evaluation by all parties:

(A) Financial terms of storage reallocation.

(B) Protection of future Federal water releases from Kanopolis Dam, consistent with State water law, to ensure that the benefits expected from releases are provided.

(C) Potential establishment of a water assurance district consistent with other such districts established by the State of Kansas.

(D) Protection of existing project purposes at Kanopolis Dam to include flood control, recreation, and fish and wildlife.

(b) IN-KIND CREDIT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary may negotiate a credit for a portion of the financial repayment to the Federal Government for work performed by the State of Kansas, or another non-Federal interest, on land adjacent or in close proximity to the project, if the work provides a benefit to the project.

(2) WORK INCLUDED.—The work for which credit may be granted may include watershed protection and enhancement, including wetland construction and ecosystem restoration.

SEC. 325. NEW YORK CITY WATERSHED.

Section 552(d) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1996 (110 Stat. 3780) is amended by striking “for the project to be carried out with such assistance” and inserting “, or a public entity designated by the State director, to carry out the project with such assistance, subject to the project’s meeting the certification requirement of subsection (c)(1)”.

SEC. 326. CITY OF CHARLEVOIX REIMBURSEMENT, MICHIGAN.

The Secretary shall review and, if consistent with authorized project purposes, reimburse the city of Charlevoix, Michigan, for the Federal share of costs associated with construction of the new revetment connection to the Federal navigation project at Charlevoix Harbor, Michigan.

SEC. 327. HAMILTON DAM FLOOD CONTROL PROJECT, MICHIGAN.

The Secretary may construct the Hamilton Dam flood control project, Michigan, under authority of section 205 of the Flood Control Act of 1948 (33 U.S.C. 701s).

SEC. 328. HOLES CREEK FLOOD CONTROL PROJECT, OHIO.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the non-Federal share of project costs for the project for flood control, Holes Creek, Ohio, shall not exceed the sum of—

(1) the total amount projected as the non-Federal share as of September 30, 1996, in the Project Cooperation Agreement executed on that date; and

(2) 100 percent of the amount of any increases in the cost of the locally preferred plan over the cost estimated in the Project Cooperation Agreement.

(b) REIMBURSEMENT.—The Secretary shall reimburse the non-Federal interest any amount paid by the non-Federal interest in excess of the non-Federal share.

SEC. 329. OVERFLOW MANAGEMENT FACILITY, RHODE ISLAND.

SEC. 330. ANACOSTIA RIVER AQUATIC ECOSYSTEM RESTORATION, DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA AND MARYLAND.

The Secretary may use the balance of funds appropriated for the improvement of the environment as part of the Anacostia River Flood Control and Navigation Project under section 1135 of the Water Resources Development Act of 1986 (33 U.S.C. 2309a) to construct aquatic ecosystem restoration projects in the Anacostia River watershed under section 206 of the Water Resources Development Act of 1996 (33 U.S.C. 2330).

SEC. 331. EVERGLADES AND SOUTH FLORIDA ECOSYSTEM RESTORATION.

Subparagraphs (B) and (C)(i) of section 528(b)(3) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1996 (110 Stat. 3769) are amended by striking “1999” and inserting “2003”.

SEC. 332. PINE FLAT DAM, KINGS RIVER, CALIFORNIA.

Under the authority of section 1135(a) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1986 (33 U.S.C. 2309a), the Secretary shall carry out a project to construct a turbine bypass at Pine Flat Dam, Kings River, California, in accordance with the Project Modification Report and Environmental Assessment dated September 1996.

SEC. 333. LEVEES IN ELBA AND GENEVA, ALABAMA.

(a) ELBA, ALABAMA.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary may repair and rehabilitate a levee in the city of Elba, Alabama, at a total cost of $12,900,000.

(2) COST SHARING.—The non-Federal share of the cost of repair and rehabilitation under paragraph (1) shall be 35 percent.

(b) GENEVA, ALABAMA.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary may repair and rehabilitate a levee in the city of Geneva, Alabama, at a total cost of $16,600,000.

(2) COST SHARING.—The non-Federal share of the cost of repair and rehabilitation under paragraph (1) shall be 35 percent.

SEC. 334. TORONTO LAKE AND EL DORADO LAKE, KANSAS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall convey to the State of Kansas, by quitclaim deed and without consideration, all right, title, and interest of the United States in and to the 2 parcels of land described in subsection (b) on which correctional facilities operated by the Kansas Department of Corrections are situated.

(b) LAND DESCRIPTION.—The parcels of land referred to in subsection (a) are—

(1) the parcel located in Butler County, Kansas, adjacent to the El Dorado Lake Project, consisting of approximately 32.98 acres; and

(2) the parcel located in Woodson County, Kansas, adjacent to the Toronto Lake Project, consisting of approximately 51.98 acres.

(c) CONDITIONS.—

(1) USE OF LAND.—A conveyance of a parcel under subsection (a) shall be subject to the condition that all right, title, and interest in and to the parcel conveyed under subsection (a) shall revert to the United States if the parcel is used for a purpose other than that of a correctional facility.

(2) COSTS.—The Secretary may require such additional terms, conditions, reservations, and restrictions in connection with the conveyance as the Secretary determines are necessary to protect the interests of the United States, including a requirement that the State pay all reasonable administrative costs associated with the conveyance.

SEC. 335. SAN JACINTO DISPOSAL AREA, GALVESTON, TEXAS.

Section 584(b) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1996 (110 Stat. 3791) is amended by striking “$50,000” and inserting “$100,000”.

SEC. 338. UPPER MISSISSIPPI RIVER COMPREHENSIVE PLAN.

(a) DEVELOPMENT.—The Secretary shall develop a plan to address water and related land resources problems in the upper Mississippi River basin and the Illinois River basin, extending from Cairo, Illinois, to the headwaters of the Mississippi River, to determine the feasibility of systemic flood damage reduction by means of—

(1) structural and nonstructural flood control and floodplain management strategies;

(2) continued maintenance of the navigation project;

(3) management of bank caving, erosion, watershed nutrients and sediment, habitat, and recreation; and

(4) other related means.

(b) CONTENTS.—The plan shall contain recommendations for—

(1) management plans and actions to be carried out by Federal and non-Federal entities;

(2) construction of a systemic flood control project in accordance with a plan for the upper Mississippi River;

(3) Federal action, where appropriate; and

(4) follow-on studies for problem areas for which data or current technology does not allow immediate solutions.

(c) CONSULTATION AND USE OF EXISTING DATA.—In developing the plan, the Secretary shall—

(1) consult with appropriate State and Federal agencies; and

(2) make maximum use of—

(A) data and programs in existence on the date of enactment of this Act; and

(B) efforts of States and Federal agencies.

(d) REPORT.—Not later than 3 years after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall submit to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Environment and Public Works of the Senate a report that includes the plan.

SEC. 339. McNARY LOCK AND DAM, WASHINGTON.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary may convey to a port district or a port authority—

(1) without the payment of additional consideration, any remaining right, title, and interest of the United States in property acquired for the McNary Lock and Dam, Washington, project and subsequently conveyed to the port district or a port authority under section 108 of the River and Harbor Act of 1960 (33 U.S.C. 578); and

(2) at fair market value, as determined by the Secretary, all right, title, and interest of the United States in such property under the jurisdiction of the Secretary relating to the project as the Secretary considers appropriate.

(b) CONDITIONS, RESERVATIONS, AND RESTRICTIONS.—A conveyance under subsection (a) shall be subject to—

(1) such conditions, reservations, and restrictions as the Secretary determines to be necessary for the development, maintenance, or operation of the project or otherwise in the public interest; and

(2) the payment by the port district or port authority of all administrative costs associated with the conveyance.

SEC. 340. McNARY NATIONAL WILDLIFE REFUGE.

(a) TRANSFER OF ADMINISTRATIVE JURISDICTION.—Administrative jurisdiction over the McNary National Wildlife Refuge is transferred from the Secretary to the Secretary of the Interior.

(b) LAND EXCHANGE WITH THE PORT OF WALLA WALLA, WASHINGTON.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary of the Interior may exchange approximately 188 acres of land located south of Highway 12 and comprising a portion of the McNary National Wildlife Refuge for approximately 122 acres of land owned by the Port of Walla Walla, Washington, and located at the confluence of the Snake River and the Columbia River.

(2) TERMS AND CONDITIONS.—The land exchange under paragraph (1) shall be carried out in accordance with such terms and conditions as the Secretary of the Interior determines to be necessary to protect the interests of the United States, including a requirement that the Port pay—

(A) reasonable administrative costs (not to exceed $50,000) associated with the exchange; and

(B) any excess (as determined by the Secretary of the Interior) of the fair market value of the parcel conveyed by the Secretary of the Interior over the fair market value of the parcel conveyed by the Port.

(3) USE OF FUNDS.—The Secretary of the Interior may retain any funds received under paragraph (2)(B) and, without further Act of appropriation, may use the funds to acquire replacement habitat for the Mid-Columbia River National Wildlife Refuge Complex.

(c) MANAGEMENT.—The McNary National Wildlife Refuge and land conveyed by the Port of Walla Walla, Washington, under subsection (b) shall be managed in accordance with applicable laws, including section 120(h) of the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act of 1980 (42 U.S.C. 9620(h)) and the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (42 U.S.C. 4321 et seq.).

SEC. 204. SEDIMENT DECONTAMINATION TECHNOLOGY.

Section 405 of the Water Resources Development Act of 1992 (33 U.S.C. 2239 note; 106 Stat. 4863) is amended—

(1) by adding at the end of subsection (a) the following:

“(4) PRACTICAL END-USE PRODUCTS.—Technologies selected for demonstration at the pilot scale shall be intended to result in practical end-use products.

“(5) ASSISTANCE BY THE SECRETARY.—The Secretary shall assist the project to ensure expeditious completion by providing sufficient quantities of contaminated dredged material to conduct the full-scale demonstrations to stated capacity.”;

(2) in subsection (c) by striking the first sentence and inserting the following: “There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section $22,000,000 to complete technology testing, technology commercialization, and the development of full scale processing facilities within the New York/New Jersey Harbor.”; and

(3) by adding at the end the following:

“(e) SUPPORT.—In carrying out the program under this section, the Secretary is encouraged to utilize contracts, cooperative agreements, and grants with colleges and universities and other non-Federal entities.”.

SEC. 205. CONTROL OF AQUATIC PLANTS.

Section 104 of the River and Harbor Act of 1958 (33 U.S.C. 610) is amended—

(1) in subsection (a) by inserting “arundo,” after “milfoil,”;

(2) in subsection (b) by striking “$12,000,000” and inserting “$15,000,000.”; and

(3) by adding at the end the following:

“(c) SUPPORT.—In carrying out this program, the Secretary is encouraged to utilize contracts, cooperative agreements, and grants with colleges and universities and other non-Federal entities.”.

SEC. 206. USE OF CONTINUING CONTRACTS REQUIRED FOR CONSTRUCTION OF CERTAIN PROJECTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Secretary shall not implement a fully allocated funding policy with respect to a water resources project if initiation of construction has occurred but sufficient funds are not available to complete the project. The Secretary shall enter into continuing contracts for such project.

(b) INITIATION OF CONSTRUCTION CLARIFIED.—For the purposes of this section, initiation of construction for a project occurs on the date of the enactment of an Act that appropriates funds for the project from one of the following appropriation accounts:

(1) Construction, General.

(2) Operation and Maintenance, General.

(3) Flood Control, Mississippi River and Tributaries.

SEC. 207. SUPPORT OF ARMY CIVIL WORKS PROGRAM.

The requirements of section 2361 of title 10, United States Code, shall not apply to any contract, cooperative research and development agreement, cooperative agreement, or grant entered into under section 229 of the Water Resources Development Act of 1996 (110 Stat. 3703) between the Secretary and Marshall University or entered into under section 350 of this Act between the Secretary and Juniata College.

SEC. 208. WATER RESOURCES DEVELOPMENT STUDIES FOR THE PACIFIC REGION.

Section 444 of the Water Resources Development Act of 1996 (110 Stat. 3747) is amended by striking “interest of navigation” and inserting “interests of water resources development, including navigation, flood damage reduction, and environmental restoration”.

SEC. 209. EVERGLADES AND SOUTH FLORIDA ECOSYSTEM RESTORATION.

(a) PROGRAM EXTENSION.—Section 528(b)(3) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1996 (110 Stat. 3769) is amended—

(1) in subparagraph (B) by striking “1999” and inserting “2000”; and

(2) in subparagraph (C)(i) by striking “1999” and inserting “2003”.

(b) CREDIT.—Section 528(b)(3) of such Act is amended by adding at the end the following:

“(D) CREDIT OF PAST AND FUTURE ACTIVITIES.—The Secretary may provide a credit to the non-Federal interests toward the non-Federal share of a project implemented under subparagraph (A). The credit shall be for reasonable costs of work performed by the non-Federal interests if the Secretary determines that the work substantially expedited completion of the project and is compatible with and an integral part of the project, and the credit is provided pursuant to a specific project cooperation agreement.”.

(c) CALOOSAHATCHEE RIVER BASIN, FLORIDA.—Section 528(e)(4) of such Act is amended by inserting before the period at the end of the first sentence the following: “if the Secretary determines that such land acquisition is compatible with and an integral component of the Everglades and South Florida ecosystem restoration, including potential land acquisition in the Caloosahatchee River basin or other areas”.

SEC. 210. BENEFICIAL USES OF DREDGED MATERIAL.

Section 204 of the Water Resources Development Act of 1992 (106 Stat. 4826–4827) is amended—

(1) in subsection (c) by striking “cooperative agreement in accordance with the requirements of section 221 of the Flood Control Act of 1970” and inserting “binding agreement with the Secretary”; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

“(g) NON-FEDERAL INTERESTS.—Notwithstanding section 221(b) of the Flood Control Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 1962d–5b(b)), the Secretary, after coordination with the appropriate State and local government officials having jurisdiction over an area in which a project under this section will be carried out, may allow a nonprofit entity to serve as the non-Federal interest for the project.”.

SEC. 211. HARBOR COST SHARING.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Sections 101 and 214 of the Water Resources Development Act of 1986 (33 U.S.C. 2211 and 2241; Public Law 99–662) are amended by striking “45 feet” each place it appears and inserting “53 feet”.

(b) APPLICABILITY.—The amendments made by subsection (a) shall only apply to a project, or separable element thereof, on which a contract for physical construction has not been awarded before the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 212. AQUATIC ECOSYSTEM RESTORATION.

Section 206 of the Water Resources Development Act of 1996 (110 Stat. 3679–3680) is amended—

(1) by adding at the end of subsection (b) the following: “Before October 1, 2003, the Federal share may be provided in the form of grants or reimbursements of project costs.”; and

(2) by adding at the end of subsection (c) the following: “Notwithstanding section

221(b) of the Flood Control Act of 1970 (42 U.S.C. 1962d-5b(b)), the Secretary, after coordination with the appropriate State and local government officials having jurisdiction over an area in which a project under this section will be carried out, may allow a nonprofit entity to serve as the non-Federal interest for the project."

SEC. 213. WATERSHED MANAGEMENT, RESTORATION, AND DEVELOPMENT.

(a) NONPROFIT ENTITY AS NON-FEDERAL INTEREST.—Section 503(a) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1996 (110 Stat. 3756) is amended by adding at the end the following: "Notwithstanding section 221(b) of the Flood Control Act of 1970 (42 U.S.C. 1962d-5b(b)), the Secretary, after coordination with the appropriate State and local government officials having jurisdiction over an area in which a project under this section will be carried out, may allow a nonprofit entity to serve as the non-Federal interest for the project."

(b) PROJECT LOCATIONS.—Section 503(d) of such Act is amended—

(1) in paragraph (7) by inserting before the period at the end " , including Clear Lake"; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

- "(14) Fresno Slough watershed, California.
- "(15) Hayward Marsh, Southern San Francisco Bay watershed, California.
- "(16) Kaweah River watershed, California.
- "(17) Malibu Creek watershed, California.
- "(18) Illinois River watershed, Illinois.
- "(19) Catawba River watershed, North Carolina.
- "(20) Cabin Creek basin, West Virginia.
- "(21) Lower St. Johns River basin, Florida."

SEC. 214. FLOOD MITIGATION AND RIVERINE RESTORATION PILOT PROGRAM.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary may undertake a program for the purpose of conducting projects that reduce flood hazards and restore the natural functions and values of rivers throughout the United States.

(b) STUDIES AND PROJECTS.—

(1) AUTHORITY.—In carrying out the program, the Secretary may conduct studies to identify appropriate flood damage reduction, conservation, and restoration measures and may design and implement projects described in subsection (a).

(2) CONSULTATION AND COORDINATION.—The studies and projects carried out under this section shall be conducted, to the maximum extent practicable, in consultation and coordination with the Federal Emergency Management Agency and other appropriate Federal agencies, and in consultation and coordination with appropriate State, tribal, and local agencies.

(3) NONSTRUCTURAL APPROACHES.—The studies and projects shall emphasize, to the maximum extent practicable and appropriate, nonstructural approaches to preventing or reducing flood damages.

(4) USE OF STATE, TRIBAL, AND LOCAL STUDIES AND PROJECTS.—The studies and projects shall include consideration of and coordination with any State, tribal, and local flood damage reduction or riverine and wetland restoration studies and projects that conserve, restore, and manage hydrologic and hydraulic regimes and restore the natural functions and values of floodplains.

(c) COST-SHARING REQUIREMENTS.—

(1) STUDIES.—Studies conducted under this section shall be subject to cost sharing in accordance with section 105 of the Water Resources Development Act of 1986 (33 U.S.C. 2215).

(2) ENVIRONMENTAL RESTORATION AND NONSTRUCTURAL FLOOD CONTROL PROJECTS.—The non-Federal interests shall pay 35 percent of the cost of any environmental restoration or nonstructural flood control project carried out under this section. The non-Federal interests shall provide all land, easements, rights-of-way, dredged material disposal areas, and relocations necessary for such projects. The value of such land, easements, rights-of-way, dredged material disposal areas, and relocations shall be credited toward the payment required under this paragraph.

(3) STRUCTURAL FLOOD CONTROL PROJECTS.—Any structural flood control measures carried out under this section shall be subject to cost sharing in accordance with section 103(a) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1986 (33 U.S.C. 2213(a)).

(4) OPERATION AND MAINTENANCE.—The non-Federal interests shall be responsible for all costs associated with operating, maintaining, replacing, repairing, and rehabilitating all projects carried out under this section.

(d) PROJECT JUSTIFICATION.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law or requirement for economic justification established pursuant to section 209 of the Flood Control Act of 1970 (42 U.S.C. 1962-2), the Secretary may implement a project under this section if the Secretary determines that the project—

(A) will significantly reduce potential flood damages;

(B) will improve the quality of the environment; and

(C) is justified considering all costs and beneficial outputs of the project.

(2) ESTABLISHMENT OF SELECTION AND RATING CRITERIA AND POLICIES.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this section, the Secretary, in cooperation with State, tribal, and local agencies, shall develop, and transmit to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Environment and Public Works of the Senate, criteria for selecting and rating projects to be carried out under this section and shall establish policies and procedures for carrying out the studies and projects undertaken under this section. Such criteria shall include, as a priority, the extent to which the appropriate State government supports the project.

(e) PRIORITY AREAS.—In carrying out this section, the Secretary shall examine the potential for flood damage reductions at appropriate locations, including the following:

- (1) Upper Delaware River, New York.
- (2) Willamette River floodplain, Oregon.
- (3) Pima County, Arizona, at Paseo De Las Iglesias and Rillito River.
- (4) Los Angeles and San Gabriel Rivers, California.
- (5) Murrieta Creek, California.
- (6) Napa County, California, at Yountville, St. Helena, Calistoga, and American Canyon.
- (7) Santa Clara basin, California, at Upper Guadalupe River and tributaries, San Francisco Creek, and Upper Penitencia Creek.
- (8) Pine Mount Creek, New Jersey.
- (9) Chagrin River, Ohio.
- (10) Blair County, Pennsylvania, at Altoona and Frankstown Township.

(11) Lincoln Creek, Wisconsin.

(f) PROGRAM REVIEW.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The program established under this section shall be subject to an independent review to evaluate the efficacy of the program in achieving the dual goals of flood hazard mitigation and riverine restoration.

(2) REPORT.—Not later than April 15, 2003, the Secretary shall transmit to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Environment and Public Works of the Senate a report on the findings of the review conducted under this subsection with any recommendations concerning continuation of the program.

(g) COST LIMITATIONS.—

(1) MAXIMUM FEDERAL COST PER PROJECT.—No more than $30,000,000 may be expended by the United States on any single project under this section.

(2) COMMITTEE RESOLUTION PROCEDURE.—

(A) LIMITATION ON APPROPRIATIONS.—No appropriation shall be made to construct any project under this section the total Federal cost of construction of which exceeds $15,000,000 if the project has not been approved by resolutions adopted by the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Environment and Public Works of the Senate.

(B) REPORT.—For the purpose of securing consideration of approval under this paragraph, the Secretary shall transmit a report on the proposed project, including all relevant data and information on all costs.

(h) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section—

- (1) $25,000,000 for fiscal year 2000;
- (2) $25,000,000 for fiscal year 2001 if $12,500,000 or more is appropriated to carry out subsection (e) for fiscal year 2000;
- (3) $25,000,000 for fiscal year 2002 if $12,500,000 or more is appropriated to carry out subsection (e) for fiscal year 2001; and
- (4) $25,000,000 for fiscal year 2003 if $12,500,000 or more is appropriated to carry out subsection (e) for fiscal year 2002.

SEC. 215. SHORELINE MANAGEMENT PROGRAM.

(a) REVIEW.—The Secretary shall review the implementation of the Corps of Engineers' shoreline management program, with particular attention to inconsistencies in implementation among the divisions and districts of the Corps of Engineers and complaints by or potential inequities regarding property owners in the Savannah District including an accounting of the number and disposition of complaints over the last 5 years in the District.

(b) REPORT.—As expeditiously as practicable after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall transmit to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Environment and Public Works of the Senate a report describing the results of the review conducted under subsection (a).

SEC. 216. ASSISTANCE FOR REMEDIATION, RESTORATION, AND REUSE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary may provide to State and local governments assessment, planning, and design assistance for remediation, environmental restoration, or reuse of areas located within the boundaries of such State or local governments where such remediation, environmental restoration, or reuse will contribute to the conservation of water and related resources of drainage basins and watersheds within the United States.

(b) BENEFICIAL USE OF DREDGED MATERIAL.—In providing assistance under subsection (a), the Secretary shall encourage the beneficial use of dredged material, consistent with the findings of the Secretary under section 204 of the Water Resources Development Act of 1992 (33 U.S.C. 2326).

(c) NON-FEDERAL SHARE.—The non-Federal share of the cost of assistance provided under subsection (a) shall be 50 percent.

(d) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section $3,000,000 for each of fiscal years 2000 through 2004.

SEC. 217. SHORE DAMAGE MITIGATION.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 111 of the River and Harbor Act of 1968 (33 U.S.C. 426i; 100 Stat. 4199) is amended by inserting after “navigation works” the following: “and shore damages attributable to the Atlantic Intracoastal Waterway and the Gulf Intracoastal Waterway”.

(b) PALM BEACH COUNTY, FLORIDA.—The project for navigation, Palm Beach County, Florida, authorized by section 2 of the River and Harbor Act of March 2, 1945 (59 Stat. 11), is modified to authorize the Secretary to undertake beach nourishment as a dredged material disposal option under the project.

(c) GALVESTON COUNTY, TEXAS.—The Secretary may place dredged material from the Gulf Intracoastal Waterway on the beaches along Rollover Pass, Galveston County, Texas, to stabilize beach erosion.

SEC. 218. SHORE PROTECTION.

(a) NON-FEDERAL SHARE OF PERIODIC NOURISHMENT.—Section 103(d) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1986 (100 Stat. 4085-5086) is amended—

(1) by inserting “(1) CONSTRUCTION.—” before “Costs of constructing”;

(2) by inserting at the end the following:

“(2) PERIODIC NOURISHMENT.—

“(A) IN GENERAL.—Subject to subparagraph (B), the non-Federal share of costs of periodic nourishment measures for shore protection or beach erosion control that are carried out—

“(i) after January 1, 2001, shall be 40 percent;

“(ii) after January 1, 2002, shall be 45 percent; and “(iii) after January 1, 2003, shall be 50 percent;

“(B) BENEFITS TO PRIVATELY OWNED SHORES.—All costs assigned to benefits of periodic nourishment measures to privately owned shores (where use of such shores is limited to private interests) or to prevention of losses of private lands shall be borne by the non-Federal interest and all costs assigned to the protection of federally owned shores for such measures shall be borne by the United States.”; and

(C) by indenting paragraph (1) (as designated by subparagraph (A) of this paragraph) and aligning such paragraph with paragraph (2) (as added by subparagraph (B) of this paragraph).

(b) UTILIZATION OF SAND FROM OUTER CONTINENTAL SHELF.—Section 8(k)(2)(B) of the Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act (43 U.S.C. 1337(k)(2)(B)) is amended by striking “an agency of the Federal Government” and inserting “a Federal, State, or local government agency”.

(c) REPORT ON NATION’S SHORELINES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 3 years after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall report to Congress on the state of the Nation’s shorelines.

(2) CONTENTS.—The report shall include—

(A) a description of the extent of, and economic and environmental effects caused by, erosion and accretion along the Nation’s shores and the causes thereof;

(B) a description of resources committed by local, State, and Federal governments to restore and renourish shorelines;

(C) a description of the systematic movement of sand along the Nation’s shores; and

(D) recommendations regarding (i) appropriate levels of Federal and non-Federal participation in shoreline protection, and (ii) utilization of a systems approach to sand management.

(3) UTILIZATION OF SPECIFIC LOCATION DATA.—In developing the report, the Secretary shall utilize data from specific locations on the Atlantic, Pacific, Great Lakes, and Gulf of Mexico coasts.

(d) NATIONAL COASTAL DATA BANK.—

(1) ESTABLISHMENT OF DATA BANK.—Not later than 2 years after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall establish a national coastal data bank containing data on the geophysical and climatological characteristics of the Nation’s shorelines.

(2) CONTENT.—To the extent practical, the national coastal data bank shall include data regarding current and predicted shoreline positions, information on federally-authorized shore protection projects, and data on the movement of sand along the Nation’s shores, including impediments to such movement caused by natural and manmade features.

(3) ACCESS.—The national coastal data bank shall be made readily accessible to the public.

SEC. 219. FLOOD PREVENTION COORDINATION.

Section 206 of the Flood Control Act of 1960 (33 U.S.C. 709a) is amended—

(1) by redesignating subsections (b) and (c) as subsections (c) and (d), respectively; and

(2) by inserting after subsection (a) the following:

“(b) FLOOD PREVENTION COORDINATION.—The Secretary shall coordinate with the Director of the Federal Emergency Management Agency and the heads of other Federal agencies to ensure that flood control projects and plans are complementary and integrated to the extent practicable and appropriate.”.

SEC. 220. ANNUAL PASSES FOR RECREATION.

Section 208(c)(4) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1996 (16 U.S.C. 460d note; 110 Stat. 3680) is amended by striking “1999, or the date of transmittal of the report under paragraph (3)” and inserting “2003”.

SEC. 221. COOPERATIVE AGREEMENTS FOR ENVIRONMENTAL AND RECREATIONAL MEASURES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary is authorized to enter into cooperative agreements with non-Federal public bodies and non-profit entities for the purpose of facilitating collaborative efforts involving environmental protection and restoration, natural resources conservation, and recreation in connection with the development, operation, and management of water resources projects under the jurisdiction of the Department of the Army.

(b) REPORT.—Not later than 18 months after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall transmit to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Environment and Public Works of the Senate a report that includes—

(1) a listing and general description of the cooperative agreements entered into by the Secretary with non-Federal public bodies and entities under subsection (a);

(2) a determination of whether such agreements are facilitating collaborative efforts; and

(3) a recommendation on whether such agreements should be further encouraged.

SEC. 222. NONSTRUCTURAL FLOOD CONTROL PROJECTS.

(a) ANALYSIS OF BENEFITS.—Section 308 of the Water Resources Development Act of 1990 (33 U.S.C. 2318; 104 Stat. 4638) is amended—

(1) in the heading to subsection (a) by inserting “ELEMENTS EXCLUDED FROM” before “BENEFIT-COST”;

(2) by redesignating subsections (b) through (e) as subsections (c) through (f), respectively; and

(3) by inserting after subsection (a) the following:

“(b) FLOOD DAMAGE REDUCTION BENEFITS.—In calculating the benefits of a proposed project for nonstructural flood damage reduction, the Secretary shall calculate benefits of nonstructural projects using methods similar to structural projects, including similar treatment in calculating the benefits from losses avoided from both structural and nonstructural alternatives. In carrying out this subsection, the Secretary should avoid double counting of benefits.”.

(b) REEVALUATION OF FLOOD CONTROL PROJECTS.—At the request of a non-Federal interest for a flood control project, the Secretary shall conduct a reevaluation of a previously authorized project to consider nonstructural alternatives in light of the amendments made by subsection (a).

(c) COST SHARING.—Section 103(b) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1986 (33 U.S.C. 2213(b)) is amended by adding at the end the following: “At any time during construction of the project, where the Secretary determines that the costs of lands, easements, rights-of-way, dredged material disposal areas, and relocations in combination with other costs contributed by the non-Federal interests will exceed 35 percent, any additional costs for the project, but not to exceed 65 percent of the total costs of the project, shall be a Federal responsibility and shall be contributed during construction as part of the Federal share.”.

SEC. 223. LAKES PROGRAM.

Section 602(a) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1986 (110 Stat. 3758) is amended—

(1) by striking “and” at the end of paragraph (15);

(2) by striking the period at the end of paragraph (16) and inserting a semicolon; and

(3) by adding at the end the following:

“(17) Clear Lake, Lake County, California, removal of silt and aquatic growth and measures to address excessive sedimentation and high nutrient concentration;

“(18) Osgood Pond, Milford, Hillsborough County, New Hampshire, removal of silt and aquatic growth and measures to address excessive sedimentation; and “(19) Flints Pond, Hollis, Hillsborough County, New Hampshire, removal of silt and aquatic growth and measures to address excessive sedimentation.”.

SEC. 224. CONSTRUCTION OF FLOOD CONTROL PROJECTS BY NON-FEDERAL INTERESTS.

(a) CONSTRUCTION BY NON-FEDERAL INTERESTS.—Section 211(d)(1) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1996 (33 U.S.C. 701b-13(d)(1)) is amended—

(1) by striking “(b) or”;

(2) by striking “Any non-Federal” and inserting the following:

“(A) STUDIES AND DESIGN ACTIVITIES UNDER SUBSECTION (b).—A non-Federal interest may only carry out construction for which studies and design documents are prepared under subsection (b) if the Secretary approves such construction. The Secretary shall approve such construction unless the Secretary determines, in writing, that the design documents do not meet standard practices for design methodologies or that the project is not economically justified or environmentally acceptable or does not meet the requirements for obtaining the appropriate permits required under the Secretary's authority. The Secretary shall not unreasonably withhold approval. Nothing in this subparagraph may be construed to affect any regulatory authority of the Secretary.

“(B) STUDIES AND DESIGN ACTIVITIES UNDER SUBSECTION (C).—Any non-Federal”; and

(3) by aligning the remainder of subparagraph (B) (as designated by paragraph (2) of this subsection) with subparagraph (A) (as inserted by paragraph (2) of this subsection).

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 211(d)(2) of such Act is amended by inserting “(other than paragraph (1)(A))” after “this subsection”.

(c) REIMBURSEMENT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Section 211(e)(1) of such Act is amended—

(A) in the matter preceding subparagraph (1) by inserting after “constructed pursuant to this section” the following: “and provide credit for the non-Federal share of the project”;

(B) by striking “and” at the end of subparagraph (A);

(C) by striking the period at the end of subparagraph (B) and inserting “; and”; and

(D) by adding at the end the following:

“(C) if the construction work is reasonably equivalent to Federal construction work.”.

(2) SPECIAL RULES.—Section 211(e)(2)(A) of such Act is amended—

(A) by striking “subject to amounts being made available in advance in appropriations Acts” and inserting “subject to appropriations”; and

(B) by inserting after “the cost of such work” the following: “, or provide credit (depending on the request of the non-Federal interest) for the non-Federal share of such work.”.

(3) SCHEDULE AND MANNER OF REIMBURSEMENTS.—Section 211(e) of such Act (33 U.S.C. 701b-13(e)) is amended by adding at the end the following:

“(6) SCHEDULE AND MANNER OF REIMBURSEMENT.—

“(A) BUDGETING.—The Secretary shall budget and request appropriations for reimbursements under this section on a schedule that is consistent with a Federal construction schedule.

“(B) COMMENCEMENT OF REIMBURSEMENTS.—Reimbursements under this section may commence upon approval of a project by the Secretary.

“(C) CREDIT.—At the request of a non-Federal interest, the Secretary may reimburse the non-Federal interest by providing credit toward future non-Federal costs of the project.

SEC. 225. ENHANCEMENT OF FISH AND WILDLIFE RESOURCES.

Section 906(e) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1986 (33 U.S.C. 2283(e)) is amended by inserting after the second sentence the following: “Not more than 80 percent of the non-Federal share of such first costs may be satisfied through in-kind contributions, including facilities, supplies, and services that are necessary to carry out the enhancement project.”.

SEC. 226. SENSE OF CONGRESS; REQUIREMENT REGARDING NOTICE.

(a) PURCHASE OF AMERICAN-MADE EQUIPMENT AND PRODUCTS.—It is the sense of Congress that, to the greatest extent practicable, all equipment and products purchased with funds made available under this Act should be American made.

(b) NOTICE TO RECIPIENTS OF ASSISTANCE.—In providing financial assistance under this Act, the Secretary, to the greatest extent practicable, shall provide to each recipient of the assistance a notice describing the statement made in subsection (a).

SEC. 227. PERIODIC BEACH NOURISHMENT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 506(a) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1996 (110 Stat. 3757) is amended by adding at the end the following:

“(5) LEE COUNTY, FLORIDA.—Project for shoreline protection, Lee County, Captiva Island segment, Florida.”.

(b) PROJECTS.—Section 506(b)(3) of such Act (110 Stat. 3758) is amended by striking subparagraph (A) and redesignating subparagraphs (B) through (D) as subparagraphs (A) through (C), respectively.

SEC. 228. ENVIRONMENTAL DREDGING.

Section 312 of the Water Resources Development Act of 1990 (104 Stat. 4639-4640) is amended—

(1) in subsection (b)(1) by striking “50” and inserting “35”; and

(2) in subsection (d) by striking “non-Federal responsibility” and inserting “shared as a cost of construction”.

SEC. 229. WETLANDS MITIGATION.

In carrying out a water resources project that involves wetlands mitigation and that has an impact that occurs within the service area of a mitigation bank, the Secretary, to the maximum extent practicable and where appropriate, shall give preference to the use of the mitigation bank if the bank contains sufficient available credits to offset the impact and the bank is approved in accordance with the Federal Guidance for the Establishment, Use and Operation of Mitigation Banks (60 Fed. Reg. 58605 (November 28, 1995)) or other applicable Federal law (including regulations).

TITLE III—PROJECT-RELATED PROVISIONS

SEC. 301. MISSOURI RIVER LEVEE SYSTEM.

The project for flood control, Missouri River Levee System, authorized by section 10 of the Act entitled “An Act authorizing the construction of certain public works on rivers and harbors for flood control, and other purposes”, approved December 22, 1944 (58 Stat. 897), is modified to provide that project costs totaling $2,616,000 expended on Units L-15, L-246, and L-385 out of the Construction, General account of the Corps of Engineers before the date of the enactment of the Water Resources Development Act of 1986 (33 U.S.C. 2201 note) shall not be treated as part of total project costs.

SEC. 302. OUZINKIE HARBOR, ALASKA.

(a) MAXIMUM FEDERAL EXPENDITURE.—The maximum amount of Federal funds that may be expended for the project for navigation, Ouzinkie Harbor, Alaska, shall be $8,500,000.

(b) REVISION OF PROJECT COOPERATION AGREEMENT.—The Secretary shall revise the project cooperation agreement for the project referred to in subsection (a) to take into account the change in the Federal participation in such project pursuant to subsection (a).

(c) COST SHARING.—Nothing in this section shall be construed to affect any cost-sharing requirement applicable to the project referred to in subsection (a) under the Water Resources Development Act of 1986.

SEC. 303. GREERS FERRY LAKE, ARKANSAS.

The project for flood control, Greers Ferry Lake, Arkansas, authorized by the Act entitled “An Act authorizing the construction of certain public works on rivers and harbors for flood control, and other purposes”, approved June 28, 1938 (52 Stat. 1218), is modified to authorize the Secretary to construct water intake facilities for the benefit of Lonoke and White Counties, Arkansas.

SEC. 304. TEN- AND FIFTEEN-MILE BAYOUS, ARKANSAS.

The project for flood control, St. Francis River Basin, Missouri and Arkansas, authorized by section 204 of the Flood Control Act of 1950 (64 Stat. 172), is modified to expand the project boundaries to include Ten- and Fifteen-Mile Bayous near West Memphis, Arkansas. Notwithstanding section 103(f) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1986 (100 Stat. 4086), the flood control work at Ten- and Fifteen-Mile Bayous shall not be considered separable elements of the St. Francis River Basin project.

SEC. 305. LOGGY BAYOU, RED RIVER BELOW DENISON DAM, ARKANSAS, LOUISIANA, OKLAHOMA, AND TEXAS.

The project for flood control on the Red River Below Denison Dam, Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma, and Texas, authorized by section 10 of the Flood Control Act of 1946 (60 Stat. 647), is modified to direct the Secretary to conduct a study to determine the feasibility of expanding the project to include mile 0.0 to mile 7.8 of Loggy Bayou between the Red River and Flat River. If the Secretary determines as a result of the study that the project should be expanded, the Secretary may assume responsibility for operation and maintenance of the expanded project.

SEC. 306. SACRAMENTO RIVER, GLENN-COLUSA, CALIFORNIA.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The project for flood control, Sacramento River, California, authorized by section 2 of the Act entitled “An Act to provide for the control of the floods of the Mississippi River and of the Sacramento River, California, and for other purposes”, approved March 1, 1917 (39 Stat. 949), and modified by section 102 of the Energy and Water Development Appropriations Act, 1990 (103 Stat. 649), section 301(b)(3) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1996 (110 Stat. 3110), and title I of the Energy and Water Development Appropriations Act, 1999 (112 Stat. 1841), is further modified to authorize the Secretary—

(1) to carry out the portion of the project at Glenn-Colusa, California, at a total cost of $26,000,000, with an estimated Federal cost of $20,000,000 and an estimated non-Federal cost of $6,000,000; and

(2) to carry out bank stabilization work in the vicinity of the riverbed gradient facility, particularly in the vicinity of River Mile 208.

(b) CREDIT.—The Secretary shall provide the non-Federal interests for the project referred to in subsection (a) a credit of up to $4,000,000 toward the non-Federal share of the project costs for the direct and indirect costs incurred by the non-Federal sponsor in carrying out activities associated with environmental compliance for the project. Such credit may be in the form of reimbursements for costs which were incurred by the non-Federal interests prior to an agreement with the Corps of Engineers, to include the value of lands, easements, rights-of-way, relocations, or dredged material disposal areas.

SEC. 307. SAN LORENZO RIVER, CALIFORNIA.

The project for flood control and habitat restoration, San Lorenzo River, California, authorized by section 101(a)(5) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1996 (110 Stat. 3663), is modified to authorize the Secretary to expand the boundaries of the project to include bank stabilization for a 1,000-foot portion of the San Lorenzo River.

SEC. 308. TERMINUS DAM, KAWEAH RIVER, CALIFORNIA.

(a) TRANSFER OF TITLE TO ADDITIONAL LAND.—If the non-Federal interests for the project for flood control and water supply, Terminus Dam, Kaweah River, California, authorized by section 101(b)(5) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1996 (110 Stat. 3667), transfers to the Secretary without consideration title to perimeter lands acquired for the project by the non-Federal interests, the Secretary may accept the transfer of such title.

(b) LANDS, EASEMENT, AND RIGHTS-OF-WAY.—Nothing in this section shall be construed to change, modify, or otherwise affect the responsibility of the non-Federal interests to provide lands, easements, rights-of-way, relocations, and dredged material disposal areas necessary for the Terminus Dam project and to perform operation and maintenance for the project.

(c) OPERATION AND MAINTENANCE.—Upon request by the non-Federal interests, the Secretary shall carry out operation, maintenance, repair, replacement, and rehabilitation of the project if the non-Federal interests enter into a binding agreement with the Secretary to reimburse the Secretary for 100 percent of the costs of such operation, maintenance, repair, replacement, and rehabilitation.

(d) HOLD HARMLESS.—The non-Federal interests shall hold the United States harmless for ownership, operation, and maintenance of lands and facilities of the Terminus Dam project title to which is transferred to the Secretary under this section.

SEC. 309. DELAWARE RIVER MAINSTEM AND CHANNEL DEEPENING, DELAWARE, NEW JERSEY, AND PENNSYLVANIA.

The project for navigation, Delaware River Mainstem and Channel Deepening, Delaware, New Jersey and Pennsylvania, authorized by section 101(6) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1992 (106 Stat. 4802), is modified as follows:

(1) The Secretary is authorized to provide non-Federal interests credit toward cash contributions required for construction and subsequent to construction for engineering and design and construction management work that is performed by non-Federal interests and that the Secretary determines is necessary to implement the project. Any such credits extended shall reduce the Philadelphia District's private sector performance goals for engineering work by a like amount.

(2) The Secretary is authorized to provide to non-Federal interests credit toward cash contributions required during construction and subsequent to construction for the costs of construction carried out by the non-Federal interest on behalf of the Secretary and that the Secretary determines is necessary to implement the project.

(3) The Secretary is authorized to enter into an agreement with a non-Federal interest for the payment of disposal or tipping fees for dredged material from a Federal project other than for the construction or operation and maintenance of the new deepening project as described in the Limited Reevaluation Report of May 1997, where the non-Federal interest has supplied the corresponding disposal capacity.

(4) The Secretary is authorized to enter into an agreement with a non-Federal interest that will provide that the non-Federal interest may carry out or cause to have carried out, on behalf of the Secretary, a disposal area management program for dredged material disposal areas necessary to construct, operate, and maintain the project and to authorize the Secretary to reimburse the non-Federal interest for the costs of the disposal area management program activities carried out by the non-Federal interest.

SEC. 310. POTOMAC RIVER, WASHINGTON, DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

The project for flood control, Potomac River, Washington, District of Columbia, authorized by section 5 of the Flood Control Act of June 22, 1936 (49 Stat. 1574), and modified by section 301(a)(4) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1996 (110 Stat. 3707), is further modified to authorize the Secretary to construct the project at a Federal cost of $6,129,000.

SEC. 311. BREVARD COUNTY, FLORIDA.

(a) STUDY.—The Secretary, in cooperation with the non-Federal interest, shall conduct a study of any damage to the project for shoreline protection, Brevard County, Florida, authorized by section 101(b)(7) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1996 (110 Stat. 3667), to determine whether the damage is the result of a Federal navigation project.

(b) CONDITIONS.—In conducting the study, the Secretary shall utilize the services of an independent coastal expert who shall consider all relevant studies completed by the Corps of Engineers and the project's local sponsor. The study shall be completed within 120 days of the date of the enactment of this Act.

(c) MITIGATION OF DAMAGES.—After completion of the study, the Secretary shall mitigate any damage to the shoreline protection project that is the result of a Federal navigation project. The costs of the mitigation shall be allocated to the Federal navigation project as operation and maintenance.

SEC. 312. BROWARD COUNTY AND HILLSBORO INLET, FLORIDA.

The project for shoreline protection, Broward County and Hillsboro Inlet, Florida, authorized by section 301 of the River and Harbor Act of 1965 (79 Stat. 1090), is modified to authorize the Secretary to reimburse the non-Federal interest for the Federal share of the cost of preconstruction planning and design for the project upon execution of a contract to construct the project if the Secretary determines such work is compatible with and integral to the project.

SEC. 313. FORT PIERCE, FLORIDA.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The project for shore protection and harbor mitigation, Fort Pierce, Florida, authorized by section 301 of the River and Harbor Act of 1965 (79 Stat. 1092) and section 506(a)(2) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1996 (110 Stat. 3757), is modified to incorporate an additional 1 mile into the project in accordance with a final approved General Reevaluation Report, at a total cost for initial nourishment for the entire project of $9,128,000, with an estimated Federal cost of $7,073,500 and an estimated non-Federal cost of $2,054,500.

(b) PERIODIC NOURISHMENT.—Periodic nourishment is authorized for the project in accordance with section 506(a)(2) of Water Resources Development Act of 1996 (110 Stat. 3757).

(c) REVISION OF THE PROJECT COOPERATION AGREEMENT.—The Secretary shall revise the project cooperation agreement for the project referred to in subsection (a) to take into account the change in Federal participation in the project pursuant to subsection (a).

SEC. 314. NASSAU COUNTY, FLORIDA.

The project for beach erosion control, Nassau County (Amelia Island), Florida, authorized by section 3(a)(3) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1988 (102 Stat. 4013), is modified to authorize the Secretary to construct the project at a total cost of $17,000,000, with an estimated Federal cost of $13,300,000 and an estimated non-Federal cost of $3,700,000.

SEC. 315. MIAMI HARBOR CHANNEL, FLORIDA.

The project for navigation, Miami Harbor Channel, Florida, authorized by section 101(a)(9) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1990 (104 Stat. 4606), is modified to include construction of artificial reefs and related environmental mitigation required by Federal, State, and local environmental permitting agencies for the project.

SEC. 316. LAKE MICHIGAN, ILLINOIS.

The project for storm damage reduction and shoreline erosion protection, Lake Michigan, Illinois, from Wilmette, Illinois, to the Illinois-Indiana State line, authorized by section 101(a)(12) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1996 (110 Stat. 3664), is modified to authorize the Secretary to provide a credit against the non-Federal share of the cost of the project for costs incurred by the non-Federal interest—

(1) in constructing Reach 2D and Segment 8 of Reach 4 of the project; and

(2) in reconstructing Solidarity Drive in Chicago, Illinois, prior to entry into a project cooperation agreement with the Secretary.

SEC. 317. SPRINGFIELD, ILLINOIS.

Section 417 of the Water Resources Development Act of 1996 (110 Stat. 3743) is amended—

(1) by inserting “(a) IN GENERAL.—” before “The Secretary”; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

“(b) COST SHARING.—The non-Federal share of assistance provided under this section before, on, or after the date of the enactment of this subsection shall be 50 percent.”.

SEC. 318. LITTLE CALUMET RIVER, INDIANA.

The project for flood control, Little Calumet River, Indiana, authorized by section 401(a) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1986 (100 Stat. 4115), is modified to authorize the Secretary to construct the project substantially in accordance with the report of the Corps of Engineers, at a total cost of $167,000,000, with an estimated Federal cost of $122,000,000 and an estimated non-Federal cost of $45,000,000.

SEC. 319. OGDEN DUNES, INDIANA.

(a) STUDY.—The Secretary shall conduct a study of beach erosion in and around the town of Ogden Dunes, Indiana, to determine whether the damage is the result of a Federal navigation project.

(b) MITIGATION OF DAMAGES.—After completion of the study, the Secretary shall mitigate any damage to the beach and shoreline that is the result of a Federal navigation project. The cost of the mitigation shall be allocated to the Federal navigation project as operation and maintenance.

SEC. 320. SAINT JOSEPH RIVER, SOUTH BEND, INDIANA.

(a) MAXIMUM TOTAL EXPENDITURE.—The maximum total expenditure for the project for streambank erosion, recreation, and pedestrian access features, Saint Joseph River, South Bend, Indiana, shall be $7,800,000.

(b) REVISION OF PROJECT COOPERATION AGREEMENT.—The Secretary shall revise the project cooperation agreement for the project referred to in subsection (a) to take into account the change in the Federal participation in such project pursuant to subsection (a).

(c) COST SHARING.—Nothing in this section shall be construed to affect any cost-sharing requirement applicable to the project referred to in subsection (a) under title I of the Water Resources Development Act of 1986 (33 U.S.C. 2211 et seq.).

SEC. 321. WHITE RIVER, INDIANA.

The project for flood control, Indianapolis on West Fork of the White River, Indiana, authorized by section 5 of the Act entitled "An Act authorizing the construction of certain public works on rivers and harbors for flood control, and other purposes", approved June 22, 1936 (49 Stat. 1586), and modified by section 323 of the Water Resources Development Act of 1996 (110 Stat. 3716), is further modified to authorize the Secretary to undertake riverfront alterations as described in the Central Indianapolis Waterfront Concept Master Plan, dated February 1994, at a total cost of $110,975,000, with an estimated Federal cost of $52,475,000 and an estimated non-Federal cost of $58,500,000.

SEC. 322. LAKE PONTCHARTRAIN, LOUISIANA.

The project for hurricane-flood protection, Lake Pontchartrain, Louisiana, authorized by section 204 of the Flood Control Act of 1965 (79 Stat. 1077), is modified—

(1) to direct the Secretary to conduct a study to determine the feasibility of constructing a pump adjacent to each of the 4 proposed drainage structures for the Saint Charles Parish feature of the project; and

(2) to authorize the Secretary to construct such pumps upon completion of the study.

SEC. 323. LAROSE TO GOLDEN MEADOW, LOUISIANA.

The project for hurricane protection Larose to Golden Meadow, Louisiana, authorized by section 204 of the Flood Control Act of 1965 (79 Stat. 1077), is modified to direct the Secretary to convert the Golden Meadow floodgate into a navigation lock if the Secretary determines that the conversion is feasible.

SEC. 324. LOUISIANA STATE PENITENTIARY LEVEE, LOUISIANA.

The Louisiana State Penitentiary Levee project, Louisiana, authorized by section 401(a) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1986 (100 Stat. 4117), is modified to direct the Secretary to provide credit to the non-Federal interest toward the non-Federal share of the cost of the project. The credit shall be for cost of work performed by the non-Federal interest prior to the execution of a project cooperation agreement as determined by the Secretary to be compatible with and an integral part of the project.

SEC. 325. TWELVE-MILE BAYOU, CADDO PARISH, LOUISIANA.

The Secretary shall be responsible for maintenance of the levee along Twelve-Mile Bayou from its junction with the existing Red River Below Denison Dam Levee approximately 26 miles upstream to its terminus at high ground in the vicinity of Black Bayou, Caddo Parish, Louisiana, if the Secretary determines that such maintenance is economically justified and environmentally acceptable and that the levee was constructed in accordance with appropriate design and engineering standards.

SEC. 326. WEST BANK OF THE MISSISSIPPI RIVER (EAST OF HARVEY CANAL), LOUISIANA.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The project for flood control and storm damage reduction, West Bank of the Mississippi River (East of Harvey Canal), Louisiana, authorized by section 401(b) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1986 (100 Stat. 4128) and section 101(a)(17) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1996 (110 Stat. 3665), is modified—

(1) to provide that any liability under the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act of 1980 (42 U.S.C. 9601 et seq.) from the construction of the project is a Federal responsibility; and

(2) to authorize the Secretary to carry out operation and maintenance of that portion of the project included in the report of the Chief of Engineers, dated May 1, 1995, referred to as "Algiers Channel", if the non-Federal sponsor reimburses the Secretary for the amount of such operation and maintenance included in the report of the Chief of Engineers.

(b) COMBINATION OF PROJECTS.—The Secretary shall carry out work authorized as part of the Westwego to Harvey Canal project, the East of Harvey Canal project, and the Lake Cataouatche modifications as a single project, to be known as the West Bank and vicinity, New Orleans, Louisiana, hurricane protection project, with a combined total cost of $280,300,000.

SEC. 327. TOLCHESTER CHANNEL, BALTIMORE HARBOR AND CHANNELS, CHESAPEAKE BAY, KENT COUNTY, MARYLAND.

The project for navigation, Tolchester Channel, Baltimore Harbor and Channels, Chesapeake Bay, Kent County, Maryland, authorized by section 101 of the River and Harbor Act of 1958 (72 Stat. 297), is modified to authorize the Secretary to straighten the navigation channel in accordance with the District Engineer's Navigation Assessment Report and Environmental Assessment, dated April 30, 1997. This modification shall be carried out in order to improve navigation safety.

SEC. 328. SAULT SAINTE MARIE, CHIPPEWA COUNTY, MICHIGAN.

The project for navigation Sault Sainte Marie, Chippewa County, Michigan, authorized by section 1149 of the Water Resources Development Act of 1986 (100 Stat. 4254-4255) and modified by section 330 of the Water Resources Development Act of 1996 (110 Stat. 3717-3718), is further modified to provide that the amount to be paid by non-Federal interests pursuant to section 101(a) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1986 (33 U.S.C. 2211(a)) and subsection (a) of such section 330 shall not include any interest payments.

SEC. 329. JACKSON COUNTY, MISSISSIPPI.

The project for environmental infrastructure, Jackson County, Mississippi, authorized by section 219(c)(5) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1992 (106 Stat. 4835) and modified by section 504 of the Water Resources Development Act of 1996 (110 Stat. 3757), is further modified to direct the Secretary to provide a credit, not to exceed $5,000,000, against the non-Federal share of the cost of the project for the costs incurred by the Jackson County Board of Supervisors since February 8, 1994, in constructing the project if the Secretary determines that such costs are for work that the Secretary determines is compatible with and integral to the project.

SEC. 330. TUNICA LAKE, MISSISSIPPI.

The project for flood control, Mississippi River Channel Improvement Project, Tunica Lake, Mississippi, authorized by the Act entitled: "An Act for the control of floods on the Mississippi River and its tributaries, and for other purposes", approved May 15, 1928 (45 Stat. 534-538), is modified to include construction of a weir at the Tunica Cutoff, Mississippi.

SEC. 331. BOIS BRULE DRAINAGE AND LEVEE DISTRICT, MISSOURI.

(a) MAXIMUM FEDERAL EXPENDITURE.—The maximum amount of Federal funds that may be allocated for the project for flood control, Bois Brule Drainage and Levee District, Missouri, authorized pursuant to section 205 of the Flood Control Act of 1948 (33 U.S.C. 701s), shall be $15,000,000.

(b) REVISION OF THE PROJECT COOPERATION AGREEMENT.—The Secretary shall revise the project cooperation agreement for the project referred to in subsection (a) to take into account the change in Federal participation in the project pursuant to subsection (a).

(c) COST SHARING.—Nothing in this section shall be construed to affect any cost-sharing requirement applicable to the project referred to in subsection (a) under title I of the Water Resources Development Act of 1986 (33 U.S.C. 2211 et seq.).

SEC. 332. MERAMEC RIVER BASIN, VALLEY PARK LEVEE, MISSOURI.

The project for flood control, Meramec River Basin, Valley Park Levee, Missouri, authorized by section 2(h) of an Act entitled "An Act to deauthorize several projects within the jurisdiction of the Army Corps of Engineers" (95 Stat. 1682-1683) and modified by section 1128 of the Water Resources Development Act of 1986, (100 Stat. 4246), is further modified to authorize the Secretary to construct the project at a maximum Federal expenditure of $35,000,000.

SEC. 350. RAYSTOWN LAKE, PENNSYLVANIA.

(a) RECREATION PARTNERSHIP INITIATIVE.—Section 519(b) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1996 (110 Stat. 3765) is amended—

(1) by redesignating paragraph (3) as paragraph (4); and

(2) by inserting after paragraph (2) the following:

“(3) ENGINEERING AND DESIGN SERVICES.—The Secretary may perform, at full Federal expense, engineering and design services for project infrastructure expected to be associated with the development of the site at Raystown Lake, Hesston, Pennsylvania.”

(b) CONSTRUCTION ASSISTANCE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Consistent with the master plan described in section 318 of the Water Resources Development Act of 1992 (106 Stat. 4848), the Secretary may provide a grant to Juniata College for the construction of facilities and structures at Raystown Lake, Pennsylvania, to interpret and understand environmental conditions and trends. As a condition of the receipt of such financial assistance, officials at Juniata College shall coordinate with the Baltimore District of the Army Corps of Engineers.

(2) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is authorized to be appropriated $5,000,000 for fiscal years beginning after September 30, 1998, to carry out this subsection.

SEC. 351. SOUTH CENTRAL PENNSYLVANIA.

(a) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—Section 313(g)(1) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1992 (106 Stat. 4846) is amended by striking “$80,000,000” and inserting “$180,000,000”.

(b) CORPS OF ENGINEERS EXPENSES.—Section 313(g) of such Act (106 Stat. 4846) is amended by adding at the end the following:

“(4) CORPS OF ENGINEERS EXPENSES.—10 percent of the amounts appropriated to carry out this section for each of fiscal years 2000 through 2002 may be used by the Corps of Engineers district offices to administer and implement projects under this section at 100 percent Federal expense.”

SEC. 352. COOPER RIVER, CHARLESTON HARBOR, SOUTH CAROLINA.

The project for redirection, Cooper River, Charleston Harbor, South Carolina, authorized by section 101 of the River and Harbor Act of 1968 (82 Stat. 731) and modified by title I of the Energy and Water Development Appropriations Act, 1992 (105 Stat. 516), is further modified to authorize the Secretary to pay to the State of South Carolina not more than $3,750,000 if the Secretary and the State enter into a binding agreement for the State to perform all future operation of, including associated studies to assess the efficacy of, the St. Stephen, South Carolina, fish lift. The agreement must specify the terms and conditions under which payment will be made and the rights of, and remedies available to, the Federal Government to recover all or a portion of such payment in the event the State suspends or terminates operation of the fish lift or fails to operate the fish lift in a manner satisfactory to the Secretary. Maintenance of the fish lift shall remain a Federal responsibility.

SEC. 353. BOWIE COUNTY LEVEE, TEXAS.

The project for flood control, Red River Below Denison Dam, Texas and Oklahoma, authorized by section 10 of the Flood Control Act of 1946 (60 Stat. 647), is modified to direct the Secretary to implement the Bowie County Levee feature of the project in accordance with the plan defined as Alternative B in the draft document entitled "Bowie County Local Flood Protection, Red River, Texas Project Design Memorandum No. 1, Bowie County Levee", dated April 1997. In evaluating and implementing this modification, the Secretary shall allow the non-Federal interest to participate in the financing of the project in accordance with section 903(c) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1986 (100 Stat. 4184) to the extent that the Secretary's evaluation indicates that applying such section is necessary to implement the project.

SEC. 354. CLEAR CREEK, TEXAS.

(11) GREEN HARBOR, MASSACHUSETTS.—That portion of the project for navigation, Green Harbor, Massachusetts, undertaken pursuant to section 107 of the River and Harbor Act of 1960 (33 U.S.C. 577), consisting of the 6-foot deep channel beginning at a point along the west limit of the existing project, North 395990.43, East 831079.16, thence running northwesterly about 752.85 feet to a point, North 396722.80, East 830904.76, thence running northwesterly about 222.79 feet to a point along the west limit of the existing project, North 396844.34, East 830718.04, thence running southwesterly about 33.72 feet along the west limit of the existing project to a point, North 396810.80, East 830714.57, thence running southeasterly about 195.42 feet along the west limit of the existing project to a point, North 396704.19, East 830878.35, thence running about 544.66 feet along the west limit of the existing project to a point, North 396174.35, East 831004.52, thence running southeasterly about 198.49 feet along the west limit of the existing project to the point of beginning.

(12) NEW BEDFORD AND FAIRHAVEN HARBOR, MASSACHUSETTS.—The following portions of the project for navigation, New Bedford and Fairhaven Harbor, Massachusetts:

(A) A portion of the 25-foot spur channel leading to the west of Fish Island, authorized by the River and Harbor Act of 3 March 1909, beginning at a point with coordinates N232,173.77, E758,791.32, thence running south 27 degrees 36 minutes 52.8 seconds west 38.2 feet to a point N232,139.91, E758,773.61, thence running south 87 degrees 35 minutes 31.6 seconds west 196.84 feet to a point N232,131.64, E758,576.94, thence running north 47 degrees 47 minutes 48.4 seconds west 502.72 feet to a point N232,469.35, E758,204.54, thence running north 10 degrees 10 minutes 20.3 seconds west 438.88 feet to a point N232,901.33, E758,127.03, thence running north 79 degrees 49 minutes 43.1 seconds east 121.69 feet to a point N232,922.82, E758,246.81, thence running south 04 degrees 29 minutes 17.6 seconds east 52.52 feet to a point N232,870.46, E758,250.92, thence running south 23 degrees 56 minutes 11.2 seconds east 49.15 feet to a point N323,825.54, E758,270.86, thence running south 79 degrees 49 minutes 27.0 seconds west 88.19 feet to a point N232,809.96, E758,184.06, thence running south 10 degrees 10 minutes 25.7 seconds east 314.83 feet to a point N232,500.08, E758,239.67, thence running south 56 degrees 33 minutes 56.1 seconds east 583.07 feet to a point N232,178.82, E758,726.25, thence running south 85 degrees 33 minutes 16.0 seconds east to the point of origin.

(B) A portion of the 30-foot west maneuvering basin, authorized by the River and Harbor Act of 3 July 1930, beginning at a point with coordinates N232,139.91, E758,773.61, thence running north 81 degrees 49 minutes 30.1 seconds east 160.76 feet to a point N232,162.77, E758,932.74, thence running north 85 degrees 33 minutes 16.0 seconds west 141.85 feet to a point N232,173.77, E758,791.32, thence running south 27 degrees 36 minutes 52.8 seconds west to the point of origin.

(b) ANCHORAGE AREA, CLINTON HARBOR, CONNECTICUT.—That portion of the Clinton

Harbor, Connecticut, navigation project referred to in subsection (a)(2) beginning at a point beginning: N158,444.58, E660,220.95, thence running north 79 degrees 37 minutes 14 seconds east 833.31 feet to a point N158,594.72, E661,040.67, thence running south 80 degrees 51 minutes 53 seconds east 181.21 feet to a point N158,565.95, E661,219.58, thence running north 57 degrees 38 minutes 04 seconds west 126.02 feet to a point N158,633.41, E660,113.14, thence running south 79 degrees 37 minutes 14 seconds west 911.61 feet to a point N158,469.17, E660,216.44, thence running south 10 degrees 22 minutes 46 seconds east 25 feet returning to a point N158,444.58, E660,220.95 is redesignated as an anchorage area.

(c) WELLS HARBOR, MAINE.—

(1) PROJECT MODIFICATION.—The Wells Harbor, Maine, navigation project referred to in subsection (a)(9) is modified to authorize the Secretary to realign the channel and anchorage areas based on a harbor design capacity of 150 craft.

(2) REDESIGNATIONS.—

(A) 6-FOOT ANCHORAGE.—The following portions of the Wells Harbor, Maine, navigation project referred to in subsection (a)(9) shall be redesignated as part of the 6-foot anchorage:

(i) The portion of the 6-foot channel the boundaries of which begin at a point with coordinates N177,990.91, E394,820.68, thence running south 83 degrees 58 minutes 40.8 seconds west 94.65 feet to a point N177,980.98, E394,726.55, thence running south 11 degrees 46 minutes 22.4 seconds west 962.83 feet to a point N177,038.40, E394,530.10, thence running south 78 degrees 13 minutes 45.7 seconds east 90.00 feet to a point N177,020.04, E394,618.21, thence running north 11 degrees 46 minutes 47.7 seconds east 991.76 feet to the point of origin.

(ii) The portion of the 10-foot inner harbor settling basin the boundaries of which begin at a point with coordinates N177,020.04, E394,618.21, thence running north 78 degrees 13 minutes 30.5 seconds west 160.00 feet to a point N177,052.69, E394,461.58, thence running south 11 degrees 46 minutes 45.4 seconds west 299.99 feet to a point N176,759.02, E394,400.34, thence running south 78 degrees 13 minutes 17.9 seconds east 160 feet to a point N176,726.36, E394,556.97, thence running north 11 degrees 46 minutes 44.0 seconds east 300.00 feet to the point of origin.

(B) 6-FOOT CHANNEL.—The following portion of the Wells Harbor, Maine, navigation project referred to in subsection (a)(9) shall be redesignated as part of the 6-foot channel: the portion of the 6-foot anchorage the boundaries of which begin at a point with coordinates N178,102.26, E394,751.83, thence running south 51 degrees 59 minutes 42.1 seconds west 526.51 feet to a point N177,778.07, E394,336.96, thence running south 11 degrees 46 minutes 26.6 seconds west 511.83 feet to a point N177,277.01, E394,232.52, thence running south 78 degrees 13 minutes 17.9 seconds east 80.00 feet to a point N177,260.68, E394,310.84, thence running north 11 degrees 46 minutes 24.8 seconds east 482.54 feet to a point N177,733.07, E394,409.30, thence running north 51 degrees 59 minutes 41.0 seconds east 402.63 feet to a point N177,980.98, E394,726.55, thence running north 11 degrees 46 minutes 27.6 seconds east 123.89 feet to the point of origin.

(3) REALIGNMENT.—The 6-foot anchorage area described in paragraph (2)(B) shall be realigned to include the area located south of the inner harbor settling basin in existence on the date of the enactment of this Act beginning at a point with coordinates N176,726.36, E394,556.97, thence running north 78 degrees 13 minutes 17.9 seconds west 160.00 feet to a point N176,759.02, E394,400.34, thence running south 11 degrees 47 minutes 03.8 seconds west 45 feet to a point N176,714.97, E394,391.15, thence running south 78 degrees 13 minutes 17.9 seconds 160.00 feet to a point N176,682.31, E394,547.78, thence running north 11 degrees 47 minutes 03.8 seconds east 45 feet to the point of origin.

(4) RELOCATION.—The Secretary may relocate the settling basin feature of the Wells Harbor, Maine, navigation project referred to in subsection (a)(9) to the outer harbor between the jetties.

(5) ADDITIONAL ACTIONS.—In carrying out the operation and the maintenance of the Wells Harbor, Maine, navigation project referred to in subsection (a)(9), the Secretary shall undertake each of the actions of the Corps of Engineers specified in section IV(B) of the memorandum of agreement relating to the project dated January 20, 1998, including those actions specified in such section IV(B) that the parties agreed to ask the Corps of Engineers to undertake.

(d) ANCHORAGE AREA, GREEN HARBOR, MASSACHUSETTS.—The portion of the Green Harbor, Massachusetts, navigation project referred to in subsection (a)(11) consisting of a 6-foot deep channel that lies northerly of a line whose coordinates are North 394825.00, East 831660.00 and North 394779.28, East 831570.64 is redesignated as an anchorage area.

SEC. 365. AMERICAN AND SACRAMENTO RIVERS, CALIFORNIA.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The project for flood damage reduction, American and Sacramento Rivers, California, authorized by section 101(a)(1) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1996 (110 Stat. 3662-3663), is modified to direct the Secretary to include the following improvements as part of the overall project:

(1) Raising the left bank of the non-Federal levee upstream of the Mayhew Drain for a distance of 4,500 feet by an average of 2.5 feet.

(2) Raising the right bank of the American River levee from 1,500 feet upstream to 4,000 feet downstream of the Howe Avenue bridge by an average of 1 feet.

(3) Modifying the south levee of the Natomas Cross Canal for a distance of 5 miles to ensure that the south levee is consistent with the level of protection provided by the authorized levee along the east bank of the Sacramento River.

(4) Modifying the north levee of the Natomas Cross Canal for a distance of 5 miles to ensure that the height of the levee is equivalent to the height of the south levee as authorized by paragraph (3).

(5) Installing gates to the existing Mayhew Drain culvert and pumps to prevent backup of floodwater on the Folsom Boulevard side of the gates.

(6) Installation of a slurry wall in the north levee of the American River from the east levee of the Natomas east Main Drain upstream for a distance of approximately 1.2 miles.

(7) Installation of a slurry wall in the north levee of the American River from 300 feet west of Jacob Lane north for a distance of approximately 1 mile to the end of the existing levee.

(b) COST LIMITATIONS.—Section 101(a)(1)(A) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1996 (110 Stat. 3662) is amended by striking “at a total cost of” and all that follows through “$14,225,000,” and inserting the following: “at a total cost of $91,900,000, with an estimated Federal cost of $68,925,000 and an estimated non-Federal cost of $22,975,000.”

(c) COST SHARING.—For purposes of section 103 of the Water Resources Development Act of 1986 (33 U.S.C. 2213), the modifications authorized by this section shall be subject to the same cost sharing in effect for the project for flood damage reduction, American and Sacramento Rivers, California, authorized by section 101(a)(1) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1996 (110 Stat. 3662).

SEC. 366. MARTIN, KENTUCKY.

The project for flood control, Martin, Kentucky, authorized by section 202(a) of the Energy and Water Development Appropriations Act, 1981 (94 Stat. 1339) is modified to authorize the Secretary to take all necessary measures to prevent future losses that would occur from a flood equal in magnitude to a 100-year frequency event.

SEC. 367. SOUTHERN WEST VIRGINIA PILOT PROGRAM.

Section 340(g) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1992 (106 Stat. 4856) is amended to read as follows:

“(g) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out the pilot program under this section $40,000,000 for fiscal years beginning after September 30, 1992. Such sums shall remain available until expended.”

SEC. 368. BLACK WARRIOR AND TOMBIGBEE RIVERS, JACKSON, ALABAMA.

The project for navigation, Black Warrior and Tombigbee Rivers, vicinity of Jackson, Alabama, as authorized by section 106 of the Energy and Water Development Appropriations Act, 1987 (100 Stat. 3341-199), is modified to authorize the Secretary to acquire lands for mitigation of the habitat losses attributable to the project, including the navigation channel, dredged material disposal areas, and other areas directly impacted by construction of the project. Notwithstanding section 906 of the Water Resources Development Act of 1986 (33 U.S.C. 2283), the Secretary may construct the project prior to acquisition of the mitigation lands if the Secretary takes such actions as may be necessary to ensure that any required mitigation lands will be acquired not later than 2 years after initiation of construction of the new channel and such acquisition will fully mitigate any adverse environmental impacts resulting from the project.

SEC. 369. TROPICANA WASH AND FLAMINGO WASH, NEVADA.

Any Federal costs associated with the Tropicana and Flamingo Washes, Nevada, authorized by section 101(13) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1992 (106 Stat. 4803), incurred by the non-Federal interest to accelerate or modify construction of the project, in cooperation with the Corps of Engineers, shall be considered to be eligible for reimbursement by the Secretary.

SEC. 370. COMITE RIVER, LOUISIANA.

The Comite River Diversion Project for flood control, authorized as part of the project for flood control, Amite River and Tributaries, Louisiana, by section 101(11) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1992 (106 Stat. 4802-4803) and modified by section 301(b)(5) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1996 (110 Stat. 3709-3710), is further modified to authorize the Secretary to include the costs of highway relocations to be cost shared as a project construction feature if the Secretary determines that such treatment of costs is necessary to facilitate construction of the project.

SEC. 371. ST. MARY'S RIVER, MICHIGAN.

The project for navigation, St. Mary's River, Michigan, is modified to direct the Secretary to provide an additional foot of overdraft between Point Louise Turn and the Locks and Sault Saint Marie, Michigan, consistent with the channels upstream of Point Louise Turn. The modification shall be carried out as operation and maintenance to improve navigation safety.

SEC. 372. CITY OF CHARLEVOIX: REIMBURSEMENT, MICHIGAN.

The Secretary, shall review and, if consistent with authorized project Purposes, reimburse the City of Charlevoix, Michigan, for the Federal share of costs associated with construction of the new revetment to the Federal navigation project at Charlevoix Harbor, Michigan.

TITLE IV—STUDIES

SEC. 401. UPPER MISSISSIPPI AND ILLINOIS RIVERS LEVEES AND STREAMBANKS PROTECTION.

The Secretary shall conduct a study of erosion damage to levees and infrastructure on the upper Mississippi and Illinois Rivers and the impact of increased barge and pleasure craft traffic on deterioration of levees and other flood control structures on such rivers.

SEC. 402. UPPER MISSISSIPPI RIVER COMPREHENSIVE PLAN.

(a) DEVELOPMENT.—The Secretary shall develop a plan to address water and related land resources problems and opportunities in the Upper Mississippi and Illinois River Basins, extending from Cairo, Illinois, to the headwaters of the Mississippi River, in the interest of systemic flood damage reduction by means of a mixture of structural and non-structural flood control and floodplain management strategies, continued maintenance of the navigation project, management of bank caving and erosion, watershed nutrient and sediment management, habitat management, recreation needs, and other related purposes.

(b) CONTENTS.—The plan shall contain recommendations on future management plans and actions to be carried out by the responsible Federal and non-Federal entities and shall specifically address recommendations to authorize construction of a systemic flood control project in accordance with a plan for the Upper Mississippi River. The plan shall include recommendations for Federal action where appropriate and recommendations for follow-on studies for problem areas for which data or current technology does not allow immediate solutions.

(c) CONSULTATION AND USE OF EXISTING DATA.—The Secretary shall consult with appropriate State and Federal agencies and shall make maximum use of existing data and ongoing programs and efforts of States and Federal agencies in developing the plan.

(d) COST SHARING.—Development of the plan under this section shall be at Federal expense. Feasibility studies resulting from development of such plan shall be subject to cost sharing under section 105 of the Water Resources Development Act of 1986 (33 U.S.C. 2215).

(e) REPORT.—The Secretary shall submit a report that includes the comprehensive plan to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Environment and Public Works of the Senate not later than 3 years after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 403. EL DORADO, UNION COUNTY, ARKANSAS.

The Secretary shall conduct a study to determine the feasibility of improvements to regional water supplies for El Dorado, Union County, Arkansas.

SEC. 404. SWEETWATER RESERVOIR, SAN DIEGO COUNTY, CALIFORNIA.

The Secretary shall conduct a study of the potential water quality problems and pollution abatement measures in the watershed in and around Sweetwater Reservoir, San Diego County, California.

SEC. 405. WHITEWATER RIVER BASIN, CALIFORNIA.

The Secretary shall undertake and complete a feasibility study for flood damage reduction in the Whitewater River basin, California, and, based upon the results of such study, give priority consideration to including the recommended project, including the Salton Sea wetlands restoration project, in the flood mitigation and riverine restoration pilot program authorized in section 214 of this Act.

SEC. 406. LITTLE ECONLACKHATCHEE RIVER BASIN, FLORIDA.

The Secretary shall conduct a study of pollution abatement measures in the Little Econlakhatchee River basin, Florida.

SEC. 407. PORT EVERGLADES INLET, FLORIDA.

The Secretary shall conduct a study to determine the feasibility of carrying out a sand bypass project at Port Everglades Inlet, Florida.

SEC. 408. UPPER DES PLAINES RIVER AND TRIBUTARIES, ILLINOIS AND WISCONSIN.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary is directed to conduct a study of the upper Des Plaines River and tributaries, Illinois and Wisconsin, upstream of the confluence with Salt Creek at Riverside, Illinois, to determine the feasibility of improvements in the interests of flood damage reduction, environmental restoration and protection, water quality, recreation, and related purposes.

(b) SPECIAL RULE.—In conducting the study, the Secretary may not exclude from consideration and evaluation flood damage reduction measures based on restrictive policies regarding the frequency of flooding, drainage area, and amount of runoff.

(c) CONSULTATION AND USE OF EXISTING DATA.—The Secretary shall consult with appropriate State and Federal agencies and shall make maximum use of existing data and ongoing programs and efforts of States and Federal agencies in conducting the study.

SEC. 409. CAMERON PARISH WEST OF CALCASIEU RIVER, LOUISIANA.

The Secretary shall conduct a study to determine the feasibility of carrying out a project for storm damage reduction and environmental restoration, Cameron Parish west of Calcasieu River, Louisiana.

SEC. 410. GRAND ISLE AND VICINITY, LOUISIANA.

In carrying out a study of the storm damage reduction benefits to Grand Isle and vicinity, Louisiana, the Secretary shall include benefits that a storm damage reduction project for Grand Isle and vicinity, Louisiana, may have on the mainland coast of Louisiana as project benefits attributable to the Grand Isle project.

SEC. 411. LAKE PONTCHARTRAIN SEAWALL, LOUISIANA.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall complete a post-authorization change report on the project for hurricane-flood protection, Lake Pontchartrain, Louisiana, and vicinity, authorized by section 204 of the Flood Control Act of 1965 (79 Stat. 1077), to incorporate and accomplish structural modifications to the seawall fronting protection along the south shore of Lake Pontchartrain from the New Basin Canal on the west to the Inner harbor Navigation Canal on the east.

(b) REPORT.—The Secretary shall ensure expeditious completion of the post-authorization change report required by subsection (a) not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this section.

SEC. 412. WESTPORT, MASSACHUSETTS.

The Secretary shall conduct a study to determine the feasibility of carrying out a navigation project for the town of Westport, Massachusetts, and the possible beneficial uses of dredged material for shoreline protection and storm damage reduction in the area. In determining the benefits of the project, the Secretary shall include the benefits derived from using dredged material for shoreline protection and storm damage reduction.

SEC. 413. SOUTHWEST VALLEY, ALBUQUERQUE, NEW MEXICO.

The Secretary shall undertake and complete a feasibility study for flood damage reduction in the Southwest Valley, Albuquerque, New Mexico, and, based upon the results of such study, give priority consideration to including the recommended project in the flood mitigation and riverine restoration pilot program authorized in section 214 of this Act.

SEC. 414. CAYUGA CREEK, NEW YORK.

The Secretary shall conduct a study to determine the feasibility of carrying out a project for flood control for Cayuga Creek, New York.

SEC. 415. ARCOLA CREEK WATERSHED, MADISON, OHIO.

The Secretary shall conduct a study to determine the feasibility of a project to provide environmental restoration and protection for the Arcola Creek watershed, Madison, Ohio.

SEC. 416. WESTERN LAKE ERIE BASIN, OHIO, INDIANA, AND MICHIGAN.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall conduct a study to develop measures to improve flood control, navigation, water quality, recreation, and fish and wildlife habitat in a comprehensive manner in the western Lake Erie basin, Ohio, Indiana, and Michigan, including watersheds of the Maumee, Ottawa, and Portage Rivers.

(b) COOPERATION.—In carrying out the study, the Secretary shall cooperate with interested Federal, State, and local agencies and nongovernmental organizations and consider all relevant programs of such agencies.

(c) REPORT.—Not later than 1 year after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall submit to Congress a report on the results of the study, including findings and recommendations.

SEC. 417. SCHUYLKILL RIVER, NORRISTOWN, PENNSYLVANIA.

The Secretary shall conduct a study to determine the feasibility of carrying out a project for flood control for Schuylkill River, Norristown, Pennsylvania, including improvement to existing stormwater drainage systems.

SEC. 418. LAKES MARION AND MOULTRIE, SOUTH CAROLINA.

The Secretary shall conduct a study to determine the feasibility of carrying out a project for Lakes Marion and Moultrie to provide water supply, treatment, and distribution to Calhoun, Clarendon, Colleton, Dorchester, Orangeburg, and Sumter Counties, South Carolina.

SEC. 419. DAY COUNTY, SOUTH DAKOTA.

The Secretary shall conduct an investigation of flooding and other water resources problems between the James River and Big Sioux watersheds in South Dakota and an assessment of flood damage reduction needs of the area.

SEC. 420. CORPUS CHRISTI, TEXAS.

The Secretary shall include, as part of the study authorized in a resolution of the Committee on Public Works and Transportation of the House of Representatives, dated August 1, 1990, a review of two 175-foot-wide barge shelves on either side of the navigation channel at the Port of Corpus Christi, Texas.

SEC. 421. MITCHELL'S CUT CHANNEL (CANEY FORK CUT), TEXAS.

The Secretary shall conduct a study to determine the feasibility of carrying out a project for navigation, Mitchell's Cut Channel (Caney Fork Cut), Texas.

SEC. 422. MOUTH OF COLORADO RIVER, TEXAS.

The Secretary shall conduct a study to determine the feasibility of carrying out a project for navigation at the mouth of the Colorado River, Texas, to provide a minimum draft navigation channel extending from the Colorado River through Parkers Cut (also known as "Tiger Island Cut"), or an acceptable alternative, to Matagorda Bay.

SEC. 423. KANAWHA RIVER, FAYETTE COUNTY, WEST VIRGINIA.

The Secretary shall conduct a study to determine the feasibility of developing a public port along the Kanawha River in Fayette County, West Virginia, at a site known as "Longacre".

SEC. 424. WEST VIRGINIA PORTS.

The Secretary shall conduct a study to determine the feasibility of expanding public port development in West Virginia along the Ohio River and navigable portion of the Kanawha River from its mouth to river mile 91.0

SEC. 425. GREAT LAKES REGION COMPREHENSIVE STUDY.

(a) STUDY.—The Secretary shall conduct a comprehensive study of the Great Lakes region to ensure the future use, management, and protection of water and related resources of the Great Lakes basin.

(b) REPORT.—Not later than 4 years after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall submit to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Environment and Public Works of the Senate a report that includes the strategic plan for Corps of Engineers programs in the Great Lakes basin and details of proposed Corps of Engineers environmental, navigation, and flood damage reduction projects in the region.

(c) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section $1,000,000 for fiscal years 2000 through 2003.

SEC. 426. NUTRIENT LOADING RESULTING FROM DREDGED MATERIAL DISPOSAL.

(a) STUDY.—The Secretary shall conduct a study of nutrient loading that occurs as a result of discharges of dredged material into open-water sites in the Chesapeake Bay.

(b) REPORT.—Not later than 18 months after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall transmit to Congress a report on the results of the study.

SEC. 427. SANTEE DELTA FOCUS AREA, SOUTH CAROLINA.

The Secretary shall conduct a study of the Santee Delta focus area, South Carolina, to determine the feasibility of carrying out a project for enhancing wetlands values and public recreational opportunities in the area.

SEC. 428. DEL NORTE COUNTY, CALIFORNIA.

The Secretary shall undertake and complete a feasibility study for designating a permanent disposal site for dredged materials from Federal navigation projects in Del Norte County, California.

SEC. 429. ST. CLAIR RIVER AND LAKE ST. CLAIR, MICHIGAN.

(a) PLAN.—The Secretary, in coordination with State and local governments and appropriate Federal and provincial authorities of Canada, shall develop a comprehensive management plan for St. Clair River and Lake St. Clair. Such plan shall include the following elements:

(1) The causes and sources of environmental degradation.

(2) Continuous monitoring of organic, biological, metallic, and chemical contamination levels.

(3) Timely dissemination of information of such contamination levels to public authorities, other interested parties, and the public.

(b) REPORT.—Not later than 1 year after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall transmit to Congress a report that includes the plan developed under subsection (a), together with recommendations of potential restoration measures.

(c) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section $400,000.

SEC. 430. CUMBERLAND COUNTY, TENNESSEE.

The Secretary shall conduct a study to determine the feasibility of improvements to regional water supplies for Cumberland County, Tennessee.

TITLE V—MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONSSEC. 501. CORPS ASSUMPTION OF NRCS PROJECTS.

(a) LLAGAS CREEK, CALIFORNIA.—The Secretary is authorized to complete the remaining reaches of the Natural Resources Conservation Service's flood control project at Llagas Creek, California, undertaken pursuant to section 5 of the Watershed Protection and Flood Prevention Act (16 U.S.C. 1005), substantially in accordance with the Natural Resources Conservation Service watershed plan for Llagas Creek, Department of Agriculture, and in accordance with the requirements of local cooperation as specified in section 4 of such Act, at a total cost of $45,000,000, with an estimated Federal cost of $21,800,000 and an estimated non-Federal cost of $23,200,000.

(b) THORNTON RESERVOIR, COOK COUNTY, ILLINOIS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Thornton Reservoir project, an element of the project for flood control, Chicagoland Underflow Plan, Illinois, authorized by section 3(a)(5) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1988 (102 Stat. 4013), is modified to authorize the Secretary to include additional permanent flood control storage attributable to the Natural Resources Conservation Service Thornton Reservoir (Structure 84), Little Calumet River Watershed, Illinois, approved under the Watershed Protection and Flood Prevention Act (16 U.S.C. 1001 et seq.).

(2) COST SHARING.—Costs for the Thornton Reservoir project shall be shared in accordance with section 103 of the Water Resources Development Act of 1986 (33 U.S.C. 2213).

(3) TRANSITIONAL STORAGE.—The Secretary of Agriculture may cooperate with non-Federal interests to provide, on a transitional basis, flood control storage for the Natural Resources Conservation Service Thornton Reservoir (Structure 84) in the west lobe of the Thornton quarry in advance of Corps' construction.

(4) CREDITING.—The Secretary may credit against the non-Federal share of the Thornton Reservoir project all design, lands, easements, rights-of-way (as of the date of authorization), and construction costs incurred by the non-Federal interests before the signing of the project cooperation agreement.

(5) REEVALUATION REPORT.—The Secretary shall determine the credits authorized by paragraph (4) that are integral to the Thornton Reservoir project and the current total project costs based on a limited reevaluation report.

SEC. 502. CONSTRUCTION ASSISTANCE.

Section 219(e) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1992 (106 Stat. 4836-4837) is amended by striking paragraphs (5) and (6) and inserting the following:

"(5) $25,000,000 for the project described in subsection (c)(2);

"(6) $20,000,000 for the project described in subsection (c)(9);

"(7) $30,000,000 for the project described in subsection (c)(16);

"(8) $30,000,000 for the project described in subsection (c)(17);

"(9) $20,000,000 for the project described in subsection (c)(19);

"(10) $15,000,000 for the project described in subsection (c)(20);

"(11) $11,000,000 for the project described in subsection (c)(21);

"(12) $2,000,000 for the project described in subsection (c)(22);

"(13) $3,000,000 for the project described in subsection (c)(23);

"(14) $1,500,000 for the project described in subsection (c)(24);

"(15) $2,000,000 for the project described in subsection (c)(25);

"(16) $8,000,000 for the project described in subsection (c)(26);

"(17) $8,000,000 for the project described in subsection (c)(27), of which $3,000,000 shall be available only for providing assistance for the Montoursville Regional Sewer Authority, Lycoming County;

"(18) $10,000,000 for the project described in subsection (c)(28); and

"(19) $1,000,000 for the project described in subsection (c)(29)."

SEC. 503. CONTAMINATED SEDIMENT DREDGING TECHNOLOGY.

(a) CONTAMINATED SEDIMENT DREDGING PROJECT.—

(1) REVIEW.—The Secretary shall conduct a review of innovative dredging technologies designed to minimize or eliminate contamination of a water column upon removal of contaminated sediments. The Secretary shall complete such review by June 1, 2001.

(2) TESTING.—After completion of the review under paragraph (1), the Secretary shall select the technology of those reviewed that the Secretary determines will increase the effectiveness of removing contaminated sediments and significantly reduce contamination of the water column. Not later than December 31, 2001, the Secretary shall enter into an agreement with a public or private entity to test such technology in the vicinity of Peoria Lakes, Illinois.

(b) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section $2,000,000.

SEC. 504. DAM SAFETY.

(a) ASSISTANCE.—The Secretary is authorized to provide assistance to enhance dam safety at the following locations:

(1) Healdsburg Veteran's Memorial Dam, California.

(2) Felix Dam, Pennsylvania.

(3) Kehly Run Dam, Pennsylvania.

(4) Owl Creek Reservoir, Pennsylvania.

(5) Sweet Arrow Lake Dam, Pennsylvania.

(b) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is authorized to be appropriated $6,000,000 to carry out this section.

SEC. 505. GREAT LAKES REMEDIAL ACTION PLANS.

Section 401(a)(2) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1990 (110 Stat. 3763) is amended by adding at the end the following: "Nonprofit public or private entities may contribute all or a portion of the non-Federal share."

SEC. 506. SEA LAMPREY CONTROL MEASURES IN THE GREAT LAKES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—In conjunction with the Great Lakes Fishery Commission, the Secretary is authorized to undertake a program for the control of sea lampreys in and around waters of the Great Lakes. The program undertaken pursuant to this section may include projects which consist of either structural or nonstructural measures or a combination thereof.

(b) COST SHARING.—Projects carried out under this section on lands owned by the United States shall be carried out at full Federal expense. The non-Federal share of the cost of any such project undertaken on lands not in Federal ownership shall be 35 percent.

(c) NON-FEDERAL INTERESTS.—Notwithstanding section 221(b) of the Flood Control Act of 1970 (42 U.S.C. 1962d-5b(b)), the Secretary, after coordination with the appropriate State and local government officials having jurisdiction over an area in which a project under this section will be carried out, may allow a nonprofit entity to serve as the non-Federal interest for the project.

(d) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section $2,000,000 for each of fiscal years 2000 through 2005.

SEC. 507. MAINTENANCE OF NAVIGATION CHANNELS.

Section 509(a) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1996 (110 Stat. 3759) is amended by adding at the end the following:

"(12) Acadiana Navigation Channel, Louisiana.

"(13) Contraband Bayou, Louisiana, as part of the Calcasieu River and Pass Ship Channel.

"(14) Lake Wallula Navigation Channel, Washington.

"(15) Wadley Pass (also known as McGriff Pass), Suwanee River, Florida."

SEC. 508. MEASUREMENT OF LAKE MICHIGAN DIVERSIONS.

Section 1142(b) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1986 (42 U.S.C. 1962d-20 note; 100 Stat. 4253) is amended by striking "$250,000" and inserting "$1,250,000".

SEC. 509. UPPER MISSISSIPPI RIVER ENVIRONMENTAL MANAGEMENT PROGRAM.

(a) AUTHORIZED ACTIVITIES.—Section 1103(e)(1) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1986 (33 U.S.C. 652(e)(1)) is amended—

(1) by inserting "and" at the end of subparagraph (A);

(2) in subparagraph (B) by striking "long-term resource monitoring program; and" and inserting "long-term resource monitoring, computerized data inventory and analysis, and applied research program."; and

(3) by striking subparagraph (C) and inserting the following:

"In carrying out subparagraph (A), the Secretary shall establish an independent technical advisory committee to review projects, monitoring plans, and habitat and natural resource needs assessments."

(b) REPORTS.—Section 1103(e)(2) of such Act (33 U.S.C. 652(e)(2)) is amended to read as follows:

"(2) REPORTS.—Not later than December 31, 2004, and not later than December 31st of every sixth year thereafter, the Secretary, in consultation with the Secretary of the Interior and the States of Illinois, Iowa, Minnesota, Missouri, and Wisconsin, shall transmit to Congress a report that—

"(A) contains an evaluation of the programs described in paragraph (1);

"(B) describes the accomplishments of each of such programs;

"(C) provides updates of a systemic habitat needs assessment; and

"(D) identifies any needed adjustments in the authorization."

(c) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—Section 1103(e) of such Act (33 U.S.C. 652(e)) is amended—

(1) in paragraph (3) by striking "not to exceed" and all that follows before the period at the end and inserting "$22,750,000 for fiscal year 1999 and each fiscal year thereafter";

(2) in paragraph (4) by striking "not to exceed" and all that follows before the period at the end and inserting "$10,420,000 for fiscal year 1999 and each fiscal year thereafter"; and

(3) by striking paragraph (5) and inserting the following:

"(5) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out paragraph (1)(A) $350,000 for each of fiscal years 1999 through 2009."

(d) TRANSFER OF AMOUNTS.—Section 1103(e)(6) of such Act is amended to read as follows:

"(6) TRANSFER OF AMOUNTS.—For fiscal year 1999, and each fiscal year thereafter, the Secretary, in consultation with the Secretary of the Interior and the States of Illinois, Iowa, Minnesota, Missouri, and Wisconsin, may transfer not to exceed 20 percent of the amounts appropriated to carry out subparagraph (A) or (B) of paragraph (1) to the amounts appropriated to carry out the other of such subparagraphs."

(e) HABITAT NEEDS ASSESSMENT.—Section 1103(h)(2) of such Act (33 U.S.C. 652(h)(2)) is amended by adding at the end the following: "The Secretary shall complete the on-going habitat needs assessment conducted under this paragraph not later than September 30, 2000, and shall include in each report required by subsection (e)(2) the most recent habitat needs assessment conducted under this paragraph."

(f) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—Section 1103 of such Act (33 U.S.C. 652) is amended—

(1) in subsection (e)(7) by striking "paragraphs (1)(B) and (1)(C)" and inserting "paragraph (1)(B)"; and

SEC. 510. ATLANTIC COAST OF NEW YORK MONITORING.

Section 404(c) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1992 (106 Stat. 4863) is amended by striking "1993, 1994, 1995, 1996, and 1997" and inserting "1993 through 2003".

SEC. 511. WATER CONTROL MANAGEMENT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—In evaluating potential improvements for water control management activities and consolidation of water control management centers, the Secretary may consider a regionalized water control management plan but may not implement such a plan until the date on which a report is transmitted under subsection (b).

(b) REPORT.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall transmit to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure and the Committee on Appropriations of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Environment and Public Works and the Committee on Appropriations of the Senate a report containing the following:

(1) A description of the primary objectives of streamlining water control management activities.

(2) A description of the benefits provided by streamlining water control management activities through consolidation of centers for such activities.

(3) A determination of whether or not benefits to users of regional water control management centers will be retained in each district office of the Corps of Engineers that does not have a regional center.

(4) A determination of whether or not users of such regional centers will receive a higher level of benefits from streamlining water control management activities.

(5) A list of the Members of Congress who represent a district that currently includes a water control management center that is to be eliminated under a proposed regionalized plan.

SEC. 512. BENEFICIAL USE OF DREDGED MATERIAL.

The Secretary is authorized to carry out the following projects under section 204 of the Water Resources Development Act of 1992 (33 U.S.C. 2326):

(1) BODEGA BAY, CALIFORNIA.—A project to make beneficial use of dredged materials from a Federal navigation project in Bodega Bay, California.

(2) SABINE REFUGE, LOUISIANA.—A project to make beneficial use of dredged materials from Federal navigation projects in the vicinity of Sabine Refuge, Louisiana.

(3) HANCOCK, HARRISON, AND JACKSON COUNTIES, MISSISSIPPI.—A project to make beneficial use of dredged material from a Federal navigation project in Hancock, Harrison, and Jackson Counties, Mississippi.

(4) ROSE CITY MARSH, ORANGE COUNTY, TEXAS.—A project to make beneficial use of dredged material from a Federal navigation project in Rose City Marsh, Orange County, Texas.

(5) BESSIE HEIGHTS MARSH, ORANGE COUNTY, TEXAS.—A project to make beneficial use of dredged material from a Federal navigation project in Bessie Heights Marsh, Orange County, Texas.

SEC. 513. DESIGN AND CONSTRUCTION ASSISTANCE.

Section 507(2) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1996 (110 Stat. 3758) is amended to read as follows:

"(2) Expansion and improvement of Long Pine Run Dam and associated water infrastructure in accordance with the requirements of subsections (b) through (e) of section 313 of the Water Resources Development Act of 1992 (106 Stat. 4845) at a total cost of $20,000,000."

SEC. 514. LOWER MISSOURI RIVER AQUATIC RESTORATION PROJECTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 1 year after funds are made available for such purposes, the Secretary shall complete a comprehensive report—

(1) identifying a general implementation strategy and overall plan for environmental restoration and protection along the Lower Missouri River between Gavins Point Dam and the confluence of the Missouri and Mississippi Rivers; and

(2) recommending individual environmental restoration projects that can be considered by the Secretary for implementation under section 206 of the Water Resources Development Act of 1996 (33 U.S.C. 2330; 110 Stat. 3679-3680).

(b) SCOPE OF PROJECTS.—Any environmental restoration projects recommended under subsection (a) shall provide for such activities and measures as the Secretary determines to be necessary to protect and restore fish and wildlife habitat without adversely affecting private property rights or water related needs of the region surrounding the Missouri River, including flood control, navigation, and enhancement of water supply, and shall include some or all of the following components:

(1) Modification and improvement of navigation training structures to protect and restore fish and wildlife habitat.

(2) Modification and creation of side channels to protect and restore fish and wildlife habitat.

(3) Restoration and creation of fish and wildlife habitat.

(4) Physical and biological monitoring for evaluating the success of the projects.

(c) COORDINATION.—To the maximum extent practicable, the Secretary shall integrate projects carried out in accordance with this section with other Federal, tribal, and State restoration activities.

(d) COST SHARING.—The report under subsection (a) shall be undertaken at full Federal expense.

SEC. 515. AQUATIC RESOURCES RESTORATION IN THE NORTHWEST.

(a) IN GENERAL.—In cooperation with other Federal agencies, the Secretary is authorized to develop and implement projects for fish screens, fish passage devices, and other similar measures agreed to by non-Federal interests and relevant Federal agencies to mitigate adverse impacts associated with irrigation system water diversions by local governmental entities in the States of Oregon, Washington, Montana, and Idaho.

(b) PROCEDURE AND PARTICIPATION.—

(1) CONSULTATION REQUIREMENT; USE OF EXISTING DATA.—In providing assistance under subsection (a), the Secretary shall consult with other Federal, State, and local agencies and make maximum use of data and studies in existence on the date of the enactment of this Act.

(2) PARTICIPATION BY NON-FEDERAL INTERESTS.—Participation by non-Federal interests in projects under this section shall be voluntary. The Secretary shall not take any action under this section that will result in a non-Federal interest being held financially responsible for an action under a project unless the non-Federal interest has voluntarily agreed to participate in the project.

(c) COST SHARING.—Projects carried out under this section on lands owned by the United States shall be carried out at full Federal expense. The non-Federal share of the cost of any such project undertaken on lands not in Federal ownership shall be 35 percent.

(d) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section $10,000,000 for fiscal years beginning after September 30, 1999.

SEC. 516. INNOVATIVE TECHNOLOGIES FOR WATERSHED RESTORATION.

The Secretary shall use, and encourage the use of, innovative treatment technologies, including membrane technologies, for watershed and environmental restoration and protection projects involving water quality.

SEC. 517. ENVIRONMENTAL RESTORATION.

(a) ATLANTA, GEORGIA.—Section 219(c)(2) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1992 (106 Stat. 4835) is amended by inserting before the period “and watershed restoration and development in the regional Atlanta watershed, including Big Creek and Rock Creek”.

(b) PATERSON AND PASSAIC VALLEY, NEW JERSEY.—Section 219(c)(9) of such Act (106 Stat. 4836) is amended to read as follows:

“(9) PATERSON, PASSAIC COUNTY, AND PASSAIC VALLEY, NEW JERSEY.—Drainage facilities to alleviate flooding problems on Getty Avenue in the vicinity of St. Joseph’s Hospital for the City of Paterson, New Jersey, and Passaic County, New Jersey, and innovative facilities to manage and treat additional flows in the Passaic Valley, Passaic River basin, New Jersey.”.

“(29) CLINTON COUNTY, PENNSYLVANIA.—Water-related infrastructure in Clinton County, Pennsylvania.”.

SEC. 518. EXPEDITED CONSIDERATION OF CERTAIN PROJECTS.

The Secretary shall expedite completion of the reports for the following projects and proceed directly to project planning, engineering, and design:

(1) Arroyo Pasajero, San Joaquin River basin, California, project for flood control.

(2) Success Dam, Tule River, California, project for flood control and water supply.

(3) Alafia Channel, Tampa Harbor, Florida, project for navigation.

(4) Columbia Slough, Portland, Oregon, project for ecosystem restoration.

(5) Ohio River Greenway, Indiana, project for environmental restoration and recreation.

SEC. 519. DOG RIVER, ALABAMA.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary is authorized to establish, in cooperation with non-Federal interests, a pilot project to restore natural water depths in the Dog River, Alabama, between its mouth and the Interstate Route 10 crossing, and in the downstream portion of its principal tributaries.

(b) FORM OF ASSISTANCE.—Assistance provided under subsection (a) shall be in the form of design and construction of water-related resource protection and development projects affecting the Dog River, including environmental restoration and recreational navigation.

(c) NON-FEDERAL SHARE.—The non-Federal share of the cost of the project carried out with assistance under this section shall be 90 percent.

(d) LANDS, EASEMENTS, AND RIGHTS-OF-WAY.—The non-Federal sponsor provide all lands, easements, rights of way, relocations, and dredged material disposal areas including retaining dikes required for the project.

(e) OPERATION MAINTENANCE.—The non-Federal share of the cost of operation, maintenance, repair, replacement, or rehabilitation of the project carried out with assistance under this section shall be 100 percent.

(f) CREDIT TOWARD NON-FEDERAL SHARE.—The value of the lands, easements, rights of way, relocations, and dredged material disposal areas, including retaining dikes, provided by the non-Federal sponsor shall be credited toward the non-Federal share.

SEC. 520. ELBA, ALABAMA.

The Secretary is authorized to repair and rehabilitate a levee in the City of Elba, Alabama at a total cost of $12,900,000.

SEC. 521. GENEVA, ALABAMA.

The Secretary is authorized to repair and rehabilitate a levee in the City of Geneva, Alabama at a total cost of $16,600,000.

SEC. 522. NAVAJO RESERVATION, ARIZONA, NEW MEXICO, AND UTAH.

(a) IN GENERAL.—In cooperation with other appropriate Federal and local agencies, the Secretary shall undertake a survey of, and provide technical, planning, and design assistance for, watershed management, restoration, and development on the Navajo Indian Reservation, Arizona, New Mexico, and Utah.

(b) COST SHARING.—The Federal share of the cost of activities carried out under this section shall be 75 percent. Funds made available under the Indian Self-Determination and Education Assistance Act (25 U.S.C. 450 et seq.) may be used by the Navajo Nation in meeting the non-Federal share of the cost of such activities.

(c) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section $12,000,000 for fiscal years beginning after September 30, 1999.

SEC. 523. AUGUSTA AND DEVALLS BLUFF, ARKANSAS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary is authorized to perform operations, maintenance, and rehabilitation on 37 miles of levees in and around Augusta and Devalls Bluff, Arkansas.

(b) REIMBURSEMENT.—After performing the operations, maintenance, and rehabilitation under subsection (a), the Secretary may seek reimbursement from the Secretary of the Interior of an amount equal to the costs allocated to benefits to a Federal wildlife refuge of such operations, maintenance, and rehabilitation.

SEC. 524. BEAVER LAKE, ARKANSAS.

(a) WATER SUPPLY STORAGE REALLOCATION.—The Secretary shall reallocate approximately 31,000 additional acre-feet at Beaver Lake, Arkansas, to water supply storage at no additional cost to the Beaver Water District or the Carroll-Boone Water District above the amount that has already been contracted for. At no time may the bottom of the conservation pool be at an elevation that is less than 1,076 feet NGVD.

(b) CONTRACT PRICING.—The contract price for additional storage for the Carroll-Boone

Water District beyond that which is provided for in subsection (a) shall be based on the original construction cost of Beaver Lake and adjusted to the 1998 price level net of inflation between the date of initiation of construction and the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 525. BEAVER LAKE TROUT PRODUCTION FACILITY, ARKANSAS.

(a) EXPEDITED CONSTRUCTION.—The Secretary shall construct, under the authority of section 105 of the Water Resources Development Act of 1976 (90 Stat. 2921) and section 1135 of the Water Resources Development Act of 1986 (100 Stat. 4251–4252), the Beaver Lake trout hatchery as expeditiously as possible, but in no event later than September 30, 2002.

(b) MITIGATION PLAN.—Not later than 2 years after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary, in conjunction with the State of Arkansas, shall prepare a plan for the mitigation of effects of the Beaver Dam project on Beaver Lake. Such plan shall provide for construction of the Beaver Lake trout production facility and related facilities.

SEC. 526. CHINO DAIRY PRESERVE, CALIFORNIA.

(a) TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE.—The Secretary, in coordination with the heads of other Federal agencies, shall provide technical assistance to State and local agencies in the study, design, and implementation of measures for flood damage reduction and environmental restoration and protection in the Santa Ana River watershed, California, with particular emphasis on structural and non-structural measures in the vicinity of the Chino Dairy Preserve.

(b) COMPREHENSIVE STUDY.—The Secretary shall conduct a feasibility study to determine the most cost-effective plan for flood damage reduction and environmental restoration and protection in the vicinity of the Chino Dairy Preserve, Santa Ana River watershed, Orange County and San Bernardino County, California.

SEC. 527. NOVATO, CALIFORNIA.

The Secretary shall carry out a project for flood control under section 205 of the Flood Control Act of 1948 (33 U.S.C. 701s) at Rush Creek, Novato, California.

SEC. 528. ORANGE AND SAN DIEGO COUNTIES, CALIFORNIA.

The Secretary, in cooperation with local governments, may prepare special area management plans in Orange and San Diego Counties, California, to demonstrate the effectiveness of using such plans to provide information regarding aquatic resources. The Secretary may use such plans in making regulatory decisions and issue permits consistent with such plans.

SEC. 529. SALTON SEA, CALIFORNIA.

(a) TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE.—The Secretary, in coordination with other Federal agencies, shall provide technical assistance to Federal, State, and local agencies in the study, design, and implementation of measures for the environmental restoration and protection of the Salton Sea, California.

(b) STUDY.—The Secretary, in coordination with other Federal, State, and local agencies, shall conduct a study to determine the most effective plan for the Corps of Engineers to assist in the environmental restoration and protection of the Salton Sea, California.

SEC. 530. SANTA CRUZ HARBOR, CALIFORNIA.

The Secretary is authorized to modify the cooperative agreement with the Santa Cruz Port District, California, to reflect unanticipated additional dredging effort and to extend such agreement for 10 years.

SEC. 531. POINT BEACH, MILFORD, CONNECTICUT.

(a) MAXIMUM FEDERAL EXPENDITURE.—The maximum amount of Federal funds that may be expended for the project for hurricane and storm damage reduction, Point Beach, Milford, Connecticut, shall be $3,000,000.

(b) REVISION OF PROJECT COOPERATION AGREEMENT.—The Secretary shall revise the project cooperation agreement for the project referred to in subsection (a) to take into account the change in the Federal participation in such project.

(c) COST SHARING.—Nothing in this section shall be construed to affect any cost-sharing requirement applicable to the project referred to in subsection (a) under section 101 of the Water Resources Development Act of 1986 (31 U.S.C. 2211).

SEC. 532. LOWER ST. JOHNS RIVER BASIN, FLORIDA.

(a) COMPUTER MODEL.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary may apply the computer model developed under the St. Johns River basin feasibility study to assist non-Federal interests in developing strategies for improving water quality in the Lower St. Johns River basin, Florida.

(2) COST SHARING.—The non-Federal share of the cost of assistance provided under this subsection shall be 50 percent.

(b) TOPOGRAPHIC SURVEY.—The Secretary is authorized to provide 1-foot contour topographic survey maps of the Lower St. Johns River basin, Florida, to non-Federal interests for analyzing environmental data and establishing benchmarks for subbasins.

SEC. 533. SHORELINE PROTECTION AND ENVIRONMENTAL RESTORATION, LAKE ALLATOONA, GEORGIA.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary, in cooperation with the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, is authorized to carry out the following water-related environmental restoration and resource protection activities to restore Lake Allatoona and the Etowah River in Georgia:

(1) LAKE ALLATOONA/ETOWAH RIVER SHORELINE RESTORATION DESIGN.—Develop pre-construction design measures to alleviate shoreline erosion and sedimentation problems.

(2) LITTLE RIVER ENVIRONMENTAL RESTORATION.—Conduct a feasibility study to evaluate environmental problems and recommend environmental infrastructure restoration measures for the Little River within Lake Allatoona, Georgia.

(b) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is authorized to be appropriated for fiscal years beginning after September 30, 1999—

(1) $850,000 to carry out subsection (a)(1); and

(2) $250,000 to carry out subsection (a)(2).

SEC. 534. MAYO'S BAR LOCK AND DAM, COOSA RIVER, ROME, GEORGIA.

The Secretary is authorized to provide technical assistance, including planning, engineering, and design assistance, for the reconstruction of the Mayo's Bar Lock and Dam, Coosa River, Rome, Georgia. The non-Federal share of assistance under this section shall be 50 percent.

SEC. 535. COMPREHENSIVE FLOOD IMPACT RESPONSE MODELING SYSTEM, CORALVILLE RESERVOIR AND IOWA RIVER WATERSHED, IOWA.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary, in cooperation with the University of Iowa, shall conduct a study and develop a Comprehensive Flood Impact Response Modeling System for Coralville Reservoir and the Iowa River watershed, Iowa.

(b) CONTENTS OF STUDY.—The study shall include—

(1) an evaluation of the combined hydrologic, geomorphic, environmental, economic, social, and recreational impacts of operating strategies within the Iowa River watershed;

(2) development of an integrated, dynamic flood impact model; and

(3) development of a rapid response system to be used during flood and other emergency situations.

(c) REPORT TO CONGRESS.—Not later than 5 years after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall transmit to Congress a report containing the results of the study and modeling system together with such recommendations as the Secretary determines to be appropriate.

(d) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section $900,000 for each of fiscal years 2000 through 2004.

SEC. 536. ADDITIONAL CONSTRUCTION ASSISTANCE IN ILLINOIS.

SEC. 540. SNUG HARBOR, MARYLAND.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary, in coordination with the Director of the Federal Emergency Management Agency, is authorized—

(1) to provide technical assistance to the residents of Snug Harbor, in the vicinity of Berlin, Maryland, for purposes of flood damage reduction;

(2) to conduct a study of a project for non-structural measures for flood damage reduction in the vicinity of Snug Harbor, Maryland, taking into account the relationship of both the Ocean City Inlet and Assateague Island to the flooding; and

(3) after completion of the study, to carry out the project under the authority of section 205 of the Flood Control Act of 1948 (33 U.S.C. 701s).

(b) FEMA ASSISTANCE.—The Director, in coordination with the Secretary and under the authorities of the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act (42 U.S.C. 5121 note), may provide technical assistance and nonstructural measures for flood damage mitigation in the vicinity of Snug Harbor, Maryland.

(c) FEDERAL SHARE.—The Federal share of the cost of assistance under this section shall not exceed $3,000,000. The non-Federal share of such cost shall be determined in accordance with the Water Resources Development Act of 1986 or the Robert T. Stafford Disaster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act, as appropriate.

SEC. 541. WELCH POINT, ELK RIVER, CECIL COUNTY, AND CHESAPEAKE CITY, MARYLAND.

(a) SPILLAGE OF DREDGED MATERIALS.—The Secretary shall carry out a study to determine if the spillage of dredged materials that were removed as part of the project for navigation, Inland Waterway from Delaware River to Chesapeake Bay, Delaware and Maryland, authorized by the first section of the Act of August 30, 1935 (49 Stat. 1030), is a significant impediment to vessels transiting the Elk River near Welch Point, Maryland. If the Secretary determines that the spillage is an impediment to navigation, the Secretary may conduct such dredging as may be required to permit navigation on the river.

(b) DAMAGE TO WATER SUPPLY.—The Secretary shall carry out a study to determine if additional compensation is required to fully compensate the City of Chesapeake, Maryland, for damage to the city's water supply resulting from dredging of the Chesapeake and Delaware Canal project. If the Secretary determines that such additional compensation is required, the Secretary may provide the compensation to the City of Chesapeake.

SEC. 542. WEST VIEW SHORES, CECIL COUNTY, MARYLAND.

Not later than 1 year after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall carry out an investigation of the contamination of the well system in West View Shores, Cecil County, Maryland. If the Secretary determines that the disposal site from any Federal navigation project has contributed to the contamination of the wells, the Secretary may provide alternative water supplies, including replacement of wells, at full Federal expense.

SEC. 543. RESTORATION PROJECTS FOR MARYLAND, PENNSYLVANIA, AND WEST VIRGINIA.

Section 539 of the Water Resources Development Act of 1996 (110 Stat. 3776-3777) is amended—

SEC. 546. BEAVER BRANCH OF BIG TIMBER CREEK, NEW JERSEY.

Upon request of the State of New Jersey or a political subdivision thereof, the Secretary may compile and disseminate information on floods and flood damages, including identification of areas subject to inundation by floods, and provide technical assistance regarding floodplain management for Beaver Branch of Big Timber Creek, New Jersey.

SEC. 547. LAKE ONTARIO AND ST. LAWRENCE RIVER WATER LEVELS, NEW YORK.

Upon request, the Secretary shall provide technical assistance to the International Joint Commission and the St. Lawrence River Board of Control in undertaking studies on the effects of fluctuating water levels on the natural environment, recreational boating, property flooding, and erosion along the shorelines of Lake Ontario and the St. Lawrence River in New York. The Commission and Board are encouraged to conduct such studies in a comprehensive and thorough manner before implementing any change to water regulation Plan 1958-D.

SEC. 548. NEW YORK-NEW JERSEY HARBOR, NEW YORK AND NEW JERSEY.

The Secretary may enter into cooperative agreements with non-Federal interests to investigate, develop, and support measures for sediment management and reduction of contaminant sources which affect navigation in the Port of New York-New Jersey and the environmental conditions of the New York-New Jersey Harbor estuary. Such investigation shall include an analysis of the economic and environmental benefits and costs of potential sediment management and contaminant reduction measures.

SEC. 549. SEA GATE REACH, CONEY ISLAND, NEW YORK, NEW YORK.

The Secretary is authorized to construct a project for shoreline protection which includes a beachfill with revetment and T-groin for the Sea Gate Reach on Coney Island, New York, as identified in the March 1998 report prepared for the Corps of Engineers, New York District, entitled “Field Data Gathering, Project Performance Analysis and Design Alternative Solutions to Improve Sandfill Retention”, at a total cost of $9,000,000, with an estimated Federal cost of $5,850,000 and an estimated non-Federal cost of $3,150,000.

SEC. 550. WOODLAWN, NEW YORK.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall provide planning, design, and other technical assistance to non-Federal interests for identifying and mitigating sources of contamination at Woodlawn Beach in Woodlawn, New York.

(b) COST SHARING.—The non-Federal share of the cost of assistance provided under this section shall be 50 percent.

SEC. 551. FLOODPLAIN MAPPING, NEW YORK.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall provide assistance for a project to develop maps identifying 100- and 500-year flood inundation areas in the State of New York.

(b) REQUIREMENTS.—Maps developed under the project shall include hydrologic and hydraulic information and shall accurately show the flood inundation of each property by flood risk in the floodplain. The maps shall be produced in a high resolution format and shall be made available to all flood prone areas in the State of New York in an electronic format.

(c) PARTICIPATION OF FEMA.—The Secretary and the non-Federal sponsor of the project shall work with the Director of the Federal Emergency Management Agency to ensure the validity of the maps developed under the project for flood insurance purposes.

(d) FORMS OF ASSISTANCE.—In carrying out the project, the Secretary may enter into contracts or cooperative agreements with the non-Federal sponsor or provide reimbursements of project costs.

(e) FEDERAL SHARE.—The Federal share of the cost of the project shall be 75 percent.

(f) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section $12,000,000 for fiscal years beginning after September 30, 1998.

SEC. 552. WHITE OAK RIVER, NORTH CAROLINA.

The Secretary shall conduct a study to determine if water quality deterioration and sedimentation of the White Oak River, North Carolina, are the result of the Atlantic Intracoastal Waterway navigation project. If the Secretary determines that the water quality deterioration and sedimentation are the result of the project, the Secretary shall take appropriate measures to mitigate the deterioration and sedimentation.

SEC. 553. TOUSSAINT RIVER, CARROLL TOWNSHIP, OTTAWA COUNTY, OHIO.

The Secretary is authorized to provide technical assistance for the removal of military ordnance from the Toussaint River, Carroll Township, Ottawa County, Ohio.

SEC. 554. SARDIS RESERVOIR, OKLAHOMA.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall accept from the State of Oklahoma or an agent of the State an amount, as determined under subsection (b), as prepayment of 100 percent of the water supply cost obligation of the State under Contract No. DACW56-74-JC-0314 for water supply storage at Sardis Reservoir, Oklahoma.

(b) DETERMINATION OF AMOUNT.—The amount to be paid by the State of Oklahoma under subsection (a) shall be subject to adjustment in accordance with accepted discount purchase methods for Federal Government properties as determined by an independent accounting firm designated by the Director of the Office of Management and Budget. The cost of such determination shall be paid for by the State of Oklahoma or an agent of the State.

(c) EFFECT.—Nothing in this section affects any of the rights or obligations of the parties to the contract referred to in subsection (a).

SEC. 555. WAURIKA LAKE, OKLAHOMA, WATER CONVEYANCE FACILITIES.

For the project for construction of the water conveyances authorized by the first section of Public Law 88-253 (77 Stat. 841), the requirement for the Waurika Project Master Conservancy District to repay the $2,900,000 in costs (including interest) resulting from the October 1991 settlement of the claim before the United States Claims Court, and the payment of $1,190,451 of the final cost representing the difference between the 1978 estimate of cost and the actual cost determined after completion of such project in 1991, are waived.

SEC. 556. SKINNER BUTTE PARK, EUGENE, OREGON.

(a) STUDY.—The Secretary shall conduct a study of the south bank of the Willamette River, in the area of Skinner Butte Park from Ferry Street Bridge to the Valley River footbridge, to determine the feasibility of carrying out a project to stabilize the river bank, and to restore and enhance riverine habitat, using a combination of structural and bioengineering techniques.

(b) CONSTRUCTION.—If, upon completion of the study, the Secretary determines that the project is feasible, the Secretary shall participate with non-Federal interests in the construction of the project.

(c) COST SHARE.—The non-Federal share of the cost of the project shall be 35 percent.

(d) LANDS, EASEMENTS, AND RIGHTS-OF-WAY.—The non-Federal interest shall provide lands, easements, rights-of-way, relocations, and dredged material disposal areas necessary for construction of the project. The value of such items shall be credited toward the non-Federal share of the cost of the project.

(e) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section $1,000,000 for fiscal years beginning after September 30, 1999.

SEC. 557. WILLAMETTE RIVER BASIN, OREGON.

The Secretary, Director of the Federal Emergency Management Agency, Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, and heads of other appropriate Federal agencies shall, using existing authorities, assist the State of Oregon in developing and implementing a comprehensive basin-wide strategy in the Willamette River basin of Oregon for coordinated and integrated management of land and water resources to improve water quality, reduce flood hazards, ensure sustainable economic activity, and restore habitat for native fish and wildlife. The heads of such Federal agencies may provide technical assistance, staff and financial support for development of the basin-wide management strategy. The heads of Federal agencies shall seek to exercise flexibility in administrative actions and allocation of funding to reduce barriers to efficient and effective implementing of the strategy.

SEC. 558. BRADFORD AND SULLIVAN COUNTIES, PENNSYLVANIA.

The Secretary is authorized to provide assistance for water-related environmental infrastructure and resource protection and development projects in Bradford and Sullivan Counties, Pennsylvania, using the funds and authorities provided in title I of the Energy and Water Development Appropriations Act, 1999 (Public Law 105-245) under the heading "CONSTRUCTION, GENERAL" (112 Stat. 1840) for similar projects in Lackawanna, Lycoming, Susquehanna, Wyoming, Pike, and Monroe Counties, Pennsylvania.

SEC. 559. ERIE HARBOR, PENNSYLVANIA.

The Secretary may reimburse the appropriate non-Federal interest not more than $78,366 for architect and engineering costs incurred in connection with the Erie Harbor basin navigation project, Pennsylvania.

SEC. 560. POINT MARION LOCK AND DAM, PENNSYLVANIA.

The project for navigation, Point Marion Lock and Dam, Borough of Point Marion, Pennsylvania, as authorized by section 301(a) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1986 (100 Stat. 4110), is modified to direct the Secretary, in the operation and maintenance of the project, to mitigate damages to the shoreline, at a total cost of $2,000,000. The cost of the mitigation shall be allocated as an operation and maintenance cost of a Federal navigation project.

SEC. 561. SEVEN POINTS' HARBOR, PENNSYLVANIA.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary is authorized, at full Federal expense, to construct a breakwater-dock combination at the entrance to Seven Points' Harbor, Pennsylvania.

(b) OPERATION AND MAINTENANCE COSTS.—All operation and maintenance costs associated with the facility constructed under this section shall be the responsibility of the lessee of the marina complex at Seven Points' Harbor.

(c) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is authorized to be appropriated $850,000 to carry out this section.

SEC. 562. SOUTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA.

Section 566(b) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1996 (110 Stat. 3786) is amended by inserting "environmental restoration," after "water supply and related facilities,".

SEC. 563. UPPER SUSQUEHANNA-LACKAWANNA WATERSHED RESTORATION INITIATIVE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary, in cooperation with appropriate Federal, State, and local agencies and nongovernmental institutions, is authorized to prepare a watershed plan for the Upper Susquehanna-Lackawanna Watershed (USGS Cataloging Unit 02050107). The plan shall utilize geographic information system and shall include a comprehensive environmental assessment of the watershed's ecosystem, a comprehensive flood plain management plan, a flood plain protection plan, water resource and environmental restoration projects, water quality improvement, and other appropriate infrastructure and measures.

(b) NON-FEDERAL SHARE.—The non-Federal share of the cost of preparation of the plan under this section shall be 50 percent. Services and materials instead of cash may be credited toward the non-Federal share of the cost of the plan.

SEC. 564. AGUADILLA HARBOR, PUERTO RICO.

The Secretary shall conduct a study to determine if erosion and additional storm damage risks that exist in the vicinity of Aguadilla Harbor, Puerto Rico, are the result of a Federal navigation project. If the Secretary determines that such erosion and additional storm damage risks are the result of the project, the Secretary shall take appropriate measures to mitigate the erosion and storm damage.

SEC. 565. OAHE DAM TO LAKE SHARPE, SOUTH DAKOTA, STUDY.

Section 441 of the Water Resources Development Act of 1996 (110 Stat. 3747) is amended—

(1) by inserting "(a) INVESTIGATION.—" before "The Secretary"; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

"(b) REPORT.—Not later than September 30, 1999, the Secretary shall transmit to Congress a report on the results of the investigation under this section. The report shall include the examination of financing options for regular maintenance and preservation of the lake. The report shall be prepared in coordination and cooperation with the Natural Resources Conservation Service, other Federal agencies, and State and local officials."

SEC. 566. INTEGRATED WATER MANAGEMENT PLANNING, TEXAS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary, in cooperation with other Federal agencies and the State of Texas, shall provide technical, planning, and design assistance to non-Federal interests in developing integrated water management plans and projects that will serve the cities, counties, water agencies, and participating planning regions under the jurisdiction of the State of Texas.

(b) PURPOSES OF ASSISTANCE.—Assistance provided under subsection (a) shall be in support of non-Federal planning and projects for the following purposes:

(1) Plan and develop integrated, near- and long-term water management plans that address the planning region's water supply, water conservation, and water quality needs.

(2) Study and develop strategies and plans that restore, preserve, and protect the State's and planning region's natural ecosystems.

(3) Facilitate public communication and participation.

(4) Integrate such activities with other ongoing Federal and State projects and activities associated with the State of Texas water plan and the State of Texas legislation.

(c) COST SHARING.—The non-Federal share of the cost of assistance provided under subsection (a) shall be 50 percent, of which up to 1/2 of the non-Federal share may be provided as in kind services.

(d) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section, $10,000,000 for the fiscal years beginning after September 30, 1999.

SEC. 567. BOLIVAR PENINSULA, JEFFERSON, CHAMBERS, AND GALVESTON COUNTIES, TEXAS.

(a) SHORE PROTECTION PROJECT.—The Secretary is authorized to design and construct a shore protection project between the south jetty of the Sabine Pass Channel and the north jetty of the Galveston Harbor Entrance Channel in Jefferson, Chambers, and Galveston Counties, Texas, including beneficial use of dredged material from Federal navigation projects.

(b) APPLICABILITY OF BENEFIT-COST RATIO WAIVER AUTHORITY.—In evaluating and implementing the project, the Secretary shall allow the non-Federal interest to participate in the financing of the project in accordance with section 903(c) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1986 (100 Stat. 4184), notwithstanding any limitation on the purpose of projects to which such section applies, to the extent that the Secretary's evaluation indicates that applying such section is necessary to implement the project.

SEC. 568. GALVESTON BEACH, GALVESTON COUNTY, TEXAS.

The Secretary is authorized to design and construct a shore protection project between the Galveston South Jetty and San Luis Pass, Galveston County, Texas, using innovative nourishment techniques, including beneficial use of dredged material from Federal navigation projects.

SEC. 569. PACKERY CHANNEL, CORPUS CHRISTI, TEXAS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall construct a navigation and storm protection project at Packery Channel, Mustang Island, Texas, consisting of construction of a channel and a channel jetty and placement of sand along the length of the seawall.

(b) ECOLOGICAL AND RECREATIONAL BENEFITS.—In evaluating the project, the Secretary shall include the ecological and recreational benefits of reopening the Packery Channel.

(c) APPLICABILITY OF BENEFIT-COST RATIO WAIVER AUTHORITY.—In evaluating and implementing the project, the Secretary shall allow the non-Federal interest to participate in the financing of the project in accordance with section 903(c) of the Water Resources Development Act of 1986 (100 Stat. 4184), notwithstanding any limitation on the purpose of projects to which such section applies, to the extent that the Secretary's evaluation indicates that applying such section is necessary to implement the project.

SEC. 570. NORTHERN WEST VIRGINIA.

The projects described in the following reports are authorized to be carried out by the Secretary substantially in accordance with the plans, and subject to the conditions, recommended in such reports:

(1) PARKERSBURG, WEST VIRGINIA.—Report of the Corps of Engineers entitled "Parkersburg/Vienna Riverfront Park Feasibility Study", dated June 1998, at a total cost of $8,400,000, with an estimated Federal cost of $4,200,000, and an estimated non-Federal cost of $4,200,000.

(2) WEIRTON, WEST VIRGINIA.—Report of the Corps of Engineers entitled "Feasibility Master Plan for Weirton Port and Industrial Center, West Virginia Public Port Authority", dated December 1997, at a total cost of $18,000,000, with an estimated Federal cost of $9,000,000, and an estimated non-Federal cost of $9,000,000.

(3) ERICKSON/WOOD COUNTY, WEST VIRGINIA.—Report of the Corps of Engineers entitled "Feasibility Master Plan for Erickson/Wood County Port District, West Virginia Public Port Authority", dated July 7, 1997, at a total cost of $28,000,000, with an estimated Federal cost of $14,000,000, and an estimated non-Federal cost of $14,000,000.

(4) MONONGAHELA RIVER, WEST VIRGINIA.—Monongahela River, West Virginia, Comprehensive Study Reconnaissance Report, dated September 1995, consisting of the following elements:

(A) Morgantown Riverfront Park, Morgantown, West Virginia, at a total cost of $1,600,000, with an estimated Federal cost of $800,000 and an estimated non-Federal cost of $800,000.

(B) Caperton Rail to Trail, Monongahela County, West Virginia, at a total cost of $4,425,000, with an estimated Federal cost of $2,212,500 and an estimated non-Federal cost of $2,212,500.

(C) Palatine Park, Fairmont, West Virginia, at a total cost of $1,750,000, with an estimated Federal cost of $875,000 and an estimated non-Federal cost of $875,000.

SEC. 571. URBANIZED PEAK FLOOD MANAGEMENT RESEARCH.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall develop and implement a research program to evaluate opportunities to manage peak flood flows in urbanized watersheds located in the State of New Jersey.

(b) SCOPE OF RESEARCH.—The research program authorized by subsection (a) shall be accomplished through the New York District. The research shall specifically include the following:

(1) Identification of key factors in urbanized watersheds that are under development and impact peak flows in the watersheds and downstream of the watersheds.

(2) Development of peak flow management models for 4 to 6 watersheds in urbanized areas located with widely differing geology, areas, shapes, and soil types that can be used to determine optimal flow reduction factors for individual watersheds.

(3) Utilization of such management models to determine relationships between flow and reduction factors and change in imperviousness, soil types, shape of the drainage basin, and other pertinent parameters from existing to ultimate conditions in watersheds under consideration for development.

(4) Development and validation of an inexpensive accurate model to establish flood reduction factors based on runoff curve numbers, change in imperviousness, the shape of the basin, and other pertinent factors.

(c) REPORT TO CONGRESS.—The Secretary shall evaluate policy changes in the planning process for flood control projects based on the results of the research authorized by this section and transmit to Congress a report not later than 3 years after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(d) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is authorized to be appropriated to carryout this section $3,000,000 for fiscal years beginning after September 30, 1999.

(e) FLOW REDUCTION FACTORS DEFINED.—In this section, the term "flow reduction factors" means the ratio of estimated allowable peak flows of stormwater after projected development when compared to pre-existing conditions.

SEC. 572. MISSISSIPPI RIVER COMMISSION.

Section 8 of the Flood Control Act of May 15, 1928 (Public Law 391, 70th Congress), is amended by striking "$7,500" and inserting "$21,500".

SEC. 573. COASTAL AQUATIC HABITAT MANAGEMENT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary may cooperate with the Secretaries of Agriculture and the Interior, the Administrators of the Environmental Protection Agency and the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, other appropriate Federal, State, and local agencies, and affected private entities, in the development of a management strategy to address problems associated with toxic microorganisms and the resulting degradation of ecosystems in the tidal and nontidal wetlands and waters of the United States for the States along the Atlantic Ocean. As part of such management strategy, the Secretary may provide planning, design, and other technical assistance to each participating State in the development and implementation of nonregulatory measures to mitigate environmental problems and restore aquatic resources.

(b) COST SHARING.—The Federal share of the cost of measures undertaken under this section shall not exceed 65 percent.

(c) OPERATION AND MAINTENANCE.—The non-Federal share of operation and maintenance costs for projects constructed with assistance provided under this section shall be 100 percent.

(d) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATION.—There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section $7,000,000 for fiscal years beginning after September 30, 1999.

SEC. 574. WEST BATON ROUGE PARISH, LOUISIANA.

The Secretary shall expedite completion of the report for the West Baton Rouge Parish, Louisiana, project for waterfront and riverine preservation, restoration, and enhancement modifications along the Mississippi River.

SEC. 575. ABANDONED AND INACTIVE NONCOAL MINE RESTORATION.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary is authorized to provide technical, planning, and design assistance to Federal and non-Federal interests for carrying out projects to address water quality problems caused by drainage and related activities from abandoned and inactive noncoal mines.

(b) SPECIFIC MEASURES.—Assistance provided under subsection (a) may be in support of projects for the following purposes:

(1) Management of drainage from abandoned and inactive noncoal mines.

(2) Restoration and protection of streams, rivers, wetlands, other waterbodies, and riparian areas degraded by drainage from abandoned and inactive noncoal mines.

(3) Demonstration of management practices and innovative and alternative treatment technologies to minimize or eliminate adverse environmental effects associated with drainage from abandoned and inactive noncoal mines.

(c) NON-FEDERAL SHARE.—The non-Federal share of the cost of assistance under subsection (a) shall be 50 percent; except that the Federal share with respect to projects located on lands owned by the United States shall be 100 percent.

(d) EFFECT ON AUTHORITY OF THE SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR.—Nothing in this section shall be construed as affecting the authority of the Secretary of the Interior under title IV of the Surface Mining Control and Reclamation Act of 1977 (30 U.S.C. 1231 et seq.).

(e) TECHNOLOGY DATABASE FOR RECLAMATION OF ABANDONED MINES.—The Secretary is authorized to provide assistance to non-Federal and non-profit entities to develop, manage, and maintain a database of conventional and innovative, cost-effective technologies for reclamation of abandoned and inactive noncoal mine sites. Such assistance shall be provided through the rehabilitation of abandoned mine sites program, managed by the Sacramento District Office of the Corps of Engineers.

(f) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section $5,000,000.

SEC. 576. BENEFICIAL USE OF WASTE TIRE RUBBER.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary is authorized to conduct pilot projects to encourage the beneficial use of waste tire rubber, including crumb rubber, recycled from tires. Such beneficial use may include marine pilings, underwater framing, floating docks with built-in flotation, utility poles, and other uses associated with transportation and infrastructure projects receiving Federal funds. The Secretary shall, when appropriate, encourage the use of waste tire rubber, including crumb rubber, in such federally funded projects.

(b) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section $5,000,000 for fiscal years beginning after September 30, 1998.

SEC. 577. SITE DESIGNATION.

Section 102(c)(4) of the Marine Protection, Research, and Sanctuaries Act of 1972 (33 U.S.C. 1412(c)(4)) is amended by striking "January 1, 2000" and inserting "January 1, 2005".

SEC. 578. LAND CONVEYANCES.

(a) EXCHANGE OF LAND IN PIKE COUNTY, MISSOURI.—

(1) EXCHANGE OF LAND.—Subject to paragraphs (3) and (4), at such time as Holnam Inc. conveys all right, title, and interest in and to the land described in paragraph (2)(A) to the United States, the Secretary shall convey all right, title, and interest in the land described in paragraph (2)(B) to Holnam Inc.

(2) DESCRIPTION OF LANDS.—The lands referred to in paragraph (1) are the following:

(A) NON-FEDERAL LAND.—152.45 acres with existing flowage easements situated in Pike County, Missouri, described a portion of Government Tract Number FM-9 and all of Government Tract Numbers FM-11, FM-10, FM-12, FM-13, and FM-16, owned and administered by the Holnam Inc.

(B) FEDERAL LAND.—152.61 acres situated in Pike County, Missouri, known as Government Tract Numbers FM-17 and a portion of FM-18, administered by the Corps of Engineers.

(3) CONDITIONS OF EXCHANGE.—The exchange of land authorized by paragraph (1) shall be subject to the following conditions:

(A) DEEDS.—

(i) FEDERAL LAND.—The instrument of conveyance used to convey the land described in paragraph (2)(B) to Holnam Inc. shall contain such reservations, terms, and conditions as the Secretary considers necessary to allow the United States to operate and maintain the Mississippi River 9-Foot Navigation Project.

(ii) NON-FEDERAL LAND.—The conveyance of the land described in paragraph (2)(A) to the Secretary shall be by a warranty deed acceptable to the Secretary.

(B) REMOVAL OF IMPROVEMENTS.—Holnam Inc. may remove any improvements on the land described in paragraph (2)(A). The Secretary may require Holnam Inc. to remove any improvements on the land described in paragraph (2)(A). In either case, Holnam Inc. shall hold the United States harmless from liability, and the United States shall not incur cost associated with the removal or relocation of any such improvements.

(C) TIME LIMIT FOR EXCHANGE.—The land exchange authorized by paragraph (1) shall be completed not later than 2 years after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(D) LEGAL DESCRIPTION.—The Secretary shall provide the legal description of the land described in paragraph (2). The legal description shall be used in the instruments of conveyance of the land.

(E) ADMINISTRATIVE COSTS.—The Secretary shall require Holnam Inc. to pay reasonable administrative costs associated with the exchange.

(4) VALUE OF PROPERTIES.—If the appraised fair market value, as determined by the Secretary, of the land conveyed to Holnam Inc. by the Secretary under paragraph (1) exceeds the appraised fair market value, as determined by the Secretary, of the land conveyed to the United States by Holnam Inc. under paragraph (1), Holnam Inc. shall make a payment equal to the excess in cash or a cash equivalent to the United States.

(b) CANDY LAKE PROJECT, OSAGE COUNTY, OKLAHOMA.—

(1) DEFINITIONS.—In this subsection, the following definitions apply:

(A) FAIR MARKET VALUE.—The term "fair market value" means the amount for which a willing buyer would purchase and a willing seller would sell a parcel of land, as determined by a qualified, independent land appraiser.

(B) PREVIOUS OWNER OF LAND.—The term "previous owner of land" means a person (including a corporation) that conveyed, or a descendant of a deceased individual who conveyed, land to the Corps of Engineers for use in the Candy Lake project in Osage County, Oklahoma.

(2) LAND CONVEYANCES.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall convey, in accordance with this subsection, all right, title, and interest of the United States in and to the land acquired by the United States for the Candy Lake project in Osage County, Oklahoma.

(B) PREVIOUS OWNERS OF LAND.—

(i) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall give a previous owner of land the first option to purchase the land described in subparagraph (A).

(ii) APPLICATION.—

(I) IN GENERAL.—A previous owner of land that desires to purchase the land described in subparagraph (A) that was owned by the previous owner of land, or by the individual from whom the previous owner of land is descended, shall file an application to purchase the land with the Secretary not later than 180 days after the official date of notice to the previous owner of land under paragraph (3).

(II) FIRST TO FILE HAS FIRST OPTION.—If more than 1 application is filed to purchase a parcel of land described in subparagraph (A), the first option to purchase the parcel of land shall be determined in the order in which applications for the parcel of land were filed.

(iii) IDENTIFICATION OF PREVIOUS OWNERS OF LAND.—As soon as practicable after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall, to the extent practicable, identify each previous owner of land.

(iv) CONSIDERATION.—Consideration for land conveyed under this paragraph shall be the fair market value of the land.

(C) DISPOSAL.—Any land described in subparagraph (A) for which an application to purchase the land has not been filed under subparagraph (B)(ii) within the applicable time period shall be disposed of in accordance with law.

(D) EXTINGUISHMENT OF EASEMENTS.—All flowage easements acquired by the United States for use in the Candy Lake project in Osage County, Oklahoma, are extinguished.

(3) NOTICE.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall notify—

(i) each person identified as a previous owner of land under paragraph (2)(B)(iii), not later than 90 days after identification, by United States mail; and

(ii) the general public, not later than 90 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, by publication in the Federal Register.

(B) CONTENTS OF NOTICE.—Notice under this paragraph shall include—

(i) a copy of this subsection;

(ii) information sufficient to separately identify each parcel of land subject to this subsection; and

(iii) specification of the fair market value of each parcel of land subject to this subsection.

(C) OFFICIAL DATE OF NOTICE.—The official date of notice under this paragraph shall be the later of—

(i) the date on which actual notice is mailed; or

(ii) the date of publication of the notice in the Federal Register.

(c) LAKE HUGO, OKLAHOMA, AREA LAND CONVEYANCE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—As soon as practicable after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall convey at fair market value to Choctaw County Industrial Authority, Oklahoma, the property described in paragraph (2).

(2) DESCRIPTION.—The property to be conveyed under paragraph (1) is—

(A) that portion of land at Lake Hugo, Oklahoma, above elevation 445.2 located in the N $\frac{1}{2}$ of the NW $\frac{1}{4}$ of Section 24, R 18 E, T 6 S, and the S $\frac{1}{2}$ of the SW $\frac{1}{4}$ of Section 13, R 18 E, T 6 S bounded to the south by a line 50 north on the centerline of Road B of Sawyer Bluff Public Use Area and to the north by the $\frac{1}{2}$ quarter section line forming the south boundary of Wilson Point Public Use Area; and

(B) a parcel of property at Lake Hugo, Oklahoma, commencing at the NE corner of the SE $\frac{1}{4}$ SW $\frac{1}{4}$ of Section 13, R 18 E, T 6 S, 100 feet north, then east approximately $\frac{1}{2}$ mile to the county line road between Section 13, R 18 E, T 6 S, and Section 18, R 19 E, T 6 S.

(3) TERMS AND CONDITIONS.—The conveyances under this subsection shall be subject to such terms and conditions, including payment of reasonable administrative costs and compliance with applicable Federal floodplain management and flood insurance programs, as the Secretary considers necessary and appropriate to protect the interests of the United States.

(d) CONVEYANCE OF PROPERTY IN MARSHALL COUNTY, OKLAHOMA.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall convey to the State of Oklahoma all right, title, and interest of the United States to real property located in Marshall County, Oklahoma, and included in the Lake Texoma (Denison Dam), Oklahoma and Texas, project consisting of approximately 1,580 acres and leased to the State of Oklahoma for public park and recreation purposes.

(2) CONSIDERATION.—Consideration for the conveyance under paragraph (1) shall be the fair market value of the real property, as determined by the Secretary. All costs associated with the conveyance under paragraph (1) shall be paid by the State of Oklahoma.

(3) DESCRIPTION.—The exact acreage and legal description of the real property to be conveyed under paragraph (1) shall be determined by a survey satisfactory to the Secretary. The cost of the survey shall be paid by the State of Oklahoma.

(4) ENVIRONMENTAL COMPLIANCE.—Before making the conveyance under paragraph (1), the Secretary shall—

(A) conduct an environmental baseline survey to determine if there are levels of contamination for which the United States would be responsible under the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act of 1980 (42 U.S.C. 9601 et seq.); and

(B) ensure that the conveyance complies with the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (42 U.S.C. 4321 et seq.).

(5) OTHER TERMS AND CONDITIONS.—The conveyance under paragraph (1) shall be subject to such other terms and conditions as the Secretary considers necessary and appropriate to protect the interests of the United States, including reservation by the United States of a flowage easement over all portions of the real property to be conveyed that are at or below elevation 645.0 NGVD.

(e) SUMMERFIELD CEMETERY ASSOCIATION, OKLAHOMA, LAND CONVEYANCE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—As soon as practicable after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall transfer to the Summerfield Cemetery Association, Oklahoma, all right, title, and interest of the United States in and to the land described in paragraph (3) for use as a cemetery.

(2) REVERSION.—If the land to be transferred under this subsection ever cease to be used as a not-for-profit cemetery or for other public purposes the land shall revert to the United States.

(3) DESCRIPTION.—The land to be conveyed under this subsection is the approximately 10 acres of land located in Leflore County, Oklahoma, and described as follows:

INDIAN BASIN MERIDIAN

Section 23, Township 5 North, Range 23 East
SW SE SW NW
NW NE NW SW
N $\frac{1}{2}$ SW SW NW.

(4) CONSIDERATION.—The conveyance under this subsection shall be without consideration. All costs associated with the conveyance shall be paid by the Summerfield Cemetery Association, Oklahoma.

(5) OTHER TERMS AND CONDITIONS.—The conveyance under this subsection shall be subject to such other terms and conditions as the Secretary considers necessary and appropriate to protect the interests of the United States.

(f) DEXTER, OREGON.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall convey to the Dexter Sanitary District all right, title, and interest of the United States in and to a parcel of land consisting of approximately 5 acres located at Dexter Lake, Oregon, under lease to the Dexter Sanitary District.

(2) CONSIDERATION.—Land to be conveyed under this section shall be conveyed without consideration. If the land is no longer held in public ownership or no longer used for wastewater treatment purposes, title to the land shall revert to the Secretary.

(3) TERMS AND CONDITIONS.—The conveyance by the United States shall be subject to such terms and conditions as the Secretary considers appropriate to protect the interests of the United States.

(4) DESCRIPTION.—The exact acreage and description of the land to be conveyed under paragraph (1) shall be determined by such surveys as the Secretary considers necessary. The cost of the surveys shall be borne by the Dexter Sanitary District.

(g) RICHARD B. RUSSELL DAM AND LAKE, SOUTH CAROLINA.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Upon execution of an agreement under paragraph (4) and subject to the requirements of this subsection, the Secretary shall convey, without consideration, to the State of South Carolina all right, title, and interest of the United States to the lands described in paragraph (2) that are managed, as of the date of the enactment of this Act, by the South Carolina Department of Natural Resources for fish and wildlife mitigation purposes in connection with the Richard B. Russell Dam and Lake, South Carolina, project.

(2) DESCRIPTION.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Subject to subparagraph (B), the lands to be conveyed under paragraph (1) are described in Exhibits A, F, and H of Army Lease Number DACW21-1-93-0910 and associated Supplemental Agreements or are designated in red in Exhibit A of Army License Number DACW21-3-85-1904; except that all designated lands in the license that are below elevation 346 feet mean sea level or that are less than 300 feet measured horizontally from the top of the power pool are excluded from the conveyance. Management of the excluded lands shall continue in accordance with the terms of Army License Number DACW21-3-85-1904 until the Secretary and the State enter into an agreement under paragraph (4).

(B) SURVEY.—The exact acreage and legal description of the lands to be conveyed under paragraph (1) shall be determined by a survey satisfactory to the Secretary, with the cost of the survey to be paid by the State. The State shall be responsible for all other costs, including real estate transaction and environmental compliance costs, associated with the conveyance.

(3) TERMS AND CONDITIONS.—

(A) MANAGEMENT OF LANDS.—All lands that are conveyed under paragraph (1) shall be retained in public ownership and shall be managed in perpetuity for fish and wildlife mitigation purposes in accordance with a plan approved by the Secretary. If the lands are not managed for such purposes in accordance with the plan, title to the lands shall revert to the United States. If the lands revert to the United States under this subparagraph, the Secretary shall manage the lands for such purposes.

(B) TERMS AND CONDITIONS.—The Secretary may require such additional terms and conditions in connection with the conveyance as the Secretary considers appropriate to protect the interests of the United States.

(4) PAYMENTS.—

(A) AGREEMENTS.—The Secretary is authorized to pay to the State of South Carolina not more than $4,850,000 if the Secretary and the State enter into a binding agreement for the State to manage for fish and wildlife mitigation purposes, in perpetuity, the lands conveyed under this subsection and the lands not covered by the conveyance that are designated in red in Exhibit A of Army License Number DACW21-3-85-1904.

(B) TERMS AND CONDITIONS.—The agreement shall specify the terms and conditions under which the payment will be made and the rights of, and remedies available to, the Federal Government to recover all or a portion of the payment in the event the State fails to manage the lands in a manner satisfactory to the Secretary.

(h) CHARLESTON, SOUTH CAROLINA.—The Secretary is authorized to convey the property of the Corps of Engineers known as the "Equipment and Storage Yard", located on Meeting Street in Charleston, South Carolina, in as-is condition for fair-market value with all proceeds from the conveyance to be applied by the Corps of Engineers, Charleston District, to offset a portion of the costs of moving or leasing (or both) an office facility in the City of Charleston.

(i) CLARKSTON, WASHINGTON.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall convey to the Port of Clarkston, Washington, all right, title, and interest of the United States in and to a portion of the land described in Army Lease Number DACW68-1-97-22, consisting of approximately 31 acres, the exact boundaries of which shall be determined by the Secretary and the Port of Clarkston.

(2) ADDITIONAL LAND.—The Secretary may convey to the Port of Clarkston, Washington, at fair market value as determined by the Secretary, such additional land located in the vicinity of Clarkston, Washington, as the Secretary determines to be excess to the needs of the Columbia River Project and appropriate for conveyance.

(3) TERMS AND CONDITIONS.—The conveyances made under paragraphs (1) and (2) shall be subject to such terms and conditions as the Secretary determines to be necessary to protect the interests of the United States, including a requirement that the Port of Clarkston pay all administrative costs associated with the conveyances (including the cost of land surveys and appraisals and costs associated with compliance with applicable environmental laws, including regulations).

(4) USE OF LAND.—The Port of Clarkston shall be required to pay the fair market value, as determined by the Secretary, of any land conveyed pursuant to paragraph (1) that is not retained in public ownership or is used for other than public park or recreation purposes, except that the Secretary shall have a right of reverter to reclaim possession and title to any such land.

(j) LAND CONVEYANCE TO MATEWAN, WEST VIRGINIA.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The United States shall convey by quit claim deed to the Town of Matewan, West Virginia, all right, title, and interest of the United States in and to four parcels of land deemed excess by the Secretary of the Army, acting through the Chief of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, to the structural project for flood control constructed by the Corps of Engineers along the Tug Fork River pursuant to section 202 of Public Law 96-367.

(g) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section $25,000,000 for fiscal years beginning after September 30, 1999. Such sums shall remain available until expended.

SEC. 585. CENTRAL WEST VIRGINIA.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT OF PROGRAM.—The Secretary may establish a pilot program for providing environmental assistance to non-Federal interests in central West Virginia.

(b) FORM OF ASSISTANCE.—Assistance under this section may be in the form of design and construction assistance for water-related environmental infrastructure and resource protection and development projects in central West Virginia, including projects for wastewater treatment and related facilities, water supply and related facilities, and surface water resource protection and development.

(c) PUBLIC OWNERSHIP REQUIREMENT.—The Secretary may provide assistance for a project under this section only if the project is publicly owned.

(d) LOCAL COOPERATION AGREEMENTS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Before providing assistance under this section, the Secretary shall enter into a local cooperation agreement with a non-Federal interest to provide for design and construction of the project to be carried out with the assistance.

(2) REQUIREMENTS.—Each local cooperation agreement entered into under this subsection shall provide for the following:

(A) PLAN.—Development by the Secretary, in consultation with appropriate Federal and State officials, of a facilities or resource protection and development plan, including appropriate engineering plans and specifications.

(B) LEGAL AND INSTITUTIONAL STRUCTURES.—Establishment of such legal and institutional structures as are necessary to ensure the effective long-term operation of the project by the non-Federal interest.

(3) COST SHARING.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The Federal share of the project costs under each local cooperation agreement entered into under this subsection shall be 75 percent. The Federal share may be in the form of grants or reimbursements of project costs.

(B) CREDIT FOR DESIGN WORK.—The non-Federal interest shall receive credit for the reasonable costs of design work completed by the non-Federal interest prior to entering into a local cooperation agreement with the Secretary for a project. The credit for the design work shall not exceed 6 percent of the total construction costs of the project.

(C) CREDIT FOR INTEREST.—In the event of a delay in the funding of the non-Federal share of a project that is the subject of an agreement under this section, the non-Federal interest shall receive credit for reasonable interest incurred in providing the non-Federal share of a project's cost.

(D) LAND, EASEMENTS, AND RIGHTS-OF-WAY CREDIT.—The non-Federal interest shall receive credit for land, easements, rights-of-way, and relocations toward its share of project costs (including all reasonable costs associated with obtaining permits necessary for the construction, operation, and maintenance of the project on publicly owned or controlled land), but not to exceed 25 percent of total project costs.

(E) OPERATION AND MAINTENANCE.—The non-Federal share of operation and maintenance costs for projects constructed with assistance provided under this section shall be 100 percent.

(f) APPLICABILITY OF OTHER FEDERAL AND STATE LAWS.—Nothing in this section shall be construed as waiving, limiting, or otherwise affecting the applicability of any provision of Federal or State law that would otherwise apply to a project to be carried out with assistance provided under this section.

(f) REPORT.—Not later than December 31, 2001, the Secretary shall transmit to Congress a report on the results of the pilot program carried out under this section, together with recommendations concerning whether or not such program should be implemented on a national basis.

SEC. 586. SACRAMENTO METROPOLITAN AREA WATERSHED RESTORATION, CALIFORNIA.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary is authorized to undertake environmental restoration activities included in the Sacramento Metropolitan Water Authority’s “Watershed Management Plan”. These activities shall be limited to cleanup of contaminated groundwater resulting directly from the acts of any Federal agency or Department of the Federal Government at or in the vicinity of McClellan Air Force Base, California; Mather Air Force Base, California; Sacramento Army Depot, California; or any location within the watershed where the Federal Government would be a responsible party under any Federal environmental law.

(b) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section $5,000,000 for fiscal years beginning after September 30, 1999.

SEC. 587. ONONDAGA LAKE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary is authorized to plan, design, and construct projects for the environmental restoration, conservation, and management of Onondaga Lake, New York, and to provide, in coordination with the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, financial assistance to the State of New York and political subdivisions thereof for the development and implementation of projects to restore, conserve, and manage Onondaga Lake.

(b) PARTNERSHIP.—In carrying out this section, the Secretary shall establish a partnership with appropriate Federal agencies (including the Environmental Protection Agency) and the State of New York and political subdivisions thereof for the purpose of project development and implementation. Such partnership shall be dissolved not later than 15 years after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(c) COST SHARING.—The non-Federal share of the cost of a project constructed under subsection (a) shall be not less than 30 percent of the total cost of the project and may be provided through in-kind services.

(d) EFFECT ON LIABILITY.—Financial assistance provided under this section shall not relieve from liability any person who would otherwise be liable under Federal or State law for damages, response costs, natural resource damages, restitution, equitable relief, or any other relief.

(e) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is authorized to be appropriated $10,000,000 to carry out the purposes of this section.

(f) REPEAL.—Section 401 of the Great Lakes Critical Programs Act of 1990 (104 Stat. 3010) and section 411 of the Water Resources Development Act of 1990 (104 Stat. 4648) are repealed as of the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 588. EAST LYNN LAKE, WEST VIRGINIA.

The Secretary shall defer any decision relating to the leasing of mineral resources underlying East Lynn Lake, West Virginia, project lands to the Federal entity vested with such leasing authority.

SEC. 589. EEL RIVER, CALIFORNIA.

The Secretary shall conduct a study to determine if flooding in the City of Ferndale, California, is the result of a Federal flood control project on the Eel River. If the Secretary determines that the flooding is the result of the project, the Secretary shall take appropriate measures (including dredging of the Salt River and construction of sediment ponds at the confluence of Francis, Reas, and Williams Creeks) to mitigate the flooding.

SEC. 590. NORTH LITTLE ROCK, ARKANSAS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall review a report prepared by the non-Federal interest concerning flood protection for the Dark Hollow area of North Little Rock, Arkansas. If the Secretary determines that the report meets the evaluation and design standards of the Corps of Engineers and that the project is economically justified, technically sound, and environmentally acceptable, the Secretary shall carry out the project.

(b) TREATMENT OF DESIGN AND PLAN PREPARATION COSTS.—The costs of design and preparation of plans and specifications shall be included as project costs and paid during construction.

SEC. 591. UPPER MISSISSIPPI RIVER, MISSISSIPPI PLACE, ST. PAUL, MINNESOTA.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary may enter into a cooperative agreement to participate in a project for the planning, design, and construction of infrastructure and other improvements at Mississippi Place, St. Paul, Minnesota.

(b) COST SHARING.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Federal share of the cost of the project shall be 50 percent. The Federal share may be provided in the form of grants or reimbursements of project costs.

(2) CREDIT FOR NON-FEDERAL WORK.—The non-Federal interest shall receive credit toward the non-Federal share of the cost of the project for reasonable costs incurred by the non-Federal interests as a result of participation in the planning, design, and construction of the project.

(3) LAND, EASEMENTS, AND RIGHTS-OF-WAY CREDIT.—The non-Federal interest shall receive credit toward the non-Federal share of the cost of the project for land, easements, rights-of-way, and relocations provided by the non-Federal interest with respect to the project.

(4) OPERATION AND MAINTENANCE.—The non-Federal share of operation and maintenance costs for the project shall be 100 percent.

(c) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is authorized to be appropriated $3,000,000 to carry out this section.

The motion was agreed to.

The Senate bill was ordered to be read a third time, was read the third time, and passed.

The title of the Senate bill was amended so as to read: “To provide for the conservation and development of water and related resources, to authorize the United States Army Corps of Engineers to construct various projects for improvements to rivers and harbors of the United States, and for other purposes”.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

APPOINTMENT OF CONFEREES

Mr. BOEHLERT. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to insist on the House amendment, and request a conference with the Senate thereon.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. EHRlich). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, the Chair appoints the following conferees: Messrs. SHUSTER, YOUNG of Alaska, BOEHLERT, BAKER, DOOLITTLE, SHERWOOD, OBERSTAR, BORSKI, Mrs. TAUSCHER, and Mr. BAIRD.

There was no objection.

SPECIAL ORDERS

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. TERRY). Under the Speaker’s announced policy of January 6, 1999, and under a previous order of the House, the following Members will be recognized for 5 minutes each.

REVIEW OF FINANCIAL FREEDOM ACT

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. EHRlich) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. EHRlich. Mr. Speaker, over the last 24 hours we have sure heard it all from the floor of this House. The usual class warfare, us versus them; the usual class envy rhetoric concerning the rich. And how many folks watching the national TV right this second making $40,000 a year with a couple of kids know that they are rich, or making $50,000 a year with four children and believe they are rich? Very few, I suspect.

We have seen revisionist history, Mr. Speaker, in how we got to a, what seemed to be just a few years ago, permanent deficit situation in this country as the minority party controlled this House for 40 years.

What we saw most of all, Mr. Speaker, however, was a great sense of frustration because the Speaker and this majority have moved a bill to return money to the people, to the pockets of the people, a comprehensive package that rewards married couples, senior citizens, working families, the self-employed schools, and distressed neighborhoods.

The Republican tax relief plan improves the lives, Mr. Speaker, of all Americans. One of the most unfair provisions in our present tax code, Mr.

Speaker, is its treatment of married couples. They pay more in taxes simply because they choose to get married. The Republican plan ends this unfair so-called marriage penalty. It allows married couples to claim a standard deduction for a single taxpayer to the benefit of 42 million taxpayers.

Families with single people also benefit. The Republican tax plan provides for a phased in 10 percent deduction in individual rates over the next 10 years. Taxpayers know best how to spend their own money. Washington needs to get out of the way and let taxpayers control their own money. That thought is why many of us were sent to Washington in the first place.

The cost of education continues to rise. The Republican plan provides meaningful tax relief. First, our legislation increases from $500 to $2,000 the contribution limit for education savings accounts.

Second, the bill permits private universities to offer prepaid tuition plans and exempts the earnings from all prepaid plans from Federal taxation, a real good idea.

Third, the plan eliminates the 60-month limitation on the student loan interest deduction. The Republican plan also addresses the basic brick and mortar issues associated with quality education. Unlike the President's bad idea to take general fund revenue and build public schools, our public school construction initiative makes permanent statutory changes so that State and local governments issuing public school construction bonds can more easily comply with the appropriate rules.

Similar to education, the cost of health care keeps rising. The Republican plan makes health care and long-term care more affordable and accessible to all Americans. Of particular significance, our plan allows a 100 percent deduction for health care premiums and long-term care insurance premiums. It is about time.

Our proposal also recognizes the financial hardships associated with caring for elderly members at home. We provide for an additional personal exemption for these taxpayers. Likewise, the Republican plan allows employers to offer long-term care insurance and cafeteria plans.

Finally, our plans expand the availability of medical savings accounts.

Mr. Speaker, the Republican plan properly buries the death tax that forces many Americans to pay the IRS 37 to 55 percent of their savings when they die, immoral, inefficient, wrong. It is time we got rid of it. This bill is the first step.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, the Republican plan also provides significant tax incentives for families and businesses in distressed neighborhoods. The family development accounts encourage low-income families to save a portion of their income by allowing tax-free withdrawal for education expenses, a first home, a business start-up, or certain medical expenses.

Mr. Speaker, hardworking Americans deserve the benefits that the Republican tax relief plan offers. It is imperative that this Congress ensure these benefits become a reality. The people deserve it. The workers deserve it. The taxpayers deserve it.

GUAM'S EXPERIENCE IN WORLD WAR II

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 6, 1999, the gentleman from Guam (Mr. UNDERWOOD) is recognized for 60 minutes as the designee of the minority leader.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, this evening I would like to do a World War II commemorative speech about the experiences of the people of Guam that I had intended to do last night.

Yesterday, July 21st, is a very special day in Guam's history. It is the day that the Third Marine Division, United States Marine Corps, and First Provisional Brigade of the U.S. Marine Corps and elements of the 77th Infantry Division of the U.S. Army landed on Guam to begin the liberation of Guam from the Japanese occupation.

Annually on Guam, and certainly for the past few weeks, we celebrate this event with parades and solemn speeches, a carnival and commemorative festivities which honor both the veterans who came to Guam's shores to liberate the people of Guam and for the people of Guam themselves, my people, the people who endured a brutal enemy occupation for over 2½ years.

Now, World War II, of course, is a very seminal event of this century, and Guam plays a very unique part in that. I want to talk a little bit about that this evening.

On December 8, 1941, the Japanese began bombing Guam and they landed about 5,000 army troops on December 10 of 1941. This attack was carried out simultaneously with attacks on Pearl Harbor and the Philippines. Of course, Guam being on the other side of the date line, the attack which was carried out at the same time as Pearl Harbor actually was on December 8 and not December 7.

The Japanese occupation featured a serious time of deprivation, suffering and brutality which the people of Guam, who are ethnically referred to as the Chamorro people, who were at that time not U.S. citizens but occupied a political category called U.S. nationals, endured and survived.

My purpose this evening is to give an historical perspective to those events which occurred some 55 years ago, in July of 1944, on a distant U.S. territory, to enhance the understanding of the Members of this body and the American people in general about the wartime experience of Guam and the postwar period which helped shape the relationship between Guam and the Federal Government.

Guam's experience is not unique if measured against the general experience of occupied peoples during a time of war, whether it was in Europe or China or the Philippines. Guam, after all, did not have a monopoly on human suffering. But it is a unique and special story about dignity in the midst of political and wartime machinations of large powers over small peoples and of a demonstrated loyalty to America, the kind of loyalty which was tested, the kind of loyalty that has not been asked of any civilian American community under the flag at any time during the 20th century.

In earlier years it may not have been necessary to give this kind of speech in Congress. Two or 3 decades ago the Members of this body were themselves, the majority of Members of this body were themselves World War II veterans who understood what the Battle of Guam was and who probably remembered it personally, if not directly from war time experience, but certainly just being part of World War II.

Today unfortunately, most people know very little about Guam. Most Members know very little about the Battle of Guam, and perhaps think of Guam only occasionally, probably more for exaggerated stories about snakes than for the historical experience of a great and loyal people.

When the Japanese landed in December of 1941, the 5,000 Japanese soldiers faced 153 Marines, 271 naval personnel, 134 Pan American workers and some 20,000 natives that I referred to earlier who were commonly called Chamorros. All of the Americans, meaning U.S. citizen civilians, had been evacuated on October 17, 1941, in full expectation a few months before Pearl Harbor, that something was going to happen in the Pacific.

In the Aleutian Islands in Alaska all of the islanders were evacuated with the full understanding that the Japanese may occupy those islands; and so, therefore, all of the civilians were removed.

But the people of Guam remained the only American civilian community open to and eventually experiencing enemy occupation during World War II.

At the time the only units that attempted to engage the Japanese in a very brief, but symbolic, and several people died, was a unit known as the Guam Insular Guard and Insular Force which were really people who had joined the U.S. Navy. It was kind of a Navy auxiliary force composed primarily of, well entirely of, men from Guam, and they were the only ones who willingly engaged the Japanese, and several of them died.

During the time of the occupation, the people of Guam stood steadfastly loyal to America and its ideals despite the best efforts of the Japanese occupiers to propagandize the people that it was better for them to be under and be part of the Far East Greater Co-prosperity Sphere, and the people of Guam were loyal to America at the risk of their lives and certainly their livelihoods.

Symbolic of the loyalty of the people of Guam were several songs written during the course of the Japanese occupation, some mocking the Japanese emperor and occupiers and others praising things American over those things that were Japanese, and the most well-known song was "Uncle Sam, Sam, My Dear Old Uncle Sam, Won't You Please Come Back to Guam?"

It is a song that was certainly in my upbringing, and I was born after World War II. Those people of my generation and even the later generation were all taught this song in one form or another.

The most visible symbol were the seven American sailors, and there were seven who refused to surrender to the Japanese forces and decided to take their chances, hiding in the jungle until the return of U.S. forces which sadly many of them expected to be a couple of months at the most. One by one each of those sailors were hunted down and executed by the Japanese except for one lonely sailor who survived the entire occupation assisted, greatly assisted, by the Artero family. This man's name was George Tweed, and his heroic saga was eventually made into a movie in the 1960s called No Man Is An Island, and for all those 32 months the people of Guam suffered.

Now in July of 1944 Admiral Ainsworth, actually in June of 1944, Admiral Ainsworth began his pre-invasion bombardment of Guam for the anticipated landings in Guam which were expected to take place in June. After about 2 hours he was called back, and he was called back and they re-routed all of his vessels to help with the battle in Saipan. The general plan was that of the three islands in the Marianas Islands, which were heavily fortified Saipan, Guam and Tinian, Saipan was to be invaded first by U.S. forces because it was acknowledged that that would be the most heavily fortified since those Marianas Islands had been under a Japanese mandate since the end of World War I and were heavily populated not only by Japanese military forces, but indeed by Japanese civilians.

The battle for Saipan proved much more difficult than anticipated, so the invasion of Guam was postponed, and instead Admiral Ainsworth and his naval forces were turned northward to deal with a couple of battles, one the Battle of Saipan and the other a naval air battle called, commonly called, the Marianas Turkey Shoot.

The invasion of Guam was therefore called off for 5 weeks, and during that intervening time the most brutal time of the Japanese occupation was endured by the people of Guam as they suffered forced labor and forced marches, and the whole population was marched all over the island, countless beheadings and civilian massacres largely for unknown reasons. The increased brutality was over and above the forced labor for the construction of defense fortifications for the construction of air strips in places called Orote and Tiyan. Japanese army units, several divisions had landed, had arrived from Manchuria in April of 1944 to defend Guam from the anticipated American invasion.

In July of 1944 Operation Forager began, and this was the whole operation meant for the invasion of Guam and 13 days of sustained bombardment on Guam, an island of some 212 square miles, was given by the Navy partially as a result of their experience in the Battle of Saipan and even the Normandy experience, so that the bombing on Guam, which of course is a much smaller area than the invasion of the coast of Normandy, actually endured more pre-invasion bombardment.

This extensive pre-invasion bombardment even acted more as a stimulus for even more acts by the Japanese military against the civilian population. Army Air Force planes, B-24s from recently taken islands in the Marshall Islands and Navy carrier base planes had been bombing Guam periodically for several weeks. Underwater demolition teams spent 4 days sweeping the shoreline. In a way the Navy took great pride in these underwater demolition teams, and on Guam they planted a sign, welcome U.S. Marines from the U.S. Navy, before the Marines actually landed on Guam.

And the Marines did, and they landed on July 21, 1944, and they landed on narrow beaches on Asan and Agat, and Asan, the people who assaulted the beach of Asan had to face cliffs once they landed, and those who landed in Agat faced the only Japanese counter-attack of the day.

One of the heroes of that day was Senator, former Senator Howell Heflin who was wounded and has repeatedly over the years that I have known Senator Howell Heflin has repeatedly told me that the Guam experience was the most important 6 hours of his life.

And the battle for Guam raged for nearly 3 weeks, and the island was declared secured on August 10, 1944. Nearly 18,500 Japanese soldiers were killed and some 1,900 American servicemen were killed, and although no specific statistics were kept about the civilian population, hundreds of Chamorros died during the battle or were executed, and hundreds more died for reasons related directly to the war but not combat.

And even after the island was secured, Japanese stragglers continued to be a serious threat to security and a Guam combat patrol, organized by the U.S. Marine Corps and soldiered by men from Guam, was established to find Japanese stragglers who refused to surrender. Incredibly, the last straggler was discovered in 1972 after spending some 28 years in the jungle by himself.

Battles sometimes bring out the worst in human beings, but they also bring out the inner strength in people of courage. Extraordinary heroism was common in the battles which occurred in the Marianas and in Guam, and two medals of honor were awarded.

One was to a Captain Lewis Wilson who was commanding officer of Company F Second Battalion, 9th Marine Regiment, fought off repeated Japanese counteroffensives on the Fonte Plateau. Had the lines been breached, it would have spelled disaster for the Marines in the rear. Captain Wilson later on became commandant of the Marine Corps.

Another was granted to Private First Class Frank Witek, who distinguished himself in hand-to-hand combat, provided cover for the withdrawal of wounded comrades and single-handedly put out an enemy machine gun position.

Over the Internet and because of the fact that many of the veterans who fought on Guam have a very special relationship to Guam, over the Internet I received the story of a Private First Class Jack Walker and Staff Sergeant Harry Kolata who landed in Agat as members of the 306th Infantry 77th Army Division. They volunteered to go behind enemy lines to make contact with the villagers of Merizo; and they did so, and they brought, successfully brought back 1,500 people into the American lines.

And these are just a few of the stories of the heroism exhibited by the Marines and the soldiers who liberated Guam, and on behalf of the people of Guam I say: Si yu'os ma'ase.

And the veterans of the battle for Guam continued to have an excellent relationship with the people of Guam and return to Guam every year, although obviously in decreasing numbers every year; and during this year's celebration some 60 veterans have returned to Guam to visit Guam and to see the progress that they have helped make possible.

Earlier this month, on July 9, I laid a wreath at the Tomb of the Unknowns at Arlington National Cemetery, as I have done so every year that I have been in office, in order to commemorate the Battle of Guam and to express the gratitude of the people of Guam to the veterans, the servicemen. This year I did so along with Commonwealth of the Northern Marianas, which includes the island of Saipan and Tinian. Representative Juan Babauta, together we laid a wreath in order to express the gratitude felt by the people of our respective islands for the sacrifices of every Marine, sailor, airman, and soldier who helped in the liberation of Guam.

And as I said repeatedly, there was something very special about the Battle for Guam which was not present in any other Pacific battle, indeed any battle during World War II. Guam was a U.S. territory inhabited by civilians who were U.S. nationals at the outbreak of the war. It was in fact the first time that a foreign power had invaded U.S. soil since the War of 1812.

This special relationship is demonstrated in this painting based on a picture of two young Chamorro boys who waved hand-made American flags. The stars are all wrong, the stripes are all wrong, but these two young boys that we think were aged maybe 8 and 6 at the time made flags which were imperfect in their design yet perfectly clear in their representation, and their faces reflect the difficult times that they had had experiencing battle, not as grown men in uniform with weapons, but as young boys confused by all that was going on around them. But despite the fact that their faces reflected the difficult times, they also had their hope for their future and their gratitude for their deliverance from enemy hands.

It was reported that service men who bore witness to the display and to the spectacle of Chamorros who made their way down from the hills and the camps which the Japanese placed them in broke down and wept at the sight of the people, broke down and wept at the sight of these two young boys, and seeing the people and their condition and their displays of red, white, and blue.

I know that we cannot ever recapture that moment in time, but we must make every effort to do so because it has established a bond which has lasted for generations between those in uniform and the people of Guam.

The people of Guam came down from the mountains to tell the stories of brutality and the tales of suffering which they endured during the last few months of the occupation. The Japanese authorities had herded them into camps in Maimai and Talofoto, Malojloj and especially Manenggon, a name which today continues to stand for suffering. Thousands of people were placed into a valley without food and only a stream from which to drink; and they found a way to survive, and they found the will to survive, and they expressed their gratitude of their deliverance with laughter and tears, with hugs and screams, all reportedly at the same time.

Some experienced horrific events, massacres at Malessó, Tinta, and Faha' where Japanese soldiers herded families into caves and threw hand grenades and delivered small arms fire until dozens were killed. A similar event occurred at Fena cave and for the first time in many years, Speaker Tony Unpingco of the Guam legislature led a commemoration of this event. This event took place in what is now referred to as "naval magazine," a highly secured area where lots of weaponry is stored. And this is very special for the people of Guam, and I certainly congratulate Speaker Unpingco for making this possible.

This tragedy was most manifested by an enormously brave woman I would like to tell you about who passed away a few years ago. She was Beatrice Flores Emsley. Beatrice was a woman who, as a 13-year-old, was told to kneel by Japanese soldiers and then struck by a sword across the back of her neck. This attempt to behead the young lady was unsuccessful for reasons we do not know, but we can only guess at. The soldiers buried her in a shallow grave and miraculously, she emerged from that grave and wandered for several days before she was treated, lived to a ripe old age, had children and grandchildren.

For years, I remember this, Mrs. Emsley was a curiosity for many people. Understandably, she did not like to talk about the war because the experience was so very painful. So very few people asked her, but eventually she started to speak out about her experience in order to bring honor and dignity to the experiences of the people of Guam, and she came to testify in Congress on several occasions. She was a remarkably gifted woman, devoid of bitterness, who never spoke harshly about her captors or the people who tried to behead her, but only spoke compellingly about how her experience and how she hoped that the people of the United States would understand what Guam went through.

As always, Mrs. Emsley was dignified as we asked her to recount her painful experiences, recounting that we knew caused her so much pain, and she came to symbolize what the people of Guam went through.

Several years ago, at the commemoration of the 50th anniversary of the liberation of Guam, the half century mark, Secretary of the Interior Bruce Babbitt referred to the veterans who landed on Guam as the liberators from without, and the people of Guam as the liberators from within. It is their interaction that we bring honor to today, and it is their struggle in the beaches and in the concentration camps; it is their common fear and their common bravery; it is their common love for freedom, and it is their common bond that we bring honor to today.

In light of this, I will enter into the Record two newspaper articles, one on the Fena cave massacre which was commemorated recently in Guam, and the other is about Darryl Dass, one of the Marine liberators from Iowa who was a parade grand marshal in our recent Liberation Day festivities in Guam.

GUAM REMEMBERS LESSONS OF 1944
(By Hirashi Hiyama)

As the 55th anniversary of the island's liberation draws near, American soldiers and local residents who went through the war will meet once again on the island this week.

Washed away by time, Guam's memories of World War II are starting to be overwhelmed by development and comfort of the modern lifestyle, say those who experienced the war.

But they remember the original Liberation Day and remind others of the harsh island life little more than two generations ago.

Darryl Dass, 75, of Iowa will join local residents on Wednesday as one of four grand marshals for the Liberation Day parade. The former Marine landed on Agat on July 21, 1944, helping to free Guam from the Japanese occupational forces.

He is among some 42 World War II veterans, who helped liberate Guam from Japanese occupational forces, who plan to return to Guam this week to join local residents in celebrating the island's holiday.

"I thought so much about (local) people when we first arrived (on Guam in 1944)," Dass said, during a phone interview from Iowa. "They were so pitiful. Their clothes were ragged. They were hungry. They didn't know it they were supposed to give us a hug or to bow.

"All the people, they were so thankful. It was the way they were pleased with their freedom—these things leave a mark on you," he said. "When you have so much respect for the people—it's just like a magnet—it draws me back."

The arrival of American soldiers is remembered clearly by local residents who lived through the war.

Amalia G. Arceo, 88, of Sinajana was in a concentration camp in Manengon, where she lived in a cave, drank river water and treated her sickly son.

Her family members risked their lives and hid in the surrounding jungles, and from the eyes of Japanese soldiers, to supply food for captured family members, Arceo said.

The joyous news of the arrival of American soldiers on the island seeped through the camp.

"We heard that American people were coming in," she said. "So we said 'the Americans are coming. The Americans are coming.' We were so happy. They brought eggs, ham, cookies, candies, coffee—it was all in boxes."

Freed local residents were so hungry that they "stuffed themselves in a hurry," Arceo said. But their bodies were so weak that many people initially were sickened by food rations eaten after they were freed, she said.

At about the same time in Guam's history, similar things were happening at a concentration camp in Tai, Mangilao, where Carmen A. Perez, now 66, also of Sinajana, was staying with her family. The camp was located near the Fatimer Duerms Memorial School, she said.

She also recalled a rumor about the arrival of American soldiers spreading quickly among those who were captured at the camp.

"We were still careful not to be noticed by the Japanese," she said, of the elation detainees felt when hearing the rumor.

Her brother was captured by Japanese soldiers in a jungle, but American soldiers found the Japanese soldiers just in time to rescue Perez's brother, she said.

Memories of the war have been difficult to share for those who experienced it.

Dass said he remained quiet about his wartime experiences for decades. But he now talks about the harsh memories of the war "because they don't teach too much of the history to (school) kids."

"Memories: friends are killed and blown into pieces and you don't recognize them. You are killed. You are crippled. These are things you don't forget. You don't want to talk about it," he said. "If we don't tell (young people) what we have done, they won't know. It's over 50 years ago. That's like ancient history to those kids."

Liberation Day has become a joyous occasion, celebrating the island's freedom from the Japanese military. But it also brings sorrow to those who lost loved ones during the war, Perez said.

"I want," Perez said, "the people of Guam to be educated (in Guam's history)."

Dass said he hopes Guam residents will continue to pass on the island's history for generations to come.

"Old men create the war and young men die, fighting it," Dass said. "War is hell. It brings out the worst in people."

FENA SURVIVORS TELL TALES

(By Joseph E. Duenes)

Nearly 400 people attended a memorial service at Fena Cave yesterday to pay homage to the 35 victims, and their families of one of Guam's worst recorded World War II massacres.

Yesterday's ceremony was only the second to take place at the cave since the massacre occurred. The site has been U.S. Navy property since the war, and access to the area was forbidden until last year's memorial ceremony.

In July 1944, shortly before U.S. troops liberated Guam, about 85 Chamorros—men, women, and children—were marched to the Fena area by Japanese soldiers. The Chamorros were lured into caves with promises of food and rest after a long hard day of building military fortifications.

Without warning, soldiers began flinging grenades into the cave after the Chamorros entered. The soldiers apparently wanted no survivors of the incident, and systematically plunged bayonets into those who were not killed by the explosions. At the same time, a dozen women were raped and killed in a nearby cave. Nearly 35 men and women were killed in the massacre.

Maria "Chong" Alerta, one of a handful of survivors still living, was very young when the massacre took place. According to Alerta, the soldiers insisted children enter the cave first, in what she thinks was an attempt to help them survive. As the Japanese walked through the carnage of the grenade blasts, bayonetting moving bodies, Alerta and her family remained still and were passed over by soldiers. Her father was the only one in her family hurt during the onslaught, suffering a non-fatal bayonet wound.

Alerta, the only surviving member of her family, said the event was a blur to her and she does not remember most of it.

"Right now if I think about it, I can still feel it, even though I don't remember the most exciting moments of the event," Alerta said, as tears welled up in her eyes. "I feel kind of lonely."

Maria Nauta was 17 years old when the massacre took place. She, her father, and her sister were already at the caves the day of the massacre.

"I was here that morning, because we were lined up to be killed. The American planes came early that morning, and everybody scattered," Nauta said. "I ran and I ran, but my father and my sister were, caught and put over here (at the caves). I was able to get away."

Nauta tearfully said her father was later killed during the massacre. She said her sister was able to escape, but not before being stabbed in the back with a bayonet.

"That was a very sad day, and it is very hard for me to remember," Nauta said.

Leroy Delos Santos said he had relatives killed in the massacre. He and his family came to the ceremony to honor them, and the others who died.

"From my perspective, (I came) to memorialize, to pay tribute to our ancestors that were killed," he said.

Survivors and their families were not the only ones honoring the victims of the attack. Many came to learn, firsthand, some of Guam's tragic World War II history. For this reason, Delos Santos brought his niece, and all four of his children, to the memorial service.

"I want them to experience this and to know. I feel that its very important that the kids, even at a very young age, get exposed to stuff like this," Delos Santos said.

Paul Mafnas, a University of Guam student from Barrigada, came to the ceremony with his Chamorro class. Mafnas said the greatest lesson we can learn from the massacre is forgiveness.

"Of course it's going to touch a nerve, because it was our people that they did this to. But on the same token, we should also practice forgiveness, because everybody needs forgiveness these days," Mafnas said "We should remember what they went through, but at the same time, use that to prevent those mistakes from happening again in the future."

Pat San Nicolas, of Talofoto, spent a lot of time explaining to her son Chris and her daughter Amanda the events that led up to the massacre, and some of the reasons why it may have happened. She was saddened that the same type of events still take place in other parts of the world.

"You think about Kosovo and the tragedy there, and you think, 'It's still going on after all these years.' People just haven't learned," she said.

Though the Navy has already agreed to allow next year's ceremony to be held at the site, Speaker Antonio Unpingco, R-Santa Rita, said the construction of a monument honoring the Fena massacre victims and their families is already in the works. The monument will be located on a hillside near the navy's access gate, and will cost an estimated $500,000 to construct, Unpingco said.

"Since last year, we had several suggestions from the (memorial) committee to put up a memorial for the victims, and we decided to put it near the actual site," Unpingco said. "It will not only be open to locals, but to visitors from all over."

Unpingco said plans for the memorial have already been donated by the Filipino American Society of Architects and Engineers. The committee is relying on private donations for funding, however, which means it may be two to three years before construction begins, he said.

Unpingco added that as soon as the monument is completed, it will be used for the annual memorial services.

The meaning of the battles of Guam and Saipan.

The taking of the Marianas was another in a series of critical turning points in the Pacific war. The defeat of Japanese forces in the Marianas enabled America to bring the war to the Japanese homelands which was not previously possible. The Tojo government resigned as a result of the Japanese debacle in the Marianas Islands and Admiral Asami Nagano, supreme naval advisor to the Japanese emperor stated, hell is upon us, and the words were very true as Army Air Force bombers took off from airfields recently built on Guam and Saipan and Tinian, the airfields of Harmon Anderson, North, Northwest, Isley, Kobler, became familiar to the Army Air Force station on these islands.

And the gentleman from New York (Mr. GILMAN), the Chairman of the Committee on International Relations, was stationed in Guam during this time period and participated in 35 missions to Japan, taking off from Guam.

And in addition to the air war, Guam became the jumping off point for later landings in the Philippines in Iwo Jima and Okinawa as Guam became, in the Victory at Sea documentary, Guam became the military supermarket in the western Pacific. Guam became the forward naval base. Basically, Pearl Harbor was effectively moved 3,500 miles west and Admiral Nimitz set up his headquarters in Guam.

But we have other issues to bring up as well, and it certainly is something that we do not like to draw too much attention to, but we must, and that is that as we bring honor and recognition to the experiences of the people of Guam, I have to bring up an issue which basically cries out for justice. And this is the issue of how best to recognize this loyalty and their sacrifices.

At the conclusion of World War II, the U.S. Congress passed a bill called the Guam Meritorious Claims Act. This act basically said that people of Guam could submit claims for property damage up to $5,000. In submitting those claims, if one had a claim for more than $5,000, one had to physically come to Washington, D.C., to present one's claim. And this Guam Meritorious Claims Act was in existence for one full year, at a time when the people of Guam were still recovering from World War II, and even the notion of travel to Washington, D.C., was almost as remote as the notion of travel is to Antarctica for most of us today.

Yet, that was legitimate legislation, because it was an attempt to deal with the battle damage. In 1948, the U.S. Congress passed what is known as the War Claims Act. The War Claims Act provided a basis upon which American citizens and American nationals who were working for the Federal Government, who were subject to enemy occupation or forced labor or internment or death or injury could make a claim. Incredibly, Guam was not included in that legislation.

When that legislation was amended in 1962, Guam again was not included in that legislation. And so let me express the anomaly in terms of my family.

My name is ROBERT UNDERWOOD. My grandfather is from North Carolina. He came to Guam in the year 1902 as a Marine. He mustered out in Guam, and he married a Chamorro woman and he thereby established a line of Underwoods in Guam who fully considered themselves, as I do, indigenous inhabitants of Guam.

My grandfather was taken by the Japanese and put in a prison camp for civilians in, Kobe, Japan. As a result of the War Claims Act of 1948, my grandfather was compensated for his time of internment in Japan. His family, his wife, my grandmother, his children, my father and my aunts and my uncles, could not submit any claim, even though it could be argued and certainly, my grandfather felt this way before he died, they suffered more than he did. But because the War Claims Act only recognized the activities of U.S. citizens who were subsequently taken to Japan, the people of Guam were not included.

There were some people of Guam who worked for Pan American Airlines who worked in Wake Island. These people were drafted, in a sense, by the U.S. Marine Corps to help defend the island against Japanese invaders. These people from Guam were taken, captured by the Japanese, some were killed, eventually recognized as World War II veterans, went to prison camp in China. As a result of the War Claims Act of 1948, they were given a certain level of compensation for their forced labor and for their internment. Their families, which were back in Guam, who suffered a similar fate, were not allowed to submit the same claim. So, in a sense, we have a situation that cries out for justice. And outlining that history only helps make the case.

But there is more to it than that. In 1950, the people of Guam were made United States citizens by a congressional act called the Organic Act of Guam. In 1951, the United States signed a peace treaty with Japan, officially ending the Pacific War. In that treaty, the United States forgave or foreclosed or made impossible any claim for any war action by the Japanese by any American citizen or American national. So the peace treaty, in effect, foreclosed the opportunity for the people of Guam to be allowed the opportunity to make a war claim to Japan.

So what we have today is that the people of Guam cannot make a war claim against Japan, nor are they included in the war claims legislation that has been passed by Congress. So what we have today is a situation that is intolerable, that is unconscionable, and cries out for some justice.

Fortunately, with the collaboration of Senator DANNY INOUE over in the Senate, he and I have introduced legislation to grant the people of Guam the opportunity to submit war claims for death and injury and for forced march and forced labor. In order to validate these claims, we are proposing that in the future, we will establish a commission to validate the existence of these claims and certainly to review the tortured history of the claims situation in regards to the people of Guam.

The one other irony is that, as I mentioned earlier in this speech, is that in anticipation of a Japanese invasion of the Aleutian Islands, the civilians who lived in the Aleutian Islands were evacuated. In anticipation of Japanese war action in Guam, the only civilians that were evacuated were U.S. citizens. The people of Guam who were not citizens obviously were not evacuated. Legislation was granted to compensate those for property damages and for damages claimed as a result of the Japanese occupation to illusion islanders, but no such similar legislation has been passed for the people of Guam.

It is painful sometimes to talk about such issues because sometimes people think that we are talking about money issues. In one sense, we are. But we are not asking for what we do not deserve, and we are only asking for the same treatment as other American citizens and nationals who experienced exactly the same kind of condition.

In trying to bring honor and closure to the World War II experience, we have done many things in this country. We are establishing a World War II memorial on the mall. The original design of that World War II memorial called for 50 columns to commemorate each of the 50 States and one more for the District of Columbia. Incredibly, a place like Guam was left out of the memorial.

Fortunately, through a lot of conversation and personal appearances and letters and everything else, we have been able to rectify that so that Guam will be given the same kind of prominence in that memorial as any other State or territory, because, based on what I have told my colleagues this evening, its contribution to the war effort was not only great in terms of winning the war against Japan, but enormous in terms of the suffering of individuals and their families.

So it is in their name, it is in the name of the people of Guam that we ask that consideration be given to this legislation, that it be widely supported. It is in their name that I ask that we bring some closure to this war experience for those who have survived to this age. Certainly, most people have passed on. Most of the people who experienced World War II as mature adults have passed on from Guam, and it is a way, it is a tragic circumstance because so many of them that suffered during the Japanese occupation will never see any kind of compensation or recognition for their efforts.

Every single family in Guam has some connection to the war experience. I always do not like to talk about it in those terms, but sometimes those are the terms that most people understand.

My parents have 11 children. I am the only one that was born after World War II, and all the rest were born either during the war or prior to the war. Three of them died during the war.

For my parents, for my father while he was still alive, and for my mother who still lives today as a very energetic 85-year-old woman, there is no concern and there was never any concern about war restitution or the legislation or seeking any legislative initiative.

In fact, I will have to say that for most of the people who experience it, they barely mention it. It is really part of our attempt, for those of us who come from the generation who profited from their experience, it is our attempt to help make whole what must have been a horrific experience and to try to bring some closure and honor to their experience.

So today, even though we are one day late and actually in Guam time we are two days late, I want to again congratulate all the Marines and sailors and airmen and soldiers who participated in the battle for Guam.

There are so many out there. I am in strong communication with several of them. If they have not gone back to Guam, they should go back to Guam and see what they helped make possible. For those people who came down from the hills, the Chamorro people of Guam, who endured the Japanese occupation, let us never forget that they made their contribution to liberty and they made their contribution to American ideals as well.

SENATE—Thursday, July 22, 1999

The Senate met at 9:30 a.m. and was called to order by the Honorable MICHAEL D. CRAPO, a Senator from the State of Idaho.

PRAYER

The Chaplain, Dr. Lloyd John Ogilvie, offered the following prayer:

Almighty God, thank You for this moment of quiet in which we can reaffirm who we are, whose we are, and why we are here. Once again, we commit ourselves to You as the sovereign Lord of our lives and of our Nation. Our ultimate goal is to please and serve You. You have called us to be servant leaders who glorify You in seeking to know and do Your will in the unfolding vision for America.

We spread out before You the specific decisions that must be made today. We claim Your presence all through the day. Guide the Senators' thinking and their speaking. May their convictions be based on undeniable truth which has been refined by You. Bless them as they work together to find the best solutions for the problems before our Nation. Help them to draw on the supernatural resources of Your Spirit. Give them divine wisdom, penetrating discernment, and indomitable courage.

When the day draws to a close, may our deepest joy be that we received Your best for us and worked together for what is best for our Nation. In the name of our Lord and Savior. Amen.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CRAPO) led the Pledge of Allegiance, as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

APPOINTMENT OF THE ACTING PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will please read a communication to the Senate from the President pro tempore (Mr. THURMOND).

The legislative clerk read the following letter:

U.S. SENATE,
PRESIDENT PRO TEMPORE,
Washington, DC, July 22, 1999.

To the Senate:

Under the provisions of rule I, section 3, of the Standing Rules of the Senate, I hereby appoint the Honorable MICHAEL D. CRAPO, a Senator from the State of Idaho, to perform the duties of the Chair.

STROM THURMOND,
President pro tempore.

Mr. CRAPO thereupon assumed the chair as Acting President pro tempore.

RECOGNITION OF THE ACTING MAJORITY LEADER

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Georgia, Mr. COVERDELL, is recognized.

SCHEDULE

Mr. COVERDELL. Mr. President, today the Senate will be in a period of morning business until 10:30 a.m. Following morning business, the Senate will resume debate on the Commerce-State-Justice appropriations bill with 1 hour of debate on the Gregg amendment regarding the crime reduction trust fund. Further amendments to the bill will be offered, debated, and voted on throughout the day today. Therefore, Senators should be prepared to vote during the day and into the evening. The majority leader would like to reiterate that there will be no break in action on the bill.

I thank my colleagues for their attention.

RESERVATION OF LEADER TIME

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, the leadership time is reserved.

MORNING BUSINESS

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. There will now be a period for the transaction of morning business not to extend beyond the hour of 10:30 a.m. with Senators permitted to speak therein for up to 5 minutes each. Under the previous order, the Senator from Georgia, Mr. COVERDELL, is recognized for up to 10 minutes.

The Senator from Georgia.

Mr. COVERDELL. Mr. President, you have already enumerated we have now entered into a period of morning business for up to an hour. I believe I have been recognized for up to 10 minutes.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. That is correct.

F-22 FUNDING

Mr. COVERDELL. Mr. President, the F-22 has become a matter of great interest and controversy over the last several days because the House Appropriations Defense Subcommittee voted to bring a pause to the program; it took $1.8 billion out of it and redistributed it to other priorities. The problem is, if I might just take a moment to characterize it, nobody had any knowledge of the potential of this act—not the Defense Department, not the Air Force, not the contractors, not any parties who have been involved in development of the aircraft.

To step back for a moment, the decision as to this highly advanced weapons system and the decision to commit the Nation to its development is well over a decade old. The actual development of the aircraft began in 1991. We have now as a nation invested $20 billion in the development of this system; two of these unbelievable instruments of warfare are being tested in the air, and there is movement now to production of the first fighters.

My point is that after responsible commitments are made through three administrations and we have invested everything in its preparation and now we are ready to harvest that decision, the only words that come to mind are, it is bizarre that out of the blue, with no hearings, no reflection, this decision just drops like a lead brick into the middle of all these circumstances.

I am going to read the letter written by Secretary Cohen on July 15 to Congressman BILL YOUNG, chairman of the Appropriations Committee. I think it begins to encapsulate the shock of what has happened. He says:

I was dismayed to learn about House Appropriations Defense Subcommittee's mark last Monday that cut $1.8 billion in procurement funding for the F-22 aircraft. The Department of Defense cannot accept this decision. This decision, if enacted, would for all practical purposes kill the F-22 program, the cornerstone of our nation's global air power in the 21st century.

For fifty years, every American soldier has gone to war confident that the United States had air superiority. Canceling the F-22 means we cannot guarantee air superiority in future conflicts. It would also have a significant impact on the viability of the Joint Strike Fighter Program. The F-22 will enable the Joint Strike Fighter to carry out its primary strike mission. The Joint Strike Fighter was not designed for the air superiority mission, and redesigning it to do so will dramatically increase the cost. An upgraded F-15 will not provide this dominance and will cost essentially the same as the F-22 program.

It goes on to say:

I know the difficult budget environment the Congress has to deal with these days. I support your efforts to give our nation the best possible defense at an affordable cost. However, I believe the nation's defense requires the F-22. The proposed cut jeopardizes our future warfighting capability and will place our forces at higher risk.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the letter from Secretary Cohen be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE SECRETARY OF DEFENSE,
Washington, DC, July 15, 1999.

Hon. C.W. BILL YOUNG,
Chairman, Committee on Appropriations,
House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: I was dismayed to learn about the House Appropriations Defense Subcommittee's mark last Monday that cut $1.8 billion in procurement funding for the F-22 aircraft. The Department of Defense cannot accept this decision. This decision, if enacted would for all practical purposes kill the F-22 program, the cornerstone of our nation's global air power in the 21st century.

For fifty years every American soldier has gone to war confident that the United States had air superiority. Canceling the F-22 means we cannot guarantee air superiority in future conflicts. It would also have a significant impact on the viability of the Joint Strike Fighter program. The F-22 will enable the Joint Strike Fighter to carry out its primary strike mission. The JSF was not designed for the air superiority mission, and redesigning it to do so will dramatically increase the cost. An upgraded F-15 will not provide this dominance and will cost essentially the same as the F-22 program.

I know the difficult budget environment the Congress has to deal with these days. I support your efforts to give our nation the best possible defense at an affordable cost. However, I believe the nation's defense requires the F-22. The proposed cut jeopardizes our future warfighting capability and will place our forces at higher risk.

I pledge my strongest effort to ensure the program will be delivered within the cost caps that we've agreed to with the Congress. I am confident the Department has the proper management controls to ensure the success of the F-22 program. As always, I would be pleased to discuss these matters with you at any time. But I must tell you that I cannot accept a defense bill that kills this cornerstone program.

Sincerely,

BILL COHEN.

Mr. COVERDELL. Mr. President, an article appeared on July 21 in the Marietta Daily Journal which further illuminates the nature of the Secretary's letter. It says:

Defense Secretary William Cohen criticized a House panel Tuesday—

This is the point I want to make—for not consulting with the Pentagon before voting to suspend development of the Air Force's F-22 stealth fighter jet.

"Neither I nor anyone in this building—or anyone in the Air Force—was aware of the effort underway on the part of the committee," Cohen told reporters during a photo-taking session [at the Department of Defense].

This underscores the point I was making that something of this magnitude, something of the sophistication of this system, something that we have invested $20 billion in, something that we have spent almost two decades getting ready to launch, is not managed in this manner. It is bizarre that you would find yourself at this point, and suddenly a subcommittee decides to overturn almost two decades of thought and preparation and planning.

As I said a moment ago, we have invested about $20 billion in this system up to this point. If you were to carry out and carry through to the end what the subcommittee has done—and it reappropriated $1.8 billion—we would lose another $6.5 billion. This House Appropriations Committee action would deteriorate and jeopardize the program and violate current contractual agreements between the Air Force and the contractor.

One Pentagon source told Defense Daily yesterday:

The $1.8 billion cut would result in $6.5 billion in total growth, $5.3 billion in production costs and $1.2 billion in engineering and manufacturing development costs.

In other words, you would not be saving $1.8 billion; you would have to bleed out another $6.5 billion. So by this time we would have $26, $27 billion in this weapons system—almost two decades—but no fighters.

Anytime you develop a system of that magnitude, there have been issues that surround it. But they have all been managed. Extensive congressional oversight has been very significant over the development of the aircraft. Its problems have been dealt with and managed. As I said, we are at the point of actually inheriting this unique fighter.

There was an article in the Washington Post this morning by Richard Hallion. I will read a couple paragraphs.

There was some irony in the House Appropriations Committee's canceling production funding last week for the Air Force's next generation fighter—the Lockheed-Martin F-22 Raptor. The action came only weeks after America's military forces proved—for the third time since 1990—that exploiting dominant aerospace power is the irreplaceable keystone of our post-Cold War strategy for successful quick-response crisis intervention.

I believe everybody at this point, after the Persian Gulf, after Iraq and Kosovo, is looking anew at traditional war strategy. Who would have ever thought you could have flown the thousands of sorties that were involved in Kosovo with no combat casualties?

No issue has been more misunderstood than the F-22. The plane links radar-evading stealth with the ability to cruise at supersonic speeds and to exploit and display data from various sources to better inform the pilot about threats and opportunities.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator's time has expired.

Mr. COVERDELL. Mr. President, I think the other Senators are here for their prearranged time, so I will not go on. I yield the floor.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from North Dakota is recognized.

Mr. DORGAN. I yield myself such time as I consume under the 30 minutes allocated to this side.

TAX CUTS

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, we now turn to another agenda in the Senate.

By direction of the majority party, we turn to the subject of tax cuts. It is a corner that we have navigated before in this Congress. I was thinking that it might be useful to have had Daniel Webster in this Chamber to say to Members, as he said many years ago: "Necessity compels me to speak the truth rather than pleasing things. I should indeed like to please you, but I prefer to save you, whatever be your attitude toward me."

It certainly must be pleasing to say to constituents that we would like to give tax breaks as far as the eye can see, upwards of a half a trillion, three-quarters of a trillion, and some say $1 trillion. What a wonderful thing.

This country is doing quite well. Its economy is moving ahead with significant health. Unemployment is way down. Inflation is way down. There are a lot of things in this country to be thankful for.

Part of the reason to be thankful for that is, in 1993, some of us in Congress had the vision to steer this country to a different course. If we remember, in 1993, we were facing a $290 billion Federal deficit—$290 billion. The economists told us that for the rest of the decade we would have anemic economic growth and deficits.

We passed a piece of legislation in this Congress. I voted for it. I was proud to do so. When people said: We're going to blame you for voting for that, I said: Don't blame me. Please give me credit for it. I won't run away from that vote.

It was a tough, hard vote. It increased some taxes, mostly on those in top 1 or 2 percent, and it cut some spending. It was tough economic medicine, but it signaled to the country we were going to put this country back on track with a responsible fiscal policy that would lead someday to a balanced budget.

We passed that by one vote in the House and one vote in the Senate—one vote. We did not get one vote from the majority side—not one. We provided all of the votes to pass that legislation at that point. We were widely criticized for it. In fact, we had Members on the other side predict that it would lead to a depression; it would lead to massive unemployment; it would collapse our economy; it would be awful for our country.

This country has had unprecedented economic growth, declining unemployment and low inflation. There are more people working and there is more home ownership. And now we find, instead of a $290 billion budget deficit, budget surpluses ahead.

What happens at the first sign of surplus from this bridge on the ship of state? At the first sign of surplus, the majority party decides it is time to abandon the bridge and go down and get the champagne, pop the corks and pass out money to everybody—well, not to everybody—pass out money to all the friends from the ship's crew.

Let's talk about what all this means.

They rely on some vision for the next 10 and 20 years that we will have surpluses forever. Of course, this comes from economists that cannot remember their home phone number—telling us what is going to happen 3, 5, and 10 years from now. Those in the majority party say: Because we have all of this good economic news, although we didn't participate in helping make that happen—we voted against that economic plan in 1993—we are now deciding we are going to offer tax breaks of unprecedented size.

This is what is proposed. The tax breaks that will come to the floor of the Senate and will be on the floor of the other body today have as their priorities that we will not provide any money to make Medicare solvent. We won't provide any money for our domestic priorities: education, health care, defense, and other key investments. We will provide no money for debt reduction. One would expect when times are good, we ought to be able to begin reducing the indebtedness we incur when times are bad, but there is no money for debt reduction and no money for Social Security solvency. We are going to have a tax cut of $792 billion.

That is the GOP priority. That is not new. That has always been their priority. It is full speed ahead on our priority, and everything else can wait.

If you have a pie and you show who get the tax breaks, here is how the pie gets cut. If you are in the top 1 percent of the income earners of this country, you get this large piece. If you are in the next 4 percent, between 95 and 99, you also get a large piece of the pie. But the lowest 20 percent of the income earners of this country get this little sliver, just a crumb off the corner. It is always the same, and it never changes. The big tax breaks go to the upper-income folks, and the rest are left with tiny crumbs, if any at all.

This chart shows the same thing. The top 1 percent get a $23,000-a-year average tax cut. The bottom 60 percent of the wage earners in this country get a $139 a year tax cut. This chart shows what is going to happen over the next 20 years. The period of time 2000–2004, 2005–2009, the cost of the GOP tax grows substantially. In the second decade, it literally explodes. It will head us right back to the same circumstance we had before of huge Federal deficits.

This chart shows the same thing in a different style. These are back loaded, exploding tax breaks that benefit the upper-income folks and will, in my judgment, lead to very significant risks for this country.

I will ask this question over and over again: If this is your priority, just tax cuts above everything else, and tax cuts that go largely to the upper-income folks in this country, do you decide, then, that Head Start, for example, is not important because the domestic discretionary portion of this budget is fixing to be shrunk like a prune? You look at the kind of cuts that are necessary in all of the programs that make this a good country, the investment in our children, the investment in nutrition, the investment in health care, you will find massive cuts in all of those programs in order to pay for tax breaks that say to the folks in this country: We believe if you are in the top 1 percent, you ought to get $22,900 back in tax refunds each year because we think you contribute the most to this country. And if you happen to be in the lowest 20 percent of the income earners of this country, we have designed a plan that says you are going to get about a $1.59 a month.

Is that surprising? No. It is the GOP plan from the beginning of political time. It is what they have always proposed. It is what they always fight for. It is always at the expense of every other priority.

We are going to have a big debate about this and should have a big debate. I believe some tax cuts are appropriate, if they are fashioned the right way and they don't put this country's economy at risk. But I believe they ought not come at the expense of Head Start, education, health care and so many other key priorities, and especially paying down the debt during good economic times and making sure we extend the life and solvency of Medicare and Social Security. That ought to be part of the priority that comes out of this Chamber as well. That is what we will try to force in this debate on tax breaks in the coming days.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. JOHNSON addressed the Chair.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from South Dakota.

Mr. JOHNSON. Mr. President, does the Senator from North Dakota control the time?

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Illinois controls the time.

Mr. DURBIN. I inquire of the Senator from South Dakota how much time he would like to have.

Mr. JOHNSON. I ask the Senator from Illinois for 10 minutes.

Mr. DURBIN. I yield 10 minutes to the Senator from South Dakota.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator is recognized for 10 minutes.

Mr. JOHNSON. Mr. President, on the floor of the other body today and coming to the floor of the Senate this coming week is going to be legislation having to do with taxation, having to do with tax cuts. Just when we think we have seen just about everything in terms of irresponsibility and foolishness, we see something literally taking the cake. We are seeing some pandering irresponsibility of record proportions that would be so serious and so injurious to this Nation's economic future and to the priorities of this country that we simply have to begin to speak about this issue today.

What does this issue revolve around? It revolves around the Congressional Budget Office's projections that we will have about a $964 billion budget surplus over the coming 10 years, over and above what is needed for Social Security. Those are projections 10 years out, incredibly tenuous given the fact that in the past we haven't been able to make projections for a year out that have been accurate, much less for 10 years. But nonetheless, that is the baseline for this debate.

Given the economic prosperity this administration has brought us, particularly the 1993 Budget Act, passed without a single Republican vote in either body, we do have a unique opportunity now to do some extraordinary things for ourselves and for the coming generation of Americans in terms of eliminating the accumulated Federal debt, make some key investments and, yes, assisting with some targeted tax relief to those families who need it most.

But what do we see coming to us from the other body? What do we see coming on this floor this coming week? We see a tax plan from our Republican majority friends suggesting that with this $964 billion, if you even believe it is going to happen, first of all, nothing be set aside for the preservation and the strengthening of Medicare, nothing.

Second, in order to give essentially this entire amount of money back as tax relief—primarily to the most wealthy people who are making the political contributions in this body; the typical American family gets about a buck a week tax relief—we will have to then reduce over the coming 10 years defense spending buying power by about 17 percent, at a time when we are having a hard time trying to figure out how to maintain our security responsibilities around the world as it is. This tax package would assume, then, that we will have a 23-percent reduction in domestic spending buying power over the coming 10 years.

If you buy into this tax package, that means you close veterans hospitals. That means you have significant reductions in Head Start programs, education programs. That means you give up on the idea we will have some sort of partnership for rebuilding our schools and bringing new technology into our schools. It means gutting education and agricultural programs. It means severe cuts in parks, law enforcement, in medical research, all the things most Americans think are crucial to our Federal, State and local, public and private partnerships that make this the great country it is.

On top of that, if you think that is not bad enough, there is zero set aside for the reduction of the accumulated Federal national debt we have accumulated over the 200-year history of this country but which primarily came about during the 1980s, during the Reagan and Bush years and now stands at $5.6 trillion. It does nothing to buy down that existing debt.

And if the decision is made down the road we are not going to knock defense spending down by 17 percent, then the consequence of that, under this plan, would be that we would have to reduce domestic spending—Head Start, education, parks, law enforcement, medical research, VA hospitals, agriculture, all that range of initiatives, by 38 percent.

This is a radical, extremist agenda for the Nation. The American people deserve better than this.

Just when you think that is as bad as things can get, you look at the way this tax package is constructed, with the tax reductions, especially back loaded for the very wealthy, and then what do you find on the next page? Not only have you given up your entire domestic agenda, not only have you done nothing to reduce the accumulated Federal deficit, not only have you done nothing for Medicare, but the cost of this recipe explodes to double the cost in the next 10 years. What a radical agenda. It would be foolish, were it not so serious and so injurious to our Nation.

Then one last thought: The Federal Reserve has recently raised interest rates by about a quarter percent. Some are attempting in this tax package to put one foot on the gas while the other foot is on the brake. If we were to do this, the obvious next consequence would be a significant increase in interest rates by the Federal Reserve. There is already a rise in interest rates now, without any tax cut whatever. That is a silent tax on every American.

On every parent who wants to send a child to college or a vocational school, and on everyone who wants to buy a house, or buy a car, or a farmer who wants to finance his operation, or a businessperson who wants to expand his business and create new jobs, that is a killing tax. It is a higher interest rate as a consequence of this incredible irresponsibility that we see going on in the House today and coming to the Senate this coming week.

Thank goodness for the future of America President Clinton has indicated he will veto this nonsense. But wouldn't it be better if we could work together in a bipartisan fashion on a constructive, positive agenda that, yes, would provide some tax relief to working class people, working families, the families who struggle to make a car payment, a house payment, and to keep jeans and tennis shoes on the kids, the people who make the economy go. Let's provide tax relief there, but let's pay down some of the national debt, which is probably the single-best thing we can do in any kind of budget plan. We should make sure we make key investments in education, in Head Start, in medical research, and keep the VA hospitals open. We can do all of these things with thoughtful balance and moderation. But moderation seems to be the last thing in the world our Republican friends want to bring to either the other body or this floor in terms of tax and budget agendas.

I think where you put your money says a great deal about the character of any government because rhetoric is cheap. Everybody is for everything around here, until it is time to put some money where your mouth is and do the balancing that needs to be done. That is what we see not happening on the other side. What we are seeing is pandering and irresponsibility and radical agendas that may make a statement for the coming elections. Who knows? It seems to me it makes a very negative statement.

But we deserve better than that. This Nation deserves better, and this Nation needs better than that. We need to come up with a budget and tax reduction package that is moderate, thoughtful, and deals with some of the tax relief that is needed but makes investments that are needed and pays down the accumulated Federal debt. That will keep the cost of money down and make it easier to send a kid to college or vocational school, buy a house, buy a car, or keep a farming or ranching operation going, all of those things, if we make the right decisions.

But this is a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity. Many of us thought, in the years we have had the opportunity to serve in Congress, several things would never happen in our lifetime: The fall of the Berlin Wall, the collapse of the Soviet Union, and the possibility that we would ever be on the floor arguing about what to do about budget surpluses. We have that opportunity. Let's not waste that opportunity.

Let's take a thoughtful, constructive, positive approach to how to use those dollars as we embark on this next millennium and revisit this tax package so we emerge from this debate with a package that, in fact, does address the priorities that I think the American people want us to address, and that does it, hopefully, in a bipartisan fashion and in a way that will leave our economy stronger and leave our families stronger going into the coming century than we are now and, certainly, far stronger than what would happen if we tragically actually passed and enacted the tax agenda that we see occurring on the House floor today and is coming to this body next week.

I yield back my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ROBERTS). The Senator from Illinois is recognized.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, how much time remains on the Democratic side?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 11 minutes 30 seconds.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, I thank the Chair and I thank the Senator from South Dakota.

Yogi Berra, one of the greatest "political philosophers" of all time, may have said, "This is deja vu all over again." If he didn't say it, he should have because this debate that you are hearing on the floor of the Senate is almost a carbon copy of the debate of 1981. Think about that for a moment. We were in the first year of the Reagan Presidency. We had accumulated, in the entire history of the United States of America, $1 trillion in debt, and the Republican Party came to the floor and said now is the time for a massive tax cut. Their supporters cheered, they enacted their massive tax cut, and what happened? Two significant things:

First, we saw a dramatic increase in the national debt. A $1 trillion accumulated debt in the entire history of the United States grew into more than $4 trillion over the span of the Reagan and Bush Presidencies because of that 1981 decision.

Second, it was such a bad decision that the American economy struggled from recession to recession. That is what happened the last time the Republican Party brought their vision of America to the floor of the Congress.

In 1992, the American voters said: Enough; this isn't working. We want a change. And they elected the Clinton-Gore administration, which, in 1993, came to Congress and said: Let us try to get back on the right track; let us try to reduce the deficits on an annual basis, and let us try to get the economy moving again.

You should have heard the Republican Senators who came to the floor—the same ones who begged for a tax cut when the Clinton plan was debated.

Remember, not a single Republican Senator or House Member voted for that plan. Some of the things they said are absolutely classic. The Senator from Texas, PHIL GRAMM, who is very outspoken in favor of this tax cut, said of the Clinton plan:

I want to predict tonight that if we adopt this bill, the American economy is going to get weaker and not stronger, the deficit 4 years from today will be higher than it is today.

That was PHIL GRAMM of Texas, August 5, 1993. Completely wrong. Completely wrong.

The Clinton plan passed, and two things happened. Annual deficits started to come down, and, in addition to that, the economy started moving forward. Just look at the news. You don't have to believe a politician. Unemployment is down. Housing starts are up.

Business starts are up. Inflation is under control. America is moving forward, and we can feel it. Consumer confidence and business confidence is at an all-time high.

Two years ago, if you would have come to this Senate Chamber, the Republican Members were so despondent over the deficits that they wanted to amend the Constitution. That isn't done very often in America, but they said: We need to pass a balanced budget amendment. Why? So the Federal courts can force Congress not to overspend. A constitutional amendment to give a Federal judge the power to stop Congress from spending because deficits were out of control. That was only 2 years ago.

Now what debate do we hear on the floor? It isn't about deficits and constitutional amendments; it is about the surplus and tax cuts. And I have to tell you, quite honestly, the Republican agenda is out of control. What they are suggesting now is a $1 trillion tax cut that, frankly, will not only imperil the state of our economy but also could drive us right back into deficits again. How will we pay for that?

I would like to yield to the Senator from California because she made an observation that I think should be part of the record of this debate. I yield to her for a question.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I thank my colleague very much for his very fine summation of where we are.

It is amazing to me to see how far we have come in this economy, from the worst of all days when people were despondent. I remember when President George Bush went to Japan and he became ill, and it became kind of a symbol of what was wrong with this country. We went to Japan to find out how they were doing it and what was wrong with our country. Why could we not get our economy under control? Now we finally have it under control. It is in the best place it has been for generations, as my friend has shown us, in terms of employment, in terms of job creation, in terms of no more deficit, in terms of being able to finally pay down the debt, in terms of housing starts and business starts—you name it—inflation. It is all going right.

What do our friends say? Whoops. Let's change course. We finally have it right, but let's turn around and go back to the bad old days.

It is amazing to me. I want to ask my friend a question about the so-called surplus. I was rather stunned to see my chairman, Senator DOMENICI, of the Budget Committee, for whom I have great respect, hold a press conference yesterday and tell the press that there is a $3 trillion surplus. I sort of thought maybe I misheard it. He repeated it four times, at least. He said there is a $3 trillion surplus. Therefore, all we are giving is a $1 trillion tax cut. It is a very small part of the overall surplus.

Don't the American people deserve a refund?

I want to ask my friend a couple of questions. Is it not true that $2 trillion of that $3 trillion so-called surplus is Social Security? It isn't anyone else's; it belongs to Social Security. Is my friend in agreement with me on that point?

Mr. DURBIN. The Senator from California is right because we are not dealing with a real surplus. We are dealing with a surplus in the Social Security trust fund which the Republican Party now wants to give away as a tax cut. Does that make sense? Does it make sense to any of us paying into Social Security, or those who hope to derive some benefit from it, at this point in time to decide to spend Social Security funds to give a tax cut?

I might say to the Senator from California: Look at the tax cut. There they go again. The Republicans cannot leave well enough alone. The economy is moving forward. Annual deficits are coming down. They want to put a tax cut package in place.

And look carefully at the winners under the Republican tax cut plan. For Mr. Bill Gates, good news. If you are in the top 1 percent, for the Republican tax, a cut of $22,000 a year—not bad. Will he notice?

But, look, if you are in the lowest 20 percent of average wage earners in America, under the Republican tax cut plan, listen to this, $22 a year—not bad—$22 a year for the average working family in America, and $22,000 for Mr. Trump and Mr. Gates.

There they go again.

Mrs. BOXER. Will my friend yield? I want him to know something. That $22,000 a year, back to the top 1 percent, is an average, I say to my friend. I can assure you that Mr. Trump and Mr. Gates will get far more than that in a refund.

As we discussed yesterday on this floor, when you think of people who work at the minimum wage and get dirt under their nails, and work hard and sometimes have two jobs, that average refund to the top 1 percent is twice as much as they earn in 1 year. There they go again. It is right on target.

I want to ask another question of my friend. We don't have a $3 trillion surplus because we already agreed that $2 trillion belongs to Social Security. That leaves $1 trillion. We know Medicare is in trouble. We know Social Security and Medicare are the twin pillars of the safety net. What good does it do someone on Social Security if they know they get that but their Medicare premium is going to go up so high that they can't afford to buy their food or pay their rent? So we need to take care of Medicare. How much is in the Republican plan to save Medicare?

Mr. DURBIN. The answer is clear. Zero. Medicare is a word about which the Republicans don't want to talk. They don't want to use it. Yet we all know that, unless we do something significant for the Medicare program, by the year 2015 this program will be bankrupt and 40 million Americans, elderly and disabled, who rely on Medicare for their health insurance have a time of reckoning that is just over the horizon.

We on the Democratic side believe that if there is going to be any surplus, as the President has suggested, we should dedicate it, first, to any surplus we realize to Social Security; second, to Medicare; and, third, to reducing the national debt.

I ask you: Which is the party of fiscal conservatism?

Listen to this debate: $1 trillion taken out of funds such as the Social Security trust fund to give away to the wealthiest of Americans, which is the Republican plan, or the Democratic plan, which says to take care of priorities—reducing our debt, reducing our need to appropriate money each year for interest on the debt, and making sure that Medicare and Social Security are strong enough to survive.

I think our position is not only fiscally conservative but I think it is fiscally sane. Others will characterize an alternative.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield?

Mr. DURBIN. Yes.

Mr. DORGAN. I wanted to ask the Senator from Illinois if it is not the case that the proposal by the Republicans for very significant tax cuts, much of which will go to the upper income folks, would mean that they have nothing for debt reduction? Isn't it the case that in tough economic times—for example, when we passed the Deficit Reduction Act in 1993, with no help from the other side and not one vote even—in tough economic times your debt increases? During good economic times, you ought to reduce the debt. Isn't it the case that this fiscal policy plan of theirs provides nothing for debt reduction during good economic times? Is that fiscal conservatism?

Mr. DURBIN. It is fiscal insanity. I would say to the Senator from North Dakota that we hope this economy will continue to progress.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time of the distinguished Senator has expired.

Mr. DURBIN. I ask unanimous consent for 30 additional seconds.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DURBIN. I say to the Senator from North Dakota that if we are going to prepare ourselves for the future, we have to prepare for the possibility of a reduction. I don't think that is wild-eyed thinking.

The Republican plan makes no contingency plan that suggests we might have a downturn in the economy. We should be reducing the debt and pledging our surplus, whatever it may be, to reducing that debt and making certain Social Security and Medicare are there for years to come.

I yield the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senator from Maine is recognized to speak for up to 10 minutes.

The distinguished Senator is recognized.

Ms. COLLINS. Thank you, Mr. President.

I further ask unanimous consent that the time reserved for the Senator from Ohio, Mr. VOINOVICH, be given to the Senator from Ohio, Mr. DEWINE.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(The remarks of Ms. COLLINS and Mr. DEWINE pertaining to the introduction of S. 1412 are located in today's RECORD under "Statements on Introduced Bills and Joint Resolutions.")

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative assistant proceed to call the roll.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

CONCLUSION OF MORNING BUSINESS

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Morning business is closed.

DEPARTMENTS OF COMMERCE, JUSTICE, AND STATE, THE JUDICIARY, AND RELATED AGENCIES APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 2000

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate will now resume consideration of S. 1217, which the clerk will report.

The legislative assistant read as follows:

A bill (S. 1217) making appropriations for the Departments of Commerce, Justice, and State, the Judiciary, and related agencies for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2000, and for other purposes.

Pending:

Gregg amendment No. 1272, to extend the Violent Crime Reduction Trust Fund through fiscal year 2005.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The pending business is amendment No. 1272, on which there will be 1 hour of debate equally divided.

The distinguished Senator from New Hampshire is recognized.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, under the unanimous consent agreement from last night, we were going to reserve 30 minutes of the time for two Democratic Members of the Senate, Senator LEAHY and Senator BIDEN. Senator BIDEN and Senator LEAHY had 30 minutes of this time. I now ask unanimous consent that the final 10 minutes of the time be reserved for myself, and prior to that, the 10 minutes prior to that, be reserved for the Senator from South Carolina.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum and ask the time be allocated to the underlying amendment and charged equally against both sides.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative assistant proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

PRIVILEGE OF THE FLOOR

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, on behalf of the Senator from Delaware, Mr. BIDEN, I ask that Andrew Kline be granted the privilege of the floor during consideration of this measure.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. HOLLINGS. I suggest the absence of a quorum under the same arrangement, the time charged to both sides.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative assistant proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. DEWINE). Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I be allowed to speak as in morning business for 7 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered. The Senator is recognized.

Mr. HARKIN. First of all, I take this time because I want to talk a little bit about the plight of American agriculture and our Nation's farmers and to talk about a bill that I will be introducing shortly.

U.S. CAPITOL POLICE

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, like so many of my fellow Senators, I just came from the memorial service that took place in Statuary Hall for the two police officers, Detective Gibson and Officer Chestnut, who gave their lives 1 year ago defending the Capitol and those of us who work in these hallowed Halls.

I just got to thinking, when I was there watching all of the uniformed police officers standing so gallantly up on the platform, what a tough job these policemen have, what a terribly tough job they have.

On the one hand, because of the very nature of our jobs, we have to be accessible; we have to expose ourselves to the public on a daily basis, whether it is out in the front of the Capitol or over in the grass or walking between offices. We have to be available and accessible to the public. The police officers have to let us be accessible. We cannot put a shield around us.

On the other hand, it is the police officers' sworn duty to protect us and to keep us safe from harm.

All police officers have a tough job in this country. I think, above all, the police officers who work in and around the Capitol have the toughest job of all because they have these two conflicting responsibilities—to make us accessible, to not put shields around us, to keep this an open, public place, to be the shrine of freedom, and, on the other hand, to protect us and defend us from harm.

I just must say, I am as guilty as anyone; I never take the time to thank the police officers who protect us. We pass by them every day. We go in and out of the doors. We see them on the subway. We exchange pleasantries.

I am going to make an extra special effort from now on just to say thank you to these police officers, the men and women who protect us daily in the Capitol and who, as Officers Chestnut and Gibson showed a year ago, are willing to lay down their lives for us. We should thank them every day. I do so now and will make a special effort to do so in the future.

(The remarks of Mr. HARKIN pertaining to the introduction of legislation is located in today's RECORD under "Statements on Introduced Bills and Joint Resolutions.")

TRIBUTE TO JOHN F. KENNEDY, JR., CAROLYN BESSETTE KENNEDY, AND LAUREN BESSETTE

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, I rise with great sadness today to pay tribute to the lives of John F. Kennedy, Jr., his wife Carolyn, and her sister, Lauren Bessette. My thoughts and prayers are with these families, for at this very moment, as we know, they are at sea to bring these wonderful, outstanding young Americans to a final rest.

We in the Senate, of course, feel very close to this tragedy because of our affection for our own colleague, Senator TED KENNEDY. We in Maryland feel very close to this family because we are the home to Eunice and Sarge Shriver, to Mark Shriver, who has taken his place in the House of Delegates, and our own Lt. Gov. Kathleen Kennedy Townsend, who lost a brother just a few months ago. As the eldest of the Kennedy cousins, she has endured much. She is living a life of service that certainly would make her father as proud as those of us in Maryland.

The entire Kennedy family has suffered so much. They have also given so much. It is a family of war heroes, Senators, Congressmen, and a President of the United States. They are also defenders of the poor, environmentalists, educators, and artists. They fight to give every American an opportunity to build better lives for themselves and to build stronger communities.

Many of us in this Senate were inspired to lives of public service because of John F. Kennedy. As a young social worker, I thought he was talking to me when he called our generation to service. When he said, "Ask not what your country can do for you—but what you can do for your country," I believed it. I wanted to do something. That is why I committed myself even more forcefully to my own career in social work.

He practiced passionate, active idealism that was different from anything we had seen before in politics. That is why we hoped his son would continue that legacy. In many ways he had already begun to do that.

John Kennedy, Jr., could have lived the life of the idle rich, but he did not. He worked several years as a D.A. in New York, and recently he created a magazine to bring young people into politics who were indifferent to it. He endured intense press interest with grace and good humor. It seemed as if he understood his family was a part of the lives of all Americans.

While we all know the Kennedys, we cannot forget the Bessette family. They are suffering unimaginable pain with the death of two of their daughters. Carolyn Bessette Kennedy also lived in the spotlight. She, too, handled the attention with grace and charm. She had the same passion for life as her husband. Her sister Lauren was also making her own career in investment banking.

Wherever we turn, the Kennedys have touched America. We have been there for their hopes, their dreams, and their good days. We want our dear friend, Senator KENNEDY, the entire Kennedy family, and the Bessettes to know they are not alone today. We mourn with them, and we thank them for their contributions to America and for their own call to duty and to public service.

God bless them and God bless America that we have in our midst a great legacy.

I thank the Chair.

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, I rise today to join my colleagues in expressing grief over the passing of John F. Kennedy, Jr., his wife Carolyn Bessette Kennedy, and Lauren Bessette; as well as extending condolences to the Kennedy and Bessette families over their losses.

It is difficult to express the sense of tragedy and loss that all of us feel over the passing of these three young, dynamic, and charismatic individuals. Clearly, John F. Kennedy, Jr. captured the hearts and imagination of millions of Americans, and his untimely and violent end has saddened all those who felt some sort of connection to this promising and handsome young man. Certainly the tremendous outpouring of sympathetic gestures we are witnessing in Massachusetts, New York, and here in Washington stand as testament to the high regard in which he was held.

To be frank, I did not know John F. Kennedy, Jr. all that well, though I have certainly been well acquainted with his family through the years. Here in the United States Senate, I have had the distinct pleasure and honor of serving with his father and both his uncles; and in years past, I worked closely with Representative JOE KENNEDY on an issue of great mutual concern. Clearly this is a family that values public service and has sought to make a contribution to the nation through policy, politics, and activism. The passion and intensity which the Kennedys—particularly John, Bobby, and TED—brought to Washington and directed toward their policy goals are commendable and enviable. Few people have approached their careers in government with the same vigor and enthusiasm than have the members of the Kennedy family.

Though John F. Kennedy, Jr. had not entered politics, he was someone who shared his family's desire to make a difference. He was involved in any number of philanthropic and charitable undertakings, and typical of a family that seeks to help others, he was personally involved in these endeavors. His reputation was of a sincere, kind, and high minded man. There is little doubt that had John F. Kennedy, Jr. decided to follow the path that his father, uncle, and cousins had taken and sought elected office, he would have had a bright political future and would have made an even greater mark on society and history.

There is great sadness in the fact that this tragedy not only snuffed out the promising light of John F. Kennedy, Jr., but took the lives of his wife and sister-in-law as well. It is impossible to comprehend how fate could be so cruel to these families, for these young individuals deserved to enjoy long and rich lives. Certainly, this tragedy is only intensified for the Bessettes who lost two daughters suddenly and unexpectedly, and it is impossible for any of us to truly know the grief they are feeling. Hopefully with time, they will come to some sort of peace and understanding with this inexplicable event.

Earlier today, the ashes of John F. Kennedy, Jr., his wife, and sister-in-law were committed to the sea and a sad chapter of American history is drawn to a close. To our friend and colleague, Senator TED KENNEDY, we extend our deepest condolences on the loss of your nephew and we commend you on your stoicism in exercising your responsibilities as the patriarch of your family. This was an unenviable task, yet one you carried out with dignity, strength, and reserve.

Coming to terms with death is never an easy or pleasant task, but I have always found that it is best to remember a person for the things he or she did during their life, keep that person in your heart and mind, and to try and honor their memory in your actions. If people follow this course with John F. Kennedy, Jr., I think that they will remember a man who tried to make a difference with his life, and hopefully they will be inspired to emulate his commitment to public service.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, for several days, we have waited anxiously for evidence of news I did not want to believe. I did not want to believe that tragedy could come again to the Kennedy family. I did not want to believe that the Bessette family could lose two beautiful daughters in one tragic accident. But as of yesterday afternoon, I was confronted with reality. I am profoundly saddened by the tragic death of John F. Kennedy, Jr. and his wife, Carolyn Bessette Kennedy, and her sister, Lauren.

My relationship with President Kennedy goes back almost 40 years. In 1960, I formed the first Young Democrats organization at Utah State University and worked hard as a young college student for the election of President John F. Kennedy. On the wall in my Senate office, I have a letter from Senator Kennedy written a few weeks written a few weeks before his inauguration as President in 1961. That letter is a thoughtful and considerate note thanking me for my efforts as a campus organizer.

As a young law student in Washington, I worked at night as a Capitol Police Officer. On more than one occasion, I remember President Kennedy's visit to the Capitol. In fact, in my capacity as a police officer, I walked past President Kennedy's casket while it laid in state in the Capitol Rotunda.

For three generations, the Kennedy family has contributed much to the political and cultural life of our Nation. Three members of the Kennedy family have served the Nation as U.S. Senators, and other members have served in the U.S. House of Representatives, the Ambassadorial Corp and other important positions of state. They also serve as leaders, in business and in the world of cultural affairs.

Historians will one day write that the Kennedy family is the most remarkable family in our Nation's history. They have endured tragedy after tragedy. But despite adversity, this family has persevered and found the will and strength to make our nation a better place. Since the presidency of John F. Kennedy, the Kennedy family has become part of the American family. For us in government, the Kennedy family is synonymous with the finest in American politics. They inspire us to dream; they teach us to enjoy life; they make us feel noble.

John F. Kennedy, Jr. had large shoes to fill as the son of a great President and a beautiful, elegant and strong mother. While John F. Kennedy, Jr. was born into the privilege and the fame of his family, he handled it better than anyone I know. His dignity, his sense of style, his connection to ordinary people was unsurpassed.

Finally, I admire the strength and courage of my friend and colleague, Senator TED KENNEDY. Senator KENNEDY is the patriarch of this great family. He has served the Nation and the people of Massachusetts with distinction in the U.S. Senate for almost four decades and the people of Massachusetts have repeatedly shown their gratitude for his service. Senator KENNEDY has given much to this country and yet he has never forgotten the legacy of his distinguished family. To Senator KENNEDY, to the entire Kennedy family, and to the Bessette family, I extend my condolences.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, our State of New York has lost three of its finest citizens. I want to add my voice to the condolences to John Kennedy's sister Caroline, to his entire family, and to his wife's family, as well, for their double loss. Anyone who knew these three people knew they were the finest of New Yorkers and the finest of Americans. They were decent people; they were concerned people; they were people who cared about average folks.

As was noted, John, in particular, would never go by somebody and make them feel they were less significant than he was, despite his enormous wealth, attractiveness, good looks, his grace, and everything else about him. He and his wife were a man and woman of grace. I am told that her sister was as well, although I did not know her.

So we in New York particularly mourn our loss. John had become a real New Yorker, and the Bessette girls always were. There is nothing we can do but pray that they have met their final reward, and that the wounds that are so deep in their families, with God's help, heal quickly.

DEPARTMENTS OF COMMERCE,
JUSTICE, AND STATE, THE JUDI-
CIARY AND RELATED AGENCIES
APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 2000—Continued

AMENDMENT NO. 1217

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Delaware.

Mr. BIDEN. What is the business of the Senate now?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The regular order is the Gregg amendment No. 1217.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, I understand I have a few minutes to speak, and I will take only a few minutes right now and reserve the remainder of the time when I have completed.

I want to be very brief at this point. Mr. President, I want to separate out two aspects of the Gregg amendment: One I wish to compliment him on, and one I am going to remain silent on. The one part I want to compliment him on is that I think the reauthorization of the violent crime trust fund for another 5 years is the single-most significant thing we could do to continue the war on crime.

In 1994, when we introduced the Biden crime bill, which eventually became the crime bill of 1994 which had the 100,000 cops in it, the Violence Against Women Act, and many other things, toward the end of that debate, with the significant help of the senior Senator from Texas, Mr. GRAMM, who didn't like many aspects of my bill, and the senior Senator from West Virginia, Mr. BYRD, who did like the bill, we all agreed on what was viewed as sort of a revolutionary idea—that crime control was the single-most undisputable responsibility of the Federal Government domestically. We can argue about whether there should be welfare. We can argue about whether we should be involved in education. But no one can argue about the requirement of the Government of the United States to make the streets safe. That is the starting point for all ordered society.

So we had an idea, and the three of us joined together to set up a violent crime trust fund. The way we did that was not to raise taxes for America because everybody kept saying: BIDEN, your bill, over the next 5 years, is going to cost over $30 billion. They were right. Putting 100,000 cops on the street costs a lot. Building thousands of new prison cells costs a lot. Spending money on prevention costs a lot. The total of the Biden crime bill was about $30 billion over 5 years in 1994 when I introduced it.

They said: How are we going to pay for it? None of us likes telling the citizens the truth. We all like lying to you, telling you we are going to find a magic way to do this that is not going to cost you any money. The American public wants safer streets, and they have gotten them, I might add. Crime has gone down significantly every year since the crime bill was introduced. I am not claiming it is only because of that, but it is in large part because of that.

So the way we reached this accord was Senator GRAMM, who wanted to see the size of the Federal Government cut even more urgently than—I will speak for myself—even more urgently than I did—we codified, as part of this deal, the agreement that we would let 250,000 Federal employees go. We would shrink the size of the Federal Government. And we did.

The second part of the agreement I wanted was that the paycheck we used to pay the person working in the Justice Department or in the Defense Department or at IRS, who was not going to be rehired, we take John Jones' paycheck and put it into a trust fund to do nothing but deal with violent crime in America. Not an innovative notion—that concept of a trust fund—but it is fairly radical in terms of applying a Social Security-type trust fund—only this does have a lockbox—a trust fund of dedicated revenues to deal with nothing but crime.

The good news about that and the reason I felt so strongly about that at the time I wrote the bill was it is the one place no one can compete. If it is in general funds—and to people who don't share my view about the single-most important responsibility of Government is to maintain order—it is in competition. If it is general revenues, the COPS Program or the prevention programs or building prisons is in competition with money for education, money for the space program, money for the Defense Department, and money for every other function of the Government. By having this trust fund, though, it is not in competition with anything. It is there. It is set aside. It is similar to a savings account to fight crime.

I respectfully suggest that it worked. Now, under the Biden crime bill, which is due to expire this year, the trust fund will end. This special, dedicated pot of money that nobody can compete for, which is not paid for by raising taxes, is paid for by not lowering taxes because it is legitimate to say: BIDEN, if you eliminate the trust funds, you can take John Jones' paycheck, the guy who left the Treasury Department in 1997, and you can give it back to the taxpayers as a tax cut.

That is true. But I choose safe streets over tax cuts. The tax cut would be minuscule, I might add.

So when I heard that my friend from New Hampshire was taking language essentially the same as the Hatch-Biden bill that passed out of here in juvenile justice, the same as the language I have been reintroducing everywhere I can and in every bill I can in the last 4 years, I thought not only is he an enlightened fellow but there has been a bit of an epiphany, that, my Lord, the powerful chairman of the subcommittee of the Appropriations Committee has seen the Lord, has seen the light, and I was overjoyed.

So I said to my staff: I am going to go up there and compliment him. Literally, I said this this morning. They said: Don't be so quick. I said: Why? They said: There is a little kicker here.

The kicker is once this amendment that you, BIDEN, have fought so hard for over the last 12 years, even before the crime bill was passed—once it is adopted, there will be a little amendment attached to it that has to do with the way this place functions procedurally, affecting how we can move substantively.

I will not speak to that. I will only say and plead with my friend from New Hampshire, if and when the second issue is resolved, however it is resolved, that he not walk away from the substantive beauty of his amendment as it relates to the trust fund. I don't want to get into a fight with him about legislating on appropriations and second amendments and the rest. I want to say to him publicly that I truly appreciate the practical impact of reestablishing the violent crime trust fund, if we can do it.

I hope in this procedural fight that is above my pay grade right now, which is about to take place, that a casualty of this fight will not end up being us committing for another 5 years to do what we did in the last 5 years—bringing crime in America down. The way to do that is to guarantee that the law enforcement agencies of the United States for 5 years do not have to compete with anybody, and we don't have to raise anybody's taxes. We are taking those old paychecks, and we are going to continue to make a deposit, similar to a trust fund in a family, for cops, for prisons, and for prevention.

Mr. GREGG. If the Senator will yield, I appreciate the kind words of the Senator, and I am duly thankful for those words. As a result, I can tell the Senator I am committed to trying to get this authorization, in some manner, in this bill when it returns to Congress—should this bill ever make it to conference, which is very much an issue at this time.

Mr. BIDEN. I truly appreciate that because I, quite frankly, think—and this is presumptuous of me to say because you know as much about these issues as I do, clearly—this is the single-most significant thing we can do to continue the successful fight against crime. I authored it, so you might say there is pride of authorship here. But I didn't do this alone. The distinguished Senator from Texas and the distinguished Senator from West Virginia were really the ones who made it happen. I hope, in a bipartisan way, we can continue the funding mechanism. I thank him for his comments. If I have any time, I reserve it.

I yield the floor.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the time continue to run on this amendment equally divided, and I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, how much time is left on the amendment?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Approximately 5 minutes.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, at the end of that 5 minutes, I understand there will be 20 minutes, 10 minutes for the Senator from South Carolina and 10 minutes for myself.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ASHCROFT). Without objection, it is so ordered.

PRIVILEGE OF THE FLOOR

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that Dan Alpert, who is a fellow in my office, be granted privileges of the floor during the consideration of S. 1217.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I be allowed to speak for up to 10 minutes as in morning business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, I have come to the floor to speak about what I see as a funding shortfall for the 2000 census.

First, I compliment Chairman GREGG and Senator HOLLINGS for their work on this bill. I fully appreciate the very tight budget constraints under which they have been working. However, I want to make sure all Senators also know that, even though we will soon pass this appropriations bill, our work is not yet finished.

Census day, which is April 1 of the year 2000, is less than 9 months away. Still today, at this late date, this bill lacks sufficient funding to adequately conduct the 2000 census.

The Founding Fathers recognized the importance of a fair and accurate count of the population. Article I, section 2 of the Constitution provides that Congress is to conduct a decennial census "in such Manner as they shall by Law direct." In fact, the census is one of the few actions that is mandated by the Constitution.

Let me take a few minutes to discuss the importance of a full and accurate census for all Americans.

Data from the 2000 census will be used to apportion House seats among the States for the 108th through the 112th Congresses. The States also use census data to draw legislative districts for congressional seats as well as for State and local representatives. In addition, Federal, State, and local governments use census information to guide annual distribution of the $180 billion of Federal funds for critical services such as child care, Social Security, Medicare, education, and job training.

By now, we have all heard details of the serious shortcomings of the 1990 census. In fact, at the time of the 1990 census, many of us spent many days and hours trying to ensure that a fair census was taken. Mr. President, 8.4 million people were missed in that census, and 4.4 million were counted twice.

In my State of New Mexico, we suffered the highest undercount of any single State. There were nearly 50,000 New Mexicans left out of the census in 1990 and 20,000 of them were children. The worst undercounts were among our Native American and Hispanic communities. A recent General Accounting Office estimate found that the 1990 census shortchanged my State of New Mexico at least $86 million in much-needed Federal grants.

The Census Bureau has made substantial efforts to avoid a repetition of the undercounts that have hurt my State in the past decade. I applaud the Bureau's efforts to reach out to every resident in New Mexico, particularly the extra efforts they have made to count everyone in the Hispanic and the Native American communities. In Spanish, the motto is: "Hagarse Contar!"—"make yourself count." For Native American communities, I cannot give you the Navajo or Taos version of that, but clearly the slogan is "generations are counting on this; don't leave it blank."

So I think everyone agrees that a full and fair census must be our goal. Congress must appropriate all of the funds necessary to produce that full and fair census. The census is not a place where we should be cutting corners. It is time to put partisan politics aside to give the professionals in the Census Bureau the resources they need to get the job done.

Indeed, the appropriations bill on the floor today does provide nearly $2.8 billion for the 2000 census. This is the full amount in the President's original budget. I thank the chairman for providing the Census Bureau's full initial request.

However, as all Senators know, the Supreme Court ruled that under current statutes only a traditional head count may be used for apportionment of House seats among the States. In response to the ruling, the Census Bureau requested an additional $1.7 billion to provide the best census possible using only the traditional method.

The additional funds were requested to cover the Bureau's additional workload, advertising, staffing, and data processing required to perform this actual head count which the Supreme Court has interpreted the Constitution to require.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a detailed list of the additional costs for a head count be printed in the RECORD at the conclusion of my remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(See Exhibit No. 1.)

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, at this point this appropriations bill does not provide any of the additional funding that the Census Bureau has requested in response to the Supreme Court's January ruling. In fairness to the chairman and the ranking member, and the members of the committee, the Census Bureau's revised request did not arrive until very late in the process. Consequently, the subcommittee may not have had sufficient time to review the supplemental request and conduct the normal oversight hearings. I understand the subcommittee intends to consider the Census Bureau's supplemental funding request in the near future. I thank the chairman for moving forward promptly and for working on this issue in a spirit of bipartisanship.

What worries me is that even with the additional funds required for a head count, in all likelihood we will still fall well short of counting everyone and, as in the 1990 census, the undercount will hurt certain population groups the most. However, I have not come to the floor today to debate which enumeration method the Census Bureau should use. Except for apportionment, the Bureau will alleviate the undercount problem by using modern scientific methods. This is the only way to assure that States such as New Mexico will not be shortchanged again.

The Supreme Court ruled the 2000 census must include a full head count. I believe Congress has an obligation to provide all the funds required.

I appreciate the very tight budget situation in which we find ourselves. Time is getting short. Again, I thank the chairman and the ranking member for their continued bipartisan work on this appropriations bill, and I hope that they can move quickly to provide the supplemental funds required for the 2000 census.

EXHIBIT No. 1

ADDITIONAL COSTS FOR A NON-SAMPLING CENSUS

On January 25, 1999, the Supreme Court ruled that the Census Act bars the use of statistical sampling for purposes of apportionment. Additional funds are therefore needed to cover the increased workload of a non-sampling census, principally follow-up visits to an additional 16 million households (50 percent more than under the sampling design).

The President's Budget requests $2.8 billion in FY 2000 to conduct a sampling-based decennial census. The budget amendment will request $1,723 million. Major elements of the $1,723 million are discussed below:

$954M for non-response follow-up.—To get responses from all households that do not answer the mail survey, Census will hire more enumerators and will expand non-response follow-up to ten weeks, four weeks more than expected in the previous census design. Training will be increased by half a day to sustain quality with a larger workforce, and each of the 520 Local Census Offices will be provided additional staff. For purposes of quality control, Census will randomly re-interview addresses to verify the data gathered during non-response follow-up.

$268M for data collection infrastructure.—The larger workforce also requires that Local Census Office have additional space, phone lines, information technology support, supplies, recruiting materials and advertisements, and related items.

$229M for coverage improvement efforts.—The Census Bureau will conduct coverage interviews where forms appear to have deficiencies (e.g., forms lacking complete information on all household members reported) as well as a program to recheck approximately 7.6 million vacant housing units initially classified as vacant or nonexistent and new construction.

$219M for a variety of data collection operations, including:

$96M in rural areas without street addresses (where surveys are delivered to households by Census rather than the Postal Service) for quality checks before the census date and related activities. Census has learned through its address listing program that this workload will be five million household units larger than originally estimated.

$56M for activities including special enumeration methods in remote areas and field verification for the "Be Counted" program (which distributes census forms in post offices and other public places) to reduce duplicate and erroneous responses.

$42M for enumerating soup kitchens, shelters, and similar facilities. This work will require advance visits as well as two enumerators per facility at census time.

$25M to redeliver questionnaires where the Postal Service designated forms as undeliverable (e.g., areas where zip code boundaries have changed recently). The Census Bureau anticipates a workload of five million addresses.

$14M to keep all the data processing centers open longer.—The four data processing centers will remain open through September 30, 2000, and process a higher volume of data.

$89M for advertising and promotion efforts.—Additional advertising and promotion, including more materials for schools, non-profits, and State and local governments, are intended to increase the speed and rate of response and public cooperation.

Offsets from reduced sample size.—Because the sampling portion of the census will now be based on larger geographic units, the sample size for the Accuracy and Coverage Evaluation (A.C.E.) program (i.e., sampling) can be reduced without compromising accuracy. Reducing the sampling size for A.C.E. will save $214M relative to the request in the President's Budget.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, I rise today to discuss my concerns about appropriations for the census—an issue that is critical for the State of California and for the Nation.

The Commerce, Justice, and State Appropriations bill for FY 2000 allocates $2.8 billion for census operations. It does not include the additional $1.7 billion that the Administration requested to pay for its revised census plan. This funding shortfall will certainly result in an undercount in the 2000 Census.

In the 1990 Census, California lost $2.2 billion because not everyone was counted, and that's not fair. Although the Administration's request was submitted late in the appropriations process, it is crucial that we equip the Census Bureau with the funds necessary to make the Census 2000 as accurate as possible. How can the Census Bureau do its best to carry out an accurate census in 2000, if they do not have the appropriate resources? We can be sure that the Census 2000 will fail if the Census Bureau does not have the extra $1.7 billion it needs for this operation.

The census has real impact on the lives of people across the Nation. Information gathered from the census count determines how nearly $200 billion of federal funds are allocated. In addition, census information is used by states and local governments to plan schools and highways, and by businesses in making their economic plans.

The 1990 Census undercounted the U.S. population by more than eight million Americans (mostly children, the poor, and communities of color), and more than four million Americans were counted twice. In California alone, the 1990 Census missed more than 834,000 people. A disproportionate number of those undercounted in California were minorities: Nearly half the net undercount—47 percent—were Hispanic-American. Twenty-two percent were African-American and eight percent were Asian Pacific-American. Such differences in census coverage introduce inequities in political representation and in the distribution of funds. Communities from these undercounted ethnic minority populations have been disadvantaged by not receiving the resources they need for various government programs.

A recent study by the General Accounting Office estimates that the economic consequences of the undercount in California caused my state to lose over $2.2 billion in federal funds, more than any other state and more than the additional appropriations requested by the Administration. As a result, the state did not get its fair share of funds for Medicaid, Child Care and Development, Rehabilitation Services, Adoption Assistance, and Foster Care, to mention only a few of the federal grant programs affected. Each person missed in the census cost California $2,660 in Federal funds over the decade.

Some of the top 10 undercounted cities in the 1990 census, two of which are from my state, include:

Los Angeles (138,808); San Diego (32,483); Chicago (68,315); Houston (66,748); Dallas (37,070); Detroit (28,206); and Philadelphia (23,365).

Unless the Census Bureau is allowed to carry out its plan to produce a more accurate count than that which was produced in 1990, California and other states will again lose billions of dollars in federal assistance and will again have to subsidize federal programs with state and local tax dollars.

Since the flawed 1990 population count, the Census Bureau has worked with experts from across the country to design a more accurate census for 2000. The National Academy of Sciences, in three separate reports, concluded that the key to improving accuracy in the census is the use of sound statistical methods. Earlier this year, the Supreme Court ruled that the Census Bureau could not use statistical sampling for apportionment purposes.

Because the Census Bureau cannot use sampling, it has revised its census plan and requested additional appropriations to carry out a full enumeration census, using mail-back census forms and employing an army of bureau workers to personally and repeatedly visit those who do not respond. The Census Bureau's operational plan for carrying out the 2000 Census will be the largest peacetime effort in our nation's history, and will employ more than 860,000 temporary workers.

Mr. President, Congress must make every effort to support the Census Bureau's plan to count all Americans in 2000. The census should not be about politics. This is an issue of fairness, that impacts Americans nationwide. I urge my colleagues to support the additional $1.7 billion appropriation that the Census Bureau needs to carry out an accurate census in 2000. We must do everything we can to ensure that everyone is included in the count, and that our communities are provided with the resources we need.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative assistant proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

RULE XVI

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, in order to explain what is not happening now, I will use some leader time to advise Senators what our hopes are and why we are having a quorum at this time.

First of all, we are respecting the request of the Democratic leader to not go forward to the conclusion of the statements and any action or votes on the pending resolution so they can have a conference to discuss how to proceed.

What is involved here is my continuing effort to have the Senate correct a mistake that was made a few years ago with regard to rule XVI. Rule XVI prohibited legislation on an appropriations bill. A precedent was set, and I confess I helped set that precedent. I mistakenly voted to overrule the ruling of the Chair, and so did others, because we were so committed to the issue. It has certainly been a problem for the Senate ever since.

Both sides of the aisle use appropriations bills for every legislative amendment or bill that they might be sponsoring or something they may be harboring to get a vote on. It has really gotten to be a problem in moving appropriations bills forward. The right thing to do for the institution, the right thing to do in terms of legislative sanity, and the right thing to do for the people of this country is to have that precedent established again which would say that Senators cannot offer legislation on appropriations bills without a point of order being in order. Keep in mind, if you get 51 votes, that could be overturned, but I think it will add additional pressure on Senators not to abuse that process.

The matter pending is the Commerce, State and Justice appropriations bill, a very important bill. It provides the funds, obviously, for the Departments of Commerce, State, and Justice. A major portion of law enforcement money is in this appropriations bill. We need to move it forward.

The Senate does not always move with dispatch, but sometimes we do. On an appropriations bill, obviously, involving billions of dollars, Senators want to have a chance to review it carefully and amendments will be in order. Amendments would be in order after the vote that we are about to have or could have reestablishing rule XVI. Senators could offer amendments that relate to the bill, that take money out or put money in, or strike out sections. All of that would still be in order.

Senator DASCHLE and I have basically agreed—in fact, we have exchanged pleasantries on this rule XVI issue several times over the past few years—that this is a precedent we need to go back and correct. We had a colloquy a month or so ago in which we said, yes, this needs to be done, and we need to work together to get it done.

There is concern that the way this was done, the minority had not been given notice. But earlier this summer, the minority was aware we were going to try to reverse this precedent, and 2 or 3 days were spent trying to block us from getting an opportunity.

I don't necessarily feel we have to do it this way or do it on this bill or do it right now, but my question is, if not now, when? If not in this way, in what way?

Mr. HOLLINGS. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. LOTT. I will be glad to yield, when I complete the point. I am willing to work with both sides to try to find a way we can get this done. If there are suggestions by the Senator from South Carolina or the leader, I certainly am very interested in that.

I am not interested in any kind of a surprise action, but I am interested in trying to get some results on this which would help Senators on both sides of the aisle get the appropriations bills done. That is my only intent.

I yield to the Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. HOLLINGS. If the distinguished leader will yield, the truth is, on the contrary, we were given notice. We were told this particular violent crime trust authorization was just a place setter, a gatekeeper, so to speak, in the first degree, and we were going to voice vote it.

We were given notice that it was going to be voice voted and not use this particular maneuver to have a time agreement and, thereby, not be able to debate the rule change. So we were given notice in the other direction. We were totally misled. We were totally misled. I resent it.

Let me go back—there is no use in getting all excited. I am going back to Mississippi with the Governor, Ross Barnett. He was the first fellow to take the door off the capitol on Wednesday afternoon, and he lined them all up. Any and every citizen could come in and express his grief. And one day the trustee who cleaned up the capitol stood in line, and he said: I have to go to a funeral; my aunt just died.

And Governor Barnett said: When is that?

He said: Saturday.

I am hastening it along.

He said: All right. You can go Saturday; be back here on Monday.

And the trustee, Phillips, said: Yes, that is the truth. I will be back.

And so 2 months had passed. Phillips hadn't come back, and the press all agreed, let's just jump on Ross and get him this time. And so they said: Governor, wait a minute; where is the trustee and everything else? And old Ross just laid back and said: If you can't trust the trustee, who can you trust?

If I can't trust the chairman and the chairman can't trust the ranking member, then who can I trust? We were given notice wrongly.

Mr. LOTT. If I could reclaim my time, I don't know exactly what was said between the two Members, but I know there is no desire on either side to mislead. I want to make it clear that I have suggested to the chairmen of our subcommittees that we need to find a time and have a way to address this rule XVI issue. It is in the interest of the Senate. It is in the interest of both parties. But I am told that you have to get a time agreement to set up this process.

If we don't do it here, then, unless we get cooperation on both sides, we may never get an opportunity to reinstate rule XVI. I will bet the Senator from South Carolina would like to see us do that. I will bet he would like to have the appropriations bills be appropriations bills. If we are going to do all of our legislating on appropriations bills, let's just get rid of the legislative committees. Let's just all get on appropriations. I would like to be on the Senator's committee. He is on Commerce, and I would enjoy serving there. I would like to be on the Commerce, State, Justice appropriations bill. That would work nicely.

I don't think we need to do that, though. We don't want to do it.

I want to make it clear, my instructions to our chairmen have been: Find a way, find a time for us to get this rule XVI reconsidered and corrected. A mistake was made.

I say to the Senator from South Dakota, who is here now, the distinguished Democratic leader, I am using leader time. I was trying to explain why we haven't been having votes, what is going on. I was reviewing the bidding of why we need to make this change, and I had not attributed any quotes or impugned anybody's integrity in their absence. I was trying to get this process going forward.

That is what is involved. I have been trying to find a way to get this done. I believe the Democratic leader wants to join me in getting this done. We have talked about it privately and publicly. If this is not the time, this is not the way to do it, then I am open to other times or other ways to do it. But this needs to be done so we can get our work done and not have everything in the world offered to every appropriations bill, whether it is Commerce, Transportation, Interior, or Defense. It is not something that is abused just on the Democratic side. As long as this mistake is not corrected, Senators will come in, as they are entitled to, from both sides and offer amendments involving who knows what on transportation—it could be an energy issue on transportation or on energy it could be a defense issue. We need to correct that.

So that is my intent, my goal. And where we have other issues, I know my colleagues on both sides are interested in other issues. I want to say publicly what I said to Senator DASCHLE last night. I am going through the process to appoint conferees to juvenile justice. I am going to ask consent. If it is objected to, I will file cloture today, and we will come back and vote Monday on that issue.

With regard to an amendment—or amendments, I think—with regard to agriculture and the pending problems across the Nation for our farmers, we need to address that. I will work with all Senators to find a way to do that. I think we ought to do it on the agriculture bill. I don't think we ought to do it on Commerce-State-Justice. It will mess up the Commerce-State-Justice appropriations bill. It will delay it. Let's do it on agriculture.

I am willing to work with Senators on both sides of the aisle to call up the agriculture appropriations bill and have this issue addressed. If there is a problem with it procedurally, we will work to overcome that. I don't think we ought to duck that issue; it is too important. It is important to South Dakota, it is important to Mississippi, and to people all over America.

I am not interested at all in trying to duck issues. I think we ought to do them in the proper way. I have made those commitments to Senator DASCHLE, and I plan to keep them. It will take cooperation on both sides because we never know, as leaders, when one of our worthy Members will come swooping in with an objection. We had a unanimous consent agreement locked up and ready to sign off; in fact, it was done actually on the campaign finance issue. A Senator had not had a chance to look at it and he objected. That is his right. Basically, we had it all done.

So we have to work with Senators on both sides who have particular problems. If we have one Senator who objects that we had not anticipated, that presents a problem. If we work together, we can get it done. That is what I am trying to do. I would like to get the Commerce-State-Justice appropriations bill done. The chairman and ranking member overcame a lot of things and got agreements on a lot of problems in that bill. But their problem is all the extraneous, nongermane legislative stuff we are going to see drift in here to be thrown up on their bill. Every appropriations bill has somewhere between 40 and 100 amendments, and half of them are legislating on an appropriations bill. Let's correct this problem.

Senator DASCHLE has been kind enough to wait while I went through those things. I think it answers some of the questions he and his Members have. I thought it would be better to go ahead and address them.

Mr. President, parliamentarily, how can we proceed at this time? I have a limit on my leader time.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I would be prepared to use my leader time if the Senator is finished.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Dakota is recognized.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I thank the majority leader for his explanation and the discussion we have had this morning. I think it is fair to say there is no question we were misled about the situation we are in today. That is undeniable. I had the opportunity to discuss matters yesterday with regard to the legislative schedule with our majority leader, and this did not come up. We were misled with regard to what the intent of the procesure would be. So, clearly, there is a bitter taste in the mouths of the minority as we find ourselves in this situation this morning.

The problem is not legislating on appropriations; the problem is legislating. We are not able to legislate in large measure because on virtually every bill cloture is filed prior to the time amendments are offered. Every bill. And so what has happened is the minority is relegated to a set of circumstances that requires us to use whatever vehicle becomes available. That isn't the way it used to be, but that is the way it has been for the last few years.

So I am sympathetic, as I have noted to the majority leader, with this institutional concept of going back to the time when we respected appropriations as appropriations bills and also respected the authorization process. But the Senate virtually has eliminated the authorization process, in part, because we don't have the opportunity to offer amendments once authorization bills come to the floor. So we have been forced to use the appropriations bills as authorizing, appropriating, legislating, the whole gamut, the whole array, the universe of legislative actions that come with our responsibility. So I have indicated to the majority leader that I would like to find a way to overturn the mistake made by Republicans 4 years ago. I am glad they have acknowledged it was a mistake, but I must say, since that mistake was made, we have been driven into a new set of legislative circumstances that make it very difficult to do the people's business.

Senator BYRD noted in our caucus that it isn't just this particular issue that is troubling. Frankly, there are a number of other issues. One I will mention is the scope of conferences. The majority overruled the Chair on the scope of conference issue. The majority now has the ability in a conference committee to put anything in a bill, whether or not it was added on the floor of the House or Senate. Anything. It is wide open. That, too, is something we ought to be looking at. There is a huge array of problems, procedurally, I think we ought to address. This is one of them. It seems to me in that context we ought to be looking at whether or not overturning the Chair now is what we need to do.

I will say the majority leader has indicated a willingness to work with us in addressing these problems. I am personally concerned about the agriculture appropriations emergency supplemental we have to pass. Once a point of order is reestablished, we are completely locked out. There is no other way to do it. So from both a practical, as well as a procedural, and, frankly, a personal point of view, I am troubled by how we got here this afternoon.

I will also note that one of our colleagues who uses the rules as successfully as anybody ever has in all 220 years of our history, the senior Senator from Massachusetts, is not here. How ironic it would be that while he is tending to family matters, we took away his rights. So I suggest to the majority leader that we schedule another time for a good debate about all the things we should do.

I will work with my caucus to find the time, and we will need to have the votes. We know how the votes—I am quite sure I know—will turn out.

I am prepared to work with the majority leader to schedule a day, but not this afternoon. This is not the moment, for all the reasons I have outlined. I think we deserve an opportunity to debate this and all of its ramifications, and why it is that we find ourselves here in the first place, and how we might work—as the majority leader has noted, cooperatively. Cooperation is a two-way street. I want to cooperate with him. And I will in every way that I can. But I hope the majority will cooperate with the minority in giving us an opportunity to offer amendments and not fill the tree and not play the parliamentary game out to the extreme so that we are forced to do things we would rather not do.

I guess that would be my suggestion—that we find the time, perhaps early next week, to vote. We would agree to a timeframe within which this could be debated and a vote set.

I would be happy to discuss either on or off the floor a refinement of that recommendation with the majority leader.

I yield the floor.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, will the Senator yield? Or, Mr. President, I will reclaim any leader time I might have so that I can respond and pick up on what the Senator said.

We are somewhat on the horns of a dilemma. If we take extended time to debate those issues, then it further delays our ability to get appropriations bills done. Conversely, if we don't do it soon, all of the appropriations bills will hopefully be done, and we still will not have addressed this issue.

So I would like to pick up on what Senator DASCHLE said.

The suggestion was made that we not do this here but that we do it early next week.

I would like to discuss the possibility of having this debate on Monday or Tuesday morning and having a vote on this issue.

Is that something that would be acceptable to the Senator from South Dakota?

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I would want to consult first with the senior Senator from Massachusetts to be sure he could be back that early. I assume he might be back by then. I would want to consult, as well, with my caucus. But that is in keeping with the recommendation that I made.

I am not averse necessarily to doing it on Monday or Tuesday, and to setting, as I noted earlier, a timeframe within which we could debate it and vote.

But, again, this is a matter which I think may require a little more consultation than the time we have this afternoon.

Mr. LOTT. If I could respond to that and make an observation, if we don't do it Monday or Tuesday, we will be under the rule that we passed for the budget reconciliation provisions. Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday will be on the reconciliation-tax cut bill. If we don't do it Monday or Tuesday, then it is not done next week.

We agreed that we wanted to get this done, but we have not had the time to get together and decide how we were going to get it done.

So I am in the position that if I give the Democratic leader notice that we want to get this done, he blocks it, or if we set it up to get it done without advance notice, the Democratic leader says, well, that is not fair.

We need to get it done. Everybody knows we need to get it done.

I would propose publicly that we do this Monday and vote Tuesday, and I will work with the Democratic leader on the specifics of getting that done early next week so that we will not go through this on the agriculture bill, on the transportation bill, on the Interior bill, on the HUD, and the Veterans Administration bill, and bill after bill.

I think that would be timely. I would be willing to go forward with the CJS without forcing the vote on overruling the Chair at this point but with the understanding that we are going to find the time so we can get this done.

Can I get that commitment from the Democratic leader?

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, the leader can get that commitment in spirit.

Let me give the leader three qualifications, and I am sure the leader will accommodate me on all three qualifications.

First, if Senator KENNEDY has to be away for family business or personal family matters—the tragedy that he is facing—certainly the majority leader would understand that, and I hope he would accommodate Senator KENNEDY's needs as we schedule.

Second, he noted on more than one occasion, privately and publicly, that he is willing to work with us to ensure that, even if the Chair is overturned, we will find a way—and there are no misgivings about finding a way on either side, I hope—to pass an emergency agriculture appropriations measure. Clearly we will be denied that once this vote occurs. So I know—he told me privately and again alluded to it this morning—that he will work with us to do that.

Third, it would seem to me we would have to have a period of time—no less, at least, than 5 or 6 hours, 3 hours equally divided—to discuss this matter and then have the vote.

If he is willing to accommodate this Senator on those three matters, I would certainly, for the record right now, indicate my willingness to work with him to set a time certain for the vote.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I don't think we need 6 hours, 3 hours equally divided on each side, to discuss this.

What that guarantees is that we wipe out another day next week and we further delay doing the people's business on the appropriations bills.

But if that is what is insisted on, if this is an effort—again, that appears to me to be eating up time so we don't get our work done, but if that is what it takes, I am prepared to consider that.

Let me go back to a couple of things.

No. 1, every Senator in this body knows I am very meticulous about trying to be sympathetic to Senators' needs when they have family problems or deaths or religious holidays. Nobody can take that away from me. I would never do anything to take away any Senator's rights while he is attending to a very sad, personal family problem.

Having said that, I don't view this as having taken something away from Senator KENNEDY or anybody else. I think this is giving something back to the Senate, and that is the ability to get our work done.

But if that is what is taking place here, if you believe you don't want to do this while he is involved obviously in a very necessary family responsibility, I will honor that.

Also, I must say everybody in this Chamber knows I work very hard to keep my word. It is used against me sometimes on both sides. I try to get Senators to vote on Mondays and Fridays. You wouldn't believe the effort that is put underway by Senators on both sides for that not to happen.

If we don't get our work done, you are going to say, well, why didn't we get our work done? While I am trying to get the work done, sometimes with the Democratic leader's help, Senators try to find a way not to vote on Mondays and Fridays.

I don't know how in the world you get your work done if you do not do anything on Mondays and Fridays, and you have people show up and say: Gosh, I want to vote in the middle of the day Wednesday. How do you get this thing done?

In terms of keeping my word and how it has been used against me, for instance, being able to offer amendments, I said, yes, we will go to juvenile justice. And I said we are doing it on a particular date with the clear impression that we would get it done within that week in 4 days. It took 2 weeks. After a lot of going back and forth, we worked out an agreement on Patients' Bill of Rights, but we kept our word. We got it done. We had the debate, and it worked out fine, I thought.

But those 2 weeks took away 2 weeks that should have been spent on appropriations bills. But I kept my word. I really believe my word was used against me.

I have to try to force action on these things because we agreed we were going to deal with rule XVI. We have to find time to do that.

We agreed we would work out something where we would have a Social Security lockbox. We haven't done it. We have to find a way to do that. The American people want a Social Security lockbox. Everybody agreed that we need it. Let's get it done. I don't think we need to do it with 75 amendments in 45 hours. It is a little procedural fix that we can agree on with regard to Social Security being protected.

I filed cloture on those bills because every bill which we ought to bring up, somebody is threatening to filibuster it. Sometimes it is on our side. Sometimes it is on the other side.

Intelligence authorization: We wanted to try to get that up, and get the Department of Energy issue considered. We had a heck of a time getting it up to get it completed. Yet when we got through it, it passed 96-1.

Transportation appropriations bill: I want to get the transportation bill up. I am told in advance now that we are going to filibuster that.

What option do you have but to file cloture?

They don't want to bring it up because there is a provision in there that a couple or half dozen Senators do not like, or four Senators.

Let's get it up. Let's debate it. Let's have a vote on it and then move forward.

In fact, then, at that point, if Senators do not like the result, they have the option to filibuster. But when I am told if you try to bring up the transportation appropriations bill we are going to filibuster the motion to proceed, what option do you have?

There are explanations for these things.

I am interested in legislating. But I also have responsibilities as majority leader to legislate on issues the majority is interested in. I also have a responsibility—I think both leaders have a responsibility, all leaders—to get our work done.

Included right up front on that list of getting our work done is passing the appropriations bills.

I am doing my job. Most of these appropriations bills I don't particularly like, to tell you the truth. It doesn't necessarily make me feel real good to be worrying about all the appropriations bills, but it is part of the job, part of the process.

There is not a single bill that comes through here where a single Senator likes everything in it, but we move the process along. I can think of a whole bunch of things in State, Justice, and Commerce I would like to knock out, and a lot of things I would like to add, but I will not do that because the Senator from New Hampshire and the Senator from South Carolina put their work in there, it was passed by the committee, probably unanimously, and we ought to move it forward.

I will be glad to work with the Senator to try to lock in a time next week to get this issue debated. I am glad to debate it. I don't know how many times we will hear: You Republicans caused this problem. I am saying: All right, OK, we acknowledge it. Let's fix it.

I bet when the vote comes, it will be overwhelming. Both sides know this needs to be corrected. Let's get on with it. I don't know what the final vote will be, but I will be surprised if it is not 80-20. It will probably be more than that, 90-10. Why not do it? It is the right thing to do. It is good for the institution.

I thank Members for their patience while I responded. If we are ready, we can go forward and set up a time to have this issue debated and voted on. Hopefully, it will be within a reasonable timeframe.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I have to respond to a couple of points made by my friend, the distinguished majority leader.

First, with regard to the Social Security lockbox, if ever our point was made on a particular bill, it is this one. This is exactly why we are here. I am amused and completely appreciate what it is Senator LOTT has just said once more: Why do we need so many amendments? This is a simple little idea—Social Security lockbox. Why do we need so many amendments? This is just a simple idea.

Mr. President, a simple idea can have profound consequences. There may be one or there may be more than one way to enact a simple idea.

Senator LAUTENBERG offered on the Senate floor an agreement that said we will limit ourselves—and here we are again, the minority—we will limit ourselves to 12 amendments. Our Republican colleagues objected. That wasn't good enough. Twelve amendments was too many.

We find ourselves, time and time and time again, not filibustering a bill. I do not remember the last time the minority filibustered a bill because we didn't want it to pass. The only time I can recall we have filibustered—and fortunately we have never lost—is on our procedural right to offer amendments. That is the only time, that I am aware of, we have fought, because our rights need to be protected. I am compelled to set the record straight, and I am compelled again to respond. This is why we are in this box.

Ideally, what will happen is, a bill could get laid down, Democrats and Republicans could offer amendments; if it got out of line, Senator LOTT and I could say: People, we have to get this bill done. We have to get this bill done. Will you limit yourself? Let's develop a finite list of amendments.

Often that works. I have some of the best lieutenants I could hope to have, and when I sic them on the caucus, it is amazing how responsive the caucus is. It works. I come back and report to the majority leader, we can do this in 15 amendments, and we can do this tonight, and it works. That is one model.

The other model is, we are presented with a confrontation. A bill is filed, the tree is filled, a cloture vote is taken. That is the other model. That model doesn't work, and it will never work. I don't care whether it is an appropriations bill or an authorization bill, we will not allow that to work.

We can continue to play that out until we die of old age. It is not going to work, not as long as we are here. If we are going to get cooperation, then I am willing to look at that Social Security lockbox again. Twelve amendments doesn't seem too many to me. Yes, there may be some irrelevant amendments—not irrelevant, but non-germane amendments. They are certainly relevant to us.

I think the Republicans demonstrated last week, with the Patients' Bill of Rights, they can deal with it if we offer amendments. They can deal with it. They are in the majority. They have the votes to defeat our proposals. I am not sure I know what they are afraid of.

In any case, I have spoken long enough. As the majority leader has noted, the time has come to move on. I am willing to work with him to make the most of the time remaining this week and certainly next week.

I yield the floor.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, briefly, I note that in the presence of the President I was led to believe that, on the Social Security issue, two or three amendments would be enough on the lockbox. Then I am told later, well, we need 12 or 15. That is what I have to deal with all the time.

We can go back and forth as to what happened. We need a Social Security lockbox. We need to find a way to do it. The Senate is the only impediment to having that done.

What I propose to do with regard to rule XVI is ask consent—I am not doing it now—that when the Senate convenes on Monday, the 26th, we proceed to the original resolution to be placed on the calendar by the majority leader, immediately following the asserting of this agreement, and the resolution be considered under the following time constraints—this is the resolution; obviously, it is very short and very simple—that the resolution be limited to 3 hours for each leader or his designee, no amendments or resolutions be in order, and final adoption be in order prior to recess or adjournment of the Senate on Monday. We could have that vote at the same time we have the vote on the juvenile justice conferees cloture, if necessary.

I ask the Democratic leader to consider that. If the Senator can check to see when Senator KENNEDY will be back—I talked to him myself early this week, and I had the impression he would be back early next week, but I didn't press him in terms of Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, whenever.

That is, I think, a fair way to do this. That is how it was outlined to me. I think we ought to do it. Hopefully, we can make some progress now on the underlying commerce bill.

Mr. LOTT. I ask unanimous consent to lay aside the pending amendment until 4 p.m. today, with no call for the regular order served to bring back the amendment before that time. That way, we will have time to talk, and meanwhile our managers can go forward.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, while the two leaders are on the floor, the original point of order was made by me, so I believe I have a right to talk about this.

I am not going to talk about the substance of the amendment but talk about our two leaders. Speaking for Democrats and Republicans, we are very proud of our leadership. The majority leader and the minority leader, I think, do an outstanding job of representing their respective interests. The legislative branch of government depends on these two men leading their respective caucuses.

We should be doing less procedural battling and more substantive battling. I hope the majority leader hears what the Democrats are saying. We want to legislate. We are not trying to stop anything from going through. We want our rights to be protected. We want the ability to offer amendments. That is all we are saying.

This was proven in the very good debate we had. We were allowed to have the debate as a result of the work done by our minority leader. I think it is important we have more issues debated here. I hope during this weekend the two leaders realize, as I know they do, the importance of having the Senate act as the Senate and that we start debating substantive issues.

I think this colloquy between the two leaders was very substantive and informative. I hope it will lead to a much better and more productive Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. GORTON). Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. LOTT. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative assistant proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BUNNING). Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that there be 2 hours of debate, equally divided, on the amendment that is about to be offered by the Senator from Delaware.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GREGG. No second degrees.

Mr. HOLLINGS. No points of order, no second degrees.

Mr. GREGG. No second degrees. And at the end of that time, we are prepared to accept it.

Mr. HOLLINGS. We are prepared to accept it. And as I said, no points of order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 1285

(Purpose: To provide additional funding for community oriented policing services)

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, parliamentary inquiry. Is the amendment at the desk?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. No, it is not.

Mr. BIDEN. I send the amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the amendment.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Delaware [Mr. BIDEN] for himself, Mr. SCHUMER, Mr. ROBB, Mr. DASCHLE, Mr. REID, Mr. HARKIN, Mr. LEAHY, Mr. AKAKA, Mr. BINGAMAN, Mr. DURBIN, Mr. GRAHAM, Mr. LIEBERMAN, Mr. HOLLINGS, Mr. JOHNSON, Mr. KENNEDY, Mr. KERREY, Mr. KOHL, Mr. LAUTENBERG, Mr. LEVIN, Mrs. LINCOLN, Mrs. MURRAY, Mr. REED, Mr. WELLSTONE, Mr. BREAUX, Mr. MOYNIHAN, Mr. BAYH, Mr. DORGAN, Mr. BRYAN, Mr. KERRY, Mr. CLELAND, Mr. SARBANES, Mr. ROCKEFELLER, Mr. DODD, Mrs. BOXER, Ms. LANDRIEU, Ms. MIKULSKI, Mr. FEINGOLD, Mr. BYRD, Mr. SPECTER, Ms. COLLINS, Ms. SNOWE, Mr. TORRICELLI and Mr. JEFFORDS proposes an amendment numbered 1285.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 32, after line 7, insert the following:

COMMUNITY ORIENTED POLICING SERVICES

VIOLENT CRIME REDUCTION PROGRAMS

On page 35, line 1, strike "$218,000,000" and insert "$38,000,000".

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, let me begin by thanking the chairman of the subcommittee and the ranking member. This is a bit unusual. I am violating what the Senator from South Carolina would recognize as the Russell Long rule.

When I first came to the Senate, Russell Long, the distinguished Senator from Louisiana, was chairman of the Finance Committee. One day I walked up to him because I had an amendment to a finance bill. He said: I will accept it. I said: Thank you very much, Mr. Chairman. Then I got back to my seat in the back row, and a staff person who had worked here longer than I had—I had only been here about 3 months—said: Senator, you really want a rollcall vote on that.

So I went ahead and I did my little spiel. Then I asked for the yeas and nays. The roll was called, and Russell Long voted against the amendment and encouraged others to vote against it. It was defeated. I walked up to him and said: Mr. Chairman, my Lord, you told me just 15 minutes ago you would accept my amendment. He said: Yes, I would accept your amendment. But I did not say anything about a rollcall vote.

We are not going to have, I hope, a rollcall vote on this amendment. I want to thank the chairman of the subcommittee for accepting the amendment. I apologize to him for speaking on something that is going to be accepted. But I think this is of such consequence that it is important to remind our colleagues of what we are about to redo.

A few weeks ago, the Appropriations Committee zeroed out all funding for the COPS Program, nearly closing the doors of what I believe to be the most successful Federal-State cooperative law enforcement program of our time.

This amendment corrects the committee's elimination of the funding for the COPS office in the fiscal year 2000. It restores funding for the COPS office to perform many of the significant functions in support of law enforcement—particularly in getting more cops out on the street.

In doing so, it supersedes—or, basically, makes void—the language in the committee report on pages 62 and 63 that would have directed the Justice Department to take steps to dismantle the COPS office. Under this amendment, the COPS office will remain alive and well for fiscal year 2000.

I am pleased today we have put aside partisan politics in support of this effective law enforcement program. Let me make it clear, although some of my colleagues on the Republican side worry a little bit about this being a Democratic program, it is not a Democratic program. It is a bipartisan program. It is a program where even this amendment has garnered the cosponsorship of four Republicans and the commitment of another several to vote for it. I predict there will be more Republicans to vote for it as well.

I am glad that we have listened to the police officers on the street, the police chiefs, the prosecutors, the mayors, the citizens of our communities, and our constituents about why they think the COPS Program has worked so well.

As I said, today, joined by 42 of my colleagues, including four Republicans, I offer this amendment to restore the COPS Program for fiscal year 2000. This amendment restores $495 million in funding for the COPS Program for the year 2000.

This is just one-third of the $1.43 billion that was appropriated in 1999. But it preserves this vitally important program that has thus far funded over 100,000 cops in communities across the country.

Here is how it will work: $170 million will come from unobligated balances for this fiscal year for the COPS office; $5 million in unobligated funds from the Bureau of Prisons; $140 million are shifted back to the COPS office for programs that it already has successfully administered in the past.

These include the Cops Connect Program, which provides equipment and upgrades so that officers from different jurisdictions can talk to each other and share vital information; it also includes targeted funding for equipment that protects police officers, such as bulletproof vests; and for training to identify and take down methamphetamine and other drug laboratories.

And $180 million are put back into the COPS Program to fund the hiring of up to an additional 2,400 officers in our public school system.

Most importantly, this amendment restores to the COPS office its primary function: putting more cops on the street. Under this amendment, there will be funding sufficient to put 1,500 additional local law enforcement officers out on the streets in our communities.

I think we can all agree that this is a small price to pay for lower crime rates, safer communities, safer schools, more advanced law enforcement equipment, and more responsive police departments.

I am thrilled to be joined by so many of my colleagues. As I said, there are 42 cosponsors. I ask unanimous consent that a list of the cosponsors be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the list was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Mr. BIDEN. It is a challenge for us to apply the lessons we have learned over the past years. More cops on the street means crime goes down. Law enforcement knows this. The American public knows this. We know this. And we must act now.

We all recognize the importance to communities across our country of ensuring the continued success of lowering crime rates.

Look at this chart. Since the COPS Program began as part of the 1994 crime bill, arrests have gone way up.

This is total arrests. Look at all the support we have on this. All the law enforcement organizations endorse this program. The mayors endorse this program. I thank, by the way, these organizations for their continued support of the COPS Program and for their extraordinary help with this amendment in particular.

To the law enforcement community, I say thank you. We should all say thank you. We could not have done this without your hard work and support, your phone calls, your letters. Your personal appearances have resonated with all of us. You are always on the frontline on this, and you have always taken a stand against crime. You should be proud.

I am proud of them. In a recent survey done for the National Association of Police Organizations, 85 percent of those surveyed think we should extend the COPS Program. The American people don't want the program to end. Although we do not extend the COPS Program beyond its authorized period through this fiscal year, my friend from New Hampshire and my friend from South Carolina know that I have continually attempted to extend the program. I will be back in another foray trying to extend the COPS Program so that we continue this beyond the year 2000.

For years, when I first wrote this crime bill, back in the early 1980s, we would debate this, and we would debate it and debate it. The editorial writers in this country, primarily from the most established newspapers, were very critical of my notion that we should vastly increase the number of cops. They would write editorials. One—I think it was one of the major papers, the New York Times, Washington Post, LA Times, but I don't recall which—said: Been there, done that.

Well, the truth is, we were never there. The truth is, for the previous 20 years, before the Biden crime bill, we did not add appreciably to the number of cops in America. If my memory serves me, in the 20 largest cities in America over the previous 20 years, although crime had grown significantly, we only added about 1 percent more cops than existed 20 years earlier. We had never done this before.

After all the hearings I held as chairman of the Judiciary Committee, being exposed over all those years to the leading criminologists in the country, the psychologists, psychiatrists, law enforcement officers, social workers, all the experts, I came away convinced of only a few things.

One is, if there is a cop on one corner of the street and no cop on the other corner and a crime is going to be committed on a corner, it is going to be committed where the cop is not. Sounds pretty basic. It is basic. This single most important reason why, beyond the sheer numbers, this COPS

Program has worked, in my view, is because in order to get Federal money to hire local cops under this program, local law enforcement departments had to decide, as my friend from Virginia knows, to set up community policing. When he was Governor, he talked about this. When he was Governor, a lot of the Governors and mayors knew about this.

It was hard to do. Cops didn't want to get out of their cars and walk on the beat, figuratively and literally. There was resistance. So we said: Look, if you want another cop paid for in part by the Federal Government, your whole department has to be a community policing department. You have to go back and interface with the community. You have to know who owns the corner store. You have to know who lives in the house in the middle of the block. You have to know where the drug trafficking takes place. You have to know where the gymnasium is where the kids hang out. You have to know where the swimming pool is. You have to know the people.

And so one of the reasons, I argue, for the extraordinary success of the program is not merely the added numbers of cops but because of the way in which they are required to utilize their existing police forces in order to get any new cops.

Now, granted, in one sense this is a small victory in that it only continues the program through the time it was intended to continue it.

I hope we can reach some bipartisan consensus before we get to fiscal year 2001 to extend, as my friend from New Hampshire has proposed in an amendment we will vote on later today, the violent crime trust fund that pays for these cops, the Federal share. I hope we can get some bipartisan support on extending the program that continues to put more local law enforcement on the ground with the help of Federal dollars.

I will reserve the remainder of my time in a moment, but I want to make it clear that I truly appreciate the willingness of the Senator from New Hampshire to reinstate, at least in part, the funding for this program which would allow the office to continue through the year 2000. I see my friend has risen, and I am happy to yield to him at this time.

Mr. GREGG. I thank the Senator from Delaware. I appreciate his fine comments. We are going to accept his amendment at the point when all the folks who want to speak on it have had an opportunity.

Mr. BIDEN addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Delaware is recognized.

Mr. BIDEN. I yield 10 minutes to my friend from New York.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New York is recognized.

PRIVILEGE OF THE FLOOR

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that Ben Lawsby, a detailee from the Judiciary Committee, be granted full floor privileges during the remainder of consideration of S. 1217.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, I am proud to join my colleagues, the Senator from Delaware and the Senator from Virginia, in offering this amendment to preserve the COPS Program for fiscal year 2000.

Three days ago, we received the latest news on crime in America, and the news is good. According to the latest National Crime Victimization Survey, nonfatal, violent crime fell 7 percent from 1997. Other figures recently released by the FBI indicate that murders dropped about 8 percent between 1997 and 1998. Overall, the Nation's crime rate has fallen more than 21 percent since 1993 and now is at its lowest level since 1973.

My home State of New York has been a shining example of crime reduction. Crime is down from one end of New York State to the other. In Buffalo, it has fallen by more than 30 percent; in Albany, it is down 24 percent; in Nassau County, it is down 24 percent; in New York City, overall crime declined 44 percent and murder dropped more than 60 percent.

Why the continued good news on crime? Well, I would be happy to concede to those on the left that a strong economy has something to do with it. I would be happy to concede to those on the right that tougher punishment for violent offenders and aggressive crime fighting by both Republican and Democratic mayors have played a significant role. But just as clearly, enhanced community policing and the COPS Program deserve their share of the credit.

I say to anyone in America, ask your local police about the drop in crime in the neighborhoods they patrol. Ask the local neighborhood and civic associations. They will tell you, inevitably, about new partnerships between police and neighborhood residents. They will tell you about successful efforts to deter vandalism, loitering, and disorderly conduct—the seeds of more serious neighborhood deterioration.

As pleased as we all should be about the crime fighting successes of the past years, now is no time to stand pat. Old and new law enforcement challenges require us to maintain our vigilance and our efforts. Indeed, the war on crime is sadly a war that never ends. The surest way to prevent a return to the bad old days of untamed streets and unsafe schools is to do what works: Yes, lock up violent offenders; yes, invest in prevention programs; and yes, hire and retain community policing officers.

When I authored the COPS Program in the House of Representatives and worked with the Senator from Delaware—we worked in tandem then because I was a House Member and he a Senator—I knew that not only the increased number of police, but the change in the type of policing, to community policing, was going to work. And work it did.

There is almost unanimous agreement from law enforcement, from people on both sides of the criminal justice argument, on the left and on the right, that the COPS Program has been a shining success. So when I read the words in the committee report, "The Committee directs that from within available funds the COPS office close by the end of the fiscal year 2000," I was distressed, perturbed, and I was shocked because this is a Government program that works. This is not an ideological program, and it has such broad support.

The police agencies, the mayors, and town councils that have put COPS funds to such good use over the past 6 years felt the same way. I have received many letters from New York police chiefs and mayors over the past few weeks about this appropriations bill, and every one contains a similar refrain: Please keep the COPS Program in business.

As the Senator from Delaware knows, we made special efforts when we wrote the law to make sure small towns, villages, and counties were included. There was a special set-aside so that not all the money would go to the big cities. I was then a city representative—and, of course, I represent the whole State—representing the people who were most fervently for the program, the small town mayors and local county people, who could not have afforded these police but for the COPS Program.

It also has let us accomplish so much. In addition to hiring officers, it purchased new technology and implemented innovative programs to stop domestic violence, all because we created in this program the flexibility that if you could take cops off the desks and put them on the streets, patrolling the streets, it would work.

Well, 10,505 newly funded officers later, even the most skeptical New Yorkers—and we have many skeptics in our State—are converts to the cause of the COPS Program.

I am proud of this amendment which would keep the COPS Program in business for this fiscal year, negating the report language to the contrary. That is certainly an improvement over the committee's bill, which didn't provide any funding of the program. At the same time, I believe the COPS Program deserves even greater funding for fiscal year 2000 than provided in this amendment because fighting crime is a key to building strong communities. In my State, many of the communities have rebounded, including New York City, because it is much safer.

So I believe it should be a top priority for this Congress to reauthorize the COPS Program. Senator BIDEN and I already tried to do it as an amendment to the juvenile justice bill. We will soon introduce, along with the Senator from Virginia, Mr. ROBB, a freestanding bill to reauthorize the program, and we will not rest until we get the job done.

But this is an important step forward. I congratulate my friends from Delaware and Virginia for their hard work on the issue. I also thank my friend, the Senator from South Carolina, Mr. HOLLINGS, for his invaluable assistance with this amendment. Again, we will not rest until we get the job done.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, I yield 10 minutes to my friend from Virginia.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Virginia.

Mr. ROBB. Mr. President, first let me thank my friend and colleague from Delaware, as well as my friend and colleague from New York, for their support.

As a cosponsor of the Biden amendment, I would like to express my strong support for the effort to preserve and restore funding for the COPS Program.

I believe many of our colleagues share my view that protecting our Nation's citizens from all enemies, foreign and domestic, is a critical obligation of the Federal Government. We are committed to try to make all of our communities safer from the threat of crime. Today, by supporting this amendment and the COPS Program, all of us can make good on this commitment.

The Biden amendment will prevent the COPS Program from expiring as the underlying bill provides. Over the next year, the $495 million in funding provided by the amendment will put 1,500 new officers on the beat, hire 2,400 school resource officers to reduce violence in schools, keep hundreds more officers out in their communities rather than behind their desks, purchase bulletproof vests, and provide better communications equipment and technology. In short, this amendment will make a difference to the safety of our communities.

I am particularly gratified to see the resources devoted to school safety. Even before the tragic killings in schools across the Nation, I worked to amend the Commerce-State-Justice appropriations bill in 1997 to permit the use of COPS funding for school safety grants. The following year, with the help of Senators GREGG and HOLLINGS, we expanded that program. As a result, this year more than $167 million in school safety grants, including funding to hire school resource officers, is going to communities across the Nation.

More generally, the Community-Oriented Policing Services program, or COPS, is one of our best strategies for fighting the war on crime. The rationale is straightforward, and the results are impressive. In the simplest terms, COPS funding means more police on the beat, which means less crime.

The dynamics of COPS in community policing are, of course, more complex. The goal is not simply more bodies but better neighborhoods. By giving law enforcement the resources to actively engage their communities, we develop trust and better communications; we allow officers to be proactive and prevent crime before it occurs.

The bottom line is that the COPS program works. This Nation has the lowest crime rate in 25 years. The murder rate is at the lowest point in 30 years.

In my home State of Virginia, we provided funding to put nearly 2,000 additional officers on the streets. As we have added those officers, we have seen a drop in crime. Between 1992 and 1997, murders declined by 17 percent in Virginia Beach, by 30 percent in Norfolk, and by 48 percent in Newport News.

With these statistics, it is not surprising how many are urging the Senate to step up to the plate again. My colleagues have already mentioned the many organizations asking us to continue COPS funding, including the Fraternal Order of Police and the United Conference of Mayors.

In a letter to Majority Leader LOTT, Sheriff Dan Smith, president of the National Sheriffs Association, stated:

It is imperative to effective crime control that the COPS program survive. It is a program that is vital to effective law enforcement, and to sheriffs in both rural and urban jurisdictions.

I urge my colleagues to support the Biden amendment. We should not be satisfied with the lowest crime rate in 25 years. We should work for the lowest crime rate ever. This important amendment will help us to achieve that goal.

I again thank my distinguished colleague from Delaware for his continued leadership in this important area. I am delighted to work with him and with others, and I look forward to the continuation of this vital program.

I yield any time I may have remaining to the principal sponsor of the amendment, the Senator from Delaware.

Mr. BIDEN. I thank the Senator from Virginia.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Delaware.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, I now yield 5 minutes to the Senator from Iowa.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I thank my distinguished colleague, the Senator from Delaware, for yielding me this time.

I am pleased to be a cosponsor of this important amendment to restore funding for the successful COPS Program. We know it works and it should be continued. Later on, I will also be offering an amendment to restore funding for the Edward Byrne Memorial Grant Program—another vital resource for local law enforcement.

I voted against this bill in committee for one main reason: it drains the critical funding needed by our local and state law enforcement to help them do their jobs—to fight the drug problems in our communities and to keep our streets safe. The bill before us cuts the Byrne grants by more than 18 percent. The local law enforcement block grant is cut by 24 percent. Neither of these cuts makes sense.

Our communities need them to beef up their drug and violent crime task forces. These grants go straight to the state and local agencies. Why would they be cut? Violent crime has gone down, but does that mean we should give up the fight? Drugs and crime are a continuous battle and now is not the time to let up.

I've received dozens of letters from Iowa police chiefs and sheriffs describing the kind of setbacks that they would suffer if these cuts go through.

This amendment which restores just about a third of the fiscal year 1999 level funding for Community Oriented Policing Services Program, would be a good first step to giving our local communities the support they need to do their jobs. Police chiefs and sheriffs from across the country have told us loud and clear—the COPS Program is one of the 1994 Crime Act's most effective programs.

Consider this: Serious crime is retreating all across the United States. Since the COPS Program began, violent crime across the nation has dropped 21 percent—in part because local law enforcement used these federal grants to hire more officers to keep our streets safe, and to upgrade their operations with new technology. In Iowa, the murder rate has plummeted 34 percent from last year. Now is not the time to cut back on our efforts to fight illegal drugs and violent crime.

Rural America will pay the heaviest price if this amendment is not adopted. The COPS Program made a special commitment to include small towns and rural areas. Half of all COPS funding goes to agencies serving jurisdictions of under 150,000 in population. And its making a difference. I hear it all the time from sheriffs and police chiefs throughout Iowa.

I got a letter just the other day from Police Chief Douglas Book of Forest City, Iowa—a town of 4,500 people. He said zero-funding COPS would be detrimental to his operation. He wrote:

* * * COPS, by the addition of one officer, has allowed us to provide a school resource officer for 20 hours per week. Something that was non-existent before COPS. Through the addition of the COPS funded officer we were able to be proactive in various areas of our community. One very successful operation resulted in a 75 percent drop in juvenile assaults * * * This funding literally deals with the quality of life in America. Results, not politics, must be the guiding factor * * * COPS works. Fund it. [Douglas Book, Forest Hill Police Chief, 6/23/99]

Here's another letter I received from Coralville, Iowa Police Chief Barry Bedford:

Without the COPS Program, we would not have been able to keep up with the tremendous increase in the calls for service and crime-related activities, nor would we be able to obtain the vitally needed mobile data computers. This is a program that needs to continue if we are going to keep our communities safe.

The chiefs are right. Community policing works. It's a flexible program that is responsive to law enforcement needs. More cops on the beat have an undeniable effect on crime and a community's sense of security.

Funds to hire more than 100,000 officers have been awarded since 1994 by the COPS to more than 11,300 state and local law enforcement agencies across the nation. That's more than half the policing agencies in the country. As a result, these officers are joining agencies that serve more than 87 percent of the American public.

Iowa alone has received over $37 million to hire 544 officers. COPS funds have also been used to put computers in police cars in Dubuque, help officers in Grundy Center deal with vandalism and help Waterloo police fight drugs. COPS grants have helped community and county police departments hire civilians to do paperwork so more officers can be out on the streets. In short, COPS has made our streets and communities safer.

It makes no sense to block such a successful program that directly benefits our communities and makes them safer for our families. While crime is down—this is not the time to claim victory and retreat. So I urge my colleagues to support our amendment that restores this crucial law enforcement funding and I also urge that any language in this bill that mentions closing down the COPS office this year be deleted.

I compliment my colleague from Delaware for being a great leader on this program. This amendment should be supported and adopted if we truly want to support our police officers and our sheriffs' departments throughout this country.

I yield the floor.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, I thank my friend from Iowa, and I compliment him for his continued support and early support for this program.

I now yield 5 minutes to my friend from Massachusetts.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Delaware. I am delighted to join with him as an original cosponsor of the amendment. I am pleased to work with him with respect to this question of the funding of the COPS Program nationally.

As the Senator from Delaware knows well, back in 1994 I brought the original amendment to the floor for the 100,000 police officers at a time when people said we weren't going to be able to find the money.

We managed to reach an agreement through the ingenuity of the distinguished Senator from West Virginia, Mr. BYRD, and an agreement with Senator GRAMM back then to split some money with respect to prisons, which ultimately became the foundation of a rather remarkable increase in funding for police officers on a national basis.

The Senator from Delaware, then chairman of the Judiciary Committee, had spent many long years working and fighting to recognize the need to have police officers in the streets of America. My own experience as a former prosecutor brought me to the Senate with a long-term understanding of and commitment to the notion that crimes usually aren't committed right in front of a police officer. On too many streets in America, and too many corners of our communities, we were literally, only a few years ago, abandoning those streets to criminals. The ratio of police officer to a felony was diminishing. Felonies were going up; the police officers were going down. And there was a direct correlation to the disorder, even the chaos in some places, that we were inheriting as a result of the lack of capacity for enforcement.

Having run one of the largest district attorney offices in America, one of the 10 largest counties in the country, Middlesex County in Massachusetts, I learned firsthand it is not just a police officer on a street at a particular moment of time who is going to intercept a crime or break up a fight or provide order; those police officers who make arrests have to go to court. They have to be able to testify in cases. They have to have time to investigate cases. It takes an enormous amount of street work, of nonvisible work, to be able to adequately staff and supply the police force of the country, the investigative capacity of the country, in order to bring cases.

We too often were losing cases because we couldn't bring the officer to court. The officer needed to be out on the streets because of the shifts. Judges would dismiss cases because prosecutors were failing to put them together in time to meet the swift and speedy prosecution standards.

Finally, we got people to understand that it makes a difference to have a police officer walking a beat. That is another problem that occurred in America for a long period of time. We put police officers in a car; they drove around; criminals could pretty well predict when the car was going to come through. The car created a barrier between the officer and the street, so to speak. People didn't build relationships. They didn't build relationships with good citizens in the community, and they also didn't build relationships with bad citizens from whom they often learned who may have done one thing or another against the law.

Through awareness of that in 1994, we began an effort to put police officers back on the streets of America, to build those relationships, and to provide our departments with the indispensable foundation on which the life and economic development of a community exists. That is called the opposite of chaos. It is peace. That is why they are called peace officers.

The fact is, we have been on a wonderful trend line, an extraordinary trend line, where crime has been going down. Most violent crime has been going down, although not all; there are a couple areas that have gone up in the last year. The fact is, the kind of threat the average citizen felt in their community has diminished. In community after community after community, all across this country, police chiefs, police officers, mayors, everybody involved in the effort to provide order, will share stories of the remarkable ways in which the community policing program has made a difference in the lives of our fellow citizens.

It is extraordinary to me that plans were laid in the original Republican budget to eliminate funding for this, one of the most successful programs that we have had.

If you look at the city of Boston in the 1990s, we had a gang epidemic. There was a surge in youth violence. The Boston Police Department responded by developing a very innovative youth violence task force, an aggressive intervention strategy, and a program to control trafficking of firearms. However, much depended on the $750,000 COPS anti-gang initiative grant. That has become a model program in the country. Countless police chiefs and others have used that program as a way of instituting a similar effort in their own cities.

Every year since 1993, the number of juveniles killed by guns has decreased, a 60-percent decrease from 1990 to 1998. From July 1995 to December 1997 not one youth was killed with a firearm.

The rate of violent crime involving a firearm has decreased 43 percent since 1995. Property crime has dropped to its lowest levels since the 1960s and has been cut in half since 1990. House break-ins and car thefts have also hit a 35-year low.

The federal assistance through the COPS program has given local communities like Boston the tools to fight crime effectively. This makes our streets and schools safer, our homes more secure and improves the quality of life for everyone. In 1997, a Boston Public Safety Survey found that more than three-quarters of the residents feel somewhat to very safe alone in their neighborhoods at night, an increase of close to 20 percent just since 1995. Feeling safe to walk the streets is a right, not a privilege for those who can afford it. Every community deserves the type of security that Boston residents currently enjoy. The COPS program has played an important role in fostering that security.

Listen to what Paul Evans, Commissioner of the Boston Police Department, has had to say. In a letter to me, which I will now read, Paul reminds us that

Over the past five years, the COPS office has been a strong and effective partner in our efforts in Boston, and in cities across the country. COPS funds have supported the hiring of 109 new officers like Jamie Kenneally, who has quickly become a community fixture, walking his beat and serving as a one-man-anti-crime unit on Centre Street in Jamaica Plain.

Mr. President, other COPS initiatives have supported Boston's internationally recognized youth violence strategy, which yielded a 75-percent decrease in youth homicides. Also, COPS supported the citywide Strategic Planning and Community Mobilization Project that brought together more than 400 police and community stakeholders to create partnerships for public safety that have been replicated in communities across the country.

The effects of the COPS programs in Boston have been replicated across Massachusetts and across the nation. Here is a letter from Edward Davis, Superintendent of Police in Lowell, Massachusetts. In the letter, Superintendent Davis says the Lowell Police Department has seen a dramatic decrease in crime and the fear of crime over the past six years. Violent crimes have decreased more than 60 percent as a result of the hard work of police officers, citizens, and the support of the Federal Government.

Paula Meara, Chief of Police of Springfield, Massachusetts believes that COPS funding has unquestionably improved the quality of life for Springfield residents. In 1997 and 1998, Homicides in Springfield have declined by 40 percent and serious crime has dropped by 12 percent. Chief Meara believes that any reduction in funding for the COPS program will have catastrophic results and will be detrimental to the quality of life for every resident in Springfield.

The COPS program has been a demonstrated success in Massachusetts and across the nation. It deserves continued federal support. Adopting the Biden amendment is a good first step toward continuing federal assistance for local communities. However, there is much more that we need to do. First, we must find additional funds for the COPS program in conference to insure that communities that are currently plagued with crime and violence can fight back with a cop on the beat. Second, we must continue to work with local police departments to develop innovative community-based approaches to fighting crime. This approach will help allow every community free itself of the crime and violence that lowers the quality of life and limits economic development. Mr. President, it is time we end the debate of whether to fund the COPS program, and move onto the far more important question of how to enlarge and expand this successful program for the challenges before us today.

I ask unanimous consent a series of letters from police chiefs with respect to that program be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the letters were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

BOSTON POLICE DEPARTMENT,
Boston, MA, July 14, 1999.

Hon. JOHN F. KERRY,
U.S. Senate,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR KERRY: I am writing to express my urgent opposition to efforts in the Senate to eliminate funding for the COPS Office. Like you, I strongly support Senator Biden's amendment to restore that funding.

Over the past five years, the COPS Office has been a strong and effective partner in our efforts in Boston, and in cities across the country. COPS funds have supported the hiring of 109 new officers whom we could not otherwise have put to work in Boston's neighborhoods, officers like Jamie Kenneally, who has quickly become a community fixture, walking his beat and serving as a one-man anti-crime unit on Centre Street in Jamaica Plain.

Other COPS initiatives have supported Boston's internationally-recognized youth violence strategy, which yielded a 75 percent decrease in youth homicides. Also, COPS supported the New England Regional Community Policing Institute, which is a training consortium led by the Boston Police Department and that delivers state-of-the-art community policing training across the region. As one of its first initiatives in Boston, COPS supported our citywide Strategic Planning and Community Mobilization Project, that brought together over 400 police and community stakeholders to create the partnerships for public safety that have been replicated in communities across the country. COPS supports our initiatives in reducing domestic violence and other key areas of our mission.

The COPS Office is a major success story from the 1994 Crime Act, which you were so pivotal in enacting. I add my voice to what I know is a chorus of police executives who want this important work to continue.

Please let me know if there are other ways I can support Senator Biden and you in your fight to save COPS.

Sincerely,

PAUL F. EVANS,
Police Commissioner.

LOWELL POLICE DEPARTMENT,
Lowell, MD, July 15, 1999.

Hon. JOHN F. KERRY,
U.S. Senate,
Boston, MA.

DEAR SENATOR KERRY: The Lowell Police Department (LPD) has seen a dramatic decrease in crime and the fear of crime over the past six years. Part I Crimes have decreased by over 60% as a result of the hard work of police officers, citizens, and the support of government officials. This support is most evident by the resources provided by the U.S. Department of Justice Community Oriented Policing Services (COPS) Office.

Since 1993, the COPS Office has provided well over 4 million dollars to the LPD for the hiring of sworn and civilian personnel, as well as the implementation of innovative problem-solving initiatives. Through the Universal Hiring Program, Lowell has been able to hire 37 additional police officers, and COPS More allowed for the redeployment of over 30 officers into the community. The Advancing Community Policing Initiative allowed for the development and implementation of innovative training and management initiatives. The Problem-Solving Partnerships grants support youth and neighborhood challenges. Furthermore, the Community Policing to Combat Domestic Violence grant supported efforts targeted and addressing domestic violence citywide.

Equally important is the impact that COPS Office resources have had on law enforcement across the country. The COPS Office has been instrumental in enhancing the profession of policing, and challenging law enforcement to think and act in a more strategic manner. Embedded in all of the COPS grant programs, is an underlying theme of building and strengthening community partnerships with public and private organizations.

It is without reservation that I support the continuing efforts of the U.S. Department of Justice COPS Office and their state and local law enforcement partners. I would be happy to provide further information from my agency as well as from the citizens of Lowell, Massachusetts if necessary.

Very truly yours,

EDWARD F. DAVIS, III,
Superintendent of Police.

THE CITY OF SPRINGFIELD, MA,
July 15, 1999.

Senator JOHN KERRY,
Russell Senate Office Building,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR KERRY: The Springfield Police Department is a community oriented, full service, municipal Police Department. Community Policing was initiated in a pilot area of Springfield in 1993 and was expanded citywide thanks to the assistance provided through funding by the Department of Justice COPS Universal Hiring Grant Initiative. One hundred twenty-eight (128) officers have been hired thanks to the assistance of the Department of Justice and Federal Funding. Nationwide studies proved that traditional law enforcement strategies were insufficient and outdated when applied to today's complex law enforcement issues. After initiating community policing in 1993, the police department recognized immediate positive results. It became clear that when community police officers spent more time and focused more attention on the issues, calls for return service diminished substantially.

Community Policing was implemented "city-wide" in 1995 after a successful trial period, which included several pilot areas.

The city was receiving high praise from residents for Community Policing efforts but expansion was hampered due to manpower constraints. The city was still recovering from economic depression and officer lay-offs in 1988. Community Policing in Springfield is both a philosophy and an organizational strategy that promoted new partnerships between people and their police. It is based on the premise that both the police and the community must work together to identify, prioritize and solve contemporary problems such as drugs, fear of crime, social/physical disorder and overall decay with the goal of improving the quality of life in our city. Without sufficient officer staffing Springfield was struggling to answer the constant need for immediate officer response to critical incidents while at the same time allowing officers the time necessary to commit to working with the community. Federal COPS funding provided the funds vital to hiring the essential additional officers to move forward and expand Community Policing in Springfield.

The City is organized into nine Community Policing Sectors. Management and services have been decentralized by transferring Captains out of headquarters into the sectors, assisted by Lieutenants, Sergeants and Officers—all assigned on a long term basis. Investigations have been organized to maximize sector responsibility with investigators from all of the Department's Bureaus assigned by Community Policing Sector. Neighborhood based beat management teams and regular community meetings comprise an essential component of this department's policing initiatives. The Springfield Police Department has worked continually toward enhancing its services to the residents of our city through collaborations with other services providers with the goal of meeting and exceeding citizen expectations. The Department of Social Services, Department of Youth Services, School Department, Springfield Health and Human Services, Department of Code Enforcement, District Attorney's Office, Hampden County Sheriff's Department (Corrections), Juvenile and Adult Probation Divisions, and Parole Department all work with our Community Policing Officers and have representatives assigned to Community Policing Sectors. Springfield is particularly proud of its Youth Assessment Center—named after Captain Joseph A. Budd, who commanded the Youth Aid Bureau and championed youth causes for many years. The Center became operational in 1997 and is among the first of its type in the nation. Funding supplied through the COPS Universal Award made this center possible. Any reduction in funding this center, which has become a national model, would jeopardize the health and welfare of our city's youth. It represents a collaboration of police and other major agencies, working together to better serve our city's children. Its primary focuses are: Early Intervention, Youth Diversion, and Prevention. Among the agencies that work with Youth Aid personnel at the Center on a daily basis are: Springfield School Department, District Attorney's Office, Department of Youth Services, Department of Social Services, Department of Youth Services, and the Center for Human Development (Project Rebound). Children in need of services, or youths that surface with law Enforcement Programs are brought to the center and not to the police station. At the center, trained investigators gather data relative to health, school and home issues—relating to drugs, sexual abuse, and domestic violence. If necessary, immediate and direct referral to the appropriate agency for assistance is provided.

COPS funding has provided officer staffing levels vital to proactively target the issue of school violence. Springfield has nineteen (19) officers and one Sergeant assigned full-time to patrol our Springfield's fifty-five (55) schools. These officers work with school officials, and numerous other service agencies to prevent incidents of violence. Student Support Officers are specially trained in mediation techniques and are a resource to school officials and students.

COPS funding has allowed us to develop many diverse programs to improve the quality of life in our Community.

Citizens Police Academy—Since 1996 we have held seven academies with approximately 175 residents attending twelve week interactive training sessions.

COP SHOP—Based on the Citizen Police Academy but directed at high school age youths who have shown an interest in Law Enforcement.

COPS AND KIDS—An after school program meeting three times a week at our Mounted Patrol facility targeting youths at risk, 12 to 14 years of age.

COPS IN SHOPS—Undercover officers posing as liquor store employees to target underage alcohol violations.

Community Chaplains on Call Program—A multi denominational volunteer group of clergy that respond to critical incidents within the City of Springfield and surrounding communities.

S.A.R.A Problem Solving Initiatives—Collaborative efforts by police and other stakeholders to prioritize and combat quality of life issues such as Open Drug Dealing, Auto Theft, Vandalism, Graffiti, and Youth Violence.

COPS Funding has unquestionably improved the quality of life for Springfield residents. Statistics show hard evidence that the Community Policing Initiatives financed by COPS Funding continues to be our most successful efforts to date.

From the period including 1995 to 1996 Springfield experienced 33 homicides. From the period including 1997 to 1998 as Community Policing expanded Springfield experienced a drastic reduction of homicides, with a total of 20. This is a 40% reduction over these two-year periods.

For the first six months of 1999 Springfield experienced one (1) homicide.

From the period 1997 to 1998 Springfield experienced an 11.98% reduction in UCR Part 1 Index Crimes. This category includes Rape, Robbery, Burglary, Aggravated Assault and Auto Theft.

For the same period Springfield experienced an 8% reduction in all other crimes not categorized in UCR Part 1 Index Crimes.

COPS funding is essential to the continued success of the Springfield Police Department's efforts to improve the quality of life for our citizens. Community Policing has become a way of life in the City of Springfield. Any reduction in funding will have catastrophic results and will directly effect public confidence in their Police Department and will be detrimental to the quality of life for the citizens of Springfield.

Very truly yours,

PAULA C. MEARA,
Chief of Police.

Mr. KERRY. I thank the Senator from Delaware for his leadership as well as for his courtesy.

Mr. BIDEN. I yield 5 minutes to my friend from Minnesota.

Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, I thank Senator BIDEN for his great leadership on this issue. I hope I am an original cosponsor, and, if not, I certainly ask unanimous consent to be named a cosponsor.

I want to talk about a program that is extraordinarily important to the safety of communities. That's the COPS Program. In 1994, Congress enacted the Violent Crime Control and Law Enforcement Act. This act established a program known today as the COPS Program. This program has had unparalleled success.

The authority to hire officers under the COPS Program expires in fiscal year 2000. Although the President's Budget provided for an initiative that would allow a continuation of support for hiring police, the Senate Appropriations Committee markup does not include such funding.

This is not the time to cut back on funding police programs for our communities. The COPS Program authorized the hiring of 100,000 police officers and allowed states and localities to concentrate those officers on community policing. Funds were used for purposes such as: Training law enforcement officers in crime prevention and community policing techniques; development of technologies that emphasize crime prevention; linking community organizations and residents with police; and developing innovative programs.

In 1998, the COPS Program initiated the Safe Schools and Indian Country law enforcement improvements initiatives. The Safe Schools Initiative included $167.5 million for partnerships between law enforcement agencies and schools to improve safety in elementary and secondary schools and to hire school resource officers.

Under the Indian country law enforcement improvement initiative funding was available for hiring uniformed officers and assisting with other law enforcement improvements on tribal lands.

Under the COPS Program, the Youth Firearms Violence Initiative was developed to assist police departments in combating the rise of youth firearms violence.

As a result of the additional police officers in the community and the innovative programs funded by the COPS programs, we have seen historic crime reductions over the last few years. Crime is at its lowest rate in 25 years and has declined for 6½ consecutive years.

The COPS Program is strongly supported by every major law enforcement group. Why? Because it responds directly to their needs.

I want to share with you a number of examples of how different communities in my home State of Minnesota have successfully used COPS funding and how their communities have benefited. The Anoka Police Department has refined its juvenile conferencing program—a program which essentially brings together youthful offenders with the victims of their offenses. The basic idea is that this confrontation will cause the young person to see the consequences of his/her actions and make it less likely to occur again. It also has eased the pressure on the court system.

In short, Police Accountability Conferencing is a non-traditional way of dealing with juvenile offenders. Modeled after a program in Australia, it brings the victim, the offender and their relatives together with an officer, who serves as a mediator, to discuss the ramifications of the offender's actions and decide on a mutually agreeable form of punishment.

This commitment to young people is a classic example of how COPS grants can be utilized effectively.

In addition, Anoka has a COPS officer who is also used as a school liaison officer. During the summer, this officer works with the landlords association in dealing with landlord-tenant issues.

Anoka Police Chief Ed Wilberg views the COPS Program as a very successful one—one which really does help to meet the needs of his community.

In both the St. Paul and Minneapolis, the Police Departments have been able to free up more officers so that they can do proactive work. Because of the COPS Program their work is not limited to responding solely to 911 calls.

For instance, Chief Robert Olson of the Minneapolis Police Department talks about being able to commit "significant additional resources in both police officers and equipment" to address the core cause of crime in Minneapolis. He reports that "The catalyst for helping the city commit to those resources was the Federal COPS program."

Chief Olson further states that

There is still a significant need for federal support of community-oriented policing services . . . Law enforcement needs that federal support . . . and I hope that when these issues are presented that you will consider a continuation of the mission of the COPS Office in whatever form seems appropriate.

In St. Paul, this is what the Chief's office had to say:

The COPS grants have allowed us to hire police officers, increase efficiency through the use of technology, put greater emphasis on our problem solving efforts and enhance the linkage we have with our community. The COPS program is one of the best things President Clinton and Congress has done for law enforcement. We would like to see more funds for technology and support to further enhance our efforts.

In White Bear Lake, a rural community, COPS funding has enabled restructuring so that more officers are in the community. White Bear Lake has divided its community in 19 sub-communities with at least one officer assigned to each community. Quite simply, White Bear Lake jumped light years ahead because of the technology that the COPS grants allowed them to purchase—which has the direct result of police officers being in the community.

In the Shakopee Police Department, the COPS Program has been a godsend to an agency its size. It has allowed the department to hire additional officers in a diverse community that is growing every rapidly.

Within the last few months they were able to hire community service officers to provide services that ordinarily would have to have been performed by sworn officers. This means that additional sworn officers are freed up to do work in the community. Currently the Police Department is working to hire school resource officers. The school district has agreed to help with the cost. This would not be possible without COPS.

Here, I say to Senator BIDEN, is the quote I have been saving for you.

Police Chief Ken Froschheiser of Thief River Falls said that COPS "has been so successful that if the citizens heard that it was going to be pulled, we would be hung." He also said that he jokes with the school district that he really doesn't have two officers, that the school district has two employees.

His school liaison officers are in the school 12 months of the year. They do things like bike patrols and help create block programs which allows his officers to be closer to the community, neighborhood by neighborhood. The COPS Program provided the resources to do the school work that he wanted to do. He also has noticed an increased collaboration with other city and county agencies, for example, the school district, social services and the court system.

The point is simple: under a community policing philosophy, law enforcement agencies recognize the need for cooperation with the communities they serve. Each community has numerous resources that can be used with law enforcement to solve problems.

The Upper Midwest Community Policing Institute, which is funded in part by COPS, is working in partnership with the Minneapolis Police Department to provide outreach and training to the large Somalian community in the Cedar-Riverside neighborhood and the officers who serve them.

In the near future, this Institute will be exploring community policing applications to the problem of domestic violence. Importantly, the Institute is working closely with a large number of Tribal Law Enforcement agencies to provide training and technical assistance. This work has included helping to facilitate the white Earth Tribe and Mahnom County agreement to resolve jurisdictional issues. COPS allowed this to happen. This Institute is an important piece of the COPS picture. It exemplifies the success of a law enforcement approach that is tailored to community needs.

The success of the COPS story goes on and on. COPS provided resources which allowed departments throughout Minnesota to upgrade technology and to redevelop the whole notion of community policing.

At the national level: The United States Conference of Mayors states that the COPS Program has been critical in the significant reduction in crime and that the nation's mayors always cite the COPS Program "as a working example of what can be accomplished when red-tape is reduced to a minimum in favor of results-oriented programming". The nation's mayors urge reauthorization of the program.

The COPS Program also is supported by the National Sheriffs' Association, The International Brotherhood of Police Officers, the National Association of Police Organizations, The Police Executive Research Forum, The National Troopers Coalition, The Major Cities Chiefs, and the International Association of Chiefs of Police.

Mr. President, why would we eliminate such a successful program? This is a time to build on our successes. This country needs additional resources to enhance crime fighting efforts. We need better communications systems in more communities to deter criminals, and to improve the ability of different jurisdictions to interact. We need to provide more communities with state of the art investigative tools like DNA analysis. We need to be able to target crime hot spots by making resources such as crime mapping available to more jurisdictions. We need new community based programs to ensure the safety of our school children.

The COPS amendment being offered today by Senators BIDEN and SCHUMER will enable us to continue the COPS Program which will expire next year. The amendment will support the hiring and training of up to 50,000 more cops over 5 years. It will support new technology to fight crime. It will provide funding for community prosecutors. The amendment puts cops in schools and supports partnerships between schools, law enforcement and the community. Communities and their students feel particularly vulnerable in the aftermath of the Littleton tragedy. It is important to continue our support of the dialogue between schools, law enforcement and the community so that communities can continue to fashion solutions to the problem of school violence.

This program has been a success over the last 5 years. It has benefited communities throughout this nation. It should be continued.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, I yield 5 minutes to the Senator from Nevada.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, as we prepare to agree to this amendment reauthorizing the COPS Program for an additional year, I wish to take a moment to recognize the work of the Senator from Delaware on this issue. The senior Senator from Delaware has offered an amendment that is very important to the country. He also, earlier this year, offered an amendment to the juvenile justice bill to reauthorize this program. That effort, supported by everyone in the minority, was defeated.

Fortunately, though, for the people of the State of Nevada and this country, we had the support of the police officers from all over the country, the district attorneys from all over the country, the sheriffs from all over the country. Law enforcement officers, officials, literally called upon us, their Senators, to express their overwhelming support for the reauthorization of this program. So I extend every bit of appreciation possible to the Senator from Delaware for his persistence and also for his ability to energize law enforcement officials in this country. It is because of their interest and their trust in the Senator from Delaware that we have reached this point.

I have in my hand four pieces of paper filled with the names of cities and towns, Indian tribes, universities from all over the State of Nevada, that have received help from this program, from Bolder City in the far southern tip of Nevada to the Yomba Shoshone Tribe in the northern part of the State. They received grants of money and police officers to allow the State of Nevada to be a more peaceful place.

Hundreds of police officers are now patrolling the streets all over the State of Nevada as a result of the legislation that was previously passed. It is very important we move forward.

I speak as someone who has been a police officer, someone who has been a prosecutor, someone who has defended people charged with crime. I am convinced there are many important ways to cut back on crime, but there is nothing more important than having a police officer seen on the street. A police officer who is known to be in the area certainly will deter crime.

This program is good. We are fortunate we are now having another opportunity to make sure this program goes forward.

Mr. FRIST. Mr. President, I am happy today to support continued funding for the Community Oriented Policing Services, or COPS program. During consideration of the Juvenile Justice Bill in May, I opposed Senator BIDEN's amendment which would have authorized the COPS Program for 5 more years. I took that position because I felt that Senator BIDEN's proposal, which would have cost taxpayers $7 billion, needed to be carefully scrutinized in the normal legislative process. His proposal would have more than doubled the current funding authorization, and did not address the serious problems that exist with the current program.

Today, however, I am happy to support continued funding of the COPS

Program for FY 2000. Local law enforcement officers from across Tennessee have contacted me to let me know of their support for this program. Tennessee has benefitted from almost $120 million in Federal funds since the COPS Program began. Police Chief Jamie Dotson of Chattanooga told me that the COPS Program has assisted him in hiring an additional 76 police officers. The police chiefs of Memphis, Nashville and Knoxville all support the program.

I look forward to working with my colleagues on reauthorization of the COPS Program. I want to ensure that we build flexibility into the system, so that communities may use the Federal funds to best suit their needs, be they more policemen in schools, purchase of new technology, bullet proof vests, or overtime payments to keep policemen on our streets fighting crime. Additionally, I want to ensure that we carefully scrutinize the program to eliminate waste of scarce taxpayer resources. I am grateful that my colleagues have been able to work out a compromise so we can continue to fund this program, and I am proud to continue my support.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I rise today as a proud co-sponsor of the amendment offered by my distinguished colleague from Delaware, Senator BIDEN. Despite the proven track record of the Community Oriented Policing Services (COPS) Program and widespread support from the law enforcement community, the current version of the Commerce-Justice-State appropriations bill almost completely eliminates this important program. Senator BIDEN's amendment, however, corrects this terrible flaw in the bill. It would preserve the Office of Community Oriented Policing Services and fund the hiring of roughly 1,500 police officers through FY 2000.

Since its inception in 1994, the COPS Program has provided an unprecedented level of resources to communities across the nation in the fight against crime. The COPS Program has awarded $6 billion to 11,300 communities to fund the hiring of more than 100,000 police officers. The addition of 100,000 police officers represents a nearly 20% increase in the number of officers on the streets. And more cops on the streets means lower crime. Crime is at its lowest rate in 25 years and has declined for seven consecutive years. The COPS Program has a lot to do with that happy statistic.

What is community policing and how has it reduced crime? Community policing is a law enforcement strategy that emphasizes establishing community partnerships, putting more officers on the street, decentralizing command functions, and promoting innovative, community-oriented strategies to prevent crime. With the recent wave of schoolhouse shootings like those that occurred in Littleton, Colorado and Jonesboro, Arkansas, there is a growing sense among Americans that we are no longer safe in our homes, in our schools, in our communities. One sure way to reduce crime and restore peace of mind is through community oriented policing. The COPS Program does just that.

COPS has had a positive, and very tangible, impact on communities throughout the country, including in my home state of Wisconsin, by putting more police officers on our streets and making our citizens safer. In the state of Wisconsin alone, the COPS Program has funded the equivalent of over 1,100 new officers and contributed roughly $70 million to communities to make it happen. The COPS Program has succeeded because it helps individual officers to be a friendly and familiar presence in their communities. They are building relationships with people from house to house, block to block, school to school. This community policing helps the police to do their job better, makes the neighborhoods and schools safer and, very importantly, gives residents peace of mind.

The current Commerce-Justice-State appropriations bill, however, threatens the progress in community policing and the reduction of crime our nation has seen in recent years. First, it eliminates the federal funding for local law enforcement to hire additional, needed officers. Second, it eliminates the COPS office and transfers the administration of technology and school resource officer grants to the Office of Justice Programs. This is absurd and ignores the success of the COPS Program.

As I travel through Wisconsin and talk to sheriffs, police chiefs and other law enforcement officers, I hear the same refrain, time after time: the COPS Program is vital to their work and has enabled them to get more officers out from behind their desks and onto the streets. I agree. The COPS Program has been a shining example of an effective partnership between local and Federal Governments. It provides federal assistance to meet local objectives. It does not interfere with local prerogatives. It does not impose mandates. The program provides funding to counties, towns and cities to enable communities to put more police on the street. Individual police and sheriff's departments have discretion over how those funds are used, because they know what problems their communities face and the places they need help most.

Mr. President, zero funding for hiring officers means fewer cops on the streets. Shutting down the COPS office means local law enforcement will lose the ability to participate closely in determining what funds they receive and how they are used. Senator BIDEN's amendment, however, would provide for continuing the much-lauded COPS Program to ensure that we have an additional roughly 1,500 police officers in our communities in Wisconsin and throughout the nation. I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting this amendment and continuing our drive to put more police officers on the streets and to reduce crime in our communities.

I yield the floor.

Ms. SNOWE. Mr. President, I rise today to thank the Chairman, Senator GREGG, and the Ranking Member, Senator HOLLINGS, for accepting the one year extension of the Community Oriented Policing Services Program. This extension, being offered by Senator BIDEN, with my support, will allow communities in Maine and across the country, to continue receiving assistance from this very successful program.

The COPS program was created in 1994, when President Clinton signed into law the Violent Crime Control and Law Enforcement Act. Not only does it provide grants that help communities hire additional police officers to help with the war on crime, the COPS Program also provides funds to acquire new technologies and equipment and provides police with opportunities to work with schools to address persistent school-related crime problems. This program is so worthwhile that one of Maine's police chiefs said it is one of the most innovative programs he has seen in his thirty-five years in police work.

Since its creation, COPS grants have been awarded to more than half the policing agencies in the country. In Maine there are an additional 258 police officers in 90 city and county police forces as a result of the COPS Program. All across my state, from the Androscoggin County Sheriff's Department to the Town of Ft. Kent and from the Kennebunk Police Department to the Washington County Sheriff's Department, I am proud that the State of Maine has been able to utilize almost $18 million in COPS program funding to hire these new police officers. These new police officers have helped reduce the amount of violent crime in Maine and across the country. In fact, since 1994, violent crime in America has fallen by 13%.

By restoring $495 million for Fiscal Year 2000, the Community Oriented Policing Services program will be able to fund the deployment of almost 4,000 more police officers. These new additions to the front lines of the war on crime will allow our communities to continue to reduce violent crime in America.

Again, Mr. President, I appreciate Senator GREGG's willingness to accept this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. VOINOVICH). The Senator from Delaware.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, I will make a few brief comments, and I am prepared to yield the remainder of my time. I thank my friend from New Hampshire for accepting the amendment.

This was part of an original bill called the Biden crime bill at the time. At the time, when we introduced the notion of all these new cops partially being paid for by the Federal Government, I was told a couple of things. One, local authorities would not like it because they would have to come up with part of the funding. Two, it would be cumbersome to administer. Three, we would find ourselves in the position where it really wouldn't make much of an impact on the community.

I suggest the reason I wrote the bill the way I did originally was to take into consideration all three of those concerns. First of all, everyone will know, from their home States, that there is no redtape in this program. The day after we passed the crime bill in 1994 in my office, I sat with the Attorney General of the United States and her staff, and, to her chagrin, I said we must get this application down to one single page. They looked at me as if to say: What do you mean, one single page? That is not possible for a Federal program which is going to cost $30 billion. But that is what it is. It is a page. That is the reason why there is an infinitesimally small portion of this COPS Program and the crime bill program money being spent for administration.

The second thing was, I remember my friend from South Carolina telling me at the time: If you don't do this the right way, this is going to get hung up in every State. That is why we didn't send this money to Governors. The Presiding Officer is a former Governor. We love former Governors. But this doesn't go through State legislatures. The local police chief in Columbus, OH, does not have to convince anybody in your State capital they need more cops. They can go directly to the source.

From a little town in Massillon, OH, they can go straight to the source. They do not have to go to the legislature; they can go straight downtown after their city council in Dover, DE, Smyrna, DE, Wilmington DE. It enabled local law enforcement agencies to determine their own needs and thereby eliminate the waste. By the way, I got in trouble with Governors for writing it that way, for not sending it through State legislative bodies.

The third thing it does, and there was criticism of this when it was done, it says you do not get any money unless you have a certain kind of police department. What do you have to do? If you have 10 cops in your police department, you cannot fire two and apply for Federal money to hire them back. That is what was done under the LEAA, the Law Enforcement Assistance Act, when I first got here. This program said there was a maintenance of effort. We would help you get the 11th cop, but you couldn't cut it to 9 to go back to 10.

We said: By the way, you have to have a community policing operation. Why is that important? Mayors and Governors do not want community policing. It is harder to do. It costs more money. The cops organizations—I love them all—didn't want it. It costs more money. If I am a cop in a tough district, I would rather be riding in a patrol car with another guy than I would be walking through by myself. So they did not want it. We said: No money unless this gets leveraged. If you have 10 cops and you want one of ours to raise your force to 11, all 11 have to be community cops. That is the key.

Why do I say this? If the Federal Government gets out of the business of helping here, it will not only be the loss of the money; I predict it will be the loss of the willingness to maintain community policing even though it works, even though every mayor knows it works and every county official knows it works. It is expensive and it is hard. Mark my words: The day the COPS Program ends, initially 5 percent, 10 percent of the communities in America will go away from community policing, and 10 years from now we will be back to where we were.

That leads to my second concluding point. People said back when the original bill was written: BIDEN, why are you only doing it for 5 years? I said, one of two things are going to happen. Maybe at the end of the 5 years those of us who support this concept are going to be right; it is going to be proven, as in the old expression, the proof of the pudding is in the eating. At the end of the 5 years, the pudding either tastes good or it tastes bad. If it tastes bad, all the king's horses and all the king's men will not keep the COPS Program going because it will be branded for what it is, a waste of time and money. But if the pudding tastes good, all the king's horses and all the king's men cannot stop it from being reauthorized for another 5 years.

So far, the king's horses and king's men have stopped it from being authorized for another 5 years. It is a different issue. It is different than continuing it for this next year. But I want to say, I think the proof is in the eating. Our streets are safer. Go out and ask any of your mayors, any of your county executives, any of your town councils, any of your police departments. You come back and tell me anyone who said: Eliminate this program. They may have suggestions to make it better, and we should listen to them but not eliminate it.

This leads me to my exact last point. I am a Democrat. I take great pride in the fact that I wrote this bill. Originally, it was the Biden bill. When it passed and became law, I remember saying to President Clinton: Let's call it the Clinton bill.

We lost the Congress that year, and he thought we lost the Congress in part because of the gun amendments. He said: Keep it the Biden bill.

It started working really well, and now it is the Clinton bill. It is good it is the Clinton bill, but I want to make this the Republican bill, and I mean this sincerely. I want COPS to become like Social Security has become. Initially, Republicans hated Social Security and they were against it. Roosevelt came along, and Democrats supported it. Over the years, they have not only become politically committed, they are as committed as we are. They really understand how important it is, but for a long time it was not invented here.

This COPS bill was bipartisan in its inception. When the first so-called Biden crime bill that had this in it originally passed out of the Senate, it was called the Biden-Hatch crime bill until it got to the other side. Gingrich did not like the look of it politically, and even though it passed in the Senate with 97 votes originally—what passed the Senate originally was the same thing that ended up becoming law. It had 97 votes originally. It went over to the House of Representatives, and when it came back, I had to get seven Republicans to pass it. Only seven Republicans voted for it.

From that point on, the bad news about the crime bill has been: We Democrats beat our chests about how we did it, and the Republicans did not, which is literally true. And the Republicans have said: My Lord, we can't continue to support a program from which the Democrats are getting such benefit. Let's end this.

Let's go back and pretend this was part of the crime bill that passed out of here, which it did, with 97 votes. This is a bipartisan idea, and my plea is let continuing the program through its authorization period of the fiscal year 2000 be the first step, and the second step, that Republicans and Democrats join together and reauthorize for another 5 years this program and reauthorize for another 5 years, as my friend from New Hampshire has suggested, the trust fund.

It is time—and I know this sounds ridiculous in this atmosphere—to take the politics out of this. This is working. There is enough room for all of us to claim credit. There is enough room for everybody to say, look, listen to what Ronald Reagan used to say when he first became President: If it ain't broke, don't fix it. This ain't broke.

Now let's put a Republican stamp on it and a Democratic stamp on it—an American stamp—just as we do on Social Security. We will be doing the Nation a great favor, and maybe, just maybe, we will get back in the habit a little bit of cooperating as Democrats and Republicans.

I thank my friend from New Hampshire for being willing to accept the amendment. I appreciate his accommodation in allowing us to speak to it in spite of that, and I truly look forward to the possibility that in the coming months we will be able to move beyond this and have a bipartisan—a Republican amendment. I will sign on to a Republican amendment reauthorizing this and call it the Republican crime bill. I do not care what we call it. I sincerely mean that. But let's keep a good thing going.

I thank my friend, again, very much. I thank my friend from South Carolina who, when this bill was being written 5 years ago, was the major engine behind it. He was the one who allowed it to get through the committee in the first place.

I yield back the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I yield myself such time as I may take on this. I appreciate the comments of the Senator from Delaware and his commitment to this program.

The committee's decision to end this program was based on a number of factors. The first factor was our allocation, which was so low. We had to simply apply resources where we thought they were most needed.

The second factor was basically, in our opinion, the administration had taken the money to fund the COPS Program from some other very important law enforcement initiatives. For example, the administration did not fund the additional 1,000 Border Patrol which we think is critical. They did not fund the expansion of strike team efforts by the DEA. They did not fund the Boys and Girls Clubs initiatives. They did not fund the juvenile block grants. They did not fund the local law enforcement block grants. They did not fund the interagency drug enforcement grants. The money which came out of those accounts was essentially used to expand the COPS Program.

The funding which this committee has made to the COPS Program has been extraordinary, and it has been strong over the years. In fact, the original program called for 100,000 cops. This committee has funded 105,000 cops over the years and with our final funding we had in place.

We also as a committee, with the support of the Senator from South Carolina, initiated aggressive programs of mentoring in schools using police officers. We think this is an important effort, and in our bill we expanded that amount. That is how we arrived at the number we did.

I am willing to look at the extension of the COPS Program, but I think we have to look at it in the context of the resources available to us. When the administration sent up a budget as they sent up and essentially played games with the other law enforcement accounts, things which have to be done, which we knew had to be done and they knew had to be done, and then they underfunded those accounts, that is what created the basic problem in the initial bill.

Working with the Senator from Delaware, we have been able to work out this resolution, which I think is a reasonable one and one with which I know the Senator from South Carolina agrees.

If there is no further debate, I urge adoption of the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, the Senator from Delaware has made an outstanding presentation. I join in the comments of my distinguished chairman. We are ready to accept the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendment is agreed to.

The amendment (No. 1285) was agreed to.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. GREGG. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative assistant proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, before we take up the next amendment, let me just comment briefly on the amendment already agreed to, offered by the Senator from Delaware, Mr. BIDEN.

I am pleased to be a cosponsor of this amendment. I am very pleased with the action taken this afternoon by the Senate. The amendment certainly signals our continuing strong commitment to this innovative approach to crimefighting; that is, the COPS Program.

The crime rate in the United States has gone down for 6 consecutive years—the longest period of decline in 25 years. And we received even more good news recently. This year's National Crime Victimization Survey reports that the number of Americans who were victims of violent crimes dropped 7 percent between 1997 and 1998.

That is great news. Of course, no one claims we have won the war against crime, but we are certainly winning some important battles. The 100,000 officers placed on the beat since the COPS Program began in 1994 have been on the front lines of this vital effort.

Why would we jeopardize that success? The additional officers put on the beat since 1994 have revolutionized community policing, and the COPS Program has helped foster an unprecedented crime-fighting partnership between communities and Federal, State and local law enforcement. Why should we let something that has proven to be so effective wither on the vine?

We should instead build on the success of this program, which has been endorsed time and again by every major law enforcement organization.

I have seen firsthand how valuable the COPS Program has been in communities in my home State. South Dakota's law enforcement officials are among the most well-trained and capable public servants in the country.

South Dakota's crime rate is low, and its streets are safe, but, just as in more populated States, South Dakota families still worry about the safety of their streets and neighborhoods.

In my State, and in rural America in general, the COPS Program can double the size of some police or sheriff's departments by providing funding to hire just one or two additional officers. Many of the small towns and counties in my State are faced with tight budgets, limiting the amount of resources they can devote to law enforcement personnel. By providing those resources, the COPS Program has had a profound impact on these communities.

Law enforcement officers in South Dakota have described that impact to me.

They have testified about how the COPS Program has helped them.

Let me share just one of those stories, because I think that it provides a vivid example of how this program can truly make a difference.

In the days immediately following the Littleton, CO, tragedy, parents throughout the Nation were terrified by a rash of bomb threats and a fear of "copycat" crimes. In South Dakota, we had to deal with over 30 bomb scares.

One of those threats was called into Tri-Valley, a school in a rural community outside of Sioux Falls, SD. Fortunately, Tri-Valley has a police officer, called a "school resource" officer. His name is Deputy Preston Evans, and his position is funded by a COPS grant.

On the day of the bomb threat, as students were being evacuated from the school, a number of students came up to Deputy Evans and told him they knew who had made the threat. By the end of the day, two suspects had been arrested.

Those students were able to confide in Deputy Evans for one reason they trusted him. And they were able to trust him because they knew him—they had a relationship with him. How many acts of violence or mischief are deterred in schools like Tri-Valley because the students can confide in such a person, who might not be there without the COPS Program?

In a video conference yesterday, I spoke with some of the law enforcement leaders in South Dakota—Minnehaha County Sheriff Mike Milstead and Sioux Falls Police Chief Clark Quiring, and many others. They told me how the COPS Program has provided them the flexibility to increase their presence in schools.

They mentioned how important it is for students to feel secure. As Sheriff Milstead so eloquently noted, "there is not a bigger barrier to learning—than fear."

For his generation, the greatest fear was going home that afternoon with a bloody nose, he told us.

Littleton reminds us that kids today have a lot more to worry about than just a fist-fight with a school-yard bully.

But thanks to the COPS Program, children today have someone they can turn to.

Dr. Bill Smith, the Instructional Support Services Director for the Sioux Falls School District, joined the law enforcement leaders in yesterday's video conference and told me that we now have evidence that officers in schools are welcome and helpful.

When students throughout the Sioux Falls district were asked in a year-end survey whom they would go to if they had a problem, 44 percent said they would confide in their school resource officer before anyone else.

That is a remarkable statistic:

44 percent of the students said they would go to their school resource officer before they would turn to their teacher or principal. I can think of no more compelling evidence of how this program can make a real difference than that.

Today, the Senate will help ensure that the COPS Program, and officers like Deputy Evans, will continue to make a difference—in our schools, on our streets, and in our neighborhoods.

The action taken by the Senate just now is a tribute to the men and women across the country who risk their lives every day to make our communities safer.

I yield the floor and suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative assistant proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, one of the important items contained in the Commerce-Justice-State appropriations bill is the appropriation for the Census Bureau.

I think we all agree, a fair and accurate census is a fundamental part of our representative democracy and good government. As required by the Constitution, census results will determine how many members of the House of Representatives will come from each of the states. Those results will also determine how many federal dollars, funding a wide array of important programs, will return back to the state. We're talking about over $180 billion that will go to state and local governments and the distribution of additional billions in state funds. This same data is a vital component in determining where to build roads, hospitals, schools; even your local Walmart or McDonald's location is based on this same information.

The Census Bureau projects that the U.S. population will near 266 million in 2000. Cost estimates for administering Census 2000 were projected to be anywhere between $4 and $4.8 billion. Those projections were based on the assumption that "sampling" would be used to provide the fairest and most accurate count to date.

The U.S. Supreme Court, however, this last year ruled by a narrow 5-4 majority that the use of sampling was prohibited by law for the purpose of apportioning seats in the House of Representatives. Since the Court decided the case on statutory grounds, it found no need to decide whether the Constitution also barred the use of modern statistical methods for purposes of congressional apportionment. The Court went on to affirm that the law requires the Secretary of Commerce to use modern statistical methods, where feasible, for all other purposes.

As a result of the Court's decision, the Administration is required, if feasible, to release two sets of population figures in 2001: one set of adjusted, unsampled numbers to be used for apportioning seats to the States, and a second set of adjusted or sampled, numbers to be used for all other purposes. The Court's decision has added the potential of $1.7 billion to the cost of the census. These funds will be used to hire census takers to handle the 50% increase in the number of households that must be visited.

This includes $954 million for non-response follow-up. To get responses from all households that don't answer the mail survey, the Census Bureau will hire more enumerators and will expand follow-up to any unprecedented 10 weeks. Training will be increased to sustain quality with a larger workforce that will total over 800,000 employees.

The Census Bureau will need an additional $268 million for data collection infrastructure, $229 million for coverage improvement efforts, and $219 million for a variety of data collection operations, things like rural area data collection, the "Be Counted Program," enumeration of soup kitchens, shelters, and redeliveries.

Every single dollar the Administration is asking for is necessary. Without it, we will have a highly inaccurate census count. I believe we're on the path to another census nightmare similar to the 1990 experience. Nationwide, we missed 8.4 million people, mostly inner city and shanty town minorities; they double counted 4.4 million Americans, most of whom were white college students. My home State of Illinois suffered the eighth highest undercount in 1990; in the city of Chicago alone, they somehow didn't count 2.4 percent of the population. If you said they counted 97.6 percent of the population, it sounds good. But missing 2.4 percent is crucial. That's an astonishing figure considering the national average for undercount hovers around 1.6 percent. That may not sound like a lot but that 0.8 percent differentiation equals almost 70,000 people. The city of Chicago estimates that the undercount was significantly higher: maybe as much as 250,000 people. The Census Bureau missed 114,000 folks for the whole state.

What does that mean for my constituents back home in Illinois? The city of Chicago did a study last year and, if you follow the premise that the Bureau missed 68,000 people, estimated revenue loss for the city of Chicago would have totaled just under $100 million. If you follow the 250,000 undercount figure, the city of Chicago would have lost over $327 million. Let me give some figures that show why we're trying to raise awareness about this topic.

Head Start in the city of Chicago, a program to provide early education for kids, lost over $28 million because of the census undercount. The Older Americans Act for senior citizens lost over $5 million. WIC funds, nutrition funds for children, lost over $2.5 million. Child care funding, we lost over $3 million. This is no small affair. We have to remedy the situation.

I have a letter, dated May 7, 1997, from my colleagues Senator LOTT, Senator NICKLES, then-Speaker Gingrich, and House Majority Leader ARMEY. In this letter, the Republican leadership in both Houses state:

We are firmly committed to working with the House and Senate Budget Committees and Appropriations Committees to provide a level of funding sufficient to perform the entire range of constitutional census activities, with a particular emphasis on accurately enumerating all groups that had historically been undercounted.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have the letter printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES,
Washington, DC, May 7, 1997.
DR. MARTHA FARNSWORTH RICHE,
Director, Bureau of the Census, Department of Commerce, Washington, DC.

DEAR DR. RICHE: We are writing about one of the most critical constitutional functions our government performs: the decennial census. Based on recent media reports, we are concerned that a misunderstanding of congressional priorities is driving the Census Bureau's plans for the 2000 census. Consequently, we fear that the Bureau is on the verge of formalizing plans that do not reflect the House and Senate's goal to perform the most accurate census possible that is consistent with the Constitution. We would like to take this opportunity to clarify the three main principles that comprise the congressional mandate for Census 2000 and which should guide the actions of both Congress and the Bureau as you finalize census preparations in coming months.

INCREASED ACCURACY

Accuracy and completeness are absolutely essential if the census is to provide the reliable data necessary to support the business of government. Despite criticism, the 1990 census was the most accurate in history. Still, we expect to improve on its success in 2000. To reach the level of accuracy we expect, to ensure that communities that have been undercounted in the past are fully and accurately counted in the future, we must physically count each and every American.

We cannot rely on statistical schemes that compromise accuracy for the sake of economy. Despite the Bureau's insistence that statistical estimation is more accurate than actually counting Americans, the fact remains that if statistical adjustment had been allowed in 1990, Pennsylvania would have erroneously lost a congressional seat to California. Voters should not be disenfranchised through the use of statistical guessing.

Census data must also be as valid at the census tract and block level as they are at the state and national levels. Under sampling, as the area gets smaller, the margin of error grows wider. Individuals who rely on accurate census data for reapportionment will receive census counts with a range of possible numbers to choose from in drawing lines for congressional, state and local elections. The result will be chaos in government, uncertainty for voters, lawsuits lasting for the better part of a decade, and worst of all, the further erosion of our citizens' confidence in their government's ability to do its job and do it right.

CONSTITUTIONALITY

Equally important is the constitutionality of Census methodology. Taxpayers are investing a minimum of $4.2 billion to conduct Census 2000. We must protect their investment by using only methods that are clearly and undisputedly allowed by the Constitution. If the Census is conducted with methods that are later ruled unconstitutional, taxpayers will not only have lost their original investment in Census 2000, but will likely be asked to spend an additional $6 billion or $7 billion to do the entire census over again.

Legal experts who testified recently before the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee agreed that it would be calamitous if the Supreme Court were to declare Census 2000 unconstitutional. The Court has not addressed the constitutionality of statistical sampling in the Census, however the Constitution clearly states that the Census should be an "actual Enumeration" of the population, and Title 13 U.S.C., Section 195 states that sampling cannot be used for purposes of the apportionment of the U.S. House of Representatives. We strongly believe that the Bureau's proposed use of statistical sampling exposes taxpayers to the unacceptable risk of an invalid and unconstitutional census.

ALLOCATION OF SUFFICIENT RESOURCES TO CONDUCT AN ACCURATE AND CONSTITUTIONAL CENSUS

Recent news reports have quoted you and other Census Bureau officials as citing a congressional mandate to spend less money in the 2000 Census. While we certainly seek to promote economy and efficiency in all aspects of government, the constitutional requirements governing the census leave us no choice when it comes to cutting corners in order to save money; we cannot do it. On the contrary, the census must be funded at levels necessary to comply explicitly with the Constitution.

We are firmly committed to working with the House and Senate Budget Committees and Appropriations Committees to provide a level of funding that is sufficient to perform the entire range of constitutional census activities, with a particular emphasis on accurately enumerating all groups that have historically been undercounted. Towards this end we are eager to see aggressive and innovative promotion and outreach campaigns in hard-to-count communities, the hiring of enumerators within those localities, and maximizing Census employment opportunities for individuals seeking to make the transition from welfare to work.

We look forward to working with you on these and other issues to ensure that the 2000 decennial Census is the most accurate and Constitutionally sound census ever conducted.

Sincerely,

NEWT GINGRICH,
Speaker of the House.

RICHARD K. ARMEY,
House Majority Leader.

TRENT LOTT,
Senate Majority Leader.

DON NICKLES,
Senate Assistant Majority Leader.

Mr. DURBIN. I thank the Chair.

Let me wrap up by saying that our goal is the most accurate census possible. The census has a real impact on the lives of real people. We have to do everything for a fair, accurate, and complete count.

It is my understanding that my colleagues, Senators GREGG and HOLLINGS, the chairman and ranking member of the Subcommittee on Commerce, Justice, State, and the Judiciary, will hold a hearing in the very near future on this issue of undercounting. I look forward to the resolution of this important issue.

I have spoken with the White House as well. They assure me that this issue will be resolved, and we won't repeat the disastrous census undercount of 1990 in the year 2000.

I thank the Chair, and I yield back the remainder of my time.

Mr. WELLSTONE addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Minnesota.

Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, I was going to send an amendment to the desk. Might I ask my colleague from Indiana—I would like to hold my position on the floor, but I saw him—did he come to the floor with the intention of speaking or introducing an amendment?

Mr. LUGAR. If I may respond to my distinguished colleague, I came to the floor to offer an amendment to the bill.

Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, if Senator LUGAR came with the intention of offering the amendment, I was just trying to help Senator GREGG and Senator HOLLINGS move this along.

So might I ask unanimous consent that I be allowed to follow Senator LUGAR with the next amendment?

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I think that makes a great deal of sense since we may be able to work something out on the Senator's amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. WELLSTONE. I thank my colleague.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Indiana is recognized.

AMENDMENT NO. 1289

(Purpose: To appropriate funds for the National Endowment for Democracy and to offset such appropriations with a reduction in the Capital Investment Fund)

Mr. LUGAR. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative assistant read as follows:

The Senator from Indiana [Mr. LUGAR], for himself, Mr. GRAHAM, Mr. MACK, Mr. HATCH, Mr. KERREY, and Mr. LIEBERMAN, proposes an amendment numbered 1289.

On page 78, between lines 8 and 0, inset the following:

NATIONAL ENDOWMENT FOR DEMOCRACY

For grants by the Department of State to the National Endowment for Democracy as authorized by the National Endowment for Democracy Act, $30,000,000, to remain available until expended: Provided, That, in lieu of the dollar amount specified under the heading "CAPITAL INVESTMENT FUND" in this Act, the dollar amount under that heading shall be considered to be $50,000,000.

Mr. LUGAR. Mr. President, I wish to state the purpose of my amendment. The purpose of the amendment is to restore funding for the National Endowment for Democracy. I am pleased to be joined by Senator GRAHAM and Senator MACK, who serve with me as members of the Board of Advisors for the National Endowment for Democracy. We are proposing funding the NED at $30 million, which is $2 million below the President's request and $1 million less than this year's funding level. It is also $1 million below the authorization level that has already been approved by the Senate.

Our amendment proposes to shift $30 million from the Capital Investment Fund in the State Department title of the bill. I regret very much having to propose this shift because I, like the chairman of the subcommittee, believe the Capital Investment Fund is important to the effective operation of the Department of State and that the account is underfunded. But if we are successful in making the offset, I will work with the chairman and others to try to help find the moneys to help restore that funding to the Capital Investment Fund.

The problem the subcommittee faced was a serious problem. There is simply inadequate funding in the 150 function of the International Affairs Account. That scarcity of funds forced difficult choices about priorities and required much give and take. In my judgment, the National Endowment for Democracy must be a high priority. There is no funding for the National Endowment in the bill before us. That is why we are compelled to propose the amendment I have just introduced.

The reason for proposing the amendment is that the appropriations bill provided no funds—none at all—for the National Endowment. The Endowment did not even merit a mention in the bill; it is completely ignored. This zero-funding decision was made even though the Senate approved a straight-line funding level of $31 million in the State Department authorization bill, which we considered earlier this year, and even though successive administrations and successive Congresses have supported full, or near full, funding for the NED year after year.

It is a unique phenomenon perhaps that the NED has enjoyed strong bipartisan support since 1983 when it was created by the Reagan administration. The NED has consistently gained the support of both Republican and Democratic administrations since then and of every Republican and Democratic Congress over the past 15 years. But not in this bill.

The committee report accompanying the bill does recommend that funds for the NED be found among other divergent State Department accounts. This simply is not a good idea. Funding directly from the State Department would make the NED a grantee of the State Department and make it an arm of the Department. This would eliminate NED's line item, destroy its independence, and undermine its ability to gain access to grassroots organizations fighting for freedom and democracy in other countries all over this world—the very heart of NED's effectiveness.

For this reason, former Secretaries of State have written of the importance of retaining the independence of the NED in a 1995 letter. They wrote:

We consider the nongovernmental character of the NED even more relevant today than it was at NED's founding twelve years ago.

NED's effectiveness comes in good part because it has an independent status, functions as a nongovernmental organization, and has a board that operates as an independent board of advisers. We have faced and confronted challenges to the NED numerous times in the past. The Senate has debated funding for the NED six times since 1993. Two years ago, we faced a comparable effort to slice and dice the NED. I proposed an amendment at that time to restore funding, and it was approved by the Senate by a vote of 73-27. A few weeks ago, in another challenge to NED, this time proposing a different manner by which NED allocates its internal grant-making funds among the four core institutes; the amendment was defeated by an almost identical vote of 73-26. That has been the pattern, fortunately, over the years.

Let me just say I am sympathetic to the extraordinary difficulty facing the managers of the bill. There are so many critical issues in the various titles of the appropriations measure, and the NED is a very small item by comparison. But this is just the point. The NED has been a very cost-effective vehicle for promoting democracy, human rights, and civic society around the world. Given its presence in some 90 countries, many on the threshold of democratic breakthroughs and others struggling with the transition to a more open society, NED's relatively small funding level is a genuine bargain. It is an exceptional investment in security for the United States of America.

We often speak in broad generalities about promoting democracy, expanding democratic values, and promoting human rights around the world. The point that must be made is that doing so is very much in our national interest. These are not whimsical ideas. Securing strong democracies should be one of the most effective means of combating and deterring the spread of terrorism, coping with the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction, promoting market economic practices and principles and creating opportunities to expand our markets, supporting fair labor practices, and forestalling the destabilizing effects stemming from refugee flows.

None of these goals comes easily, and, as a Nation, we have decided it is in our national interest to encourage and to assist those in other countries who share the same ideals as we do in the United States. The NED is a key instrument in achieving these democratic goals and values.

Over the past 15 years, the NED and its four core institutes have worked openly with willing counterparts in other countries to spread the ethos of democracy around the world. The four core institutes working with the NED itself are each affiliated with domestic American institutions. They are: A, the International Republican Institute, the IRI, and B, the National Democratic Institute, the NDI, which help build political parties, help to ensure free and fair elections, and strengthen governing institutions and civic society. They are loosely affiliated with the Republican and Democratic Parties. Then, C, the Center for International Private Enterprise, CIPE, which promotes the growth of private enterprise in a democratic process, is affiliated with the Chamber of Commerce, and (d) the American Center for International Labor Solidarity, which has links to AFL-CIO and supports the development of independent trade unions. The Solidarity Movement in Poland was an early grantee, for example. The NED itself funds grassroots organizations that promote independent media, human rights, civic education and the rule of law in other countries.

Testimonials on behalf of the NED have poured in from former Presidents, former Secretaries of State and former national security advisors, from grantees and non-grantees alike. These testimonials represent a veritable Who's Who in the world movements for democracy and human rights. These names include His Holiness the Dalai Lama; Harry Wu, the Human Rights Activist; Elena Bonner, Russia civil rights advocate; Clement Nwankwo, Chairman of the Transition Monitoring Group in Nigeria; Vaclav Havel, President of the Czech Republic; Lech Walesa, leader of the Solidarity movement in Poland; and countless others from some 80 to 90 countries in every region of the world.

Mr. President, I had hoped to avoid a debate on this issue this year. I had hoped that some agreement or arrangement could be made so that we could move ahead without delaying this appropriation bill. That certainly has been my intent. I regret that this has not been possible.

The amendment is now before the Senate.

I simply say that in the early 1980's when clearly it was the intent of the United States to push for democracy and human rights that the means of doing that were not at all clear to President Reagan and our Secretary of State. As a matter of fact, many felt it was inappropriate that the President and the Secretary of State sought to intervene in the affairs of other countries around the world suggesting changes of government, although this is clearly what we wanted to see.

The changes in Eastern Europe could not have occurred without Lech Walesa, and Lech Walesa's movement which were heartily adopted by the AFL-CIO of this country. Through informal but very effective means of finance and organization, that fledgling labor movement in Poland was given not only strength but legitimacy throughout the world as a democratic movement of change, an alternative to a government which at the time seemed very solid.

At the same time, from my own recollection and experience, I recall the efforts of the Roman Catholic Church in Central America and in the Philippines, and of American businesses who were farsighted and who understood the interests of our country laying freedom for people and democracy in contract law and the rule of law—the same principles we debate now with regard to Russia, as we have worked with Russians.

How do you establish these situations, and do so without violation of diplomatic principles? Because our Nation, our President, our Secretary of State, must deal with leaders as they are constituted now and with their foreign ministers and defense ministers.

But a very unique organization came from these considerations. It was called the National Endowment for Democracy.

It included Republicans, Democrats, labor officials, Chamber of Commerce people, and a check and balance so that our own American view had four dimensions. This was not ideological, not official, but arose from the best grassroots leadership of this country. And it was effective.

The changes in the world we now take for granted—the celebration we had at the 50th anniversary of NATO, the accession of Poland, Hungary and the Czech Republic into NATO—we take for granted that democracy there came forward.

The point I am making is that it did not come forward because our State Department advocated that and brought it about, although clearly they support the shift to democratic systems. There was no official governmental way of bringing about those responses, which require money, fledgling newspapers, grassroots organizations, a how you print ballots, and how you register voters. All the nitty-gritty of politics we take for granted, but which could not be taken for granted in those countries which had not enjoyed those options.

The issue before the Senate, very frankly, is that some Members I suspect may have become weary of the democracy business. They may think that was important then and this is now.

I would just suggest that at the NED board meetings which I attend regularly there are routinely 80 to 100 proposals in which the National Endowment for Democracy and its core groups debate on these principles. We take seriously the idea of democracy and human rights. We think that is still a very important subject in this world. This is not routine. It is not freely dismissed as something that was lost in the budget. It was not mentioned, but the State Department might find if it came to their attention.

We believe that the statement by the Senate ought to be clear—that we stand for democracy and the National Endowment for Democracy is a very good way to achieve democracy, and to do so year by year in a systematic and effective way.

I point out that it is important, I suppose, to have this debate each year as a wake-up call. There may come a time when we become so blasé and so routine about our functions that we forget human rights. But I hope that will never be the case.

I suspect that those who are still struggling in parts of southeastern Europe—certainly in many Asian countries—those who are considering democracy in China, those in Latin America and Africa and those who are still trying to make it work out in various provinces of Russia welcome our help. They welcome labor leaders and business leaders from this country. They welcome Senators like JOHN MCCAIN, who heads up the Republican Institute; or ORRIN HATCH, who was there at the beginning of the National Endowment.

Senator CONNIE MACK of Florida, one of our board members now, and Senator BOB GRAHAM of Florida, one of our board members now, have both been so effective in Latin America and Central America, and not just in the 1980's when we were all going down for inspection of elections, trying to help people find out how to campaign, and how to count votes successfully.

A lot of that heavy lifting still needs to be done.

Although this is a debate that I wish did not occur annually, but so be it. It is a time really for Senators to stand up and be counted on whether they feel passionately, as I do, and I think many of us do, about democracy and human rights and what we can do about it effectively.

I am simply making the point that the State Department cannot do that by force. We as American citizens working through grassroots organizations and through informal means can get the money and the organization to make a difference, which ultimately our President can recognize and our Secretary of State can bless.

I point out, parenthetically, that the incumbent Secretary of State, Madeline Albright, has served on the Board of the National Endowment for a number of years as has Zbigniew Brzezinski, as distinguished members of the Democratic Party. We now have Paul Wolfowitz, a distinguished American diplomat and scholar, as one of the Republicans, serving on the board.

This has been a case of people giving of their time and their substance in private life even as they go back and forth into the public sector and serve our country in that way.

I finally make the point that we are indebted to excellent editorials that appear in major newspapers in the last few days.

I simply quote a sentence from the New York Times editorial of yesterday in which they call for a vote for democracy abroad, a leading editorial. They say:

It is hard to think of a dictatorship whose opponents have not benefited from the endowment.

That I think is an important point.

As you name the dictatorships of this world, they knew what hit them. In most cases it was the Endowment for Democracy and its advocates, and its supporters that made the difference.

There may be all sorts of theories why these governments rose and fell. But I suggest that those of us who suggest it through the ballot box initiative really had to have a horse to ride on, and the means at least of making those alternatives effective.

I cite, for example, the current discussion in Serbia where many persons believe—starting with our President—that President Milosevic would not be a suitable candidate for reelection or for a continuation. But the press keeps pointing out, What are the alternatives? How do habits change, if it is to occur in a democratic way?

Where are the fair procedures? In fact, where has the United States been in terms of actively boosting those who wanted freedom, who wanted a different kind of Serbia, who espouse those values in this country but had no effective vehicle?

Those are the missions that lie ahead. I hope we will be worthy of the task. I advocate the adoption of the amendment.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arkansas.

Mr. HUTCHINSON. Mr. President, I rise today to support restoring funding for the National Endowment for Democracy and commend Senator LUGAR for offering this amendment. As reported from the Appropriations Committee, the National Endowment would receive zero funding for fiscal year 2000 with the assumption that the Department of State would provide money from its democracy and human rights accounts.

Since its inception in 1983, NED has sought to maintain an ideological balance, with a bipartisan, multisectoral core structure, as well as a bipartisan board. Its status of being simultaneously public and private has provided insulation from shifts and tides in changing administrations, allowing NED to focus on long-term democracy development. This independent role would be compromised if NED were subjected to State Department control.

For almost 16 years, NED has been instrumental in building the foundations of democracy in over 80 countries, including peaceful transitions in Poland, Chile, and South Africa. Today NED continues to support a diverse portfolio of democracy building initiatives. In the Sudan, NED funds support human rights monitoring and reporting. In the Newly Independent States (NIS) and in Russia, NED has been supporting anti-corruption efforts, market-based reforms, independent media, and civic education. These programs lie in the long term interest of the U.S. because they will help to promote stability in a region plagued by instability. They will help these countries to emerge from the mire of communism.

NED programs are also important in the People's Republic of China. Mr. President, I think we are all aware of the egregious human rights abuses perpetrated by the authoritarian government in China. The insecure government controls pastors and church members through state apparatus, imprisons prodemocracy advocates for their activities, and suppresses the truth through propaganda instead of allowing open media. Thousands of political prisoners languish in prison, many sentenced after unfair trials, others without any trial whatsoever.

Under the totalitarian regime in China, the political system is a sealed door with no clear signs of opening. Many in the United States have placed their faith in economic progress to produce some sort of eventual political change in China. I do not believe that we can afford to make such a dangerous assumption. Even as the Chinese people suffer, so too will the advocates of "trade at all costs" under the current political system, because of the absence of the rule of law. When trying to conduct business in China, American companies must deal with bureaucrats rather than regulations, evasions rather than enforcement, and convolution rather than competition—because there is no judicious rule of law.

We all want to see democracy in China. But we cannot assume that it will happen by itself. Instead, we must take steps to foster democracy. That is exactly what NED is about. NED funds over twenty programs to promote human rights and democracy in China.

With money from NED, the International Republican Institute supports electoral and legal reform.

The National Democratic Institute monitors civil and political liberties in Hong Kong following its transfer to China.

The Laogai Research Foundation, run by former dissident and prisoner Harry Wu, conducts in-depth research into China's forced labor prison camps.

Another NED grantee is run by chairman Lie Qing, who spent eleven years in prison for his involvement in the Democracy Wall movement. This organization has been invaluable in monitoring human rights conditions in China and has been helping victims' families bring criminal charges against Chinese leaders responsible for the 1989 Tiananmen killings.

NED also supports VIP Reference, an organization that has taken advantage of the Internet to promote the free flow of information in China—news that has not been filtered or altered by the Chinese government. Besides opening this conduit to freedom, NED also supports research and publications on democracy and constitutionalism, symposia on private enterprise and market economics, and publications relevant to Tibet.

Mr. President, these organizations are not rich by any means. In many cases, their staff works on a volunteer basis, out of their conviction to see freedom in China. They rely on funding from NED to stay in operation because other sources of funding from Hong Kong and Taiwan are scarce. Those potential sources fear offending China. Private businesses often will not fund these groups because they consider it too great a risk in light of their business interests in China. Only Congress has remained committed to funding these advocates of democracy. Without NED funding, we will cripple these programs and remove a key fulcrum in the push for democracy in China.

Democracy building is not a quick fix for totalitarianism, nor will it produce instant change. But in the long run, these programs will produce a result worth far more than they cost today.

I commend Senator LUGAR for taking this leadership role, for offering this amendment. I believe it is critically important we support and pass this amendment, not just for China but for advocates of democracy all over this world.

I urge my colleagues to support a restoration in the National Endowment for Democracy's funding for fiscal year 2000.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, we have all heard the expression stand and be counted for democracy.

Come on, give me a break. No one really thinks a Senator obviously elected to office is against democracy. No one in his right mind could think that the Department of State is against democracy and is incapable.

What we have is a deficit. The Congressional Budget Office estimates at this particular moment we are spending over $100 billion more than we are taking in this year. I didn't know this was coming up, but since I get questioned about there being no surplus for the year 1999, the Congressional Budget Office, as of June 30, estimated that we will spend this fiscal year, which ends at the end of September, $103 billion more than we take in.

The President's own document, the OMB projection, not only states we will have a deficit for the next 5 years, but the deficit and the debt will continue for a 15-year period, the debt going up from $5.6 trillion to $7.7 trillion. It is going up to 2.1 trillion bucks and everyone is running around talking about surplus, and we are getting 602(b) allocations at the Subcommittee on State, Justice, Commerce, of $1.3 billion less than we have this year. We are spending more than we are taking in, and otherwise trying to find $1.7 billion in the census.

Faced with those constrictions, I wonder where in the world do you find money for the Chamber of Commerce, the AFL-CIO, the Democratic Party and Republican Party—how do you justify it?

Back in the eighties we had Lech Walesa and they did have a wonderful labor movement and they did bring democracy there in Poland. But I don't know of the labor movement that is going on in the People's Republic of China. I have been there three times now and I have yet to meet a labor leader, much less the likes or ilk of Lech Walesa.

So, yes, we stand up to be counted for democracy. We are hoping to sustain the economic credibility of this particular republic by saying we have to make choices. I tried to pay for these programs. I have even introduced a value-added tax allocated to reducing the deficit and the debt and taking care of Social Security. But these friends who come to the floor and talk in fanciful terms about they are for democracy and independent movements for democracy—the inference being, of course, the State Department is not—on the contrary.

I hear about taking it from the Capital Investment Fund. I remember working some 4 years ago with Under Secretary Moose, Dick Moose, who used to be the director of our Foreign Relations Committee who the distinguished Senator from Indiana would remember well. Everybody is talking about security of the Embassies and facilities in the Department of State. The communications computerization of the Department of State and the Embassies overseas and around the world is in terrible shape. It is similar to the Pony Express. So 4 years ago we instituted the Capital Investment Fund to get Y2K compliance. The Chamber of Commerce, that crowd that was running all over the floor fixing the votes for Y2K—a problem that could not possibly happen for 6 months and everybody is beginning to comply and they wanted to upset 200 years of tort law back at the State level where they know how to administer it best—they came in to do that. And now they want to make darn sure the Department of State is not Y2K compliant.

Tell the Chamber of Commerce to look for democracy somewhere else and money somewhere else. The same for all these other entities that want to get NED, the National Endowment for Democracy. It is a political sop. It has been that for several years and everybody knows it.

We would like to give it all to desirable things. There have been some good things that happened under the National Endowment for Democracy years back, but they continue to embellish and run around with responsibilities they try to find, makeshift and otherwise, so they know it is going to be in trouble when they come to the floor. They get distinguished leadership to bring these amendments. I take it I will be in a minority, but I have gotten used to being a minority of the minority.

With that said, I hope we can save this amount of money somehow, the $30 million. It is not easy to get the moneys we need all over for the Department of State. I can tell you now, we are on course. To take $30 million from the telecommunications upgrades and computerization upgrades we are now about doing, and start cutting that back for the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, is out of the whole cloth for this Senator who stands here in the well for democracy.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I join with the Senator from South Carolina in his views on this issue. I recognize we will lose this vote, but we have had our brief day in the Sun at least. The fact is NED's time has gone by. For all the arguments that have been made by the Senators who have spoken on this, the bottom line is this is a relic of the cold war. In a time when we have very limited resources, it is very hard to justify funding the Democratic National Committee, the Republican National Committee, AFL-CIO, and the Chamber of Commerce, all of whom have significantly more resources to put into this than we have available for us out of these very limited accounts.

Many of the things NED has done during the time of the cold war were wonderful. But now we have moved on 10 years from the fall of the Berlin Wall and it is time for us to say enough is enough. Unfortunately, in my opinion, some of the things NED is doing now are not. They end up being a substitute for initiatives which are both inappropriate and sometimes just simply junkets.

That being said, I am concerned, as is the Senator from South Carolina, this will take funds out of the capital budget of the State Department. We have worked hard on this budget. We have taken the State Department from getting a "D" in the area of Y2K compliance to now, just 2 years later, it is one of the agencies getting an "A." Two years ago when we started capital budget expansion, which we initiated in this committee—it did not come from the State Department; although they were very supportive of it, they could not find resources for it—a majority of the Embassies around the world were using rotary telephones. They were using Wang computers. They had no decent facsimile machines. We have radically upgraded the electronic capabilities of the State Department. But we have a long, long, long way to go. It all ties into the need to protect our citizens who are working for us out there and their families.

So when you hit this fund for $30 million, which represents about 30 percent of the money—and this fund was not increased this year; although I wanted to increase it, we simply could not find the money—you are going to do significant damage, I think, to the State Department's accounts. The State Department, for that reason, is very concerned about this amendment.

That being said, the Senator from South Carolina, being one of the best vote counters in the Senate, and I, being a marginal vote counter as chief whip, we recognize we are not going to win this one. I think we should vote on it and move on. If the Senator from Indiana is agreeable to that, I suggest we urge adoption.

Mr. LUGAR. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. GREGG. Yes.

Mr. LUGAR. I appreciate very much the words of the Senator and I appreciate the desire to move on with the bill. I want to recognize the distinguished Senator from Florida has arrived. He, likewise, shares our enthusiasm for passing the amendment.

Mr. GREGG. I am sure.

Mr. MACK. Mr. President, on this occasion of the almost annual debate on NED, the National Endowment for Democracy, we can and we must declare our commitment to promoting freedom in the world.

Freedom often exacts a price—it indeed is not free. Ronald Reagan understood this when he created NED, as have successive Presidents and Congresses who have consistently funded NED.

Freedom is sacred. It is to be honored, protected, and shared with the world. It is the core of all human progress, and therefore, the spread of freedom enriches us all.

But let us not forget, the price of freedom can be great. Just as we focus in this body these days on our abundance we must not forget those who have come before us; we must not forget in whose shoes we are walking. How many Americans have died; have put their lives on the line in the glorious pursuit of that sweetest of goals—emancipation from oppression and tyranny. We are the direct benefactors of the dedication, selflessness, and even the spilled blood, of countless people.

Should we be proud of those achievements? Of course, but we must also accept the weight—the responsibility—of this gift. The awesome responsibility which we have inherited. Because, when I said that freedom is not free, I was not only speaking of the cost to those currently suffering in the world to throw off the yoke of tyranny, but also the price to us, the benefactors of past actions.

We are once again on the floor of the Senate to defend the National Endowment for Democracy. The last time we fought this battle, 2 years ago, 72 Senators voted to restore the funding to NED after the subcommittee zeroed the account. We are here today facing the same circumstances. The good news with the regularity of this debate, if we look for the bright side, is that we know very well of the strong support in the Senate for NED. And let me explain why.

The history is important. In 1983, Ronald Reagan outlined an initiative for the United States to publicly lead the struggle for freedom around the world. A policy which I remember well as a young House Member and in many ways continues to influence my thinking about American foreign policy. A fundamental pillar of that policy was the National Endowment for Democracy.

Let me read to you from a letter by President Reagan, from July 4, 1993.

On this 217th anniversary of our nation's independence, I am reminded that America's greatness lies not only in our success at home, but in the example of leadership that we provide the entire world.

Our work, however, is not complete. As I look abroad, I see that the struggle between freedom and tyranny continues to be wages. Disappointingly, in some places, it is autocracy, not freedom, that is winning the day. That is why I strongly support continued Congressional funding for the National Endowment for Democracy (NED). Ten years ago, at Westminster, you will recall that I outlined a new, bold initiative for our country to publicly lead the struggle for freedom abroad. As past of this effort, at my request, the National Endowment for Democracy was created.

Mr. President, let me point out a few fundamental things. First, NED is not a "cold war relic," as some critics argue. You will note that President Reagan did not say that the purpose was to defeat communism, to defeat the Soviet Union, or to contain any particular ideology. He said that the mission of NED was to support America's efforts to "lead the struggle for freedom." You should also note that the letter from which I read is dated July 4, 1993—2 years after the fall of the Soviet Union. So let me be clear: NED is not about the cold war and has never been exclusively about fighting communism or the Soviet Union. The National Endowment for Democracy is about freedom.

My second point is that the need for NED is as great today as it has ever been.

We opposed communism because the flawed ideology oppresses people and empowers tyrants. Communism has almost disappeared as a threat today; but tyranny has not—oppression has not. Indeed, tyranny and oppression continue to rule in far too many places around the globe. If you accept that we were right in the past to oppose freedom's foes, then we have the same task today, perhaps even more complicated than in the past.

This vote, therefore, comes down to a simple issue: does the struggle for freedom continue in the world and does the United States continue to have a role in the struggle for freedom abroad? Does tyranny still reign in far too many places on earth? The answer is quite obviously, "yes."

Let me address some critical questions others have raised.

Does NED work? NED works extremely well by providing resources to the freedom-activists throughout the world. NED identifies people struggling for economic, political, labor, press, and other reforms and gets them the resources necessary to fight against local oppression.

His Holiness the Dalai Lama of Tibet says the following about NED:

The National Endowment for Democracy furthers the goals of your great nation and has provided moral and substantive support for oppressed peoples everywhere. Its unique independent mission has brought information and hope to people committed to peace and freedom, including the Tibetans. I sincerely hope that this institution will continue to receive support, because America's real strength comes not from its status as a 'superpower' but from the ideals and principles on which it was founded.

So the final question which someone may rightly put to this debate: why not the State Department? Isn't NED redundant?

To answer this question, I defer to some experts who understand the executive branch and State Department well. I turn to a bipartisan group of former Secretaries of State and National Security Advisors.

In a 1995 letter, former National Security Advisors Allen, Carlucci, Brzezinski, and Scowcroft state that NED:

... operates in situations where direct government involvement is not appropriate. It is an exceptionally effective instrument in today's climate for reaching dedicated groups seeking to counter extreme nationalist and autocratic forces that are responsible for so much conflict and instability.

Let me emphasize that these National Security Advisors state that NED is operating where the U.S. government cannot.

I also have a letter from former Secretaries of State, including Secretaries Baker, Muskie, Eagleburger, Shultz, Haig, Vance, and Kissinger. This distinguished group states the following:

During this period of international change and uncertainty, the work of NED continues to be an important bipartisan but non-governmental contributor to democratic reform and freedom. We consider the non-governmental character of the NED even more relevant today than it was at NED's founding.

Let me review the main arguments. First, NED's necessity did not end with the cold war, but remains an integral part of America's opposition to the enemies of freedom. Second, the world continues to need America's invaluable work in promoting freedom—perhaps even now more than ever. And finally, NED makes a unique contribution to America's initiative to "lead the struggle for freedom abroad."

Mr. KERREY. Mr. President, I rise today in support of the Lugar Amendment to restore funding to the National Endowment for Democracy.

One of the noblest characteristics of the American people is their desire to spread the promise of freedom and democracy throughout the world. In fact, the history of our nation is replete with examples of men and women who have put their own lives on the line in defense of other people's freedom.

The 9,386 U.S. soldiers buried at the Normandy American Cemetery in France are more than heroes. They are a testimony to the American willingness to defend democracy. Yet, they are just a few of the literally hundreds of thousands of Americans who have sacrificed their lives to secure democracy both at home and abroad.

However, the fight for freedom need not always be waged on the battlefield. Indeed, some of the greatest democratic victories have come, not as a result of our military might, but rather from the power of our ideas.

If you doubt this, ask Vaclav Havel how the irresistible pull of democratic values helped liberate the Czech people. Ask Nelson Mandela about how the persuasive power of American democracy helped encourage the struggle for freedom in South Africa's townships. Ask Kim Dae Jung about the decades of American sacrifice and the difference between life in a free South Korea and a totalitarian North Korea. Mr. President, each of these men have come before Congress to say that their freedom is due in no small part to the willingness of the American people to oppose despotism and to support nascent democratic movements in their country.

The transformation from totalitarianism to democracy that has swept much of the world in the last decade is nothing short of remarkable. Much of the success of this movement can be attributed to U.S. support for democratic movements, including the on-the-ground programs of the National Endowment for Democracy. This is a legacy of which we should be proud. It's a success story we should do a better job of explaining to the American people.

NED was established by Congress in 1983 as a non-profit, bi-partisan organization. It promotes democratic values by encouraging the development of democracy in a manner consistent with U.S. interests, assisting pro-democracy groups abroad, and strengthening electoral processes and democratic institutions. NED accomplishes these goals by providing funding to a wide variety of grantees that operate programs in more than 80 countries throughout the world.

Mr. President, for over 15 years the National Endowment for Democracy has been at the center of our global democracy efforts. Critics have argued it is a relic of the Cold War. They insist NED's usefulness as an organization disappeared with the Soviet Union. This simply is not the case. As long as there are people still struggling to be free, there will be a need to support democratic reforms. The truth is, almost two-fifths of the world's population still live in un-democratic countries. In these countries, people are not given the ability to speak their minds, to practice their religious beliefs, or to unleash the power of their own enterprise.

NED grantees are in these countries and are working with pro-democracy groups. In Cuba, NED grantees are helping local dissidents use the world wide web to interconnect and to spread independent news. NED sponsors radio broadcasts into Burma in support of the democracy movement led by Aung San Suu Kyi. And in Iraq, NED provides support for the Free Iraq Foundation to disseminate human rights information from within Saddam Hussein's brutal regime.

Beyond extending the power of democracy to those people still toiling under despotic governments, NED is also actively engaged in the effort to solidify democratic progress. Democracy does not exist simply after the first free and fair election—democracy cannot be established solely by the ballot box. Instead, a true democratic society is based on the foundations of the rule of law, respect for the rights of all people, a free press, and civilian control of the military.

In countries around the world, NED grantees are involved in helping develop this broader concept of democracy. For example, in Russia NED grantees are supporting efforts to promote the rule of law and to establish legal guarantees for the ownership of land. In Nigeria, they have supported local pro-democracy groups who were instrumental in facilitating this year's historic elections. These are examples of the hundreds of programs NED and its grantees have been involved with in support of democratic reform.

Mr. President, I come to the floor today to argue that the fight for democracy is as important to U.S. national security today as it was at the height of the Cold War. It is for this reason that I will vote in favor of the Lugar amendment to restore funding for the National Endowment for Democracy. I recognize the tight discretionary spending limits the Chairman and Ranking Member of the Subcommittee were forced to work under. I understand very difficult decisions had to be made in preparing the piece of legislation. However, there are few priorities as great, and few programs as cost-effective, as our global democracy efforts.

I urge my colleagues to support freedom around the world by supporting the National Endowment for Democracy and the Lugar amendment.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. President, this amendment will restore $30 million in funding for the National Endowment for Democracy.

I understand that the State Department accounts are severely underfunded and there is no easy way to fund these programs, and I will work to ensure that all the State Department accounts are funded by the time this bill emerges from conference.

In spite of the unfortunate position we now find ourselves, it is nevertheless critical that we restore the funding for the National Endowment for Democracy.

Today we will debate the merits of the NED and the importance of its mission. This will be the seventh time in the last seven years that the Senate debates NED funding.

The last time this debate took place, in 1997, an effort to eliminate NED funding was reversed by a vote of 72-27.

I am hopeful that this current debate will reach a similar conclusion.

But this debate is really about much more than the National Endowment for Democracy.

What we are debating here today goes to the very fundamental nature of our democracy.

Are we to continue to be the beacon of freedom to which oppressed peoples around the world look to for guidance and support in their struggles to attain the same liberties and freedoms that we hold so dear?

Or are we going to shrink from that responsibility and abandon those who seek to change the fundamental character of their nations so that their people may enjoy the benefits of freedom?

Around the world, the NED is a vibrant and effective advocate for the ideals for which our fore fathers risked their lives and sacred honors.

It is our ambassador to the oppressed people of the world who are fighting and risking their lives for freedom.

But you don't need to take my word for this. Let me tell you about some others who believe that the NED is as important as I do.

In 1995, seven former Secretaries of State sent a letter to the congressional leadership that stated:

During this period of international change and uncertainty, the work of the NED continues to be an important bi-partisan but non-governmental contributor to democratic reform and freedom.

Four Former National Security Advisors, Allen, Brzezinski, Carlucci, and Scowcroft, wrote that "the endowment remains a critical and cost-effective investment in a more secure America, and we support its work."

Just this week, the New York Times editorialized on the importance of the NED, and the Wall Street Journal printed a piece by former President Carter and Paul Wolfowitz, an official in the Reagan and Bush administrations, that did the same.

So many as champions of democracy have recognized the important contribution of NED to their own work.

These include Harry Wu, the Chinese human rights activist, His Holiness the Dalai Lama, Elena Bonner, the chairman of the Andrei Sakharov Foundation, and Vaclav Havel.

To some here in Congress, the NED is a target to undermine and defund.

But to those struggling to overcome oppression in some 80 or 90 countries around the world, NED is a helping hand in their fight for democracy.

I ask my colleagues to stand with those who have led democratic transitions, and to stand with those who continue to pursue the dream of democracy around the world.

I ask my colleagues to stand with the NED.

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, I rise today in strong support of the Lugar amendment, which will restore funding for the National Endowment for Democracy (NED). Since its inception in 1983, NED has been a cost-effective means of ensuring that American democratic principles have the opportunity to flourish around the world. NED works on a bipartisan basis in over 80 countries in every region of the world to help build stable, peaceful democracies. This, in turn, furthers America's national security interests, since working to support secure, strong democracies is one of the most effective means of combating the spread of weapons of mass destruction, terrorism, and destabilizing refugee problems.

NED enjoys strong, bipartisan support, receiving the support of each administration and the bipartisan congressional leadership since its inception. In a recent editorial in the Wall Street Journal, former President Jimmy Carter and Ambassador Paul Wolfowitz, President Bush's Under Secretary of Defense, wrote: "The creation of the NED in the 1980s reflected a bipartisan belief that the promotion of freedom is an enduring American interest and that nongovernmental representatives would best be able to help their counterparts build democracy in other countries."

NED has a strong track record, developed through involvement in virtually every critical struggle for democracy of the past decade-and-a-half. NED provided vital support to the movements that brought about peaceful transitions to democracy in Poland, Chile, and South Africa. Indeed, as a recent New York Times editorial noted: "It is hard to think of a dictatorship whose opponents have not benefited from the endowment.”

NED uses its funds efficiently and effectively. A recent audit conducted by the U.S. Information Agency’s Inspector General looked at fiscal years 1994–1999 and did not question a single cost related to the management of NED’s grants.

NED’s independence is the key to its success. Without the restoration of NED’s funding as a separate, congressionally mandated line item, NED will have to be funded through the State Department’s foreign aid process. This would undermine NED’s independence, and therefore its effectiveness.

If NED were to be too closely associated with the Department of State, then NED might be seen as merely a mouthpiece for whatever administration currently occupies the White House. This would dilute its effectiveness.

NED must be allowed to continue to make decisions about where to provide its vital assistance without having first to clear those decisions through the State Department bureaucracy, which may not always share NED’s agenda. The United States carries out high-level diplomatic relations with a number of nondemocratic regimes, such as China. The State Department might be tempted to scale back NED’s democracy-building activities in such countries if the Department viewed those activities as interfering with the Department’s diplomatic agenda. This must not be allowed to happen, and keeping NED independent is the only way to ensure that it does not.

The Lugar amendment restores funding for this vital organization while ensuring its independence. I urge my colleagues to support this amendment.

Mr. SARBANES. Mr. President, I rise to express my support for the amendment of the Senator from Indiana and am confident that it will be approved by a majority of my colleagues.

This is the second time in 3 years that funding for the National Endowment for Democracy has been eliminated in the Senate Commerce-Justice-State appropriations bill. And this is the second time this year that we are debating the NED issue on the floor of the Senate despite consistently overwhelming votes in favor of the NED.

I find it difficult to understand why we keep returning to this matter when the record is clear—there is a consensus of support for the endowment in the Senate. As my colleagues are aware, last month there was an effort on a different measure (State Department authorization bill) to seriously undermine and weaken the National Endowment for Democracy and the work of its core institutes. That amendment was soundly defeated on a vote of 76–23. In 1997, NED funding was restored by the Senate on a vote of 72–27.

Over the years, the NED and its core institutes have done some extremely effective work around the world in strengthening and assisting in the development of democratic institutions, and protecting individual rights and freedoms.

The relationship between NED and its core institutes has worked rather well. These four core entities, including the National Democratic Institute (NDI) and the International Republican Institute (IRI), represent key sectors of our democratic society: business and labor, and the two political parties which have formed a major part of the American democratic system.

Each sector offers a special expertise in helping develop fledgling democratic systems and has assisted grassroots and indigenous organizations, civic groups, and individuals across the globe in more than 90 countries.

Indeed, many individuals and groups, recognized in the Congress for having fought for human rights, freedom, and democracy, have received vital support from the NED family. They, in turn, have praised the NED because of the critical assistance which made it possible for them to pursue valuable efforts in their own countries.

I should note that the NED has provided support to Chinese dissidents since its establishment in 1983. In fact, the endowment’s first grant in 1984 was for a Chinese-language journal edited in the United States and circulated in China.

The NED serves an important role because of the fact that it can operate as an entity independent from any government. And it can support nongovernmental groups which provide opportunities that would not otherwise be available if these activities were undertaken by a government, or governmental agency.

In fact, NED grants have been helpful in leveraging resources from the private sector and encouraging other international institutions to participate as well. And in-kind contributions, for example, come in the form of experts who offer their free time and efforts on a pro bono basis to conduct training seminars and to monitor elections worldwide.

The National Endowment for Democracy has enjoyed broad bipartisan support since it was established in 1983 under President Ronald Reagan. Former Secretaries of State, including Henry Kissinger, Cy Vance, Ed Muskie, George Shultz, and Jim Baker all have been very supportive of NED’s work and its “strong track record in assisting . . . significant democratic movements over the past decade.”

In a letter this week to my colleague from Florida, national security adviser Sandy Berger reaffirmed the President’s and his administration’s strong support for the NED. As he indicates, “from supporting election monitoring in Indonesia, to promoting independent media in the Balkans, the NED represents and promotes the most fundamental of American values throughout the world. . . . The President remains one of the strongest champions of the endowment”.

The sweeping and profound changes resulting from the end of the cold war provide ample reason as to why we continue to need institutions like the NED which can operate in a cost-effective manner and, at the same time, promote our interests and values. Many of the new democracies which have emerged from the implosion of the Soviet Union, and the collapse of the Iron Curtain, have benefited from the assistance NED and its grantees have provided.

It is my hope that my colleagues will see the wisdom of continuing support for the NED.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I rise today as a cosponsor of the LUGAR-Graham-Mack amendment to restore funding to the National Endowment for Democracy. I rise as an unwavering supporter of the Endowment since that day in 1982, when President Ronald Reagan announced his intent to create an institution to promote abroad the most fundamental of American political values—democracy.

Since the Endowment was instituted the following year, it has received overwhelming bipartisan support. On six occasions the Senate has debated funding for the NED; on all six occasions the Senate has reaffirmed its commitment. We most recently debated funding the Endowment in 1997 and reaffirmed our support for it in a vote of 72–27. I expect that today the Senate will once again go on record demonstrating support for this venerable institution.

Support for the NED goes beyond bipartisan politics. Rarely is there such near-unanimity in the so-called “foreign policy establishment.” But, in recent years, we have seen seven former Secretaries of State from both Republican and Democratic presidents—Secretaries Eagleburger, Baker, Haig, Kissinger, Muskie, Shultz and Vance—co-sign a letter in support of the National Endowment for Democracy.

But the NED’s support extends well beyond the Beltway into American society at large. For example, the U.S. Chamber of Commerce strongly supports the Endowment, recognizing that the promotion of democracy requires the rule of law, on which all fundamental, productive commercial activity rests. The AFL-CIO is also a principal supporter of the NED, recognizing the inseparable bond between the advancement of democracy and the protection of independent labor’s right to organize.

Both of these organizations, along with the Republican and Democrat parties, form the core groups through which the NED coordinates programs currently active in over 80 countries of the world.

Further, support for the NED is widespread among our nation's media, editorialists and academics. How often, Mr. President, do we see editorials in support of an institution on the pages of liberal and conservative media? There has recently been editorial support for NED expressed by The Washington Post, New York Times, Wall Street Journal and The Washington Times. I ask unanimous consent that the editorials be added at the conclusion of my statement.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(See exhibit 1.)

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I often detect confusion in foreign policy debate between the concepts of "interest" and "values." For example, the President, at the end of Operation Allied Force over Yugoslavia, declared it an operation in support of our values. I disagree: The NATO actions in Kosovo, which I supported, protected American interests, specifically our interests in a stable southeastern Europe.

The fact is that defining America's national interest is more fundamental than the promotion of democracy. But the reality is, Mr. President, that where we find democracy we are more likely to find it easier to protect our interests.

For this reason, the advancement of democracy as a foreign policy goal has by no means been diminished by the end of the Cold War. I supported the actions of the NED during the Cold War, along with members of both parties. I worked with the NED and International Labor Organization supporting the nascent Solidarity movement in the early 1980s and am deeply proud of the work done by NED's early grantees.

But the world is more complicated, with more challenges to U.S. interests, in the post-Cold War era. We need the NED more than ever. And if we look around this complicated globe, we see that NED's activities are complementing our foreign policy.

China is perhaps the most vexing challenge this country faces. We cannot determine the direction political evolution in China will take. We hope for the day when democracy spreads to the mainland.

Our dear friends in Taiwan, after all, have demonstrated that Chinese political culture is by no means alien to democracy. But on the mainland, the goals of political reform are murky. We don't know what the outcome will be in the next century—it may be democracy, it may be fascism, it may be something else.

There is evidence to be optimistic, as we see the increasing manifestations of grassroots democracy and openness. Unfortunately, there is also evidence to be skeptical, given official actions that imprison democratic activists, outlaw non-political organizations, and threaten aggression against us and our friends. My attitude has always been to plan for the worst, but work for the best possible outcome.

One of those ways to work for the best possible outcome is to support the NED, which has promoted democracy in China since its inception. A brief and incomplete list of NED's activities in China would include:

Supporting, as one of its first grants, a Chinese-language journal that circulated in China in the mid-1980s;

Supporting a New York-based human rights group, Human Rights in China, which assembled basic data on conditions in China;

Assisting Harry Wu's Laogai Research Foundation, which exposed the abhorrent abuses in China's prison labor system; and,

Contributing to the Tibetan Human Rights Foundation.

In addition, my colleagues who have read the fascinating reports by the International Republican Institute on their work advising on and monitoring village level elections in China will recognize a practical and profoundly significant activity funded by the Endowment. These are among many, many other programs supported by the NED in China.

The skeptics can say that NED's activities are small in comparison to Beijing's power to suppress. That is true. But my view is that it is always better to light a candle than curse the darkness, and the NED has been providing light and support to democrats in China, throughout Asia, and all around the world.

Indonesia just had its first free and open elections in over 40 years. Indonesia is the fourth most populous nation in the world after China, India and the United States.

As a result of this election, a country that has historically had good relations with us, a country that remains of great geostrategic importance, is now set to become the world's third largest democracy. Indonesia is a country with which we've had shared interests; those interests are now advanced because we now have shared political values. The ruling and opposition parties consulted with the NED throughout the period leading to these historic elections.

I could go on and on about NED's activities promoting democracy around the world. I will simply add one more example: Three weeks ago a remarkable conference on emerging democracies was held in Yemen. Yemen, my colleagues will recall, was divided until 1990—South Yemen was one of the most radical countries in the Arab world.

Since reunification in 1990, the NED has worked through its core institutes, the International Republican Institute and the National Democratic Institute, to support that country's transition to democracy. Yemen has had two parliamentary elections and is today one of the few Arab nations that has universal suffrage.

The government of Yemen deserves the credit for this remarkable political evolution and deserves the support of the United States. But we should be proud, very proud, of the efforts that the NED has expounded in assisting this political reform. And, three weeks ago, when representatives from around the world convened in Yemen to see that this nation of 18 million can enhance its culture and empower its people through democracy, it was appropriate that they saw the NED as a supporter of democracy there, and everywhere.

In recognition of these and other activities, brave democracy proponents around the world—individuals that Congress regularly lauds, that we regularly bring to the Hill for their perspectives on their parts of the world—these individuals have spoken of the need to preserve the NED.

Hong Kong's Martin Lee, Chinese human rights activist Harry Wu, Vietnamese human rights activist Vo Van Ai, his Eminence the Dalai Lama have all declared the fundamental and irreplaceable importance of the NED in trying to advance democratic values in China, in Asia, around the world.

I urge my colleagues to think of these individuals as they determine whether the Senate should continue to support funding for the National Endowment for Democracy.

In every region of the world where the U.S. has interests or is challenged—in Bosnia, Kosovo, Iraq—there are people striving and risking their lives for democratic expression. They see the United States as a role model.

The NED is actively working with all of these people, and in doing so, demonstrates America's—and Congress's—commitment to their causes. I urge my colleagues to continue their support for this important institution.

A VOTE FOR DEMOCRACY ABROAD

In most repressive countries today, civic activists such as election monitors, labor organizers, independent journalists and human rights groups look to Washington for support. But the Senate may vote any day to end one of their most important lifelines. Judd Gregg, Republican of New Hampshire, has persuaded the Appropriations Committee to recommend that the National Endowment for Democracy's funding drop from $31 million to zero. The Senate should defy him and vote to preserve an organization whose mission is more vital than ever.

The endowment finances four international affairs institutes, run by the Republican and Democratic parties, the Chamber of Commerce and the A.F.L.-C.I.O. The endowment also gives money directly to organizations abroad that promote the rule of law and democracy. One of its strengths is that its budget is independent of the State Department.

It is hard to think of a dictatorship whose opponents have not benefited from the endowment. Among hundreds of other projects, it has provided money and advice for village elections and exposure of prison labor camps in China, human rights groups in Sudan, independent broadcasting in Serbia, families of political prisoners in Cuba and the underground labor movement in Myanmar. Augusto Pinochet might still be ruling Chile if the National Democratic Institute had not helped the opposition set up a parallel vote count during the 1988 plebiscite on his rule, which caught Mr. Pinochet's attempt to rig the outcome. The endowment has earned the right to remain healthy and independent.

DON'T TAKE DEMOCRACY FOR GRANTED

(By Jimmy Carter and Paul Wolfowitz)

Last month Indonesia held its first free elections in more than 40 years. The balloting was overseen by a wide array of international observers, including an American delegation organized by the National Democratic Institute and the International Republican Institute. Their efforts have laid the groundwork for Indonesia to become the world's third-largest democracy (after India and the U.S.) and a beacon of freedom for Asians and Muslims everywhere.

This is only the latest good work done by the two groups, loosely affiliated with the major U.S. political parties, which monitored an election in Nigeria earlier this year. Both groups are funded by a modest grant ($4 million each) provided by the National Endowment for Democracy.

Fifteen years ago President Reagan and Congress established the NED to spearhead America's nongovernmental efforts at assisting democratic movements around the world. The NED, which today has a budget of just $31 million, has been one of the most cost-effective investments our country has made to foster peace and democracy.

But last month a Senate subcommittee voted to discontinue funding for this vital program. The senators said they expect the State Department to fund the NED out of foreign-aid spending. This is an unlikely prospect, because the State Department hasn't made any provisions for the endowment.

Even if it did, that would undermine the NED's independence. The creation of the NED in the 1980s reflected a bipartisan belief that the promotion of freedom is an enduring American interest and that nongovernmental representatives would best be able to help their counterparts build democracy in other countries.

Today the full Senate is expected to consider an amendment sponsored by Sen. Richard Lugar (R., Ind.) to restore funding for the NED. It would be a tragic mistake if we took for granted the current democratic trend in world affairs and decided to reduce our support for these efforts.

Like Indonesia, many important countries that have conducted elections—among them Russia, Mexico and Nigeria—need the support of free nations in order to consolidate democratic gains. We must also help movements in Asia and the Middle East striving peacefully to democratize authoritarian countries. And we need to encourage free and fair elections as part of the reconstruction effort in the Balkans. Defunding the NED would undermine this important mission.

EXPORTING DEMOCRACY

The National Endowment for Democracy is one of the less known but, in the foreign policy universe, one of the more appreciated aspects of the Ronald Reagan legacy. Congressionally funded but largely independent in its operations, it mainly gives grants to the two political parties and leading business and labor groups to spread the word of civil societies, party development and election procedures, and democratic and human rights advocacy. Recognized abroad, it is scrutinized closely at home, which is fine but a bit unnerving to its supporters all the same.

This week, for instance, Sen. Russell Feingold (D-Wis.), in an authorization bill, sought to strip the endowment of its favor for and reliance on the four "core" groups and to put the whole of the institution's $30 million budget up for competitive political bidding. It sounded like a reasonable, even democratic proposal, but three-quarters of the Senate wisely accepted the response that the endowment, with its support for the two parties and the AFL-CIO and Chamber of Commerce, already builds in a wholesome set of checks and balances true to the spirit of American democracy.

A lingering difficulty arises from Sen. Judd Gregg (R-NH). Making use of the deference enjoyed by Appropriations subcommittee chairmen, he has held up all funds sought for the endowment. He would prefer that the administration take the money out of the State Department, which, he points out, funds democracy promotion under its own budget.

Mr. Gregg is right that the Cold War is over. But considerations of strategy as well as sentiment require that the effort to sustain fledgling democratic societies and initiatives ought to be a permanent part of American policy. To tuck the endowment into the State Department, moreover, would deprive it of precisely the independence wherein its chief value lies. Can you imagine, for instance, the "engagement"-minded State Department sponsoring Chinese nongovernmental organizations?

In sum, the endowment is an experiment to exporting democracy that has been working openly, for 15 years. It has been tested in heavy political weather, some of it churned up by its own early misuses. There is reason to believe the Senate would support the appropriation if Sen. Gregg were to let it register its judgment. That would be the democratic thing for him to do.

[From the Washington Post, June 24, 1999]

LET THE NED LIVE

At a time when the United States and its allies are engaged in what could be a prolonged war of words with Serbian leader Slobodan Milosevic, it is nothing less than astounding that the U.S. Senate should see fit to zero out funding for one of the most important tools in the nation's ideological arsenal, the National Endowment for Democracy. Mr. Milosevic may have acknowledged military defeat, but he still clings to power with the tenacity of a badger. A major problem in removing Mr. Milosevic is the regrettable fact that he was in fact democratically elected by the Serbs, who therefore also carry responsibility for what happened to them. It will take some effort to persuade them to remove their leader again by democratic means.

This is where the National Endowment for Democracy comes in, and also the other U.S.

services and international broadcasters devoted to spreading free and unfettered information and building democratic institutions. To dwell on Serbia for a moment, the state television channel is run by none other than Mr. Milosevic's daughter, a filial relationship replayed throughout the states of the former Soviet Union, where assorted family members routinely are placed in charge of the post-communist "free" media.

If we are concerned about spreading democracy, and we should be, institutions like the National Endowment for Democracy remains vital. What is also vital is that the NED be kept at arm's length from State Department interference, that it not be seen as simply a tool of American foreign policy, but an institution whose basic mission remains fixed.

This year, the Clinton administration has requested $32 million in funding for the NED for fiscal year 2000, hardly an exorbitant sum given that the NED has programs in 80 countries around the world. Though there is broad bipartisan support in the Senate for the NED, its funding has been zeroed out by the Appropriations subcommittee on Commerce, Justice, State, chaired by Sen. Judd Gregg. It has been suggested that funding ought to come out of the State Department's democracy fund, a bad idea both in principle and in practice—seeing that no such funding has been allocated. Last time the NED survived a frontal assault, it was two years ago when funding was restored on the Senate floor with overwhelming support. Another line of assault was blocked by the Senate yesterday by a 76-23 vote, as Sen. Russ Feingold tried to introduce an amendment to micromanage NED grants through State.

One might get the idea that the U.S. Senate does not consider the promotion of democracy a worthy cause in and of itself. No, it does not produce instant results, but the world's greatest democracy should be in this for the long haul.

Mr. LUGAR. Mr. President, I urge the question.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no further debate, the question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 1289) was agreed to.

Mr. LUGAR. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. GREGG. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. FITZGERALD). The Senator from New Hampshire.

PRIVILEGE OF THE FLOOR

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that Mai-Huong Nguyen, a fellow with Senator FRIST's office, be granted the privilege of the floor during the discussion on the Commerce-State-Justice appropriations bill.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GREGG. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 1291

(Purpose: To amend title III of the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act and title IV of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 to limit the effects of domestic violence on the lives of children, and for other purposes)

Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Minnesota [Mr. WELLSTONE], for himself and Mrs. MURRAY, proposes an amendment numbered 1291.

Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(The text of the amendment is printed in today's RECORD under "Amendments Submitted.")

Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, this amendment that I offer, with the support of Senator MURRAY, is an amendment which is really based upon a piece of legislation we have introduced titled "Children Who Witness Domestic Violence Protection Act."

We have come to the floor, Democrats and Republicans alike, and we have talked about the destructive effect of some of the violence that children see on television or children see at the movies. Unfortunately, an awful lot of children see the most graphic violence in their homes, and they are affected by it.

It depends upon, really, whose study you put the most emphasis on, but somewhere between 3 million and 5 million children in our country all too often are essentially victims of violence in their homes. In about 50 percent of the cases, when a man batters a woman, the children are also battered. Just imagine, colleagues, what it would be like over and over and over again to see your mother beaten up, battered. Just think of the effect it would have on you.

Actually, this is an area in which I have tried to do a lot of work. I would say my wife Sheila has really been my teacher. She knows more than I do, and her education comes from what lots of people around the country who have worked in this area for a very long time have taught her.

But one of the missing pieces, which in no way, shape, or form takes away the emphasis on the effect of this violence on women—sometimes men; most all the time women—one of the missing pieces has been the effect of this violence in homes on the children. Let me give you some examples.

Julie is a 4-year-old girl. She was the only witness to her divorced mother's fatal stabbing. Several months earlier, at the time of the divorce, Julie's father had publicly threatened to kill his ex-wife. Although the father lacked an alibi for the night of the crime, there was no physical evidence linking him to the homicide.

In describing the event, Julie consistently placed her father at the scene and recounted her father's efforts to clean up prior to leaving. Only after the district attorney saw Julie stabbing a pillow, crying, "Daddy pushed mommy down," did he become convinced that the father, indeed, was the murderer.

This is from the work of Jeff Edelson, who actually is a Minnesotan and does some of the most important work in the country. There is no more graphic example of: What do you think the effect on the child is from seeing this?

Dr. Okin and Alicia Lieberman at San Francisco General Hospital are currently treating a 6-year-old boy who observed his father fatally sever his mother's neck. At the beginning of the treatment, he was unable to speak.

Jason, who did not visually witness his parents fighting, described hearing fights this way: "I really thought somebody got hurt. It sounded like it. And I almost started to cry. It felt really, I was thinking of calling, calling the cops or something because it was really getting, really big banging and stuff like that."

These are voices of children in the country.

A lot of the work for this amendment comes from some people who have done very distinguished work in this country.

Betsy McAlister Groves at Boston Hospital is treating a 3-year-old girl, Sarah, who was brought in by her maternal grandmother. Sarah was having nightmares and was clinging and anxious during the day. Her mother had been fatally shot while Sarah was in the same room in their home.

A home is supposed to be a safe place for our children.

Betsy is also treating two boys, ages 5 and 7, whose mother brought them in after they witnessed their father's assault on her. The father was arrested over the weekend and was in jail. The mother was unable to tell the sons the truth, instead claiming that their father had taken a trip to Virginia.

What I am saying to you is that these children do not need to turn on the evening news. They do not need to see the violence in the movies or on television. It occurs right in their own homes.

What I am also saying is that this has a very destructive effect on many children, a profound effect, placing them at high risk for anxiety, depression, and, potentially, suicide. Furthermore, these children themselves may become more violent as they become older. Exposure to family violence, a good number of the experts in the country suggest, is the strongest predictor of violent, delinquent behavior among adolescents. It is estimated somewhere between 20 and 40 percent of chronically violent adolescents have witnessed extreme parental conflict.

It is an important point. When you talk to your judges, and they talk about some of the kids they are dealing with, they will tell you that in a very high percentage of the cases these children have come from homes where either they themselves have been beaten up or battered or they have seen it, they have witnessed it. Usually it is their mother they have seen beaten up.

Let me tell you about Tony and Sara from Minnesota. Tony is 10 years old and his sister Sara is 8. Tony and Sara were severely traumatized after seeing their father brutally attack their mother. They were forced to watch their father drag their mother out to the driveway, douse her with gasoline, and hold a flaming match inches from her.

Tony and Sara are not the only children in our country who are terrified by violence that they see on almost a daily basis.

This amendment, which is based upon work with Senator MURRAY, is a comprehensive first step toward confronting the impact of domestic violence on children. I just want to summarize it because it is my hope that there will be strong support for this on both sides of the aisle.

First of all, what we want to do, based upon, again, work we have seen in Minnesota, we have seen in Boston, we have seen in San Francisco, seen around the country, is we want to make sure we develop partnerships between the courts and the schools, the health care providers, the child protective services, and the battered women's programs.

When communities apply for funding, the first thing we are going to say is, yes, make this happen at the community level, but do not have different agencies with different mandates. You guys have to show us that you are focusing on these children and you are getting the support services to these children.

I say to my colleague from South Carolina, I have talked to many educators. They say one of the problems they have is that quite often they may have a child in school who is not doing well and they do not know what is going on with that child. And what they find out—and this is the second part of this amendment, training for school officials about domestic violence and its impact on children, making sure they have the training and the support services for the teachers and the counselors—many times these kids haven't slept at night. Many times these kids come to school terrified. Many times these kids act out themselves. Many times these kids are in trouble, and many times we don't know what is going on in their lives.

We have finally started to focus on this violence in homes, too much of it directed toward women. But if you talk to people around the country who are down in the trenches doing the best work, from the academics to the community activists, they will tell you the missing piece is we have not focused enough on the effects on the children. That is what this amendment does.

The third piece of this amendment addresses domestic violence and the people who work to protect our children from abuse and neglect. There is a significant overlap, obviously, between domestic violence and child abuse. In families where one form of family violence exists, there is a likelihood that the other does. In about 50 percent of the cases, if the mother is being battered, the child is being battered. So the problem is these child protective services and domestic violence organizations set up their own separate programs, yet few of them work together to see what is happening within families.

This amendment creates incentives for local governments to collaborate with domestic violence agencies in administering their child welfare programs. The funds will be awarded to States and local governments to work collaboratively with community-based domestic violence programs to provide training, to do screening, to assist child welfare service agencies in recognizing the overlap between domestic violence and child abuse, to develop protocols for screening, intake, assessment and investigation, and to increase the safety and well-being of the child witnesses of domestic violence.

I could go on for hours about this because, honest to God, it is a huge issue in our country. I wish it wasn't.

The second piece of this—and I will be through in 5 minutes—is supervised visitation centers. I have to explain this. Part of the problem is, even if you have a woman who has said: I am getting out of this home, or I am getting my husband out of this home; he is a batterer, and she finally is able to do it—it is not easy—and you have small children, the other parent, the non-custodial parent, usually the man, wants to see the children and should be able to under most circumstances. The problem is, at the time in which he comes to the home to pick up the children or drop the children off, the violence can occur again. There is no safety there. Or the problem is in some cases you are worried about what the father will do to the children. But a judge doesn't want to say: You can never see your children. And sometimes, as a result of that, the children are in real jeopardy. So the second part of this authorizes funding for supervised visitation centers.

These are visitation centers where there can be a safe exchange.

At the risk of being melodramatic, let me dedicate this amendment to 5-year-old Brandon and 4-year-old Alex, who were murdered by their father during an unsupervised visit in Minnesota. They were beautiful children. Their mother Angela was separated from Kurt Frank, the children's father. During her marriage, Angela was physically and emotionally abused by Frank, and Frank had hit Brandon and split open his lip when once he had stepped between the father and the mother to protect the mother. She had an order of protection—Shiela and I both know Angela; she is very courageous—against Kurt Frank, but during the custody hearings, her request for the husband to only receive supervised visits was rejected. Kurt Frank murdered his two sons, these two children, during an unsupervised visit, and then he killed himself.

Honest to God, when there is some question about the safety of these children, we can do better. These safe visitation centers work. It makes all the sense in the world. These children's lives could have been saved. The father could have seen them, but it would have been under some supervision. That is the second part.

Third, the amendment recognizes the importance of police officers. This amendment comes from input from the law enforcement community around the country. What they are saying is: Quite often we are the ones who find the traumatized children behind the doors, beneath the furniture, in the closets, when we go to the homes. We want to know what we can do for these children. We would like to have the training. That is what this amendment provides for.

Then, finally, for crisis nurseries, it is important. A family is in crisis. The mother has two children dealing with an abusive relationship, trying to end the relationship. There is lots of tension in the home. There is the potential for violence. She wants to be able to take her child somewhere or her two children somewhere where they can be safe for one night or 2 days or 3 days. That is what these crisis nurseries do. They work well.

We have talked about the violence in the media. We have talked about the violence in the video games. But we rarely have dealt with the millions of children each year who are witnessing real-life violence in their homes. I believe we have to figure out ways to get the funding to the communities that will provide the support.

Mr. DURBIN. Will the Senator from Minnesota yield for a question?

Mr. WELLSTONE. I am pleased to yield.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, the Senate and the Nation are fortunate, indeed, to have the Senator from Minnesota. He continues to redirect our attention to the life and death struggles that families go through every single day. Oftentimes he is a lonely voice on the Senate floor, but he is a person of principle and value. If it meets with his permission, I ask unanimous consent to be added as a cosponsor to this important amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DURBIN. I ask the Senator from Minnesota a question. I listened carefully to his presentation and asked for a copy of the amendment to read it more closely.

One of the things I have found in working with law enforcement officials—I think the Senator from Minnesota has highlighted it—is they come upon a scene where a violent crime, maybe a very serious violent crime has been committed, and among all of their concerns, preserving evidence, making certain, if possible, to save any victim who might be battered or injured, there is that tiny little person who has just witnessed this scene.

When I spoke to the International Association of Chiefs of Police, one of the things which we discussed was to put on each investigative report from a violent crime a section that would indicate that the police know that minor children witnessed the violent crime and perhaps a method, then, of providing confidential information to counselors or social workers who would know. Then there is a heads-up, there is a red flag, that there has been a child involved. That child may be so young as to be overlooked as part of the investigation report, and they have suggested—and I think it is valuable, and perhaps at some point we can make it part of this effort—that law enforcement officials would be looking for this because, as the Senator from Minnesota has so eloquently given to the Senate today in his presentation, these kids witnessing violence can have their lives changed dramatically. An intervention at that point could not only make things better for them but could ultimately save their lives.

I ask the Senator from Minnesota if he would be kind enough to consider that either as a suggestion as part of this legislation or in separate correspondence with those who would administer the programs he has suggested.

Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, I wonder if we could do a modification right now—I will work it up in the next couple of minutes—where, as Senator DURBIN is saying, the police would automatically check off the observation that a child or the children are at home as a part of the form. Then, again, if you had it at the community level, that is where this has to happen—the real interface and cooperation with school officials, with child protective services, with health care, with law enforcement, with counselors in the school—the focus would be on the child. These children are falling between the cracks.

Mr. President, that would be an excellent idea. I will try to maybe work on a modification. I am sure my colleagues will allow me to do a technical correction later.

Altogether, this is an authorization for an appropriation, but it is authorization for $153 million a year for 3 years, which I think is not much to spend for what we can do. Later on, I know this gets resolved in the appropriations battle. I ask my colleagues whether they have a response. I can talk about this in more detail. I can go through the budget. I can talk about each specific program. But if you want to move along and you think this is something you can support, I would be very proud. I think it would be important.

Mr. GREGG. If the Senator from Minnesota will yield, this is a fairly extensive piece of legislation. It may take us a little while to take a look at it. I suggest we lay it aside for a moment and move on to whatever comes next and then come back to it, if the Senator doesn't mind.

Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, I say to my colleague I am pleased to do that. That will give us a chance to add the suggestion of Senator DURBIN, and if we need to debate later on, I can give lots of examples and debate the need for this. If my colleagues support it, that will be great. Let's wait and see what you think. We will temporarily lay this amendment aside.

I yield the floor.

Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the pending amendment be temporarily laid aside.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 1292

(Purpose: To clarify that nothing in the Act shall be construed to prevent the use of funds to recover Federal tobacco-related health costs from responsible third parties)

Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Florida [Mr. GRAHAM], for himself, Mr. DURBIN, Mr. HARKIN, Mr. LAUTENBERG, Mr. CONRAD, Mr. REED, Mr. WELLSTONE, Mrs. MURRAY, and Mr. FEINGOLD, proposes an amendment numbered 1292.

At the appropriate place in title I, insert the following:

SEC. XX. AUTHORITY TO RECOVER TOBACCO-RELATED COSTS.

Nothing in this Act shall be construed to prohibit the Department of Justice from expending amounts made available under this title for tobacco-related litigation or for the payment of expert witnesses called to provide testimony in such litigation.

Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. President, I offer this amendment on behalf of myself, Senator DURBIN, and others, as a means of raising our strong objection to a provision that appeared in the report accompanied the Senate Commerce-State-Justice appropriations bill. That provision was on two pages.

On page 15 of the report, the last sentence in the first paragraph reads:

No funds are provided for tobacco litigation or the Joint Center for Strategic Environmental Enforcement.

Then on page 25, in the lower half of the page, this sentence appears:

No funds are provided for expert witnesses called to provide testimony in tobacco litigation.

My objection is that those two sentences have with them a clear inference that it is the policy of the Senate that the Department of Justice, in a rare instance, should be denied the investigative and prosecutorial discretion to determine whether it is in the interest of the United States and its people for the Federal Government to bring litigation against the tobacco industry and pursue that litigation in an effective manner.

Even more troubling is the sweeping nature of this language, which I believe could be reasonably interpreted to amount to a grant of immunity to the tobacco industry from Federal prosecution.

Further, if the Senate fails to strike this offending report language which grants immunity to the tobacco industry, we will be reversing the intent of a sense-of-the-Senate amendment we adopted less than 4 months ago by a unanimous vote, on March 25. The Senate clearly articulated not only that it was supportive of the Federal litigation but determined that the use of settlement dollars should be primarily to add to the strength of the Medicare trust fund on the basis that it is the Medicare trust fund that has been primarily affected by these excessive health care costs. I will discuss that in a moment.

While preparing a litigation strategy and while allowing the Department of Justice to exercise its traditional range of discretion, it is by no means a guarantee of success. Denying funds to the Department of Justice, tying their hands at the outset, precluding them from the ability to hire expert witnesses will only assure the failure of this important legal initiative.

We all know the tobacco industry is responsible for tens of billions of dollars of tobacco-related illnesses that the Federal Government spends to care for and treat individuals with lung cancer, emphysema, heart disease, and every other illness associated with tobacco use.

The most recent estimate for the costs incurred by the Federal Government for the treatment of tobacco-related illnesses totals $22.2 billion each year. This includes Medicare, $14.1 billion; Veterans' Administration, $4 billion; Federal Employees Health Benefit Program, $2.2 billion; Department of Defense, $1.6 billion; Indian Health Services, $300 million.

Put simply, a vote that retains this restrictive report language would, in essence, grant the tobacco industry immunity against Federal litigation.

I ask unanimous consent that a copy of an editorial from the Washington Post be printed in the RECORD immediately after my remarks.

(See Exhibit 1.)

Mr. GRAHAM. The Post editorial describes the stark implications of rejecting the amendment. The Post states:

It would be an amnesty for decades of misconduct and a retroactive taxpayer subsidy for that misconduct as well.

My second main objection to this language is that on May 20 of this year, the Congress, through a conference committee on the emergency supplemental bill, enacted a provision that denied the Federal Government access to some $250 billion which the States have secured through their tobacco settlement.

The original amendment, which was introduced by Senator HUTCHISON of Texas and myself, as well as Senator BAYH, Senator VOINOVICH, and other Members of the Senate, passed this Senate by a vote of 71-29. This body could not have spoken with more clarity: Uncle Sam, keep your hands off the States' money.

But in taking that vote, while we said to the Federal Government, "Hands off," I and many of my colleagues, including Senator HOLLINGS and others, had argued that if the Federal Government wants its own money, then it should sue the tobacco industry for the recovery of funds spent for the treatment of tobacco-related illnesses in Federal programs, such as Medicare. If that sentiment was true just a few weeks ago, it is certainly true today.

My third objection is that this report language would be an abdication of our Federal responsibility to deny the Justice Department its most fundamental responsibility. What is that responsibility? It is the responsibility to locate and to investigate areas where individuals, organizations, entire industries, may in fact be liable and responsible for harming the people of the United States of America.

Evidence uncovered by the States in their successful legal efforts against the tobacco industry clearly implicates the tobacco industry in their complicity to cover up evidence of addiction and illness related to the product they produce and market. To allow the tobacco industry to escape responsibility for these practices and to not investigate it fully to determine whether the Federal Government can recoup funds—funds that come from the taxpayers of America, funds that have been paid out to treat tobacco-related illnesses—would be totally irresponsible and a surrender of our fiduciary responsibility to the taxpayers.

Finally, there are some parties to this litigation who have no alternative but to have the Federal Government litigate on their behalf.

In this instance, I am speaking about Native Americans.

I ask unanimous consent that the full text of this letter be printed in the RECORD at the conclusion of my remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(See Exhibit 2.)

Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I be given 4 additional minutes to conclude my remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate must now return to the Gregg amendment.

Mr. GRAHAM. I ask unanimous consent for 4 minutes to complete my remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Florida.

Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. President, the letter from the National Congress of American Indians signed by its president, Mr. W. Ron Allen, states:

There are many Indian Nations, however, who do not possess the resources to bring individual suits and will, therefore, rely upon the DOJ to bring suit on their behalf.

I do not believe we should tolerate a situation in which a large number of our Native Americans are precluded from having their legal rights represented.

I urge my colleagues to vote to strike the offending report language. I urge my colleagues to allow the Justice Department to do its job, and to use its best professional judgment on how to proceed with its legal strategy against the tobacco industry.

Rather than giving the Marlboro Man and rather than giving Joe Camel another victim, let us vote to hold the tobacco companies accountable by the simple action of allowing the Department of Justice to do its responsible job as the Nation's investigator and litigator.

I ask unanimous consent that a letter from the Leadership Council of Aging Organizations, which represents organizations such as the AARP, the Historically Black Colleges and Universities, Families USA, National Senior Citizens Law Center, National Council on the Aging, the National Council of Senior Citizens, and many other organizations representing older Americans which also support this language—support it particularly because they recognize the possibility of strengthening the Medicare program through funds derived from a successful prosecution of this litigation—be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

LEADERSHIP COUNCIL OF AGING ORGANIZATIONS

DEAR SENATOR: The undersigned members of the Leadership Council of Aging Organizations (LCAO) are writing because we are concerned about the Department of Justice (DOJ) appropriations bill (S. 1217) that will soon be taken up on the Senate floor. As you know, DOJ intends to sue the nation's tobacco companies to recover the billions of dollars Medicare, VA and other federal health care programs have spent on health care costs caused by tobacco use.

We have learned that the DOJ appropriations bill not only denies requested funding for this important, effort, but also includes language that may actually block the lawsuit. The states took action to hold the industry accountable for the related costs imposed on their state health programs. Given the success of the state suits, the federal government has an obligation to undertake similar action to protect Medicare and other federal health programs. We cannot understand why a successful course of action that was appropriate for 50 states and resulted in tobacco payments of over $240 billion could be considered inappropriate for the federal government to pursue. In addition, blocking the lawsuit would violate an agreement reached in the Budget Resolution.

The costs to Medicare and other federal health programs due to tobacco are even greater than costs imposed on state programs. Tobacco-caused health care costs in the United States exceed $70 billion each year and the federal government pays a large portion of those costs, including over $14 billion per year on tobacco-caused Medicare expenditures. Given this drain on Medicare and other federal health programs, the Senate should support the DOJ's efforts to recover these funds.

We expect Senator BOB GRAHAM and others to offer an amendment when S. 1217 is considered on the floor to clarify that DOJ should be permitted to move forward with litigation against the tobacco industry. We urge you to support the Graham amendment.

At a time when Congress is wrestling with how to strengthen and preserve the future of Medicare and prepare it for the retirement of the baby boom generation, Congress should take every opportunity to protect this essential program. Defending Medicare is more important than defending tobacco companies.

EXHIBIT I,

A NEW KIND OF TOBACCO TAX

As it now stands, the Senate version of the Justice Department's appropriation would restrict the department's authority to file suit against the tobacco companies. Unless the matter is resolved in last-minute negotiations, an amendment to fix this problem will be put forward on the Senate floor by Sen. Bob Graham (D-Fla.) when the bill is taken up. Whether by amendment or negotiation, the current restriction has to go.

The department contends that the tobacco industry has engaged in intentional wrongdoing over the past 50 years in order to cover up the addictive qualities of its product. Industry misconduct, the argument goes, has resulted in huge federal health care bills. Normally, when a company fraudulently exacts such a toll on the taxpayer, the Justice Department seeks to recover some of that money. And that is what the department plans. It has asked Congress for $20 million for a planned suit. But the Senate appropriations subcommittee chairman, Judd Gregg (R-N.H.), seems to have other ideas. He inserted language into a committee report specifying that no money may be used for such a suit. The language would at least complicate the Justice Department's efforts, and it could be read to forbid a federal suit altogether.

The decision on whom to sue is a quintessentially executive branch power in which Congress has no legitimate role. If senators want to protect the tobacco industry's ill-gotten gains, they are free to change the laws under which Janet Reno is contemplating action. But it is the attorney general's job to decide whose violations of the law merit federal action. Moreover, when the attorney general plans a civil action against companies she claims have bilked the taxpayers of billions of dollars, it is not the place of any senator to seek to prevent the recovery of money that, in the judgment of the executive branch, lawfully belongs to the American people.

The amendment would not give the department the $20 million it has requested, but it would clarify that other money can be used for the suit. There can be no misunderstanding a vote to reject such a change. It would be an amnesty for decades of misconduct and a retroactive taxpayer subsidy for that misconduct as well.

EXHIBIT 2

NATIONAL CONGRESS OF AMERICAN INDIANS,
Washington, DC, July 22, 1999.

Hon. BOB GRAHAM,
U.S. Senate,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR GRAHAM: The National Congress of American Indians (NCAI), the oldest and largest Indian advocacy organization is pleased to support your amendment to strike language in the Commerce, State, Justice appropriations bill (S. 1217) that would deny federal funds to be expended by the Department of Justice (DOJ) for Tobacco litigation, including expenses related to expert witnesses.

Indian Nations have been affected profoundly by the tobacco industry. To that end, NCAI acknowledges and respects the rights of Indian Nations to file individual suits against the tobacco industry to recover for tobacco related illnesses and believes that Indian Nations should be the beneficiaries of any funds recovered. There are many Indian Nations however, who do not possess the resources to bring individual suits and will therefore, rely upon the DOJ to bring suit on their behalf. NCAI would not want to foreclose that option to Indian Nations. Moreover, there are many unanswered questions regarding any suits that may be filed by the DOJ on behalf of Indian Nations. Until more questions have been answered, NCAI cannot support any language that would foreclose any options to Indian Nations.

Senator Graham, NCAI believes your floor amendment to strike said appropriation language will benefit a number of Indian Nations throughout Indian Country and we thank you for your efforts.

Sincerely,

W. RON ALLEN, President.

Please support the Graham amendment and deny the tobacco companies special legal protections.

AMENDMENT NO. 1272

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I understand we are back on the pending underlying GREGG amendment, and that the Senator from South Carolina has time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. GORTON). The Senator is correct. The regular order now is the GREGG amendment with 10 minutes on each side.

Mr. GREGG. I ask unanimous consent that the time be reserved for the parties presently assigned to it, and I make a point of order that a quorum is not present.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative assistant proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 1292, WITHDRAWN

Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. President, I ask that the amendment I had offered relative to prohibition on tobacco litigation be withdrawn.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has that right. The amendment is withdrawn.

Mr. HARKIN. I would like to address a question to the chairman of the Subcommittee, the Senator from New Hampshire, regarding funding for the Civil Division of the Justice Department.

In his State of the Union Address, President Clinton announced that the Federal Government intended to sue the nation's tobacco companies to recover billions of dollars in smoking-related health care costs reimbursed by federal health care programs. The administration's FY 2000 budget requested $15 million in new resources for the Civil Division of the Justice Department and $5 million for the Fees and Expenses of Witnesses account support this litigation effort.

Unfortunately, we were unable to provide the additional resources requested by the administration for the Civil Division to carry out this task. While I regret that the committee was unable to provide the new funds, it is my understanding that if the Justice Department deems this activity to be a high priority, base funding, including funds from the Fees and Expenses of Witnesses account, can be used for this purpose.

I ask the chairman and ranking member of the subcommittee if my understanding of the bill and the report language is correct?

Mr. GREGG. I agree with the Senator from Iowa. While the committee was unable to provide new funding as the administration requested, nothing in the bill or the report language prohibits the Department from using generally appropriated funds, including funds from the Fees and Expenses of Witnesses Account, to pursue this litigation if the Department concludes such litigation has merit under existing law.

Mr. HOLLINGS. I also agree with Senator HARKIN.

Mr. GRAHAM. I would like to address the chairman of the subcommittee. Does the chairman also agree to strike the language on page 15 and or page 25 of Senate Report 106-76 relating to funding for tobacco litigation.

Mr. GREGG. That is correct.

Mr. President, I yield to my colleague and cosponsor of the amendment, the Senator from Illinois.

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Florida, and also Senator GREGG, Senator HOLLINGS, Senator HARKIN, and others who have been party to the establishment of this colloquy. I think the RECORD is eminently clear that the Department of Justice has the authority to move forward on tobacco litigation without any limitation whatsoever from this legislation.

I am glad we achieved that and did it in a bipartisan fashion. I thank Senator GRAHAM for his leadership. I was happy to join him on the amendment and to be part of this colloquy.

I yield the floor.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I be permitted to proceed as in morning business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GREGG. Will the Senator yield? Is there a time limit?

Mr. KERRY. Ten minutes.

Mr. GREGG. I thank the Senator.

Mr. KERRY. I thank the Chair.

(The remarks of Mr. KERRY pertaining to the introduction of S. 1420 are located in today's RECORD under "Statements on Introduced Bills and Joint Resolutions.")

Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum. I withhold that request.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority leader.

UNANIMOUS CONSENT REQUEST—
H.R. 1501

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I have a unanimous consent request with regard to the appointment of conferees on the juvenile justice bill.

I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of H.R. 1501, the House juvenile justice bill, and all after the enacting clause be stricken, the text of S. 254, as passed by the Senate, except for the Feinstein amendment No. 343, as modified, be inserted in lieu thereof, the bill be advanced to third reading and passage occur, without any intervening action or debate.

I further ask unanimous consent that the Senate insist on its amendment, request a conference with the House, the conferees be instructed to include the above described amendment No. 343 in the conference report, and the Chair be authorized to appoint conferees on the part of the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire. Mr. President, I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I regret the objection. I understand, though, the Senator's feeling on this. As a result of the objection, I have no other alternative than to move to proceed to H.R. 1501 and file a cloture motion on that motion to proceed. Having said that, this will be the first of many steps necessary to send this important juvenile justice bill to conference.

JUVENILE JUSTICE REFORM ACT
OF 1999—MOTION TO PROCEED

Mr. LOTT. With that, I move to proceed to H.R. 1501 and send a cloture motion to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The cloture motion having been presented under rule XXII, the Chair directs the clerk to read the motion.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

CLOTURE MOTION

We, the undersigned Senators, in accordance with the provisions of rule XXII of the Standing Rules of the Senate, do hereby move to bring to a close debate on the motion to proceed to Calendar No. 165, H.R. 1501, the juvenile justice bill.

Trent Lott, Frank Murkowski, Chuck Hagel, Bill Frist, Jeff Sessions, Thad Cochran, Rick Santorum, Ben Nighthorse Campbell, Orrin Hatch, John Ashcroft, Robert F. Bennett, Pat Roberts, Jim Jeffords, Arlen Specter, Judd Gregg, and Christopher Bond.

CALL OF THE ROLL

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I remind Members that the vote will occur then on Monday, and I now ask unanimous consent that the mandatory quorum under rule XXII be waived and the vote occur at 5 p.m. on Monday.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. LOTT. I now withdraw the motion to proceed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The motion is withdrawn.

Mr. LOTT. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I withhold on that. I see there are Senators ready to speak.

Ms. COLLINS addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maine.

DEPARTMENTS OF COMMERCE,
JUSTICE, AND STATE, THE JUDI-
CIARY AND RELATED AGENCIES
APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 2000—Continued

AMENDMENT NO. 1296

(Purpose: Relating to telephone area codes)

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the pending amendment be set aside, and I send to the desk a sense-of-the-Senate amendment on behalf of myself and Senators GREGG, HOLLINGS, TORRICELLI, FEINGOLD, SMITH of New Hampshire, and LIEBERMAN.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, the pending amendment is set aside, and the clerk will report the amendment.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Maine [Ms. COLLINS], for herself, Mr. GREGG, Mr. HOLLINGS, Mr. TORRICELLI, Mr. FEINGOLD, Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire, and Mr. LIEBERMAN proposes an amendment numbered 1296.

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 111, between lines 7 and 8, insert the following:

SEC. 620 (a) FINDINGS.—The Senate makes the following findings:

(1) When telephone area codes were first introduced in 1947, 86 area codes covered all of North America. There are now more than 215 area codes, and an additional 70 area codes may be required in the next 2 years.

(2) The current system for allocating numbers to telecommunications carriers is woefully inefficient, leading to the exhaustion of a telephone area code long before all the telephone numbers covered by the area code are actually in use.

(3) The proliferation of new telephone area codes causes economic dislocation for businesses and unnecessary cost, confusion, and inconvenience for households.

(4) Principles and approaches exist that would increase the efficiency with which telecommunications carriers use telephone numbering resources.

(5) The May 27, 1999, rulemaking proceeding of the Federal Communications Commission relating to numbering resource optimization seeks to address the growing problem of the exhaustion of telephone area codes.

(b) SENSE OF SENATE.—It is the sense of the Senate that—

(1) the Federal Communications Commission shall release its report and order on numbering resource optimization not later than December 31, 1999;

(2) such report and order should minimize any disruptions and costs to consumers and businesses associated with the implementation of such report and order; and

(3) such report and order should apply not only to large metropolitan areas but to all areas of the United States that are facing the problem of exhaustion of telephone numbers.

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, I am pleased to offer a sense-of-the-Senate amendment to address a growing problem in this country, and that is the needless proliferation of area codes.

As many of my colleagues have witnessed in their own States, new area codes are being imposed upon consumers and businesses at a dizzying pace. While the modern technology of faxes, cell phones, pagers, and computer modems has played a role in creating this problem, area code exhaustion stems largely from the woefully inefficient system for allocating numbers to local telephone companies. This leads to the exhaustion of an area code long before all of the telephone numbers covered by that code actually have been used.

My own home State of Maine dramatically illustrates this problem. We have a population in Maine of approximately 1.2 million people. Within our "207" area code, there are roughly 8 million usable numbers and some 5.7 million of these numbers are still unused. Incredibly enough, however, Maine has been notified that it will be forced to add a new area code by the year 2001.

This paradigm of inefficiency in the midst of America's telecommunications revolution might almost be amusing were it not for the fact that it causes real hardships for many small businesses, particularly small businesses in the tourism industry. Businesspeople throughout my State, particularly in the coastal communities, have contacted me to express their concern. I have heard from a gallery owner in Rockport, an innkeeper in Bar Harbor, and a schooner captain in Rockland, who have expressed to me their concern about the costs involved in updating brochures, business cards, and other promotional literature, all of which will be necessitated by the creation of a new area code—the needless creation of a new area code. As one innkeeper told me, it takes as long as 2 years to revise certain guidebooks, which are the principal means by which he communicates with potential customers.

Changing the area code could lead to a significant loss in business for many small tourism businesses as well as unneeded expense for these small companies. Moreover, along with the economic costs, a new area code creates tremendous disruption and confusion for consumers.

The Federal Communications Commission has initiated a rulemaking procedure to address this growing problem. But since time is of the essence in ensuring that Maine and many other States not be forced to add another unnecessary area code, my amendment requires that the FCC release its final report and order no later than March 31 of next year.

It also specifies that the order shall minimize costs and disruptions to consumers and businesses located in all areas of the country, not just in major cities. The FCC right now appears to be focusing mainly on the larger markets and ignoring the implications for rural areas.

It is my understanding that this amendment is acceptable to the distinguished chairman of the subcommittee as well as the distinguished ranking minority member. I thank them very much for their cooperation and assistance in drafting this amendment, as well as for their cosponsorship of it.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I thank the distinguished Senator from Maine. It is very important. We agree with it. We appreciate her leadership on this.

Mr. GREGG. I also commend the Senator from Maine. This is a serious problem, not only in Maine but across the border in New Hampshire where we have the same concern about area codes. So I congratulate her on this sense-of-the-Senate amendment and strongly support it. I believe we can accept it.

I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there is no further debate, without objection, the amendment is agreed to.

The amendment (No. 1296) was agreed to.

Ms. COLLINS. I thank both Senators for their cooperation and assistance in this matter.

Mr. TORRICELLI. Mr. President, I rise today with my colleague from Maine, Senator COLLINS, to introduce an amendment regarding the issue of area code conservation. The rapid proliferation of area codes is a problem facing the citizens of New Jersey, as well as the rest of the nation.

The extraordinary growth of the telecommunications industry in recent years has created a unique new problem. In just the last four years, the number of area codes in the United States has increased almost 60 percent. Continued growth will require that even the newest area codes be split and replaced again in the near future.

This problem has been particularly acute in New Jersey. Prior to 1991, the state went almost thirty years without a new area code. But in the last eight years, four new area codes have been added in the state and more are on the way.

While this is not the most pressing problem this country faces; it is a serious one. The costs and inconvenience of introducing new area codes are real. Small businesses must pay to reprint stationery, advertising, and signs, and to inform customers of new numbers. Communities throughout New Jersey, such as Willingboro, Medford, and Monroe, have faced the possibility of being split between two area codes, requiring many residents to dial an area code just to call a neighbor across the street. These costs get even higher when new area codes are introduced repeatedly in the same area after only a few years, forcing residents and businesses to make the same adjustments all over again.

Many people blame the demand for new phone numbers as the sole cause of so many new area codes. But there is another cause. Each area code has 7.9 million potential phone numbers. Today, less than half of the potential phone numbers in existing area codes are being used, leaving a total of 1.3 billion unused phone numbers in the United States. The real problem is that new area codes are being created before old ones are exhausted.

The inefficient use of available phone numbers is a product of the outdated system by which numbers are distributed within each area code. Phone numbers are allotted to telecommunications companies in blocks of 10,000, regardless of whether those companies have the capacity to use every number. Undoubtedly, this system made sense when there was only one telephone company because it would, eventually, use every number available.

But, as we all know, the new era of telecommunications competition has introduced dozens of smaller companies. Today, there are over 100 such companies in New Jersey alone. Under the current allocation system, these companies still receive phone numbers in blocks of 10,000. Even if a company does not use its full allocation, unused numbers remain dormant while new area codes are being created.

This unnecessary nuisance can be alleviated relatively easily. All it requires is a little planning and foresight. Given the enormous demand for new phone numbers and the growth of smaller phone companies, we should overhaul the system for allocating phone numbers. The Federal Communication Commission is currently reviewing ways to do just that. But, while their efforts are encouraging, the process may not work fast enough to prevent the next round of needless new area codes in New Jersey.

The Amendment I have introduced with Senator COLLINS expresses the sense of the Senate that the Federal Communications Commission should complete its ongoing rulemaking regarding number resource optimization by March 31, 2000. This action will help ensure that the FCC rapidly implements practical number conservation measures.

New area codes are inevitable as the population and electronic communications continue to grow. But there are reasonable, practical ways to soften the impact of these changes. Ensuring that new area codes are implemented only when current ones have been exhausted will save time, energy, and money for countless residents and businesses, in New Jersey and around the country.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to set aside the pending amendment to offer two amendments that will be accepted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 1297

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Texas [Mrs. HUTCHISON], for herself, Mr. KYL, and Mr. ABRAHAM, proposes an amendment numbered 1297.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 19, line 23, after the colon, insert the following: "Provided further, That any Border Patrol agent classified in a GS-1896 position who completes a 1-year period of service at a GS-9 grade and whose current rating of record is fully successful or higher shall be classified at a GS-11 grade and receive pay at the minimum rate of basic pay for a GS-11 position."

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, this is an amendment which would mandate to the Immigration and Naturalization Service that Border Patrol agents who are in the field, who have experience, not be capped at a GS-9 pay level, as they currently are but go to a GS-11 level after they pass the test that the INS, of course, would have in their rating system.

I appreciate very much Senator GREGG's and Senator HOLLINGS' support for the efforts to increase the number of Border Patrol agents. But the problem is that recruitment has not been successful. One of the reasons the recruitment has not been successful is that we have capped the pay of Border Patrol agents at a lower level than Customs agents who are working side by side with our Border Patrol agents on the border. So it is no wonder people are going to Customs and DEA and other very good Government agencies and not coming to the Border Patrol.

This amendment will require that we go to the GS-11 level so that we can recruit and retain our best people for the Border Patrol and we can get on about the business of making sure the borders of our country are secure.

So, Mr. President, I urge that this amendment be accepted. Both sides of the aisle have looked at it. I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be agreed to.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, it is acceptable on both sides, and we urge its adoption.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there is no further debate, without objection, the amendment is agreed to.

The amendment (No. 1297) was agreed to.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. I thank the Chair, and I thank the distinguished Senator from South Carolina. This will do more than anything we can possibly do to increase the retention and the recruitment of Border Patrol agents.

AMENDMENT NO. 1300

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk on behalf of myself, Senator KYL, Senator ABRAHAM, Senator HATCH, and Senator LEAHY and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BENNETT). The clerk will report the amendment.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Texas [Mrs. HUTCHISON], for herself, Mr. KYL, Mr. ABRAHAM, Mr. HATCH, and Mr. LEAHY, proposes an amendment numbered 1300.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 19, line 23, after the colon, insert the following: "Provided further, That the Commissioner shall within 90 days develop a plan for coordinating and linking all relevant Immigration and Naturalization on Service databases with those of the Justice Department and other federal law enforcement agencies, to determine criminal history, fingerprint identification and record of prior deportation and, upon the approval of the Committees on the Judiciary and the Commerce-Justice-State Appropriations Subcommittees, shall implement the plan within FY 2000."

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, this is an amendment that is meant to close a gaping loophole we found in INS's sharing of information that allowed the serial killer, Rafael Resendez-Ramirez, whose real name is Angel Maturino Resendiz, to get through our borders, even though he already had a criminal record, because there was not enough communication in the identification system between the INS and the other Justice Department agencies. So we didn't catch this serial killer.

This is an amendment I have worked on with Senators KYL, ABRAHAM, HATCH, and LEAHY that would require the Commissioner of the INS, within 90 days, to develop a plan for coordinating and linking all relevant INS databases with those of the Justice Department and other Federal law enforcement agencies to determine the criminal history and the record of prior deportation and, upon the approval of the Judiciary Committee and Commerce, State, Justice Appropriations Subcommittee, will implement a plan by fiscal year 2000.

I am counting on the committees to come through on this because if we can get the plan in 90 days, we need to implement a plan that will identify criminal aliens in our country so when they try to enter again, they will be stopped.

I ask that the amendment be accepted and that we move forward to try to close this loophole that allowed this serial killer to fall through the cracks or slip through our fingers, however one wants to say it, and cause havoc in our country for about a month.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, was that a unanimous consent request?

Mrs. HUTCHISON. It was.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? Without objection, the amendment is agreed to.

The amendment (No. 1300) was agreed to.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. I thank the Chair. Mr. President, if it is in order, I will speak on the bill.

Mr. GREGG. If the Senator from Texas wouldn't mind suspending, I believe the majority leader has some points he wishes to raise.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority leader.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I am sorry. It would be fine if the Senator from Texas wanted to speak on the bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. I thank the Chair. If there comes a time when the Senator from New Hampshire needs to break in, I will be happy to yield.

I rise in support of the bill that is before us. It has been a tough bill. It is more than $888 million less than the appropriations bill that we enacted in last year, but it does provide sufficient resources. I believe Senator GREGG and Senator HOLLINGS and their staffs have worked very hard to make sure we address the priorities for the Commerce, State, and Justice Departments and the very important issues with which they are dealing.

I have passed two amendments to the bill tonight. There will be another amendment that has already been accepted that will allow the INS Commissioner to provide a language proficiency bonus for people who are proficient in Spanish to be hired in the Border Patrol. Of course, if people are already proficient in Spanish, it will save the money it will take to train them in the second language. That amendment has been cleared on both sides. I appreciate it because I am looking for every way I can to increase the capability to recruit new Border Patrol agents who will be able to hit the ground running and help stop the influx of drugs and illegal immigration into our country.

I cannot imagine that we have continued to tell the INS that we want these Border Patrol agents to come on board, and we have not had the cooperation of the administration in either recruitment or retention. Certainly, I hope with this bill, which is much more narrow in its requirements, the Border Patrol will do what the Congress has mandated they do, and that is recruit and retain more Border Patrol agents so we can stop the influx of drugs into this country. As a matter of fact, $10 billion in marijuana, heroin, cocaine, and methamphetamines crossed our border last year. How in the world can we say that we have a handle on the sovereignty of our borders when we have $10 billion of illegal drugs flowing in in 1 year?

I am very pleased that the chairman of the Appropriations Committee, Senator STEVENS, went to the Arizona border with Mexico during the Memorial Day recess. He was stunned at what he saw. I hope more Senators will go to the border so they will see the problem we are facing.

During the markup of the bill that is before us today, Senator STEVENS said: God forbid that the day comes when we have to have fences and walls between the United States and Mexico.

I share his view. Mexico is our neighbor. They are strong cultural and historic ties between our two nations. I seek a border that is as open as possible, allowing people, goods, and services to move across the 2,000-mile-shared border quickly and efficiently. I am committed to putting in place the infrastructure, the bridges, the facilities, and the inspection personnel necessary for this to happen. I wish the President and this administration would work with us.

The realities are otherwise, however. In Texas and along the border, we are witnessing a lawlessness that we have never seen since the days of the frontier. It is important to put the drug threat in its proper context and to understand its full dimensions.

On March 24, 1999, Administrator Thomas Constantine of the Drug Enforcement Administration testified before our subcommittee. He said:

Most Americans are unaware of the vast damage that has been caused to their communities by international drug trafficking syndicates, most recently by organized crime groups headquartered in Mexico. At the current time, these traffickers pose the greatest threat to communities around the United States. Their impact is no longer limited to cities and towns on the border. Traffickers from Mexico are now routinely operating in the Midwest, the Southeast, the Northwest, and increasingly in the Northeastern portion of the United States.

Make no mistake: Drugs coming across the border are ending up on the streets of Manchester, NH; Columbia, SC; Baltimore, MD; and Denver, CO, and they are coming across in record numbers. In fiscal year 1998, there were 6,359 drug seizures along the Southwest border. The total value of these drug seizures was $1.28 billion, nearly $150 million more than last year. Nearly $1 billion of the drugs seized last year were on the Texas border, in the Border Patrol sectors there.

Drug-related violence along the Texas border continues to increase. Ranchers in Maverick County, 150 miles southwest of San Antonio, reported that armed traffickers in black, wearing camouflage clothing, passed through their properties after walking across the Rio Grande River. The situation is no better on the immigration side. More than 1.5 million illegal immigrants were apprehended along the Southwest border just last year.

Conservative estimates suggest that only one in four illegal aliens is apprehended. But the numbers hide the dark, evil side of this issue of alien smuggling, violent assault against migrating women, and other suffering.

I commend to my colleagues an article that appeared recently in the New York Times. Rick Lyman reported on a disturbing development where infants and young children, some possibly kidnapped and others who are rented, are used to trick border agents. INS has no facilities to house families, especially babies. So illegal aliens are simply released and asked to report for a later court date. The borrowed children are then shuffled back and forth across the border to be placed in the hands of others to make yet another treacherous, illegal crossing.

These examples highlight conditions along the border. They underscore that we have a moral obligation to provide the necessary resources to secure our border. That is why I find it incomprehensible that this administration has requested no new Border Patrol agents, Drug Enforcement Administration agents, or Customs agents in its budget recommendation to Congress this year. The 8,000 men and women serving in our Border Patrol are our Nation's first line of defense in the war on drugs and illegal immigration. Understanding this, Congress required, under the Illegal Immigration Act of 1996, that the Attorney General in each of the fiscal years 1997, 1998, 1999, 2000, and 2001, shall increase the Border Patrol by not less than 1,000 full-time active duty Border Patrol agents within the INS. Unfortunately, our Nation's top law enforcement officer, Janet Reno, and the President opted not to abide by the law and put these agents in their budget.

This is not the first time the administration has not complied with this law. In 1997, the administration only requested 500 new agents instead of a thousand. Thank heavens, Senator GREGG and Senator HOLLINGS have kept their commitment to secure our Nation's borders and provide $83 million in this year's budget to hire 1,000 agents.

Mr. President, this is so very important to fund these agencies. Again, Senator GREGG and Senator HOLLINGS have gone a long way to pushing INS toward getting the 1,000 new Border Patrol agents. I have heard from every Border Patrol chief along the Southwest border, and all have told me that, yes, they can use better equipment. Better equipment helps them and it gives them a range much longer than one of them can cover. But what they need most, first and foremost, is manpower. They cannot operate the equipment, they cannot get to the places they need to be if they don't have enough Border Patrol agents, and they are woefully short.

So after talking to our drug czar, General McCaffrey, it is clear that we need more Border Patrol agents. He has said we need 20,000 Border Patrol agents in order to stop the flow of drugs across our Southwest border.

A University of Texas study done last year indicates that 16,000 agents are needed to do this job, and we only have 8,000.

With only 200 to 400 likely to be hired this year, we are not even making progress in the right correction.

I call on this administration to stop the excuses on why they can't recruit more Border Patrol agents, to stop refusing to even put them in their budget, and to come forward and say our border is a priority.

That is what I am asking this administration to do—to say that our border has to stop letting in illegal drugs that are preying on our children in Seattle, WA, in Chicago, IL, and in Augusta, ME. We have to stop this. The only way we are going to do it is to make it a priority.

I appreciate the leadership of Senator GREGG and Senator HOLLINGS. They are making this a priority. The administration must come through and help us stop the sieve on our borders that is allowing drugs to come in.

I want to say in closing that Senator KYL has worked very closely with me on these issues. Senator KYL and I co-sponsored the bill that would raise the pay of the Border Patrol agents so we could be in the recruitment game. He cosponsored my amendment on the floor today that would make this happen. He has been an important voice for effective law enforcement along the Southwest Border.

Mr. President, we cannot wait any longer. We must have action from this administration to beef up the Border Patrol, to beef up the Customs agents, to beef up the Drug Enforcement Agency, so that we can stop the influx of drugs into our country. We must get serious about it. That is what this bill does. But we must have the cooperation of this administration to do it.

Thank you, Mr. President.

I yield the floor.

UNANIMOUS CONSENT AGREEMENT

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the following amendments be the only first-degree amendments in order to the pending appropriations bill, and that they be subject to relevant second-degree amendments, and no motion to commit or recommit be in order. I submit the list of amendments to the desk. It includes the Democratic list of amendments and the Republican list of amendments as of 6:10.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. REID. Mr. President, reserving the right to object, I ask the majority leader has this been circulated in the last 10 minutes or so?

Mr. LOTT. Over the past hour or so.

Mr. REID. We just got six more is the reason.

Mr. LOTT. Are they on the list?

Mr. WELLSTONE. Is there a copy we can look at?

Mr. LOTT. I have the list here. I believe the Senator from Minnesota is on here for four amendments—not one, not two, not three but four. We have the list.

Mr. WELLSTONE. I am an active legislator. I ask the majority leader or Senator GREGG, I assume these are in addition to the amendment that has been laid aside.

Mr. GREGG. The Senator's amendment is already in the queue.

Mr. WELLSTONE. I thank the Senator.

Mr. REID. If the majority leader would wait for just a brief minute, we are seeing what we can do here.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, the managers of this legislation have been working diligently throughout the day and have made a lot of progress in dealing with a number of amendments, accommodating those amendments. Senator DASCHLE and I have been working with Senators to find ways for Senators to perhaps have their legislation considered on other bills. We are trying to get a list of amendments outstanding so they will know exactly what they are dealing with.

Mr. REID. If the leader will yield, I have just spoken to the manager of the bill, Senator HOLLINGS. I want to make sure the list that has been submitted includes Senator TORRICELLI's FTC on marketing scams; a relevant Feinstein; a relevant one for Bob KERREY; a relevant one for BOB GRAHAM dealing with NOAA; an additional one for Senator DURBIN, another relevant one; one for Senator LEAHY on the Sentencing Commission; another for Senator TORRICELLI; Senator LANDRIEU has three relevant.

Mr. LOTT. I repeat my unanimous consent request and ask that the amendments identified by Senator REID be included on the list.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

The list of amendments is as follows:

Mr. LOTT. With this agreement in place, it is my hope that the bill can be completed yet this evening. I believe we have amendments that are in order, and Senator LAUTENBERG has one he may be able to go forward with.

Work is still being done on the rule XVI issue. Additional votes will occur during this evening's session of the Senate. We usually can expect to go late into the evenings on Thursday. It looks as if that will be the case.

If we can work with the managers and get this work done, this would be a very important achievement. And that, coupled with the fact that we know there is a memorial service tomorrow, we would not have to be in session tomorrow.

I urge the managers to keep working and my colleagues to please work with them.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Hampshire.

UNANIMOUS CONSENT AGREEMENT

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I am going to propound two unanimous consent requests. One deals with Senator LAUTENBERG's amendment and one with Senator ENZI's amendment. The plan is as follows:

I ask unanimous consent that it be in order for Senator LAUTENBERG to offer an amendment regarding alcohol and there be 30 minutes of debate equally divided prior to the vote on or in relation to the amendment.

I further ask unanimous consent that no amendments be in order to the amendment prior to the vote.

I further ask unanimous consent that the previous consent relating to the pending GREGG amendment remain status quo to recur immediately following the LAUTENBERG vote.

I further ask unanimous consent that it be in order for Senator ENZI to offer an amendment regarding the FCC accounting principles and there be 30 minutes of debate equally divided prior to the vote on or in relation to the amendment.

I further ask unanimous consent that no amendments be in order prior to the vote.

I further ask unanimous consent that the previous consent relating to the pending GREGG amendment remain status quo to reoccur immediately following the vote on the ENZI amendment.

I further ask unanimous consent that the ENZI amendment and the LAUTENBERG amendment be voted on en bloc at the end of the ENZI debate time.

Mr. REID. Reserving the right to object, I apologize to the Republican manager of the bill. I was not listening when the consent request was first issued. Would the Senator tell us what it is.

Mr. GREGG. It actually means that Senator LAUTENBERG has 30 minutes on his amendment equally divided, Senator ENZI has 30 minutes on his amendment equally divided, and we go to a vote on those two amendments.

Mr. HARKIN. Reserving the right to object, what happens, I ask the chairman, after that?

Mr. GREGG. At that point we are back to the regular order, which is that Senator HOLLINGS is recognized for 10 minutes and I am recognized for 10 minutes. Then we have a vote on the majority leader's point of order. However, I expect that there will be further action on the bill at that point and we will get into an amendment process.

Mr. HARKIN. I have an amendment that is on the list. If I may, I would like to get a time line on that.

Mr. GREGG. I would like to talk to the Senator about his amendment. I am hopeful that we can work it out and that we won't have to have a vote on it. Maybe we can talk about it while this debate is going on and work something out.

Mr. HARKIN. All right. I will be back.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

Under the order, the Senator from New Jersey is recognized.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Thank you, Mr. President.

AMENDMENT NO. 1302

(Purpose: To fund a media campaign, from increases in the Department of Justice budget, to prevent underage drinking.)

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, I assume that the pending GREGG amendment has been laid aside.

I send my amendment to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from New Jersey (Mr. LAUTENBERG), for himself, Mr. HARKIN, and Mr.

DORGAN, proposes an amendment numbered 1302.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 2, between lines 3 and 4, insert the following:

For carrying out a media campaign to prevent alcohol consumption by individuals in the United States who have not attained the age of 21, $25,000,000 which shall become available on October 1, 2000 and remain available through September 30, 2001

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, I rise to offer an amendment to provide the Justice Department $25 million in fiscal year 2001 to develop and begin to implement a media campaign to discourage children from engaging in underage alcohol consumption.

We already have an ad campaign on national television that espouses the evils of drug use. But that campaign does not include alcohol. And when I tried to amend that ad campaign in the Treasury-Postal bill last month to include alcohol, some Senators said that they did not want to dilute the anti-drug message. But they did say that they would support a separate anti-underage drinking campaign.

I offer this amendment on behalf of myself and Senators HARKIN and DORGAN, who the last time I offered a similar amendment voted against it, but now has agreed that it is the right thing to do.

Right now, by running anti-drugs ads without also running anti-underage drinking ads, we are sending the wrong message to America's children. It is the equivalent of telling kids: "say 'no' to drugs. But this Bud's for you!"

Mr. President, consuming alcohol is illegal in all 50 States if you are under the age of 21, and among America's youth, underage alcohol consumption is just as big a problem as drug use.

The facts are daunting. If we look at this chart, we see that alcohol kills six times more children ages 12 to 20 than all the other illegal drugs combined. It was a surprise to me, as I suspect it is a surprise to millions of other Americans as well.

Let me point out some more facts. According to the Department of Health and Human Services, the average age at which children start drinking is 13.

What's even worse, Mr. President, is that research shows that children who drink at age 13 have a 47-percent chance of becoming alcohol-dependent.

But if they waited until they were 21 to drink, they would have only a 10-percent chance of becoming dependent.

In all, Mr. President, there are nearly 4 million young people in this country who suffer from alcohol dependence, and they account for one-fifth of all alcohol-dependent Americans.

Not only is alcohol consumption widespread among children under the age of 21, but it is a "gateway drug." And too often, it leads to the use of marijuana, cocaine, and heroin.

The drug czar, General McCaffrey, had some things to say about this. He said, "The most dangerous drug in America today is still alcohol."

But for one reason or another, we don't get that message through.

He goes on to say that alcohol is "the biggest drug abuse problem for adolescents, and it's linked to the use of other, illegal drugs."

Mr. President, statistics support what General McCaffrey has been saying. According to the Center on Addiction and Substance Abuse at Columbia University, youth who drink alcohol are 7.5 times more likely to use any illegal drug and 50 times more likely to use cocaine, than young people who never drink alcohol.

General McCaffrey is not alone in his belief that attacking underage drinking is a key component of the war on drugs. Surgeon General Davis Satcher recently wrote a letter to General McCaffrey expressing his support for "a powerful media campaign that will effectively deglamorize underage drinking."

Surgeon General Satcher went on to say that he has established a Staff Working Group "to create an effective campaign to curtail the incidence of underage and binge drinking."

Finally, the Surgeon General

It is time to more effectively address the drug that children and teens tell us is their great concern and the drug we know is most likely to result in their injury or death.

If experts like General McCaffrey and Surgeon General Satcher agree that alcohol is a "gateway drug," then it is clear that a well-planned ad campaign that targets underage drinking would increase the effectiveness of our war against drugs.

My amendment provides the Justice Department with $25 million in fiscal year 2001 to develop and begin to implement a media campaign to discourage children under the age of 21 from drinking. The amendment allows plenty of time to conduct the necessary research and develop and test sample radio and television ads in order to launch an effective media campaign. Ad messages would be consistent with the antidrug messages in the drug czar's media campaign. There would also be funds to begin buying media time.

The Justice Department will coordinate the campaign with representatives of the Centers for Disease Control, the Surgeon General's office, and the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism. With the help of these health institutions, the Justice Department also would put together a detailed 5-year funding plan for the campaign and its media "buys" to help Congress in the appropriations process.

Editorials have been written across this country supporting the need for an anti-underage drinking media campaign. Editorials have appeared in the Washington Post, New York Times, Christian Science Monitor, and Los Angeles Times. The concept of an anti-underage drinking media campaign is further supported by more than 80 organizations, including Mothers Against Drunk Driving, the American Medical Association, the American Academy of Pediatrics, the American Public Health Association, and the Center for Science in the Public Interest.

I am proud to have been the author some years ago, in 1984, that made 21 the drinking age in all 50 States. With the help of the National Transportation Safety Board, we have saved the lives of approximately 15,000 young people in the 15 years since the law has been in place. It was a real boon to those families who worried about their children drinking and the problems that result.

In 1995, Senator BYRD led the charge on zero tolerance for underage alcohol consumption by writing a law that says if you are under age 21, .02 blood alcohol level is legally drunk. So, as in the past, we need to continue to send a strong message to America's youth that neither underage alcohol consumption nor drug use is acceptable. And the only successful path to winning the war on drugs is the one paved by preventing underage drinking.

We must not accept underage drinking as a so-called rite of passage. It often is. It is a passage directly to illegal drugs such as marijuana, cocaine, and heroin. It is a passage to a life of alcohol dependency.

The bottom line is this: This is a simple up-or-down vote on whether you want to do something to prevent teen alcohol addiction. I urge my colleagues to support this amendment so that we can get a handle on that drug which is acknowledged to be the most dangerous among all drugs. And the fact that alcohol kills six times more children ages 12 to 20 than all other illegal drugs combined proves that.

I hope we get a positive vote on this. I understand this vote will be stacked with a vote of the Senator from Wyoming, is that correct?

Mr. GREGG. That is correct. We will have a vote on the amendment of the Senator from New Jersey and then the Senator from Wyoming.

I rise in opposition to this amendment for a number of reasons. With forward funding of an initiative, the $25 million for advanced appropriations next year, it makes it extremely difficult for the committee to function.

When the President presented his budget, he had included a large amount of funding which this committee did not accept because we did not want to put ourselves in that sort of a bind.

Independent of the equities of the argument relative to the initiative which was voted on once before in a form not exactly like this but similar to this on the Treasury-Postal bill, I believe very strongly this would set a very poor precedent if we began appropriating in the future on bills for this year.

It would avoid the entire budgetary process, which requires offsets. That is our fiscal discipline. Without offsets, we will have no fiscal discipline. Arguably, we could appropriate all of next year's budget on almost any subject that Members wish and create significant problems.

I don't support the amendment. I believe the amendment is inappropriate.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, I thank the chairman and the ranking member for permitting me to offer this amendment.

But this is not a precedent-setting amendment. We have done substantial forward funding in those programs that need it. And it will take a year to organize this program.

This is the time to get this program started by making certain that the message is clear, that it is out there. It says: Listen, kids, don't start drinking. It could lead you down a terrible path. It could create more dependence on alcohol, more introduction to other drugs. That is a poor way to give a child a sendoff.

The Senator from New Hampshire talks about appropriating next year's money at this time as being somewhat unusual. Fortunately, or unfortunately, it is not unusual. I have a list of accounts that have been forward funded. I ask unanimous consent to have these accounts printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the information was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

AMENDMENT NO. 1301

(Purpose: To prohibit the Federal Communications Commission from requiring persons to use any accounting method that does not conform to Generally Accepted Accounting Principles)

Mr. ENZI. I send an amendment to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Wyoming [Mr. ENZI], for himself, Mr. BURNS, and Mr. FITZGERALD, proposes an amendment numbered 1301.

Mr. ENZI. I ask unanimous consent reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

At the appropriate place, insert:

SEC. XX. PROHIBITION ON REQUIREMENT FOR USE OF ACCOUNTING METHOD NOT CONFORMING TO GENERALLY ACCEPTED ACCOUNTING PRINCIPLES.

(a) PROHIBITION.—No part of any appropriations contained in this Act shall be used by the Federal Communications Commission to require any person subject to its jurisdiction under the Communications Act of 1934, as amended (47 U.S.C. 151 et seq) to utilize for any purpose any form or method of accounting that does not conform to Generally Accepted Accounting Principles established by the Financial Accounting Standards Board.

Mr. ENZI. Mr. President, I rise to offer an amendment to remove an unnecessary burdensome recordkeeping requirement on local telephone companies.

In 1935, the Federal Communications Commission developed an accounting system known as a uniform system of accounts to ensure the Commission had access to financial data used by AT&T to set local phone rates. This system of accounting requires that companies maintain detailed records and appreciate every asset they purchase, from paper clips to trucks. According to depreciation schedules that each company negotiates with the FCC, no other entity in the Nation has to do that.

I have seen some of these schedules. They require companies to depreciate assets over longer periods of time than either the Internal Revenue Service or the Securities and Exchange Commission. They require them to depreciate things that no other business has to depreciate. Many of these assets are high-technology items such as digital switches or fiber-optic cable that are often obsolete in a very short period of time. However, the FCC requires them to be depreciated over a much longer period of time.

This is not limited to depreciation. As an accountant, I happen to know a bit about generally accepted accounting principles. Yet even small businesses under the IRS have a dollar threshold over which they amortize assets—usually $25,000. For purchases under $25,000, the company would simply expense the item, meaning that they could charge the cost of the asset against the current year's revenues.

Under the FCC system, local telephone companies are required to amortize every asset they buy, from office supplies to digital switching equipment. There is no dollar value threshold for local companies. They have to keep detailed records and record assets in accounts specified by the FCC; negotiated individually with the FCC. These companies already maintain their records according to generally accepted accounting principles. Their standard is required by the IRS and FCC. Why should a third agency require companies to keep their books in a manner inconsistent with generally accepted accounting principles?

Now that AT&T has been broken up and competition is being allowed to take place, it is time to remove regulatory burdens that do nothing more than impose a requirement on one set of companies that their competitors do not have to comply with, information that is available to the competitors, information in detail available to the competitors, derived at great expense to the local telephone company?

The amendment I am proposing would prohibit the FCC from requiring any accounting system other than generally accepted accounting principles for 1 year. This would give companies time to transition to the generally accepted accounting principles—one set of books—and make provisions to take obsolete equipment out of service and change their internal accounting policies to conform with generally accepted accounting principles. This would also save the Government money, since the FCC would not have to maintain as big an Accounting Policy Division to negotiate and enforce these antiquated, detailed depreciation and expense rules.

According to the accounting firm of Arthur Anderson, this would save the small local telephone exchange companies—we are talking about the small companies in every State in this Nation—between $200,000 and $1 million a year. This is money that could be spent on bringing advanced services and technology to rural areas or reducing rates. I understand how expensive it is to maintain one set of business records, and anybody in business out there understands that. That is one set of business records according to the generally accepted accounting principles. Just imagine what it costs for two sets of books, and the second set of books has to be negotiated in detail, has to have far more accounts than the other. My amendment would eliminate this expensive requirement on local telephone companies and level the playing field between competitors, particularly with the huge long distance competitors.

My amendment is being supported by the United States Telephone Association and its members. The United States Telephone Association represents small rural telephone companies. They believe, as I do, that competition in the local phone market starts when all participants are bound by the same rules.

I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a letter from the United States Telephone Association that goes into a bit more detail than I have time, in my allotted 15 minutes, to go into. Commissioner Harold Furchtgott-Roth, who serves on the Federal Communications Commission, made a statement on docket 99-253 that mentions:

In today's increasingly competitive telecommunications marketplace, the Commission should be focusing its efforts on transitioning to a more competitive environment. The amount of detailed information and regulatory scrutiny required under our accounting and ARMIS rules is inordinate and should be reduced.

I ask that entire letter be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

UNITED STATES
TELEPHONE ASSOCIATION,
July 19, 1999.

Hon. MICHAEL ENZI,
U.S. Senate, Russell State Office Building,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR ENZI: I am writing to commend you and thank you for your efforts to streamline the FCC's accounting requirements for local telephone companies. These requirements are vestiges of past regulatory schemes. They are burdensome, costly, and discriminatory, and they serve no useful purpose in today's telecommunications market. The 1,200 local telephone companies that comprise the United States Telephone Association appreciate your leadership on this issue.

As you know, these accounting rules, also known as the Uniform System of Accounts, were adopted more than a decade ago, when the local telephone market was for the most part closed, and local carriers were subject to cost-based, rate of return regulations. Since that time, the large incumbent local exchange companies have changed to price cap regulations, and the local telephone market has opened to competition. In short, the marketplace has changed, but these accounting rules have not.

Arthur Anderson estimates that these regulations cost the local phone industry up to $270 million every year. Ultimately, consumers suffer from these wasted resources. The capital the local phone companies spend meeting these requirements could be redeployed in ways that benefit consumers with lower prices, better services, more advanced technologies and more robust competition. Further, in today's telecommunications market, rapid advances in technology drive the introduction of new products and services at a breakneck pace. Costly and unnecessary regulations slow that pace and skew the competitive balance toward companies that are not subject to them.

Taxpayers suffer, as well. More than 70 people at the Federal Communications Commission are needed to maintain and audit these reports. These slots or their funding could be saved, or put to better use either elsewhere at the Commission, or elsewhere in government.

Senator Enzi, thank you again for your leadership on this issue. If we may be of assistance in any way, please let us know.

Sincerely,

ROY NOEL,
President and CEO,

STATEMENT OF COMMISSIONER HAROLD FURCHTGOTT-ROTH

Re: Comprehensive Review of the Accounting Requirements and ARMIS Reporting Requirements for Incumbent Local Exchange Carriers (CC Docket No. 99-253)

I support today's Order initiating "Phase 1" of a comprehensive review of the Commission's accounting and reporting requirements. While I believe that today's Order is a step in the right direction, it is, to my regret, a very small step down a very long road. I write separately because I continue to be concerned about the Commission's micro-management of all telecommunications carriers, including LECs.

In today's increasingly competitive telecommunications marketplace, the Commission should be focusing its efforts on transitioning to this more competitive environment. The amount of detailed information and regulatory scrutiny required under our current accounting and ARMIS rules is inordinate and should be reduced. I am becoming increasingly convinced that the current regulatory mechanisms—and certainly the level of detail—are no longer necessary in today's increasingly competitive marketplace. I believe the Commission must consider even further deregulation as these cumbersome regulations become unnecessary.

I wait anxiously for the commencement of Phase 2 of this review, which I hope follows today's small step with huge strides toward true regulatory reform.

Mr. ENZI. Mr. President, what we have is an issue where we have a lot of local, small, rural telephone companies who are coming under inordinate additional accounting requirements, additional accounting besides what is required by the other Federal agencies. This information has to be released to the competitors as well. Competitors, the big phone companies, do not have to give the same information to the little companies. So it is time we made this kind of change.

I ask for support on the amendment. I yield the floor and reserve the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I have the greatest respect for the distinguished Senator and realize he is far more steeped in this particular discipline of accounting, of certified public accounting, than I am.

Yet having worked in the field and heard for the first time here in the last half hour of this particular amendment, it goes right to the heart of what has been going on. Specifically, we want to change an accounting system that has been on the books, agreed to, conformed with, never objected to, during the entire 4-year deliberation of the rewrite of the Telecommunications Act. I never heard anything about this need for a different system of accounting. Now, having adopted it, I am asking immediately: Wait a minute, what is going on here? We never heard of this or anything else like it. Then the giveaway is when my distinguished colleague says the United States Telephone Association, and so forth, little, little, little—little my eye. This is the Bell crowd.

I find out by telephone call they have had a recent audit and the auditors found billions of dollars of unaccounted-for equipment. They just had it on the books. They put it into the rate structure. And then they redeem those amounts into the rate-paying system. This, of course, affects the rates, it affects the amounts that go back to universal service, and everything else of that kind. So all of a sudden we really, rather than helping the little ones, are going to harm the little folks on a so-called accounting system change.

If anybody is intimately familiar with the rural telephone companies and the co-ops and everything else, this particular Senator is. The finest rural system there is in the State of South Carolina. In fact, they have put in the Internet connections and everything else at all the public schools and what have you. Really, it is one of the finest rural groups. They never saw me about this or anything of this kind. This amendment definitely ought to be tabled.

I reserve the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana.

Mr. ENZI. Mr. President, I yield 3 minutes to the Senator from Montana.

Mr. BURNS. Mr. President, I thank my friend from Wyoming. I doubt I need 3 minutes.

When this accounting system was adopted in the telecommunications industry way back in 1935, and it evolved through the years, we did not foresee the advances of technology and the need to change equipment would happen in that area as fast as it is happening now. New technology is coming on line. If there is a holdup in the buildout of this technology, of maybe some of our locally owned companies—and some of our cooperatives as cooperatives, I doubt, will be affected by this—it is so we can get rid of some of this old equipment we carry on the books because it is not all depreciated out. It has not kept pace with the technology.

There was, a couple of years ago—it was more than that, 5 or 6 years ago, with then-Senator Brown from Colorado—offered an amendment to standardize accounting clear through the Government. We did not get that done. But nonetheless here is an old accounting system that is very important to the high-tech area when it comes to buildout in the rural area, so broadband technologies can be deployed and get rid of some of the old equipment still on the books.

This amendment needs passing. I yield the floor and thank my friend from Wyoming.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. HOLLINGS. The distinguished Senator from Montana, the chairman of our Subcommittee on Communications, ought to be asking for a hearing on this one. Another phrase caught my attention, when they say "historic cost." They could go all the way back to 1934, which they have already been rewarded for over the many years, 60 or 70 years. Otherwise that is exactly what they have earned as a monopoly. Yes, we are moving. Don't say they did not foresee it.

I have just been through a vigorous campaign and visited rural folks. I admire the new equipment they have. They are changing over. They know what it is. They know what competition is. The small ones, more or less, have been bringing about the competition.

It is the Bell companies that told this Senator and the committee time and again at hearings: We want to compete; we want to compete; we want to compete.

Please, my gracious, all they have done is combine. Southwest Bell has taken over Pacific Telesis. Now they want to take over Ameritech. Bell Atlantic has taken over NYNEX. Another one, we heard just the other day, is taking over U.S. West. They are all moving to combine and form more monopolies, and before long we will have Ma Bell all over again.

Then they have the audacity and unmitigated gall to come to the floor of the Senate and say let's just change the little accounting system so we can take care of all of these costs, when they have been caught short of unaccounted equipment that has been carried on the books over many years and they have long since been compensated for in their rates.

I can say the universal service to the small business in Wyoming and Montana when the Bell company puts this one over on the United Telephone Association—if they put this over, they are going to have to pay through the nose, I can tell you that right now. It is all going in. It is the big gobbling up the little ones.

There ought not to be any misunderstanding to all of a sudden changing their accounting systems because they have found unaccounted equipment on the books that have been kept over many years, for which they have long since been compensated, and for which they continue to charge over and over. That is what is at issue here; without a hearing and putting it on the commerce bill which has jurisdiction over the FCC and saying it is just a small thing, they just want to look out for people and want the same kind of report.

They want to get rid of the report that says you can carry all these expenses ad infinitum, back to 1934, and continue to charge the ratepayers for it. If that occurs, then universal service, the rates, and everything else with respect to the agreed-upon long distance and local rates is going totally out of kilter. The little boys are really going to suffer.

I am prepared, when all time has expired, to make a motion to table this amendment. It definitely ought to be tabled in behalf of all communications and, more particularly, on account of procedures in the Senate. We have a committee. The distinguished Senator is chairman of the subcommittee. The subject has never been mentioned, and, Heaven knows, I hear every day I am in the Senate: Please, call the Commission. We don't. Please write a letter to the Commission. All the downtown lawyers again and again want to try their cases politically when they cannot prevail administratively.

I know if it were a real problem, I would have long since heard about it. My rural people would have told me about it long ago. But bam, at 7 o'clock at night, they want to change the entire accounting system. It is the wrong procedure, if nothing else.

I reserve the remainder of my time.

Mr. ENZI. Mr. President, what we are trying to do is harmonize and unify the accounting system, not eliminate and drastically change it. We are talking about generally accepted accounting principles. This is what the accountants across the United States use day in and day out. We are trying to unify it within the telecommunications industry.

One reason you have not heard about this a lot is that we are talking about the small local exchange carriers. We are not talking about the big corporations that have all the lawyers in Washington. We are talking about the little guy out there who is trying to run a business and does not have as much time or expertise to run to Washington or know specifically to whom to take his case. We are talking about small businesses. And we are not talking about small money here. We are talking about them imposing extra regulations which cost them $200,000 to $1 million a year. That is money that could be put into new phone systems or reducing rates. These are the small rural carriers.

As far as whether enough data is available, of course, it is available. Corporations, big and small, across this Nation run and report under generally accepted accounting principles. This is not a new system. It is newer than the system we are talking about operating under which was instituted in 1935.

In 1935, when it was controlled by a monopoly, there needed to be more detailed accounting. Anything that needs to be accounted can still be accounted. It just has to follow generally accepted accounting principles instead of a multiple process of going to the FCC, negotiating into some new accounts which already number in the neighborhood of 500, and coming in with the output that is needed to make the decision, rather than a myriad of information.

How would you like to depreciate paper clips? It has gotten ridiculous. Those things have to be taken into consideration. There is no threshold of expenses.

There have been a lot of changes in the communications industry. One of them is divestiture of AT&T. There is a whole list of things that have happened. A big one is the passage in 1996 of the Telecommunications Act, of which the Senator was speaking, and the issuance of the resulting FCC orders implementing various sections of the act, including proceedings to implement local competition and interconnection, as well as universal service, access charge, and price cap reform.

There is not anything under generally accepted accounting principles that will not get the data that is needed to handle any of those issues. All of the service providers, with the exception of incumbent local exchange companies, have flexibility. The others already have the flexibility. AT&T has the flexibility to provide services priced on a competitive basis at rates dictated by the marketplace.

These service providers are not subject to the accounting and record-keeping rules contained in part 32—the big companies are not subject to that—and associated monitoring and enforcement activities but are simply required to follow GAAP in producing their external reports. Prices no longer bear a direct relationship to cost.

Mr. ASHCROFT. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. ENZI. Yes.

Mr. ASHCROFT. I find this to be rather confounding. I just want to make sure I understand this clearly. These companies are required to maintain two sets of books?

Mr. ENZI. Yes.

Mr. ASHCROFT. Accounted different ways; is that correct?

Mr. ENZI. The Senator from Missouri is absolutely correct. They are required to carry multiple books.

Mr. ASHCROFT. And this adds as much as $20 million to $30 million to the cost of doing business?

Mr. ENZI. For the local companies, it would be $25 million to $30 million. We are talking about at least $300 million across the United States per year.

Mr. ASHCROFT. Some of these companies try to be competitive, not only nationally but internationally.

Mr. ENZI. They are, and we want them to be competitive without having to do all the mergers that were spoken of earlier.

Mr. ASHCROFT. Is it true these additional charges are eventually paid by consumers?

Mr. ENZI. Absolutely, they have to be paid by consumers.

Mr. ASHCROFT. What we are imposing is almost like a tax that the people of America are paying, $25 million or $30 million extra, that is really unnecessary in these companies now.

Mr. ENZI. The Senator from Missouri is absolutely correct. It is like a tax, and it is money that the rural telephone folks are having to pay.

Mr. ASHCROFT. And that is a substantial impairment on their capacity to do business?

Mr. ENZI. It is a substantial impairment on their ability to be competitive with the big national phone companies.

Mr. ASHCROFT. This one unique, idiosyncratic accounting method is a 1930s accounting system.

Mr. ENZI. That is correct.

Mr. ASHCROFT. That is still mandated in spite of the fact that for other purposes, to be competitive and to be successful in offering their stock and other things, they maintain a set of books that is generally accepted for accounting purposes.

Mr. ENZI. That is correct. We want the small companies able to do the same kind of accounting as the big companies.

Mr. ASHCROFT. The Senator's amendment is to basically say we want to relieve them of this duplicitous, inefficient demand which results in their consumers having to pay a lot more and reducing the competitiveness of these companies.

Mr. ENZI. The Senator is absolutely correct. We want to increase their competitiveness. We want the people in the rural areas to have the same accounting system, so they have lower costs, so they can pass that on to the consumer.

Mr. ASHCROFT. I thank the Senator for his amendment. I think it is good policy. It is the direction in which we should be going to be competitive. We need to move into the next century, not try to reinvent the last century.

I thank the Senator for his excellent work and for allowing me to interrupt his remarks to clarify this to make sure I understand clearly what the Senator from Wyoming said. He has made an outstanding contribution to the understanding of other Senators and to the people of the United States about an archaic system imposed by Government which costs us all resources and which makes competition difficult for our own companies.

Mr. ENZI. I thank the Senator from Missouri for his comments.

We have an opportunity to fix the system so it works the same for big companies and small companies so they all operate under generally accepted accounting principles, so the small rural guy is not doing all of the extra accounting that the big guys are not required to do.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BROWNBACK). The Senator's time has expired.

Mr. HOLLINGS addressed the Chair.

Mr. ENZI. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Carolina has 7 minutes 55 seconds.

Mr. HOLLINGS. I will use just a minute or two, Mr. President.

The word "competitive" intrigued this particular Senator. As they congratulate each other over there with respect to this particular attempted fix, let me remind the Senate that we are talking about monopolies. Monopolies do not have general accounting principles because they are not in the field of competition. They are monopolies. They are guaranteed a return. And extra accounting principles have been long since established for these companies and for small ones in that the independent, local exchange carriers—there are many small ones—they are monopolies, too. So these accounting methods and principles have been in force for a long time.

And here without a hearing, and just, bam, and to start talking about small—and there is a $30 million tax, and so forth, that is just spurious reasoning and fanciful notions, if I have ever heard them.

The opposite is true. We are trying, with respect to a monopoly, to make sure that it does not go to the ratepayer because the monopoly is guaranteed a return. So if any true costs are there, they are going to have to be reflected in their guaranteed rate of return.

So this amendment is totally out of order in the sense of procedures here in the Senate where we have a committee and we can have hearings on it and we can find out if there is any infringement with respect to the concern of the Senator from Wyoming. Because he knows all about accounting.

But I can tell you now, general accounting principles do not apply to monopolies—and should not apply to monopolies—because there is no competition. They are guaranteed that return, and that is why they have the special accounting system.

I thank the Chair. At the end of this, if my distinguished chairman would permit, I think we ought to move to table this one.

Mr. ENZI. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. HOLLINGS. Yes, sir.

Mr. ENZI. Would you be willing to go with an amendment that would require AT&T and other companies to meet the same requirements as little companies?

Mr. HOLLINGS. Oh, yes. I think whatever accounting system they have, I do not find a difference in it. I would go with having a hearing and give you a definite return. We are not trying to delay or anything like that, but I would have a hearing before the subcommittee of the Senator from Montana, and the full committee, and we would be glad to report something out. But we never have had hearings, and you just say "little and small."

The United States Telephone Association, that is big. I know from hard experience that is big. That is a "Big Bell" company. In relation to the chairman of this so-called company that has the accounting system, and so forth, do you know what they reported in USA Today the other day? The chairman of Bell South made last year $55.9 million—either $56 or $57 million. Can you imagine the head of a monopoly guaranteed a return, with no competition, making $55 million? Come on. And you are talking about little things? Don't give me that. They are not little. In just agreeing to little and big, we have a different idea basically of what is big and what is little in this particular debate.

Mr. ENZI. You would agree they all ought to be on the same accounting system?

Mr. HOLLINGS. I don't know of a reason for a separate accounting system. If there is less of an accounting system for the smaller one, I tend in that direction.

I agree with the sentiment that you have to look out for the small so they are not gobbled up by the big. So I would almost agree to less of an accounting system for the small rather than the same required for the big. I am trying to go in your direction.

Mr. ENZI. I would love to work with you on that, but right now the big ones have the easier accounting system.

Mr. HOLLINGS. We can have hearings and find that out.

Mr. ENZI. Mr. President, I ask for the yeas and nays on my amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second on the amendment.

They yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I move to table the amendment and ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second on the motion to table?

No, there is not a sufficient second on the motion to table.

There is a sufficient second on the motion to table.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on the motion to table. The clerk will call the roll.

Mr. GREGG addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. GREGG. I ask unanimous consent that the first vote be on the Lautenberg amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The yeas and nays have been ordered on the Lautenberg amendment. The clerk will call the roll.

Mr. HOLLINGS. I suggest the absence of a quorum for a second.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll to ascertain the absence or the presence of a quorum.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded and that we have the regular order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

VOTE ON AMENDMENT NO. 1302

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to amendment No. 1302 by the Senator from New Jersey. The yeas and nays have been ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative assistant called the roll.

Mr. NICKLES. I announce that the Senator from Arizona (Mr. MCCAIN) and the Senator from Alabama (Mr. SHELBY) are necessarily absent.

Mr. REID. I announce that the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. KENNEDY) is necessarily absent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa has the floor.

Mr. GREGG. Regular order.

Mr. HARKIN. I have an amendment on behalf of myself, Senator HATCH, Senator GRASSLEY, Senator BROWNBACK, Senator BINGAMAN, Senator BIDEN, Senator JOHNSON, Senator ROCKEFELLER, Senator MURRAY, Senator AKAKA, Senator FEINGOLD, Senator LAUTENBERG, and Senator BRYAN.

I ask for its immediate consideration.

Mr. REID. Will the Senator yield for a question?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. It will take unanimous consent to set aside the amendment.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative assistant proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent at this time Senator WELLSTONE be recognized to offer an amendment, and the time on that amendment be 30 minutes with the Senator from Minnesota controlling 20 minutes of that time and the Senator in opposition controlling 10.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Minnesota is recognized.

AMENDMENT NO. 1303

(Purpose: To clarify the treatment of juveniles and the mentally ill by the Prison Litigation Reform Act of 1995)

Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Minnesota [Mr. WELLSTONE] proposes an amendment numbered 1303.

Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 45, after line 9, insert the following:

SEC. XX. INAPPLICABILITY OF AMENDMENTS.

Section 3626 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

“(h) INAPPLICABILITY OF AMENDMENTS.—A civil action that seeks to remedy conditions that pose a threat to the health of individuals who are juveniles or mentally ill shall be governed by the terms of this section, as in effect on the day before the date of enactment of the Prison Litigation Reform Act of 1995 and the amendments made by that Act (18 U.S.C. 3601 note).”.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Minnesota is recognized.

Mr. WELLSTONE. I thank the Chair.

Mr. President, I have had the opportunity to visit some detention facilities across our country and meet with correctional officers and also the incarcerated children and their parents. I am struck again and again by one fact: The mentally ill and the juveniles—the children, the kids—are particularly vulnerable to abuse and neglect in jails and prisons in our country. That is why I am offering this amendment that will give back to the Federal courts full authority to remedy abusive conditions but only under which the mentally ill and juveniles are being held.

Just 2 weeks ago, the Department of Justice released a report on the prevalence of mental illness among adult inmates in our jails and prisons. The Justice Department report merely confirms what many of us already know. The criminalization of mental illness is a national crisis.

Of particular concern to me have been the extraordinary problems children with mental illness and emotional disorders encounter in juvenile jails. That is why I introduced the Mental Health Juvenile Justice Act earlier this year. Of the 100,000 children who are arrested and incarcerated each year, as many as 50 percent suffer from a mental or emotional disturbance.

Jails and detention centers often find they are unprepared to deal with these kids. For instance, medication which should be given is not given; medication that should be properly monitored is not properly monitored; and guards may not even know how to respond to some of these kids.

Why do so many youth with mental illness end up in the juvenile justice system? The truth of the matter is, we ought to, on the front end, do a much better job of assessing the problems of these kids and, for those who should not be incarcerated—some should—but for those who should not be incarcerated, look to alternatives.

We have not invested as a country—you can talk to anybody down in the trenches doing this work—adequately in the service programs and community prevention programs that will reduce the need for incarceration. Therefore, many of these kids wind up in these facilities. They are incredibly vulnerable. They do not get the care they absolutely have to get, and the consequences are tragic.

Last year, as an example, I went with the National Mental Health Association to the Tallulah Correctional Center for Youth, a privately owned facility for over 600 youth in northeast Louisiana. I saw shocking civil rights violations which were cited by the U.S. Department of Justice. Basically what I am saying is, there were kids who were diagnosed with mental problems getting absolutely no treatment whatsoever.

The Justice Department has also exposed gross abuses in Georgia, Kentucky, and the juvenile facilities in Louisiana. Other States also experience similar problems. Investigators found cases of physical abuse and neglect of mental health needs, including unwarranted and prolonged isolation of suicidal children, hog-tie and chemical restraints used on youth with serious emotional disturbances, forced medication, and even denial of medication.

Children with extensive psychiatric histories who are prone to self-mutilation—cutting themselves with glass—never even saw a psychiatrist.

In some cases, abusive treatment of these children results directly from their being emotionally disturbed. Staff in the juvenile facilities fail to recognize the problem and, in fact, punish these children for the symptoms of their disorders. Children have been punished for requesting treatment or put in isolation when they refuse to accept treatment. One child in a boot camp was punished for making involuntary noises that were symptoms of Tourette's syndrome. Mental disorders are being handled almost solely through discipline, isolation, and restraints, according to investigations by the U.S. Department of Justice and human rights groups.

Nobody likes litigation, but sometimes lawsuits are necessary to protect the constitutional rights of our people, especially vulnerable, voiceless persons such as incarcerated children who suffer from mental illness. That is what this amendment is about.

Because juveniles and mentally ill persons are particularly vulnerable to abuse and neglect in State institutions, I am offering tonight an amendment which will give back to Federal courts the authority to remedy abusive conditions under which juveniles with mental illness are being held. Regrettably, the Congress has taken steps in recent years to limit the circumstances under which lawsuits challenging the constitutionality of prison conditions can be brought.

Three years ago, this Congress passed the Prison Litigation Reform Act. Its sponsors claimed that the bill would merely end frivolous lawsuits by prisoners, and we all agree with that goal. I certainly do. But the terms of the PLRA were much more sweeping. It deprived Federal courts of important legal tools to remedy brutal, unconstitutional conditions in juvenile detention facilities throughout our country.

For example, the PLRA limited the power of Federal courts to impose and retain injunctive relief to improve conditions in juvenile facilities. This means that parties can no longer settle these lawsuits by means of a consent decree—a court-enforceable injunction entered into with agreement by the parties without admission of liability by a defendant. That is very important. Also, any relief order must be terminated by the courts 2 years after it is issued unless the court holds another trial.

One of the most important judicial powers that the PLRA curtailed was the appointment of special masters. Quite often judges will appoint special masters who will come in, do the mediation, do the negotiation, but we have so limited the compensation that we are not able to do that. The act limited the powers of special masters so they can no longer perform this task of mediating disputes and assisting the parties in reaching some compliance with court orders.

While the PLRA has made it much more difficult for courts to improve inhumane conditions in prisons generally, it has had a devastating impact on the conditions in which mentally ill and juvenile defenders are held. They are particularly vulnerable to abuse and neglect at State institutions, and precisely because of that fact, we must not be indifferent to their plight or ignore their need for protection.

Let me give some examples. Just consider some of these horrific conditions involving mentally ill juveniles that PLRA has made more difficult to remedy:

In Philadelphia, children with mental illness in a juvenile detention facility operating at 160 percent of capacity were regularly beaten by staff with chains and other objects. Santiago v. Philadelphia.

In Delaware, juveniles with mental illness were housed in living units the court found posed a serious fire hazard. Their food and clothing were inadequate. Children were routinely beaten, maced, and shackled. The medical and education programs they received were below minimally accepted standards. These are facts. This is what is going on. John A v. Castle.

In a Pennsylvania-run juvenile facility, children were routinely beaten by faculty staff, staff trafficking in illegal drugs was rampant, and sexual relations between staff and confined youth were commonplace. DB v. Commonwealth.

A severely depressed 17-year-old in an adult prison in Texas was raped and sodomized. His request to be placed in protective custody was denied. For the next several months, he was repeatedly beaten by older prisoners, forced to perform oral sex, robbed, and beaten again. Each time, his requests for protection were denied by the warden. He attempted suicide by hanging himself in his cell after a guard had ignored the warning letter he wrote. He was in a coma for 4 months, after which he died.

The purpose of the Prison Litigation Reform Act was to reduce or eliminate frivolous lawsuits by inmates. I am all for that, but as these examples make clear—and I have many other examples—the inmates I seek to protect with this amendment are not filing frivolous lawsuits. Or I should say, what is happening to them is not the stuff of a frivolous lawsuit. They are young; they are uneducated; they are suffering from mental illness that prevent them from functioning at the necessary level to file a lawsuit on their own. This is a population of uniquely vulnerable inmates who need representation in the legal system and are not receiving that representation, who need the protection that the Federal courts have historically provided.

Unfortunately, this Congress seems to be moving, at least on the House side—and I pray we do not do the same thing—in the opposite direction. Just last month, the House adopted an amendment offered by Congressman DELAY to the juvenile justice bill that would actually terminate all consent decrees entered into prior to the passage of the Prison Litigation Reform Act.

The DeLay amendment would say that even when prison conditions were horrible enough to warrant the continuation of the consent decree, that decree is going to be terminated by an act of Congress. No matter how many children will suffer, the Federal judge's hands will be tied.

I think it is unconstitutional. Let me give a couple of examples and conclude, because if this amendment is agreed to tonight, this will negate the DeLay amendment in the House of Representatives.

In Ironton, OH, a 15-year-old girl ran away from home over night, then returned to her parents but was put in the county jail by the juvenile court judge to "teach her a lesson." On the fourth night of her confinement, she was sexually assaulted by a deputy jailer. More than 500 children had been incarcerated in the jail over the past 3 years, many for truancy and other status offenses. Under the consent decree, no children may be held in the jail. But with what is happening in the House of Representatives, that consent decree would not even apply.

In Portland, ME, a lawsuit was filed after a young boy held in the county jail was sexually assaulted by an older adolescent. In 1987, county officials agreed to stop holding children in the jail because of another decree.

In Clovis, NM, children were held in the county jail in unsanitary conditions, without adequate fire safety procedures, recreation or programming, or adequate separation from adult inmates. In 1983, local officials agreed to stop using the jail as a detention facility for children.

The DeLay amendment would automatically terminate these decrees even if judges disagreed. This amendment would deal with this problem.

In Tucson, AZ, children in the juvenile detention center were held in leather restraints, mail was censored, there were inadequate treatment programs, and the facility was overcrowded. Another consent decree provided for the protection of these children.

In Oklahoma, there was pervasive brutality in the operation of the State juvenile correctional institutions. Children were often handcuffed and hogtied, and institutional staff relied on physical force and intimidation to keep order. The "punishment unit" was dark and dungeonlike. Another consent decree took care of that.

Again, this amendment I offer tonight is an effort to make sure what was done in the House will essentially be negated.

Mr. President, I will conclude. My amendment would not repeal, I say to my colleagues, the Prison Litigation Reform Act or adversely affect the crackdown on frivolous lawsuits. It would say that in the case of the mentally ill and juveniles, we should try to protect them. My amendment would merely carve a narrow exception to the PLRA restrictions in limited circumstances involving children and those who struggle with mental illness.

Elie Wiesel once said: "More than anything—more than hatred and torture—more than pain—do I fear indifference." We must be vigilant and we must not allow ourselves to be indifferent to children's misery, particularly those children who may be sick, difficult, and test our patience and our understanding. In that spirit, I ask my colleagues to support this modest and humane exception.

This amendment has the support of the Bazelon Center for Mental Health Law, the Children's Defense Fund, the Justice Policy Institute, the National Education Association, the National Network for Youth, The National Prison Project of the ACLU Foundation, The Shiloh Baptist Church, the Youth Law Center, and other organizations as well.

I yield the floor.

Mr. GREGG addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I have 10 minutes on this amendment available and note that what we hope to do is stack the vote on this amendment with a couple other votes later in the evening. I reserve the 10 minutes because Senator HATCH has asked to speak to this amendment, and I will allocate him that time.

I make a point of order that a quorum is not present.

Mr. LEAHY. Would the Senator withhold for a moment?

Mr. GREGG. I withhold for the Senator from Vermont.

Mr. LEAHY. For some of us who have been here—I know, through no fault of the distinguished chairman, we have had 5 hours of quorum calls today, approximately. This evening I know some of us would like to be with our families. I know it is a family-friendly Senate. But for those of us who have families and wish to be with our families—I know the Senator from New Hampshire feels the same way—can we get some idea when we might vote, so we can do that? If we had not had so many quorum calls, we would be done by now.

Mr. GREGG. You are absolutely right. We are working on an extensive list of amendments. We have it down to very few. My hope is that within the next hour we can get an agreement on which amendments still have to go forward. Hopefully, there will be virtually none, and then we can go to final passage. That is the game plan.

Mr. LEAHY. I was wondering if the distinguished manager would consider going ahead with the vote on this amendment only because I know a lot of times you get everybody on the floor for a vote.

Mr. GREGG. I would like to do that, but I believe Senator HATCH wishes to speak on it. It is represented he is headed in this direction. This is his jurisdiction and your jurisdiction.

Mr. LEAHY. I understand. I do not object to that.

Mr. GREGG. As soon as Senator HATCH comes and speaks, maybe we can move to vote.

Mr. WELLSTONE addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Minnesota.

Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, first of all, I reserve the final 4 minutes of my time. I ask my colleague, I assume there are no second-degree amendments in order to this amendment; is that correct?

Mr. GREGG. That is correct.

Mr. WELLSTONE. I reserve the final 4 minutes of my time.

Mr. GREGG. I reserve our 10 minutes and ask unanimous consent that no time be credited against this amendment.

Mr. LEAHY. Reserving the right to object, I want to accommodate the distinguished chairman, but I have been sitting here having rearranged other things waiting for this vote. If I object, as a practical matter, the time on the amendment will run out under the unanimous consent, and we will have to have a vote.

Mr. GREGG. That is correct.

Mr. LEAHY. The distinguished Senator from New Hampshire says the distinguished Senator from Utah is on his way here.

Mr. GREGG. It has been represented by staff that they are in the process of asking him to appear, and it was represented he would be coming.

Mr. LEAHY. I also realize the distinguished Senator from New Hampshire could put in a quorum call, even though the time will run if the quorum call is not called off. We could take a long time doing that, but we would be right back to what happened earlier because that will protect him in that sense. I will object to the time not running. I say to the distinguished Senator from New Hampshire, the distinguished Senator from Utah is on the floor.

Mr. GREGG. This is good news for all of us.

Mr. LEAHY. Why don't we let him do that and go that way so we could have a vote in the next few minutes, I say to my distinguished friend from Utah.

Mr. GREGG. I think if we could go to a quorum call briefly, the Senator from Utah will be back and will be speaking in a brief period of time.

Mr. REID addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BURNS). The Senator from Nevada.

Mr. REID. I say to the managers of the bill, I have been working with my friend from South Carolina. We are doing—

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that these colloquies not be debited to the amendment of the Senator from Minnesota.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, the Senator from Utah is on the floor. We have been working with our Members and have cleared most everything with the Senator from South Carolina. We only have a few more amendments—

Mr. GREGG. As do we.

Mr. REID. Requiring a very short period of time. I think if we can get past this, we would be in a position to give the Senator a finite number of amendments that still need to be debated and voted on.

Mr. GREGG. That is excellent news, obviously. We are also making good progress on our side. Hopefully, we can go to a vote and maybe make some more progress.

I yield to the Senator from Utah whatever remains of my 10 minutes.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I won't take long. The amendment exempts juveniles and the mentally ill from the reforms accomplished by the Prison Litigation Reform Act, which was passed in 1996. This was my bill. This amendment would subject State prison systems to micromanagement by the Federal courts. Keep in mind, I am also the author of Civil Rights for Institutionalized Persons, which is to take care of a lot of these difficulties. I cast the deciding vote back in the late 1970s passing that bill.

Currently everyone whose Federal or constitutional rights have been violated retains the ability to bring suit and to have any violation of their rights remedied by a Federal court. All this Congress did in 1996 was to say courts could not go beyond remedying people's Federal rights to micro-manage prison systems.

I am opposed to this amendment because of that. I know the distinguished Senator from Minnesota is trying to do something right, but basically it flies in the face of what the reform basically says. If true constitutional rights are being violated, they have a right to go to court under current legislation, both in the Civil Rights Act for Institutionalized Persons and the Prison Litigation Reform Act, which we passed in 1996.

I reluctantly have to oppose this amendment because I believe that basically the current law takes care of it. His amendment would allow micromanagement of the Federal courts.

I am happy to yield the floor. I hope my colleagues will vote with me on this, and I believe there will be a motion to table. I hope they will vote to table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, so Senator LEAHY can vote—I am very proud to have his support—I will add as an organization that supports this the National Alliance for the Mentally Ill, and I yield back the remainder of my time.

I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I move to table the Wellstone amendment and ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion to table amendment No. 1303. The yeas and nays have been ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. NICKLES. I announce that the Senator from Arizona (Mr. McCAIN), the Senator from Alabama (Mr. SHELBY), and the Senator from Texas (Mr. GRAMM) are necessarily absent.

Mr. REID. I announce that the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. KENNEDY) is necessarily absent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 56, nays 40, as follows:

UNANIMOUS-CONSENT AGREEMENT—RULE XVI

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I have consulted with the Democratic leader on the unanimous-consent request I am fixing to propound. I think it is a reasonable solution to deal with a couple of very important issues.

I ask unanimous consent when the Senate convenes on Monday, July 26, it proceed to an original resolution, to be placed on the calendar by the majority leader immediately following the acceptance of this agreement, and the resolution be considered under the following restraints:

That the resolution be limited to 3 hours for each leader or his designee; that there be one amendment in order for the Democratic leader regarding restoring the point of order on exceeding the scope of conference, which debate time shall come out of the resolution time; and that final adoption of the resolution must occur prior to close of business of the Senate on Monday, July 26; Provided further that when the Senate considers the agricultural disaster relief amendment to be offered by Senator DASCHLE, or his designee, to the agriculture appropriations bill, no rule XVI point of order lie against the amendment.

Mr. HARKIN. Reserving the right to object, I tried to listen to all of the verbiage. I understand that Senator DASCHLE or his designee would be allowed to offer the emergency agriculture package without any rule XVI, but to what bill? To what measure would the Democratic leader be permitted to offer that?

Mr. LOTT. To the agricultural appropriations bill.

Mr. HARKIN. Agricultural appropriations. And that will come up before we leave in August?

Mr. LOTT. Right.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Reserving the right to object, I ask the leader a question. I assume a second-degree amendment to the first-degree concerning agriculture would be out of order under rule XVI?

Mr. LOTT. Amendments thereto would have to be protected in the same way in order for that to go forward. We can't have one amendment in order and not have amendments thereto be in order also.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I will have to object.

Mr. LOTT. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, now I understand the reservation that the Senator from Wisconsin has, and we can clarify that.

Let me read the last paragraph again. I think it will make it clear:

Provided that when the Senate considers the agricultural disaster relief amendment to be offered by Senator DASCHLE, or his designee, to the agricultural appropriations bill, no rule XVI point of order lie against the amendment or amendments thereto relating to the same subject.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, if I could, this just provides for a fair opportunity for debate on the restoration of the rule XVI issue that we talked about earlier today which would allow Members to have a debate on that and a vote. If rule XVI is put back into place, of course, legislation on appropriations bills will be limited, unless there is a rule by the Chair and it gets 51 votes.

We also have to debate and vote on the question of scope issues coming back out of conference.

When we do bring up agriculture appropriations before the August recess, there will be one amendment relating to disaster relief by Senator DASCHLE or his designee, and we will have an opportunity to have our amendment on the same subject. It will not relate to dairy, I make that clear.

DEPARTMENTS OF COMMERCE, JUSTICE, AND STATE, THE JUDICIARY AND RELATED AGENCIES APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 2000—Continued

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, with regard to tonight, we need to just keep going forward. Senator REID, as usual, is doing good work. The managers, Senator JUDD GREGG and Senator HOLLINGS, have been working. I think if we will be serious—and I don't think a lot of Senators are on either side—in trying to get this completed, we still have a raft of amendments that either need to be accepted or withdrawn.

I tried to see if we could do the work in the daylight, and I tried to see if we could do it on Mondays or Fridays. None of that seems to suit the Senate. I think we ought to keep going as late as it takes to finish this legislation. That way, we can get it completed. So it is at your pleasure. I live on Capitol Hill, so I will be at home watching you all on TV and wishing you the best. When the votes are ready, I will come back and vote. It is up to the Senators. Do we get rid of this long list of amendments that Senator REID and Senator GREGG have been working on and keep going on into the night, or we can come in tomorrow. I am flexible either way. We have to get this bill done. I think we ought to keep going.

I hope Senators will get serious about getting rid of some of these amendments. There is no reason we shouldn't have another vote or two and final passage. I hope we can get that done. This is not aimed at one side or the other. It is on both sides. Let's get serious and complete this bill.

I yield the floor.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I take a moment to thank the majority leader for his willingness to work with us and cooperate to the point that he has tonight to reach the agreement we have for Monday. I believe this is a fair compromise. We will have an opportunity to debate it, offer an amendment, and have the vote. We will also have the opportunity to have a good discussion about how we might proceed with agriculture disasters. I think this accommodates many of the concerns we have raised.

I also must share his hope that we can finish this bill at a reasonable hour. It is 9 o'clock. There is no reason within the next hour we couldn't finish this bill. I appreciate especially the deputy minority leader for all of the work he has done to get us to this point. We are down to a couple of amendments on our side. I am hopeful we can finish. There is no reason we can't do it reasonably soon.

I yield the floor.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, first of all, what is the parliamentary situation right now on the floor?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The pending amendment is the Gregg amendment, No. 1272.

Mr. HARKIN. I ask unanimous consent to set that amendment aside and call up an amendment.

Mr. REID. Reserving the right to object, the Senator from Iowa wants to discuss an amendment that has been agreed to for 6 minutes, is that so?

Mr. HARKIN. About 6 minutes. I want to call it up first.

Mr. GREGG. Is it necessary to call it up?

Mr. HARKIN. I would like to call up my amendment.

Mr. REID. We are going to put it in the managers' amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair cannot hear. We have quite a lot of racket here in left field. If we could take those conversations to the Cloakroom, it would sure help us proceed with the business at hand.

The Senator from Iowa.

Mr. HARKIN. I was under the understanding I was going to bring up my amendment, I would talk for 5 minutes, they would accept it, and that would be the end of it.

Mr. GREGG. No objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa is recognized.

AMENDMENT NO. 1304

(Purpose: To provide $100,000,000 in Byrne grant funding offset by reducing funds for travel, supplies, and printing expenses in the bill by 5.8 percent and cutting funds for preliminary work on possible Supreme Court improvements)

Mr. HARKIN. I ask consent to set aside the pending amendment. I have an amendment at the desk. I ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Iowa [Mr. HARKIN], for himself and Mr. HATCH, Mr. GRASSLEY, Mr. BROWNBACK, Mr. BINGAMAN, Mr. BIDEN, Mr. JOHNSON, Mr. ROCKEFELLER, Mrs. MURRAY, Mr. AKAKA, Mr. FEINGOLD, Mr. LAUTENBERG, and Mr. BRYAN, proposes an amendment numbered 1304.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 25, line 20, strike "$452,100,000" and insert "$552,100,000".

On page 66, line 20, strike "$18,123,000" and insert "$9,652,000".

On page 66, line 20, strike "$15,222,000" and insert "$6,751,000".

On page 111, after line 7, insert the following:

SEC. ____ (a) The total discretionary amount made available by this Act is reduced by $92,000,000: Provided, That the reduction pursuant to this subsection shall be taken pro rata from travel, supplies, and printing expenses made available to the agencies funded by this Act, except for activities related to the 2000 census.

(b) Not later than 30 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Director of the Office of Management and Budget shall submit to the Committees on Appropriations of the House of Representatives and the Senate a listing of the amounts by account of the reductions made pursuant to the provisions of subsection (a).

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I send this amendment to the desk on behalf of myself, Mr. HATCH, Mr. GRASSLEY, Mr. BROWNBAC, Mr. BINGAMAN, Mr. BIDEN, Mr. JOHNSON, Mr. ROCKEFELLER, Mrs. MURRAY, Mr. AKAKA, Mr. FEINGOLD, Mr. LAUTENBERG, and Mr. BRYAN. I thank the managers of the bill for their willingness to accept this.

What this amendment would do is restore the funding for the Edward Byrne Memorial Grant Program to the fiscal year 1999 level. In the bill before us, the Byrne grant was cut by $100 million from the fiscal year 1999 level; I might point out, on a bipartisan basis. This was cut first by the President. It was kept in as the bill came to the floor.

I am grateful they accepted this amendment because these grants go directly to local and State law enforcement. For fiscal year 1999, $552 million was distributed to State and local law enforcement agencies through Byrne grants. But for fiscal year 2000, the Byrne grant was cut by the White House and by the initial actions before we got to the floor by more than 18 percent. This amendment would restore the fiscal year 1999 funding level for the Byrne program.

The Byrne program is one of the most successful Federal anticrime programs ever. It pays for drug enforcement task forces, more cops on the streets, improved technology, and countless other valuable antidrug and anticrime efforts in local communities.

Restoring the Byrne funds is a top priority of law enforcement groups who know the impact the program has had on crime and drugs. The National Association of Police Organizations, the National Sheriffs' Association, and the International Association of Police Chiefs have all contacted me, urging full funding of this program.

I have received dozens of letters from Iowa police chiefs and sheriffs describing the kinds of setbacks they would suffer if these cuts go through. The Byrne grant provides critical staff and resources for Iowa's 24 drug enforcement task forces working to stem the methamphetamine epidemic in the region.

Iowa and the Midwest have made great strides in reducing methamphetamine production and supply over the last few years. The proposed cuts to the Byrne program would only set them back in their uphill battle.

Sgt. Tom Andrew, head of the Southeast Iowa Inter-Agency Drug Task Force that covers six rural counties, wrote me saying that his task force was made possible through the Byrne grant. Without it, most of the small agencies in that region would lack the manpower, funds, training, and technology necessary to combat the methamphetamine problem. Sergeant Andrew said:

A funding cut of this magnitude would have a detrimental effect on our program and would, in all probability, result in the elimination of the task force.

I have heard this story over and over again from my contacts in Iowa. These drug task forces are funded primarily by the Byrne grants, and they are desperately needed to fight our State's battles against methamphetamine use. I know this is the case in most States across the country.

We just cannot afford to have an 18-percent cut in the Byrne grants in our States next year. It makes no sense to cut such a successful program that directly benefits our local communities.

I thank the managers for accepting this amendment, and I trust we will keep the Byrne memorial grants at least at the same level next year as they were this year.

Again, I thank my colleague from Kansas also for his strong support of this program. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. HAGEL). The Senator from Kansas.

Mr. BROWNBAC. Mr. President, I want to add my comments in support of this amendment that Senator HARKIN has put forward. I think it is a good way of doing it. Here is a program that puts money directly back to the States for law enforcement; lets them decide. We take this out of travel and office supplies over the rest of the bill. I think it is much better we spend the money back in Iowa, in Kansas, in our various States, rather than on travel and printing here in Washington. That is a good trade. That is a good way to go. That is why I supported this amendment, and I am glad to hear the managers are willing to accept it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendment is agreed to. The amendment (No. 1304) was agreed to.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. REID. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California.

AMENDMENT NO. 1305

(Purpose: To prohibit the transfer of a firearm or ammunition to an intoxicated person)

Mrs. BOXER. I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the pending amendment is set aside. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from California [Mrs. BOXER] proposes an amendment numbered 1305.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 111, between lines 7 and 8, insert the following:

SEC. 6 . PROHIBITION OF TRANSFER OF A FIREARM TO AN INTOXICATED PERSON.

(a) PROHIBITION OF TRANSFER.—Section 922(d) of title 18, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by redesignating paragraphs (8) and (9) as paragraphs (9) and (10), respectively; and

(2) by inserting after paragraph (7) the following:

“(8) is intoxicated.”.

(b) DEFINITION OF INTOXICATED.—Section 921(a) of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

“(35) The term ‘intoxicated’, in reference to a person, means being in a mental or physical condition of impairment as a result of the presence of alcohol in the body of the person.”.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I am happy to make my remarks very brief because I understand this amendment will be accepted. I ask, if it is OK with the managers, if I can have 3 minutes to explain the amendment before it is accepted?

Mr. GREGG. I ask consent the Senator from California have 3 minutes and the Senator from Idaho have 3 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I am very relieved that we are seeing an acceptance of this amendment. It is so straightforward.

Under current Federal law, you cannot sell a gun to any person if the seller knows or has reason to believe any of the following, that the buyer is: a felon, a fugitive, an addict of a controlled substance, is mentally ill, is an illegal immigrant, has been dishonorably discharged from the military, has renounced his or her American citizenship, is subject to a court order on domestic violence or has been convicted of a domestic violence misdemeanor.

Already under current law anyone selling such a person a weapon, who knows, or has reason to believe this, cannot do that. All we are adding to this is: a person who is intoxicated. This is very simple. I am so pleased we are going to see this accepted. Senator CRAIG is going to make some comments.

But I want to talk about one case, a story about a woman named Deborah Kitchen, who is a quadriplegic, and she got that way because her ex-boyfriend shot her.

Tom Knapp consumed, by his own estimate, a fifth of whiskey and a case of beer. He went to K-mart in Florida to buy a .22-caliber rifle and a box of bullets. He was so intoxicated that the clerk had to help him fill out the Federal form required to purchase the gun, but he still bought the rifle, he shot his girlfriend, and left her a quadriplegic.

Let me tell you another story. This one is from Michigan. It involves an 18-year-old named Walter McKay, who had engaged in a day-long drinking spree and then went and bought ammunition for his shotgun. He was so intoxicated that he could not remember whether it was a man or woman who sold him the ammunition and could not identify what he purchased.

He took those shotgun shells, loaded his gun, and intended to shoot out of the back window of an acquaintance's truck. He was intoxicated. The shot missed, ricocheted off the wheel of the truck, and hit Anthony Buczkowski. Mr. Buczkowski had to have a finger amputated and his left wrist surgically fused.

To me, it flies in the face of common sense that someone who is intoxicated is able to buy a gun or ammunition. And it flies in the face of the evidence.

A 1997 study in the Journal of American Medical Association found that "alcohol and illicit drug use appear to be associated with an increased risk of violent death."

Yet, Mr. Knapp and Mr. McKay could buy a gun and ammunition because it is not—I repeat, not—against the law to sell a gun to someone who is intoxicated. Gun sales are largely regulated at the federal level. Gun sales involve Federal licenses and federal forms. This is a Federal responsibility, and there should be a Federal law that stops this outrage.

So, my amendment makes it against federal law to sell a firearm or ammunition if the seller knows or has reasonable cause to believe that the buyer is intoxicated.

I want to talk about for a minute about one of the items on the list. Notice that the current federal law includes a prohibition on the sale of a gun to a drug user.

In fact, the way the law is worded, you do not even need to be high on drugs at the time you buy the gun. If the seller knows or has reasonable cause to believe that you are a user or addict of an illegal drug—regardless of whether you are high at the moment the gun is purchased—he is not supposed to sell you a gun.

So, I say to my colleagues, if you cannot buy a gun when you are high on drugs, you should not be able to buy a gun when you are intoxicated on alcohol.

That is all my amendment does.

I want to make one more point. And that is about what an individual cannot do when he or she is intoxicated.

States and localities have all sorts of laws that prohibit intoxicated people from engaging in certain activities and buying certain things that are otherwise legal.

There are State laws that prohibit people from serving alcohol to someone who is intoxicated, selling fireworks to someone who is intoxicated, and renting an intoxicated person a car.

But in reviewing State laws, we could not find a single State that prohibited the sale of guns to intoxicated persons. So this amendment—which prohibits it under federal law—is really critical.

Guns and alcohol do not mix. And all I am saying with this amendment is that if you are intoxicated, you cannot buy a gun or ammunition. It is very reasonable, and it will save lives.

In many States in this Union, if you are drunk you cannot drive a car, operate a boat, operate a snowmobile, fly a plane, even get on a plane, operate an all-terrain vehicle, ride a bike, and in West Virginia you cannot even obtain a tattoo if you are drunk. But you can go in and buy a gun.

So I think this is a really important step forward as we try to pass sensible gun control legislation. It is common sense. I am very pleased it has been accepted, and I am happy to yield the floor.

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, at this time we are taking a close look at the Boxer amendment. I have visited with the Senator from California. She is being very straightforward with this amendment. No one out there wants to suggest that anybody in the legitimate business of selling guns in a legal fashion should sell one to an intoxicated person.

I am concerned about the section of the code she is amending as it relates to penalties. I certainly do not believe any of us would suggest that anybody in a retail business who sells guns within the context of the Federal law becomes an alcohol expert or has breathalyzer equipment or any of that kind of thing at the point of sale. We want to make sure that is clear, because that is asking a nonprofessional to make a professional determination that could ultimately put them in tremendous liability, up to 10 years in prison. We want to make sure that is perfectly clear.

I said to the Senator from California we will work with her to assure that going into conference, that section of the code is clarified so her amendment is as clear as, obviously, she intends it to be.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I thank my friends and say that clearly we are not suggesting in any way, shape, or form that people who are in the retail business and sell guns should have a breathalyzer. We are merely adding to this list a person who is intoxicated.

Clearly, under current law, you do not have to be a psychiatrist or you do not have to have a psychiatrist on your staff at K Mart, if you sell guns, to determine if someone is mentally ill. The way 18 U.S.C. 922(d) reads is you have to know or have reasonable cause to believe. It is a pretty broad definition.

I hope Senator CRAIG, in working with us, will recognize we are not doing anything different than we do for all of these other problem areas. It is just going to make the law stronger and better. We will stop people, such as Thomas Knapp, from walking in and buying a gun dead drunk, flat-out drunk, going home, and injuring a perfectly innocent person, in this case a loving person. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment?

The amendment (No. 1305) was agreed to.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. HOLLINGS. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 1306

(Purpose: To ensure that parties to the tuna convention pay their fair share of the expenses of the Inter-American Tropical Tuna Commission before they are allowed to export tuna to the United States)

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the amendment.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from California [Mrs. BOXER] proposes an amendment numbered 1306.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 83, at the end of line 19, before the period insert the following: "Provided further, That of the amounts made available for the Inter-American Tropical Tuna Commission in Fiscal Year 2000, not more than $2,350,000 may be obligated and expended: Provided further, That no tuna may be imported in any year from any High Contracting Party to the Convention establishing the Commission (TIAS 2044; 1 UST 231) unless the Party has paid a share of the joint expenses of the Commission proportionate to the share of the total catch from the previous year from the fisheries covered by the Convention which is utilized by that Party".

Mr. REID. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield, we need to have a time agreement established on this amendment. The Senator from California has indicated she needs 30 minutes.

Mr. GREGG. I suggest, then, we have 45 minutes on this amendment: 30 minutes to the Senator from California, 15 minutes in opposition.

Mrs. BOXER. I say to my friend, I may not take the entire 30 minutes.

Mr. GREGG. It will be very helpful to a lot of people, I suspect, if we can move this amendment along.

Mrs. BOXER. I am hopeful we can get through this.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I say to the Senator from California, I am in touch with the Senator from Delaware, and he is going to make a decision soon.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The Senator from California.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, the reason I need a little time is that this is a complicated situation we are facing and it involves the whole issue of dolphin protection versus trade versus countries that owe money to the Tuna Commission and are not at this point paying their fair share. I will explain all of this.

All my amendment says is that until the Latin American countries pay their fair share to the Tuna Commission, they should not be allowed to export their tuna into this country.

The Inter-American Tropical Tuna Commission has set these laws. It says that each member country to the Commission must pay its required share to the Commission and makes it clear that if they do not pay as required by current law, they may not export tuna into the United States.

Right now in this appropriations bill—and I think this is very important—our contribution is way too large. We are picking up the contribution of the Latin American countries. The contribution of each country is supposed to be based on the percentage of the catch in the eastern tropical Pacific. Our catch at maximum has been 40 percent, and yet in this bill, we are paying 75 percent of the total cost of the Commission.

I do not mind being Uncle Sam, but I object to being Uncle Sucker, and that is what we are doing. We should not be picking up the tab for countries that want the privilege of exporting their tuna into our markets.

There are three principal benefits from this amendment which, by the way, is cosponsored by Senator BIDEN, Senator JOHN KERRY, Senator DURBIN, Senator FEINGOLD, and Senator REID.

One, the amendment forces countries to pay their fair share of expenses which they committed to do when they signed on to the Commission.

Two, the amendment will delay the importation of tuna that is caught by chasing and circling dolphins. It will stop that importation because we know that purse seining on dolphin hurts and harm the dolphin. There was a huge boycott in this country by the schoolchildren a long time ago because purse seining was seen by them and by many Americans as being wrong: harass the dolphin, chase the dolphin because they happen to swim over the tuna, then they encircle them, catch them in the net and a lot of them are harmed, some of them are killed. If we delay the importation of tuna that is caught in this fashion, we will be saving the dolphin.

Third, because we put a freeze on the amount of money that can be paid by the United States, or I should say be limited to $2.35 million, we are saving about $1 million, and that $1 million can go to a host of other places and commissions that deal with fisheries conservation.

It is important to note that the Tuna Commission is involved in many activities that affect all the member nations. Why should we be picking up the tab for them? There are costs associated with this commission, and the convention clearly indicated that each Nation should pay its fair share. It says the countries that fish more in this particular part of the ocean should pay more.

The convention states:

The proportion of joint expenses to be paid by each High Contacting Party shall be related to the proportion of the total catch from the fisheries covered by this Convention * * *

This was decided in 1949, but it still makes sense. Countries are required to pay a share of expenses relative to their utilization of the fisheries.

The United States has always paid its fair share, but this year, for some unknown reason, we are paying the share of these other nations. We are not the largest beneficiary of tuna from the eastern tropical Pacific, and we should not be paying 75 percent of the cost. It must stop. Other countries should be carrying their own weight on this and, frankly, when we had our big debate over purse seining on dolphins and changing the label that goes on the tuna can—and many of us who really did not like this law went along with it—we went along with it in part because finally at least it recognized that these other countries have to pay their fair share, and now they are not doing it.

And these countries are purse seining the dolphin. They are harming the dolphin. We have seen a decline, since that tuna labeling bill went into effect, of 80,000 dolphin a year killed down to 5,000. Now, unfortunately, we lost that battle. This tuna that is caught in Latin American countries is going to come in, and these countries are not paying their fair share of the costs of the Commission.

So I think it is very important that we agree to this amendment. It isn't right that other countries are not paying their fair share. Frankly, it isn't right that other countries are encircling the dolphin, killing the dolphin, and they want to come in to our market, and they want to come in without doing anything to pay their share.

Scientists, consumers, and tuna companies agree that chasing and netting is not safe for dolphins. The dolphin population in the eastern tropical Pacific are not recovering. And the harassment by these fishermen is a tremendous problem that is affecting dolphin reproduction. So what do we do? Instead of trying to encourage safe fishing methods, we say to the other countries: Just do not worry. Send this tuna in. We will even pay your share of the cost of the International Tuna Commission.

I understand that Senator BIDEN is on his way over, so I reserve the remainder of my time for him. I am happy to yield to the other side who is opposing us on this amendment.

Mr. GREGG addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. GREGG. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative assistant proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, my friend from California, the distinguished Senator, Mrs. BOXER, feels a sense of compassion about a number of things, one of which is this amendment, and the way in which she, for the past 15 years, has been fighting and successfully, for the most part.

I have been at her side to make sure we, quite frankly, keep dolphins from being killed unnecessarily. It sounds like a simplistic message, but it is as basic as that.

What happened is we got rolled last year by the administration and by the Senate because there are more votes here. We had the Dolphin Protection Act in place. I will not take the time to discuss it now. Actually, it was basically eviscerated by what took place.

I was not particularly pleased with Vice President GORE's position on this, the administration's position, nor the position of my distinguished friend whom I respect very much, Senator BREAUX, and the distinguished Senator from Alaska. That was a formidable array we faced, and we essentially lost.

What did we do last year? Last year, we did basically what the treaty said, and said: Look, we have this mechanism set up where everybody pays their fair share to make it work. The treaty says that. And I will again, in the interest of time, not recite the elements of the treaty which say that and point out how the following sentence can be distinguished that lays out the proportional requirement to participate in this.

But the bottom line is very simple. We made an agreement last year involving countries in question. They said they agreed, the administration promised, and the Senate said everybody will pay their fair share. Simple. Wrong.

We are paying 70 percent or more of the administration of this arrangement, and we should only be paying 40 percent. The distinguished Senator from California comes along and says: Hey, look, let's make it 50 percent. We will pay more than we should, but not this disproportionate amount. And if they do not pay as they promised, they should not get the benefits that flow from the agreement that encompasses their participation.

So it is real simple, I say to my distinguished friend from South Carolina, who asked me to be brief. I will be brief. This is not fair. The Senator from California is right. She is willing to have us pay more than our fair share but not essentially twice what our fair share is.

So I support the amendment, and I hope the managers of the bill may see fit, based on their sense of justice and their notion of fairness, to accept the amendment.

I yield the floor.

Mrs. BOXER addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from California.

Mrs. BOXER. I thank my friend, Senator BIDEN. So many years ago we teamed up to make sure that the dolphin were protected. He has stuck with me through this battle, along with his daughter Ashley.

Senator HARRY REID would like to be added as a cosponsor. I ask unanimous consent that he be added as a cosponsor to my amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mrs. BOXER. I yield to my friend, Senator DURBIN.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Illinois.

Mr. DURBIN. I thank the Senator from California for her leadership on this issue. It is late at night. People do not want to talk about this. They want to go home. Some of us will go home and eat tuna salad. And if you eat tuna in your household, you bear some responsibility. You hope that your children will have that opportunity, and you hope that the fisheries around the world are going to be handled responsibly.

We passed a law here in 1997 and said: We are going to do what we can to conserve the dolphin which have become victims of those who are fishing for tuna—international convention, international agreement, dolphin conservation. And we said: If you happen to be one of the countries fishing for tuna that may endanger the dolphin, we are going to make you participate, spend some money to make sure this program works based on the percentage of your catch. That is a very reasonable program, conserving the dolphin, saying to each country: Pay your fair share based on what you catch.

I live in the Midwest. I do not live near an ocean. But I get it. I understand this. I just cannot understand why in this bill—before the amendment by the Senator from California—that we are suggesting the United States should pay more than its share.

There are countries here, for example, that are paying nothing.

Mrs. BOXER. Exactly.

Mr. DURBIN. Costa Rica, 7.6 percent of the catch, proportion of payments, zero; Venezuela, 16.2 percent of the catch, proportion of payments, zero; Ecuador, 26.3 percent of the catch, proportion of payments, zero.

Why aren't these countries paying their fair share, their fishery industry fishing for tuna, signatories to this agreement? They should be paying their share instead of being subsidized by the United States.

I think we should take the money saved by the Senator from California and dedicate it to a lot of other international fishery efforts that are listed within this legislation. I am happy to support her amendment. I think it is eminently fair. I hope those listening to the debate will join us in making certain that every country lives up to its obligation.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I thank all my friends tonight for helping this through. I know when it gets this late, people get upset with you for trying to pass amendments and continuing to work because everyone is exhausted. I am, too.

I want to be clear for the RECORD, I was willing to debate this on Friday and put off the vote until Monday night, but we were unable to reach that kind of agreement.

I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD the list of the countries and what they have been paying.

There being no objection, the list was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

TUNA/DOLPHIN AMENDMENT TO CJS
APPROPRIATIONS BILL

Question 1. How much were we intending to pay according to the State Department budget request?

Answer. $3.4 million.

Question 2. What is the total proposed budget for the IATTC?

Answer. $4.7 million.

Question 3. What proportion of the IATTC budget is the State Department request? What is the U.S. proportion of tuna utilization?

Answer. U.S. proposed proportion of the budget is 72%; U.S. tuna utilization is approximately 40%.

Question 4. How many nations are members of the IATTC and who are they?

Answer. 11 members: Costa Rica, Panama, Japan, France, Nicaragua, Vanuatu, Venezuela, El Salvador, Ecuador, Mexico and the United States.

Question 5. What is the estimated utilization of each nation and how much to they pay?

Answer. The most recent data that has been compiled on utilization is from 1996. According to those figures, the breakdown is as follows:

Country	Proportion of utilization (percent)	Proportion of payments (percent)
United States	39.6	91.4
France	1	9
Japan	9	7.7
Nicaragua	0	0
Panama	0	.01
Costa Rica	7.6	0
Vanuatu	0	.01
Venezuela	16.2	0
Ecuador	26.3	0

Mrs. BOXER. The United States portion of its catch and utilization is less than 40 percent, yet it has been paying 91 percent of the cost of the Commission. As my friend pointed out, there are nations here—Ecuador is catching 26 percent, and they are paying nothing. So what are we doing here?

I know these countries are our friends, but the taxpayers are our friends, too, besides which, these countries are purse seining on dolphin, and they are hurting those beautiful creatures. So why are we in such a rush to cover their payments and let them bring in this tuna?

My last point is another point my friend from Illinois made. He usually hits the nail on the head; he has done it again. Here are some of the other commissions that could benefit from the $1 million we are saving in this amendment: the Great Lakes Fishery Commission, Pacific Salmon Commission, International Pacific Halibut Commission, International Whaling Commission—it goes on and on—North Atlantic Salmon Conservation Organization, North Pacific Marine Science Organization, Inter-American Sea Turtle Convention Commission, Commission for the Conservation of Highly Migratory Species in the Western and Central Pacific Ocean.

Here we see that what we are doing is taking money from our taxpayers to pay for the Latin American countries that are going to get away with not paying their bill, and still they are allowed, unless we pass this Boxer-Biden-Kerry amendment, to export their tuna into this country—I want to underscore—unlike the American companies, that are really good to the dolphin and use safe fishing practices. They will bring their tuna in after purse seining dolphin, harassing the dolphin, killing them, maiming them, harming them, hurting their reproductive capacity.

With this amendment, I think we do a lot of good things. We save money, we help other commissions, and we stand up to our friends in Latin America and say: Pay the bills.

I yield to my friend from South Carolina.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Carolina.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I ask the distinguished Senator from California—I think she makes an outstanding case—as I remember it, isn't this the compromise agreement made with the opposition, that these amounts would be paid by these countries, some 2 years ago?

Mrs. BOXER. Yes.

Mr. HOLLINGS. This is the compromise we agreed to back 2 years ago. What you are trying to do by your amendment is merely to enforce the compromise with those opposed to us in the first instance.

Mrs. BOXER. My friend is exactly on target. When we reached this compromise, which wasn't a happy compromise for us, one of the clear understandings was that as these countries sought to export their tuna, which has been banned from this country, as my friend knows, for a long time, because of their fishing methods which are so cruel to the dolphin, we said: If you have to bring this tuna in, then pay your fair share of the commission.

Essentially, if you look at the public law that we did pass, you will find it exactly here. In order for them to export, such nation, the section says, "is meeting the obligation of the International Dolphin Conservation Program and the obligations of membership, including all financial obligations."

This is the law Senator STEVENS agreed to, Senator BREAUX agreed to, Senator GREGG agreed to, and all of us—sad that we were that we didn't win what we wanted—agreed to. Now they are not paying their fair share, and they still say, well, let them export their tuna. This is wrong.

Mr. HOLLINGS. That is the reason I wanted to make the point. I understand a motion to table may be made. I hope we won't table it. The Senator from California is only making real the compromise agreement entered into some 2 years ago with the opposition.

I thank the Senator for her leadership.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I am happy to yield back the remainder of my time. I think we have made our point.

What we are doing is essentially, with this amendment, enforcing the agreement that everyone agreed to. If they don't come on board on this, I think it makes this agreement and this public law completely worthless. I hope people will support this amendment. It is good for taxpayers, and it is good for the dolphin.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, at this time I move to table the Boxer amendment and ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative assistant proceeded to call the roll.

Ms. LANDRIEU. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 1307, WITHDRAWN

(Purpose: To reduce amounts appropriated by the bill and make available funds for the international criminal tribunals for the former Yugoslavia and Rwanda)

Ms. LANDRIEU. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk. I have discussed this with the manager.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That will take unanimous consent.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, the Senator from Louisiana wants to discuss the amendment.

Ms. LANDRIEU. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent for 30 seconds.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Louisiana.

Ms. LANDRIEU. I thank the Chair.

I will not ask for a vote tonight on this. I have discussed this with the manager, but I want to call it to the attention of the Senate. It is something Senator SPECTER and I have worked on, along with many others on both sides, dealing with monies to properly fund the War Crimes Tribunal.

It has come to our attention that even though we were successful in putting some additional funding into the War Crimes Tribunal for all the situations occurring in Kosovo, some of the money, sort of the standard amount of money that we spend on war crimes, is not present in the current bill we are discussing.

I wanted to offer an amendment to restore it. Given the late hour, given the tight constraints, I have talked with the Senator, and he said they will try to work this out at conference. I bring it to the attention of the Senate to thank him for his consideration.

At this time I will withdraw the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the amendment by number.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Louisiana [Ms. LANDRIEU] proposes an amendment numbered 1307.

The amendment is as follows:

On page 89, between lines 8 and 9, insert the following:

SEC. 408. (a) Each of the amounts appropriated by this Act (other than the accounts specified in subsection (b)) shall be reduced by the percentage that results in a total reduction in appropriations under this Act of $20,000,000.

(b) In addition to the amounts appropriated by this Act under the following accounts, there are hereby appropriated under such accounts, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, the following amounts for the following purposes:

(1) For "Contributions to International Organizations", $7,000,000, which amount shall be available only for contributions to the International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia and the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda.

(2) For "Contributions for International Peacekeeping Activities", $13,000,000, which amount shall be available only for contributions to the International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia and the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that that amendment be withdrawn.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment is withdrawn.

The Senator from New Hampshire.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative assistant proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENTS NOS. 1308 THROUGH 1341, EN BLOC

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, there are at the desk 34 amendments that are in order under a previous unanimous consent agreement. These 34 amendments have been cleared. I ask unanimous consent that they be recorded separately and agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendments (Nos. 1308 through 1341), en bloc, were agreed to.

The amendments are as follows:

On page 100, line 9, strike ".", insert the following:

"Provided further, That during fiscal year 2000, debentures guaranteed under Title III of the Small Business Investment Act of 1958, as amended, shall not exceed the amount authorized under section 20(e)(1)(C)(ii)."

AMENDMENT NO. 1309

(Purpose: To provide for security for certain federal personnel)

At an appropriate place in the bill, add the following new section:

SEC. . For fiscal year 2000, the Director of the United States Marshals Service shall, within available funds, provide a magnetometer and not less than one qualified guard at each unsecured entrance to the real property (including offices, buildings, and related grounds and facilities) that is leased to the United States as a place of employment for Federal employees at 625 Silver, S.W., in Albuquerque, New Mexico.

AMENDMENT NO. 1310

(Purpose: To provide funds to carry out the drug-free workplace demonstration program)

On page 99, line 9, insert before the period the following: "Provided further, That $1,800,000 shall be made available to carry out the drug-free workplace demonstration program under section 27 of the Small Business Act (15 U.S.C. 654)".

Mr. COVERDELL. Mr. President, my amendment ensures the Small Business Administration's Drug-Free Workplace demonstration moves forward. I want to thank Senators KYL, SESSIONS, ABRAHAM, DEWINE and SNOWE for joining me in this effort. I also want to express my sincere appreciation to Senators BOND, GREGG, and HOLLINGS, as well as their staffs for their cooperation.

Last year, the Drug Free Workplace Act received broad bipartisan support when it was enacted. The House passed it 402-9, and the Senate Committee on Small Business endorsed it without opposition. We see this program as a critical opportunity to assist small businesses who are grappling with the hardships of drug abuse in the workplace.

The funding included in the FY2000 Commerce, Justice, State Appropriations bill, will enable these demonstrations to go forward. The Small Business Administration's initial grant applications indicate there is tremendous need for drug-free workplace programs. It has been reported that no less than 146 qualified grant applications were submitted to SBA for FY1999 funding, but no more than 30 will be funded. At least 116 of these qualified potential drug-free workplace demonstration programs will go unfunded leaving $12 million in unmet need.

Again, I look forward to working with my colleagues to ensure the Drug-Free Workplace demonstration continues to receive the support of Congress.

I ask unanimous consent that letters demonstrating my point be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the letters were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

DRUG FREE AMERICA FOUNDATION, INC.,
July 8, 1999.

Hon. JON L. KYL,
U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR KYL: It is my understanding that you and Senator COVERDELL intend to offer an amendment to the Commerce, Justice, State Appropriations Bill that would earmark the $6 million necessary to complete the Drug-Free Workplace Demonstration. I would like to commend both of you for your efforts on this issue.

Having worked with you ongoing on the drug issue, I know how important it is to you to fight this problem on every front possible. The workplace is truly a significant front where the battle can be waged. If you consider what makes up a community, you will note that most segments are a workplace of some type. We have schools, churches, social services, law enforcement, private industry, and the public sector—all of which are workplaces. These workplaces provide the perfect opportunity, through drug-free workplace programs, to access our adult population and educate them on the problems associated with drug and alcohol abuse, to intervene on those with problems, and to provide needed treatment to those already addicted.

Over the last ten years, employers have made tremendous progress in addressing drug and alcohol abuse in the workplace. Back in 1986, when I owned a drug testing company, I found the positive drug rate in the workplaces of some communities to be as high as 38 percent. That rate has fallen significantly to below 10 percent. I know from personal testimonies of employees that many casual users ceased to use illicit drugs when their employers began drug testing because they valued their jobs. These individuals, of course, will not become addicted to drugs because they have ceased to use. Their employers' drug-free workplace programs did indeed serve as an effective deterrent to drug use. I also know many employees who have received treatment for drug and alcohol addictions as a result of drug-free workplace programs.

There is a concern, however, for small employers. While the larger companies have implemented very effective, proactive drug-free workplace programs, many small employers have not done so due to financial limitations. I fear that this has resulted in many drug users, who cannot work in the larger companies due to being subject to testing, going to work in smaller companies that do not address the problem of drugs. Having been a small business owner, I know what a struggle it can be to manage a small business and keep it financially afloat. Since drug abusers typically are involved in more accidents, file more workers' compensation claims, are absent more often, and use more leave, they surely take an unnecessary financial toll on our small employers.

The Drug-Free Workplace Demonstration grant monies are greatly needed in order to assist small employers in implementing and maintaining proper drug-free workplace programs to minimize the probability of having drug-using employees. An additional benefit would, of course, be the family members of these employees. When an employee has a drug or alcohol problem, it negatively affects the entire family. If an employer can deter or detect and correct the problem with an employee, everyone benefits.

Please consider me a resource and let me know what I can do to support your proposed amendment.

ARIZONANS FOR A DRUG-FREE WORKPLACE,
Tucson, AZ, June 25, 1999.

As a drug-free workplace initiative, representing a coalition of over 3,000 businesses, the majority of which are small businesses, we are requesting your help for the drug-free workplace demonstration project.

We are asking that you support funding the remaining $6 million of appropriated funds for the Small Business Administration in support of this very important drug-free workplace demonstration program.

The need and demand for drug-free workplace resources is growing, while the available resources are shrinking. It is business, and small business in particular, that contributes greatly and supports the economy of this country. It is time for these small businesses to get the help needed to stop the high costs brought about by substance abuse in the workplace. You have an opportunity to make drug-free workplace a reality for many small businesses in this country.

Thank you for your attention to this matter.

Regards,

ELIZABETH EDWARDS,
Executive Director.

THE COUNCIL ON ALCOHOL AND DRUGS,
Houston, TX, June 28, 1999.

Re: Support for Continued Drug-Free Workplace Funding.

I am writing to request your support for continued funding for the 1998 Drug-Free Workplace demonstration project. The remaining $6 million of appropriated funds for this project is critical if we are to continue to provide assistance to our small business community to help them eliminate substance abuse in the workplace. As you know, small businesses employ over 50% of the nation's workforce. These businesses are at increased risk for on the job accidents, absenteeism, turnover, and many other factors related to substance abuse in the workplace.

The Drug-Free Business Alliance represents a coalition of over 1,000 businesses, the majority of which are small businesses. For the past fifteen years we have been providing education and assistance to small businesses in the Houston community to help them reduce the risks and costs associated with on the job substance abuse. There are still thousands of small businesses in need of our services. The $6 million in remaining funding is critical if drug-free workplace coalitions are to continue to provide services to the thousands of small businesses in need of drug-free workplace services.

Sincerely,

BECKY VANCE,
Director, Drug-Free Business Alliance.

I am writing to seek your support for the continuation of funding for the 1998 Drug Free Workplace Act which provides for funds for demonstration grants.

Drug Free Pennsylvania has operated a drug-free workplace initiative since 1993 called the Drugs Don't Work Here program. We have helped hundreds of employees adopt a drug-free workplace program and provide them with the technical assistance and training. Our program is one of the most successful and strongest in the nation. Our success is due to the strength of our board members and the services which we offer to small employers including policy development, a drug testing consortium, an employee assistance consortium, training and technical assistance for supervisors, and education materials for employees.

Unfortunately, in the past, the problem of substance abusing employees was overlooked to fund other youth-targeted programs. The Drug-Free Workplace Act of 1998 raises the drug-free workplace component on the federal government radar screen and should not be compromised by a funding cut in this budget cycle. I would urge you to continue to funding of the Drug Free Workplace Act of 1998 at or above the funding level originally intended for this program. The resources to assist small business needs to come from non-profit organizations such as ours and should not be set aside after only one year of funding.

As I am sure you know, over 70 percent of drug abuses are employed and over 73 percent of heavy alcohol users are working. Clearly, the biggest burden it borne by employers who hire these individuals in term of lost productivity, increased accidents and workers' compensation costs, and higher absenteeism and tardiness. The problem of substance abuse is compounded by the low unemployment rate where small employers are faced with hiring employees who test positive or not filling a position. Accordingly, the demand for drug-free workplace programs is increasing in a time where programs such as ours are facing severe funding cuts. It is thus imperative that the funding not cease for this invaluable program.

If I can be of assistance to you, please contact me. Thank you for your attention to this matter.

Sincerely,

Beth Winters.

Your help would be appreciated in support of the $6 million appropriation for the S.B.A. drug-free workplace program.

These funds are certainly needed for small business to keep drugs out of the workplace.

Vice President.

AAA LANDSCAPE,
June 29, 1999.

Re: DFW Funding

As an office manager of a mid-sized landscape company in Tucson, Arizona, I have a request to make of you.

Please support funding the remaining $6 million of appropriated funds for the Small Business Administration in support of the very important drug-free workplace demonstration program.

The need and demand for drug-free workplace resources is growing, while the available resource are shrinking. With unemployment at an almost unheard of low, the need for able-bodied, able-minded workers is desperate. Drug usage, both within the current work force and among the unemployed, is an enormous problem. This demonstration program, even in its infancy, is beginning to make a real difference. We must give it a fair chance.

Please advise Senator Kerry that to kill the second-year funding of $6 million for the Drug-Free Workplace demonstration program would be a huge injustice to small business owners all over America.

Thank you for your time and attention.

Sincerely,

JEANE FEARSON,
Office Manager.

PIMA COUNTY, SHERIFF'S DEPARTMENT,
Tucson, AZ, June 28, 1999.

With the extra trillion-dollar budget surplus announced today in Washington, it seems to me that $6 million to conclude a vital drug-free workplace demonstration project is a mere drop in the federal bucket.

I serve as chairman of Arizonans For A Drug-Free Workplace, and active member of a national drug-free workplace initiative that represents a coalition of more than 3,000 businesses, the majority of which are small businesses. We seek your help in obtaining funding for the remaining $6 million of appropriated monies for the Small Business Administration in support of the demonstration project.

As you are aware, the need, and demand for drug-free workplace resources have been increasing, while available resources have been skinking—an obvious contradiction in view of today's fiscal revelation. Doesn't Congress understand that it is business—and small business, in particular—that contributes mightily to the strength of this country's economy.

We in the drug-free workplace initiative believe it is time for these small businesses to receive the help needed to stop the high costs brought about my substance abuse in the workplace. You have the opportunity to make a drug-free workplace a reality for many small businesses across our land.

Sincerely,

ASA BUSHNELL,
Community Relations Manager.

CONCRETE DESIGNS INC.,
Tucson, AZ, June 29, 1999.

As a small business manager, I want to express my concern regarding Senator Kerry's move to kill the Drug-Free Workplace funding. The drug issue in the work force is a growing problem in the United States and businesses have little support to help deal with this. Last week alone, I sent five applicants to take a pre-employment drug screen and only one went and tested negative for drugs. This ratio has been typical over the past year. In addition, we continue to lose employees through our random testing program.

You are in the position to help change this trend. Please support the funding of the appropriated funds.

Sincerely,

DEBY WIEST,
President, General Manager.

NATIONAL DRUG-FREE WORKPLACE ALLIANCE,
MILWAUKEE, WI, JUNE 29, 1999.

It has recently come to my attention that there may be a move afoot to abolish to second year funding for the Drug-Free Workplace Act of 1999. This is of paramount concern as these dollars are aimed at developing drug-free workplace demonstration programs for small business nationwide.

Drug-free workplace programs began, historically, with the country's largest corporations and over the years, have inadvertently, squeezed substance abusers toward smaller business. The tragedy is that most small businesses do not have the resources to develop programs to protect their employees as well as the quality of their products and services, to say nothing of the end users.

It is well documented that drug-free workplace programs are extremely effective at reducing absenteeism, workplace injuries and theft, to name just a few. Furthermore, it is also well documented that these programs are terrific case finding entities in that they provide incentive as well as vehicles for employees to access Employee Assistance Programs or treatment options to assist in their recovery process. Of course the recovery, or lack of it, has a tremendous impact on families and coworkers as well as the above cited issues as well.

Our Alliance represents drug-free workplace initiatives in nearly thirty states and we see the benefits of these programs, with thousands of employers, on a daily basis. We believe that the wisdom of these programs was recognized when this legislation was initially passed and would ask for your assistance in protecting this valuable pilot that can have a far reaching impact not only at a business level but at a social level as well.

If I or the other Alliance members may be a resource to you, please do not hesitate to call.

Sincerely,

JEROME L. HOUEK,
President.

MOUNTAIN POWER
Tucson, AZ, June 30, 1999.

Mountain Power Electrical Contractor, Inc. is a small business dedicated to providing a safe working environment for our employees, clientele, and the public. Part of our safety culture includes striving to maintain a drug free workplace.

The U.S. war against drugs is losing ground. According to the reports issued by the Community Epidemiology Work Group (CEWG), the percentage of drug users is on the rise in various categories, including heroin, marijuana, cocaine, and methamphetamines.

It is imperative that our political leaders, businesses, and the public at large support education and prevention in order to win the war against drugs. Dealing with the aftermath of our nation's drug problem in America is proving senseless and useless.

Therefore, our firm is requesting your assistance for the drug-free workplace demonstration project. We are asking that you support funding the remaining $6 million of appropriated funds for the SBA in support of this very important drug-free workplace demonstration program. This program directly provides and assists small businesses with education, literature, and resources to maintain a drug free workplace and keep abreast of local ordinances, as well as legislative issues.

Thank you for your support and assistance in making the drug-free workplace a reality for small businesses in this country.

Sincerely,

DEBRA GRAHAM-GARCIA,
Business Development Specialist.

TUCSON AIRPORT AUTHORITY,
Tucson, AZ, June 29, 1999.

As a Board member of Arizonans For A Drug-Free Workplace, and the Director of Personnel for the Tucson Airport Authority I am requesting that you support the second year funding of $6 million for the Drug-Free Workplace demonstration program authorized under last year's Drug-Free Workplace Act of 1998.

The current funding level for year-one at $3 million for the demonstration will only fund thirty or less programs, hardly enough time or money to conduct a proper demonstration period. The $6 million second-year funding will provide a much better opportunity for all of the drug-programs to prove that a drug free workplace can truly make a difference.

Without the appropriated funding drug-free workplace programs will have to close their doors or modify their existence to survive. This is an alarming trend that is already occurring in our country. The need for drug-free workplace funds is increasing while the available resources are decreasing. Substance abuse in the workplace as well as in the home comes at a very high cost to our society.

Thank you in advance for your sensitive consideration to this issue.

Sincerely,

RACHEL INGEGNERI,
Director of Personnel.

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, I am proud that S. 1217, the Commerce, Justice, and State Appropriations Bill contains an amendment by Senator COVERDELL and me, securing $1.8 million for drug-free workplace programs. It has been a pleasure to have worked with Senator COVERDELL in obtaining funding for this critical program.

Our amendment is a victory for business and the fight against drugs.

Last year Senator COVERDELL and I authored the Drug-Free Workplace Act, which became law. It provided grants to organizations in order to assist small businesses in starting drug-free workplace programs. The Act was designed to encourage partnerships between small businesses and organizations that have experience in tackling the problem of drugs in the workplace. Many small business are reluctant to implement drug testing or employee-assistance programs, because they lack expertise in crafting such programs.

As we all know, sustaining a competent, able work force hinges on our ability to keep drugs out of the workplace. Funding was needed to continue this instrumental program. Securing $1.8 million for FY 2000 is a victory, considering the Administration chose to not fund this effort at all.

Statistics confirm that drug-free workplaces are more productive and efficient than those where some employees abuse drugs. For instance, 47 percent of workplace accidents are drug-related. Moreover, U.S. businesses lose $176 billion annually to substance abuse for costs due to accidents, absenteeism, and increased health care costs. Drug and alcohol abusers utilize 300 percent more medical benefits than non-abusers.

This amendment will enable small businesses to combat an evil that plagues their work forces, drug abuse.

AMENDMENT NO. 1311

(Purpose: To amend provisions relating to the implementation of the June 3, 1999 Agreement of the United States and Canada on the Treaty Between the Government of the United States of America and the Government of Canada Concerning Pacific Salmon and for other purposes)

S. 1217 is amended as follows:

At page 59, line 12 strike "$20,000,000" and insert in lieu thereof "$18,000,000".

At page 59, line 14 strike "Alaska" and insert in lieu thereof "$20,000,000 is made available as a direct payment to the State of Alaska".

At page 59, lines 22 and 23 strike the comma and the phrase "subject to express authorization".

At page 60, lines 2 and 3 strike the comma and the phrase "subject to express authorization".

At page 76, line 11 strike the comma and the phrase "subject to express authorization".

At the appropriate place in "TITLE VI—GENERAL PROVISIONS" insert the following new section:

"SEC. ____ (a) To implement the June 3, 1999 Agreement of the United States and Canada on the Treaty Between the Government of the United States of America and the Government of Canada Concerning Pacific Salmon (the "1999 Agreement") $140,000,000 is authorized only for use and expenditure as described in subsection (b).

(b)(1) $75,000,000 for grants to provide the initial capital for a Northern Boundary and Transboundary Rivers Restoration and Enhancement Fund to be held by the Pacific Salmon Commission and administered jointly by the Pacific Salmon Commission Commissioner for the State of Alaska with Canada according to a trust agreement to be entered into by the United States and Canada for the purposes of research, habitat restoration, and fish enhancement to promote abundance-based, conservation-oriented fishing regimes.

(2) $65,000,000 for grants to provide the initial capital for a Southern Boundary and Transboundary Rivers Restoration and Enhancement Fund to be held by the Pacific Salmon Commission and administered jointly with Canada by the Pacific Salmon Commission Commissioners for the States of Washington, Oregon, and California according to a trust agreement to be entered into by the United States and Canada for the purposes of research, habitat restoration, and fish enhancement to promote abundance-based, conservation-oriented fishing regimes.

(3)(i) Amounts provided by grants under paragraphs (1) and (2) may be held in interest-bearing accounts prior to the disbursement of such funds for program purposes, and any interest earned may be retained for program purposes without further appropriation by Congress.

(ii) the Northern Boundary and Transboundary Rivers Restoration and Enhancement Fund and Southern Boundary and Transboundary Rivers Restoration and Enhancement Fund are subject to the laws governing federal appropriations and funds and to unrescinded circulars of the Office of Management and Budget, including the audit requirements of Office of Management and Budget Circular Nos. A-110, A-122 and A-133; and

(iii) Recipients of funds from the Northern Boundary and Transboundary Rivers Restoration and Enhancement Fund and Southern Boundary and Transboundary Rivers Restoration and Enhancement Fund, which for the purposes of this subparagraph shall include interest earned pursuant to subparagraph (i), shall keep separate accounts and such records as may be reasonably necessary to disclose the use of the funds as well as facilitate effective audits.

(c) The President shall submit a request for funds to implement this section as part of his official budget request for the Fiscal Year 2001."

AMENDMENT NO. 1312

(Purpose: To amend certain provisions for appropriations for costs associated with the implementation of the American Fisheries Act vessel documentation activities)

S. 1217 is amended as follows:

At the appropriate place in "Title VI—GENERAL PROVISIONS" insert the following new section:

"SEC. _____. Funds made available under Public Law 105-277 for costs associated with implementation of the American Fisheries Act of 1998 (Division C, title II, of Public Law 105-277) for vessel documentation activities shall remain available until expended."

AMENDMENT NO. 1313

(Purpose: To provide funding for the Narragansett Bay cooperative study conducted by the Rhode Island Department of Environmental Management in cooperation with the Federal Government)

On page 57, line 17, before the colon, insert the following: ", of which $112,520,000 shall be used for resource information activities of the National Marine Fisheries Service and $806,000 shall be used for the Narragansett Bay cooperative study conducted by the Rhode Island Department of Environmental Management in cooperation with the Federal Government".

AMENDMENT NO. 1314

(Purpose: To provide funding for research in addictive disorders and their connection to youth violence)

On page 25, line 5, before "and" insert "of which $2,000,000 shall be made available to the Department of Psychiatry and Human Behavior at the University of Mississippi School of Medicine for research in addictive disorders and their connection to youth violence".

AMENDMENT NO. 1315

(Purpose: To make an amendment with respect to the Crime Identification Technology Act of 1998)

"On page 27, lines 14 and 15, strike "for the Crime Identification Technology Initiative" and insert "to carry out section 102 of the Crime Identification Technology Act of 1998

(42 U.S.C. 14601), including for grants for law enforcement equipment for discretionary grants to States, Local units of Government, and Indian Tribes"

AMENDMENT NO. 1316

(Purpose: To credit reimbursements owed by the United Nations to the United States to reduce United States arrearage to the United Nations)

On page 81, line 25, insert the following after "reforms" ": Provided further, That any additional amount provided, not to exceed $107 million, which is owed by the United Nations to the United States as a reimbursement, including any reimbursement under the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 or the United Nations Participation Act of 1945, that was owned to the United States before the date of enactment of this Act shall be applied or used, without fiscal year limitation, to reduce any amount owned by the United States to the United Nations, except that any such reduction pursuant to the authority in this paragraph shall not be made unless expressly authorized by the enactment of a separate Act that makes payment of arrearages contingent upon United Nations reform".

AMENDMENT NO. 1317

At the end of title IV, insert the following:

SEC. _____. None of the funds appropriated or otherwise made available in this Act for the United Nations may be used by the United Nations for the promulgation or enforcement of any treaty, resolution, or regulation authorizing the United Nations, or any of its specialized agencies or affiliated organizations, to tax any aspect of the Internet.

AMENDMENT NO. 1318

At the end of title I, insert the following: "SEC. _____. Section 286(q)(1)(A) of the Immigration and Nationality Act of 1953 (8 U.S.C. 1356(q)(1)(A)), as amended, is further amended—

- (a) by deleting clause (ii);
- (2) by renumbering clause (iii) as (ii); and
- (3) by striking ", until September 30, 2000," in clause (iv) and renumbering that clause as (iii)".

AMENDMENT NO. 1319

(Purpose: Expressing the sense of the Senate regarding Iran)

On page 111, between lines 7 and 8, insert the following:

SEC. 620. (a) FINDINGS.—The Senate makes the following findings:

(1) Iran has been designated as a state sponsor of terrorism by the Secretary of State and continues to be among the most active supporters of terrorism in the world.

(2) According to the State Department's annual report entitled "Patterns of Global Terrorism", Iran supports Hizballah, Hamas, and the Palestinian Islamic Jihad, terrorist organizations which oppose the Middle East peace process, continue to work for the destruction of Israel, and have killed United States citizens.

(3) A United States district court ruled in March 1998 that Iran should pay $247,000,000 to the family of Alisa Flatow, a United States citizen killed in a bomb attack orchestrated by the Palestinian Islamic Jihad in Gaza in April 1995.

(4) The Government of Iran continues to maintain a repressive political regime in which the civil liberties of the people of Iran are denied.

(5) The State Department Country Report on Human Rights states that the human rights record of the Government of Iran remains poor, including "extra judicial killings and summary executions; disappearances; widespread use of torture and other degrading treatment; harsh prison conditions; arbitrary arrest and detention; lack of due process; unfair trials; infringement on citizen's privacy; and restrictions on freedom of speech, press, assembly, association, religion, and movement".

(6) Religious minorities in Iran have been persecuted solely because of their faith, and the Government of Iran has detained 13 members of Iran's Jewish community without charge.

(7) Recent student-led protests in Iran were repressed by force, with possibly five students losing their lives and hundreds more being imprisoned.

(8) The Government of Iran is pursuing an aggressive ballistic missile program with foreign assistance and is seeking to develop weapons of mass destruction which threaten United States allies and interests.

(9) Despite the continuation by the Government of Iran of repressive activities in Iran and efforts to threaten United States allies and interests in the Near East and South Asia, the President waived provisions of the Iran and Libya Sanctions Act of 1996 (Public Law 104-172; 50 U.S.C. 1701 note) intended to impede development of the energy sector in Iran.

(b) SENSE OF SENATE.—It is the sense of the Senate that—

(1) the President should condemn in the strongest possible terms the failure of the Government of Iran to implement genuine political reforms and protect the civil liberties of the people of Iran, which failure was most recently demonstrated in the violent repression of student-led protests in Teheran and other cities by the Government of Iran;

(2) the President should support democratic opposition groups in Iran more aggressively;

(3) the detention of 13 members of the Iranian Jewish community by the Government of Iran is a deplorable violation of due process and a clear example of the policies of the Government of Iran to persecute religious minorities; and

(4) the decision of the President to waive provisions of the Iran and Libya Sanctions Act of 1996 intended to impede development of the energy sector in Iran was regrettable and should be reversed as long as Iran continues to threaten United States interests and allies in the Near East and South Asia through state sponsorship of terrorism and efforts to acquire weapons of mass destruction and the missiles to deliver such weapons.

AMENDMENT NO. 1320

(Purpose: To provide additional funding for law enforcement programs regarding hate crimes)

SECTION 1. HATE CRIMES.

(a) DECLARATIONS.—Congress declares that—

(1) further efforts must be taken at all levels of government to respond to the staggering brutality of hate crimes that have riveted public attention and shocked the Nation;

(2) hate crimes are prompted by bias and are committed to send a message of hate to targeted communities, usually defined on the basis of immutable traits;

(3) the prominent characteristic of a hate crime is that it devastates not just the actual victim and the victim's family and friends, but frequently savages the community sharing the traits that caused the victim to be selected;

(4) any efforts undertaken by the Federal Government to combat hate crimes must respect the primacy that States and local officials have traditionally been accorded in the criminal prosecution of acts constituting hate crimes; and

(5) an overly broad reaction by the Federal Government to this serious problem might ultimately diminish the accountability of State and local officials in responding to hate crimes and transgress the constitutional limitations on the powers vested in Congress under the Constitution.

(b) STUDIES.—

(1) COLLECTION OF DATA.—

(A) DEFINITION OF HATE CRIME.—In this paragraph, the term “hate crime” means—

(i) a crime described in subsection (b)(1) of the first section of the Hate Crime Statistics Act (28 U.S.C. 534 note); and

(ii) a crime that manifests evidence of prejudice based on gender or age.

(B) COLLECTION FROM CROSS-SECTION OF STATES.—Not later than 120 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Comptroller General of the United States, in consultation with the National Governors’ Association, shall select 10 jurisdictions with laws classifying certain types of crimes as hate crimes and 10 jurisdictions without such laws from which to collect data described in subparagraph (C) over a 12-month period.

(C) DATA TO BE COLLECTED.—The data to be collected are—

(i) the number of hate crimes that are reported and investigated;

(ii) the percentage of hate crimes that are prosecuted and the percentage that result in conviction;

(iii) the length of the sentences imposed for crimes classified as hate crimes within a jurisdiction, compared with the length of sentences imposed for similar crimes committed in jurisdictions with no hate crime laws; and

(iv) references to and descriptions of the laws under which the offenders were punished.

(D) COSTS.—Participating jurisdictions shall be reimbursed for the reasonable and necessary costs of compiling data under this paragraph.

(2) STUDY OF TRENDS.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 18 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Comptroller General of the United States and the General Accounting Office shall complete a study that analyzes the data collected under paragraph (1) and under the Hate Crime Statistics Act of 1990 to determine the extent of hate crime activity throughout the country and the success of State and local officials in combating that activity.

(B) IDENTIFICATION OF TRENDS.—In the study conducted under subparagraph (A), the Comptroller General of the United States and the General Accounting Office shall identify any trends in the commission of hate crimes specifically by—

(i) geographic region;

(ii) type of crime committed; and

(iii) the number of hate crimes that are prosecuted and the number for which convictions are obtained.

(c) MODEL STATUTE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—To encourage the identification and prosecution of hate crimes throughout the country, the Attorney General shall, through the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws of the American Law Institute or another appropriate forum, and in consultation with the States, develop a model statute to carry out the goals described in subsection (a) and criminalize acts classified as hate crimes.

(2) REQUIREMENTS.—In developing the model statute, the Attorney General shall—

(A) include in the model statute crimes that manifest evidence of prejudice; and

(B) prepare an analysis of all reasons why any crime motivated by prejudice based on any traits of a victim should or should not be included.

(d) SUPPORT FOR CRIMINAL INVESTIGATIONS AND PROSECUTIONS BY STATE AND LOCAL LAW ENFORCEMENT OFFICIALS.—

(1) ASSISTANCE OTHER THAN FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—At the request of a law enforcement official of a State or a political subdivision of a State, the Attorney General, acting through the Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, shall provide technical, forensic, prosecutorial, or any other form of assistance in the criminal investigation or prosecution of any crime that—

(i) constitutes a crime of violence (as defined in section 16 of title 18, United States Code);

(ii) constitutes a felony under the laws of the State; and

(iii) is motivated by prejudice based on the victim’s race, ethnicity, or religion or is a violation of the State’s hate crime law.

(B) PRIORITY.—In providing assistance under subparagraph (A), the Attorney General shall give priority to crimes committed by offenders who have committed crimes in more than 1 State.

(2) GRANTS.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—There is established a grant program within the Department of Justice to assist State and local officials in the investigation and prosecution of hate crimes.

(B) ELIGIBILITY.—A State or political subdivision of a State applying for assistance under this paragraph shall—

(i) describe the purposes for which the grant is needed; and

(ii) certify that the State or political subdivision lacks the resources necessary to investigate or prosecute the hate crime.

(C) DEADLINE.—An application for a grant under this paragraph shall be approved or disapproved by the Attorney General not later than 24 hours after the application is submitted.

(D) GRANT AMOUNT.—A grant under this paragraph shall not exceed $100,000 for any single case.

(E) REPORT.—Not later than December 31, 2001, the Attorney General, in consultation with the National Governors’ Association, shall submit to Congress a report describing the applications made for grants under this paragraph, the award of such grants, and the effectiveness of the grant funds awarded.

(F) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out this paragraph $5,000,000 for each of fiscal years 2000 and 2001.

(e) INTERSTATE TRAVEL TO COMMIT HATE CRIME.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 13 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

“§249. Interstate travel to commit hate crime

“(a) IN GENERAL.—A person, whether or not acting under color of law, who—

“(1) travels across a State line or enters or leaves Indian country in order, by force or threat of force, to willfully injure, intimidate, or interfere with, or by force or threat of force to attempt to injure, intimidate, or interfere with, any person because of the person’s race, color, religion, or national origin; and

“(2) by force or threat of force, willfully injures, intimidates, or interferes with, or by force or threat of force attempts to willfully injure, intimidate, or interfere with any person because of the person’s race, color, religion, or national origin, shall be subject to a penalty under subsection (b).

“(b) PENALTIES.—A person described in subsection (a) who is subject to a penalty under this subsection—

“(1) shall be fined under this title, imprisoned not more than 1 year, or both;

“(2) if bodily injury results or if the violation includes the use, attempted use, or threatened use of a dangerous weapon, explosives, or fire, shall be fined under this title, imprisoned not more than 10 years, or both; or

“(3) if death results or if the violation includes kidnapping or an attempt to kidnap, aggravated sexual abuse or an attempt to commit aggravated sexual abuse, or an attempt to kill—

“(A) shall be fined under this title, imprisoned for any term of years or for life, or both; or

“(B) may be sentenced to death.”.

(2) TECHNICAL AMENDMENT.—The analysis for chapter 13 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

“249. Interstate travel to commit hate crime.”.

AMENDMENT NO. 1321

(Purpose: To improve fishery management) At the appropriate place, insert the following:

SEC. XX. NEW ENGLAND FISHERY MANAGEMENT COUNCIL.

Section 302(a)(1)(A) of the Magnuson-Stevens Fishery Conservation and Management Act (16 U.S.C. 1852(a)(1)(A)) is amended—

(1) by striking “17” and inserting “18”; and

(2) by striking “11” and inserting “12”.

AMENDMENT NO. 1322

(Purpose: To authorize a place for holding court in New York, to authorize the consolidation of clerks offices in West Virginia, and to direct the provision of space for a senior judge’s chambers in Utah)

At the appropriate place in the bill, insert:

SEC. XX. PLACE OF HOLDING COURT AT CENTRAL ISLIP, NEW YORK.

The second paragraph of Section 112(c) of title 28, United States Code is amended to read—

“Court for the Eastern District shall be held at Brooklyn, Hauppauge, Hempstead (including the village of Uniondale), and Central Islip.”

SEC. XX. WEST VIRGINIA CLERK CONSOLIDATION APPROVAL.

Pursuant to the requirements of Section 156(d) of title 28, United States Code, Congress hereby approves the consolidation of the office of the bankruptcy clerk with the office of the district clerk of court in the Southern District of West Virginia.

SEC. XX. SENIOR JUDGE’S CHAMBERS IN PROVO, UTAH.

The Internal Revenue Service is directed to vacate sufficient space in the Federal Building in Provo, Utah as soon as practicable to provide space for a senior judge’s chambers in that building. The General Services Administration is directed to provide interim space for a senior judge’s chambers in Provo, Utah and to complete a permanent senior judge's chambers in the Federal Building located in that city as soon as practicable.

AMENDMENT NO. 1323

(Purpose: To increase funding for SBA Microloan Technical Assistance)

In the Salaries and Expense Account of the Small Business Administration, insert at the end of the paragraph:

"Provided further, That $23,200,000 shall be available to fund grants for Microloan Technical Assistance as authorized by section 7(m) of the Small Business Act."

AMENDMENT NO. 1324

(Purpose: To enhance Federal enforcement of hate crimes, and for other purposes.)

At the appropriate place, insert the following:

TITLE ___—HATE CRIMES PREVENTION

SEC. ___01. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Hate Crimes Prevention Act of 1999".

SEC. ___02. FINDINGS.

Congress finds that—

(1) the incidence of violence motivated by the actual or perceived race, color, national origin, religion, sexual orientation, gender, or disability of the victim poses a serious national problem;

(2) such violence disrupts the tranquility and safety of communities and is deeply divisive;

(3) existing Federal law is inadequate to address this problem;

(4) such violence affects interstate commerce in many ways, including—

(A) by impeding the movement of members of targeted groups and forcing such members to move across State lines to escape the incidence or risk of such violence; and

(B) by preventing members of targeted groups from purchasing goods and services, obtaining or sustaining employment or participating in other commercial activity;

(5) perpetrators cross State lines to commit such violence;

(6) instrumentalities of interstate commerce are used to facilitate the commission of such violence;

(7) such violence is committed using articles that have traveled in interstate commerce;

(8) violence motivated by bias that is a relic of slavery can constitute badges and incidents of slavery;

(9) although many State and local authorities are now and will continue to be responsible for prosecuting the overwhelming majority of violent crimes in the United States, including violent crimes motivated by bias, Federal jurisdiction over certain violent crimes motivated by bias is necessary to supplement State and local jurisdiction and ensure that justice is achieved in each case;

(10) Federal jurisdiction over certain violent crimes motivated by bias enables Federal, State, and local authorities to work together as partners in the investigation and prosecution of such crimes;

(11) the problem of hate crime is sufficiently serious, widespread, and interstate in nature as to warrant Federal assistance to States and local jurisdictions; and

(12) freedom of speech and association are fundamental values protected by the first amendment to the Constitution of the United States, and it is the purpose of this title to criminalize acts of violence, and threats of violence, carried out because of the actual or perceived race, color, religion, national origin, gender, sexual orientation, or disability of the victim, not to criminalize beliefs in the abstract.

SEC. ___03. DEFINITION OF HATE CRIME.

In this title, the term "hate crime" has the same meaning as in section 280003(a) of the Violent Crime Control and Law Enforcement Act of 1994 (28 U.S.C. 994 note).

SEC. ___04. PROHIBITION OF CERTAIN ACTS OF VIOLENCE.

Section 245 of title 18, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by redesignating subsections (c) and (d) as subsections (d) and (e), respectively; and

(2) by inserting after subsection (b) the following:

"(c)(1) Whoever, whether or not acting under color of law, willfully causes bodily injury to any person or, through the use of fire, a firearm, or an explosive device, attempts to cause bodily injury to any person, because of the actual or perceived race, color, religion, or national origin of any person—

"(A) shall be imprisoned not more than 10 years, or fined in accordance with this title, or both; and

"(B) shall be imprisoned for any term of years or for life, or fined in accordance with this title, or both if—

"(i) death results from the acts committed in violation of this paragraph; or

"(ii) the acts committed in violation of this paragraph include kidnapping or an attempt to kidnap, aggravated sexual abuse or an attempt to commit aggravated sexual abuse, or an attempt to kill.

"(2)(A) Whoever, whether or not acting under color of law, in any circumstance described in subparagraph (B), willfully causes bodily injury to any person or, through the use of fire, a firearm, or an explosive device, attempts to cause bodily injury to any person, because of the actual or perceived religion, gender, sexual orientation, or disability of any person—

"(i) shall be imprisoned not more than 10 years, or fined in accordance with this title, or both; and

"(ii) shall be imprisoned for any term of years or for life, or fined in accordance with this title, or both, if—

"(I) death results from the acts committed in violation of this paragraph; or

"(II) the acts committed in violation of this paragraph include kidnapping or an attempt to kidnap, aggravated sexual abuse or an attempt to commit aggravated sexual abuse, or an attempt to kill.

"(B) For purposes of subparagraph (A), the circumstances described in this subparagraph are that—

"(i) in connection with the offense, the defendant or the victim travels in interstate or foreign commerce, uses a facility or instrumentality of interstate or foreign commerce, or engages in any activity affecting interstate or foreign commerce; or

"(ii) the offense is in or affects interstate or foreign commerce.

"(3) No prosecution of any offense described in this subsection may be undertaken by the United States, except upon the certification in writing of the Attorney General, the Deputy Attorney General, the Associate Attorney General, or any Assistant Attorney General specially designated by the Attorney General that—

"(A) he or she has reasonable cause to believe that the actual or perceived race, color, national origin, religion, sexual orientation, gender, or disability of any person was a motivating factor underlying the alleged conduct of the defendant; and

"(B) that he or his designee or she or her designee has consulted with State or local law enforcement officials regarding the prosecution and determined that—

"(i) the State does not have jurisdiction or refuses to assume jurisdiction;

"(ii) the State has requested that the Federal Government assume jurisdiction; or

"(iii) actions by State and local law enforcement officials have or are likely to leave demonstratively unvindicated the Federal interest in eradicating bias-motivated violence."

SEC. ___05. DUTIES OF FEDERAL SENTENCING COMMISSION.

(a) AMENDMENT OF FEDERAL SENTENCING GUIDELINES.—Pursuant to its authority under section 994 of title 28, United States Code, the United States Sentencing Commission shall study the issue of adult recruitment of juveniles to commit hate crimes and shall, if appropriate, amend the Federal sentencing guidelines to provide sentencing enhancements (in addition to the sentencing enhancement provided for the use of a minor during the commission of an offense) for adult defendants who recruit juveniles to assist in the commission of hate crimes.

(b) CONSISTENCY WITH OTHER GUIDELINES.—In carrying out this section, the United States Sentencing Commission shall—

(1) ensure that there is reasonable consistency with other Federal sentencing guidelines; and

(2) avoid duplicative punishments for substantially the same offense.

SEC. ___06. GRANT PROGRAM.

(a) AUTHORITY TO MAKE GRANTS.—The Office of Justice Programs of the Department of Justice shall make grants, in accordance with such regulations as the Attorney General may prescribe, to State and local programs designed to combat hate crimes committed by juveniles, including programs to train local law enforcement officers in investigating, prosecuting, and preventing hate crimes.

(b) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out this section.

SEC. ___07. AUTHORIZATION FOR ADDITIONAL PERSONNEL TO ASSIST STATE AND LOCAL LAW ENFORCEMENT.

There are authorized to be appropriated to the Department of the Treasury and the Department of Justice, including the Community Relations Service, for fiscal years 2000, 2001, and 2002 such sums as are necessary to increase the number of personnel to prevent and respond to alleged violations of section 245 of title 18, United States Code (as amended by this title).

SEC. ___08. SEVERABILITY.

If any provision of this title, an amendment made by this title, or the application of such provision or amendment to any person or circumstance is held to be unconstitutional, the remainder of this title, the amendments made by this title, and the application of the provisions of such to any person or circumstance shall not be affected thereby.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I am committed in my view that the Senate must lead and speak against hate crimes.

Many of America's greatest strides in civil rights progress took place during recent generations—from Congress' protection of Americans from employment discrimination on the basis of race, sex, color, religion and national origin with the passage of the Civil Rights Act of 1964, to the protection of the disabled with the passage of the Americans with Disabilities Act in 1990, and many other important pieces of legislation.

However, while America's elected officials have striven mightily through the passage of such measures to stop discrimination in the workplace, or to the hands of government actors, what remains tragically unaddressed in large part is discrimination against peoples' own security—that most fundamental right to be free from physical harm.

Despite our best efforts, discrimination continues to persist in many forms in this country, but most sadly in the rudimentary and malicious form of violence against individuals because of their identities.

As much as we condemn all crime, hate crime can be more sinister than non-hate crime. A crime committed not just to harm an individual, but out of the motive of sending a message of hatred to an entire community—often-times a community defined on the basis of immutable traits—is appropriately punished more harshly, or in a different manner, than other crimes. Moreover, hate crimes are more likely to provoke retaliatory crimes; they inflict deep, lasting and distinct injuries—some of which never heal—on victims and their family members; they incite community unrest; and, ultimately, they are downright un-American.

I am resolute in my view that the federal government can play a valuable role in responding to hate crime. One example here is my sponsorship of the Hate Crime Statistics Act of 1990, another is the passage in 1996 of the Church Arson Protection Act.

Given the seriousness of our objective to eradicate hate crime, it is imperative that any measure abide by the constitutional limitations imposed on Congress, and be cognizant of the limitations on Congress' enumerated powers that are routinely enforced by the courts. This is more true today than it would have been even a mere decade ago, given the significant revival by the U.S. Supreme Court of the federalism doctrine in a string of decisions beginning in 1992.

I have therefore proposed a response to hate crimes that is not only as effective as possible, but that carefully navigates the rocky shoals of these court decisions. To that end, I have prepared a measure that I believe will be not only an effective one, but one that would avoid altogether the constitutional risks that attach to other possible federal responses that have been raised.

There are four principal components to my approach:

First, it creates a meaningful partnership between the federal government and the states in combating hate crime, by establishing within the Justice Department a fund to assist state and local authorities in investigating and prosecuting hate crime. Much of the cited justification given by those who advocate broad federal jurisdiction over hate crimes is a lack of adequate resources at the state and local level.

Accordingly, before we take the step of making every criminal offense motivated by a hatred of someone's immutable traits a federal offense, it is imperative that we equip states and localities with the resources necessary so that they can undertake these criminal investigations and prosecutions on their own.

Second, my approach undertakes a comprehensive analysis of the raw data that has been collected pursuant to the 1990 Hate Crime Statistics Act, including a comparison of the records of different jurisdictions—some with hate crime laws, others without—to determine whether there is, in fact, a problem in certain states' prosecution of those criminal acts constituting hate crimes.

Third, my approach directs an appropriate, neutral forum to develop a model hate crimes statute that would enable states to evaluate their own laws, and adopt—in whole or in part from the model statute—hate crime legislation at the state level.

One of the arguments cited for a federalization of enforcement is the varying scope and punitive force of state laws. Yet there are many areas of grave national concern—such as drunk driving, by way of example—that are appropriately left to the states for criminal enforcement and punishment.

Before we make all hate crimes federal offenses, I believe we should pursue avenues that advance consistency among the states through the voluntary efforts of their legislatures. Perhaps, upon completion of this model hate crime law, Congress will review its recommendation and consider additional ways to promote uniformity among the states.

Fourth, my proposal makes a long-overdue modification of our existing federal hate crime law (passed in 1969) to allow for the prosecution by federal authorities of those hate crimes that are classically within federal jurisdiction—that is, hate crimes in which state lines have been crossed.

I believe that passage of this comprehensive measure will prove a strong antidote to the scourge of hate crimes.

It is no answer for the Senate to sit by silently while these crimes are being committed. The ugly, bigoted, and violent underside of some in our country that is reflected by the commission of hate crimes must be combated at all levels of government.

For some, federal leadership necessitates federal control. I do not subscribe to this view, especially when it comes to this problem. It has been proposed by some that to combat hate crime Congress should enact a new tier of far-reaching federal criminal legislation. That approach strays from the foundations of our constitutional structure—namely, the first principles of federalism that for more than two centuries have vested states with primary responsibility for prosecuting crimes committed within their boundaries.

As important as this issue is, there is little evidence such a step is warranted, or that it will do any more than what I have proposed. In fact, one could argue that national enforcement of hate crime could decrease if states are told the federal government has assumed primary responsibility over hate crime enforcement.

Accordingly, we must lead—but lead responsibly—recognizing that we live in a country of governments of shared and divided responsibilities.

I encourage this body to question the dogma that federal leadership must include federal control, and I encourage this body to act anew by supporting a proposal that is far-reaching in its efforts to stem hate crime, and that is at the same time respectful of the primacy states have traditionally enjoyed in prosecuting crimes committed within their boundaries.

My proposal should unite all of us on the one point about which we should most fervently agree—that the Senate must speak firmly and meaningfully in denouncing as wrong in all respects those actions we have increasingly come to know as hate crimes. Our continued progress in fighting to protect Americans' civil rights demands no less.

I take note that there are now two different hate crime measures that have been accepted by the Senate. It is my hope that the conference will consider the Hatch amendment's approach to be the wiser and the more responsible, and accordingly adopt it. Alternatively, however, it is my hope that some accord might be reached between the two versions that respects the constitutional and federalism boundaries I have discussed, and to the extent it is not, I may choose to pursue adoption of my measure through the Judiciary Committee.

Mr. SMITH of Oregon. Mr. President, as a member of the Foreign Relations Committee I have spoken out against hate crimes of many kinds and in many lands. For that reason I cannot be silent at home. I believe that government's first duty is to defend its citizens. To defend them against the harms that come out of hate. To defend them regardless of their status, be they female, disabled or gay. The Hate Crimes Prevention Act is now a symbol that can become substance. By changing this law we can change hearts and minds as well.

The law is a teacher and we should teach our fellow citizens that all crime is hateful. But we can also teach that some crime is so odious that an extra measure of prosecution is demanded by us, so that it will never again be repeated among us.

Never again should we in the federal government withhold our help or stand idly by when a Matthew Shepard is tied to a fence, beaten and left to die because he is gay. Never again should we defer to others when one James Byrd, Jr. is dragged to his death because he is black. No, in these cases and in too many more, the Federal Government must have the power to persuade, to pursue and to prosecute when hate is the motive of violence against American victims, no matter their state, no matter their minority or vulnerability.

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, I rise today in support of the amendment to protect Americans from hate crimes. It is unfortunate that the amendment's chief sponsor, Senator TED KENNEDY, couldn't be here to take part in this debate. Senator KENNEDY has worked tirelessly to enact this crucial piece of legislation. He has my heartfelt appreciation for his work on this and my sympathy for the loss of his nephew. I can't possibly match his passion and eloquence on this issue, but I am here today to discuss and support his amendment on hate crimes prevention.

Hate crime is real. Despite great gains in equality and civil rights over the later part of this century, hate crimes are still being committed. Those who commit these heinous crimes must be punished.

We all remember Matthew Shepard. He was a young man who just last fall was viciously struck down in the prime of his life. Tragically, he is now a reminder of what happens when he do not stand up to hate and bigotry. We must treat hate crimes as the deadly threat they are and do more to prevent them. These are not simply assaults. They are violent crimes motivated by hate and bigotry.

Passing this amendment gives us more tools to fight hate. I am pleased to join with many of my colleagues as a co-sponsor of this important legislation. The amendment would expand the definition of a hate crime and improve prosecution of those who act out their hate with violence. If someone harms another because of the victim's race, gender, color, religion, disability or sexual orientation, they will be punished. No longer will the activity of the victim matter, but the actions and motivations of the perpetrator will be the focus. It is important to note that the prosecutor would still have to convince a jury beyond a reasonable doubt that the criminal act was motivated by prejudice.

No one can beat a person to death and leave them to die without being motivated by a deep sense of hate. In the case of Matthew Shepard, it was no simply robbery. The motive was hate.

I know some of my colleagues argue that the states are doing an adequate job of handling hate crimes on their own. I commend them for their efforts, but I believe the federal government has a further role in this as well. We already prosecute at the federal level many crimes that are motivated by prejudice. We need to strengthen these federal hate crimes laws and increase the role of the federal government in ending this violence. It wasn't that many years ago that we stood up for equality and justice by forcing the states and private citizens to end segregation and discrimination. Now we must do the same for hate crimes against any of our citizens.

I ask that my statement appear in the RECORD immediately following the text of the hate crimes amendment.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, I join with my colleagues in expressing my strong support for the Hate Crimes Prevention Amendment, legislation of which I am a cosponsor.

The Hate Crimes Prevention Amendment is urgently needed to compensate for two limitations in the current law. First, the current federal hate crimes law covers only crimes motivated by bias on the basis of race, color, religion or national origin. As a result, federal authorities cannot prosecute individuals who commit violent crimes against others because of their sexual orientation, gender, or disability.

In addition, current law limits federal hate crime prosecutions to instances in which the victims was targeted because he or she was exercising one of six narrowly defined federally-protected activities (such as serving on a jury, attending a public school, eating at a restaurant or lodging at a hotel). As a result, the law does not reach many cases where individuals kill or injure others because of racial or religious hatred.

The Hate Crimes Amendment would remedy the glaring gaps and inadequacy of the current law by broadening the federal jurisdiction to cover all violent crimes motivated by racial or religious hatred, regardless of whether the victim was exercising a federally protected right. It would also include sexual orientation, gender and disability to the list of protected categories within current federal hate crime law, provided there is a sufficient connection with interstate commerce.

At the same time, federal involvement would only come into play if the Attorney General certifies that a federal prosecution is necessary to secure substantial justice. In recent years, the existing federal hate crimes law has been used only in carefully selected cases where the state criminal justice system did not achieve a just result.

What does this mean? It means that crimes based on race, color, religion or national origin would be covered under the federal hate crimes law whenever the defendant causes bodily injury, or through the use of fire, a firearm, or an explosive, attempts to cause injury.

Crimes based on sexual orientation, gender or disability would be limited to the same types of violent crimes, but only if the crime has a sufficient connection with interstate commerce.

In all cases, the prosecution would have to show that the crime was motivated in part by the actual or perceived sexual orientation, gender, or disability of the victim—and this would be a matter for the jury to determine.

As would be the case for every element of a criminal offense, federal prosecutors would have to prove motivation beyond a reasonable doubt. In all cases, these prosecutions would present evidence that a motivating factor in the crime was bias against a particular group.

Hate crimes in these cases would carry a heavy penalty. Persons who cause bodily injury to another, or, through the use of fire, firearms, or explosives, attempts to cause bodily injury in the furtherance of a hate crime would face imprisonment up to 10 years. If the hate crime results in death or the offense included kidnapping, aggravated sexual abuse or an attempt to kill, the convicted offender could face life imprisonment.

Mr. President, for many years I have been deeply concerned about hate crimes and the immeasurable impact they have on victims, their families and our communities. In 1993, I sponsored the Hate Crimes Sentencing Enhancement Act, which was signed into law in 1994 as a part of the Violent Crime Control and Law Enforcement Act of 1994. The Act increased the penalties for hate crimes directed at individuals because of their perceived race, color, religion, national origin, gender, disability or sexual orientation.

Today, I believe the Hate Crimes Prevention Amendment, builds on this effort by modifying the current law to allow the federal government to provide the vital assistance to states in investigating of crimes of this magnitude.

This legislation is long overdue, Mr. President. The brutal murders last year of an African American, James Byrd, in Texas; a gay man, Matthew Shepard, in Wyoming; and the murderous rampage in Littleton, Colorado earlier this year vividly portray why this legislation is so urgently needed.

Just recently, our nation awakened to the news of drive-by shooting attacks on Jews, and African-American, and Asian-Americans in Chicago, Illinois. These shootings were the despicable acts of virulent hatred. Undoubtedly these crimes have affected so many lives beyond its immediate victims.

Two weeks before the shootings, three synagogues were torched in Sacramento, California, sending shock waves throughout the Jewish community in America.

Sadly, hate crimes are becoming too commonplace in America. According to the U.S. Department of Justice, in 1997, the last year for which we have statistics, 8,049 hate crime incidents were reported in the United States. That is almost one such crime per hour. Within these incidents, there were 10,255 victims of these crimes.

Of that total, 4,710 or 58.5% of the crime were committed on account of the victim's race. Of these reported crimes, there were almost 1,300 victims of anti-black crimes; 649 victims of anti-Hispanic crimes; and 466 victims of anti-Asian crimes.

In that same year, 1,385 or roughly 17% of the victims were targeted because of their religious affiliation. The number of anti-Jewish incidents is second only to those against blacks and far exceeds offenses against all other religious groups combined. Moreover, while by most accounts anti-Semitism in America has declined dramatically over the years, the level of violence is escalating.

The FBI reports that crimes against gays, lesbians and bisexuals ranked third in reported hate crimes in 1997, registering 1,102 or 13.7% of reported incidents. And, gender-motivated violence occurs in our country at alarming rates. According to the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights, "society is beginning to realize that many assaults against women are not 'random' acts of violence but are actually bias-related crimes."

In addition, according to the California Attorney General, more than 1,800 of the 8,000 hate crimes reported by the FBI were committed in California. That's a shocking number when one considers the motivation behind a hate crime. These are truly among the ugliest of crimes, in which the perpetrator thinks the victim is less of a human being because of his or her gender, skin color, religion, sexual orientation or disability.

By enacting this legislation, federal prosecutors will be able to work in full partnership with their state counterparts. In Wyoming, despite clear evidence that the killing of Matthew Shepard was motivated by bigotry against homosexuals, federal authorities lacked jurisdiction to assist state and local authorities in investigating the case.

It is imperative, therefore, that Congress move swiftly to address this situation and enact this legislation. Although the Byrd and Shepard, as well as the Littleton and Chicago atrocities, all have shocked the conscience of our nation, many hate crimes happen daily in our communities and do not receive national exposure and universal condemnation.

For example, an 18-year-old San Francisco youth was savagely attacked and beaten after a recent athletic event between St. Ignatius College Preparatory School and Sacred Heart Cathedral Preparatory School. During the beating, his attackers yelled racial slurs at him. Just a few days later, a 17-year-old senior at San Marin High School was beaten outside his school in Novato, a derogatory word regarding his presumed sexual orientation was etched into his arm with a pen.

And, in an especially disturbing case in Ventura, California, four skinheads attacked a Latino couple and an African-American couple returning from a high school homecoming date. Singing, and then shouting racial epithets, the skinheads followed the two couples and threw a brick at the head of the African-American teenager. When the students tried to drive away, the skinheads kicked the car and beat it with a baseball bat, causing $2,000 in damage.

These recent cases show far more vividly than I can express here today why we need this legislation now more than ever.

This amendment does not create any "special interests." Hate crimes are not just the concern of any one race, one gender, or one segment of society. The victims of these types of attacks are black and white, young and old, gay and straight, mother and son, father and daughter. Most importantly, they are all human beings whom other human beings loved and depended on. No one, no matter where he lives or to what group she belongs can be certain who will suffer from senseless acts of violence sparked by bigotry, hatred and prejudice.

History is replete with instances in which mindless fear, ignorance and prejudice propel unspeakable acts of inhumanity. There is a great monument to this in this very city: the Holocaust Museum. The Holocaust Museum serves as a stark and cogent reminder of how unchecked hatred can spiral into the genocide of countless millions of Jews and others who were singled out by Nazi Germany for no other reason than that they were different.

Unfortunately, Mr. President, as recent events suggest, we do not have to look back sixty years to find example of inhumanity fostered by hate. We can look across the oceans to Kosovo, where the consequences of "ethnic cleansing," mass rapes, and rampant crime, all point to the utter disregard for life and human dignity.

Mr. President, American values do not include attacking those who are "different" or those with whom we disagree. No one here can reasonably argue that violently attacking a person because of his or her race, gender, disability, or sexual orientation is an acceptable form of behavior.

No one here can reasonably argue that protecting American values should not include protecting women, disabled persons, or gays and lesbians from hate crimes.

And no one here today need fear a breakdown of society simply because we extend Federal protection from acts of violent prejudice to those members of our society who currently face such an extraordinary threat of hate violence.

Instead, as Americans, we value the freedom to be individuals. We value the freedom to express ourselves peacefully. And, above all, Mr. President, we value freedom from fear and tyranny.

And, what we must take from the experience of World War II and Kosovo is that our nation must never sit still and permit acts of hatred to go unpunished and undeterred.

That is why, if we truly want to defend American values, we should work to give our citizens protection from those who would do them harm simply based upon their race, gender, disability or sexual orientation.

And, the Hate Crimes Prevention Amendment aims to send a message to our nation and the world that the singling out of an individual because of race, religion, sexual orientation, gender or disability will not go unnoticed or unpunished.

The Hate Crimes Prevention Amendment will make certain that those who commit violent acts because someone is of the "wrong gender, religion, race, sexual orientation, or disability" will be prosecuted because everyone, I repeat, everyone has a right to be free from violence and fear when they are going to school, work, travel, or doing something as simple as going to a movie.

Mr. President, I urge adoption of the Hate Crimes Prevention Amendment, which includes this important measure. I also urge the conferees on the Commerce, Justice, States appropriations bill to maintain this position during the conference. All Americans, and our future generations, deserve no less.

Mr. SCHUMER. When we passed the first Hate Crimes Law there were those who said that it was unnecessary and that hate crimes were overblown.

Then came the news of James Byrd in Texas, Matthew Shepard in Wyoming, William Gaither in Alabama, Gary Matson and Scott Mowder in California—young men who were victims of crimes that desecrate America.

Today's debate goes back to our original fight. Does this Congress believe that there are those in America who are motivated by hate? Does this Congress believe that there is more that can be done to condemn, prosecute and prevent violent hate? Or do we believe—even after James Byrd, even after Matthew Shepard, even after William Gaither, even after Gary Matson and Scott Mowder—that Hate Crimes are overblown?

Since we started keeping statistics in 1991 the FBI has documented over 50,000 hate crimes. But they could prosecute only 37 because the current law is too narrow.

The Kennedy bill completes the law. It gives it teeth. The Kennedy bill adds sexual orientation to hate crimes, an omission that has sent a message to those who feed off hate, that bigotry against gays and lesbians is somehow less wrong than bigotry against blacks, latinos and Jews.

It removes the civil rights test which gives prosecutors the chance to put violent bigots behind bars.

As a nation, we have divergent political views but we are bound by our commitment to punish acts of bigotry against African Americans, Latinos, Jews, and yes—lesbians and gays.

This is a bill that will bring this nation together. This is a bill that will make people proud.

The only people who need fear the Kennedy bill are those whose private hatreds manifests itself in violent rage against the innocent.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, over the Fourth of July weekend, the nation was stunned by the actions of a single young man on a racially motivated killing spree. The man's name was Benjamin Smith, and it seems clear, he spent his short life consumed by hatred. Because of this hatred, the nation mourns the death of a former University of Detroit and Western Michigan University basketball coach Ricky Byrdson and doctoral student Won-Joon Yoon, both the victims of hate crime.

Benjamin Smith was just one of many who unleashed his hate onto others through violence. According to FBI statistics, at least one hate crime occurs every hour in the United States. That means at least one violent crime each hour is motivated by bias. Hate crimes have no place in a society founded on tolerance and equality. There must be a clear message to hatemongers like Benjamin Smith, that the federal government will do everything in its power so that the perpetrators of bias crimes will be investigated, prosecuted and punished as quickly as possible. But the federal government is limited to a certain extent in its ability to assist state and local prosecutors in their investigations of hate crime.

That's why I am pleased to be an original cosponsor of the Hate Crimes Protection Act, a bill which would amend the existing federal hate crimes law and expand the federal government's role in the investigation and prosecution of bias-inspired conduct. The federal government has always had a special role in stifling violence and discriminatory treatment. This Act continues in that tradition by strengthening federal authority to ensure that racially-motivated criminals are prosecuted to the full extent of the law.

This amendment would also expand the definition of hate crime, which now only pertains to the victim's race, color, religion and natural origin, to include discrimination based on sexual orientation, gender, and disability. By expanding the definition of hate crime, the nation sends a clear message that it will not tolerate any violent crime, especially targeted at those who have traditionally been more vulnerable to violence.

The Hate Crimes Prevention Act has the support of over 100 civil rights and law enforcement organizations, as well as a broad range of state and local government associations, and state Attorneys General. These groups, who work with the victims of hate crimes on a daily basis, understand that violent hate crimes, not only affect the victim's family, but are injurious to the entire community. Because hate crimes have a such a deep impact on society, these civil rights and law enforcement organizations support the Hate Crimes Prevention Act, and the role it gives the federal government in ensuring that perpetrators of bias crime are subject to enhanced prosecutions and penalties.

I am pleased to join a distinguished list of cosponsors on this amendment and I urge my colleagues to support the passage of this Act and take a stand against hate crime.

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, I rise today in support of the Hate Crimes Prevention Act as an amendment to the Commerce, Justice, State and Judiciary Fiscal Year 2000 bill.

This legislation will provide the Federal Government a needed tool to combat the destructive impact of hate crimes on our society. The amendment also recognizes that hate crimes are not just limited to crimes committed because of race, color, religion, or national origin, but are also directed at individuals because of their gender, sexual orientation or disability.

Mr. President, any crime hurts our society, but crimes motivated by hate are especially harmful. This amendment would take two important steps to strengthen existing Federal hate crimes law.

First, the amendment would expand the situations when the Department of Justice can prosecute defendants for violent crimes based on race, color, religion or national origin. Second, the amendment would authorize the Department of Justice to prosecute individuals who commit violent crimes against others because of a victim's disability, gender, or sexual orientation provided there is a sufficient connection with interstate commerce.

Many states, including my state of Vermont, have already passed strong hate crimes laws, and I applaud them in this endeavor. An important principle of this amendment is that it allows for Federal prosecution of hate crimes without impeding the rights of states to prosecute these crimes.

Federal prosecutions under this amendment would still be subject to the current provision of law that requires the Attorney General or another senior official of the Justice Department to certify that a federal prosecution is necessary to secure substantial justice. Mr. President, such a requirement under current law has ensured that states are the primary adjudicators of the perpetrators of hate crimes, not the Federal government.

This has meant that in recent years the existing Federal hate crimes law has been used only in carefully selected cases. For example, there have been an average of only 5.2 prosecutions per year under current law from Fiscal Year 1990 through Fiscal Year 1996.

Additionally, Federal authorities will consult with State and Local law enforcement officials before initiating an investigation or prosecution. Both of these are important provisions to ensure that we are not infringing on the rights of States to prosecute crimes.

Mr. President, the Senate has an opportunity today to take a strong stand against hate crimes, and I urge them to do so by supporting this important legislation.

Mr. WYDEN. Mr. President, the amendment seeks to deter violent crime borne out of prejudice and hatred. Since 1991, almost 50,000 hate crimes have been voluntarily reported to the FBI. More than 8,000 were reported in 1997 alone, and many more probably occurred.

I am of the view that violent hate crimes stain our national greatness. This amendment cannot erase the stain entirely, but it is a step toward removing the immunity from prosecution that perpetrators have enjoyed for too long.

The amendment will close the loopholes in current federal hate crimes law and remove the straightjacket from local law enforcement so they can get federal help when they need it.

The amendment does three things:

First, it would remove restrictions on the types of situations in which the Justice Department can prosecute defendants for violent crimes based on race, color, religion or national origin.

Second, it would assure that crimes targeted against victims because of disability, gender or sexual orientation that cause death or bodily injury can be prosecuted if there is a sufficient connection to interstate commerce.

Third, it would require the Attorney General to certify in writing that she had consulted with State and local law enforcement and that they had asked for federal help, or did not have jurisdiction or, as in current law, that federal prosecution is necessary to secure substantial justice in eradicating hate-based crimes.

Under current law, the Justice Department can prosecute crimes motivated by race, religion and ethnicity only if two tests are satisfied. First, DoJ must prove bias was the motive. Second, DoJ must prove the perpetrator intended to prevent the individual from doing certain federally protected things, such as serving on a jury, enrolling or attending a public school, or applying for or enjoying employment.

Motive for the crime is a matter for the jury to determine. And, as is the case for every element of a criminal offense, DoJ would have to prove motive beyond a reasonable doubt. Motive plays the same rule under federal and state anti-discrimination laws as it does under the current federal hate crimes law. My amendment does not affect this.

It is the second test which has prevented the law from reaching many cases where individuals kill or injure others because of racial or religious hatred. In 1994, a jury acquitted 3 white supremacists who had assaulted 3 African-Americans. Jurors revealed after the trial that they felt racial animus had been established but not that the defendants intended to prevent the victims from participating in a federally protected activity. My amendment addresses this limitation.

Under my amendment, DoJ would still have to satisfy the first test and prove beyond a reasonable doubt that bias was involved. But in cases of crimes motivated by race, religion and ethnicity, DoJ would no longer be limited to those situations where the victim was engaged in or enjoying a federally protected activity.

In 1996, 88 current members of the Senate voted to support a similar provision in the Church Arson Prevention Act.

Under my amendment, federal involvement in prosecuting crimes based on sexual orientation, disability or gender AND where bodily injury or death result would be limited to those instances where the violent crime has a sufficient connection with interstate commerce.

This provision is critical for the 28 states that have no authority to prosecute bias-motivated crimes based on disability or sexual orientation, and for the 29 states that have no authority to prosecute bias-motivated crimes based on gender, like the Son of Sam serial killings in New York.

The amendment would provide two levels of penalties in all cases of hate crimes:

1. Imprisonment up to 10 years for persons who cause bodily injury, or through the use of fire, firearms or explosives, attempts to cause bodily injury; and

2. Imprisonment up to life if death results or if the offense includes kidnaping, aggravated sexual abuse or an attempt to commit aggravated sexual abuse, or an attempt to kill.

Some believe that every crime is a hate crime. Every crime is tragic, but not all crime is based on hate. A hate crime occurs when the perpetrator intentionally chooses the victim because of who the victim is. A hate crime affects not only the victim but an entire community or group of people.

Some believe this amendment would provide special protection to certain groups. But it is perpetrators who intentionally single out victims because of who they are in an attempt to send a chilling message to society or others in that group of people.

Some argue that hate crimes laws threaten free speech. Hate crimes laws punish violent acts, not beliefs or thoughts, no matter how violent those thoughts or beliefs might be. Nothing in this amendment would prohibit or deny the lawful expression of one's deeply held religious beliefs. However, causing or attempting to cause bodily injury is clearly not protected speech.

Some have expressed concern that this amendment would federalize crimes that are better left to the states to address. Today, there is overlapping jurisdiction in the case of many homicides, bank robberies, kidnaping and fraud. Like these areas, when both federal and state hate crimes statutes apply, there will be no need for federal prosecution in the vast majority of cases.

The amendment will not invite a tsunami of new cases. In no one year since the first hate crime law was enacted in 1968 has there been more than 10 indictments. In fact, from 1992 to 1997, federal officials prosecuted only 33 cases, or an average of fewer than 6 hate crimes cases a year. Mr. Eric Holder testified that this amendment will only lead to "a modest increase in the number of cases." The significance of this amendment is to backstop state and local law enforcement by giving them extra tools to fight hate crime, not to open the floodgates to frivolous cases.

Even in states with broad hate crimes laws, the higher penalties available under federal statute, the complexity of the investigation, the procedural advantages of a federal prosecution, or the failure of a state prosecution may make federal prosecution desirable.

All but 8 states have hate crimes statutes, but only 21 cover sexual orientation, 22 cover gender and 21 cover disability. Despite the clear evidence that last year's brutal murder of Matthew Shepard was motivated by hatred of gays, federal authorities were unable to assist state and local authorities in investigating the case because Wyoming had no hate crime law and federal agencies lacked the authority.

Evidence indicates that hate crimes are under reported, but FBI statistics show that since 1991 hate crimes have nearly doubled, with more than 8,000 reported in 1997. Race-related hate crimes were by far the most common, accounting for 60%. Hate crime based on religion accounted for 17%, and hate crimes against gays and lesbians, which jumped by 8% last year, accounted for 14% of all hate crimes reported.

The federal government has a long history in combating hate crimes:

In addition to the landmark civil rights laws of the 1960s,

In 1990, Congress passed the Hate Crime Statistics Act to keep track of hate crimes;

In 1994, Congress enacted the Hate Crimes Sentencing Enhancement Act to allow for increased sentences for offenses found beyond a reasonable doubt to be hate crimes; in 1994 Congress passed the Violence Against Women Act; and in 1996 Congress enacted the Church Arson Prevention Act.

Under the able leadership of Senator HATCH, the Judiciary Committee has held several hearings on the problem of hate crimes. In my view the record overwhelmingly established the need for this legislation.

As if we need any further evidence, we need only look to the Fourth of July weekend headlines describing brutal acts of violence aimed at Orthodox Jews, Asian-Americans, African-Americans and a gay couple in California.

We must correct the deficiencies in current law. Today, a crime motivated by race, religion or ethnic origin can be prosecuted by federal authorities because it occurred on a public sidewalk but not if it took place in the private parking lot across the street. This is wrong. I believe Congress must focus the full force of the federal government on investigating and prosecuting hate crimes.

The vote on this amendment will be a referendum on whether members will continue to tolerate violent acts borne of prejudice.

In closing, I would say to my colleagues that this is not a problem that needs further study. The evidence is in, and it is clear. We need to send a strong and unequivocal message that hate crimes will no longer be tolerated; that the full force of federal law enforcement will be brought to bear in prosecuting these violent acts.

I hope my colleagues will ask themselves the following question. If they have a child or know of a child who has a disability, a child who is gay, or who is a girl, and that child suffers bodily injury or worse, death, simply because of who he or she is, do you want that child to be just another statistic that is studied, or do you want the perpetrator to be prosecuted to the fullest extent allowed by the Hate Crimes Prevention Act?

AMENDMENT NO. 1325

(Purpose: To provide for a study on older individuals and crime)

At the end of title I, add the following:

SEC. . (a) In this section:

(1) The term "hate crime" has the meaning given the term in section 280003(a) of the Violent Crime Control and Law Enforcement Act of 1994 (28 U.S.C. 994 note).

(2) The term "older individual" means an individual who is age 65 or older.

(b) The Attorney General shall conduct a study concerning—

(1) whether an order individual is more likely than the average individual to be the target of a crime;

(2) the extent of crimes committed against older individuals; and

(3) the extent to which crimes committed against older individuals are hate crimes.

(c) Not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Attorney General shall submit to Congress a report containing the results of the study.

Mr. GRAHAM. My amendment would require the Attorney General to conduct a study on crimes against older individuals no later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this legislation.

The population aged 65 years or older numbered 34.1 million in 1997 and will continue to grow as the baby boomer generation ages. These individuals are particularly vulnerable to crime.

Because they have made the determination that our large elderly population is susceptible to monetary scams and physical acts of intimidation, criminals defraud the elderly in areas ranging from telemarketing to health care fraud to securities and insurance.

Federal prosecutors and law enforcement officials throughout Florida are spending more and more of their time in efforts against the cheats, fly-by-night operators, and other criminals who are targeting the elderly for financial profit.

The losses suffered as a result of these crimes not only affect the elderly and their families but also squander resources for programs that provide services to millions of needy elderly Americans.

Mr. President, we can and must do better.

My amendment will require the Justice Department study to examine two vital issues: (1) whether an individual over 65 is more likely than the average individual to be the target of a crime; and (2) the extent of crimes committed against individuals over 65.

This amendment gives the Senate the opportunity to express its determination to protect this important segment of American society from criminals.

In his national bestseller, "The Greatest Generation," NBC news anchor Tom Brokaw discusses the heroics of the World War II generation and how they saved the world from tyranny. It would be a shame if the generation that protected us in its youth was allowed to become victims of scam artists and violent criminals in its later years.

Mr. President, this study will be a first step toward freeing older Americans from the threat of crime. I urge all of my colleagues to support this important measure.

AMENDMENT NO. 1326

(Purpose: To extend temporary protected status for certain nationals of Liberia)

At the appropriate place in the bill, insert the following:

SEC. . . . EXTENSION OF TEMPORARY PROTECTED STATUS FOR CERTAIN NATIONALS OF LIBERIA.

(a) CONTINUATION OF STATUS.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, any alien described in subsection (b) who, as of the date of enactment of this Act, is registered for temporary protected status in the United States under section 244(c)(1)(A)(iv) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. 1254a(c)(1)(A)(iv)), or any predecessor law, order, or regulation, shall be entitled to maintain that status through September 30, 2000.

(b) COVERED ALIENS.—An alien referred to in subsection (a) is a national of Liberia or an alien who has no nationality and who last habitually resided in Liberia.

AMENDMENT NO. 1327

(Purpose: To express the sense of the Senate with respect to promoting travel and tourism)

At the appropriate place in title II, insert the following:

SEC. 2 . . . SENSE OF SENATE WITH RESPECT TO PROMOTING TRAVEL AND TOURISM.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds that—

(1) an effective public-private partnership of Federal, State, and local governments and the travel and tourism industry can successfully market the United States as the premiere international tourist destination in the world;

(2) the private sector, States, and cities currently spend more than $1,000,000,000 annually to promote particular destinations within the United States to international visitors;

(3) other nations are spending hundreds of millions of dollars annually to promote the visits of international tourists to their countries, and the United States will miss a major marketing opportunity if it fails to aggressively compete for an increased share of international tourism expenditures as they continue to increase over the next decade;

(4) a well-funded, well-coordinated international marketing effort, combined with additional public and private sector efforts, would help small and large businesses, as well as State and local governments, share in the anticipated growth of the international travel and tourism market in the 21st century; and

(5) a long-term marketing effort should be supported to promote increased travel to the United States for the benefit of every sector of the economy.

(b) SENSE OF THE SENATE.—It is the sense of the Senate that Congress should enact this year, with adequate funding from available resources, legislation that would support international promotional activities by the United States National Tourism Organization to help brand, position, and promote the United States as the premiere travel and tourism destination in the world.

AMENDMENT NO. 1328

(Purpose: To study the benefits of establishing an electronic commerce extension program at the Department of Commerce.)
On page 65, after line 25, add the following:

SEC. 209. STUDY A GENERAL ELECTRONIC EXTENSION PROGRAM.

Not later than six months after the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Commerce shall report to Congress on possible benefits from a general electronic commerce extension program to help small businesses, not limited to manufacturers, in all parts of the nation identify and adopt electronic commerce technology and techniques, so that such businesses can fully participate in electronic commerce. Such a general extension service would be analogous to the Manufacturing Extension Program managed by the National Institute of Standards and Technology, and the Cooperative Extension Service managed by the Department of Agriculture. The report shall address, at a minimum, the following—

(a) the need for or opportunity presented by such a program;

(b) some of the specific services that such a program should provide and to whom;

(c) how such a program would serve firms in rural or isolated areas;

(d) how such a program should be established, organized, and managed;

(e) the estimated costs of such a program; and

(f) the potential benefits of such a program to both small businesses and the economy as a whole.

AMENDMENT NO. 1329

At page 59, line 14 after the colon insert the following ?

"Provided further, That of the amounts provided, $6,000,000 shall be made available to Pacific Coastal tribes (as defined by the Secretary of Commerce) through the Department of Commerce, which shall allocate the funds to tribes in California and Oregon, and to tribes in Washington after consultation with the Washington State Salmon Recovery Funding Board; provided further that the Secretary ensure the aforementioned $6 million be used for restoration of Pacific Salmon populations listed under the Endangered Species Act; provided further that funds to tribes in Washington shall be used only for grants for planning (not to exceed 10% of grant), physical design, and completion of restoration projects; and provided further, that each tribe receiving a grant in Washington State derived from the aforementioned $6 million provide a report on the specific use and effectiveness of such recovery project grant in restoring listed Pacific Salmon populations, which report shall be made public and shall be provided to the Committees on appropriations in the U.S. House of Representatives and the U.S. Senate through the Salmon Recovery Funding Board by December 1, 2000.

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, my amendment will provide the Pacific coastal tribes of Washington, Oregon, and California with salmon recovery funding.

I would like to start by expressing my deep appreciation to Subcommittee Chairman GREGG and subcommittee ranking member, Senator HOLLINGS, for including in the Commerce, Justice, State appropriations bill, $80 million for the Pacific coastal salmon recovery account. Given the fiscal constraints I am pleased the money was made available.

The Pacific coastal salmon initiative was proposed by the Administration to help address the rash of endangered species listings of salmon along the coast. The Administration's initiative called for the funding of $100 million with up to 10% of that money going to the Pacific coastal tribes. Another portion of the initiative called for increased personnel for the National Marine Fisheries Service in order to handle a higher workload brought about by new ESA listings around the nation. The NMFS received some funding in the bill to undertake this initial work.

The only party to this initiative that did not receive funding was the tribes. I do not know why this decision was made, but I believe it sends the wrong message and we must remedy the situation. My amendment directs funds to Pacific coastal tribes to participate in the salmon recovery process. We need them to make this process work.

I would like to recognize that my amendment to ensure tribal participation is cosponsored by Senators INOUE, BOXER, FEINSTEIN, and WYDEN. I would also like to recognize the support of Governor Gary Locke of Washington and Governor John Kitzhaber of Oregon. Lastly, I appreciate the support of King County Executive Ron Sims, Pierce County Executive Doug Sutherland, and Snohomish County Executive Bob Drewel.

The reason all these people are supporting this amendment is that they know the tribes are a vital partner in the coordinated effort to recover salmon. Successful recovery is going to require all parties working as a team. Leaving the tribes out of the equation is not a way to build the team.

Some may suggest that my amendment is unnecessary because the tribes can apply to the states for a portion of the money being provided to the states. However, tribes should not have to receive these funds through a state grant process or via any other mechanism that might diminish their roles as sovereign governments. It is Congress that can do the right thing at this stage to respect the rights of the Tribes to be self-governing and join their counterpart governments in this vital partnership.

I appreciate the cooperation of the Chairman and my colleagues in agreeing to the adoption of my amendment to make the Pacific coastal tribes true partners in our effort to recover threatened and endangered salmon runs.

AMENDMENT NO. 1330

(Purpose: To improve the process for deporting criminal aliens)

On page 45, between lines 9 and 10, insert the following:

SEC. . (a) In implementing the Institutional Hearing Program and the Institutional Removal Program of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, the Attorney General shall give priority to—

(1) those aliens serving a prison sentence for a serious violent felony, as defined in section 3559(c)(2)(F) of title 18, United States Code; and

(2) those aliens arrested by the Border Patrol and subsequently incarcerated for drug violations.

(b) Not later than March 31, 2000, the Attorney General shall submit a report to Congress describing the steps taken to carry out subsection (a).

AMENDMENT NO. 1331

(Purpose: To require Congressional notification prior to the sale of properties that have been used as U.S. embassies, U.S. Consulates or the residences of the U.S. Ambassador, Chief of Mission or Consuls General)

At the appropriate place in the bill add the following:

SEC. . NOTIFICATION OF INTENT TO SELL CERTAIN U.S. PROPERTIES.

Consistent with the regular notification procedures established pursuant to Section 34 of the State Department Basic Authorities Act of 1956, the Secretary of State shall notify in writing the Committees on Foreign Relations and Appropriations in the Senate and the committees on International Relations and Appropriations in the House of Representatives sixty days in advance of any action taken by the Department of enter into any contract for the final sale of properties owned by the United States that have served as United States Embassies, Consulates General, or residences for United States Ambassadors, Chief of Missions, or Consuls General.

AMENDMENT NO. 1332

(Purpose: To earmark funds for a new truck safety initiative)

On page 27, line 15, after "Initiative," insert "of which $500,000 is available for a new truck safety initiative, in the state of New Jersey."

AMENDMENT NO. 1333

(Purpose: To allow the City of Camden to retain funding from a fiscal year 1996 law enforcement grant)

On page 45, after line 9, insert the following:

SEC. . Notwithstanding any other provision of law, $190,000 of funds granted to the City of Camden, New Jersey, in 1996 as a part of a Federal local law enforcement block grant may be retained by Camden and spent for the purposes permitted by the grant through the end of fiscal year 2000.

AMENDMENT NO. 1334

(Purpose: To amend the Federal Property and Administrative Services Act of 1949 to continue and extend authority for transfers to State and local governments of certain property for law enforcement, public safety, and emergency response purposes)

On page 111, insert between lines 7 and 8 the following:

SEC. 620. Section 203(p)(1)(B) of the Federal Property and Administrative Services Act of 1949 (40 U.S.C. 484(p)(1)(B)) is amended—

- (1) by striking clause (ii);
- (2) by inserting "or public safety" after "law enforcement";
- (3) by striking "(i)";
- (4) by striking "(I)" and inserting "(i)"; and
- (5) by striking "(II)" and inserting "(ii)".

AMENDMENT NO. 1335

On page 15, after line 2, insert:

"HIGH INTENSITY INTERSTATE GANG ACTIVITY AREAS PROGRAM

"For expenses necessary to establish and implement the High Intensity Interstate Gang Activity Areas Program (including grants, contracts, cooperative agreements and other assistance) pursuant to Section 205 of S. 254 as passed by the Senate on May 20, 1999, and consistent with the funding proportions established therein, $20,000,000."

On page 21, line 16, strike "3,156,895,000" and insert "3,136,895,000."

AMENDMENT NO. 1336

(Purpose: To provide funding to the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration to upgrade Great Lakes water gauging stations in order to ensure compliance with Year 2000 (Y2K) computer date processing requirements)

On page 57, line 16, strike "$1,776,728,000" and insert "$1,777,118,000".

On page 57, line 17, before the colon, insert the following: "; of which $390,000 shall be used by the National Ocean Service to upgrade an additional 13 Great Lakes water gauging stations in order to ensure compliance with Year 2000 (Y2K) computer date processing requirements".

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I thank Senators GREGG and HOLLINGS and REID for their efforts in helping an amendment be added to the managers' package which Senator DEWINE and I offered relative to Great Lakes stations and measuring stations for water levels. It is an important amendment for the Great Lakes.

I ask unanimous consent that a letter that I and Senator DEWINE wrote to Senators GREGG and HOLLINGS dated June 24 be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

U.S. SENATE,

Washington, DC, June 24, 1999.

Hon. JUDD GREGG,
Chair, Subcommittee on Commerce, Justice,
State, Committee on Appropriations, U.S.
Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR COLLEAGUES: We are writing to request that our amendment providing $390,000 for upgrades to 13 Great Lakes gauging stations be included in the managers' amendment to the Commerce, Justice, State Appropriations bill. It has only recently come to our attention that NOAA/NOS was proposing to close rather than upgrade these 13 stations due primarily to budget consideration. Upgrades to the stations supported by the one-time appropriation in amendment will cut the long-term operating expenses for the stations by half or more while ensuring timely transfer of the essential data to the end users in the private sector and other Federal agencies. Because the old technology employed in these stations is not Y2K compliant, it is essential that the upgrades be provided this year.

Many of the 13 stations slated for closure are of particular importance to the monitoring network. Three of the stations have been in operation since the turn of the last century (1899-1901), forming a central part of the long term record for Great Lakes water levels. Their closure represents a grave loss to the continuity of the data. Six of the gauging stations are located in connecting channels, geographic locations for which water levels are nearly impossible to accurately interpolate from other sites and which are essential to determining flow rates between the lakes. Closure of these connecting channel stations will critically injure our ability to determine flow of water, contaminants, and other substances among the Great Lakes.

Furthermore, the proposed reduction in gauging capability comes at a time when such capability is needed most. Great Lakes jurisdictions at the federal, state, provincial and binational levels are confronting a series of complex issues associated with water withdrawal, consumptive use and removal, including export. The Great Lakes system is currently experiencing dramatic declines in water levels compared with just last year, ranging from an 8" drop in Lake Superior to 30" in Lake Ontario. Overall, water levels have changed from extreme highs to levels nearly a foot below the long-term averages. This water level reduction has already had profound impacts on commercial navigation and recreational boating. Lake level regulation, dredging needs, and other priorities also are set based on the expectations of water level fluctuations. All of these issues have one thing in common: they are fundamentally dependent upon the accurate and comprehensive data provided by the 49 long-term Great Lakes stations in the National Water Level Observation Network. Federal, state and local decision makers in the Great Lakes region rely upon this network to make informed decisions regarding resource management and policy.

We believe that the funding level requested is both modest and justifiable given the importance of the water level gauging network to the Great Lakes region and the long-term cost savings that will be realized.

Sincerely,

MIKE DEWINE.
CARL LEVIN.

AMENDMENT NO. 1337

On page 34, line 25, after "title", insert the following: "Provided further, That of the total amount appropriated not to exceed $550,000 shall be available to the Lincoln Action Program's Youth Violence Alternative Project."

AMENDMENT NO. 1338

On page 26 of S. 1217, line 2 after the word "Programs", strike the period and insert the following:

Provided further, That of the total amount appropriated, not to exceed $1,000,000 shall be available to the TeamMates of Nebraska project.

AMENDMENT NO. 1339

(Purpose: To provide for an analysis by the Securities Exchange Commission of the effects of electronic communications networks and night trading on securities markets)

On page 98, line 16, before the period, insert the following: "Provided further, That the Commission shall conduct a study on the effects of electronic communications networks and extended trading hours on securities markets, including effects on market volatility, market liquidity, and best execution practices".

AMENDMENT NO. 1340

(Purpose: To provide funding for task forces coordinated by the United States Attorney's Office for the Eastern District of Wisconsin and the Western and Northern Districts of New York)

On page 8, line 13, strike "$25,000,000" and insert "$27,000,000".

On page 8, line 23, insert before the period "and of which $1,000,000 shall be for the task force coordinated by the Office of the United States Attorney for the Eastern District of Wisconsin, and $1,000,000 shall be for task forces coordinated by the Office of the United States Attorney for the Western District of New York and task forces coordinated by the Office of the United States Attorney for the Northern District of New York."

AMENDMENT NO. 1341

(Purpose: To allocate funds for Tibetan Exchange Program)

On page 78, line 8, before the period insert the following: "Provided further, That of the amount appropriated under this heading for the Fulbright program, such sums as may be available may be used for the Tibetan Exchange Program".

UNANIMOUS-CONSENT AGREEMENT

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that when the Senate completes all action on S. 1217, it not be engrossed and be held at the desk. I further ask that when the House of Representatives companion measure is received in the Senate, the Senate immediately proceed to its consideration; that all after the enacting clause of the House bill be stricken and the text of S. 1217, as passed, be inserted in lieu thereof; that the House bill, as amended, be read for a third time and passed; that the Senate insist on its amendment, request a conference with the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and the Chair be authorized to appoint conferees on the part of the Senate; and that the foregoing occur without any intervening action or debate.

I further ask unanimous consent that upon passage by the Senate of the House companion measure, as amended, the passage of S. 1217 be vitiated and the bill be indefinitely postponed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, this is a wind-up unanimous consent request. I wonder if the distinguished manager would agree that we would have a voice vote on final passage, which would then cause this Boxer amendment vote to be the last vote tonight.

Mr. GREGG. That is the intention, and we hope that is the desire of the Senate. Therefore, the Boxer amendment will be the last vote tonight.

Mr. HOLLINGS. I ask unanimous consent that there be a voice vote on final passage.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. REID. Mr. President, reserving the right to object—and I will not—do we all agree that when the conference report returns, we will have the vote on that?

Mr. GREGG. That is correct.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Definitely.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I ask for the regular order.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion to table the Boxer amendment.

The yeas and nays have been ordered.

The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative assistant called the roll.

Mr. NICKLES. I announce that the Senator from Alabama (Mr. SHELBY) and the Senator from Arizona (Mr. MCCAIN) are necessarily absent.

Mr. REID. I announce that the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. KENNEDY) and the Senator from Vermont (Mr. LEAHY) are necessarily absent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. VOINOVICH). Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 35, nays 61, as follows:

[Rollcall Vote No. 220 Leg.]

AMENDMENT NO. 1271, AS MODIFIED

(Purpose: To improve the bill)

Mr. GREGG. I ask unanimous consent to modify amendment No. 1271, a previously adopted amendment. I send it to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GREGG], for himself and Mr. HOLLINGS, proposes an amendment numbered 1271, as modified.

The amendment, as modified, is as follows:

On page 6, line 14, strike “any other provision of law” and insert “31 U.S.C. 3302(b)”.

On page 6, line 18, strike “(15 U.S.C. 18(a))” and insert “(15 U.S.C. 18a)”.

On page 25, line 23, insert after “(106 Stat. 3524)”, “of which $5,000,000 shall be available to the National Institute of Justice for a national evaluation of the Byrne program.”.

On page 30, line 17, strike after “1999”, “of which $12,000,000 shall be available for the Office of Justice Programs’ Global Information Integration Initiative.”.

On page 50, line 6, insert before the period: “to be made available until expended”.

On page 73, between lines 12 and 13, insert the following:

“SEC. 306. Section 604(a)(5) of title 28, United States Code, is amended by adding before the semicolon at the end thereof the following: ‘, and, notwithstanding any other provision of law, pay on behalf of justices and judges of the United States appointed to hold office during good behavior, aged 65 or over, any increases in the cost of Federal Employees’ Group Life Insurance imposed after April 24, 1999, including any expenses generated by such payments, as authorized by the Judicial Conference of the United States.’”.

On page 75, line 15, insert the following after “period””: “, unless the Secretary of State determines that a detail for a period more than a total of 2 years during any 5 year period would further the interests of the Department of State”.

On page 75, line 21, insert the following after “detail””: “, unless the Secretary of State determines that the extension of the detail would further the interests of the Department of State”.

On page 76, line 11, insert before the period: “; Provided further. That of the amount made available under this heading, not less than $11,000,000 shall be available for the Office of Defense Trade Controls”.

On page 110, strike lines 15 through 23 and insert in lieu thereof:

“(i) Notwithstanding otherwise applicable law, for each license or construction permit issued by the Commission under this subsection for which a debt or other monetary obligation is owed to the Federal Communications Commission or to the United States, the Commission shall be deemed to have a perfected, first priority security interest in such license or permit, and in the proceeds of sale of such license or permit, to the extent of the outstanding balance of such a debt or other obligation.”.

On page 111, insert after the end of Sec. 619: “Sec. 620. (a) DEFINITIONS—For the purposes of this section—

(1) the term “agency” means the Federal Communications Commission.

(2) the term “employee” means an employee (as defined by section 2105 of title 5,

United States Code) who is serving under an appointment without time limitation, and has been currently employed by such agency for a continuous period of at least 3 years; but does not include—

(A) a reemployed annuitant under subchapter III of chapter 83 or chapter 84 of title 5, United States Code, or another retirement system for employees of the Government.

(B) an employee having a disability on the basis of which such employee is or would be eligible for disability retirement under subchapter III of chapter 83 or chapter 84 of title 5, United States Code, or another retirement system for employees of the Government.

(C) an employee who has been duly notified that he or she is to be involuntarily separated for misconduct or unacceptable performance;

(D) an employee who has previously received any voluntary separation incentive payment from the Federal Government under this section or any other authority;

(E) an employee covered by statutory reemployment rights who is on transfer to another organization; or

(F) any employee who, during the twenty-four month period preceding the date of separation, has received a recruitment or relocation bonus under section 5753 of title 5, United States Code, or who, within the twelve month period preceding the date of separation, received a retention allowance under section 5754 of that title.

(3) The term “Chairman” means the Chairman of the Federal Communications Commission.

(b) AGENCY PLAN—

(1) IN GENERAL—The Chairman, prior to obligating any resources for voluntary separation incentive payments, shall simultaneously submit to the authorizing and appropriating Committees of the House and the Senate and to the Office of Management and Budget a strategic plan outlining the intended use of such incentive payments and a proposed organizational chart for the agency once such incentive payments have been completed.

(2) CONTENTS—The agency’s plan shall include—

(A) the positions and functions to be reduced, eliminated, and increased, as appropriate, identified by organizational unit, geographic location, occupational category and grade level;

(B) the time period during which incentives may be paid;

(C) the number and amounts of voluntary separation incentive payments to be offered; and

(D) a description of how the agency will operate without the eliminated positions and functions and with any increased or changed occupational skill mix.

(3) CONSULTATION—The Director of the Office of Management and Budget shall review the agency’s plan and may make appropriate recommendations for the plan with respect to the coverage of incentives as described under paragraph (2)(A), and with respect to the matters described in paragraph (2)(B)-(C). Any such recommendations shall be submitted simultaneously to the authorizing and appropriating committees of the House and the Senate.

(c) AUTHORITY TO PROVIDE VOLUNTARY SEPARATION INCENTIVE PAYMENTS—The Chairman shall implement the next agency plan without prior written notification to the chairman of each authorizing and appropriating committee of the House and the Senate at least fifteen days in advance of such implementation.

(1) IN GENERAL—A voluntary separation incentive payment under this section may be paid by the Chairman to any employee only to the extent necessary to eliminate the positions and functions identified by the strategic plan.

(2) AMOUNT AND TREATMENT OF PAYMENTS—A voluntary incentive payment

(A) shall be paid in a lump sum, after the employee’s separation

(B) shall be equal to the lesser of—

(i) an amount equal to the amount the employee would be entitled to receive under section 5595(c) of title 5, United States Code (without adjustment for any previous payments made) or

(ii) an amount determined by the Chairman not to exceed $25,000.

(C) may not be made except in the case of any qualifying employee who voluntarily separates (whether by retirement or resignation) under the provisions of this section by not later than September 30, 2001;

(D) shall not be a basis for payment, and shall not be included in the computation, of any other type of Government benefit; and

(E) shall not be taken into account in determining the amount of any severance pay to which the employee may be entitled under section 5595 of title 5, United States Code, based on any other separation.

(d) ADDITIONAL AGENCY CONTRIBUTIONS TO THE RETIREMENT FUND—

(1) IN GENERAL—In addition to any other payments which it is required to make under subchapter III of chapter 83 or chapter 84 of title 5, United States Code, the agency shall remit to the Office of Personnel Management for deposit in the Treasury of the United States to the credit of the Civil Service Retirement and Disability Fund an amount equal to 15 percent of the final base pay of each employee of the agency who is covered under subchapter III of chapter 83 or chapter 84 of title 5, United States Code, to whom a voluntary separation incentive has been paid under this Act.

(2) DEFINITION—For the purpose of paragraph (1), the term “final basic pay,” with respect to an employee, means the total amount of basic pay which would be payable for a year of service by such employee, computed using the employee’s final rate of basic pay, and, if last serving or other than a full-time basis, with appropriate adjustment therefor.

(e) EFFECT OF SUBSEQUENT EMPLOYMENT WITH THE GOVERNMENT—

(1) An individual who has received a voluntary separation incentive payment from the agency under this section and accepts any employment for compensation with the Government of the United States, or who works for any agency of the United States Government through a personal service contract, within 5 years after the date of the separation on which the payment is based shall be required to pay, prior to the individual’s first day of employment, the entire amount of the lump sum incentive payment to the agency.

(2) If the employment under paragraph (1) is with an Executive agency (as defined by section 105 of title 5, United States Code), the United States Postal Service or the Postal Rate Commission, the Director of the Office of Personnel Management may, at the request of the head of the agency, waive the repayment if the individual involved possesses unique abilities and is the only qualified applicant available for the position.

(3) If the employment under paragraph (1) is with an entity in the legislative branch, the head of the entity or the appointing official may waive the repayment if the individual involved possesses unique abilities and is the only qualified applicant available for the position.

(4) If the employment under paragraph (1) is with the judicial branch, the Director of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts may waive the repayment if the individual involved possesses unique abilities and is the only qualified applicant for the position.

(f) INTENDED EFFECT ON AGENCY EMPLOYMENT LEVELS—

(1) IN GENERAL—Voluntary separations under this section are not intended necessarily to reduce the total number of full-time equivalent positions in the Federal Communications Commission. The agency may redeploy or use the full-time equivalent positions vacated by voluntary separations under this section to make other positions available to more critical locations or more critical occupations.

(2) ENFORCEMENT—The president, through the office of Management and Budget, shall monitor the agency and take any action necessary to ensure that the requirements of this subsection are met.

(g) REGULATIONS—The Office of Personnel Management may prescribe such regulations as may be necessary to implement this section.

(h) EFFECTIVE DATE—This section shall take effect on the date of enactment. (Departments of Commerce, Justice, and State, the Judiciary and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 1999, as included in Public Law 105-277, section 101(b)."

At the end of title VI, insert the following:
 "SEC. 621. The Secretary of Commerce (hereinafter the "Secretary") is hereby authorized and directed to create an "Inter-agency Task Force on Indian Arts and Crafts Enforcement" to be composed of representatives of the U.S. Trade Representative, the Department of Commerce, the Department of Interior, the Department of Justice, the Department of Treasury, the International Trade Administration, and representatives of other agencies and departments in the discretion of the Secretary to devise and implement a coordinated enforcement response to prevent the sale or distribution of any product or goods sold in or shipped to the United States that is not in compliance with the Indian Arts and Crafts Act of 1935, as amended."

Mr. GREGG. This technical amendment has been cleared on both sides. I ask for its adoption.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment, as modified.

The amendment (No. 1271), as modified, was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 1272 WITHDRAWN

Mr. GREGG. I ask unanimous consent to withdraw the amendment numbered 1272.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 1291

(Purpose: To amend title III of the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act and title IV of the Secondary Education Act of 1965 to limit the effects of domestic violence on the lives of children, and for other purposes)

Mr. GREGG. I send an amendment to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GREGG], for Mr. WELLSTONE and Mrs. MURRAY, proposes an amendment numbered 1291.

(The text of the amendment is printed in today's RECORD under "Amendments Submitted.")

Mr. GREGG. I ask unanimous consent we accept amendment No. 1291.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 1291) was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 1342

(Purpose: To express the sense of the Senate with respect to hush kits)

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I send a sense of the Senate to the desk and ask unanimous consent it be accepted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from New Hampshire [Mr. GREGG], for Mr. GORTON, for himself, Mr. DODD, Mr. MCCAIN, Mr. HOLLINGS, and Mr. ROCKEFELLER, proposes an amendment numbered 1342.

The amendment is as follows:

At the appropriate place, insert the following:

SEC. XX. SENSE OF THE SENATE REGARDING THE EUROPEAN COUNCIL NOISE RULE AFFECTING HUSHKITTED AND REENGINEED AIRCRAFT.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Senate finds that—

(1) For more than 50 years, the International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO) has been the single entity vested with the authority to establish international noise and emissions standard; through OCAOs efforts, aircraft noise has decreased by an average of 40 percent since 1970;

(2) ICAO is currently working on an expedited basis on even more stringent international noise standards, taking into account economic reasonableness, technical feasibility and environmental benefits;

(3) International noise and emissions standards are critical to maintaining U.S. aeronautical industries' economic viability and to obtaining their on going commitment to progressively more stringent noise reduction efforts;

(4) European Council (EO) Regulation No. 925/1999 banning certain aircraft meeting the highest internationally recognized noise standards from flying in Europe, undermines the integrity of the ICAO process and undercuts the likelihood that new Stage 4 standards can be developed;

(5) While no regional standard is acceptable, this regulation is particularly offensive, there is no scientific basis for the regulation and it has been carefully crafted to protect European aviation interests while imposing arbitrary, substantial and unfounded cost burdens on United States' aeronautical industries;

(6) The vast majority of aircraft that will be affected by EC Regulation No. 925/1999 are operated by U.S. flag carriers; and

(7) The implementation of EC Regulation No. 925/1999 will result in a loss of jobs in the United States and may cost the U.S. aviation industry in excess of $2,000,000,000.

(b) SENSE OF THE SENATE.—It is the sense of the Senate that—

(1) EC Regulation No. 925/1999 should be rescinded by the EC at the earliest possible time;

(2) that if it is not done, the Department of State should file a petition regarding EC on Regulation No. 925/1999 with ICAO pursuant to Article 84 of the Chicago Convention; and

(3) the Departments of Commerce and Transportation and the United States Trade Representative should use all reasonable means available to them to ensure that the goal of having the rule repealed is achieved.

Mr. GORTON. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce a sense of the Senate amendment regarding the recent unilateral action of the EU effectively banning hushkitted and re-engineered aircraft from operating in European Union states. If this rule is implemented on May 1, 2000 it will have a discriminatory impact on U.S. carriers and equipment manufacturers, not to mention setting a bad precedent for action by countries or groups of countries outside of the established International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO) standards-setting process.

This legislation was adopted by the EU on April 29, 1999, but implementation was delayed until May 2000 to allow U.S. and EU representatives to work out the framework of a new, more stringent global aircraft noise standard within ICAO. The Federal Aviation Administration and the State Department have been in negotiations with the EU on the eventual withdraw of this unfair and discriminatory statute.

Many of my colleagues have seen recent efforts by the European Union to gain the upper hand over the United States in matters of trade. Aviation has proven to be no different. And this is deeply troubling, because aviation is not only a primary source of a favorable balance of trade for the United States, but, because of its global reach, represents an area where international standards are crucial to facilitating that commerce among nations. Yet, as I stated earlier, the EU has acted to preempt U.S. air carriers and carriers from other parts of the world from serving points in Europe with certain hushkitted or re-engineered aircraft. This restriction applies even though those aircraft fully comply with Stage 3 international noise standards adopted by the International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO).

This European regulation, although its implementation has been deferred until May 2000, has already created financial hardships for U.S. aerospace manufacturers and airlines. It must be withdrawn or we will see a continued impact on U.S. jobs and profits. Modifying the rule or deferring its implementation for an added period of time will not offer the relief needed by U.S. aviation interests—the financial markets simply do not respond favorably to uncertainty. The U.S. government has engaged in extensive discussions with the European Council for the past year, without achieving a commitment to a repeal of this rule, which I might add expressly protects European aviation interests. The time has come to achieve a timely resolution of this problem through action.

The Sense of the Senate resolution I offer today cites the need for complying with international standards in the aviation arena and highlights the problems the rule is causing for U.S. manufacturers and operators. Failing an early commitment by the Europeans to withdraw this arbitrary and discriminatory rule, the resolution calls upon the Department of State to initiate an Article 84 proceeding before ICAO. It is my understanding that this type of proceeding is not a sanctions mechanism, but instead affords a process that provides an opportunity for the international aviation body to rule on whether this regulation complies with international aviation standards.

This Sense of the Senate further calls upon other agencies of the executive branch to use the tools at their disposal as well to achieve the early repeal of this rule. There is a broader point to be made as well, which is that, without restoring credibility to the international aviation standards process, we can have little or no confidence about any future international standards adopted by the international aviation community through ICAO. That is a very dangerous precedent for the global aviation environment in the future.

Mr. McCAIN. Mr. President, I support the amendment offered by Senator GORTON regarding the European Union's (EU) rule affecting hushkitted and re-engined aircraft. This Sense of the Senate amendment will make clear to the Europeans that the United States will not tolerate unfair, discriminatory restrictions on trade that go against international principles and standards.

For those who are not familiar with the issue, I will provide a brief background. To comply with international aircraft noise standards, the U.S. aviation industry adopted so-called hushkit technology to bring its older aircraft into compliance. Some airlines also purchased new engines for their older aircraft. Even though these hushkitted and re-engined aircraft comply with the new international noise standard, the EU took legislative action to freeze the number of these aircraft within the EU Community at the 1999 level. Although the EU delayed final implementation of this rule for one year, this move has the effect of setting a more stringent noise standard in Europe.

Unfortunately, implementation of this rule is likely to have a discriminatory and costly impact on the United States aviation industry without any noise reduction benefits. The fact that this rule does not have a similar effect on industries in the EU is troubling. It is my understanding that certain aspects of the rule were tailored to protect European aviation interests. But one of the worst aspects of this rule is the terrible precedent that it sets for unilateral action by countries or groups of countries outside of the established international standards-setting process.

Earlier this year I wrote to European officials to express my deep frustration with their having chosen this particular, unilateral course of action to address the issue of aircraft emissions. Regulations such as the one at issue should be taken through the appropriate international channels, such as the International Civil Aviation Organization. Adoption of this rule by the EU has effectively breached a 50-year regime of global environmental rules in aviation.

A regional rule such as this one will undermine the ability of lesser-developed nations, the aerospace industry, airlines, and the United States to work toward international standards for more stringent aircraft engine emissions, which is the purported rationale for the EU rule. I sincerely hope that the EU will come to realize the benefits of a single, rational aviation regime for all nations.

The delay in implementation of the rule was granted as a result of a U.S. commitment to work in partnership with the EU within the established international process to develop a new, more stringent global aircraft noise standard. Since its adoption, the Federal Aviation Administration has been working bilaterally with representatives of the European Commission to develop an agreement to work in partnership on resolving this matter to everyone's satisfaction.

Despite the ongoing consultations, and regardless of the delay in implementation of the rule, U.S. industry is being negatively impacted right now. Because the hushkit rule is on the books, the market assumes that the rule will eventually come into effect. This has had a profound impact upon many businesses. So it is important that this matter be resolved soon.

The Europeans must understand how important it is that the considerations of the United States are taken into account with respect to this matter. If progress is not made in the near future, calls for taking strong action against the EU will grow. As a committed proponent of free trade, I am adamantly opposed to the EU rule. For the same reason, I do not support inappropriate retaliation on the part of the United States in this matter. Despite my opposition, however, the U.S. may in fact retaliate, which could do harm to businesses and consumers on both sides of the Atlantic.

Whether retaliatory in nature or not, the U.S. has many tools at its disposal to address the matter if the EU proves to be intractable in its position. For example, the United States Trade Representative is considering preparation of a World Trade Organization case focus on the discriminatory aspects of the rule. Northwest Airlines has filed a complaint with Department of Transportation asking for retaliatory measures. Most recently, the U.S. aviation industry has asked the government to take official action under the so-called Chicago Convention, which governs many aspects of international aviation, claiming that the EU rule is not in compliance with international standards.

I do not want this issue to become the subject of a trade war. But if the EU fails to grasp the determined opposition of the U.S. aviation industry to this rule, there may be serious repercussions. I hope that this Sense of the Senate will begin to get the message to the EU that this issue cannot remain unresolved for too much longer.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, this amendment expresses the Sense of the Senate with respect to the discriminatory European trade practices being perpetrated against certain American products in the guise of promulgating regulations on noise emissions.

Last year the European Union began to restrict the use of so called hushkitted or reengined U.S. aircraft in the European community. These aircraft had been specifically modified to meet U.S. Stage 3 quiet noise standards. Ironically, the United States is several years ahead of Europe in urging U.S. aircraft to be reengined to comply with such standards.

EC Regulation No. 925/1999 has been crafted in such a way as a noise standard to effectively prohibit U.S. aircraft that have been hushkitted from flying in European airspace even though these aircraft are actually quieter than many European aircraft and engines. The standard is written in such a clever way that it touches only U.S. products. That in and of itself should make anyone suspicious as to whether the motive is noise abatement or a clearly disguised technical barrier to trade.

At the moment the EU has delayed implementation of the regulation but it has not been formally rescinded. That means that anyone thinking about buying U.S. aircraft that have been hushkitted, which most older aircraft have been to meet U.S. standards, would have to make some judgement as to whether this regulation is likely to resurface again. If the judgement is yes then a potential buyer would refuse to buy U.S. aircraft if they would be contemplated for use on European routes.

For more than fifty years, the International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO) has been the single entity vested with the authority to establish international noise and emission standards, and thanks to its efforts aircraft noise has been decreased by forty percent. Moreover, ICAO is working as we speak to tighten international noise standards even further. For the European Council to arbitrarily seek to preempt the efforts of the ICAO is extremely unhelpful and patently discriminatory against U.S. aircrafts and engines.

The amendment I have offered today calls upon the U.S. Department of State to seek international relief from this discriminatory regulation by partitioning the ICAO under existing relevant international conventions. It also calls upon other relevant U.S. agencies with jurisdiction over trade and transportation matters to work to resolve this matter.

Mr. President, there are clearly binding amendments that could be offered to deal with this problem. I do not support such an effort at this time. This is a matter for the Departments of State and Transportation together with the Office of the United States Trade Representative to work out with their European counterparts. I strongly urge them to do so on an expeditious basis.

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I rise today in support of a sense of the Senate regarding the European Council noise rule affecting hushkitted and reengined aircraft. Under the guise of an environmental regulation, the European Union is engaged in a blatant effort to lock out the U.S. industry. Once again the EU is dragging its feet rather than finding a balanced resolution to this issue. It is time that we turned up the heat on the EU and roll back this patently protectionist measure.

Mr. GREGG. I ask unanimous consent the amendment be accepted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 1342) was agreed to.

FCC FUNDS

Mr. GREGG. I would like to clarify the intent of the Committee regarding the funds appropriated in this bill for the Federal Communications Commission (FCC). The Committee's intent is that none of the funds provided for the agency in this bill are to be used by the FCC to reimburse the General Services Administration for the cost of the agency's relocation to the Portals site. I would ask the Ranking Democrat of the Subcommittee if that is his understanding as well.

Mr. HOLLINGS. The Subcommittee Chairman has accurately stated the intent of the Committee with regard to this issue.

SCHOOL SAFETY INITIATIVE

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I would like to engage in a colloquy with my colleague from South Carolina, Senator HOLLINGS, the ranking member of the Appropriations Subcommittee on Commerce, Justice, State and Judiciary (CJS), about an innovative program recently started by the State of Virginia, which I believe falls within the allowable use of funds within the Safe Schools Initiative, a line item that appears in the FY 2000 CJS Appropriations Bill.

Senator HOLLINGS, it has recently come to my attention that the State of Virginia has begun implementing a new program to reduce crime in its schools called "4 Safe VA." This program is a public/private partnership, which includes online reporting of school crime, a toll-free statewide hotline, and an extensive training program.

Before school begins again in the fall, Virginia will train nearly 3,000 teachers, law enforcement, school resource officers, and other school personnel in school safety procedures. There will be four separate training programs, which are as follows: (1) a training program for school resource officers to prepare them to act as "first responders" in crisis situations, such as that which occurred in Littleton, Colorado; (2) a training program for school staff and local law enforcement in communities where there are no school resource officers to prepare them for responding to crisis situations; (3) a training program for 60 Virginia State Troopers to prepare them to support localities should a crisis situation occur; and (4) a training program for custodians, cafeteria workers, and other support staff, who know the students and who are often the "eyes and ears" of the school, to prepare them to assist in emergencies.

I have looked at Virginia's program plan and have found it to be innovative and thoughtful. I consider it to be the type of program for which we set aside $38 million for community planning and prevention activities under the Safe Schools Initiative line item. It is my hope that the Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention, which will be administering these grants, will give careful thought to providing the State of Virginia with funds to continue to enhance the 4 Safe VA project.

Mr. HOLLINGS. I agree with you, Senator GREGG, that the 4 Safe VA project is a creative and solid approach to preventing and reacting to possible school crises in the State of Virginia. I agree that this is the type of program that should be funded under the Safe Schools Initiative. I also hope that the Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention give full consideration to funding this program.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I very much thank the Senator from South Carolina for supporting me and engaging in this colloquy. I look forward to working with him in the future on ensuring that our nation's schools are safe.

CENSUS 2000

Mr. STEVENS. I understand my colleague from New Hampshire, the Manager of this bill, Senator GREGG is interested in making comments on the conduct of the 2000 Census as it regards Alaska Natives.

Mr. GREGG. Yes, I would like to join you in remarking on the 2000 Census and Alaska.

Mr. STEVENS. I would like to start by referencing a letter received from the Alaska Governor, Tony Knowles, which relates certain Government Accounting Office findings on the 1990 census. Governor Knowles reports that the total Alaskan Native population was undercounted by 11,000, resulting in an annual loss of federal funding of $162 million over ten years.

Mr. GREGG. It is important to bring this statistic to the Senate's attention to underscore the significance of reform proposals the Senator from Alaska will raise here today.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I've often noted on this floor that the awesome size of Alaska makes for unique problems in rendering federal services. The 2000 Census count is no exception. The sheer physical separation of neighboring communities makes communication and coordination of planning difficult. The population is dispersed and also remote from the hub cities where resources are often concentrated. Competing forces and policies demand both centralization and decentralization of services.

Mr. GREGG. My staff and myself have traveled to Alaska at your invitation and agree that the distances between communities are a challenge in implementing federal programs and directives.

Mr. STEVENS. The situation is complicated by the diverse and varied social and political institutions set up in localities and at the regional level. Alaska Natives by traditional or necessity have chosen to organize in various ways to address different circumstances. Often federal agencies chose among these groups and are satisfied that they have covered their bases with Alaska Natives. I urge the Census to take a hard look at the expertise and advice of all Native entities, including Alaska Native Claims Settlement Act corporations which by virtue of their day-to-day business responsibilities and duties to shareholders also have a vigorous pool of human resources to assist in public education and input.

Mr. GREGG. I agree that expediency should not compromise the thorough study and development of local and regional solutions to Census 2000 issues.

Mr. STEVENS. A necessary first step to addressing these issues, is for senior-staff oversight of the Alaska Native Census in Washington, DC. I also urge the staffing and funding of an Alaska office of the Census.

Mr. GREGG. I would support this measure.

Mr. STEVENS. The State of Alaska can do its part. For example, the State could set up an Alaska advisory committee on the Census. This committee could include representatives of rural area, urban areas, Alaska Natives, the military, and municipal and state government.

But I hope Census officials understand that certain agency decisions already being pursued need to be reviewed right now before an advisory committee can be organized. For example, sub-regional hubs like Dillingham are subject only to an update, not a full enumeration under the 2000 Census. Also, reportedly, there are no focus groups for the many and varied Alaska Native voices to be heard; and it is my understanding that groups classified by the federal government as minorities have been provided this opportunity in other states. I urge the Census to develop a public education campaign that will communicate to rural and urban residents the importance of being counted.

Mr. GREGG. I agree these are important issues.

Mr. STEVENS. A specific issue that should be addressed in some manner is the highly mobile urban-rural population of Alaska Natives. We see many families coming to Anchorage on a periodic or seasonal basis, sharing common quarters in the city but considering themselves rural residents. Likewise, commercial fishermen will split the year between two or more residences within the state, and do some subsistence fishing at a traditional fish camp for some part of the year near the village of their birth. The proper enumeration of Alaska Natives would benefit from an effort to reconcile these migration patterns with the fixed residency standards used in a number of federal programs and formulas.

Mr. GREGG. I appreciate the comments of the Senator from Alaska and will work with him to address his concerns.

Mr. STEVENS. I thank my colleague and ask unanimous consent that the letter I referenced earlier be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

STATE OF ALASKA,
OFFICE OF THE GOVERNOR,
Juneau, AK, April 14, 1999.

Hon. TED STEVENS,
U.S. Senator, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR STEVENS: I am concerned about an issue critical to our state—the upcoming year 2000 census. When you consider this issue in Congress, I urge you to defend the plan submitted by the experts at the Census Bureau to obtain the fairest and most accurate population counts for use over the next decade.

As you know, any possible undercount of our population means the loss of vital federal funding for Alaska. In a recent U.S. General Accounting Office report, Alaska in 1990 was undercounted by more than 11,000 people with a 10-year fiscal impact of $160 million.

We have common goals of obtaining our state's fair share of federal resources to help fund our investments in Alaska. We should not let partisan differences over census methodology impact the accuracy of census data and its use in revenue sharing and funding formulas.

The 1990 Census was the first to be less accurate than its predecessor. I am hopeful Congress will fund the Bureau of Census at a level appropriate to meet U.S. Supreme Court decisions and other mandates necessary to ensure timely completion of the next census. I urge you to do all possible to ensure Alaska receives its fair share of federal funds and to support the efforts to make the 2000 Census as accurate as possible.

Sincerely,

TONY KNOWLES,
Governor.

NATIONAL CORAL REEF INSTITUTE/NOAA
NATIONAL OCEAN SERVICE

Mr. MACK. Mr. President, I would like to take a moment to engage the distinguished chairman and ranking member of the subcommittee in a colloquy. First let me begin by thanking my friends for ensuring the committee report included $2 million under the National Ocean Service account to support scientific research and coral reef studies. It is my understanding this money is to be divided equally between the National Coral Reef Institute in Ft. Lauderdale, FL, and the University of Hawaii. This research is critical to our understanding of the factors at work in the degradation of reef ecosystems around the world and I appreciate all my colleagues did in Committee to support this effort.

I say to my colleagues, it is my understanding the Chairman's amendment contains additional funding for this account. Is it correct to say these funds are in addition to the $2 million currently provided by the Committee to the National Coral Reef Institute and the University of Hawaii?

Mr. GREGG. The Senator from Florida is correct. The funds included in the Chairman's amendment are in addition to the $2 million provided to the two institutions you mentioned. Senator HOLLINGS, is this also your understanding?

Mr. HOLLINGS. Yes, the Chairman is correct.

Mr. MACK. I thank my colleagues for this clarification and for their support of coral reef research.

NOAA ACTIVITIES IN FLORIDA

Mr. MACK. Mr. President, I ask the distinguished chairman of the subcommittee if he would consent to discuss with me for a moment two issues of concern to me with respect to NOAA activities in Florida.

Mr. GREGG. I am pleased to join my colleague from Florida in a colloquy.

Mr. MACK. First, let me say I appreciate my friend from New Hampshire's hard work for the strong support he's given to the State of Florida in the bill before us today. But I would like to bring to the Chairman's attention an initiative undertaken by Florida's top three research universities: the University of Florida, Florida State University and the University of Miami.

These three institutions came together to ensure their extensive capabilities in the areas of marine, atmosphere and climate prediction research were focused on the needs of the entire Southeast region. They have especially come together to study the El Nino phenomenon. Their effort has been recognized by NOAA and they have become one of the agency's first regional assessment centers.

My concern, Mr. President, is about the possibility that NOAA may reduce resources available to Florida and this valuable research initiative. Clearly, Florida and the Southeast region are significantly impacted by climatic developments. A strong and continued investment in Florida and the region—along with a balanced investment in the regional assessment centers—is essential. I would ask the support of the Committee to continue the base level funding of this important collaborative effort. The institutions had been receiving approximately $500,000 per year through the Office of Global Programs, and I would like the Chairman's assurances that this level of funding should and will be continued during the next fiscal year.

Mr. GREGG. I know how important this initiative has been to the Senator from Florida. I can assure the Senator that it is the Committee's intent that the base-level funding you indicated be preserved in the next fiscal year. Did the Senator from Florida have an additional concern?

Mr. MACK. Yes. I know the chairman is aware of the Florida Congressional delegation's strong commitment to the restoration of the Everglades and Florida Bay. I have heard some concern, however, that internal reallocations within NOAA could result in at least a $1 million reduction in South Florida based Florida Bay activities. The administration asked for significant funding of the Everglades-Florida Bay initiative in both FY 99 and FY 2000 through the Coastal Ocean Science Program. But the concern I'm hearing from Florida indicates that NOAA may reallocate funds away from this initiative and toward other programs and purposes. I would like the Chairman to join me in stressing to the agency that funds in this bill currently allocated for critical Florida Bay initiatives not be depleted. I would like the Chairman to join me in working to ensure the NOAA contribution to the interagency program for Florida and adjacent coastal marine waters is continued at the current levels.

Mr. GREGG. I appreciate the Senator from Florida's comments. The Committee supports and shares your commitment to Everglades and Florida Bay restoration; specifically with respect to the funds allocated to the initiative funded by the Coastal Ocean Science Program.

Mr. MACK. I appreciate my friend's comments with respect to these two issues. I thank him again for his continued support of Florida priorities.

THE LAS VEGAS SPECIAL POLICE ENFORCEMENT AND ERADICATION PROGRAM

Mr. REID. Mr. President. I take this opportunity to thank Chairman GREGG and Senator HOLLINGS for their consideration of my request to provide $1 million in funds to the Las Vegas Special Police Enforcement and Eradication Program. Methamphetamine manufacturing, use and trafficking is a serious problem that deserves the highest priority, and I appreciate the leadership of the Chairman and the Ranking Member in this effort.

At this time, I would like to make a technical clarification of my request. I ask the Chairman and the Ranking Member, if, in making this appropriation, it is their understanding that of the $1 million provided, $500,000 is to be directed to the Las Vegas Police Department to be used for their Methamphetamine Eradication Initiative, while $500,000 is to be directed to the North Las Vegas Police Department for their Methamphetamine Eradication Initiative?

Mr. GREGG. The senior Senator from Nevada is correct. Of the $1 million provided, $500,000 is to be directed to the Las Vegas Police Department to be used for their Methamphetamine Eradication Initiative, and $500,000 is to be directed to the North Las Vegas Police Department for their Methamphetamine Eradication Initiative.

Mr. HOLLINGS. I concur with the Chairman.

Mr. REID. I thank the chairman and ranking member.

WOMEN'S BUSINESS CENTER PROGRAM AT THE SMALL BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I would like to engage the distinguished Senator from New Hampshire, the Chairman of the Subcommittee, in a colloquy.

I want to begin by commending you, Senator GREGG, and your Ranking Member, Senator HOLLINGS, for the hard work you have done in crafting this Commerce, Justice, State and the Judiciary appropriations bill. You have done a great job in funding the priorities identified by the Committee in this bill. You have been particularly helpful to me in my efforts to curb the trafficking of Mexican black tar heroin in my home state of New Mexico.

A separate issue of particular importance in my home state is the Women's Business Center program at the Small Business Administration. In this bill, you have funded the Administration's request of $9 million for this program, and I applaud you for meeting the President's request.

Unfortunately, the President's request fails to address an important issue for the future of the Women's Business Center program. Particularly, the President's request does not take into account the need to allow existing WBCs to re-compete for federal funds once their initial five-year funding stream expires. So, many existing centers with outstanding track records of facilitating the growth of women-owned businesses and providing technical assistance to fledgling companies will go unfunded, while the SBA allows new, untested centers to open in other areas. Sacrificing the successful, existing centers to replace them with new, untested ones seems like bad policy. I think we need to open more new Women's Business Centers, but we also need to help the existing ones continue their work.

Senator BOND, the distinguished Chairman of the Small Business Committee, Senator KERRY and I, along with a group of 25 bi-partisan co-sponsors, have introduced S. 791, the Women's Business Center Sustainability Act. This bill would increase the authorization for the Women's Business Center program to $12 million and allow existing centers to re-compete for up to 40 percent of the federal funds available under the program. Is the Chairman of the Subcommittee aware of this bill?

Mr. GREGG. I am aware of this effort and am told that the Small Business Committee will work to report the bill to the full Senate, with the hope that the bill will pass later this year.

Mr. DOMENICI. As the Chairman may know, an additional $2 million in funding this year would be critical to the effort to allow existing centers to re-compete for federal assistance. Without this additional funding, many existing centers will be forced to close their doors. Assuming that S. 791 passes both houses of Congress and is signed by the President later this year, I hope that the Chairman will be willing to find a way to provide this additional $2 million for the program once this bill gets to conference.

Mr. GREGG. I share your concerns about allowing existing Women's Business Centers to re-compete for federal funds. If the Small Business Committee and the Senate approve S. 791 before the conference on this bill, I will make every effort to provide the additional funding you have requested.

Mr. DOMENICI. I thank the distinguished Chairman, and I yield the floor.

SHORELINE MAPPING

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, I would like to engage in a colloquy with my friend, the chairman of the subcommittee, on shoreline mapping.

Mr. GREGG. I am more than happy to.

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, the issue, which I wish to discuss, is the mapping of our country's shoreline. As the chairman knows, the National Ocean Service runs a Coastal Mapping Project which is responsible for mapping the nearly 95,000 miles of the US shoreline in an accurate, consistent, tide-coordinated, and up-to-date manner.

I'm concerned that nearly 30 percent of the US shoreline has not been mapped. In addition, one-quarter of what has been mapped as mapped prior to 1970 with severely outdated technology. Since this data is used as the official shoreline on NOAA's nautical charts and is used by the government and the private sectors, it is important to keep up with the changes that result from coastal development and natural processes, which can be drastic.

This year, there was an increase over both FY99 funding levels and the administration's FY00 request within the Committee's recommendation for the "Mapping and Charting" account. Would you agree, Mr. Chairman, that it is the recommendation of the Committee that $2 million of those funds can be used for shoreline mapping within the Coastal Mapping Project.

Mr. GREGG. I do agree with my esteemed colleague from Maryland that $2 million of the funds within the "Mapping and Charting" account can be used for shoreline mapping.

ANTI-METHAMPHETAMINE FUNDING

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I rise for the purpose of entering into a colloquy with the senior Senator from Wisconsin, Senator KOHL, regarding the $1 million appropriation for the Western Wisconsin Methamphetamine Law Enforcement Initiative in S. 1217.

As the Senator from Wisconsin knows, the domestic manufacture and importation of Methamphetamine, also known as Meth, has become a continuing public health threat to the United States and most recently to the Midwest. Senate KOHL, what is the extent of the Meth problem within the State of Wisconsin? Also, would you please describe how the proposed $1 million will be used to address the problem?

Mr. KOHL. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from South Carolina for his questions, his acknowledgment of the severity of the Meth problem faced by rural communities and cities in the Midwest and throughout our country, and his active support for increased funding to combat Meth. In my own State of Wisconsin, criminal justice officials recognized early on that we had to develop a strategy and consolidate our enforcement and prevention efforts to limit the spread of the Meth epidemic that has been invading our Western Wisconsin borders from Minnesota and Iowa since the mid 1990's. Today, the number of Meth-related incidents is increasing. The Wisconsin State Laboratory reported increases of Meth analysis from 42 examinations in 1996 to 112 examinations in 1998. In 1998 alone, the Wisconsin Department of Narcotics Enforcement opened 90 investigations regarding Meth and prosecuted 40 individuals. In Wisconsin, Meth users generally range from 18 to 25, and recently there was even a disturbing report of Meth trafficking in a rural high school.

With the escalation of Meth trafficking, in February 1997 Wisconsin law enforcement officials organized a coordinated enforcement and prevention initiative among local, state, and federal law enforcement partners to target Meth traffickers. This major effort also addressed the need for training to prevent the potential health threat from toxic and flammable chemicals in clandestine Meth labs. Funding for this continuing initiative has been raised from a variety of sources, including the Wisconsin Office of Justice Assistance and the State Attorney General.

Recently, representatives from Wisconsin agricultural associations have reached out to their members and communities to educate the public about the dangers of Anhydrous ammonia, a precursor used in the crude production of Meth. These associations are now working with law enforcement as well.

And this May, the State Attorney General and the U.S. Attorney for the Western District of Wisconsin sponsored three Meth symposiums to educate and train members of the criminal justice system.

The $1 million appropriated for the Western Wisconsin Methamphetamine Initiative will help build on these efforts and promote more coordination of anti-Meth activities. It will be used jointly by the Office of Attorney General (through the Division of Narcotics Enforcement) and the Office of Justice Assistance (under the direction of the Governor) to support a plan developed in coordination with each other to continue combatting Meth production, distribution and use and for policing initiatives in "hot spots" of Meth trafficking activity. Part of this funding will also be used for community and school-based Meth education and prevention awareness programs.

Again, I thank the distinguished Senator from South Carolina—and our Chairman, the distinguished Senator from New Hampshire, Senator GREGG—for their commitment to addressing the Meth problem.

Mr. HOLLINGS. I thank the distinguished Senator from Wisconsin for this fame and effort in this very significant issue.

FUNDING FOR DEA

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I would like to enter into a colloquy with Senator GREGG on funding for the Drug Enforcement Agency and on national issues concerning local law enforcement training skills to combat methamphetamine abuse in rural communities, small cities, mid-size communities and on activities to alleviate the growing financial burden resulting from the cleanup of clandestine laboratories and other drug-related hazardous waste.

I say to Senators STEVENS and GREGG that Senators KYLE, DEWINE, KOHL,

HAGEL, and I have offered a bill, the Rural Methamphetamine Use Response Act of 1999, that would provide additional funding to combat methamphetamine production and abuse, and for other purposes.

Mr. GREGG. I am aware of the bill.

Mr. GRASSLEY. As the Senator knows, we have been working on this bill and on others to ensure adequate funding for our nation's counter narcotics efforts. I appreciate the committee's funding efforts to specifically address the national methamphetamine issue and to combat methamphetamine production, distribution, and use. I am also aware that we face tough budget decisions and we need to balance many program needs within a balanced budget.

Mr. GREGG. We have had to make a lot of tough decisions in this bill while trying to ensure that we meet the needs of many critical programs. The subcommittee has worked earnestly to be fair, and we have had to make tough choices.

Mr. GRASSLEY. I appreciate their efforts. I know that the subcommittee has allotted the Drug Enforcement Agency the tools it needs to properly wage the war on illegal drugs. I also know that the subcommittee has added personnel and resources to the western and central regions of the United States to focus primarily on the methamphetamine problems in those geographic regions of the country. However, as you may know, methamphetamine abuse and production across the United States has forced law enforcement agencies to address challenges that exceed the many years of experience of the State and local law enforcement personnel within such agencies. Methamphetamine affects smaller communities and rural areas disproportionately. In many cases, these communities lack the investigative and technical skills, and resources to confront major criminal gangs or the environmental hazards caused by meth product.

Mr. GREGG. I am aware of the training challenges state and local law enforcement personnel have had regarding methamphetamine production and handling of these explosive chemicals involved in the methamphetamine production process and Senator HOLLINGS and I have worked to address those needs.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Since the Senator from New Hampshire is aware of the training challenges of state and local law enforcement agencies, the financial burden of meth cleanup, and the volatile properties of meth, from the funding provided to DEA for methamphetamine initiatives, I hope, where possible, that funding be set aside within the final bill directing DEA to establish a select cadre of Special Agents with Spanish language capabilities to work with local law enforcement agencies across the United States on matters relating to combating methamphetamine-related drug trafficking. I also ask within the funding allotment for methamphetamine training initiatives, funding for DEA staffing at appropriate training facilities for purposes of providing coherent, essential, and sustained clandestine laboratory training to State and local law enforcement personnel, and if possible, funding for DEA to provide these personnel with the skills necessary for clandestine laboratory recertification.

Mr. GREGG. I share in the Senators' concerns for the need for sustained and adequate funding nationally to combat methamphetamine abuse. I will work to ensure, where possible within the funding allotments for methamphetamine initiatives, that the final bill will support the concerns you have raised.

Mr. GRASSLEY. I thank Senators GREGG and HOLLINGS for their willingness to work with me and my colleagues on funding this needed request.

Mr. BOND. I thank my colleague from New Hampshire for recognizing the needs of Missouri law enforcement in this bill. As he knows well, the State of Missouri is experiencing a law enforcement crisis of epidemic proportions as the methamphetamine trade has exploded in recent years. My colleague, Senator GREGG, as seen to it that the DEA has increased resources to assist state and local law enforcement as they take on these drug dealers.

Mr. ASHCROFT. I too thank the Senator from New Hampshire for his attention to this problem. I would like to bring a matter to the attention of the Chairman. Under the Violent Crime Control Trust Fund section of this bill, the Chairman has included $6 million for the Midwest Methamphetamine Initiative. The language states that the funding is to be used by the Drug Enforcement Administration to train state and local officers on the proper recognition, collection, removal and destruction of methamphetamine and materials seized in clandestine labs. Is my colleague familiar with the title?

Mr. GREGG. Yes, I am.

Mr. ASHCROFT. I have heard repeatedly from local law enforcement officers, as has Senator BOND, that DEA provides excellent training and prepares well officers to raid, bust and clean up these labs. I know that the Chairman is also aware of the funding required for the DEA to assist state and local law enforcement with the clean up of these labs after they have been busted.

Mr. GREGG. I am aware that resources are necessary so that these sites can be cleaned up adequately.

Mr. ASHCROFT. It is my understanding from local law enforcement officers that DEA funds are needed not only in the training of state and local law enforcement officers, but also in the removal and destruction of the materials seized in the labs. Is it the Chairman's understanding that the resources made available to the Midwest Methamphetamine Initiative will also be available for the DEA to assist state and local law enforcement in the clean up methamphetamine labs?

Mr. GREGG. Yes, I am aware that the needs to combat the growing meth problem are pressing and that funds made available to the DEA may be used not only to train state and local officers on the proper recognition and collection of meth labs, but also in the removal and destruction of the materials seized in the labs.

Mr. ASHCROFT. I thank the Chairman for his assistance.

Mr. BOND. I too thank the Chairman for his assistance in this matter. DEA's participation in fighting the methamphetamine epidemic is essential to state and local law enforcement. As my colleague stated, the DEA provides training for local officers that well prepares them to handle and dispose of the toxic material that they encounter while busting clandestine methamphetamine labs. The DEA also has an important role in the clean up process. There were over 800 clandestine methamphetamine labs seized in the State of Missouri last year. Most of the labs were busted in rural areas and smaller towns. These towns have police forces and sheriff's offices of a very limited size. DEA's presence and help in rural areas is essential to ensure that these communities are not overwhelmed by the drug and the havoc in this wake. If this menace is to be brought under control, local law enforcement must have the assistance of the DEA. The Senator from New Hampshire has been a good friend to Missouri law enforcement as he has worked closely with us in recent years to ensure that the DEA has the resources to focus on this problem and I appreciate him clarifying the use of those designated funds.

Mr. COVERDELL. Mr. President, as Chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Subcommittee on Western Hemisphere, I have spent years addressing the drug problem that confronts our nation. I personally have visited drug source and transit countries throughout the region with the objective of searching for ways to resolve and overcome this escalating problem. As a result of many hearings and meetings on this important matter, last year Senator DEWINE and I introduced the Western Hemisphere Drug Elimination Act, a $2.7 billion—3 year authorization for enhanced drug eradication and interdiction efforts. We were successful in getting this legislation passed into law and providing a $800 million down payment for this bill. We must continue to fund this important law.

Recognizing that US government resources are limited, it is important to fund agencies that can get a huge return on a small investment. The Drug Enforcement Administration indeed is an agency that demonstrates this objective on a daily basis. With limited funding, the DEA is a vital source not only for our law enforcement activities, but for other nations as well. Relying primarily on manpower, the DEA has demonstrated how effective an agency with limited funding can produce significant results. Last year, the DEA seized more drugs and arrested more traffickers than ever before. They play an integral part in training foreign law enforcement officials overseas to help them help us keep drugs out of our country. They do a great service to our nation.

This past March, Senators DEWINE and I sent a letter to the Chairman and Ranking Member of the Commerce, State, Justice Subcommittee, calling for building on this year's investment in the DEA and requesting additional funding for 300 new DEA agents, analysts and support personnel, and for other DEA initiatives. This request is consistent with DEA initiatives outlined in the Western Hemisphere Drug Elimination Act. Specifically, 16 senators—both Republicans and Democrats—co-signed the letter to the Chairman and Ranking Member.

I thank the Subcommittee for addressing our needs in our request. The Subcommittee earmarked $17.5 million for new hires for DEA agents, analysts, and support staff. I recognize this was a difficult task given the tight budget caps confronting this Subcommittee and the other Appropriations subcommittees. While I appreciate the tremendous efforts made by the Subcommittee and their staff to earmark money for new DEA hires within their account, I am concerned that there isn't any additional funding for the DEA. The DEA will have to sacrifice other important and necessary programs for these new hires.

I realize that the Chairman and Ranking Member of the Commerce, Justice, State Subcommittee are trying to complete the bill this evening. I had intended to offer an amendment to request $24 million in additional DEA funding for new agents, analysts and support staff hires. After talking to the Subcommittee leadership, however, I have instead agreed not to offer my amendment and would commit to working with the Commerce, Justice, State Subcommittee to help find a way to provide additional funding to the DEA during conference of this bill.

Mr. President, I see Senator DEWINE on the floor and understand that he too would like to say a few words on this matter. I yield the floor to my distinguished colleague from Ohio.

Mr. DEWINE. Mr. President, I thank my distinguished colleague from Georgia for yielding the floor. I commend him for all his tireless efforts in finding ways to combat the drug war. Mr. President, I previously gave a floor statement on the importance of the role of the Drug Enforcement Administration in keeping drugs off our streets. I have traveled with the DEA to various countries throughout the hemisphere and have seen them first hand in action. The DEA does a tremendous service to our country both inside and outside our border and should be commended. I agree with Senator COVERDELL on the need for additional funding for the DEA. I too believe that the DEA is underfunded and should receive increased funding, particularly if there are additional resources available at a later date.

Mr. President, I see the Chairman of the Commerce, State, Justice Subcommittee on the floor. I speak for Senator COVERDELL when I say that it is my hope that we can work together with the Subcommittee leadership to help provide additional funding for the DEA during conference, or in the future even that there may be additional available funding.

Mr. GREGG. I thank Senator COVERDELL and Senator DEWINE for their statements. I have listened very carefully to their remarks, and I commend them for his tireless efforts in supporting anti-drug efforts, here in the United States and throughout the world. I would like to assure both Senator COVERDELL and Senator DEWINE that I will give every possible consideration to their request when we go to conference and in the event that additional funding may become available for FY 2000 in the future.

Mr. DEWINE. I thank my distinguished friend from New Hampshire and I yield the floor.

Mr. COVERDELL. I too thank my distinguished friend from New Hampshire, and I yield the floor.

DEFINITION OF PUBLIC AIRCRAFT

Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. President, I am prepared to offer an amendment with my distinguished colleague Senator DEWINE to the Commerce, State, Justice appropriations bill that will help law enforcement officers in their efforts to protect our citizens. We believe that after the Congress passed Public Law 103-411, it had unintended consequences that have imposed unnecessary costs on state and local governments. Under this law, aircraft belonging to law enforcement agencies are considered "commercial" if costs incurred from flying missions to support neighboring jurisdictions are reimbursed. Multiple governmental agencies have recognized this problem, with the support of the Federal Aviation Administration, they have jointly drafted corrective language for this problem. Before proceeding, however, I would like to inquire as to the plans for consideration of this issue by the Commerce Committee this year. I wonder if my distinguished colleagues from the state of Arizona and South Carolina—the Chairman and ranking member of the Senate Committee on Commerce, which has oversight on these matters—could engage Senator DEWINE and me in a discussion regarding this matter.

Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, I would be pleased to engage in a discussion with the distinguished Senators from Florida and Ohio on the substance of this matter.

Mr. DEWINE. Mr. President, I thank the Senator for his time. In the state of Ohio the Bureau of Criminal Justice Services uses aircraft for drug eradication efforts. Under current law Ohio is forced to use private planes for this mission at a considerable cost, rather than their own surplus aircraft. Mr. Chairman is it your assessment that current law defining public aircraft places unnecessary restrictions and costly burdens on law enforcement agencies who operate public aircraft?

Mr. MCCAIN. I would agree that as the current law is written a number of our law enforcement agencies that operate public aircraft are faced with burdens in being reimbursed for the costs associated from flying missions in support of neighboring jurisdictions. The Senate Commerce Committee intends to act to review the matter and work to develop legislation that will help law enforcement.

Mr. GRAHAM. Will the Senators from Arizona and South Carolina agree to review this matter on the FAA reauthorization bill and by the end of year?

Mr. MCCAIN. As I have indicated to my colleague, I will as the Chairman of the Commerce Committee review this matter by the end of the year and work with my colleague from South Carolina, Senator HOLLINGS, in a good faith effort to resolve this issue by the end of the year.

Mr. HOLLINGS. I agree with my distinguished colleague from Arizona and look forward to working with him on this issue this year.

Mr. DEWINE. I want to thank Senators MCCAIN and HOLLINGS for their support on this issue. I look forward to working with them on this issue.

Mr. GRAHAM. I also want to thank Senators MCCAIN and HOLLINGS for their support on this issue. I should also thank the law enforcement organizations that have strongly supported this amendment. Specifically, the National Sheriff's Association, Airborne Law Enforcement Association, International Association of Chiefs Of Police, Florida Sheriff's Association, and the California State Sheriff's Associations. Mr. President, in light of what the distinguished Chairman and ranking member have said, I withdraw my amendment.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I rise today to join my distinguished colleagues, Senators GRAHAM and DEWINE, to support an amendment to the Commerce-Justice-State appropriations bill that will assist our local law enforcement agencies to respond in a timely fashion to life or death situations.

Sheriffs and police chiefs in my state and around this country have found that their hands are tied when it comes to sharing helicopters or other public aircraft with neighboring jurisdictions. The Milwaukee County Sheriff's Department recently became the first local law enforcement agency in Wisconsin to acquire a helicopter. Neighboring jurisdictions would like to borrow that helicopter and reimburse the Milwaukee County Sheriff for the cost of their use of that helicopter. The Milwaukee County Sheriff's Department is perfectly willing, indeed eager, to share its helicopter but it can't easily do so. Under current law, in order for the assisting agency to receive a cost reimbursement from the neighboring jurisdiction, the neighboring sheriff or police chief must first exhaust the possibility that a private commercial helicopter is available. Even when the neighboring law enforcement agency is faced with a serious imminent threat to life or property, the law requires the neighboring sheriff or police chief to first determine whether a privately operated helicopter is available. Mr. President, this law is absurd and puts everyone's safety at risk.

Law enforcement agencies use helicopters for a variety of reasons—to chase a suspect fleeing the scene of a crime, in search and rescue missions, to observe crowds in public gatherings, to transport prisoners, and to detect marijuana fields. Current law, however, stands in the way of cooperation between agencies to carry out these important law enforcement functions. Cooperation between law enforcement agencies is good. It saves time, money, resources and maybe even lives. We should do all we can to promote law enforcement cooperation.

Saving lives and maintaining law and order is delayed if we require sheriffs and police chiefs to determine first whether they can find a private helicopter. Public safety is also jeopardized because private commercial pilots are likely not trained law enforcement personnel with experience in sensitive and sometimes dangerous situations. In addition, a commercial helicopter is most likely not equipped with the instrumentation and tools needed by law enforcement officers to do their job. But if we allow sheriffs and police chiefs to share their aircraft with neighboring jurisdictions without first exhausting private avenues, law enforcement response is far more likely to be swift and sure.

Current law effectively prevents law enforcement from borrowing a helicopter or other aircraft from a neighboring agency. The law must be changed and this amendment does the job. This amendment modifies the definition of "public aircraft" so that law enforcement agencies no longer need to make an attempt to find a private helicopter operator before using a neighboring jurisdiction's helicopter. This amendment is supported by the National Sheriffs' Association, as well as numerous police chiefs and sheriffs across the country.

I would like to thank my colleagues, Senators MCCAIN and HOLLINGS, for working with us on this issue. They raised some concerns, but, as described in the colloquy, they have given us assurances that they will work to resolve the urgent needs of law enforcement either on the Federal Aviation Administration appropriations bill or by the end of the year. I welcome their recognition of the magnitude of this problem to law enforcement and their willingness to work with us on this issue.

Mr. President, we demand that law enforcement act quickly and professionally to life or death situations, but we're not always giving them the tools they need to do their job. We must do our part. I urge my colleagues to join in this bipartisan effort to change the law and give the sheriffs and police chiefs in Wisconsin and across this country the tools they need to keep our communities safe and secure.

I yield the floor.

BARRY UNIVERSITY INTERCULTURAL CENTER

Mr. MACK. Mr. President, I would like to engage the Chairman of the subcommittee in a brief colloquy regarding Barry University in Miami Shores, Florida. Barry University has a strong history of addressing important Miami community issues like urbanization, ethnic diversity, community development and cultural understanding. Recently the University announced the planning of an Intercultural Community Center which is designed to promote necessary neighborhood and small business revitalization. The facility will provide conference space, meeting rooms, executive seminars and continuing education courses related to international business and commerce.

It is my understanding Barry University will be requesting an Economic Development Administration grant for this project from the Department of Commerce during the next fiscal year. I would appreciate the Chairman's support in recommending the Department of Commerce give strong consideration to the merits of University's grant application.

Mr. GREGG. I thank the Senator from Florida for bringing this issue to my attention. The Committee is aware of Barry University's efforts and I would strongly urge the Economic Development Administration to consider its application within applicable procedures and guidelines and provide a grant if warranted.

Mr. MACK. I appreciate my friend from New Hampshire's comments on this important initiative and for all he and the Senator from South Carolina have done in this bill for the citizens of Florida.

EPSCOT PROGRAM

Mr. BREAUX. Mr. President, I would like to ask the distinguished Subcommittee Chairman, Senator GREGG, to engage in a colloquy on a matter of extreme importance to my State and a number of others, and that is the need for more funding for the Experimental Program to Stimulate Competitive Technology, a program of the Department of Commerce's Technology Administration.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I would be happy to yield to the Senator from Louisiana and engage in a colloquy.

Mr. BREAUX. Mr. President, as you know, technology is fueling the tremendous economic growth the nation is currently experiencing. However, as is frequently the case, rural states are struggling to participate in this new economy. The EPSCoT program is a competitive matching grants program that reaches beyond the traditional recipients of federal research and development funding. This pioneering initiative brings together the interest of economic development, science and technology, university research, and private business. Although the program is only a couple of years old, it has met with very high enthusiasm in areas such as Louisiana and New Hampshire.

Mr. President, there is important work being done through the EPSCoT program. This is a flexible program designed to assist states. Applications may be submitted by state, local, or Indian tribal governments, community colleges, universities, non-profit organizations, private organizations, technology business centers, industry councils or any combination of these entities from the eligible states. The eligible states are those that have received less in federal research and development funding than the majority of the states. Therefore, the program is carefully designed to benefit those states that need more assistance in developing a high-tech economy.

Mr. President, the National Institute of Standards and Technology, also a part of the Department of Commerce's Technology Administration, runs the Advanced Technology Program. The ATP provides matching funds for high-risk research with broad economic benefits. As a part of the program, grants occasionally are reclaimed by the ATP due to business failures and other such circumstances. These reclaimed monies are used by the ATP to fund new awards. The Committee has provided in the bill that the ATP may use these "carry over" funds for new awards in Fiscal Year 2000.

Does the Senator from New Hampshire concur that it is the intent of the committee to direct $2.0 million in funds provided to NIST for new ATP awards under the provisions dealing with the use of carry-over funds be used for new grants under the Technology Administration's EPSCoT program?

Mr. GREGG. It is the intent of the Committee to direct $2.0 million in carry-over funds for the ATP be used for new grants under the Technology Administration's EPSCoT program. I look forward to working with the Senator from Louisiana to ensure that the $2.0 million in ATP carry-over funds are provided to the EPSCoT program for new grants in Fiscal Year 2000.

Mr. BREAUX. Mr. President, does the Senator from South Carolina concur?

Mr. HOLLINGS. Yes, it is the Committee's intent that $2.0 million in ATP carry-over funds be provided to the EPSCoT program for FY 2000 grants.

DISTRIBUTION OF TECHNOLOGY FUNDS TO BURLINGTON, RUTLAND, AND SAINT JOHNSBURY

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, I would first like to thank Senator GREGG for all his work on crafting the Commerce, Justice, State, and Judiciary Fiscal Year 2000 appropriations bill. In this time of tight budgetary caps, and with the many requests by members, Senator GREGG has worked hard to get the bill through the Appropriations Committee and to the floor of the Senate.

I would especially like to thank Senator GREGG for recognizing the need of three Vermont towns to upgrade, modernize and acquire technology for their police departments. Allowing these police departments to improve their technology will permit them to increase the efficiency and effectiveness of the services they provide. Reflecting the needs of the police departments, the $1.5 million should be divided on the following basis: one-half ($750,000) to the Burlington Police Department, one-third ($500,000) to the Rutland Police Department, and one-sixth ($250,000) to the St. Johnsbury Police Department. Again, I appreciate Senator GREGG's help to address the technology problems these town's police departments are facing, and I look forward to working with him to get this important appropriations bill signed into law.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I appreciate Senator JEFFORDS bringing the needs of these three police departments to my attention, and will work with him to ensure that the money for technology grants to these three Vermont towns are distributed in the way he has described.

INTERNATIONAL WAR CRIMES TRIBUNALS

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, I would like to engage the Chairman of the Commerce, Justice, State Subcommittee in a colloquy.

I am deeply concerned that the Subcommittee bill does not include the full Administration request for funding of the International War Crimes Tribu-

We are all horrified by the crimes against humanity that occurred in Kosovo. Recent reports state that as many as 10,000 people were murdered. An untold number of women were raped. Hundreds of thousands of people were driven from their homes. The War Crimes Tribunal needs adequate funding to gather evidence, to pursue and to try those who are responsible for these crimes against humanity.

Congress provided additional funding for the War Crimes Tribunals in the Supplemental Appropriations bill. These funds were necessary to provide emergency assistance to the War Crimes Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia. Before we provided this funding, Chief Justice Louise Arbour said that she had only seven investigators available for Kosovo. However, full funding for the War Crimes Tribunal is necessary for fiscal year 2000, if we are to continue ongoing investigations in Bosnia or Rwanda.

The Chairman of the Commerce, Justice, State Appropriations Committee is a strong supporter of law enforcement—both in the United States and abroad. I ask him to join me in supporting the full request for funding of the International War Crimes Tribunals during the Conference on the Commerce, Justice and State Department Appropriations bill.

Mr. GREGG. I share the Senator's strong support for the work of the International War Crimes Tribunals. The Subcommittee, with the Senators help, provided more than $40 million for the War Crimes Tribunals in the fiscal year 1999 bill. The full committee, again with the Senator's assistance, made an additional $28 million available to the tribunals as part of the fiscal year 1999 emergency supplemental that passed in May. Just two weeks ago, the Subcommittee approved yet another $2 million for FBI forensic teams investigating massacre sites in Kosovo under the tribunal's direction. I look forward to working with the Senator during the Conference on this bill to ensure that full funding is provided.

CHILD ABUSE PREVENTION PROGRAM

Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, I again thank Senator GREGG and his staff for working with me to provide funding for two important initiatives in my home State of Vermont. It is my understanding that within funds provided to Department of Justice of Juvenile Justice Programs, the FY 2000 Commerce, Justice, State, the Judiciary and Related Agencies Appropriation Bill provides $100,000 for the establishment of a teen center in Colchester, Vermont and $100,000 to Prevent Child Abuse-VT to evaluate the SAFE-T program, a comprehensive child abuse prevention program for middle school communities.

There is a great need for a community center with a focus on youth in the Town of Colchester. Currently after school gathering places for Colchester youth are limited to local restaurants and supermarkets. This project has strong local support. Last October, a group of local citizens formed a non-profit organization called the "Colchester Community Youth Project" and purchased an available property in the town for use as a teen center. The Town of Colchester hopes to buy the building from the non-profit, and then plans to renovate the 4,500 square foot main building to house a youth center/multi use space, offices, and a branch of the local public library.

For over four years, Prevent Child Abuse-VT has funded, developed and piloted SAFE-T, a comprehensive health education and abuse prevention program for middle school communities. Students learn victim and victimizer prevention, build healthy relationship skills and experience personal and social change. Parents, guardians, school staff and service providers participate in training, dialog assignments, classroom presentations and school community change projects. SAFE-T research-based and classroom tested with over 500 students.

More work, however, needs to be done to evaluate the success of the SAFE-T program. Dr. David Finkelhor, Co-Director of the Family Violence Research Laboratory at the University of New Hampshire, plans to embark shortly on a three-year scientific evaluation of the SAFE-T program. I am very pleased that this appropriation will enable this evaluation to move forward.

The sexual abuse of and by children is now at epidemic proportions in America. The SAFE-T Program is an excellent resource in helping early adolescents develop the skills they need to grow safe, free of abuse. This program offers great promise as a national model for comprehensive abuse prevention programs. A thorough scientific evaluation will ensure that this research-based initiative can be proven effective and disseminated properly.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I applaud Senator JEFFORDS' work on these important issues. He is correct that the FY 2000 Commerce, Justice, State, the Judiciary and Related Agencies Appropriation Bill provides $100,000 for the establishment of a teen center in Colchester, Vermont and $100,000 to Prevent Child Abuse-VT to evaluate the SAFE-T program, a comprehensive child abuse prevention program for middle school communities.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE FUNDING

Mr. HARKIN. I would like to address a question to the Chairman of the Subcommittee, the Senator from New Hampshire, regarding funding for the Civil Division of the Justice Department.

In his State of the Union Address, President Clinton announced that the Federal Government intended to sue the Nation's tobacco companies to recover billions of dollars in smoking-related health care costs reimbursed by federal health care programs. The Administration's FY 2000 budget requested $15 million in new resources for the Civil Division of the Justice Department and $5 million for the Fees and Expenses of Witnesses account to support this litigation effort.

Unfortunately, we were unable to provide the additional resources requested by the Administration for the Civil Division to carry out this task. While I regret that the Committee was unable to provide the new funds, it is my understanding that if the Justice Department deems this activity to be a high priority, base funding, including funds from the Fees and Expenses of Witnesses account, can be used for this purpose.

I ask the Chairman and Ranking Member of the Subcommittee if my understanding of the bill and the report language is correct?

Mr. GREGG. I agree with the Senator from Iowa. While the Committee was unable to provide new funding as the Administration requested, nothing in the bill or the report language prohibits the Department from using generally appropriated funds, including funds from the Fees and Expenses of Witnesses Account, to pursue this litigation if the Department concludes such litigation has merit under existing law.

Mr. HOLLINGS. I also agree with Senator HARKIN.

Mr. GRAHAM. I would like to address the Chairman of the Subcommittee. Does the Chairman also agree to strike the language on page 15 and on page 25 of Senate Report 106-76 relating to funding for tobacco litigation?

Mr. GREGG. That is correct.

COMMUNITY-BASED HABITAT RESTORATION PROGRAM

Mr. CHAFEE. Mr. President, with the indulgence of my distinguished colleagues from New Hampshire and South Carolina, I would like to bring to their attention one of the Federal government's most successful restoration programs for marine and estuarine habitats—the Community-Based Habitat Restoration Program started by the National Marine Fisheries Service in 1995. This program promotes restoration of fisheries habitats around the country through voluntary partnerships among state and local governments, the conservation community, industry and businesses, and the academic community. Since its inception, more than 60 projects have been funded. There is a minimum one-to-one match required, but non-Federal parties typically contribute three dollars, and often as much as ten dollars, for every one spent by NMFS. Indeed, over the life of the program, Federal funding totaled $1.2 million, with $6.1 million raised in non-Federal funds.

Mr. GREGG. I am aware of the program and agree with the Senator from Rhode Island. It is an excellent program that supports worthwhile projects with limited funding. Last year, $450,000 was appropriated for the program.

Mr. CHAFEE. Unfortunately, S. 1217, as approved by the Committee, did not provide any funding for the program for FY 2000.

Mr. GREGG. That is correct. The Administration's budget proposal included the program as part of a larger and new initiative that did not receive any funds.

Mr. CHAFEE. I would like to request that the distinguished manager of the bill provide some funding for the program for FY 2000, so that it can continue to build on its past success. Numerous groups, in particular the National Fish and Wildlife Foundation and the FishAmerica Foundation, rely on grants from the program for their restoration efforts, and they would be hardpressed to continue these efforts if the program were not funded. As it is, about 145 projects in 1999 alone are going unfunded due to lack of funds, of which seven are in my own state of Rhode Island.

Mr. GREGG. I am pleased to consider the request of the Senator for Rhode Island. I have discussed this with my distinguished colleague from South Carolina, and we have agreed to a provision in the manager's amendment that directs NMFS to take $1 million from available funds within its budget and apply it to the Community-Based Habitat Restoration Program.

Mr. HOLLINGS. I agree with my distinguished colleagues from Rhode Island and New Hampshire, and am pleased to support the program. The manager's amendment ensures that the program will not only be continued, but will receive some additional funding.

Mr. CHAFEE. I wholeheartedly thank my colleagues from New Hampshire and South Carolina. It is always a pleasure working with them, especially on a worthwhile endeavor such as this.

ARMS CONTROL TREATY VERIFICATION

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, I rise to engage in a colloquy with my colleague, the Subcommittee Chairman, regarding a specific funding provision in this bill within arms control treaty verification. I have been concerned for some time that our arms control efforts have been focused on treaty negotiation at the expense of treaty verification. The Committee report expressed the same concern. As a result, technological advances in arms control verification made at the national laboratories are not being fully applied or exploited. Accordingly, this bill provides $10,000,000 for this purpose. I want to be absolutely precise about what the Committee has directed in this area so I will quote from the Committee's report accompanying this bill. The report states the following: "the Committee recommendation provides a $10,000,000 increase over fiscal year 1999 for verification technology."

Mr. President, I think the plain meaning of this language could not be any clearer and I think my colleague the Subcommittee Chairman would agree with me. That is why I was puzzled to hear from my staff that, in informal conversations, State Department personnel have expressed confusion over how to interpret this language. If my understanding is correct, some in the State Department have expressed their belief that the $10,000,000 increase is intended to be applied first to the President's priorities for increased funding—costing approximately $8,000,000—and that only the remaining $2,000,000, left over after the President's priorities are funded, would be applied to the treaty verification work.

Mr. President, I certainly hope that the information I have about the interpretation of agency officials is incorrect. I certainly hope that the State Department would not disregard the abundantly clear direction provided by the Committee. I ask my colleague if my interpretation of the Committee's direction comports with his own, as Chairman of the Subcommittee.

Mr. GREGG. My colleague from Idaho is correct. In setting the funding priorities for the Bureau of Arms Control, within the State Department, the Committee has clearly directed that the $10,000,000 provided be used for the purpose of verification technology. The Committee further specifies that verification technology will include systemization of promising non-intrusive nuclear topographic techniques including the Fission Assay tomography System and the Gamma Neutron Assay Technique, which together will provide the ability to detect and characterize special nuclear materials while at the same time ensuring that design information is not revealed. The President's budget request is just that—a request for the Committee's consideration—but Congress, within its prerogatives, sets agency funding levels, and sets priorities within those levels.

Mr. CRAIG. I thank the distinguished Subcommittee Chairman. I am assured that his understanding of the Committee's intent for these funds is the same as mine.

FUNDING FOR THE SBA OFFICE OF ADVOCACY

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, I commend my colleagues, Senator GREGG and Senator HOLLINGS, for their initiative to allocate $2.5 million in the Fiscal Year 2000 Commerce-Justice-State Appropriations bill to fund the research function of the Office of Advocacy at the Small Business Administration.

This is an increase of $1.1 million over the amount in the President's FY 2000 budget request for SBA.

The Office of Advocacy, which is headed by the Chief Counsel for Advocacy, performs an essential role acting as the eyes, ears, and voice from within the Federal bureaucracy on behalf of the small business community. One key responsibility carried out by the Office of Advocacy is the research it conducts on issues critical to small businesses. It is our understanding that $500,000 of the additional funds for the Advocacy research function are targeted toward the review of interpretative regulations issued by the Internal Revenue Service of the Department of the Treasury and rules issued by the Mine Safety and Health Administration of the Department of Labor.

Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, I join my colleague and friend from Missouri, Senator BOND, in supporting the additional funding for the Office of Advocacy. This is a substantial increase over FY 1999 funding, which I believe is important for the ability of the Office of Advocacy to carry out its important mission on behalf of small business. Among others, those responsibilities include conducting research on a number of issues that are critical to small minority-owned and women-owned firms, and the cost of Federal regulations. I commend my colleagues, Senator GREGG and Senator HOLLINGS, for their initiative in providing this increase.

We are also very concerned about the current staffing needs of the Office of Advocacy, which has declined significantly in recent years. In FY 1990, there were 70 full-time employees assigned to the Office of Advocacy. During the current fiscal year, it is my understanding the SBA Administrator has allocated 49 full-time staff for the Office of Advocacy.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, I agree with the Senator KERRY about the failure of SBA to allocate adequate staff to the Office of Advocacy. This shortfall has placed an enormous burden on the ability of the Office to fulfill its mission. While I would encourage the SBA Administrator to allocate staff for the Office of Advocacy at the 1990 level, I realize they may not be able to make such an large increase in one year. Therefore, I would like my colleagues on the Commerce-Justice-State Appropriations Subcommittee, Senator GREGG and Senator HOLLINGS, to clarify their intent for the increase in the FY 2000 budget for the Office of Advocacy.

Mr. GREGG. I appreciate the time and effort spent by Senator BOND and Senator KERRY working with the Subcommittee in developing the FY 2000 budget for SBA. The Subcommittee approved the increase in the budget for the Office of Advocacy to enable it to assess the economic contributions made by small businesses, to determine the impact of federal regulations and tax policies on small businesses, to dedicate sufficient resources to help carry out its responsibilities under the Regulatory Flexibility Act, and to undertake reviews of interpretative regulations issued by the Internal Revenue Service of the Department of the Treasury and rules issued by the Mine Safety and Health Administration of the Department of Labor.

It was further our intention to direct SBA to add 5 full-time equivalent employees to the Office of Advocacy for a total of 54 full-time employees for FY 2000. It is our belief this number of full-time staff is reasonable to address the burgeoning responsibilities of this important office.

Mr. HOLLINGS. I concur with my good friend and colleague from the New Hampshire on the use of the increased funds for the Office of Advocacy. In addition, it was our intent to add 5 full-time equivalent employees in the Office of Advocacy bringing the total for FY 2000 to 54 full-time employees.

Mr. GREGG. I want to make one further clarification regarding the $2.5 million earmarked for research by the Office of Advocacy. It was our intention that this amount be spent on research contracts and other initiatives by the Office of Advocacy. The Subcommittee did not intend that any of these funds would be transferred to the general operating account for the Agency nor would any of these funds be used to pay the costs of maintaining the full-time staff of the Office of Advocacy.

Mr. HOLLINGS. I concur with the statement by Senator GREGG.

THE BUNKER HILL SITE

Mr. CRAIG. Mr. President, I would like to engage in a discussion with the Senator from New Hampshire, the distinguished Chairman of the Commerce, Justice, State and Judiciary Appropriations Subcommittee concerning a situation that exists in my home state of Idaho.

Mr. GREGG. I would be pleased to engage in such a discussion with my friend the senior Senator from Idaho.

Mr. CRAIG. This past weekend Senator CRAPO, Congresswoman CHENOWETH and I conducted a public meeting in Coeur d'Alene, Idaho where federal, state, local, tribal officials and citizens give statements and responded to questions concerning the federal, tribal and state governments' involvement in a Superfund site in North Idaho known as the Bunker Hill site.

To date there has been approximately $200 million spent on cleanup. Significant progress has been made, but there is a great deal of debate going on between the parties concerning what other areas in the Basin need to be included in the cleanup. I believe the State of Idaho, the Coeur d'Alene Tribe and the federal agencies can work out these questions and resolve the conflicts that have gone on over this issue in the Coeur d'Alene Basin for over a decade.

I feel the Department of Justice, Idaho and the Nation as a whole would be well served if the DOJ and the other parties involved in litigation were to work among themselves parties to resolve the issues rather than to continue to litigate.

Mr. GREGG. The Senator raises excellent points. The resources of the National are better served in working to resolve these types of problems rather than to continue in a litigation strategy for years and years. All parties should work to resolve the problems in the Coeur d'Alene Basin and the Committee will work with the Senator from Idaho to see if further direction is appropriate in the Conference Report.

DEVELOPMENT OF A HABITAT CONSERVATION PLAN

Mr. BURNS. The Senate is accepting my amendment to allocate $250,000 for the development of a Habitat Conservation Plan as part of the Idaho and Montana Coldwater Fishery Enhancement Program. This funding is imperative in the preparation of a voluntary Habitat Conservation Plan aimed at saving our native fish populations in the two states. As you know, we are at the upper end of the Columbia River drainage and the impacts seen on salmon in that drainage are interrelated to our native trout as well.

As the debate raged on about what exactly was impacting the native fish populations in the lower Columbia system, those of us in the upper reaches of the system were doing our best to ensure that enough water was sent downstream at the appropriate time to help the native fish as much as possible. What we have learned from this practice is that the health of our bull trout population is linked to that of the salmon. Fewer salmon returning from the ocean to spawn placed concern on the health of the entire river system, and the traditional actions taken to help one species sometimes had negative impacts on others. As is commonly the case with these types of issues, we didn't always realize the interrelation until some negative impacts had already taken place.

Making these funds available for the Idaho and Montana Coldwater Fishery Enhancement Program will help us address more of the survival needs of native fish species in the Columbia Basin. Stabilizing the bull trout population and developing this plan will allow us more flexibility in helping the salmon populations recover as well. Senator, I hope you will join me in clarifying where this money is to be directed and to reaffirm the value of developing a state-led voluntary Habitat Conservation Plan for bull trout in Idaho and Montana.

Mr. GREGG. The Idaho and Montana Coldwater Fishery Enhancement Program is an important element in the concerted effort to help native fish throughout the Pacific Northwest. This year's appropriations bills place a priority on stabilizing the native fish populations throughout the region, and this program fills a niche previously left unmet by other recovery efforts.

SCAAP FUNDING

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. Mr. President, I would like to inquire of my friend, the Senator from New Hampshire, about funding in this measure for the State Criminal Alien Assistance Program, popularly known as the SCAAP.

As the Senator knows, states and localities, especially those such as California with high immigrant populations, face extraordinary costs in incarcerating illegal aliens who have committed serious crimes in the United States and sentenced for their felony offenses.

The burden on states and localities which incarcerate criminal aliens continues to grow. In California, for example, during February 1997, there were 17,904 criminal alien inmates with INS holds on them. This rose to 19,355 in 1998. At the end of February, 1999, there were 21,792 alien inmates in the California state correctional system who have INS holds.

Congress appropriated $585 million for SCAAP in fiscal year 1999 to help reimburse state and local governments for the costs of incarcerating illegal aliens.

Given the increasing numbers of illegal aliens that California and other states must incarcerate, one would reasonably expect that funding for this important program would be increased in fiscal year 2000.

But it is my understanding, Mr. President, that the bill reported by the committee actually makes dramatic cuts in federal funding for SCAAP, reducing the level of funding by more than 80 percent to only $100 million.

Given the urgency of the need and the fact that all 50 states, the District of Columbia, two territories and 244 localities received SCAAP funding in the most recent reimbursement period, I would like to inquire of my friend from New Hampshire if there is something that can be done to increase funding in this bill for SCAAP to a more appropriate level.

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, I wish to associate myself with the excellent comments of my good friend, the Senator from California, and also look forward to working with the chairman and ranking member of the subcommittee to resolve the funding disparity in the State Criminal Alien Assistance Program (SCAAP).

Before I begin my comments about this important program and the level of funding in the Senate Commerce-Justice-State Appropriations bill, I want to state my full support for what I have been told will be a $585 million funding level for SCAAP in the House FY 2000 bill. I would also like to insert for the record a copy of a letter from the U.S./Mexico Border Counties Coalition (which consists of 18 county governments located on the Southwestern border) that describes why an adequate funding level for SCAAP is so important to these border areas, many of which are facing very difficult fiscal situations.

Through the Crime Control Act of 1994, the Congress created SCAAP to reimburse states and localities for the costs they incur incarcerating criminal illegal aliens. Such costs, it has been made clear, are the responsibility of the federal government. SCAAP is authorized at $650 million, although total expenditures of the states exceed $2 billion per year. Though the financial burden of criminal illegal aliens overwhelms the criminal justice budget of many states and localities, SCAAP has never even been allocated its full authorization. In 1996 and 1997, SCAAP was allocated $500 million and last year, states and localities received a total of $585 million.

Frankly, the Congress would be fully justified in increasing the authorization level to $2 billion annually. In 1998, the taxpayers of Arizona spent $38 million incarcerating criminal illegal aliens, including $26.8 million in state facilities, $406,000 in Cochise County, $9 million in Maricopa County, $136,000 in Mohave County, $534,000 in Pinal County, $450,000 in Santa Cruz County, and $401,000 in Yuma County. In turn, the state received a reimbursement of $15.1 million in SCAAP funds—less than half of what Arizona should have gotten, and that was when SCAAP was funded at $585 million overall.

To reduce the total 1999 SCAAP fund by more than 80 percent for fiscal year 2000, to $100 million, is absolutely unacceptable. Should funding be reduced to $100 million, all 50 states, D.C., and the 244 local jurisdictions, which currently receive 39 cents on the dollar, would be reimbursed a mere seven cents on the dollar, even though such costs are a clear federal responsibility. This situation is especially disturbing, considering incarceration is only one component of the overwhelming cost incurred by states and localities when processing criminal illegal aliens—and one for which the federal government promised to provide reimbursement in the Crime Control Act of 1994.

In Santa Cruz County, Arizona, the overall costs of both processing and incarcerating illegal criminal aliens takes up 39 percent of the county's criminal justice budget. And that is just one county in my state. The combined costs to jurisdictions all over the country are staggering, and the SCAAP program only reimburses states for the incarceration portion of these onerous costs. Unless Congress appropriates sufficient funds for SCAAP, at the very least, Arizona and other state and local governments will continue to shoulder billions of dollars of the expense of incarcerating and processing criminal illegal aliens.

Mr. President, I very much hope that Senators GREGG, HOLLINGS, FEINSTEIN and I can work to resolve these issues before this bill is signed into law.

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, I would like to associate myself with the comments expressed by my friends, the Senator from California and the Senator from Arizona, and commend them for their efforts on the extremely important issue.

The State Criminal Alien Assistance Program provides much needed financial assistance to New York State and many of our great state's cities and counties, as they try to grapple with the significant costs of incarcerating criminal aliens. In fiscal year 1998, New York and its localities received a total of $96.4 million in SCAAP funding—with New York City securing the largest single grant for a locality in the nation.

I am very disappointed and disturbed that the bill reported by the committee would reduce SCAAP funding to $100 million for fiscal year 2000. This could translate to a $80 million cut in assistance for New York: a $46 million cut for the state itself, $27.7 million for New York City, 4 million for Nassau County, $1 million for Suffolk County, $800,000 for Westchester County, $32,000 for Montgomery County, $25,500 for Albany County, $19,500 for Putnam County, and smaller amounts for Cortland County.

Cuts of this magnitude would leave New York to assume a difficult and heavy burden for what is very much a federal responsibility. I join my friends from California and Arizona in asking our friend from New Hampshire whether something could be done to restore SCAAP funding to a more acceptable level.

Mr. GREGG. Mr. President, I thank my friends from California, Arizona, and New York for their excellent observations. I know that they have been tireless in their efforts to secure both an end to illegal immigration and to ensure that the federal government assume a share of the financial responsibility for its inability to control illegal immigration.

I know, as well, that the senator from California and the senator from Arizona were two of the principal authors of the SCAAP program when it was created by the 1994 Crime bill, and that they both worked very hard to help secure the $585 million which was appropriated last year and in fiscal year 1998 for this important program.

Knowing of the great need for adequate funding for SCAAP, it pains me that the Committee was unable to fund it at the level it deserves. I assure the senators that I will make it a high priority during the conference between the House and Senate to secure adequate funding for this program, that does so much for all of our states that are burdened by the costs of incarcerating illegal aliens.

Mr. HOLLINGS. I concur with my colleague from New Hampshire. I understand the importance of this funding for states impacted by high rates of criminal alien incarceration and I am hopeful we can provide an adequate funding level for SCAAP during conference.

Mrs. FEINSTEIN. I thank the Chairman and Ranking Member for their encouraging words. As I am sure they know, the SCAAP reimbursements provided in prior years did not nearly cover the costs states and localities incurred to incarcerate illegal aliens in their jurisdictions.

In fiscal year 1998, the last year for which such cost figures are available, the cost for states and localities amounted to $1.7 billion. Thus, last year's funding level covered only 30 percent of actual costs.

A cut along the magnitude of that which is included in the Committee bill would be absolutely devastating. I understand the House CJS Subcommittee is recommending an FY00 SCAAP funding level of $585 million. I will work closely with the Chairman and Ranking Member and others in both bodies during the weeks to come to assure that the conference on this bill adequately funds this program.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. I would like to associate myself with the remarks of my colleagues with regard to the issue of funding for the State Criminal Alien Assistance Program (SCAAP). SCAAP is a vital reimbursement program for states like mine that assists in the significant cost of incarcerating criminal aliens.

Although securing the border is the responsibility of the federal government, states and localities have had to bear the costs associated with incarcerating aliens should they enter the criminal justice system. In previous years, Congress has recognized their burden and worked to secure as much as $585 million for this critical program. Even at that level, less than 40% of Texas' costs of criminal alien incarceration have been reimbursed. Cutting SCAAP by over 80% as proposed in this measure would result in a reimbursement of only about 7% of the total cost to the State of Texas. It is estimated that the State of Texas would receive less than $7 million, and Texas counties would share in less than $3 million. Dallas County would receive less than $200,000 despite enduring costs of over $2.5 million; the County of El Paso, with costs exceeding $2.6 million, would be reimbursed only about $200,000; and Harris County, with costs nearing $14 million, would receive less than $1 million. Mr. President, this is the same Harris County that last week took custody in its county jail of the accused railway murderer, Angel Maturino-Resendez. In this case, Harris County is forced to assume the costs of detaining Maturino-Resendez, who is alleged to have repeatedly entered this country illegally and further alleged to have committed a string of stunningly violent murders across the United States. There could not be a more graphic illustration of why we need to support the State Criminal Alien Assistance Program, so that our cities, counties and States are not left alone to pay the costs of the Federal government's failure to protect the border.

I pledge to work with the chairman to see that adequate funding can be restored to this vital program and appreciate the Senator from California bringing this important matter to the floor.

THE HARBOR GARDENS ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT PROJECT

Mr. SANTORUM. Mr. President, I have sought recognition to express my support for the Harbor Gardens economic development project. I have requested funding in the Economic Development Administration (EDA) account for this worthwhile initiative in the Manchester neighborhood of Pittsburgh.

The mission of Harbor Gardens is to continue to help in rebuilding the economic, physical, social, human, and cultural infrastructure of one of Pittsburgh's most distressed communities. The project consists of a state-of-the-art urban greenhouse for the benefit of students and city residents. Horticulture is the fastest growing segment of agri-business, and therefore, the skills which program participants gain can translate into well-paying jobs. The project will ensure the education of its graduates in the horticultural industry, including advance greenhouse production technology and landscaping techniques. The Business and Industrial Development Corporation is partnering with the Pennsylvania State University, the School District of Pittsburgh, Pittsburgh Civic Garden Center, Phipps Conservatory and Botanical Center, Zuma Canyon Orchids, and Pittsburgh Cut Flowers. Rare plants will be grown to be purchased for resale, and tours, seminars, plant auctions, and festivals will all contribute to maximizing revenues.

Federal funding crucial to the completion of this innovative approach to economic development, and an EDA grant will play an important role in meeting that federal commitment.

I look forward to working with the Chairman of the Subcommittee, Senator GREGG, to ensure that this project receives funding.

Mr. GREGG. I welcome the comments by the Senator from Pennsylvania and look forward to continuing to work with him on this request. I am well aware of the importance he places on the Harbor Gardens project. I would strongly urge the EDA to consider a proposal by the Business and Industrial Development Corporation within applicable procedures and guidelines and provide a grant if warranted.

THE BYRNE GRANT

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, I rise to enter into a colloquy with the distinguished Chairman of the subcommittee, Senator GREGG, regarding the importance of the Byrne Grant.

Mr. GREGG. I understand the Senator's interest in this area.

Mr. KYL. I thank Senator GREGG for entering this colloquy with me about a program which is particularly vital to the law enforcement personnel in my own state of Arizona. As you know, the Byrne Grant is a key source of federal financial assistance for state and local drug law enforcement efforts. It funds a wide variety of activities ranging from task forces and drug education to apprehension and prosecution. In Arizona, numerous counties and agencies rely on Byrne Grant funds to pay the salaries of nearly 300 law enforcement and prosecution personnel; rural counties especially benefit from Byrne Grant funds for their law enforcement activities.

Mr. GREGG. I am aware of the Byrne grant program and its importance, as well as the fact that the Administration's budget cut Byrne by over $90 million, not to mention the Administration's "zero-funding" of the Local Law Enforcement Block Grant—which this Subcommittee funded at $400 million. As Chairman of the subcommittee that provides funds for law enforcement, I am intimately familiar with the need to fund effective and successful law enforcement programs. I join with the Senator from Arizona in recognizing the importance of the Byrne Grant. As this bill moves to conference, I look forward to working with you to address your concerns.

Mr. KYL. Once again, I thank the distinguished Chairman.

WARDEN OFFENDER MONITORING SYSTEM

Mr. SESSIONS. I thank Senator GREGG and his staff for their tireless efforts on this legislation. I believe this legislation contains some important steps in a number of areas, including law enforcement. At this time, I would like to engage the Chairman in a discussion with regard to a new technology developed by Capstone Technologies, a company located in my state of Alabama. I think it is essential that we explore new areas of technology that can increase the effectiveness of law enforcement.

Mr. GREGG. I thank the Senator from Alabama for his interest in this legislation and in improving our law enforcement efforts. I agree that we should explore new techniques that can improve the capabilities of the law enforcement community.

Mr. SESSIONS. Capstone Technologies developed the Warden Offender Monitoring System to aid in monitoring offenders that have been put under residential detention. The Warden is a biometric, three dimensional monitoring system using voice verification, personal history inquiry and voice recording. The Warden uses computer voice verification to identify offenders placed on residential detention. The Warden monitors the offender using a touch-tone phone, with no new equipment to install or maintain. Random calls are made by the computer to the home of the offender during the hours sanctioned by the court. The system uses the "voiceprint", which is recorded initially, to identify the offender on the phone. All calls are monitored and all violations identified by the computer are followed by a personal call from the staff to ensure that there are no false violations recorded. The Warden can also detect when an offender is under the influence of alcohol or other drugs. If the computer detects certain characteristics of intoxication it will report a violation immediately to the supervisor with a recommendation to conduct a sobriety test. I believe this technology could be an extremely useful tool for law enforcement. One specific area in which the Warden system might be very helpful would be in monitoring juveniles. By implementing a versatile residential detention system, we can avoid having to place our youth in jail, and possibly help parents and the individual gain control of his life before it's too late.

Mr. GREGG. I agree that this technology could have useful applications to our law enforcement system. I look forward to working with the Senator from Alabama in the future as we explore technological developments and other useful tools that can aid our law enforcement community.

Mr. SESSIONS. I thank the Chairman again for his leadership and for his interest in this important issue. I look forward to working with him on this new technology in the months to come.

THE ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION OF THE DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE

Mr. ASHCROFT. Mr. President, I thank the distinguished Senator from New Hampshire, Chairman of the Commerce, Justice, State, and Judiciary Appropriations Subcommittee, for joining me to discuss the urgent need to provide funding for defense conversion in the greater St. Louis area. Over 7,000 Missourians are in danger of losing their jobs if the F-15 production line shuts down at the Boeing plant in St. Louis. These are high-paying, high-skilled jobs, and I am committed to doing everything I can to help these hard-working Missourians find other sources of employment in the greater St. Louis area.

These workers have helped keep America strong through their work on the F-15 and other military systems that are so integral to our national security. Their skill and knowledge are a national asset—a national asset which I think should be preserved through keeping the F-15 line open. I have worked toward that end, and Senator BOND and I successfully secured funding for additional F-15 purchases in the Defense Appropriations bill last month. But hundreds of F-15 workers will lose their jobs even with additional purchases of the plane, and those workers should be assisted in the transition process.

The distinguished Senator from New Hampshire is well aware of the Economic Development Administration (EDA) and the good work EDA does to facilitate economic adjustment in so many parts of the country.

Mr. GREGG. I am well aware of the EDA and the economic adjustment programs it funds, including substantial work in areas of the country impacted by defense downsizing.

Mr. ASHCROFT. I appreciate the Senator's reference to the defense conversion work performed by the EDA. In fact, EDA has assisted St. Louis before, as the regional economy has adjusted from defense layoffs over the past decade. St. Louis has one of the most effective and highly respected economic adjustment offices in the country, as the Defense and Commerce Departments would attest. The city has a demonstrated track record of using federal dollars effectively and is well-prepared to use EDA funding to meet the current, pressing needs of these F-15 workers. I would like to ask the distinguished Senator from New Hampshire if he will work with me in the coming months to address the defense conversion needs in the St. Louis area.

Mr. GREGG. I am aware of the good work St. Louis has done in the past when defense downsizing has affected the city's economy. As Chairman of the Appropriations Subcommittee overseeing funding for the Commerce Department and the EDA, I will work with the distinguished Senator from Missouri to assist the city.

Mr. ASHCROFT. I thank the Senator for his kind remarks and his willingness to work with me to address this important matter in Missouri.

RAPID RESPONSE SYSTEM FOR YOUNG CHILDREN EXPOSED TO VIOLENCE

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, I want to bring to the attention of the Senate Maine's Community Alliance to End Violence Against Children. The Alliance, which includes the Maine State Police, Catholic Charities Maine, and the Passamaquoddy Tribe at Pleasant Point, will improve and expand the coordination of services for preventing and reducing the negative impact that exposure to violence has on young children. As my distinguished colleague from New Hampshire is aware, rural regions have unique problems coordinating and delivering services to children exposed to violence.

Mr. GREGG. I am pleased the Appropriations Subcommittee on Commerce, Justice, State, and the Judiciary directed the Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention to examine the proposal for a Rapid Response Program for children living in Hancock and Washington Counties and to provide a grant for the program if warranted.

Ms. COLLINS. Downeast Maine is particularly in need of help. Washington County, for example, is a large rural area in which chronic poverty, unemployment, substance abuse and domestic violence result in far too many children being exposed to violence. Currently there is no program in these counties that offers adequate intervention and treatment to address the harmful aftereffects of exposure to violence. The Alliance will develop a system through which existing resources can be coordinated to provide appropriate and timely responses to the emotionally and physically damaging situations children often face. There is strong evidence that a rapid response team, intervening on behalf of children in crisis situations, can mitigate the long term consequences of trauma.

Mr. GREGG. I thank the Senator from Maine for her efforts to address this problem. Data from urban areas have shown that a rapid response to trauma in children does reduce the development of anti-social behavior in the long term. However, there are no data from rural communities. The demonstration project that the Alliance proposes can be a model for service delivery in other rural areas and appears to be an excellent candidate for Department of Justice funds.

Ms. COLLINS. I am sure that many rural communities will benefit from the work of the Maine Alliance. Its plan has been inspired by the work of Dr. Carl Bell, President of the Community Mental Health Council in Chicago, Illinois. Dr. Bell's analysis of the effects of trauma and the needs of African-American youth in Chicago can be applied to the predominantly white and Native-American youth in eastern, rural Maine and ultimately youth in any rural area.

Mr. GREGG. I want to assure the Senator from Maine that I understand the importance of the work of the Maine Community Alliance to End Violence Against Children and its potential significance as a model for rural areas across the nation.

Ms. COLLINS. I thank the Chairman and the Subcommittee for their support and look forward to working with you to implement this project.

CONSOLIDATION OF ALL FIRST RESPONDER TRAINING AT THE CDP

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, I would like to engage the distinguished Senator from New Hampshire in a brief colloquy to discuss the merits of consolidating training for our Nation's First Responders.

Would the Senator agree consolidation of all Department of Justice first responder training under the Center for domestic Preparedness at Fort McClellan, Alabama would significantly improve the quality and level of first responder domestic preparedness training?

Mr. GREGG. Is Consolidation of training in one organization really necessary?

Mr. SESSIONS. Yes. Stakeholders have repeatedly stated the need for a single authoritarian point of contact for training information. Also the June 2, 1999 Report to Congress specifically recognized the requirement: "A centrally coordinated and standardized national training program is needed to ensure an effective, integrated response and to minimize redundancy in training programs."

Mr. GREGG. What would be the advantage of this consolidation?

Mr. SESSIONS. OSLDPS approach to responder training is somewhat fragmented. The CDP currently oversees most DoJ training. However, in October, 2000, DoD will transfer responsibility for its Nunn-Lugar City Training program to DoJ. Current plans are to manage this new program out of OSLDPS in Washington, DC office. Consolidation of all DoJ training at the CDP would centralize all training in one organization providing a more effective, efficient use of resources.

Mr. GREGG. How much City Training will remain once the programs transfers to DoJ?

Mr. SESSIONS. Of the original 120 cities scheduled to receive training, only 25 will be completely finished by October 2000. Approximately 65 cities will be in some phase of training. This is a very large and complex training program requiring extensive coordination and attention to detail.

Mr. GREGG. Does the CDP have the expertise to execute such a large training program?

Mr. SESSIONS. Yes. The CDP Director and his key staff have extensive experience in planning, coordinating and executing large training programs with DoJ, DoD and other agencies. The staff also has expertise in the first responder disciplines, such as fire, law enforcement and emergency medical. The CDP is also closer and perhaps, more attuned to first responder issues.

Mr. GREGG. What is the relative experience of the OSLDPS key staff?

Mr. SESSIONS. While they have some experience in coordinating programs within the interagency arena, their primary experience has been in the area of grant formulation and execution. no one on the OSLDPS staff currently has any experience in executing a training program this large.

Mr. GREGG. Are there other advantages to consolidating DoJ first responder training at CDP?

Mr. SESSIONS. Yes. Placing one organization in charge of all DoJ training has several advantages:

It centralizes all training and course development, curriculum standardization, assessment and instructor certification in one organization;

It provides more effective oversight of training and related programs;

Eliminates course overlap and course redundancy;

It facilitates coordination of training issues in the interagency community; and

It provides a single point of contact "one stop shopping" for state and local responders for all training issues.

Mr. GREGG. Will this consolidation save money and manpower?

Mr. SESSIONS. Dual-hatting the Director of the CDP as the OSLDPS Director of Training will eliminate the need for a large training coordination and oversight function/staff in Washington, DC.

Mr. GREGG. Why is this so important?

Mr. SESSIONS. Consolidation of all training at the CDP is important because it will provide a single authoritative source for training and related technical assistance and information. To this end, I am convinced that the National Guard should establish its central distance learning facility at Fort McClellan to leverage these training requirements for the 11 million First Responders in America.

Mr. GREGG. I would like to say to my good friend from Alabama that I agree with his views on training consolidation at the Center for Domestic Preparedness, and I appreciate his time and attention to this important issue. I look forward to working with him to fully explore this issue with Justice Department officials in the coming months. I would hope they will move aggressively to implement a National Training Strategy.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, I thank my colleague for participating in this colloquy and for his support on this issue. I, too, look forward to working with my friend from New Hampshire and other colleagues on this important issue.

THE REPEAL OF SECTION 110 OF THE 1996
IMMIGRATION LAW

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, I rise today to discuss the important issue of a visa entry-exit control system with the Senator from Michigan, Mr. ABRAHAM, the Chairman of the Immigration Subcommittee, and Senator GREGG, the Chairman of the Commerce-Justice-State Appropriations Subcommittee.

Senator ABRAHAM, you and I and other Members who represent the Northern regions of our country have been working for over 3 years now to repeal Section 110 of the Illegal Immigration Reform and Immigrant Responsibility Act of 1996 (P.L. 104-208). Section 110 of this 1996 Immigration law would require a recording and identification system to be implemented to document the arrival and departure of all non-U.S. citizens at all ports of entry in the U.S., including those entry points along the U.S. border with Canada.

Mr. ABRAHAM. The Senator is correct. Those of us who represent states bordering Canada know well the immense volume of tourism and trade that passes through our states from our neighbor to the North. The implementation of Section 110 would cause gross delays to all those crossing the Northern border from Canada, and ultimately have a disastrous impact on the Northern economy as critical trade and travel routes are slowed. It would also harm states along the Southern border as well.

Ms. COLLINS. In my State of Maine, this new border policy would have the most immediate impact on border communities such as Calais, Houlton, Madawaska, and Jackman. Businesses in these communities rely on Canadian consumers to stay in business. Moreover, the impact on trade, including lumber and tourism, would extend beyond these communities and reverberate across Maine and through the Northern economy as a whole.

Those of us who represent states along the Canadian border know intimately how deep the shared ties between the U.S. and Canada truly are. Our relationship has included disagreements over the years, but our Canadian neighbors are part of our family—a fact that is literally and figuratively true for many Mainers whose extended families live across the border in Canada.

Mr. ABRAHAM. Our border policy with Canada has served us well, and is a symbol of the close relationship between our two countries. The border with Canada is the longest continuous open border in the world, and our close friendship should not be clouded by a needless bureaucratic exercise. Moreover, numerous jobs, jobs held by Americans in Michigan and elsewhere, would be lost if Section 110 is implemented. The effect on tourism and on just-in-time deliveries would inhibit the flow of goods and people in a way that would hurt the economics of many states.

Ms. COLLINS. Largely because of your efforts, Senator ABRAHAM, Section 110 has yet to be substantively implemented at land borders and sea ports of entry. Last year, the FY99 Omnibus Emergency Supplemental Appropriations Act (105-277) delayed the implementation of Section 110 on land and sea ports of entry until March 31, 2001, and included language stating that the entry/exit control system must “not significantly disrupt trade, tourism, or other legitimate cross-border traffic at land border points of entry”. And in today’s Commerce-Justice-State Appropriations bill, Section 110 is repealed outright. I salute your efforts on behalf of this very important measure which will benefit both of our states and the northern economy as a whole.

Mr. ABRAHAM. I thank the Senator from Maine for her remarks, and for the important work she has done to repeal this measure. As the overwhelming vote nearly one year ago illustrates, there is near unanimity in the Senate on this issue, and I salute the Senator from New Hampshire for his outstanding ongoing support, and his willingness to insert provisions addressing this problem into the underlying Commerce-Justice-State Appropriations Bill.

Mr. GREGG. I am pleased to support the measure to repeal Section 110 of the 1996 Immigration bill. I too believe strongly that the border policy we currently enjoy with the country of Canada should not be disturbed. I will continue to work in Conference to see that this matter is finally put to rest.

Mr. ABRAHAM. Thank you, Senator GREGG, your efforts are deeply appreciated by the American people.

Ms. COLLINS. Thank you to both Senators for their leadership on this issue, and for joining me in this colloquy.

DRUG ENFORCEMENT ADMINISTRATION

Mr. DEWINE. Mr. President, as the Senate reaches the conclusion of the Commerce-Justice-State Appropriations bill, I would like to speak a moment about an important US law enforcement agency funded in this bill—an agency dedicated to keeping drugs off our streets. I am specifically talking about the Drug Enforcement Administration.

Mr. President, in 1998, the DEA seized more drugs and arrested more traffickers than ever before. With limited funding, and unlimited hard work and dedication, DEA human resources are a vital source not just for our law enforcement activities, but for other nations as well. The DEA does its job without a heavy reliance on big ticket items like ships and aircraft. On the contrary, this agency relies primarily on manpower. Their manpower and skill are what makes them such an effective organization both inside and outside our borders.

Fortunately after 2 years of almost stagnant funding levels, the Republican Congress has been working to increase its investment in the DEA. Last year Congress provided the DEA with $1.4 billion in Fiscal Year 1999, an increase of roughly $60 million. This increase was possible largely through legislation Senator COVERDELL and I introduced and Congress passed last year—the Western Hemisphere Drug Elimination Act. However, we need to do more.

Congress should continue its support of the DEA. Increasing our investment in DEA, which will in turn increase the strength and ability of our counter-narcotics strategy, is the only way to continue to increase the numbers of drug arrests and seizures.

Let me give you some examples of where more DEA resources have and can continue to make a difference. Mr. President, I have visited Haiti numerous times and have visited the Dominican Republic as well. It is truly unfortunate that roughly twenty per cent of the drugs entering the United States travel through these two countries. The Haiti-Dominican Republic transit route has become increasingly popular for drug traffickers because both governments do not present a real threat to drug traffickers. What makes matters worse is that our resources devoted to preventing drugs from reaching this island have been minimal at best.

When I visited Haiti back in March 1998, I was astonished to find out that there was only one DEA agent stationed in Haiti. When I visited the Dominican Republic on the same trip, I was disappointed to find out there were only two DEA agents stationed there. How can our government keep drugs from entering our country if we do not make a commitment to seize drugs along a major international route on the drug trafficking highway? When I returned from that trip, I worked with the DEA and the Attorney General to get additional agents assigned to both countries. I received a commitment to station seven DEA agents in Haiti and six agents in the Dominican Republic. The process has been slow in getting the agents to Haiti—because of language training in particular—but the increase in agents has already made a tremendous difference.

Since that trip back in March 1998, I have returned to Haiti and the Dominican Republic, and visited with the DEA agents stationed there. As a result of our increased DEA presence on the island, the DEA, in conjunction with the US Customs and with the Haiti and Dominican governments, has pursued several counter-drug operations. Their presence also has helped increase cooperation between the two nations.

I had the opportunity to visit the Haitian-Dominican border last November to observe a DEA-Customs counter-drug initiative called Operation Genesis. Until that time, there was virtually no cooperation between the two nations at the border. This lack of cooperation is a major reason why the island became a popular drug trafficking route. The objective of Operation Genesis was to help both countries better coordinate and cooperate with each other to prevent drugs from transiting the border.

The enhanced Haitian-Dominican cooperation through overall DEA efforts has proven successful. For example, last February, the Haitian National Police in coordination with the DEA, arrested relatives of the Coneo family—a well known Colombian drug trafficking family with connections in Haiti and the Dominican Republic. Heriberto Coneo's wife, son and his brother-in-law were arrested in Haiti for carrying false Dominican passports. Haiti later expelled them to the Dominican Republic, where they were arrested and placed in prison. This was a major victory.

Another example of this enhanced cooperation was the recent arrest of a Haitian National Police Division Chief who had fled to the Dominican Republic after his involvement in the deaths of more than 11 Haitians. The coordinated efforts by the DEA with these two countries resulted in the Dominicans arresting the police official and expelling him to Haiti.

The DEA also has helped train the Haitian National Police counter-drug unit. With DEA assistance, our Embassy in Port-au-Prince reports that the Haitian police has seized more than $1 million in money being smuggled out of the country in large sums.

I also have seen the DEA in action in South America, specifically in Peru and in Colombia. I walked through poppy fields in Neiva, Colombia where I saw first hand the source of the serious heroin problem plaguing our country today. We were in a region only 20 miles from the Colombian demilitarized zone. The DEA has been instrumental in working and training the Colombian National Police to seize drugs and arrest drug lords.

While, I have described a few success stories, I need to remind my colleagues that the DEA is producing incredible returns on a very small investment.

Imagine what more the DEA could do if they had more personnel. The fact is the DEA simply does not have the resources to meet their demanding and necessary tasks. With more resources, border initiatives like the one in Haiti and the Dominican Republic could be expanded, allowing for a greater reduction in the heavy trafficking that occurs between the two countries. With more resources, additional DEA agents can be sent overseas to assist law enforcement officials in learning ways to stop drug trafficking. That kind of investment—to build anti-drug operations in other countries—will build even more barriers to drugs outside our borders.

Mr. President, last March, Senator COVERDELL and I, along with a number of our colleagues—Republican and Democrat—sent a letter to the Chairman and Ranking Member of the Commerce-Justice-State Appropriations Subcommittee, Senator GREGG and Senator HOLLINGS, calling for building on this year's investment in the DEA and requesting additional funding for 300 additional DEA agents, analysts and support personnel, and for other DEA initiatives. This request would enable the DEA to carry out specific initiatives outlined in the Western Hemisphere Drug Elimination Act, a three year initiative for enhanced international drug eradication and interdiction efforts.

I recognize the serious budget challenges facing this Subcommittee and other Appropriations subcommittees as well. Chairman GREGG and Senator HOLLINGS were extremely gracious in accommodating our request. Specifically, the Subcommittee earmarked $17.5 million for new DEA agents, analysts, and support staff for both international and domestic posts.

Mr. President, this is an important first step. It is my hope that as this bill moves to a conference with the House, the conferees will work to increase our overall investment in the DEA, so that specific priority requirements are not funded at the expense of other important DEA programs.

Again, Mr. President, since 1995 Congress has made great progress last year to increase our investment to revive our international counter narcotics strategy. Last year's passage of the Western Hemisphere Drug Elimination Act was the latest example of this progress. Not only did Congress pass legislation, but we also provided an $800 million down payment for the bill.

Unfortunately, the Clinton Administration is not showing a similar commitment. The President's Budget for Fiscal Year 2000 provided zero funding for provisions outlined in the Western Hemisphere Drug Elimination Act. In fact, it calls for more than $100 million less than our total anti-drug funding for 1999. The Coast Guard received zero funding for the acquisition of air/maritime assets; the Drug Enforcement Agency received zero funding for new agents; our Customs Service received zero funding for procurement of maritime/air assets and zero increases for U.S. Customs inspectors. This Administration has not demonstrated a commitment to fund a real, coherent international counter-drug strategy. What good is it to have tough drug laws here at home and a tough international counter narcotics policy at and beyond the border if you do not have the resources to enforce them?

Mr. President, I have repeatedly expressed my concerns that the Administration has not been doing enough in the fight against drugs. When the Clinton Administration took over, the DEA workforce dropped from 7,277 in 1992 to 7,066 in 1994. However, since the Republican takeover of Congress in 1994, we have fought to boost the workforce from 7,066 to more than 9,000. The Administration's latest action, or lack of action, only reinforces my belief that more can be done. There has been an increasing number of reports of outrageous amounts of drugs being distributed throughout our country that originates internationally and domestically. Why is that? Only the federal government can devote the resources to seize drugs outside our country. It is unfortunate that the Clinton Administration continues to fail to fully support this exclusive federal responsibility.

With increased DEA funding, we have the opportunity to eliminate one of the most glaring omissions in the President's budget. It is my hope that we will continue to search for additional funding to the DEA so that they can hire these new agents, analysts, and support personnel without having to sacrifice other important programs. These agents would work hand-in-hand with international law enforcement authorities to provide the intelligence, expertise, and even the manpower required to arrest the drug traffickers.

Mr. President, I have seen the DEA at work throughout the region. The agency is a group of hard-working dedicated individuals who risk their lives to create a healthy environment for democracies to flourish, while at the same time get the drugs off the streets of America. They do so much good with the limited resources they have. It is now time for us to pass this amendment, give the DEA additional resources and once again watch the number of arrests and seizures increase causing the flow of narcotics into our country to sharply decrease.

Mr. President, it is time to renew drug interdiction efforts; time to provide the necessary personnel and equipment to our drug-enforcement agencies, and time to make the issue a national priority once again.

Thank you, Mr. President. I yield the floor.

Mr. McCAIN. Mr. President, I want to thank the managers of this bill for their hard work in putting forth annual legislation which provides federal funding for numerous vital programs. The Senate will soon vote to adopt the Commerce, Justice, State Appropriations Bill for the Fiscal Year 2000. I intend to support this measure because it provides funding for fighting crime, enhancing drug enforcement, and responding to threats of terrorism. This further addresses the shortcomings of the immigration process, funds the operation of the judicial system, facilitates commerce throughout the United States, and fulfills the needs of the State Department and various other agencies.

For many years, I have tried to cut wasteful and unnecessary spending from the annual appropriations bills—with only limited success, I must admit. Nonetheless, I will continue my fight to curb wasteful pork-barrel spending, and I regret that I must again come forward this year to object to the millions of unrequested, low-priority, wasteful spending in this bill and its accompanying report. This year's bill has over $1 billion in pork-barrel spending. This is a disgracefully huge increase over last year's FY 99 Commerce, Justice, State Appropriations Bill, which contained $361 million in pork-barrel spending. $1.2 billion is an unacceptable amount of money to spend on low-priority, unrequested, wasteful projects. In short, Congress must curb its appetite for such unbridled spending.

CBO projects that we will have close to a trillion dollar budget surplus over the next 10 years. However, if we continue with our current levels of wasteful spending, these budget surpluses may not occur. Pork-barrel spending today not only robs well-deserving programs of much needed funds, it also jeopardizes social security reform, potential tax cuts, and our fiscal well-being into the next century.

The multitude of unrequested earmarks buried in this proposal will undoubtedly further burden the American taxpayers. While the amounts associated with each individual earmark may not seem extravagant, taken together, they represent a serious diversion of taxpayers' hard-earned dollars to low priority programs at the expense of numerous programs that have undergone the appropriate merit-based selection process. Congress and the American public must be made aware of the magnitude of wasteful spending endorsed by this body.

I have compiled a lengthy list of the numerous add-ons, earmarks, and special exemptions provided to individual projects in this bill. It would take a substantial amount of time to recite this list to you. Instead, I will ask unanimous consent to include this list in the RECORD.

Mr. President, because of our nation's robust economy, we now have a balanced budget. But we cannot continue to bear the financial burden of servicing a $5.6 trillion national debt. We need to continue to work to cut unnecessary and wasteful spending so we can begin to pay down our debt and save billions in interest payments.

As I mentioned earlier, CBO recently projected that we will have close to a trillion dollar budget surplus over the next 10 years. These are projections and not real dollars until they materialize. Further, these surplus projections are all contingent on Congress maintaining the spending caps. Unfortunately, I already hear the grumbling to break these caps even as we have only deliberated on a small number of appropriations bills.

Simply because we can fund programs of questionable merit within the spending caps does not mean that we should. There is no room for pork-barreling when we are so close to breaking the caps. Last year alone, I uncovered over $14 billion of wasteful spending in the appropriations bills. $14 billion funds a lot of worthy programs.

As a matter of simple fairness, we have an obligation to ensure that Congress spends taxpayers' hard-earned dollars prudently to protect our balanced budget and to protect the projected budget surpluses. The American public cannot understand why we continue to earmark these huge amounts of money to locality specific special interests at a time when we are trying to cut the cost of government and return more dollars to the people. Pork barrel spending cannot be justified in an environment where our highest fiscal priorities should be to save Social Security, and provide much needed tax relief such as: increasing the number of tax payers in the 15% tax bracket, elimination of the marriage penalty; reduced taxation of savings and investment income; repeal of the estate and gift tax; repeal of the Social Security Earnings Test; increasing the contribution level for 410(k), and 457 retirement plans; and increasing the contribution level for the traditional IRA to $5,000.

Let me say very frankly that I do not generally like the idea of griping year after year regarding Congress' appetite for wasteful pork-barrel spending. But it is a sad commentary on the state of politics today that the Congress cannot curb its appetite to earmark funds for programs that are obviously wasteful, unnecessary, or unfair. Unfortunately, however, Members of Congress have demonstrated time and again their willingness to fund programs that serve their narrowly tailored interest at the expense of the national interest.

I ask unanimous consent the list be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

$2,000,000 for the National Coral Reef Institute and to continue Hawaiian coral reef monitoring and assessment by the University of Hawaii.

$6,825,000 for the Great Lakes Environmental Research Laboratory (FY 99 appropriated level).

Report directs the Coastal Ocean Program (a NOAA office) to work with and continue its current levels of support for the Baruch Institute's (SC) research and monitoring of small, high-salinity estuaries.

National Marine Fisheries Service

The bill report earmarks the following projects:

$500,000 for the Hawaiian Community Development Program and fishery demonstration projects for native fisheries development.

$3,000,000 for PACFIN, the Pacific fishery information network, and directs that Hawaii receive an appropriate share of PACFIN resources. (same level as FY 99)

$3,000,000 for AKFIN, the new Alaskan fishery information network. (A new line item)

$3,900,000 for RecFIN, the recreational fishery information network program. Report further directs that the Pacific, Atlantic, and Gulf States each receive one-third of these funds with funding for inshore recreational species assessment and tagging efforts in South Carolina.

$2,400,000 for continued operations of the NOAA vessel the Gordon Gunter, homeported in Mississippi.

$250,000 for the harvest technology unit of the National Warmwater Aquaculture Research Center at Stoneville.

For information collection and analyses resource information programs:

$3,500,000 for implementation of the Magnuson-Stevens Act off the coast of Alaska;

$2,500,000 for the Gulf of Mexico Stock enhancement consortium;

$500,000 for the Hawaii stock enhancement plan;

$300,000 for Hawaiian sea turtles;

$200,000 to conduct sampling of lobster population in State waters in New England;

$400,000 to continue research on shrimp pathogens in the southeastern U.S.;

$300,000 to continue a study of the status and trends of southeastern sea turtles;

$300,000 for research on the Charleston bump, an offshore bottom feature which attracts large numbers of fish;

$1,500,000 for the Chesapeake Bay multi-species management strategy;

$1,050,000 for Hawaiian monk seals.

$1,000,000 for the Xiphophorus Genetic Stock Center at Southwest Texas State University for fish genetics and evolution;

$1,500,000 for Chesapeake oyster research.
$6,325,000 for Alaska groundfish monitoring, including $300,000 for the Berin Sea Fisherman's Association, $225,000 for the Gulf of Alaska Coastal Communities Coalition.

$1,250,000 for the State of Alaska to develop commercial fisheries near shore, including dive fisheries for urchins, and groundfish fisheries for cod, rockfish, skates, and dogfish.

$4,000,000 for Stellar sea lion recovery off of Alaska, including $1,100,000, for the State of Alaska, $1,000,000 for the Alaska SeaLife Center, and $800,000 for the North Pacific Marine Mammal Consortium.

an $800,000 increase over the FY 99 appropriated level of $700,000 for the Yukon River Drainage Fisheries Association for habitat restoration and monitoring projects.

$200,000 for the Northeast Fisheries Science Center for the Virginia Institute for Marine Science to begin participation in the Cooperative Marine Education and Research Program.

$850,000 to continue the Marine Resources Monitoring Assessment and Prediction Program carried out by the South Carolina Division of Marine Resources.

$2,000,000 for maintenance of the Sandy Hook, NJ NMFS facility lease.

$300,000 for maintenance of the Santa Cruz Lab.

$1,500,000 for maintenance of the Kodiak facility.

Report earmarks funding for the following commissions in Alaska:

$400,000 for the Alaska Eskimo Whaling Commission

$250,000 for the Beluga Whale Committee
$100,000 for Bristol Bay Native Association
$200,000 for Aleut Marine Mammal Commission

Report earmarks the following:

$500,000 for swordfish research at the NMFS Honolulu laboratory.

$6,000,000 for the implementation of the American Fisheries Act, including $750,000 for the State of Alaska (a $20 million taxpayer funded fishing industry buy-out attached to the Omnibus bill last year)

$8,000,000 for NMFS to spend on the Gulf of Maine groundfish fishery (includes MA-NH-ME), including $2,820,000 for the Northeast Consortium to conduct cooperative research and development.

$800,000 to the State of Alaska to conduct harbor seal research.

$6,200,000 for California sea lions.

$250,000 for the State of Alaska for technical support of proposed salmon recovery plans.

$425,000 for the North Pacific Fishery Observer Training Center.

$750,000 for the Hawaiian Fisheries Development Program.

$300,000 for a New England Safe Seafood Program.

$300,000 for the Alaska Fisheries Development Foundation.

Oceanic and Atmospheric Research

Report earmarks the following projects:

$1,000,000 for Southeast Atlantic marine monitoring and prediction at the University of North Carolina;

$1,500,000 for a tsunami warning and environmental observatory at Shumigan Islands;

$1,200,000 for ballast water research and small boat portage zebra mussel dispersion problems in the Chesapeake Bay and Great Lakes, including Lake Champlain;

$250,000 for South Carolina Division of Marine Resources Research on Coastal Urbanization Impacts;

$240,000 for the Muskegon (MI) Lake Center;

$200,000 for the New England airshed pollution study;

$500,000 for the Gulf Coast Study on severe weather impacts;

$300,000 for the Lake Champlain study; and $1,000,000 for the Gulf of Mexico oyster initiative.

NOAA Facilities

Report earmarks $10,000,000 for conversion of two surplus Navy Yard Torpedo Test vessels. One to be a replacement in Charleston, SC for the research vessel Farrel, and one to be located with and used by CICEET and the Joint Hydrography Center at the Univ. Of New Hampshire.

Procurement, Acquisition, and Construction

Report earmarks $14,500,000 for Alaska facilities (of which $1 million is for Juneau, $5 million is for Ship Creek, and $8.5 million is for SeaLife Center.)

THE JUDICIARY

An earmark of $2,000,000 for the Bureau of Consular Affairs Visa Office for planning, developing, and implementing and information technology solution, the Olympic Visa Issuance Database.

$100,000 for the Montana Tech. Foreign Exchange Program.

$1,000,000 for planning activities for the Paralympics and Winter Olympic Games to be held in 2002.

A $5,000,000 earmark for costs associated with hosting the World Trade Organization conference in Seattle, WA.

$9,353,000 for the Great Lakes Fishery Commission, which includes $8,724,000 for the sea lamprey operations and research program, of which not less than $200,000 shall be used to treat Lake Champlain.

$921,000 to replace an aerostat at Cudjoe Key, Florida that was decommissioned in June, 1998.

$10,000,000 for two rotatable transmitting antennas at the IBB transmitting site in Greenville, NC.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I rise to address the funding for the Judicial Branch for fiscal year 2000. The Appropriations Committee that worked on this budget has done an outstanding job with limited resources and very demanding budget requests. Senators STEVENS, GREGG, BYRD, and HOLLINGS, and their staffs, are to be commended for doing a very difficult job in a professional manner that does credit to the Senate.

As chairman of the Judiciary Committee, I have a special interest in this budget. And I agree with most of the Senate bill. The Senate bill fully funds compensation for judges. This is required by the Constitution.

The Senate bill fully funds judges' staffs. This is appropriate because judges cannot operate without their law clerks and secretaries.

The Senate bill fully funds the rental costs of court facilities leased from the General Services Administration. This is appropriate because we must have courtrooms for judges and their staffs to work in.

Further, the Senate bill appropriately reduces funding for certain expenditure requests that were not critically needed.

However, the Senate bill underfunds court support staff and operating expenses for the circuit and district courts by a net 257 million dollars.

The Judiciary's budget request was for maintaining the current level of services by support staff. The support staff is needed to handle high levels of criminal cases, bankruptcy cases, pre-trial services, and supervised release services. These duties are not going away. The Judiciary is required by law to continue to address each of these areas. Moreover, I note that the Judiciary's budget request does not even take into account the increased workload that new legislation, like the Juvenile Crime Bill, will place on the federal courts.

The Judiciary cannot maintain the current level of services in the Courts of Appeal and District Courts without some portion of the 257 million dollar shortfall being replaced.

I request that over the next few months we work together to provide the Judiciary with additional funding for support staff on the Courts of Appeal and the District Courts.

I am also concerned about a deeper problem that exists with the budget process for the Judiciary.

Current law requires the Executive Branch to submit the Judiciary's annual budget request to Congress "without change." Nonetheless, the Administration's Office of Management and Budget indirectly decreases the Judiciary's budget request through the use of negative allowances.

The Judicial Branch should be required to be responsible in its budget requests, and I believe they are. But, the Judicial Branch's budget should not be subject to reductions by the Executive Branch to fund the political priorities of the President. Current law prohibits such reductions, but the Administration does not follow this law. This is a systemic problem that I hope we can address in the future along with the Judiciary's current-year budget needs.

As legislators, it is our duty under Article I of the Constitution to provide sufficient funds so that the federal courts established under Article III of the Constitution are effective and federal law is upheld. I look forward to working with my colleagues on both sides of the aisle to address these issues in the next few months.

Mr. DEWINE. Mr. President, I would like to take a few moments to thank Senator GREGG, the Chairman of the Commerce, State, Justice Appropriations Committee, as well as Senator HOLLINGS, for their full support of the Crime Identification Technology Act in this appropriations bill. Their support represents a strong commitment to anti-crime measures that really work to reduce crime.

This Act is a bipartisan law that Congress passed unanimously last year.

The Crime Identification Technology Act is based on the recognition that technology is the key to the future of police work. We can no longer continue to ask law enforcement to fight increasingly mobile and sophisticated criminals with outmoded twentieth-century Technology.

The Crime Identification Technology Act will help state and local justice systems update and integrate their anti-crime technology systems and support their overburdened forensic crime laboratories. CITA authorizes $250 million to states and local governments each year, for five years, for crime technology. This effort is fully funded in this appropriation bill.

State and local governments are at a crucial juncture in the development and integration of their criminal justice technology. This bill provides for system integration, permitting all components of the criminal justice system to share information and communicate more effectively, on a real-time basis.

This is one of the wisest investments we could possibly make. I would like to emphasize three reasons for this. First, crime technology, in itself, is crucial to making significant reductions in the crime rates in our communities. Second, we can use this opportunity to leverage the Federal Government's investments in national anti-crime systems that require state participation, such as the Integrated Automated Fingerprint Identification System, the National Criminal Information Center 2000, and the National Integrated Ballistics Information Network. We have literally invested billions of dollars in national systems. That is a key reason why so many organizations have applauded the appropriators' support of anti-crime technology, including the International Association of Police Chiefs, National Governor's Association, National League of Cities, American Society of Crime Laboratory Directors, the American Academy of Forensic Sciences, and our states' information repository directors in the National Consortium of Justice & Information Statistics.

Third, but certainly not last, there is a tremendous need to consolidate the patchwork of Federal programs, which have funded specific areas of anti-crime technology to the exclusion of others. A recent GAO report identified more than $1.2 billion in direct and indirect support to state and local governments; however, the absence of coordination and integration of both systems and funding means that if we continue the current system of disparate funding streams, there will never be enough money or integration. Too many existing Federal programs mandate specific technology spending, instead of allowing states the flexibility to meet their respective anti-crime technology needs within the type of broad framework which the Crime Identification Technology Act. CITA offers a dedicated, coordinated stream of funding to help states develop and upgrade their anti-crime technology from the patchwork of existing programs, and utilize the technical assistance of agencies who have developed technological expertise. I believe that this will greatly increase accountability and efficiency.

The bottom line for me, based on my more than 25 years in law enforcement, is that fully employing our anti-crime technology today will help law enforcement solve more crime, more rapidly, and pursue increasingly sophisticated, mobile criminals.

Again, I want to thank Chairman GREGG, and Senator LEAHY and Senator HATCH for their strong support of the Crime Identification Technology Act and its appropriation. I would also like to extend my personal thanks to Senator GREGG's staff, particularly Jim Morhard and Eric Harnschteger for making the best of a very difficult funding situation.

I thank the Chair and I yield the floor.

ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT ADMINISTRATION

Mr. HUTCHINSON. Mr. President, I rise today along with Senator SNOWE to voice my deep concerns regarding the substantial cut to the economic Development Administration's Fiscal Year 2000 budget. The FY 2000 Commerce, Justice, State appropriations bill being considered by the Senate cuts EDA's budget by $164.1 million—from $392.4 million in FY 1999 to $228.3 million for FY 2000. This represents a 42 percent cut. Clearly, this reduction will have a dramatic affect on the EDA's ability to serve distressed rural and urban communities in states like Arkansas, New Hampshire, Maine, Alaska, New Mexico, Kentucky, and Colorado.

My colleagues will remember that last November we passed the Economic Development Administration Reform Act of 1998. In response, the EDA has become a more efficient and effective agency by reducing regulations by 60 percent; they have trimmed the period of processing applications to 60 days; and they are now requiring applicants to demonstrate both eligibility and need at the time of application. I firmly believe that these achievements will only strengthen the EDA's history of providing critical assistance to distressed areas.

In its 34 years of service to Americans, the EDA has created 2.9 million private sector jobs; investing $16.8 billion in distressed communities. Currently, every $1 invested by the EDA generates $3 in outside investment. With an administrative overhead of less than 8%, more Americans in economically distressed areas benefit from their tax dollars.

This is good news for my home state. As a rural state with many economically distressed communities, Arkansas relies heavily on the EDA and their invaluable services. Sam Spearman, who heads EDA in Arkansas, is a true servant and a great asset to my constituents. From the tornadoes that tore through northeast and central Arkansas this January, to the Levi-Strauss and Arrow Automotive closing in Morrilton, Arkansas, the EDA is helping communities stay alive. To help grow the economies in some depressed areas, the EDA has been assisting in planning and developing intermodal facilities in Marion and West Memphis.

My state was not immune to BRAC in the early 1990s. A Strategic Air Command bomber base in Blytheville and an Army training facility in Fort Smith were closed. As a member of the Senate Armed Services Committee, I am happy to report to my colleagues that both communities are slowly recovering, but not without ongoing assistance from EDA.

Again, last November we passed legislation to restructure and reform the EDA. I believe that they have responded well to Congressional direction, however, reducing their funding by 42% greatly limits their ability to implement the changes we thought were necessary. I thank my colleagues and hope that they will support increasing funding to EDA in FY 2000.

CALLING OF THE BANKROLL

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I promised that from time to time when I participate in debates on legislation I would point out the role of special interest money in our legislative process, an effort I have entitled the Calling of the Bankroll. When I Call the Bankroll I will describe how much money the various interests lobbying on a particular bill have spent on campaign contributions to influence our decisions here in this chamber.

Of course I embarked on this effort with the hope of exposing the corruption of our current campaign finance system, and in particular how wealthy donors exploit the soft money loophole.

When I began this effort, I never worried that I would lack for opportunities to Call the Bankroll, and as I've demonstrated over the past few months, there are countless opportunities to Call the Bankroll about efforts to influence legislation before this body.

For example, so far I have talked about the contributions of special interests working to influence the debate over the Patients' Bill of Rights, I have discussed the contributions of the high tech industry and trial lawyers lobby during debate on the Y2K legislation, and I have pointed out the contributions of gun makers and gun control advocates during the juvenile justice debate, just to name a few.

And now we have before this body the Commerce, State, Justice appropriations bill.

During his state of the union address last January, the President called for the Justice Department to prepare a "litigation plan" against the tobacco companies to reclaim hundreds of billions of taxpayer dollars spent through federal health-care programs such as Medicare to treat smoking-related illnesses.

But this bill does something quite different. The language in the committee report on the Commerce, State, Justice Bill attempts to grant immunity to the tobacco industry from any federal litigation. Instead of a litigation plan, this bill would create a protection plan for the tobacco companies.

I hope my colleagues in this body would agree that the Justice Department must be able to pursue litigation based on the law, and that we should do everything in our power to enable the department to enforce the law.

But the language currently in the committee report prevents the Justice Department from enforcing the law. So instead of a huge federal lawsuit, the tobacco industry will have immunity from federal litigation. It looks like the tobacco companies have really gotten what they wanted in this bill, Mr. President.

It's a fortunate turn of events for the tobacco companies, but based on the tobacco industry's track record of political donations and political clout, I can't say that it's surprising.

The nation's tobacco companies are some of the most generous political donors around today, Mr. President, including Philip Morris, which reigns as the largest single soft money donor of all time. During the 1997-1998 election cycle the tobacco companies, including Philip Morris, RJR Nabisco, Brown and Williamson, US Tobacco and the industry's lobbying arm, the Tobacco Institute, gave a combined $5.5 million dollars in soft money to the parties, and another $2.3 million in PAC money contributions to candidates.

I offer this information to my colleagues and to the public to paint a clearer picture of who is trying to influence the bill before us, and how they are using the campaign finance system—very successfully, I might add—to get what they want from this bill and this Congress.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I rise in support of S. 1217, the Commerce, Justice, State, and the Judiciary Appropriations Bill for 2000.

This bill provides new budget authority of $34 billion and new outlays of $23.1 billion to finance the programs of the Departments of Commerce, Justice, and State, and the federal judiciary.

I congratulate the Chairman and Ranking Member for producing a bill that complies with the Subcommittee's 302(b) allocation. This is one of the most difficult bills to manage with its varied programs and challenging allocation, but I think the bill meets most of the demands made of it while not exceeding its budget. So I commend my friend, the chairman, for his efforts and leadership.

When outlays from prior-year BA and other adjustments are taken into account, the bill totals $34.1 billion in BA and $34 billion in outlays. For general purpose activities as well as crime funding, the bill is at the Senate subcommittee's 302(b) allocation for both budget authority and outlays.

I ask members of the Senate to refrain from offering amendments which would cause the subcommittee to exceed its budget allocation and urge the speedy adoption of this bill.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a table displaying the Budget Committee scoring of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the table was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the bill will be read the third time and passed.

The bill S. 1217, as amended, was read the third time, and passed.

(The bill will be printed in a future edition of the RECORD.)

Mr. HOLLINGS. I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. GREGG. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. GREGG. I ask unanimous consent the Senate proceed to a period of morning business, with Senators permitted to speak for up to 10 minutes each.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

THE MILLENNIUM DIGITAL COMMERCE ACT

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I rise to address the need for prompt action on S. 761, the Millennium Digital Commerce Act. Senator ABRAHAM has crafted a solid legislative measure that will promote continued growth in electronic commerce.

The Millennium Digital Commerce Act has 11 cosponsors including Senators WYDEN, TORRICELLI, MCCAIN, BURNS, FRIST, GORTON, BROWNBACK, ALLARD, GRAMS, HAGEL, and myself.

Mr. President, on June 23, almost one month ago, the Senate Commerce Committee unanimously approved and ordered S. 761 reported with an amendment in the nature of a substitute. This substitute is widely supported by the States, industry, and the administration. In fact, on June 22, the day before the mark-up, the Commerce Department issued a formal letter of support for this bipartisan measure.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD the Administration's letter.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

GENERAL COUNSEL OF THE U.S. DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE,
Washington, DC, June 22, 1999.

Hon. JOHN MCCAIN,
Chairman, Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: This letter conveys the views of the Department of Commerce on the substitute version of S. 761, the "Millennium Digital Signature Act," that we understand will be marked-up by the Senate Commerce Committee. A copy of the substitute that serves as the basis for these views is attached to this letter.

In July 1997 the Administration issued the Framework for Global Electronic Commerce, wherein President Clinton and Vice President Gore recognized the importance of developing a predictable, minimalist legal environment in order to promote electronic commerce. President Clinton directed Secretary Daley "to work with the private sector, State and local governments, and foreign governments to support the development, both domestically and internationally, of a uniform commercial legal framework that recognizes, facilitates, and enforces electronic transactions worldwide."

Since July 1997, we have been consulting with countries to encourage their adoption of an approach to electronic authentication that will assure parties that their transactions will be recognized and enforced globally. Under this approach, countries would: (1) eliminate paper-based legal barriers to electronic transactions by implementing the relevant provisions of the 1996 UNCITRAL Model Law on Electronic Commerce; (2) reaffirm the rights of parties to determine for themselves the appropriate technological means of authenticating their transactions;

(3) ensure any party the opportunity to prove in court that a particular authentication technique is sufficient to create a legally binding agreement; and (4) state that governments should treat technologies and providers of authentication services from other countries in a non-discriminatory manner.

The principles set out in section 5 of S. 761 mirror those advocated by the Administration in international fora, and we support their adoption in federal legislation. In October 1998, the OECD Ministers approved a Declaration on Authentication for Electronic Commerce affirming these principles. In addition, these principles have also been incorporated into joint statements between the United States and Japan, Australia, France, the United Kingdom and South Korea. Congressional endorsement of the principles would greatly assist in developing the full potential of electronic commerce as was envisioned by the President and Vice President Gore in The Framework for Global Electronic Commerce.

On the domestic front, the National Conference of Commissioners of Uniform State Law (NCCUSL) has been working since early 1997 to craft a uniform law for consideration by State legislatures that would adapt standards governing private commercial transactions to cyberspace. This model law is entitled the "Uniform Electronic Transactions Act" (UETA), and I understand that it will receive final consideration at the NCCUSL Annual Meeting at the end of July. In the view of the Administration, the current UETA draft adheres to the minimalist "enabling" framework advocated by the Administration, and we believe that UETA will provide an excellent domestic legal model for electronic transactions, as well as a strong model for the rest of the world.

Section 6 of the substitute ("Interstate Contract Certainty") addresses the concern that several years will elapse before the UETA is enacted by the states. It fills that gap temporarily with federal legal standards, but ultimately leaves the issue to be resolved by each state as it considers the UETA.

With regard to commercial transactions affecting interstate commerce, this section eliminates statutory rules requiring paper contracts, recognizes the validity of electronic signatures as a substitute for paper signatures, and provides that parties may decide for themselves, should they so choose, what method of electronic signature to use.

Another important aspect of the substitute is that it would provide for the termination of any federal preemption as to the law of any state that adopts the UETA (including any of the variations that the UETA may allow) and maintains it in effect. We note that this provision would impose no overarching requirement that the UETA or individual state laws be "consistent" with the specific terms of this Act; this provision, and its potential effect, will be closely monitored by the Administration as the legislation progresses. There is every reason to believe that the States will continue to move, as they consistently have moved, toward adopting and maintaining an "enabling" approach to electronic commerce consistent with the principles stated in this Act. We therefore believe that any preemption that may ultimately result from this legislation can safely be allowed to "sunset" for any state upon its adoption of the eventual uniform electronic transactions legislation developed by the states.

We also support limiting the scope of this Act to commercial transactions, which is consistent with the current approach of the draft UETA, and utilizing definitions in the Act that mirror those of the current draft UETA, which we consider appropriate in light of the expert effort that has been directed to the development of the UETA provisions under the procedures of NCCUSL.

With regard to section 7(a), the Administration requests that the Committee delete the reference to the Office of Management and Budget ("OMB"); there is no need for agencies to file duplicate reports. The report that the Secretary of Commerce is directed to prepare pursuant to section 7(b) will, of course, be coordinated with OMB.

The substitute version of S. 761 would in our view provide an excellent framework for the speedy development of uniform electronic transactions legislation in an environment of partnership between the Federal Government and the states. We look forward to working with the Committee on the bill as it proceeds through the legislative process.

The Office of Management and Budget advises that there is no objection to the transmittal of this report from the standpoint of the Administration's program.

Sincerely,

ANDREW J. PINCUS.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, the Millennium Digital Commerce Act provides a baseline national framework for conducting online business to business transactions. It is vital to interstate electronic commerce because it would provide legal standing for electronic signatures on contracts and other business transactions.

This common sense and timely legislation will help promote continued growth in electronic commerce. It is good for business, consumers, and the overall American economy.

While more than forty States have laws on the books concerning the use of authentication technology such as electronic signatures, the States have not yet chosen to adopt the same approach. This hodgepodge of State laws will undoubtedly have a chilling effect on e-commerce.

This Congress cannot and should not sit by and wait until the States coordinate this milieu of laws on electronic signatures. This delay would unnecessarily restrain the growth of our Nation's economic well-being.

The Millennium Digital Commerce Act is an interim step that will help facilitate interstate and international commerce. It is a necessary precursor to state-by-state adoption of the Uniform Electronic Transactions Act (UETA).

Mr. President, my colleagues on both sides of the aisle strongly agree that it is now time to move S. 761 to the floor.

It has broad support and I hope we can work together to move this bipartisan pro-technology, pro-electronic commerce legislation forward as soon as possible.

MARY MCGRORY ON JOHN F. KENNEDY, JR.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, it happens I was in the White House, in what was then Ralph Dungan's southwest office just down the hall from the Oval Office—where they were cleaning the carpet, the President's furniture having been moved to the outside corridor with his rocking chair atop the clutter—when word came from Dallas that the President was dead. A few moments later Hubert H. Humphrey burst in, embraced Dungan and let out: "My God, what have they done to us." By "they" of course he meant the political right wing in Texas. Later we learned that the Dallas police had arrested a man associated with Fair Play for Cuba. What indeed had been done to us, what were we doing to ourselves?

That evening a group of us who lived on Macomb Street, out Connecticut Avenue, drifted over to Mary McGrory's. We sat about, saying little. At length Mary, with the feeling only she can put into words, announced: "We'll never laugh again." "Heavens, Mary," I replied, "we'll laugh again. It's just that we will never be young again."

In this morning's Washington Post, her column "A Death in the Family" describes in poignant detail the history from then to now, now being of course the death of John F. KENNEDY, Jr., so much on our minds in those slow-paced days of mourning so many years ago, now himself gone, along with his wife Carolyn and his sister-in-law Lauren Bessette.

I ask unanimous consent that her reflections be reprinted in the RECORD in full following my statement.

There being no objection, the article ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Washington Post, July 22, 1999]

A DEATH IN THE FAMILY

(By Mary McGrory)

To understand the round-the-clock coverage of John Kennedy's death, the unending talk about it, and the makeshift memorials, it helps to remember what the country felt about his parents. His father, John Fitzgerald Kennedy, handsome and dashing, came out of Boston insisting on being our first Catholic president—and was assassinated on Nov. 22, 1963.

His beautiful mother, Jacqueline Bouvier, once dismissed as a social butterfly, stepped forward and held the country together. She arranged a funeral that was majestic and moved through it like a queen. She saw to every detail from the kilted Irish pipers to the eternal flame.

When it was over, she summoned the most famous political scribe of his time, Theodore H. White, and put a name on her husband's time in office, Camelot. The country has been emotionally involved with the Kennedy's ever since. They are numerous, good looking and always up to something. They have provided a pageant of smiles, tears and scandals.

When John Kennedy's single-engine plane, with him at the controls, fell off the radar at the Martha's Vineyard airport, the nation once again went to its post by the television to keep vigil with the Kennedys.

In the five days that followed, the dread and dismay were laced with indignation.

This was not supposed to happen. This was entirely gratuitous. The crown prince had been exempt from "the curse of the Kennedys"—a phrase coined by Uncle Teddy during the Chappaquiddick crisis. Had not Jackie Kennedy sequestered her children from the turbulence at the Kennedy compound in Hyannis Port, as Bobby Kennedy's fatherless sons wrestled with various demons? She took John and Caroline over the water to Martha's Vineyard.

John had not followed in his father's footsteps. He was his mother's son. She brought him up not to be a Kennedy, but to be himself. He shared her detachment about politics. When asked a while back how, in the light of his father's posthumously revealed promiscuity, Jack Kennedy would have tolerated today's fierce press scrutiny, John Kennedy said coolly he thought his father might have chosen to go into another line of work.

John Kennedy died like his father violently and too soon. His blond wife, Carolyn Bessette, and his sister-in-law Lauren Bessette died with him. At 38, he left more unfulfilled promise than performance. He was strikingly handsome and unexpectedly nice for one of his looks and station. He was courteous to all, even the paparazzi who dogged him from the age of 3 when he broke the nation's heart by saluting his father's coffin.

The tabs called him "The Hunk" and People magazine said he was "the sexiest man alive." If the grief seems disproportionate to his life, it is easily explained. He was measured by who he was, not what he did.

His mother vetoed his first choice of a career, the theater. He went into the law, but not for long. He founded a magazine he called "George." It was to be a glossy, trendy monthly that treated politics as entertainment.

He courted publicity for "George" by sometimes doing odd things: He posed nude for an illustration to accompany a critique of his Kennedy cousins' behavior. More recently, he visited Mike Tyson, the convicted rapist, in prison; he invited pornographer Larry Flynt to the White House correspondents' dinner. Like his mother, he never explained his actions. He was a free spirit. His father, despite his private excesses, was decorous in his public life, having a politician's perpetual concern about what the neighbors will think. Jack Kennedy was witty, sometimes in the mordant Irish way; his son was whimsical. Politics does not allow for whimsy.

John's love life was of aching, international interest. He courted a string of gorgeous girls and then married one. He married willowy Carolyn Bessette at a secret wedding on an island off Georgia. He was terribly proud of his coup against the press. He released one picture. It was of him kissing his bride's hand. It was drop-dead romantic.

The country spent the last weekend soaking up every detail, watching hour after hour of Jack's funeral, Bobby's funeral, touch football, prayers at Arlington. The context was pure, incredible Kennedy. The clan had gathered at Hyannis Port to celebrate the wedding of Rory Kennedy. A huge tent had been set up on Ethel's lawn. It was the one mercy of the grim weekend. The Kennedys, who derive such solace from each other, were together. The wedding was postponed. The family mourned.

Washington talked of nothing else. Arguments broke out over "the curse of the Kennedys"—was it really the rashness of its members? "Where was God in all this?" one man demanded to know at a subdued Saturday party.

All agreed on one point: It was a shame.

CALIFORNIA'S GUN CONTROL LAWS

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, earlier this week, California Governor Gray Davis signed into law two of the strictest gun control measures in the country. One of these laws is the nation's most comprehensive ban on assault weapons, and the other prohibits the purchase of more than one handgun a month.

California residents support these common sense safety measures designed to take lethal, semiautomatic weapons off the streets, and reduce illegal gun trafficking. Californians feel strongly about ending the easy accessibility of guns because of their history with gun violence over this last decade. In 1989, Americans were shocked when a madman walked into a schoolyard in Stockton, CA, with a rapid-firing AK-47 and shot off 50 rounds a minute for 2 minutes, killing 5 children and wounding 30. Californians were again struck by tragedy in a 1993 massacre at a San Francisco law firm in which 8 people died and 6 were wounded, and again in 1997, when a high profile armed bank robbery spilled out on to the streets of North Hollywood.

As always, NRA lobbyists were working to undermine the effort of the California state legislature. But because gun violence has held such a prominent and tragic place in the minds and hearts of Californians, the legislature was able to defy the NRA and pass these responsible gun control measures. So many families in California have been torn apart by gun violence, and so many people have been affected by the weak gun control laws in this nation, that the NRA failed in the California state legislature.

I hope that other states will follow the lead of the California state legislature and pass responsible gun control measures. I pray that they learn from the tragedies in California, rather than wait for a decade of tragedies to occur in their own states, before passing responsible safety measures. I also make an appeal to my Congressional colleagues to pass sensible gun control legislation now. Although in this case, the debate on gun violence has moved to the state legislature, Congress has not been absolved of its responsibility. We must end the plague of gun violence that claims so many innocent lives.

THE VERY BAD DEBT BOXSCORE

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, at the close of business yesterday, Wednesday, July 21, 1999, the Federal debt stood at $5,630,350,182,425.20 (Five trillion, six hundred thirty billion, three hundred fifty million, one hundred eighty-two thousand, four hundred twenty-five dollars and twenty cents).

One year ago, July 21, 1998, the Federal debt stood at $5,535,209,000,000 (Five trillion, five hundred thirty-five billion, two hundred nine million).

Five years ago, July 21, 1994, the Federal debt stood at $4,628,452,000,000 (Four trillion, six hundred twenty-eight billion, four hundred fifty-two million).

Ten years ago, July 21, 1989, the Federal debt stood at $2,802,628,000,000 (Two trillion, eight hundred two billion, six hundred twenty-eight million) which reflects a debt increase of almost $3 trillion—$2,827,722,182,425.20 (Two trillion, eight hundred twenty-seven billion, seven hundred twenty-two million, one hundred eighty-two thousand, four hundred twenty-five dollars and twenty cents) during the past 10 years.

OKLAHOMA CITY NATIONAL MEMORIAL INSTITUTE FOR THE PREVENTION OF TERRORISM

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, I am pleased to rise today to lend my support for the inclusion of $15,000,000 million for the Oklahoma City National Memorial Institute for the Prevention of Terrorism. This important funding brings to completion the creation of the Oklahoma City National Memorial Trust as specified by PL. 104-58.

During the 104th Congress, we created the Oklahoma City National Memorial Trust to commemorate the bombing of the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building in Oklahoma City. The Oklahoma City National Memorial will consist of three components: the actual Memorial, an interactive learning museum, and the Memorial Institute now funded in this legislation.

Fundraising for the symbolic Memorial and the Memorial Center is nearly complete and construction for the symbolic Memorial is complete. With the funding provided in this legislation, the Memorial Institute is one step closer to a reality. Already, an implementation plan for the Memorial Institute is complete and work has begun to prepare for the construction.

In preparation, the Oklahoma City National Memorial Foundation and the Oklahoma City Memorial Trust have entered into a partnership with the Oklahoma Alliance for Public Policy Research to establish an operational relationship for the Memorial Institute. The Alliance consists of all of Oklahoma's research universities (Oklahoma State, University of Oklahoma, and Tulsa University), while the University of Oklahoma Health Sciences Center will perform the administrative and functional duties as directed by the Institute's management team.

The Alliance meets the joint public-private partnership arrangement provided for in the Oklahoma City National Memorial Trust Act. This joint partnership is both prudent and necessary as Oklahoma and the nation begins to consider the broader implications of domestic terrorism.

The Memorial Institute will be the only institute of its kind in the nation dedicated to understanding, deterring, and mitigating against terrorism. Naturally, it is only fitting that such a center is located in Oklahoma given our close, personal relationship with domestic terrorism. Yet this Memorial Institute will go beyond being just another reminder of the tragic event that struck Oklahoma and the nation early in the morning of April 19, 1995.

The Memorial Institute will also provide a collaboration and exchange of knowledge between public and private, Federal and state, and military and civilian efforts to counter terrorism. Another important issue that will be researched at the Memorial Institute is how to better coordinate and integrate health care and medical efforts associated with our response to terrorism. This collaborative research on emerging counter-terrorism projects will lend key insights to ensuring that the events of April 19 never occur again.

Mr. President, I thank the Chairman, Senator GREGG, and the Ranking Member, Senator HOLLINGS, for efforts to secure this important funding for the Memorial Institute. Their efforts will long be remembered by the researchers who spend time at the Memorial Institute and the American public who stand to gain countless benefits from their research. Oklahoma and the Nation thank them.

COMMENDING A NAVAL AVIATOR

Mr. ALLARD. Mr. President, I would like to take this opportunity to commend a constituent of mine from Fort Collins, Colorado—Lieutenant Commander Carl Oesterle, an F-18 pilot on the air craft carrier U.S.S. Constellation. Colorado is a state blessed with a large number of dedicated active duty personnel and retired military, and as a member of the Armed Services Committee I like to take the opportunity to commend our personnel when they conduct themselves in a top notch manner.

I am sure that LCDR Oesterle would insist that he was doing nothing more than his duty on June 23, while participating in a night training mission in the Pacific. But his actions in salvaging his seriously disabled fighter by conducting an emergency landing on the Constellation demonstrate the excellent training and dedication of our nation's fighter pilots. The episode is outlined very well in a July 9, article in the Washington Times and I ask unanimous consent that this article be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the article was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Washington Times, July 9, 1999]

INSIDE THE RING—NAVY HEROICS

(By Bill Gertz and Rowan Scarborough)

The Navy aviation community is buzzing over the heroics of an F-18C pilot on the carrier USS Constellation, or "Connie" to her friends.

On June 23, as the pilot catapulted off the deck in the Pacific for a night mission, he experienced twin engine problems blamed on the dreaded ingestion of foreign objects, such as a metal washer or shirt button, that sometimes miss detection on deck, according to a Navy source.

The $35 million strike fighter was so crippled, aviators on the Connie thought the pilot would quickly bail out.

But instead of taking the easy way, the pilot stuck with the plane, coaxing its altitude up to 80 feet, then 150 as he jettisoned fuel.

Meanwhile, the ship's crew scurried to erect netting, called a barricade, to trap the aircraft if the pilot could achieve enough speed and altitude to manhandle it into landing position.

His first pass was high. On a second try, as tension grew and the landing signal officer barked commands via radio, the pilot hit the barricade dead center. The ship erupted in cheers.

"Everyone on the platform was hugging and almost in tears," said an officer who helped the pilot to safety. "Our prayer was definitely answered as Oyster (the pilot's nickname) popped open the canopy and hopped out of the jet."

What motivated the pilot to risk his life to save the plane?

A naval pilot in Washington offered this: "It's long been a question in flying circles on when to make the determination it's time to eject. With today's zero-defect-mentality and second-guessing. There's tremendous pressure for a guy to stay with the airplane. It's a tough call."

Cmdr. Dave Koontz, a Navy spokesman in San Diego, could not confirm that the pilot encountered double engine problems. He said one engine failed and the Navy has started an inquiry to find out why.

"You're trained to handle emergencies and there is a variety of emergencies that come up," said Cmdr. Koontz, a former helicopter pilot who served on the Constellation. "I personally think what he did was pretty heroic."

MESSAGES FROM THE HOUSE

At 3:52 p.m., a message from the House of Representatives, delivered by Mr. Berry, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House has passed the following bill, in which it requests the concurrence of the Senate:

H.R. 1995. An act to amend the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 to empower teachers, improve student achievement through high-quality professional development for teachers, reauthorize the Reading Excellence Act, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the House has passed the following bills, with amendments, in which it requests the concurrence of the Senate.

S. 880. An act to amend the Clean Air Act to remove flammable fuels from the list of substances with respect to which reporting and other activities are required under risk management plan program.

S. 900. An act to enhance competition in the financial services industry by providing a prudential framework for the affiliation of banks, securities firms, insurance companies, and other financial service providers, and for other purposes.

The message further announced that the House disagrees to the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 2465) making appropriations for military construction, family housing, and base realignment and closure for the Department of Defense for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2000, and for other purposes and agrees to the conference asked by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon; and appoints Mr. HOBSON, Mr. PORTER, Mr. WICKER, Mr. TIAHRT, Mr. WALSH, Mr. MILLER of Florida, Mr. ADERHOLT, Ms. GRANGER, Mr. YOUNG of Florida, Mr. OLVER, Mr. EDWARDS, Mr. FARR of California, Mr. BOYD, Mr. DICKS, and Mr. OBEY, as the managers of the conference on the part of the House.

The message also announced that the House disagrees to the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 2490) making appropriations for the Treasury Department, the United States Postal Service, the Executive Office of the President, and certain Independent Agencies, for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2000, and for other purposes and agrees to the conference asked by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon; and appoints Mr. KILDEE, Mr. WOLF, Mrs. NORTHUP, Mrs. EMERSON, Mr. SUNUNU, Mr. PETERSON of Pennsylvania, Mr. BLUNT, Mr. YOUNG of Florida, Mr. HOYER, Mrs. MEEK of Florida, Mr. PRICE of North Carolina, Ms. ROYBAL-ALLARD, and Mr. OBEY, as managers of the conference on the part of the House.

ENROLLED BILLS SIGNED

The message further announced that the Speaker has signed the following enrolled bills:

S. 361. An act to direct the Secretary of the Interior to transfer John R. and Margaret J. Lowe of Big Horn County, Wyoming, certain land so as to correct an error in the patent issued to the their predecessors in interest.

S. 449. An act to direct the Secretary of the Interior to transfer to the personal representative of the estate of Fred Steffens of big Horn County, Wyoming, certain land comprising the Steffens family property.

The enrolled bills were signed subsequently by the president pro tempore (Mr. THURMOND).

MEASURES REFERRED

The following bill was read the first and second times by unanimous consent and referred as indicated:

H.R. 1995. An act to amend the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 to empower teachers, improve student achievement through high-quality professional development for teachers, reauthorize the Reading Excellence Act, and for other purposes, to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor and Resources.

ENROLLED BILLS PRESENTED

The Secretary of the Senate reported that on July 22, 1999, he had presented to the President of the United States, the following enrolled bills:

S. 361. An act to direct the Secretary of the Interior to transfer to John R. and Margaret J. Lowe of Big Horn County, Wyoming, certain land so as to correct an error in the patent issued to their predecessors in interest.

S. 449. An act to direct the Secretary of the Interior to transfer to the personal representative of the estate of Fred Steffens of Big Horn County, Wyoming, certain land comprising the Steffens family property.

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES

The following reports of committees were submitted:

By Mr. LUGAR, from the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry, without amendment:

HIGHER EDUCATION REPORTING RELIEF ACT

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, today I rise to introduce The Higher Education Reporting Relief Act of 1999, which will reduce the burdensome reporting requirements placed on educational institutions by the Hope Scholarship and Lifetime Learning Tax Credits. I am pleased to be joined by my principal cosponsor, Senator DEWINE, who has been a leader on this and many other education issues, and by one colleague Senator GORDON SMITH, who shares our concern for the reporting burden we are placing on our institutions of higher education.

When Congress created the Hope Scholarship and the Lifetime Learning Tax Credits, it unfortunately imposed a burdensome and costly reporting requirement on our universities, colleges and proprietary schools. If implemented, the regulations will require schools to provide the IRS with information on their students that is difficult to obtain, including the taxpayer identification number of the individual who will actually claim the tax credit generated by the student. In many cases, this individual will not be the student but rather his or her parent or parents.

In the words of the President of the University of Maine at Farmington:

At a time when we are working to increase access and to contain college costs, new government reporting requirements are working against us. We will need to add personnel, not in support of our educational functions but to comply with new IRS regulations. This is not sensible and it is definitely not in the interests of the people we are here to serve.

I think that her words say it very well.

Already, the University of Maine System has been forced to spend $112,000 to meet the Hope Scholarship reporting requirement, and the most burdensome requirements have not yet become mandatory. In total, these reporting requirements are estimated to cost America's postsecondary educational institutions as much as $125 million. This burden does not make sense.

Last year, by passing the Collins-DeWine amendment to the Internal Revenue Service Restructuring and Reform Act, the Senate eliminated one of the most difficult reporting requirements. Our amendment freed schools from the requirement to report financial aid received by a student from a third party and held them responsible for only informing the IRS about financial aid that a school actually administered. In addition, the conference report on the act recognized the problem faced by schools and deferred the implementation of full reporting requirements until the IRS had issued final guidelines. Since the final reporting requirements have not been issued, this deferral remains in effect for tax year 1999.

The conference report further urged the IRS to modernize its computer systems to include the capacity to match a dependent student's taxpayer identification number with the return of the person claiming the student as a dependent. This is the true answer to this problem. Unfortunately, this has not yet been done. If this step is not taken, institutions of higher education will be required to provide this burdensome & costly information to the IRS—a very difficult process.

The legislation we introduce today will defer the implementation of the reporting requirements for three years—through tax year 2001. Further, it will require the IRS to upgrade its data processing systems along the lines recommended by the conference report. Today, as I mention, the IRS has not done this. The IRS will be required to make this change in time for processing tax returns for the year 2002. We have included this delay to give the IRS 2 years after it has been completed dealing with any data processing problems caused by the year 2000 problem.

The rationale for the Hope and the Lifetime Learning credits is to make postsecondary education more affordable and therefore more accessible. What Congress has given with one hand it has taken away in part with its regulatory hand. The cost of conforming to the regulatory requirements will inevitably result in increases in tuition, chipping away at the benefit of the tax credits. We need to correct this problem. The $112,000 that the University of Maine has already been forced to spend to comply with the law clearly is going to be passed on to the students in increased tuitions.

Last year, Senator DEWINE and I introduced the Higher Education Reporting Relief Act that would have completely repealed the reporting requirements imposed on educational institutions. Because of the cost of that approach, we have reworked last year's bill in a way that will accomplish its most important objectives while substantially reducing its potential costs to the Treasury. Our legislation would still leave a reporting burden on the schools but a much more modest and reasonable one that takes into account who is best equipped to report the information that the IRS needs to administer the law.

I hope our colleagues will join us in supporting the Higher Education Reporting Relief Act of 1999.

I yield the remainder of my time to Senator DEWINE.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The distinguished Senator from Ohio is recognized.

Mr. DEWINE. I am delighted to again join with my distinguished colleague from the State of Maine to try to give some relief to colleges and universities. As she has pointed out, this burden placed by Congress was unintended. I seriously doubt if anyone thought that aspect of the legislation through or fully understood what kind of costs this would impose on our colleges.

The Senator has indicated that Maine, for example, has already been hit with over $100,000 in costs. We could multiply that around the country for every university and every college. This ultimately, of course, will go where all costs go, to the students and the parents.

This is something we should deal with and we should deal with very quickly. I join this morning with my colleague from Maine to introduce the Higher Education Reporting Relief Act. As she has indicated, this is the second time she and I have introduced legislation to provide some very much needed paperwork relief for the colleges and universities of our country.

A compromise version of the legislation we introduced last year was passed by Congress as part of the IRS reform bill. Senator COLLINS and I are here today to complete that very important work and to do what has remained undone from last year.

As my colleague from Maine has indicated, what prompted the need for this legislation was the Hope scholarship and the Lifetime Learning tax credit. This legislation required colleges and universities to comply with very burdensome and costly regulations. Schools were required to issue annual reports to students and the Internal Revenue Service detailing the students' tuition payments. The IRS planned to use the reports to monitor the eligibility of students who apply for the education tax credits. These reporting requirements require colleges and universities to spend millions of dollars to implement and maintain.

The legislation Senator COLLINS and I were able to pass last year eliminated many of the most burdensome reporting requirements, yet there are burdensome requirements that still remain law. It is time, we believe, to finish the job we started last year.

Our bill will further reduce the reporting requirements by making two very commonsense changes to our Tax Code. First, the IRS will be prohibited from imposing any new reporting requirements on colleges and universities prior to the year 2002. No school of higher education should have additional IRS requirements imposed while it is still developing its reporting system.

Second, the IRS will be required to update its computer system by the end of 2002. The IRS computer system would be updated to make it capable of matching the IRS taxpayer identification number of the student with the person claiming this child as a dependent. This update would greatly reduce the reporting burden of the Hope scholarship.

After this update, when a parent uses the Hope scholarship, the IRS will be able to electronically verify that a family was qualified to use this deduction. This process will eliminate a great deal of costly and time-consuming paperwork for the colleges and universities of our Nation. This legislation brings a simple, fair, common-sense solution to the unintentional barriers created by the reporting requirements of the Hope scholarship and the Lifetime Learning tax credit. It would represent significant savings to our colleges and to our universities.

I certainly hope the Senator from Maine and I will once again be successful this year, as we were last year, in bringing relief to institutions of higher education. I invite my colleagues in the Senate to join as cosponsors.

I, once again, thank my colleague from Maine for her leadership on this legislation. She is a true leader in the area of education and has done a great deal of work in this area. This bill is one more example of her true understanding of how the real world works—what happens in our home States when Congress takes actions that, frankly, result in unintended consequences. The unintended consequences in this case are added burdens on our colleges, costs that our colleges have to bear, costs that our colleges then have to turn around and impose on parents and students.

Again, I thank my colleague from Maine for once again being a true leader in this area.

S. 1413. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to increase the deduction from the estate tax for family-owned business interest; to the Committee on Finance.

FAMILY-OWNED BUSINESS ESTATE TAX RELIEF ACT

Mr. DURBIN. Mr. President, I am pleased to be joined by Senator DORGAN today introducing legislation which would make it easier for a family to hold onto a small business or farm when the head of the family passes away. I am especially pleased to be joined by Senator DORGAN on this bill as he has been a good friend and colleague for almost two decades and a real leader on small business issues since his election to Congress in 1980.

Mr. President, ownership is a powerful force. Anyone who has gone from renting to owning a home will tell you how much more work you put in as an owner. Suddenly, problems with the plumbing or the roof that used to be the landlord's problems are now your problems. Developments in the neighborhood take on new meaning and you tend to spend more time working with neighbors to figure out ways to make your community stronger.

The trade-off for all this work is that whatever improvements we make to our homes and our communities, they're ours. And if our homes increase in value, we get to keep the difference.

The same is true for small businesses and family farms. Most people who have gone from being an employee to owning a small business or farm will tell you that they work harder as an owner, save more, and take more pride in their work. As with homeowners, small businesspeople and farmers are willing to put in the extra work it takes to run a business because they know it will come back to them in the form of more customers and higher profits. It is this industrious spirit that has defined our nation for more than two centuries and allowed us to enjoy a level of prosperity unknown in any other part of the world, in any other era of human history.

The bill we are introducing today makes a simple change in the tax code that will help families pass down the legacy of business ownership from one generation to the next.

Mr. President, the federal estate tax is one of the most controversial provisions of the tax code. Whatever the merits or shortcomings of the estate tax, I believe most of my colleagues would agree that a family should not have to sell a small business or family farm just because the head of the family passes away. Unfortunately, small business owners face a very real concern that the estate tax may force their families to do just that, particularly families whose business' principal assets consist of machinery, real estate, equipment, and inventory. Those families fortunate enough to avoid selling their business or farm are often frustrated by having to finance their estate tax burden at the expense of needed investments in the business.

Recognizing this problem, Congress worked on a bipartisan basis in 1997 to include provisions in the Taxpayer Relief Act which provide targeted assistance to estates with family-owned businesses and farms. Among its provisions, the Taxpayer Relief Act provided an immediate increase in the estate tax exemption from $600,000 to $1.3 million for estates with businesses that are kept in the family, and improved the terms for installment payments made by estates with businesses by reducing the interest rate from 4 percent to 2 percent for the first $1 million in taxable value of the business in excess of the $1.3 million exemption.

The bill that Senator DORGAN and I are introducing today builds on the 1997 Taxpayer Relief Act by simply doubling the $1.3 million exemption for family-owned businesses and farms to $2.6 million. This new level would mean that a typical business with up to 25 employees would face no estate tax liability if the business is kept in the family after the owner dies. Somewhat larger businesses would enjoy a significant reduction in their estate tax burden.

Mr. President, we should be doing what we can to promote small business and farm ownership in America. This bill does just that by simply making it easier for families to continue their tradition of small business ownership. I urge all my colleagues to join Senator DORGAN and me in supporting this legislation.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that this bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1413

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. INCREASE IN ESTATE TAX DEDUCTION FOR FAMILY-OWNED BUSINESS INTEREST.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 2057(a)(2) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (relating to maximum deduction) is amended by striking "$675,000" and inserting "$1,975,000".

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—Section 2057(a)(3)(B) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (relating to coordination with unified credit) is amended by striking "$675,000" each place it appears in the text and heading and inserting "$1,975,000".

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to estates of decedents dying after the date of the enactment of this Act.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, today I'm pleased to join Senator DURBIN in introducing estate tax relief legislation to boost immediately to $2.6 million the amount of family business assets that can be transferred to the next generation without loading up that family business with a large tax debt. I feel strongly that we must prevent our estate tax laws from hindering the transfer of family farms, ranches and other small businesses to the next generation of family members who would continue to operate them. We made some important changes to the estate tax laws in the last Congress to make it easier for children to take over a family business when a parent dies and keep the business going. But these changes did not go far enough.

Family-owned enterprises are a source of social stability and cohesion in this country. They generate jobs and wealth. Yet in far too many cases, the estate tax laws exert pressure on the children and grandchildren who inherit a modestly-sized family business to sell it, or a large part of it, to pay off those taxes. Our tax laws should encourage enterprises to stay in family ownership, with all the benefits that brings to our communities and to the nation. Yet frequently today the estate tax laws do the opposite.

Congress took some steps in a major tax bill in 1997, which I supported, to enable family farms, ranches, and other small family businesses to be passed along to the next generation without being loaded up with massive estate tax debt. The 1997 bill changes estate taxes in two basic ways. First, the legislation increased the unified estate and gift tax exemption from $600,000 to $1 million over a period of years. Second, it provided a new exemption from estate taxes for qualifying family businesses, valued up to $1.3 million, that are passed down to the children and grandchildren who will operate the farm or business. This new exclusion is the result of a bipartisan effort in Congress to encourage business enterprise that is based on the family unit.

However, Senator DURBIN and I believe that the $1.3 million family business exclusion needs to be substantially increased, and we suspect that a number of our colleagues in the Senate share this view. We are proposing such an increase today.

Our legislation is simple and straightforward. It doubles the dollar value from $1.3 million to $2.6 million of a family business that may be transferred to inheriting family members without an estate tax obligation. This will be a great help to families that want to pass along a small business, which might have been the family's major asset for decades, to the kids to operate following the death of a parent.

Estate tax relief for family businesses is not a partisan issue. It is important for the survival of our nation's family businesses, and it should be a priority for any tax cuts that Congress enacts.

This is not however a proposal to reduce estate taxes for every rich person in America. We see no need to enact a big new benefit for the nation's trust fund babies. It should go to where the need is greatest, and where the economic and social benefits will be greatest as well. That means small family businesses.

In the end, we hope that some additional estate tax relief will be enacted to sustain family-owned businesses and farms, which make up the backbone of our economy. We believe that our approach takes a large step in that direction. We urge our colleagues to cosponsor this much-needed legislation.

By Mr. MACK:

S. 1414. A bill to amend title XVIII of the Social Security Act to restore access to home health services covered under the Medicare Program, and to protect the Medicare Program from financial loss while preserving the due process rights of home health agencies to the Committee on Finance.

MEDICARE HOME HEALTH BENEFICIARY EQUITY AND PAYMENT SIMPLIFICATION ACT OF 1999

Mr. MACK. Mr. President today I am pleased to join my colleague, Mr. BREAUX, in sponsoring The Medicare Home Health Beneficiary Equity and Payment Simplification Act of 1999.

This legislation sets forth a fully developed prospective payment system for Medicare home health benefits that can be implemented easily using currently available data and can be accurately monitored to prevent fraud and abuse. Most importantly, the bill restores access to covered services for the sickest, most frail Medicare beneficiaries while providing incentives for efficient treatment of all patients regardless of the acuity of their medical condition.

The bill provides for a simple four-category prospective payment system for home health services (similar to the four-category system which has been in place for hospice services since 1983) which is based on data from a 1997 study conducted by the Kaiser Family Foundation on characteristics of Medicare patients in need of covered home health services. The Kaiser Foundation study found that Medicare patients in need of home health services historically have fallen into one of the following categories:

1. Post-hospital, short stay beneficiaries
2. Medically stable, long-stay beneficiaries
3. Medically complex, long-stay beneficiaries
4. Medically unstable and complex, extremely high use beneficiaries

Beneficiaries who meet all eligibility and coverage requirements for Medicare will be assigned to the appropriate category by a physician who does not have a prohibited relationship with the home health agency as defined in the "Stark II" law. Beneficiaries who do not clearly fit in one of the four categories will be placed in the first, lowest rate category.

Payment rates for each of the categories is the average cost of treating patients in that category in 1994 as determined by the Kaiser Foundation study. Those rates are adjusted for wage variations in different parts of the country and updated by the home health market basket for each fiscal year. The Secretary of HHS is given the authority to provide additional payments to certain agencies that have higher costs due to reasons beyond their control.

The bill would eliminate the 15% cut in Medicare home health reimbursement which is scheduled to go into effect on October 1, 2000. The bill would also simplify the reimbursement system by making payments based on the location of the agency rather than the residence of the patient. The bill is intended to provide a "fail safe" prospective payment mechanism in the event that HCFA falls behind in its schedule to implement a prospective payment system by October 1, 2000 that can be administered efficiently and monitored effectively.

I urge my colleagues to join us in cosponsoring this important piece of legislation.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a copy of the legislation be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1414

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Medicare Home Health Beneficiary Equity and Payment Simplification Act of 1999".

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

Congress finds the following:

(1) Research has shown that medicare beneficiaries who are in need of home health services that are covered under the medicare program generally fall into 1 of the 4 following categories:

- (A) Post-hospital, short-stay beneficiaries.
- (B) Medically stable, long-stay beneficiaries.
- (C) Medically complex, long-stay beneficiaries.
- (D) Medically unstable and complex, extremely high-use beneficiaries.

(2) The interim payment system for home health services under the medicare program, enacted as part of the Balanced Budget Act of 1997 and amended by title V of the Tax and Trade Relief Extension Act of 1998 (contained in Division J of Public Law 105-277), is having the following unintended consequences:

- (A) The sickest, most frail medicare beneficiaries are losing access to medically necessary home health services that are otherwise covered under the medicare program.
- (B) Many high quality, cost-effective home health agencies have had per beneficiary limits under the interim payment system set so low that such agencies are finding it impossible to continue to provide home health services under the medicare program.
- (C) Many home health agencies are being subjected to aggregate per beneficiary limits under the interim payment system that do not accurately reflect the current patient mix of such agencies, thereby making it impossible for such agencies to compete with similarly situated home health agencies.

(D) Medicare beneficiaries that reside in certain States and regions of the country have far less access to home health services under the medicare program than individuals who have identical medical conditions but reside in other States or regions of the country.

(E) The health status of home health beneficiaries varies significantly in different regions of the country, creating differing needs for home health services.

SEC. 3. PAYMENTS TO HOME HEALTH AGENCIES UNDER MEDICARE.

(a) REVISION OF PROSPECTIVE PAYMENT SYSTEM.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Section 1895 of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395fff) (as amended by section 5101 of the Tax and Trade Relief Extension Act of 1998 (contained in Division J of Public Law 105-277)) is amended—

(A) in subsection (a), by striking "for portions of cost reporting periods occurring on or after October 1, 2000" and inserting "for cost reporting periods beginning on or after October 1, 1999"; and

(B) in subsection (b), by striking the last sentence of paragraph (1) and all that follows and inserting the following:

"(2) PAYMENT BASIS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The prospective payment amount to be paid to a home health agency under this section for all of the home health services (including medical supplies) provided to a beneficiary under this title during the 12-month period beginning on the date that such services are first provided by such agency to such beneficiary pursuant to a plan for furnishing such services (and for each subsequent 12-month period that services are provided under such plan) shall be an amount equal to the applicable amount specified in subparagraph (B) for the fiscal year in which the 12-month period begins.

"(B) APPLICABLE AMOUNT.—Subject to subparagraphs (C), (D), and (E) and paragraph (5), for purposes of this subsection, the applicable amount is equal to—

"(i) $2,603 for a beneficiary described in subparagraphs (A) and (E) of paragraph (3);

"(ii) $3,335 for a beneficiary described in paragraph (3)(B);

"(iii) $4,228 for a beneficiary described in paragraph (3)(C); and

"(iv) $21,864 for a beneficiary described in paragraph (3)(D).

"(C) ANNUAL UPDATE.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—The applicable amount specified in subparagraph (B) shall be adjusted for each fiscal year (beginning with fiscal year 2001) in a prospective manner specified by the Secretary by the home health market basket percentage increase applicable to the fiscal year involved.

"(ii) HOME HEALTH MARKET BASKET PERCENTAGE INCREASE.—For purposes of clause (i), the term 'home health market basket percentage increase' means, with respect to a fiscal year, a percentage (estimated by the Secretary before the beginning of the fiscal year) determined and applied with respect to the mix of goods and services included in home health services in the same manner as the market basket percentage increase under section 1886(b)(3)(B)(iii) is determined and applied to the mix of goods and services comprising inpatient hospital services for the fiscal year.

"(D) AREA WAGE ADJUSTMENT.—

"(i) IN GENERAL.—The portion of the applicable amount specified in subparagraph (B) (as updated under subparagraph (C)) that the Secretary estimates to be attributable to wages and wage-related costs shall be adjusted for geographic differences in such costs by an area wage adjustment factor for the area in which the home health agency is located.

"(ii) ESTABLISHMENT OF AREA WAGE ADJUSTMENT FACTORS.—The Secretary shall establish area wage adjustment factors that reflect the relative level of wages and wage-related costs applicable to the furnishing of home health services in a geographic area compared to the national average applicable level. Such factors may be the factors used by the Secretary for purposes of section 1886(d)(3)(E).

"(E) MEDICAL SUPPLIES.—The applicable amount specified in subparagraph (B) shall be adjusted for each fiscal year (beginning with fiscal year 2001) in a prospective manner specified by the Secretary by the percentage increase (as determined by the Secretary) in the average costs of medical supplies (as described in section 1861(m)(5)) for the fiscal year involved.

"(3) DESCRIPTION OF BENEFICIARIES.—

"(A) POST-HOSPITAL, SHORT-STAY BENEFICIARY.—A beneficiary described in this subparagraph is a beneficiary under this title who—

"(i) has experienced at least one 24-hour hospitalization within the 14-day period immediately preceding the date that the beneficiary is first provided services by the home health agency;

"(ii) suffers from 1 or more illnesses or injuries which are post-operative or post-trauma; and

"(iii) has a prognosis of a prompt and substantial recovery.

"(B) MEDICALLY STABLE, LONG-STAY BENEFICIARY.—A beneficiary described in this subparagraph is a beneficiary under this title who—

"(i) has not been admitted to a hospital within the 6-month period immediately preceding the date that the beneficiary is first provided services by the home health agency;

"(ii) suffers from 1 or more illnesses or injuries requiring acute medical treatment or management in the home; and

"(iii) is experiencing 1 or more impairments in activities of daily living.

"(C) MEDICALLY COMPLEX, LONG-STAY BENEFICIARY.—A beneficiary described in this subparagraph is a beneficiary under this title who—

"(i) has experienced 2 or more hospitalizations or admissions to skilled nursing facilities within the 12-month period immediately preceding the date that the beneficiary is first provided services by the home health agency;

"(ii) suffers from 1 or more illnesses or injuries requiring acute medical treatment or management in the home; and

"(iii) is experiencing 1 or more impairments in activities of daily living.

"(D) MEDICALLY UNSTABLE AND COMPLEX, EXTREMELY HIGH-USE BENEFICIARIES.—A beneficiary described in this subparagraph is a beneficiary under this title who—

"(i) has experienced 2 or more hospitalizations or admissions to skilled nursing facilities within the 6-month period immediately preceding the date that the beneficiary is first provided services by the home health agency;

"(ii) suffers from 1 or more illnesses or injuries requiring acute medical treatment or management in the home; and

"(iii) is experiencing 2 or more impairments in activities of daily living.

"(E) OTHER BENEFICIARIES.—A beneficiary described in this subparagraph is a beneficiary under this title who is not otherwise described in subparagraphs (A) through (D).

"(4) DETERMINATION.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The determination of which of the subparagraphs under paragraph (3) applies to a beneficiary under this title shall be based on the diagnosis and assessment of a physician who shall have no financial relationship with the home health agency that is receiving payments under this title for the provision of home health services to such beneficiary. For purposes of the preceding sentence, any financial relationship shall be determined under rules similar to the rules with respect to referrals under section 1877.

"(B) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary shall issue regulations to assist physicians in making the determination described in subparagraph (A).

"(5) ADDITIONAL PAYMENT AMOUNT.—The Secretary may increase the applicable amount specified in paragraph (2)(B) to be paid to a home health agency if the Secretary determines that such agency is—

"(A) experiencing higher than average costs for providing home health services as compared to other similarly situated home health agencies; or

"(B) providing home health services that are not reflected in the determination of the applicable amount.

"(6) NOTICE OF PROSPECTIVE PAYMENT RATE.—Not later than July 1 of each year (beginning in 2000), the Secretary shall publish in the Federal Register the applicable amount to be paid to home health agencies for home health services provided to a beneficiary under this title during the fiscal year beginning October 1 of the year.

"(7) PRORATION OF PROSPECTIVE PAYMENT AMOUNTS.—If a beneficiary elects to transfer to, or receive services from, another home health agency within the period covered by the prospective payment amount, the payment shall be prorated between the home health agencies involved."

(2) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—Section 1895 of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395fff) (as amended by section 5101 of the Tax and Trade Relief Extension Act of 1998 (contained in Division J of Public Law 105-277)) is amended—

(A) by amending subsection (c) to read as follows:

"(c) REQUIREMENT FOR PAYMENT INFORMATION.—With respect to home health services furnished on or after October 1, 1998, no claim for such a service may be paid under this title unless the claim has the unique identifier (provided under section 1842(r) for the physician who prescribed the services or made the certification described in section 1814(a)(2) or 1835(a)(2)(A)."; and

(B) by striking subsection (d).

(3) CHANGE IN EFFECTIVE DATE.—Section 4603(d) of the Balanced Budget Act of 1997 (42 U.S.C. 1395fff note) (as amended by section 5101(c)(2) of the Tax and Trade Relief Extension Act of 1998 (contained in Division J of Public Law 105-277)) is amended by striking "October 1, 2000" and inserting "October 1, 1999".

(4) ELIMINATION OF CONTINGENCY 15 PERCENT REDUCTION.—Subsection (e) of section 4603 of the Balanced Budget Act of 1997 (42 U.S.C. 1395fff note) is repealed.

(5) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this subsection shall take effect on the date of enactment of this Act.

(b) PAYMENT RATES BASED ON LOCATION OF HOME HEALTH AGENCY RATHER THAN PATIENT.—

(1) CONDITIONS OF PARTICIPATION.—Section 1891 of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395bbb) is amended by striking subsection (g).

(2) WAGE ADJUSTMENT.—Section 1861(v)(1)(L)(iii) (42 U.S.C. 1395x(v)(1)(L)(iii)) is amended by striking "service is furnished" and inserting "agency is located".

(3) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this subsection shall apply to services provided on or after October 1, 1999.

By Mr. HATCH:

S. 1415. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to provide for S corporation reform, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, today I am introducing legislation that would provide critical and direct improvements to the competitiveness of the over 2.1 million S corporations nationwide. The vast majority of S corporations operate as small businesses. By 1995, they comprised 48 percent of all corporations. In my home state of Utah, S corporations make up half of the 21,600 corporations in the state.

Despite the reforms that were enacted in 1996 and in previous years, the tax laws that currently govern S corporations remain too restrictive, complex, and burdensome, particularly in comparison with the laws that are imposed on other entities. As a result, Mr. President, many of these small businesses are unable to attract sufficient capital and to grow to their full potential.

For example, the inability to issue preferred stock denies S corporations access to badly needed senior equity. Capital is also eliminated by a requirement that prevents straight debt from being converted into stock. Substantial reforms need to be enacted to ensure better competition for small businesses in today's increasingly sophisticated and global economy.

Mr. President, the current law is threatening the multi-generational family business in our country. Law allows only for 75 shareholders under an S corporation, and each member of a family is currently treated as a single, distinct shareholder. In addition, nonresident aliens are not allowed as shareholders. This ban on nonresident alien shareholders is an outmoded restriction dating back to the creation of Subchapter S. Since that time, partnerships have been allowed to involve nonresidential aliens. And, as the economy becomes more global, S corporations will be at a disadvantage relative to the more flexible partnerships. Mr. President, this bill would eliminate these outdated provisions and allow for all family members to be counted as one shareholder for purposes of S corporation eligibility, as well as permitting nonresident aliens to be shareholders.

Mr. President, I urge my colleagues to review and support the Subchapter S Revision Act. This legislation will help American families pass their businesses from one generation to the next and to create a level playing field for small business. We should not allow the more than 10,000 S corporations in my home state, as well as the many others across the country, to be subject to rules and regulations that limit their competitiveness. I am looking forward to working with my fellow members of the Finance Committee in enacting this bill.

I ask that a description of the bill's provisions be included in the RECORD.

The description follows:

TITLE 1—SUBCHAPTER S EXPANSION

SUBTITLE A—ELIGIBLE SHAREHOLDERS OF AN S CORPORATION

Sec. 101. Members of a family treated as one shareholder—All family members within seven generations who own stock could elect to be treated as one shareholder. The election would be made available to only one family per corporation, must be made with the consent of all shareholders of the corporation and would remain in effect until terminated. This provision is intended to keep S corporations within families that might span several generations.

Sec. 102. Nonresident Aliens—This section would provide the opportunity for aliens to invest in domestic S corporations and S corporations to operate abroad with a foreign shareholder by allowing nonresident aliens to own S corporation stock.

SUBTITLE B—QUALIFICATIONS AND ELIGIBILITY REQUIREMENTS OF S CORPORATIONS

Sec. 111. Issuance of preferred stock permitted—An S corporation would be allowed to issue either convertible or plain vanilla preferred stock. Holders of preferred stock would not be treated as shareholders; thus, ineligible shareholders like corporations or partnerships could own preferred stock interests in S corporations. Subchapter S corporations would receive the same recapitalization treatment as family-owned C corporations. This provision would afford S corporations and their shareholders badly needed access to senior equity.

Sec. 112. Safe harbor expanded to include convertible debt—An S corporation is not considered to have more than one class of stock if outstanding debt obligations to shareholders meet the "straight debt" safe harbor. Currently, the safe harbor provides that straight debt cannot be convertible into stock. The legislation would permit a convertibility provision so long as that provision is substantially the same as one that could have been obtained by a person not related to the S corporation or S corporation shareholders.

Sec. 113. Repeal of excessive passive investment income as a termination event: This provision would repeal the current rule that terminates S corporation status for certain corporations that have both Subchapter C earnings and profits and that derive more than 25 percent of their gross receipts from passive sources for three consecutive years.

Sec. 114. Repeal passive income capital gain category—The legislation would retain the rule that imposes a tax on those corporations possessing excess net passive investment income, but, to conform to the general treatment of capital gains, it would exclude capital gains from classification as passive income. Thus, such capital gains would be subject to a maximum 20 percent rate at the shareholder level in keeping with the 1997 tax law change. Excluding capital gains also parallels their treatment under the PHC rules.

Sec. 115. Allowance of charitable contributions of inventory and scientific property—This provision would allow the same deduction for charitable contributions of inventory and scientific property used to care for the ill, needy, or infants for Subchapter S as for Subchapter C corporations. In addition, S corporations would no longer be disqualified from making "qualified research contributions" (charitable contributions of inventory property to educational institutions or scientific research organizations) for use in research or experimentation.

Sec. 116. C corporation rules to apply for fringe benefit purposes—The current rule that limits the ability of "more-than-two-percent" S corporation shareholder-employees to exclude certain fringe benefits from wages would be repealed for benefits other than health insurance.

SUBTITLE C—TAXATION OF S CORPORATION SHAREHOLDERS

Sec. 120. Treatment of losses to shareholders—A loss recognized by a shareholder in complete liquidation of an S corporation would be treated as an ordinary loss to the extent the shareholder's adjusted basis in the S corporation stock is attributable to ordinary income that was recognized as a result of the liquidation. Suspended passive activity losses from C corporation years would be allowed as deductions when and to the extent they would be allowed to C corporations.

SUBTITLE D—EFFECTIVE DATE

Sec. 130. Effective Date—Except as otherwise provided, the amendments made by this legislation shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1999.●

By Mr. FEINGOLD (for himself and Mr. KOHL):

S. 1416. A bill to amend the Agricultural Marketing Agreement of 1937 to allow a modified bloc voting by cooperative associations of milk producers in connection with the scheduled August referendum on Federal Milk Marketing Order reform; to the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry.

DEMOCRACY FOR DAIRY PRODUCERS ACT OF 1999

● Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I rise to introduce a measure that will begin to restore to many dairy farmers throughout the nation, part of the market power they have lost in recent years.

Mr. President, on March 31 of this year, Secretary Glickman put forth the Department of Agriculture's final rule on the Federal Milk Marketing Order system. As many of you know, that proposal consolidated federal orders and made changes to various pricing formulas in current law.

As mandated in last year's Omnibus Appropriations bill, this new federal policy is scheduled to take effect no later than October 1, 1999. However, prior to October, this nation's farmers will put USDA's proposal to a referendum. Farmers will have the opportunity to vote on their futures. Or at least that is what is supposed to happen.

Mr. President, most farmers in the country won't actually get to vote on this, the most significant change in dairy policy in sixty years. Their dairy marketing cooperatives will cast their votes for them.

This procedure is called bloc voting and it is used all the time. Basically, a Cooperative's Board of Directors decides that, in the interest of time, bloc voting will be implemented for that particular vote. In the interest of time, but not always in the interest of their producer owner-members.

Mr. President, I do think that bloc voting can be a useful tool in some circumstances, but I have serious concerns about its use in the August referendum on USDA's plan. Farmers in Wisconsin and in other states tell me that they do not agree with their Cooperative's view on the upcoming vote.

Yet, they have no way to preserve their right to make their single vote count.

After speaking to farmers and officials at USDA, I have learned that if a Cooperative bloc votes, individual members simply have no opportunity to voice opinions separately. That seems unfair when you consider what a monumental issue is at stake. Coops and their members do not always have identical interests. We shouldn't ask farmers to ignore that fact.

Mr. President, the Democracy for Dairy Producers Act of 1999 is simple and fair. It provides that a cooperative cannot deny any of its members a ballot if one or two or ten or all of the members chose to vote on their own.

This will in no way slow down the process at USDA; implementation of the final rule will proceed on schedule. Also, I do not expect that this would change the final outcome of the vote. Coops could still cast votes for their members who do not exercise their right to vote individually. And to the extent that coops represent farmers interested, farmers are likely to vote along with the coops, but whether they join the coops or not, farmers deserve the right to vote according to their own views.

I urge my colleagues to return just a little bit of power to America's farmers, and a little bit of pure democracy to the vote on the USDA plan which is sure to have such an impact on their future.

I urge my colleagues to support the Democracy for Dairy Producers Act, a dairy bill without regional bias.●

By Mr. GRASSLEY (for himself and Mr. BREAUX):

S. 1417. A bill to amend title XIX of the Social Security Act to extend the authority of State Medicaid fraud control units to investigate and prosecute fraud in connection with Federal health care programs and abuse of residents of board and care facilities; to the Committee on Finance.

HEALTH CARE FRAUD CONTROL ACT OF 1999

Mr. GRASSLEY. Mr. President, I am joined today by Senator BREAUX in introducing the Health Care Fraud Control Act of 1999. This bill is an effective, efficient and economical way to fight fraud, waste and abuse in publicly funded health care programs. It takes a system that is successful in combating Medicaid fraud and expands its authority to pursue investigations in other federal programs when investigators uncover or suspect fraudulent or abusive activities. This bill is common sense.

State Medicaid Fraud Control Units have long been at the forefront of health care fraud enforcement. The Health Care Fraud Control Act would give these units the authority needed to investigate other fraud and abuse cases, including Medicare cases, at the same time as Medicaid cases. This bill, which will be introduced by Rep. RICK LAZIO (R-N.Y.) in the House, would streamline the enforcement process for anti-fraud agents, cutting down on bureaucracy and allowing investigators to pursue anti-fraud cases more efficiently. This bill is an important weapon in the war against health care fraud in the Medicaid and Medicare programs.

The streamlined effort would be especially effective in fighting nursing home fraud and neglect. Many times seniors are eligible for both Medicare and Medicaid payments. Combined, these two programs cover the bulk of the cost of nursing home care in our country. When a nursing home receives both Medicare and Medicaid payments, the potential for fraud is much too high. As the law stands, even if a fraud control unit establishes a strong case showing Medicaid fraud and uncovers Medicare fraud at the same time, it must wait while various federal agencies investigate the Medicare side before the case can be prosecuted.

Any effort to combat fraud is critical. Medicaid's annual budget is $178 billion, and fraud cases can involve significant amounts of money. Meanwhile, improper payments through Medicare were $12.6 billion in Fiscal Year 1998.

Expanding the Medicaid anti-fraud units' jurisdiction will help us erode health care fraud. With billions of tax dollars wasted each year, we need every weapon we can find in the anti-fraud arsenal. We can't afford to waste a single health care dollar.

By Mr. MCCAIN:

S. 1419. A bill to amend title 36, United States Code, to designate May as "National Military Appreciation Month"; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

NATIONAL MILITARY APPRECIATION MONTH

Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce a bill to designate the month of May National Military Appreciation Month. As my colleagues may recall, I had sponsored a resolution earlier in the year, cosponsored by 61 Senators, designating May 1999 as National Military Appreciation Month. That resolution, S. Res. 33, passed by a vote of 93-0 on April 30. The new bill will make that designation permanent.

The introduction of an All-Volunteer Army was an outgrowth of the disenchantment many Americans felt in the wake of the Vietnam War. The end of conscription and the transition to the All-Volunteer concept has been criticized by some for not adequately reflecting socioeconomic divisions within our country. In point of fact, however, with the requisite attention and care, it produced the finest armed forces in history. How far we had come since the tumultuous times of the 1970s when military readiness descended to abysmal levels was evident for all the world to see in the overwhelming victory over Iraqi forces during Operation Desert Storm. But that success has been taken for granted too long. Over 15 years of declining military budgets, combined with record high levels of deployments, have stretched the military to precarious levels.

The end of conscription had another, more far-reaching and subtle implication: it diminished the percentage of the public, including its elected officials, with military experience. This is not a criticism of those who did not serve; on the contrary, as a strong supporter of the All-Volunteer Army, I remain committed to its survival and success. This gradual diminishment in the shared experience of having served in uniform, however, makes it increasingly important that the public reflect every year on the enormous role their armed forces have on preserving freedom.

As thousands of American soldiers move into position in Kosovo, while others continue to serve in Bosnia as well as on the demilitarized zone in Korea and around the world, it is imperative that our men and women in uniform know of the strong continuing support of their country for their dedication and service to this country. Whether we individually agree with each and every deployment or not, we have learned to separate our support every deployment or not, we have learned to separate our support for the armed forces from our differences over the policies that sent them into harm's way. Dedicating one month every year to express our appreciation for the armed forces, the same month in which we recognize Victory in Europe Day, Military Spouse Day, Armed Forces Day, and, most importantly, Memorial Day, is an appropriate measure that I hope will have the support of all my colleagues in Congress.

Mr. President, I generally take a somewhat dim view of celebratory resolutions. But those who fought on the battlefields of Lexington, Gettysburg, Normandy, in the Ardennes and on Okinawa, in Hue and at Khe Sanh, in the deserts of the Persian Gulf and the dusty streets of Mogadish, in the skies over Kosovo and who stand a lonely vigil on the DMZ, must not be forgotten. Too much blood has been spilled in defense of liberty. We owe to those who perished and those who survived, to devote one month out of the year to reflect on the sacrifices of those who have worn their nation's uniform throughout its history.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the bill, the attached correspondence in support of S. Res. 33 from the Secretary of the Air Force and Air Force Chief of Staff, as well as a letter from retired General Gordon Sullivan, president of the Association of the United States Army, be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1419

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. NATIONAL MILITARY APPRECIATION MONTH.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress makes the following findings:

(1) The freedom and security that citizens of the United States enjoy today are direct results of the vigilance of the United States Armed Forces.

(2) Recognizing contributions made by members of the United States Armed Forces will increase national awareness of the sacrifices that such members have made to preserve the freedoms and liberties that enrich this Nation.

(3) It is important to preserve and foster admiration and respect for the service provided by members of the United States Armed Forces.

(4) It is vital for youth in the United States to understand that the service provided by members of the United States Armed Forces has secured and protected the freedoms that United States citizens enjoy today.

(5) Recognizing the unfailing support that families of members of the United States Armed Forces have provided to such members during their service and how such support strengthens the vitality of our Nation is important.

(6) Recognizing the role that the United States Armed Forces plays in maintaining the superiority of the United States as a nation and in contributing to world peace will increase awareness of all contributions made by such Forces.

(7) It is appropriate to recognize the importance of maintaining a strong, equipped, well-educated, well-trained military for the United States to safeguard freedoms, humanitarianism, and peacekeeping efforts around the world.

(8) It is proper to foster and cultivate the honor and pride that citizens of the United States feel towards members of the United States Armed Forces for the protection and service that such members provide.

(9) Recognizing the many sacrifices made by members of the United States Armed Forces is important.

(10) It is proper to recognize and honor the dedication and commitment of members of the United States Armed Forces, and to show appreciation for all contributions made by such members since the inception of such Forces.

(b) NATIONAL MILITARY APPRECIATION MONTH.—Chapter 1 of part A of subtitle I of title 36, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

“§ 144. National Military Appreciation Month.

“The President shall issue each year a proclamation—

“(1) designating May as ‘National Military Appreciation Month’; and

“(2) calling on the people of the United States to honor the dedicated service provided by the members of the United States Armed Forces and to observe the month with appropriate ceremonies and activities.”

(c) TABLE OF CONTENTS.—The table of contents in chapter 1 of part A of subtitle I of title 36, United States Code, is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 143 the following new item:

“144. National Military Appreciation Month.”

ASSOCIATION OF THE U.S. ARMY,

Arlington, VA, April 2, 1999.

Hon. JOHN MCCAIN,
U.S. Senate,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR MCCAIN: On behalf of the 100,000 members of the Association of the United States Army, I applaud your introduction of Senate Resolution 33, which would designate May, 1999, as National Military Appreciation Month.

AUSA agrees that Americans should reflect more often on the sacrifices of our military personnel throughout history. Designating a month in which we observe Victory in Europe Day, Armed Forces Week, Military Spouse Day, and Memorial Day, is particularly fitting.

AUSA supports your efforts and recommends that the resolution be amended to make the observance of National Military Appreciation Month an annual event.

Sincerely,

GORDON R. SULLIVAN,
General, USA Retired.

DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE,
SECRETARY OF THE AIR FORCE,
Washington, DC, May 6, 1999.

Hon. JOHN MCCAIN,
U.S. Senate,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR MCCAIN: On behalf of the men and women of the United States Air Force, we thank you and the Senate for designating May 1999 as National Military Appreciation Month. As you well know, our airmen are not only engaged in the Balkan operations, but all around the world, with over 100,000 people either forward stationed or deployed. We are proud of the personal sacrifice and tremendous service they give our great nation, and it is heartwarming to see the Senate recognize their efforts. Thank you for your gracious show of support.

MICHAEL E. RYAN,
General, USAF, Chief of Staff.

F. WHITTEN PETERS,
Acting Secretary of the Air Force.

By Mr. KERRY (for himself, Mr. HOLLINGS, Mr. BREAUX, Mr. INOUE, Mrs. BOXER, Mrs. FEINSTEIN, and Mr. KENNEDY):

S. 1420. A bill to establish a fund for the restoration and protection of ocean and coastal resources, to amend and reauthorize the Coastal Zone Management Act of 1972, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

COASTAL STEWARDSHIP ACT

Mr. KERRY. Mr. President, I will shortly be sending to the desk for appropriate referral the Coastal Stewardship Act which I am introducing today, along with Senators HOLLINGS, BREAUX, INOUE, BOXER, FEINSTEIN and KENNEDY. The goal of the Coastal Stewardship Act is to significantly strengthen our national commitment to and capacity to protect the coastal communities and all of our coastal and ocean environment.

Our coasts—I know the Chair knows this because he represents a State that has enormous fishing interests—our coasts and our oceans are increasingly fragile environments, and they are increasingly threatened. Their health depends on a very complex chain of ecosystems that includes rainwater runoff from inland, estuaries, wetlands, flood plains, tidal basins, coral reefs, our fisheries and the whole deal more. Damage to any one of those ecosystems can wind up degrading and damaging the others, and they can cause severe cultural and economic impact for all of our coastal communities.

Moreover, as our coastal population grows and as coastal development increases, as it has been almost every year for the last 50 years, we are placing more and more stress on these fragile and increasingly unique and interconnecting ecosystems.

Since 1960, the coastal population in the United States has increased by over 50 percent, and that trend is expected to continue. Indeed, it is predicted that over the course of the next 10 years or so, well over 75 percent of the American population will live within 50 miles of coastline of one kind or another. In the next decade alone, an additional 14 million Americans are expected to settle in coastal areas.

The impact is very clear. On the Atlantic coast, we have had toxic outbreaks of pfisteria. In the Gulf of Mexico, we have a dead zone that has formed that harms shrimp stocks and kills off other species. Our Nation has lost more than 89 million acres of coastal wetlands, and our commercial fisheries are depleted from a combination of mismanagement and also ecosystem impacts. Parts of the Great Lakes have suffered from nutrient enrichment which is destructive to those ecosystems. Finally, even urban areas along our coasts face a unique challenge as they work to clean up polluted industrial sites and bring their waterfronts back to life.

The Coastal Stewardship Act creates the Ocean and Coast Conservation Fund to receive permanent funding from Federal oil and gas leasing on the Outer Continental Shelf. The fund would accrue 10 percent, or a minimum of $250 million of OCS revenues each year.

The CSA uses funds from the Ocean and Coast Conservation Fund and general revenues to support the restoration and preservation of our coastal and marine resources. The specific investments include the following:

First, the CSA provides increased support to the Coastal Zone Management Act. The CZMA is a highly flexible program that allows States to prioritize, design, and implement management plans, meeting broad national objectives for coastal environmental protection and economic development.

Second, the CSA establishes a new highly flexible program within the Department of Commerce to fund coastal habitat, restoration, and preservation projects. With these block grants for conservation, States set priorities and decide how and when projects proceed within broad national goals.

Third, it enhances the Federal commitment to the National Marine Sanctuary Program, a very successful program that designates unique ocean habitat for protection and research. Our 12 national marine sanctuaries restore and rebuild marine habitats to their natural condition and monitor and maintain already healthy areas.

Four, the CSA creates a coral reef restoration and conservation program at the Department of Commerce. The legislation recognizes the importance of maintaining the health and stability of coral reefs for their environmental and economic value, and it builds on the work of the U.S. Coral Reef Task Force.

Five, one of the most difficult challenges to overcome in developing sound policy for U.S. fisheries has been the lack of high-quality information. The CSA establishes a comprehensive program to improve the quality and quantity of fisheries information available to evaluate stock status, design control measures, and monitor effectiveness of those control measures.

Six, the CSA increases Federal support of State and local enforcement by expanding existing cooperative enforcement agreements. These joint ventures allow States and local governments to tailor enforcement procedures to fit the local needs and available resources, and also allow for collaboration between State and local enforcement agencies and Federal agencies.

I will close my comments, Mr. President, by saying to my colleagues that some have expressed concern that somehow this broader effort might have an impact on reauthorization of coastal zone management and national marine sanctuaries, et cetera.

I assure my colleagues this legislation is in addition to and supportive of and supplementary to each of those other efforts which I have personally had the privilege of leading in the past years when I was chairman of the committee. We have reauthorized those in past years, and always we have found that a comprehensive approach has been a far more effective and a, frankly, far more needed approach. But nothing will stand in the way, I am confident, of our efforts to cooperate on each and every one of those efforts.

We need to better meet the needs of our coastal communities, and it is absolutely essential that we look in this country at this issue, not as individual pieces that come at us one by one, but as the sum total of the parts they represent. We need a national policy to reflect that sum total.

I say to Senator BOXER and Senator LANDRIEU, who have legislation of their own regarding the Outer Continental Shelf, that I am proud to be an original cosponsor of Senator BOXER's Resources 2000 effort, and I look forward to working with them to try to address all the concerns we share regarding these issues.

Finally, I am very pleased my colleagues on the Commerce Committee have joined in this. As the Senate knows, the Commerce Committee has primary jurisdiction over our Nation's major coastal programs, and Senators HOLLINGS, BREAUX, INOUE, and others bring very valuable experience to these issues. I am pleased to include their efforts in this legislation.

S. 1422. A bill to amend the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 to improve the quality of education and raise student achievement by strengthening accountability, raising standards for teachers, rewarding success, and providing better information to parents; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.

SCHOOL QUALITY COUNTS ACT

By Mr. SCHUMER:

S. 1423. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to exclude from income $40,000 of the salary of certain teachers who teach high-poverty schools; to the Committee on Finance.

TEACHER TAX RELIEF ACT OF 1999

Mr. SCHUMER. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce the School Quality Counts Act and the Teacher Tax Relief Act of 1999. Mr. President, the National Center for Education Statistics estimates that our nation will require two million teachers over the next decade. In New York State this problem is particularly acute: 40,000 new teachers will be needed over the next four years. In New York City, where there are 10,000 emergency-certified teachers overwhelmingly concentrated in the highest poverty schools, there is virtually no incentive for qualified professionals to teach at the highest poverty schools and as a result there exists an uneven distribution of well trained teachers.

Across the nation, many school districts are experiencing both geographic and subject area teacher shortages. In many instances, school districts with lower tax bases are forced to compete with districts that can afford to pay their teachers higher salaries thus creating a drain on the pool of experienced and qualified teachers in lower income school districts. Attracting and retaining well-qualified teachers, and compensating them appropriately, is critical to raising student achievement.

Mr. President, the School Quality Counts Act deals directly with the teacher quality issue in three ways: First, the bill strengthens state and local accountability for student results by requiring that school districts take specific steps to improve teacher quality within two years of the bill's enactment; second, the legislation would empower parents and taxpayers by providing information on student and school performance through the issuance of school report cards; third, the bill would provide "achievement awards" to those schools that demonstrate continuous student improvement.

In addition to these steps, Mr. President, one of the most concrete and important steps we can take now is to create real financial incentives for qualified individuals to teach in high-poverty schools. The Teacher Tax Relief Act of 1999 would create these incentives by exempting the first $40,000 of a teacher's salary from federal income tax for qualified individuals teaching academic subjects in schools where at least 50 percent of the students qualify for the free or reduced price lunch programs. In order to qualify for the exemption, the teacher must be qualified to provide instruction in each and every academic course they teach. No individual who is teaching under an "emergency" designation is eligible for the exemption and no teacher whose gross family income exceeds $120,000 is eligible for the exemption. Mr. President, this legislation would increase take-home pay for a teacher earning $40,000 by over $5,000 and would steer high quality teachers to underperforming school districts in addition to providing middle class tax relief. I ask for unanimous consent that the text of both bills be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bills were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1422

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "School Quality Counts Act".

TITLE I—STATE PLANS FOR IMPROVING BASIC PROGRAMS OPERATED BY STATE AND LOCAL EDUCATIONAL AGENCIES.

SEC. 101. ACCOUNTABILITY.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 1111(b)(2) of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 6311(b)(2)) is amended—

(1) in subparagraph (A)—
(A) by striking "and" at the end of clause (i);

(B) by striking the period at the end of clause (ii) and inserting "and"; and

(C) by adding at the end the following:
" (iii) the State toward enabling all children in schools receiving assistance under this part to meet the State's student performance standards. "

(2) in subparagraph (B), by striking clauses (i) and (ii) and inserting the following:

"(i) that establishes a single high standard of performance for all students;

"(ii) that takes into account the progress of all students of each local educational agency and school served under section 1114 or 1115;

"(iii) that compares the proportions of students who are 'not proficient', 'partially proficient', 'proficient', and 'advanced' at the grade levels at which assessments are conducted with the proportions of students in each of the 4 categories at the same grade level in the previous school year;

“(iv) that considers separately, within each State, local educational agency, and school, the performance and progress of students by gender, by each major ethnic and racial group, by English proficiency status, by migrant status, by students with disabilities as compared to nondisabled students, and by economically disadvantaged students as compared to students who are not economically disadvantaged (except that such disaggregation shall not be required in a case where the number of students in a category is insufficient to yield statistically reliable information or the results would reveal individually identifiable information about an individual student); and]

“(v) that includes annual numerical goals for improving the performance of all groups specified in clause (iv) and narrowing gaps in performance between these groups.”; and

(3) by adding at the end the following:

“(C) The Secretary shall collect and review the information from States on the adequate yearly progress of schools and local educational agencies required under subparagraphs (A) and (B) for the purpose of determining State and local compliance with section 1116.”.

(b) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary shall promulgate regulations and amendments to regulations to carry out the amendments made by subsection (a) not later than 6 months after the date of the enactment of this Act and shall review State plans submitted under section 1111 of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 before such date to determine their compliance with the regulations. The Secretary shall require States to revise their plans if necessary to satisfy the requirements of the regulations. Such revised plans shall be submitted to the Secretary for approval not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act.

SEC. 102. SCHOOL REPORT CARDS.

Section 1111(b) of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 6311(b)) is amended—

(1) by amending the subsection heading to read as follows: “(b) STANDARDS, ASSESSMENTS, AND ACCOUNTABILITY.—”

(2) by redesignating paragraphs (4) through (8) as paragraphs (6) through (10), respectively; and

(3) by inserting after paragraph (3) the following:

“(4) DISSEMINATION OF RESULTS TO PARENTS.—Each State plan shall contain assurances that, beginning in the 2001–2002 school year, and annually thereafter, all schools served under this part shall—

“(A) report the results of all assessments described in paragraph (3) used to measure the performance of a student attending the school to each parent or legal guardian of the student;

“(B) report the results in a uniform and understandable format;

“(C) ensure that the reports are based on the same assessments described in paragraph (3);

“(D) include in the reports a description of whether the student has demonstrated ‘advanced’, ‘proficient’, ‘partially proficient’, or ‘not proficient’ levels of performance in each subject area;

“(E) include in the reports—

“(i) a comparison of the proportions of students enrolled in that school, in the local educational agency, and in the State who are ‘not proficient’, ‘partially proficient’, ‘proficient’, and ‘advanced’ in each subject area, for each grade level at which assessments are conducted, with proportions in each of the same 4 categories at the same grade levels in the previous school year;

“(ii) the percentage of students in the school on which the results in clause (i) are based; and

“(iii) information, in the aggregate, on the qualifications of classroom teachers in the student’s school, including—

“(I) the percentage of classroom teachers in the school who meet all State and local requirements to teach at all grade levels and in all subject areas in which they provide instruction;

“(II) in middle and secondary schools, the percentage of classes taught by teachers who do not have a college major, or who have not passed a rigorous subject area test, in the subject being taught; and

“(III) the percentage of classroom teachers in the school teaching under ‘emergency’ or other provisional credentials.

“(5) DISSEMINATION OF RESULTS TO THE PUBLIC.—Each State plan shall contain assurances that, beginning in the 2001–2002 school year, and annually thereafter, each State shall—

“(A) ensure that overall student performance data on all assessments described in paragraph (3) are compiled, published, and disseminated widely to the general public;

“(B) ensure that the data includes a comparison of the proportions of students who are ‘not proficient’, ‘partially proficient’, ‘proficient’, and ‘advanced’ at the grade levels at which assessments are conducted with proportions in each of the same 4 categories at the same grade levels in the previous school year;

“(C) ensure that the data is disaggregated within the State, local educational agency, and school by gender, by each major racial and ethnic group, by English proficiency status, by migrant status, by students with disabilities as compared to nondisabled students, and by economically disadvantaged students as compared to students who are not economically disadvantaged (except that such disaggregation shall not be required in a case where the number of students in any category is insufficient to yield statistically reliable information or the results would reveal individually identifiable information about an individual student);

“(D) ensure that the reports are—

“(i) distributed to local print and broadcast media; and “(ii) posted on a web site on the Internet.”.

SEC. 103. TEACHER QUALITY.

Section 1111 of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 6311) is amended—

(1) by redesignating subsections (c) through (g) as subsections (e) through (i), respectively; and

(2) by inserting after subsection (b) the following:

“(c) TEACHER QUALITY.—

“(1) DISSEMINATION TO PARENTS.—Each State plan shall contain assurances that all schools served under this part make available to each parent, in a uniform and understandable format, information on the qualifications of their child’s classroom teachers with regard to the subject areas and grade levels in which the teacher provides instruction. Such information shall include—

“(A) whether the teacher has met all State qualification and licensing criteria for the grade levels and subject areas in which the teacher provides instruction;

“(B) whether the teacher is teaching under ‘emergency’ or other provisional status;

“(C) the college major of the teacher and any other graduate certification or degree held by the teacher, and the field or discipline of each certification or degree.

“(2) SPECIAL PARENTAL NOTIFICATION.—Each State plan shall contain assurances that—

“(A) the State shall ensure that all schools served under this part notify in writing the parents or guardians of any student who is receiving academic instruction from a teacher who has not fully met all State requirements to provide instruction at the grade level at which, and in the subject areas in which, the teacher is providing instruction to the student;

“(B) the notification required under subparagraph (A) shall be made—

“(i) to parents or guardians of any student who is receiving instruction from a teacher who has been exempted from State qualification and licensing criteria or for whom State qualification or licensing criteria have been waived under ‘emergency’, ‘provisional’, or other similar procedures;

“(ii) not more than 15 days after the student has been assigned to a teacher described in the subparagraph; and

“(C) before being allowed to accept a teaching assignment in the State, a teacher who has not fully met all State requirements to provide instruction at a grade level or in a subject area in which the teacher is to provide instruction is informed of the notification requirement under this paragraph.

“(3) PUBLIC REPORTING.—Each State plan shall contain assurances that the State shall compile, aggregate, publish, distribute to major print and broadcast media outlets throughout the State and post on a web site on the Internet the information described in paragraph (1) for each school, local educational agency, and the State.

“(4) QUALIFICATIONS OF CERTAIN INSTRUCTIONAL STAFF.—

“(A) Each State plan shall contain assurances that, not later than 2 years after the date of the enactment of the School Quality Counts Act—

“(i) all instructional staff who provide services to students under section 1114 or 1115 have demonstrated the subject matter knowledge, teaching knowledge, and teaching skill necessary to teach effectively in the content area or areas in which they provide instruction, according to the criteria described in this paragraph;

“(ii) except as provided in subparagraph (F), funds under this part may not be used to support instructional staff who provide services to students under section 1114 or 1115 for whom State qualification or licensing requirements have been waived or who are teaching under an ‘emergency’ or other provisional credential.

“(B) For purposes of subparagraph (A), instructional staff who teach elementary school students are required, at a minimum, to hold a bachelor’s degree and demonstrate general knowledge, teaching skill, and subject matter knowledge required to teach effectively in reading, writing, mathematics, social studies, science, and other elements of a liberal arts education.

“(C) For purposes of subparagraph (A), instructional staff who teach in middle schools and secondary schools are required, at a minimum, to hold a bachelor’s degree or higher and demonstrate a high level of competence in all subject areas in which they teach through—

“(i) a high level of performance on rigorous academic subject area tests; or “(ii) completion of an academic major in each of the subject areas in which they provide instruction and at least a B average.

“(D) For purposes of subparagraph (A) funds under this part may be used to employ teacher aides or other paraprofessionals who do not meet the requirements under subparagraphs (B) and (C) only if such aides or paraprofessionals—

“(i) provide instruction only when under the direct and immediate supervision, and in the immediate presence, of instructional staff who meet the criteria of this paragraph; and “(ii) possess particular skills necessary to assist instructional staff in providing services to students served under this Act.

“(E) Each State plan shall contain assurances that beginning on the date of the enactment of the School Quality Counts Act, no school served under this part may use funds received under this Act to hire instructional staff who do not fully meet all the criteria for instructional staff described in this paragraph.

“(F) Each State plan shall contain assurances that not later than 6 months after the date of the enactment of the School Quality Counts Act, and annually thereafter, the principal of each school served under this part shall, in writing, attest to the fact that all members of their instructional staff meet the requirements of this paragraph. In a case in which there are instructional staff who have yet to meet all requirements to provide instruction in each of the subject areas and at each of the grade levels to which they are assigned to teach, the principal shall submit, in writing, a plan for ensuring that not later than 2 years after the date of the enactment of the School Quality Counts Act all instructional staff will either meet all requirements under this paragraph or will no longer provide instruction to students served under this part.

“(G) For purposes of this paragraph, the term ‘instructional staff’ includes any individual who has responsibility for providing any student or group of students with instruction in any of the core academic subject areas, including reading, writing, language arts, mathematics, science, and social studies.

“(d) Each State plan shall describe how the State educational agency will help each local educational agency and school develop the capacity to comply with the requirements of this section.”

SEC. 104. QUALIFIED TEACHER IN EVERY CLASSROOM.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Title I of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 is amended by inserting after section 1119 the following new section:

“SEC. 1119A. A QUALIFIED TEACHER IN EVERY CLASSROOM.

“(a) USES OF FUNDS.—In order to meet the goal under section 1111(c)(4) of ensuring that all instructional staff have the subject matter knowledge, teaching knowledge, and teaching skill necessary to teach effectively in the content area or areas in which they provide instruction, local educational agencies may, notwithstanding any other provision of law, use funds received under title II, title VI, and section 307 of the Department of Education Appropriations Act, 1999, the Higher Education Act of 1965, or the Goals 2000: Educate America Act—

“(1) to recruit fully qualified teachers, including through the use of signing bonuses or other financial incentives;

“(2) to collaborate with programs that recruit, place, and train qualified teachers; or

“(3) to provide the necessary education and training, including paying the costs of college tuition and other student fees (for programs that meet the criteria under section 203(2)(A)(i) of the Higher Education Amendments of 1998), to help current teachers or other school personnel who do not meet these criteria attain the necessary qualifications and licensing requirements, except that in order to qualify for college tuition payments under this clause, an individual must be within 2 years of completing an undergraduate degree and must agree to teach for at least 2 subsequent years after receiving such degree in a school that—

“(A) is located in a local educational agency that is eligible in that academic year for assistance under this title; and

“(B) for that academic year, has been determined by the Secretary to be a school in which the enrollment of children counted under section 1124(c) exceeds 50 percent of the total enrollment of that school.

“(b) CORRECTIVE ACTION.—The State educational agency shall take corrective action consistent with section 1116(c)(5)(B)(i), with the goal of meeting the requirements under this paragraph, against any local educational agency that does not make sufficient effort to comply with section 103 within the time specified. Such corrective action shall be taken regardless of the conditions set forth in section 1116(c)(5)(B)(ii). In a case in which the State fails to take corrective action, the Secretary shall withhold funds from such State up to an amount equal to that reserved under sections 1003(a) and 1603(c).”

(b) INSTRUCTIONAL AIDES.—Section 1119 of Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 is amended by striking subsection (i).

(c) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of sections for the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 1119 the following new item:

“Sec. 1119A. A qualified teacher in every classroom.”

SEC. 105. LIMITATION.

Part E of title XIV of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 is amended by adding at the end the following:

“SEC. 14515. PROHIBITION REGARDING PROFESSIONAL DEVELOPMENT SERVICES.

“None of the funds provided under this Act may be used for any professional development services for a teacher that are not directly related to the curriculum and content areas in which the teacher provides instruction.”

TITLE II—ACADEMIC ACHIEVEMENT AWARDS PROGRAM

SEC. 201. ACADEMIC ACHIEVEMENT AWARDS.

Subpart 1 of part A of title I of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 6311–6323) is amended—

(1) by redesignating sections 1120, 1120A, and 1120B as sections 1120A, 1120B, and 1120C, respectively; and

(2) by inserting after section 1119A, as added by section 104 of this Act, the following:

“SEC. 1120. ACADEMIC ACHIEVEMENT AWARDS.

“(a) ESTABLISHMENT OF PROGRAMS.—Each State receiving a grant under this title shall establish an Academic Achievement Awards Program to recognize and reward—

“(1) local educational agencies and schools that operate programs under section 1114 or 1115 and that demonstrate outstanding yearly progress, consistent with section 1111(b)(2)(A), for 2 or more consecutive years; and

“(2) teachers who provide instruction in such programs.

“(b) RESERVATION.—Each State receiving a grant under this title shall reserve, from the amount (if any) by which the funds received by the State under this title for the fiscal year exceed the amount received by the State in the preceding fiscal year, 25 percent of such additional amount (plus any additional amount the State may find necessary to address a demonstrated need for an academic achievement award program), for awards to local educational agencies, schools, and teachers of classes that demonstrate outstanding yearly progress (consistent with section 1111(b)(2)(B)) for 2 or more consecutive years.

“(c) TYPES OF AWARDS.—Each State shall use funds reserved under this section to present financial awards to—

“(1) the schools and local educational agencies that the State determines have demonstrated the greatest progress in improving student achievement (consistent with section 1111(b)(2)(B)); and

“(2) teachers who demonstrate the ability to consistently help students make significant achievement gains, consistent with section 1111(b)(2)(B), in the subject areas in which the teacher provides instruction.

“(d) CALCULATION OF AWARD AMOUNTS.—Award amounts to local educational agencies and schools shall be proportionate to the amount of aid such local educational agency or school received under this part for the preceding fiscal year. The amount awarded to a teacher that qualifies for an award under this section shall be uniform throughout the State.

“(e) SPECIAL RULE.—Each State shall allocate not less than 85 percent of funds reserved under subsection (b) to schools that—

“(1) reside in a local educational agency that is eligible in that academic year for assistance under section 1124; and

“(2) for that academic year, have been determined by the Secretary to be a school in which the enrollment of children counted under section 1124(c) exceeds 50 percent of the total enrollment of that school, or to teachers providing instruction within such schools.

“(f) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section such additional sums as may be necessary to supplement the academic achievement awards program. Such funds shall be allocated to a State in an amount proportionate to the amount of aid such State received under this part for the preceding fiscal year.”

TITLE III—CONFORMING AMENDMENTS; EFFECTIVE DATE

SEC. 301. CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.

(a) SECTION 102 CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(1) STANDARDS AND ASSESSMENTS.—Section 1111(b) of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 6311(b)) is amended—

(A) in paragraph (1)(C), by striking “paragraph (6)” and inserting “paragraph (8)”; and

(B) in paragraph (7)(A), by striking “paragraph (6)(B)” and inserting “paragraph (8)(B)”.

(2) SCHOOL IMPROVEMENT.—Section 1116(c)(1)(C) of such Act (20 U.S.C. 6317(c)(1)(C)) is amended by striking “section 1111(b)(7)(B)” and inserting “section 1111(b)(9)(B)”.

(3) STATE REVIEW AND LOCAL EDUCATIONAL AGENCY IMPROVEMENT.—Section 1116(d)(3)(A)(ii) of such Act (20 U.S.C. 6317(d)(3)(A)) is amended by striking “section 1111(b)(7)(B)” and inserting “section 1111(b)(9)(B)”.

(4) BUILDING CAPACITY FOR INVOLVEMENT.—Section 1118(e)(1) of such Act (20 U.S.C. 6319(e)(1)) is amended by striking “section

1111(b)(8)' and inserting "section 1111(b)(10)".

(b) SECTION 103 CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—Section 1111(d)(1) of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 6311(d)(1)) is amended—

(1) in subparagraphs (C) and (E)(ii), by striking "and (c)" and inserting "and (e)"; and

(2) in subparagraph (D), by striking "or (c)" and inserting "or (d)".

(c) SECTION 201 CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(1) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—Section 1002 of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 6302) is amended—

(A) in subsection (a), by striking "section 1120(e)" and inserting "section 1120A(e)"; and

(B) in subsection (e), by striking "section 1120(e)" and inserting "section 1120A(e)".

(2) ADDITIONAL STATE ALLOCATIONS FOR SCHOOL IMPROVEMENT.—Section 1003(b) of such Act (20 U.S.C. 6303(b)) is amended by striking "section 1120(e)" both places it appears and inserting "section 1120A(e)".

(3) ASSURANCES.—Section 1112(c)(1)(F) of such Act (20 U.S.C. 6312(c)(1)(F)) is amended by striking "section 1120" and inserting "section 1120A".

(4) LOCAL EDUCATIONAL AGENCY DISCRETION.—Section 1113(b)(1)(C)(i) of such Act (20 U.S.C. 6313(b)(1)(C)(i)) is amended by striking "section 1120A(c)" and inserting "section 1120B(c)".

(5) ASSURANCES.—Section 1304(c)(2) of such Act (20 U.S.C. 6394(c)(2)) is amended—

(A) by striking "section 1120" and inserting "section 1120A"; and

(B) by striking "section 1120A" and inserting "section 1120B".

(6) PROGRAMS AND PROJECTS.—Section 1415(a)(2)(C) of such Act (20 U.S.C. 6435(a)(2)(C)) is amended by striking "section 1120A" and inserting "section 1120B".

(7) SUPPLEMENT, NOT SUPPLANT.—Section 1415(b) of such Act (20 U.S.C. 6435(b)) is amended by striking "section 1120A" and inserting "section 1120B".

SEC. 302. EFFECTIVE DATE.

Except as otherwise provided, the amendments made by this Act shall take effect on the date of the enactment of this Act.

S. 1423

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Teacher Tax Relief Act of 1999".

SEC. 2. EXCLUSION FROM GROSS INCOME OF WAGES OF CERTAIN TEACHERS IN HIGH-POVERTY SCHOOLS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Part III of subchapter B of chapter 1 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (relating to items specifically excluded from gross income) is amended by redesignating section 138 as section 139 and by inserting after section 137 the following new section:

"SEC. 138. WAGES OF TEACHERS IN HIGH-POVERTY SCHOOLS.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—Gross income does not include amounts received as wages by a qualified teacher employed at a high-poverty school.

"(b) LIMITATIONS.—

"(1) AMOUNT OF EXCLUSION.—The amount excluded under subsection (a) for any taxable year shall not exceed $40,000.

"(2) ADJUSTED GROSS INCOME.—The exclusion under subsection (a) shall not apply to any taxpayer whose adjusted gross income for the taxable year exceeds $120,000.

"(c) QUALIFIED TEACHER DEFINED.—For purposes of this section—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The term 'qualified teacher' means an academic teacher, a special education teacher, or a bilingual teacher. The term does not include an individual teaching under an emergency or other provisional status in which any State teaching qualification or licensing criteria have been waived.

"(2) ACADEMIC TEACHER.—The term 'academic teacher' means an individual who meets all of the following criteria:

"(A) The teacher has performed at a high level on academic subject matter tests, or has a bachelor's degree or higher with an academic major in each of the subjects taught by the teacher.

"(B) The principal of the school where the teacher is assigned asserts that the teacher is qualified to provide instruction in each academic course and in each grade level taught at the school.

"(C) In the case of a teacher of students in elementary school, the teacher must have demonstrated the teaching skill and general subject matter knowledge required to teach effectively in reading, writing, mathematics, social studies, science, and other elements of a liberal arts education.

"(D) In the case of a teacher of students in middle school or secondary school, the teacher must have demonstrated a high level of teaching skill and subject matter knowledge in all of the subject areas that they teach.

"(d) OTHER DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section—

"(1) ACADEMIC SUBJECTS.—The term 'academic subjects' includes English, language arts, social studies, history, mathematics, science, and related subjects.

"(2) HIGH-POVERTY SCHOOL.—The term 'high-poverty school' means a school in which at least 50 percent of the students attending such school are eligible for free or reduced-cost lunches under the school lunch program established under the National School Lunch Act.

"(3) SCHOOL.—The term 'school' means any public school which provides elementary education or secondary education (through grade 12), as determined under State law.

"(4) WAGES.—The term 'wages' has the meaning provided by section 3401(a)."

(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of sections for part III of subchapter B of chapter 1 of such Code is amended by striking the item relating to section 139 and inserting the following:

"Sec. 138. Wages of teachers in high-poverty schools.

"Sec. 139. Cross references to other Acts."

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to amounts received in taxable years beginning after December 31, 1999.

By Mr. EDWARDS (for himself and Mrs. HUTCHISON):

S. 1424. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to provide the same tax treatment for special pay as for combat pay; to the Committee on Finance.

TAX EXEMPT MILITARY PAY ORDERS (TEMPO) ACT

Mr. EDWARDS. Mr. President, I rise to introduce with my colleague KAY BAILEY HUTCHISON the Tax Exempt Military Pay Orders (TEMPO) Act. This measure will not only correct an inequity in the way we treat our deployed armed forces, but it also will help let our soldiers know that we recognize and appreciate the sacrifices they and their families make.

Our proposal would provide that income received by a member of the Armed Forces of the United States, while receiving special pay, should be tax exempt. Currently, members of the U.S. Armed Forces who serve in a Presidentially designated "combat zone" receive special tax exemptions. I think we all recall that this exemption was in effect during Kosovo. During Kosovo, soldiers did not have to pay excise taxes on phone calls that they make from the combat zone. Nor did they have to pay income taxes on the money earned while in that zone.

The measure we introduce today provides that these same tax exemptions would be triggered when the Secretary of Defense designates his employees as eligible for "special pay" based on hostile conditions. Under current law, members of the Armed Forces receive special pay when: subject to hostile fire; on duty in which he, or others with him, are in imminent danger of such fire; were killed, injured or wounded by hostile fire or were on duty in a foreign area in which he was subject to the threat of physical harm or imminent danger on the basis of civil insurrection, civil war, terrorism, or wartime conditions. In the last few years soldiers in Somalia and Haiti have received special pay.

Let me explain why I believe we need to change the tax treatment of special pay. The original tax exemption for combat pay was put in place during the Korean war. From that time until the fall of the Berlin Wall, the employment of U.S. forces almost always was in combat zones. But since the end of the cold war, as we all know, our Armed Forces have been deployed more often, and in a wider variety of circumstances. Today, a soldier with the 82nd Airborne from North Carolina may be sent on a mission that is as dangerous as any combat mission, but because it is not precisely in a combat zone, he cannot receive any tax benefits.

Given the current uses of our Armed Forces, I believe the measure we propose today makes a great deal of sense. I also believe that making this change in the tax code would correct an inequity. Now, I think it is only right that soldiers in the Kosovo engagement are receiving tax exemptions. But during a recent visit to Fort Bragg, many soldiers and their families commented that the same benefits should have been extended to the soldiers who served in Somalia and Haiti. I have to say that I agreed with them.

And so, this bill addresses the new realities of the post-code-war world. As the Senate knows all too well, the end of the cold war brought with it a significant drawdown in the size of our armed forces. Additionally, we shifted from an overseas-based force to one based primarily in the United States. Almost concurrently, our national security strategy has led us into an era of seemingly continuous deployments. In the 40 years between 1950 and 1990, elements of the U.S. Army were deployed 10 times. In the less than 10 years since the fall of the Berlin Wall, elements of the Army have been deployed 34 times. The Navy's responses have doubled in the 90's. The Air Force has seen its deployed forces rise 400% while its active duty personnel dropped 33%. Some of these deployments are a few months in duration; some are part of a continuous presence—such as our forces in the Sinai. All work hardship on both the members deployed and their families, particularly when there are repeated or back-to-back deployments.

These demands contribute to both recruitment and retention problems. In recognition of these demands and of the likelihood that we will continue to see more of these deployments, this bill recognizes that we need to bring our tax code up to date so that it acknowledges these new realities.

Mr. President, let me tell you more about what this proposal would do. As I previously said, members of the military who receive combat pay get certain tax exemptions. For example:

The income of the soldier while in the combat zone is tax exempt. So is the income of a soldier while hospitalized for injuries received in the combat zone and that portion of a pension or retirement acquired while in a combat zone. In addition, pay received while a prisoner of war as a result of service in the combat zone is tax exempt.

Special tax rates apply for the surviving spouse of a soldier who is missing in action (or presumed dead) in a combat zone.

All taxes are eliminated for the years the soldier served in the combat zone if he is killed in the combat zone.

There are other exemptions, and I ask unanimous consent that this copy of the relevant exemptions be printed in the RECORD.

My bill would give those exact same exemptions to soldiers who receive special pay.

Mr. President, as we close out this century and address the realities of the new century, I ask the Senate approve this measure as a means of acknowledging the sacrifices being demanded of our service members and their families.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that additional material be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

SECTION 1: SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Tax Exempt Military Pay Orders (TEMPO) Act".

S. 1424

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SEC. 2. TAX TREATMENT OF SPECIAL PAY FOR MEMBERS OF THE ARMED FORCES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subchapter C of chapter 80 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (relating to provisions affecting more than one subtitle) is amended by adding at the end the following:

"SEC. 7874. TREATMENT OF SPECIAL PAY FOR MEMBERS OF THE ARMED FORCES.

"(a) GENERAL RULE.—For purposes of the following provisions, a special pay area shall be treated in the same manner as if it were a combat zone (as determined under section 112):

"(1) Section 2(a)(3) (relating to special rule where deceased spouse was in missing status.—

"(2) Section 112 relating to the exclusion of certain combat pay of members of the Armed Forces.

"(3) Section 692 (relating to income taxes of members of Armed Forces on death).

"(4) Section 2201 (relating to members of the Armed Forces dying in combat zone or by reason of combat-zone-incurred wounds, etc.).

"(5) Section 3401(a)(1) (defining wages relating to combat pay for members of the Armed Forces).

"(6) Section 4253(d) (relating to the taxation of phone service originating from a combat zone from members of the Armed Forces).

"(7) Section 6013(f)(1) (relating to joint return where individual is in missing status).

"(8) Some 7508 (relating to time for performing certain acts postponed by reason of service in combat zone).

"(b) SPECIAL PAY AREA.—For purposes of this section, the term 'special pay area' means any area in which an individual receives special pay under section 310 of title 37, United States Code, for services performed in such area."

"(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—The table of sections of subchapter C of chapter 80 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 is amended by adding at the end the following:

"Sec. 7874. Treatment of special pay."

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to remuneration paid to taxable years ending after the date of the enactment of this Act.

CURRENT TAX EXEMPTIONS IN EFFECT FOR COMBAT PAY

Under current law, these exemptions are in effect for members of the Armed Services who receive combat pay:

The income of the soldier while in the combat zone is tax exempt. So is the income of a soldier while hospitalized for injuries received in the combat zone and that portion of a pension or retirement acquired while in a combat zone. In addition, pay received while a prisoner of war as a result of service in the combat zone is tax exempt. (26 U.S.C. §112)

Special tax rates apply for the surviving spouse of a soldier who is missing in action (or presumed dead) in a combat zone. (26 U.S.C. §2(a)(3))

All taxes are eliminated for the years the soldier served in the combat zone if he is killed in the combat zone. (27 U.S.C. §692)

If the soldier is killed in the combat zone, his survivors are entitled to a lower estate tax. (26 U.S.C. §2201)

While in the combat zone, the soldier does not have to pay certain federal excise taxes on phone calls. (26 U.S.C. §4253(d))

The surviving spouse of a soldier who is missing in action gets the option of filing a joint tax return for up to two years after the termination of the combat zone. (26 U.S.C. §6013(f)(1))

Certain tax deadlines and liabilities while in the combat zone are defeated. (26 U.S.C. §7508)

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, I am pleased to join Senator EDWARDS of North Carolina to offer legislation very important to those members of our Armed Forces who are deployed in defense of our nation's interests around the world. Our bill will provide for federal tax exemption to those serving in hostile areas not officially designated as combat zones. The current restrictions on this exemption to formally designated combat zones—which do not include many of our peacekeepers who face daily threats to their lives—are a half-century old relic of the Korean War that do not address the realities of the military missions in our post-cold-war world.

Today there are two combat zones as designated by the President in Executive Orders. One is in the Middle East, including the Persian Gulf, the Red Sea, the Gulf of Oman, the Gulf of Aden, as well as Iraq, Kuwait, Saudi Arabia, Oman, Bahrain, Qatar, and the United Arab Emirates. This area has been a combat zone since January 1991. The other combat zone is the Kosovo Area of Operations including the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia (Serbia/Montenegro), Albania, the Adriatic Sea, and the Ionian Sea. This combat zone has been in effect since March 1999. Members serving in those areas get a tax exemption.

Yet, today there are 17 areas considered so dangerous that our troops there get a special allowance known as Imminent Danger Pay that do not receive the same tax relief that those in a designated combat zone get. In fact, combat zone tax provisions did not apply to our troops in Somalia, where we lost 18 Rangers in one bloody gunfight.

Our bill argues, in effect, that if a location is dangerous enough to earn the allowance reserved for imminent danger, then it's dangerous enough to get favorable tax treatment, too. This would include troops that are in some of the most dangerous parts of the world, including Algeria, Burundi, Pakistan, Sudan, and Yemen.

When our troops are deployed in harm's way anywhere, there should not be a discrepancy in tax benefits from one location to another. This is an administrative distinction that matters little to the brave young Americans who are out there defending us. These determinations are made after careful study by the Secretary of Defense, based on the inherent dangers in a foreign area.

The Senate expressed its support for addressing this inequity in a resolution we passed as part of the FY2000 Defense Authorization Bill. Not only is this the right and fair thing to do, but during these times of increased deployments and personnel shortages, it is in our national interest to continue to show our dedicated service members that we appreciate their sacrifice and commitment.

I commend the Senator from North Carolina for his leadership on this issue and urge other Senators to join us in this effort.

By Mr. SPECTER:

S. 1425. A bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to allow a 10 percent biotechnology investment tax credit and to reauthorize the Research and Development tax credit for ten years; to the Committee on Finance.

BIOTECHNOLOGY TAX CREDIT ACT OF 1999

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, we are faced today with the unique challenges brought by the extraordinary biological, technological, and medical advances of this decade. We have seen miraculous breakthroughs in the fight against communicable diseases: the complete eradication of small pox, the near global eradication of polio, vaccines for ailments such as measles, rubella, and even the flu. Revolutionary new drugs and improved surgical techniques allow us all to lead longer, more productive lives. But past success is not a guarantee of future progress and science does not bear fruit overnight. Breaking the code for complex problems takes a steady and sustained commitment of people and money. As we enter the next century, we have a responsibility to perpetuate and improve upon our enormous capacity to prevent, detect, treat, and cure diseases of all types.

The Congress continues to be gravely concerned with rising health care costs, as demonstrated by contentious debate as recently as last week during consideration of the Patients' Bill of Rights. According to the Health Care Financing Administration (HCFA), health care spending in this country had risen to $1.1 trillion in 1997, or an average of just under $4,000 per person. Private sources paid for a little over half of that, about $585 billion, with the remainder coming from public programs like Medicare and Medicaid. HCFA further predicts that public spending on health will nearly double over the next decade, reaching $2.1 trillion in 2007.

I disagree with the premise that this is simply a dollars and cents problem. I believe science holds our best chance for both combating disease and controlling the ever-spiraling costs it imposes on society. For victims of cancer and heart disease, scientific research represents their only hope for new drugs and medical treatments that can add years to life. Research can produce miracle vaccines that save the lives of children stricken with deadly diseases like leukemia. And for growing numbers of elderly, research holds the key to stopping the ruinous effects of Alzheimer's disease, stroke and arthritis—all very expensive ailments to treat. To me, the equation is a simple one: less disease and illness mean less human suffering and lower health care costs.

Over the next three decades, the number of Americans over age 65 will double. My state of Pennsylvania houses the second highest elderly population, currently totaling nearly 2 million citizens. Mr. President, unless science finds cures and effective treatments for disease and illness, our society will face even higher costs and our hospitals and nursing facilities will be strained to the breaking point.

As Chairman of the Appropriations Subcommittee on Labor, Health and Human Services, and Education, I have said many times that I firmly believe that the National Institutes of Health (NIH) is the crown jewel of the Federal government, and substantial investment is crucial to allow the continuation of the breakthrough research into the next decade. In 1981, NIH funding was less than $3.6 billion. For the past three years, NIH funding has increased by 6.8 percent in fiscal year 1997, 7.1 percent in fiscal year 1998, and 15 percent in fiscal year 1999, for a total of $15.7 billion. I am continuing to fight to double the NIH budget, a sentiment which was unanimously supported in the United States Senate during the 105th Congress. Further, on January 19th of this year, I joined my colleagues, Senators MACK, FRIST and HARKIN in introducing S. Res. 19, a Sense of the Senate resolution to increase biomedical research funding by $2 billion for fiscal year 2000.

Mr. President, I cite continued efforts to increase the Federal investment in biomedical research in order to highlight the public policy importance of scientific investment. I believe that the Federal government also has the responsibility to provide an economic environment that promotes Research and Development in biomedical research in the private sector as well. To make good business decisions, particularly relating to investment in R&D, biomedical and "biotech" firms need to have reliable and well defined tax laws. Today I am introducing legislation that would establish a 10 percent tax credit for investment in biomedical research, and would extend the R & D tax credit to 10 years.

The purpose of the investment tax credit is to encourage biomedical research and to stimulate the economy, as well as to enhance our long-term competitiveness in the global biomedical arena. The investment tax credit would provide a 10 percent tax credit for purchases of capital equipment, instruments and supplies used in a laboratory setting by a biotechnology company. Without this tax credit, American companies will be competing with one hand tied behind their backs.

The R & D tax credit has proven to be critical to the U.S. biomedical research industry. The credit has allowed for many successes in U.S. scientific research and innovation, such as rapid progress in finding cures for life threatening diseases such as AIDS, cancer, and multiple sclerosis. My Subcommittee has held hearings on the state of affairs in biomedical research, and I understand from many scientists that we are on the cusp of breakthroughs many of today's most complex diseases—Alzheimer's, AIDS, heart disease, diabetes, and arthritis, to name a few. But, the scientists caution, it will only be through sustained investment, both public and private, that we will reap the rewards of biomedical research. If we cut investment in medical progress today, the consequence may be irrevocable and society may rue that decision for years to come.

As we prepare for the 21st century, we must remain committed to providing an environment that fosters technological investment, scientific exploration, and global competitiveness. Future economic growth and the prosperity of all Americans depends on continued R&D in all sectors of our nation.

Mr. President, we must act now to extend the R&D credit and send the right signal to our nation's researchers. Failure to act will not only jeopardize our research efforts, but it will also threaten the United States's world leadership in R&D and perpetuate the rising health care costs we so desperately have tried to contain. It should be noted that everything that is good and desirable is not necessarily worthy of a tax credit, but targeted tax credits are particularly appropriate where an activity engaged in by one company or individual provides such considerable benefits to society at large.

We must constantly remind ourselves that medical innovation is the most viable, long-term solution for cost-effective quality care. Our task in Congress should be to assure that the path of innovation remains open, unobstructed and attractive to both public and private investors.

For me, creating a better atmosphere for investment in medical research is more than a symbolic goal. It is a recognition that expanding our base of scientific knowledge inevitably leads to better health, lower health care costs, and an improved quality of life for all Americans. Mr. President, I urge my colleagues to support this important legislation, and urge its swift adoption.

In my capacity as chairman of the Appropriations Subcommittee for Labor, Health, Human Services and Education, our subcommittee has the responsibility for funding the National Institutes of Health. The Senate passed a resolution targeting a doubling of National Institutes of Health funding over a 5-year period. That requires an enormous increase.

Last year, with the cooperation of my distinguished ranking member, Senator HARKIN, we increased NIH funding by $2 billion. The year before the Senate voted an increase of some $950 million, which was conferred out at $907 million.

This year the subcommittee faces a 302(b) allocation—if anyone is listening on C-Span II, that's how much money the subcommittee is allotted under the budget—that is some $12 billion under the President's request, about $12 billion under any logical sum of money to fund those three departments: The Department of Labor, the Department of Health and Human Services, and the Department of Education. We are struggling to try to find the funds to match last year's $2 billion increase. If we were to reach the goal set by the sense-of-the-Senate resolution we would have to come up with $2.3 billion.

In talking to the people in the biotech industry, they are very much interested in having an investment tax credit. An investment tax credit of 10 percent would provide a real tax incentive to induce biotech companies to do research. We are on the brink of some phenomenal advances as a result of what happened with stem cell research late last year. Stem cell research has the potential to be a veritable fountain of youth, to tackle ailments like Alzheimer's or Parkinson's, or perhaps heart disease or cancer.

There is a controversy on that question, as to whether embryos may appropriately be used for research. So far the Department of Health and Human Services and their legal counsel concluded that the current limitation on research would not apply to research on stem cells after they are extracted from embryos. Realistically, there ought to be no limitation at all, because in dealing with embryos we are not dealing with an entity which could produce life. These are discarded embryos from in vitro fertilization.

This controversy is very similar to the controversy which existed with respect to fetal tissue, where arguments were made that using fetal tissue would lead to induced abortions where the fact of the matter was the fetal tissue was discarded fetal tissue, did not induce abortions.

But the opportunities for phenomenal advances in medical research are virtually unlimited. In the absence of the ability of the Congress, given budget limitations, to meet the doubling goal within 5 years, an investment tax credit would be an enormous help in stimulating investments by the biotech companies.

The research and development tax credit has been extended year by year, and a firm statement by Congress extending it for 10 years again would be an inducement for biotech.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a copy of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

S. 1425

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Biotechnology Tax Credit Act of 1999".

SEC. 2. TEN YEAR EXTENSION OF THE RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT TAX CREDIT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 41 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (relating to credit for increasing research activities) is amended by striking subsection (h) and in its place, insert the following new section:

"(h) IN GENERAL.—This section shall not apply to any amount paid or incurred after June 30, 2009."

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Paragraph (1) of section 45C(b) of such Code is amended by striking subparagraph (D).

SEC. 3. BIOTECHNOLOGY INVESTMENT TAX CREDIT.

(a) ALLOWANCE OF CREDIT.—Section 46(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (relating to amount of investment credit) is amended by striking "and" at the end of paragraph (2), by striking the period at the end of paragraph (3) and inserting ", and", and by adding at the end thereof the following new paragraph:

"(4) the biotechnology investment credit."

(b) AMOUNT OF CREDIT.—Section 48 of such Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(c) BIOTECHNOLOGY INVESTMENT CREDIT.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of section 46, the biotechnology investment credit for any taxable year is an amount equal to 10 percent of the qualified investment for such taxable year.

"(2) QUALIFIED INVESTMENT.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of paragraph (1), the qualified investment for any taxable year is the aggregate of—

"(i) the applicable percentage of the basis of each new biotechnology property placed in service by the taxpayer during such taxable year, plus

"(ii) the applicable percentage of the cost of each used biotechnology property placed in service by the taxpayer during such taxable year.

"(B) APPLICABLE PERCENTAGE.—For purposes of subparagraph (A), the applicable percentage for any property shall be determined under paragraphs (2) and (7) of section 46(c) (as in effect on the day before the date of the enactment of the Revenue Reconciliation Act of 1990).

"(C) CERTAIN RULES MADE APPLICABLE.—The provisions of subsections (b) and (c) of section 48 (as in effect on the day before the date of the enactment of the Revenue Reconciliation Act of 1990) shall apply for purposes of this paragraph.

"(3) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section:

"(A) 'Biotechnology Property' means capital equipment, instruments and supplies used in a laboratory setting by a biotechnology company. These items would include but would not be limited to microscopes, various laboratory machines, glassware, chemical reagents, and technical books and manuals purchased by a manufacturer for research purposes. Also included are computers and software used primarily to develop data for research and development.

"(B) 'Biotechnology Company' is an organization that deals with the application of technologies, such as recombinant DNA techniques, biochemistry, molecular and cellular biology, genetics and genetic engineering, biological cell fusion techniques, and new bioprocesses, using living organisms, or parts of organisms, to produce or modify products, to develop microorganisms for specific uses, to identify targets for small molecular pharmaceutical development, to transform biological systems into useful processes and products or to develop microorganisms for specific uses. Potential endpoints for these products, developments and uses shall be for societal benefit through improving human healthcare."

"(4) COORDINATION WITH OTHER CREDITS.—This subsection shall not apply to any property to which the energy credit or rehabilitation credit would apply unless the taxpayer elects to waive the application of such credits to such property.

"(5) CERTAIN PROGRESS EXPENDITURE RULES MADE APPLICABLE.—Rules similar to rules of subsection (c)(4) and (d) of section 46 (as in effect on the day before the date of the enactment of the Revenue Reconciliation Act of 1990) shall apply for purposes of this subsection."

(c) TECHNICAL AMENDMENTS.—

(1) Subparagraph (C) of section 49(a)(1) of such code is amended by striking 'and' at the end of clause (ii), by striking the period at the end of clause (iii) and inserting ', and', and by adding at the end thereof the following new clause:

"(iv) the basis of any new biotechnology property and the cost of any used biotechnology property."

(2) Subparagraph (E) of section 50(a)(2) of such Code is amended by striking 'section 48(a)(5)(A)' and inserting 'section 48(a)(5) or 48(c)(5)'.
(3) Paragraph (5) of section 50(a) of such Code is amended by adding at the end thereof the following new subparagraph:

"(D) SPECIAL RULES FOR CERTAIN PROPERTY.—In the case of any biotechnology property which is 3-year property (within the meaning of section 168(e))—

"(i) the percentage set forth in clause (ii) of the table contained in paragraph (1)(B) shall be 66 percent,

"(ii) the percentage set forth in clause (iii) of such table shall be 33 percent, and

"(iii) clauses (iv) and (v) of such table shall not apply."

(4)(A) The section heading for section 48 of such Code is amended to read as follows:

"Section 48: OTHER CREDITS."

(B) The table of sections for subpart E of part IV of subchapter A of chapter 1 of such Code is amended by striking the item relating to section 48 and inserting the following:

"SEC. 48. Other Credits."

SEC. 4. EFFECTIVE DATE.

The amendments made by this bill shall apply to amounts paid or incurred after June 30, 1999.

By Mr. HARKIN (for himself, Mr. DASCHLE, Mr. LEAHY, Mr. KERREY, Mr. CONRAD, and Mr. JOHNSON):

S. 1426. A bill to amend the Food Security Act of 1985 to promote the conservation of soil and related resources, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry.

THE CONSERVATION SECURITY ACT OF 1999

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I will take a few minutes to talk about America's farmers and ranchers and the promise they hold for us and the future for our environment, for production of bountiful, safe, and nourishing food for us and for the population around the globe.

Specifically on the issue of conservation, it became a national priority in the days of the Dust Bowl, leading to the creation in the 1930s of the Soil Conservation Service at the Department of Agriculture, which is now the Natural Resources Conservation Service. With the very foundation of our food supply at risk, the Government stepped forward with billions of dollars in assistance to help farmers preserve their precious soils.

Since that time, Federal spending on conservation has steadily declined. Yet today agriculture faces a wide range of environmental challenges, from overgrazing and manure management to fertilizer runoff and water pollution. Urban and rural citizens alike are increasingly concerned about the environmental impact of agriculture.

Farmers and ranchers pride themselves on being good stewards of the land, and there are farm-based solutions to these problems being implemented all over the country. But every dollar spent on constructing a filter strip or developing a nutrient management plan is a dollar that farmers don't have in hard times like these. And even in better times, there is a lot of competition for that dollar.

So who benefits from conservation on farm lands? As much or more than the farmer, it is the rest of us, who depend on the careful stewardship of the water that travels across fields and pastures before reaching rivers, streams, and our groundwater. Farmers and ranchers tend not only to their crops and animals, but also to our public resources.

Since we all share in these benefits, it is only right that we share in their costs. It is time to enter into a true conservation partnership with our farmers and ranchers to help ensure that conservation is not a luxury that comes and goes but an essential and permanent part of sustainable agricultural production nationwide.

In the 1985 farm bill, we required that farmers who wanted to participate in USDA farm programs develop soil conservation plans for their highly erodible land. This provision helped put new conservation plans in place for our most fragile farmlands. In the most recent farm bill, we streamlined conservation programs and established new cost-share and incentive payments for certain practices.

Today I am introducing the Conservation Security Act of 1999, proposed legislation that builds on our past successes and takes a bold step forward in farm and conservation policy.

My bill would establish a universal and voluntary incentive payment program to support and encourage conservation activities by all farmers and ranchers. Under this program, farmers and ranchers could receive up to $50,000 per year in conservation payments. Under this conservation security program, farmers would enter into 3- to 5-year contracts with USDA and choose from one of three classes of conservation practices for which they would receive a payment based on the number of acres covered and the county rental rate for those acres.

This program is directed toward conservation on working lands. It is not a set-aside. It is not an easement program. It is not a conservation reserve program. It is a conservation program so that we farm in the best way possible to conserve our resources and to prevent pollution.

For implementing a basic set of practices, farmers would receive an annual payment of 10 percent of the rental rate of the land covered. I call this basic category class I, and it would include such practices as nutrient management, conservation tillage, and runoff and drainage control.

There would be a class II under which farmers could receive up to 20 percent of the rental rate, where farmers would add to their class I practices by choosing from a menu of class II practices that would be established by the USDA—such things as nutrient management, composting, intensive grazing, partial field practices such as buffer strips and windbreaks, wetland restoration, and wildlife habitat enhancement.

Then the third class, farmers who wanted to do class III conservation practices would enroll their whole farm under a total resource management plan that addresses all aspects of air, land, water, and wildlife. For that, the farmers would receive a 40-percent payment, 40 percent of the rental rate of land in that county.

This bill also provides an incentive for livestock producers. In payment for preparing and adopting comprehensive manure management plans, producers raising under 1,000 animal units at any given time—that would be 2,500 hogs, 1,000 beef cattle, 700 dairy cattle, 55,000 turkeys, or 100,000 chickens—they would be given a per animal incentive payment equal to 10 percent of the 5-year average market price.

This program would not replace or otherwise affect any other conservation program, not at all, this is to add on, except that a farmer could not receive incentive payments under this program in addition to incentive payments under another program in addition to incentive payments for land already enrolled in a program such as the Conservation Reserve Program. In other words, you couldn't have your land in the Conservation Reserve Program and then enter this program with that same land.

Again, I emphasize, the Conservation Security Program would be totally voluntary. It would be up to the farmer to decide if they want to do it. If they do, then they would get additional payments. A lot of these practices farmers are already doing now, for which they receive little or no support.

Again, these practices don't just benefit the farmer; in fact, a lot of times it may burden the farmer. That farmer may have to do extra work, require a little extra time. Maybe some equipment for these kinds of conservation practices. The beneficiaries of this are all of us. We all will benefit from cleaner air, cleaner streams and rivers, protecting our groundwater, wildlife habitats for those of us who like to hunt and fish.

Our private lands are a national resource, and conservation on farm and ranchlands provides environmental benefits that are just as important as the production of abundant and safe food. I am introducing the Conservation Security Act because I believe it will help secure both the economic future of our farmers, help them a little bit with the safety net, and it will be a cornerstone, I think, of our national farm policy and the environmental future of agriculture.

I am introducing this bill for myself, Senator DASCHLE, Senator LEAHY, Senator KERREY of Nebraska, Senator CONRAD, and Senator JOHNSON.

I ask other Senators who are interested to contact my staff. We are now actively seeking cosponsors for this new voluntary conservation program.

I thank the Chair.

By Mr. HATCH (for himself, Mrs. FEINSTEIN, Mr. DEWINE, Mr. BIDEN, Mr. THURMOND, Mr. BOND, Mr. SMITH of Oregon, Mr. HELMS, Mr. REID, and Mr. BRYAN):

S. 1428. A bill to amend the Controlled Substances Act and the Controlled Substances Import and Export Act relating to the manufacture, traffick, import and export of amphetamine and methamphetamine, and for other purposes; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

METHAMPHETAMINE ANTI-PROLIFERATION ACT
OF 1999

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I rise to day to introduce the Methamphetamine Anti-Proliferation Act of 1999, a very important piece of legislation in America's on-going war on drugs. Three years ago I introduced the Comprehensive Methamphetamine Act of 1999, which this body passed, to address the frightening and very real problem of methamphetamine abuse in this country. That legislation has provided law enforcement with necessary tools to combat methamphetamine and has helped us track and slow the proliferation of methamphetamine manufacturing and abuse. However, there remain too many people in this country who are determined to undermine our drug laws and turn America into one colossal metamphetamine laboratory. For this reason, I, along with Senators FEINSTEIN, DEWINE, BOND, THURMOND, BIDEN, BRYAN, and REID, are introducing this bipartisan bill that seeks to shield America against the proliferation of methamphetamine Manufacturing.

The methamphetamine threat differs in kind from the threat of other illegal drugs because methamphetamine can be made from readily available and legal chemicals and substances, and because it poses serious dangers to both human life and to the environment. America's history of fighting illegal drugs has been long and tiring but with so many young Americans still being exposed to so many destructive drugs, now is not the time to give up—it is a time to fight smarter and harder. The provisions of this bill will provide law enforcement with several effective tools that will help us turn the tide of proliferation of methamphetamine manufacturing in America.

Traditionally, the overwhelming majority of illegal drugs consumed in America has been manufactured outside of our borders and then illegally smuggled into America. The rapid spread and growing use of methamphetamine threatens to change the future of where drugs are manufactured. Drug pushers are threatening to turn America into a producing country of a drug that affects the lives of every American because it not only destroys the lives of those who use the drug, but also can have devastating effects on people situated around lab sites, on law enforcement officials that have to clean the labs, and on the environment.

According to a report prepared by the Community Epidemiology Work Group, which is part of the National Institute on Drug Abuse, methamphetamine "abuse levels remain high . . . and there is strong evidence to suggest this drug will continue to be a problem in West Coast areas and to spread to other areas of the United States." the reasons given for the ominous prediction are that methamphetamine can be produced easily in small, clandestine labs and the chemicals used to make methamphetamine are readily available.

This threat is real and immediate, and the numbers are telling. According to the Drug Enforcement Administration, the DEA, the number of labs cleaned up by the Administration has almost doubled each year since 1995. Last year 5,786 amphetamine and methamphetamine labs were seized by DEA and State and local law enforcement officials, and millions of dollars were spent on cleaning up the pollutants and toxins created and left behind by operators of these labs. In Utah alone, there were 266 lab seizures last year, a number which elevated Utah to the unenviable position of being ranked third among all states for higher per capita clan lab seizures. The problem with the high number of manufacturing labs is compounded by the fact that the chemicals and substances utilized in the manufacturing process are unstable, volatile, and highly combustible. The smallest amounts of these chemicals, when mixed improperly, can cause explosions and fires. And of course, those operating these labs are not scientists, but rather unskilled, ignorant, criminals and fly-by-nights who are completely apathetic to the destructive powers that are inherent in the manufacturing process. This fact is even more frightening when you consider that most of these labs are situated in residences, motels, trailers, and vans.

Let me take a moment to highlight some of the provisions of this bill that will assist Federal, State, and local law enforcement in preventing the proliferation of methamphetamine manufacturing in America.

First, the bill will bolster the DEA's ability to combat the manufacturing and trafficking of methamphetamine and other drugs by authorizing the hiring of new agents to carry out a variety of anti-drug initiatives. Agents will be hired to assist State and local law enforcement officials in small and mid-sized communities in all phases of methamphetamine manufacturing investigations. Due to the large number of manufacturers and traffickers that are setting up shop in small and rural cities, law enforcement agencies located in these areas are in dire need of the DEA's expert guidance and knowledge of methamphetamine investigations, including assistance in interrogating suspects, conducting surveillance operations, and collecting evidence to build a case. This bill also authorizes the expansion of the number of DEA resident offices and posts-of-duty, which are smaller DEA offices often set up in small and rural cities that are overwhelmed by methamphetamine manufacturing and trafficking.

Another way this legislation will help the DEA assist State and local officials is to provide for the training of State and local law enforcement personnel in techniques used in methamphetamine investigations and to provide them with certification training in handling the dangerously-volatile and toxic wastes produced by methamphetamine labs. It also provides for the creation of another DEA program that will enable certain State and local law enforcement officials to recertify other law enforcement in their regions. These programs are authorized for a three year period and designed to pass on the DEA's knowledge and expertise to State and local officials so that they can become more independent of the DEA and thereafter rely rather on each other in combating the scourge of methamphetamine manufacturing.

This bill contains many references to the drug amphetamine, a lesser known, but equally dangerous drug. Because the process of manufacturing amphetamine is as dangerous as manufacturing methamphetamine, this bill seeks to equalize the punishment for manufacturing the two drugs. Other than being slightly less potent, amphetamine is manufactured, sold, and used in the same manner as methamphetamine. In fact, many times a person can set out to manufacture a batch of methamphetamine and end up with amphetamine if just one precursor chemical is used in place of another. When this happens, drug dealers sell amphetamine as methamphetamine and users buy and use it thinking it is methamphetamine. The dangers posed to the environment are also the same. Amphetamine labs have the same destructing and polluting ability as methamphetamine labs. Every law enforcement officer with whom I have spoken, including federal and State prosecutors and federal and State law enforcement officials, agreed that the penalties for amphetamine should be the same as those for methamphetamine.

Another important section of this bill will assist in preventing the manufacture of methamphetamine and other illegal drugs by banning the dissemination of drug "recipes" and other demonstrative information relating to the manufacturing and use of controlled substances. The dissemination of this type of information is prohibited if the intent of the person disseminating the information is for it to be used for, or in furtherance of, a federal crime or if the person disseminating the information has knowledge that the person receiving the information intends to use the information for, or in furtherance, of a federal crime. Currently, there are hundreds of sites on the Internet that instruct how to manufacture methamphetamine and other illegal drugs, including what ingredients are required, what instruments or equipment is needed, and how to combine precisely the ingredients. These step-by-step instructions will be illegal under this bill if the person posting the information or the person receiving the information intends to engage in activity that violates our drug laws.

I was shocked to discover that those who embrace the drug counter-culture these days are using the Internet to promote, advertise, and sell illegal drugs and drug paraphernalia. In 1992, Congress passed a law that made it illegal for anyone to sell or offer for sale drug paraphernalia. This law resulted in the closings of numerous "head shops," yet, now the out-of-business store owners are selling their illegal drug paraphernalia on the Internet. This bill will amend the anti-drug paraphernalia statute to clarify that advertisements for sale include the use of any communication facility, including the Internet, to post or publicize in any way any matter, including a telephone number or electronic or mail address, knowing that such matter is designed to be used to buy, distribute, or otherwise facilitate a transaction in drug paraphernalia. This will not only prevent web sites from advertising drug paraphernalia for sale, but it will also prohibit web sites that do not sell drug paraphernalia from allowing other sites that do from advertising on its web site. Currently, anyone can log on to the Internet, go to one of the numerous pro-drug sites, and purchase illegal drug paraphernalia, such bongs, water pipes, "Toke" bottles and "High Again" bottles, along with descriptions of how these devices can assist in getting a better "high" from smoking marijuana. There are even web sites that advertise for sale marijuana and poppy seeds, along with growing and nurturing instructions. This type of behavior is not only reprehensible, but it is also illegal, and this clarifying provision can help stop this behavior from continuing over the Internet.

Finally, this legislation seeks to impose harsher penalties on manufacturers of illegal drugs when their actions create a substantial risk of harm to human life or to the environment. The inherent dangers of killing innocent bystanders and, at the same time, contaminating the environment during the methamphetamine manufacturing process warrant a punitive penalty that will deter some from engaging in the activity.

Mr. President, many people have grown increasingly more skeptical as to whether America can ever rid our nation of the dreadful plague of illegal drug use. I say to all those skeptics that now is not the time to take a defeatist attitude. Too many bright young people are depending on us to do what is right. Sure, some measures taken in the past have not been as helpful as some may have hoped, but that just means we need to keep persevering to find the right answers. I believe that this bill contains many of the right answers and will help in one of our nation's most difficult struggles. We can defeat the drug dealers and traffickers. We must fight back for the sake of our children and grandchildren. I hope that Senators will join me in this fight and support this very important piece of legislation. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a copy of this legislation and a summary be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1428

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the "Methamphetamine Anti-Proliferation Act of 1999".

SEC. 2. MANUFACTURING AND DISTRIBUTION OF AMPHETAMINE.

(a) MANUFACTURE OR DISTRIBUTION OF SUBSTANTIAL QUANTITIES OF AMPHETAMINE.—Subparagraph (A) of section 401(b)(1) of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 841(b)(1)) is amended—

- (1) by striking "or" at the end of clause (vii);
- (2) by adding "or" at the end of clause (viii); and
- (3) by inserting after clause (viii) the following new clause:

"(ix) 50 grams or more of amphetamine, its salts, optical isomers, and salts of its optical isomers or 500 grams or more of a mixture or substance containing a detectable amount of amphetamine, its salts, optical isomers, or salts of its optical isomers;"

(b) MANUFACTURE OR DISTRIBUTION OF LESSER QUANTITIES OF AMPHETAMINE.—Subparagraph (B) of such section 401(b)(1) is amended—

- (1) by striking "or" at the end of clause (vii);
- (2) by adding "or" at the end of clause (viii); and
- (3) by inserting after clause (viii) the following new clause:

"(ix) 5 grams or more of amphetamine, its salts, optical isomers, and salts of its optical isomers or 50 grams or more of a mixture or substance containing a detectable amount of amphetamine, its salts, optical isomers, or salts of its optical isomers;"

SEC. 3. IMPORT AND EXPORT OF AMPHETAMINE.

(a) IMPORT OR EXPORT OF SUBSTANTIAL QUANTITIES OF AMPHETAMINE.—Paragraph (1) of section 1010(b) of the Controlled Substances Import and Export Act (21 U.S.C. 960(b)) is amended—

- (1) by striking "or" at the end of subparagraph (G);
- (2) by striking the period at the end of subparagraph (H) and inserting "; or"; and
- (3) by inserting after subparagraph (H) the following new subparagraph:

"(I) 50 grams or more of amphetamine, its salts, optical isomers, and salts of its optical isomers or 500 grams or more of a mixture or substance containing a detectable amount of amphetamine, its salts, optical isomers, or salts of its optical isomers;"

(b) IMPORT OR EXPORT OF LESSER QUANTITIES OF AMPHETAMINE.—Paragraph (2) of such section 1010(b) is amended—

- (1) by striking "or" at the end of subparagraph (G);
- (2) by striking the period at the end of subparagraph (H) and inserting "; or"; and
- (3) by inserting after subparagraph (H) the following new subparagraph:

"(I) 5 grams or more of amphetamine, its salts, optical isomers, and salts of its optical isomers or 50 grams or more of a mixture or substance containing a detectable amount of amphetamine, its salts, optical isomers, or salts of its optical isomers;"

SEC. 4. ENHANCED PUNISHMENT OF METHAMPHETAMINE AND AMPHETAMINE LABORATORY OPERATORS.

(a) FEDERAL SENTENCING GUIDELINES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Pursuant to its authority under section 994(p) of title 28, United States Code, the United States Sentencing Commission shall amend the Federal sentencing guidelines in accordance with paragraph (2) with respect to any offense relating to the manufacture, import, export, or traffick in amphetamine or methamphetamine (including an attempt or conspiracy to do any of the foregoing) in violation of—

(A) the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 801 et seq.);

(B) the Controlled Substances Import and Export Act (21 U.S.C. 951 et seq.); or

(C) the Maritime Drug Law Enforcement Act (46 U.S.C. App. 1901 et seq.).

(2) REQUIREMENTS.—In carrying out this subsection, the United States Sentencing Commission shall, with respect to each offense described in paragraph (1)—

(A) increase the base offense level for the offense so that the base offense level is the same as the base offense level applicable to an identical amount of methamphetamine; or

(B) if the offense created a substantial risk of danger to the health and safety of a minor or incompetent, increase the base offense level for the offense by not less than 6 offense levels above the level established under subparagraph (A).

(3) EMERGENCY AUTHORITY TO SENTENCING COMMISSION.—The United States Sentencing Commission shall promulgate amendments pursuant to this subsection as soon as practicable after the date of the enactment of this Act in accordance with the procedure set forth in section 21(a) of the Sentencing Act of 1987 (Public Law 100-182), as though the authority under that Act had not expired.

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made pursuant to this section shall apply with respect to any offense occurring on or after the date that is 60 days after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 5. ADVERTISEMENTS FOR DRUG PARAPHERNALIA AND SCHEDULE I CONTROLLED SUBSTANCES.

(a) DRUG PARAPHERNALIA.—Section 422 of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 863) is amended—

(1) in subsection (a)(1), by inserting ", directly or indirectly advertise for sale," after "sell"; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

"(g) In this section, the term 'directly or indirectly advertise for sale' includes the use of any communication facility (as that term is defined in section 403(b)) to post, publicize, transmit, publish, link to, broadcast, or otherwise advertise any matter (including a telephone number or electronic or mail address) knowing that such matter has the purpose of seeking or offering, or is designed to be used, to receive, buy, distribute, or otherwise facilitate a transaction in."

(b) SCHEDULE I CONTROLLED SUBSTANCES.—Section 403(c) of such Act (21 U.S.C. 843(c)) is amended—

(1) in the first sentence, by inserting before the period the following: ", or to directly or indirectly advertise for sale (as that term is defined in section 422(g)) any Schedule I controlled substance"; and

(2) in the second sentence, by striking "term 'advertisement'" and inserting "term 'written advertisement'".

SEC. 6. CONTINUING CRIMINAL ENTERPRISES.

Section 408 of the Controlled Substances Act of (21 U.S.C. 848) is amended—

(1) in subsection (c)(2)—

(A) in the matter preceding subparagraph (A), by striking "violations of" and inserting "3 or more acts made punishable by"; and

(B) in subparagraph (A), by striking "are" and inserting "series is"; and

(2) by inserting after subsection (e) the following new subsection:

"(f) This section may not be construed to require, in any trial before a jury, unanimity as to the identities of—

"(1) the predicate acts specified in subsection (c)(2); or

"(2) the other persons specified in subsection (c)(2)(A)."

SEC. 7. MANDATORY RESTITUTION FOR VIOLATIONS OF CONTROLLED SUBSTANCES ACT AND CONTROLLED SUBSTANCES IMPORT AND EXPORT ACT RELATING TO AMPHETAMINE AND METHAMPHETAMINE.

(a) MANDATORY RESTITUTION.—Section 413(q) of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 853(q)) is amended—

(1) in the matter preceding paragraph (1), by striking "may" and inserting "shall";

(2) by inserting "amphetamine or" before "methamphetamine" each place it appears; and

(3) in paragraph (2)—

(A) by inserting ", the State or local government concerned, or both the United States and the State or local government concerned" after "United States" the first place it appears; and

(B) by inserting "or the State or local government concerned, as the case may be," after "United States" the second place it appears.

(b) DEPOSIT OF AMOUNTS IN DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE ASSETS FORFEITURE FUND.—Section 524(c)(4) of title 28, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by striking "and" at the end of subparagraph (B);

(2) by striking the period at the end of subparagraph (C) and inserting "; and"; and

(3) by adding at the end the following:

"(D) all amounts collected—

"(i) by the United States pursuant to a reimbursement order under paragraph (2) of section 413(q) of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 853(q)); and

"(ii) pursuant to a restitution order under paragraph (1) or (3) of section 413(q) of the Controlled Substances Act for injuries to the United States."

SEC. 8. ENDANGERING HUMAN LIFE OR THE ENVIRONMENT WHILE ILLEGALLY MANUFACTURING CONTROLLED SUBSTANCES.

(a) HARM TO THE ENVIRONMENT.—(1) Section 417 of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 858) is amended by inserting "or the environment" after "to human life".

(2) The table of contents for that Act is amended in the item relating to section 417 by inserting "or the environment" after "to human life".

(b) ENHANCED PENALTY FOR ESTABLISHMENT OF MANUFACTURING OPERATION.—That section is further amended—

(1) by inserting "(a)" before "Whoever";

(2) in subsection (a), as so designated—

(A) by inserting "or violating section 416," after "to do so," the first place it appears; and

(B) by striking "shall be fined" and all that follows and inserting "shall be imprisoned not less than 10 years nor more than 40 years, and, in addition, may be fined in accordance with title 18, United States Code."; and

(3) by adding at the end the following:

"(b) Any penalty under subsection (a) for a violation that is also a violation of section 416 shall be in addition to any penalty under section 416 for such violation."

(c) NATURE OF PARTICULAR CONDUCT.—That section is further amended by adding at the end the following:

"(c) In any case where the conduct at issue is, relates to, or involves the manufacture of amphetamine or methamphetamine, such conduct shall, by itself, be rebuttably presumed to constitute the creation of a substantial risk of harm to human life or the environment within the meaning of subsection (a)."

SEC. 9. CRIMINAL PROHIBITION ON DISTRIBUTION OF CERTAIN INFORMATION RELATING TO THE MANUFACTURE OF CONTROLLED SUBSTANCES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Part I of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting after chapter 21 the following new chapter:

"CHAPTER 22—CONTROLLED SUBSTANCES

"Sec.

"421. Distribution of information relating to manufacture of controlled substances.

"§ 421. Distribution of information relating to manufacture of controlled substances

"(a) PROHIBITION ON DISTRIBUTION OF INFORMATION RELATING TO MANUFACTURE OF CONTROLLED SUBSTANCES.—

"(1) CONTROLLED SUBSTANCE DEFINED.—In this subsection, the term 'controlled substance' has the meaning given that term in section 102(6) of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 802(6)).

"(2) PROHIBITION.—It shall be unlawful for any person—

"(A) to teach or demonstrate the manufacture of a controlled substance, or to distribute by any means information pertaining to, in whole or in part, the manufacture or use of a controlled substance, with the intent that the teaching, demonstration, or information be used for, or in furtherance of, an activity that constitutes a Federal crime; or

"(B) to teach or demonstrate to any person the manufacture of a controlled substance, or to distribute to any person, by any means, information pertaining to, in whole or in part, the manufacture or use of a controlled substance, knowing that such person intends to use the teaching, demonstration, or information for, or in furtherance of, an activity that constitutes a Federal crime.

"(b) PENALTY.—Any person who violates subsection (a) shall be fined under this title, imprisoned not more than 10 years, or both."

(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of chapters at the beginning of part I of title 18, United States Code, is amended by inserting after the item relating to chapter 21 the following new item:

"22. Controlled Substances 421".

SEC. 10. NOTICE; CLARIFICATION.

(a) NOTICE OF ISSUANCE.—Section 3103a of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new sentence: "With respect to any issuance under this section or any other provision of law (including section 3117 and any rule), any notice required, or that may be required, to be given may be delayed pursuant to the standards, terms, and conditions set forth in section 2705, unless otherwise expressly provided by statute."

(b) CLARIFICATION.—(1) Section 2(e) of Public Law 95-78 (91 Stat. 320) is amended by adding at the end the following: "Subdivision (d) of such rule, as in effect on this date, is amended by inserting 'tangible' before 'property' each place it occurs."

(2) The amendment made by paragraph (1) shall take effect on the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 11. TRAINING FOR DRUG ENFORCEMENT ADMINISTRATION AND STATE AND LOCAL LAW ENFORCEMENT PERSONNEL RELATING TO CLANDESTINE LABORATORIES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—

(1) REQUIREMENT.—The Administrator of the Drug Enforcement Administration shall carry out the programs described in subsection (b).

(2) DURATION.—The duration of any program under that subsection may not exceed 3 years.

(b) COVERED PROGRAMS.—The programs described in this subsection are as follows:

(1) ADVANCED MOBILE CLANDESTINE LABORATORY TRAINING TEAMS.—A program of advanced mobile clandestine laboratory training teams, which shall provide information and training to State and local law enforcement personnel in techniques utilized in conducting undercover investigations and conspiracy cases, and other information designed to assist in the investigation of the illegal manufacturing and trafficking of amphetamine and methamphetamine.

(2) BASIC CLANDESTINE LABORATORY CERTIFICATION TRAINING.—A program of basic clandestine laboratory certification training, which shall provide information and training—

(A) to Drug Enforcement Administration personnel and State and local law enforcement personnel for purposes of enabling such personnel to meet any certification requirements under law with respect to the handling of wastes created by illegal amphetamine and methamphetamine laboratories; and

(B) to State and local law enforcement personnel for purposes of enabling such personnel to provide the information and training covered by subparagraph (A) to other State and local law enforcement personnel.

(3) CLANDESTINE LABORATORY RECERTIFICATION AND AWARENESS TRAINING.—A program of clandestine laboratory recertification and awareness training, which shall provide information and training to State and local law enforcement personnel for purposes of enabling such personnel to provide recertification and awareness training relating to clandestine laboratories to additional State and local law enforcement personnel.

(c) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated for each of fiscal years 2000, 2001, and 2002 amounts as follows:

(1) $1,500,000 to carry out the program described in subsection (b)(1).

(2) $3,000,000 to carry out the program described in subsection (b)(2).

(3) $1,000,000 to carry out the program described in subsection (b)(3).

SEC. 12. COMBATTING METHAMPHETAMINE AND AMPHETAMINE IN HIGH INTENSITY DRUG TRAFFICKING AREAS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Director of National Drug Control Policy shall use amounts available under this section to combat the trafficking of methamphetamine and amphetamine in areas designated by the Director as high intensity drug trafficking areas.

(2) ACTIVITIES.—In meeting the requirement in paragraph (1), the Director shall—

(A) employ additional Federal law enforcement personnel, or facilitate the employment of additional State and local law enforcement personnel, including agents, investigators, prosecutors, laboratory technicians, and chemists; and

(B) carry out such other activities as the Director considers appropriate.

(b) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section—

(1) $5,000,000 for fiscal year 2000; and
(2) such sums as may be necessary for each of fiscal years 2001 through 2004.

(c) APPORTIONMENT OF FUNDS.—

(1) FACTORS IN APPORTIONMENT.—The Director shall apportion amounts appropriated for a fiscal year pursuant to the authorization of appropriations in subsection (b) for activities under subsection (a) among and within areas designated by the Director as high intensity drug trafficking areas based on the following factors:

(A) The number of methamphetamine manufacturing facilities and amphetamine manufacturing facilities discovered by Federal, State, or local law enforcement officials in the previous fiscal year.

(B) The number of methamphetamine prosecutions and amphetamine prosecutions in Federal, State, or local courts in the previous fiscal year.

(C) The number of methamphetamine arrests and amphetamine arrests by Federal, State, or local law enforcement officials in the previous fiscal year.

(D) The amounts of methamphetamine, amphetamine, or listed chemicals (as that term is defined in section 102(33) of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 802(33)) seized by Federal, State, or local law enforcement officials in the previous fiscal year.

(E) Intelligence data from the Drug Enforcement Administration showing trafficking and transportation patterns in methamphetamine, amphetamine, and listed chemicals (as that term is so defined).

(2) CERTIFICATION.—Before the Director apportions any funds under this subsection to a high intensity drug trafficking area, the Director shall certify that the law enforcement entities responsible for clandestine methamphetamine and amphetamine laboratory seizures in that area are providing laboratory seizure data to the national clandestine laboratory database at the El Paso Intelligence Center.

(d) LIMITATION ON ADMINISTRATIVE COSTS.—Not more than 5 percent of the amount appropriated in a fiscal year pursuant to the authorization of appropriations for that fiscal year in subsection (b) may be available in that fiscal year for administrative costs associated with activities under subsection (a).

SEC. 13. COMBATING AMPHETAMINE AND METHAMPHETAMINE MANUFACTURING AND TRAFFICKING.

(a) ACTIVITIES.—In order to combat the illegal manufacturing and trafficking in amphetamine and methamphetamine, the Administrator of the Drug Enforcement Administration may—

(1) assist State and local law enforcement in small and mid-sized communities in all phases of investigations related to such manufacturing and trafficking;

(2) staff additional regional enforcement and mobile enforcement teams related to such manufacturing and trafficking;

(3) establish additional resident offices and posts of duty to assist State and local law enforcement in rural areas in combating such manufacturing and trafficking;

(4) provide the Special Operations Division of the Administration with additional agents and staff to collect, evaluate, interpret, and disseminate critical intelligence targeting the command and control operations of major amphetamine and methamphetamine manufacturing and trafficking organizations; and

(5) carry out such other activities as the Administrator considers appropriate.

(b) ADDITIONAL POSITIONS AND PERSONNEL.—In carrying out activities under subsection (a), the Administrator may establish in the Administration not more than 50 full-time positions, including not more than 31 special-agent positions, and may appoint personnel to such positions.

(c) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated for each fiscal year after fiscal year 1999, $6,500,000 for purposes of carrying out the activities authorized by subsection (a) and employing personnel in positions established under subsection (b).

SEC. 14. ENVIRONMENTAL HAZARDS ASSOCIATED WITH ILLEGAL MANUFACTURE OF AMPHETAMINE AND METHAMPHETAMINE.

(a) USE OF AMOUNTS OR DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE ASSETS FORFEITURE FUND.—Section 524(c)(1)(E) of title 28, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by inserting “(i) for” before “disbursements”;

(2) by inserting “and” after the semicolon; and

(3) by adding at the end the following:

“(i) for payment for—

“(I) costs incurred by or on behalf of the Drug Enforcement Administration in connection with the removal of any hazardous substance or pollutant or contaminant associated with the illegal manufacture of amphetamine or methamphetamine; and

“(II) costs incurred by or on behalf of a State or local government in connection with such removal in any case in which such State or local government has assisted in a Federal prosecution relating to amphetamine or methamphetamine.”;

(b) GRANTS UNDER DRUG CONTROL AND SYSTEM IMPROVEMENT GRANT PROGRAM.—Section 501(b)(3) of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 is amended by inserting before the semicolon the following: “and to remove any hazardous substance or pollutant or contaminant associated with the illegal manufacture of amphetamine or methamphetamine”.

(c) AMOUNTS SUPPLEMENT AND NOT SUPPLANT.—

(1) ASSETS FORFEITURE FUND.—Any amounts made available from the Department of Justice Assets Forfeiture Fund in a fiscal year by reason of the amendment made by subsection (a) shall supplement, and not supplant, any other amounts made available to the Drug Enforcement Administration in such fiscal year for payment of costs described in section 524(c)(1)(E)(ii) of title 28, United States Code, as so amended.

(2) GRANT PROGRAM.—Any amounts made available in a fiscal year under the grant program under section 501(b)(3) of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 for the removal of hazardous substances or pollutants or contaminants associated with the illegal manufacture of amphetamine or methamphetamine by reason of the amendment made by subsection (b) shall supplement, and not supplant, any other amounts made available in such fiscal year for such removal.

SEC. 15. ANTIDRUG MESSAGES ON FEDERAL GOVERNMENT INTERNET WEBSITES.

Not later than 90 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the head of each department, agency, and establishment of the Federal Government shall, in consultation with the Director of the Office of National Drug Control Policy, place antidrug messages on appropriate Internet websites controlled by such department, agency, or establishment which messages shall, where appropriate, contain an electronic hyperlink to the Internet website, if any, of the Office.

SEC. 16. MAIL ORDER REQUIREMENTS.

Section 310(b)(3) of the Controlled Substances Act (21 U.S.C. 830(b)(3)) is amended—

(1) by redesignating subparagraphs (A) and (B) as subparagraphs (B) and (C), respectively;

(2) by inserting before subparagraph (B), as so redesignated, the following new subparagraph (A):

“(A) As used in this paragraph:

“(i) The term ‘drug product’ means an active ingredient in dosage form that has been approved or otherwise may be lawfully marketed under the Food, Drug, and Cosmetic Act for distribution in the United States.

“(ii) The term ‘valid prescription’ means a prescription which is issued for a legitimate medical purpose by an individual practitioner licensed by law to administer and prescribe the drugs concerned and acting in the usual course of the practitioner’s professional practice.”;

(3) in subparagraph (B), as so redesignated, by inserting “or who engages in an export transaction” after “nonregulated person”; and

(4) adding at the end the following:

“(D) Except as provided in subparagraph (E), the following distributions to a nonregulated person, and the following export transactions, shall not be subject to the reporting requirement in subparagraph (B):

“(i) Distributions of sample packages of drug products when such packages contain not more than 2 solid dosage units or the equivalent of 2 dosage units in liquid form, not to exceed 10 milliliters of liquid per package, and not more than one package is distributed to an individual or residential address in any 30-day period.

“(ii) Distributions of drug products by retail distributors to the extent that such distributions are consistent with the activities authorized for a retail distributor as specified in section 102(46).

“(iii) Distributions of drug products to a resident of a long term care facility (as that term is defined in regulations prescribed by the Attorney General) or distributions of drug products to a long term care facility for dispensing to or for use by a resident of that facility.

“(iv) Distributions of drug products pursuant to a valid prescription.

“(v) Exports which have been reported to the Attorney General pursuant to section 1004 or 1018 or which are subject to a waiver granted under section 1018(e)(2).

“(vi) Any quantity, method, or type of distribution or any quantity, method, or type of distribution of a specific listed chemical (including specific formulations or drug products) or of a group of listed chemicals (including specific formulations or drug products) which the Attorney General has excluded by regulation from such reporting requirement on the basis that such reporting is not necessary for the enforcement of this title or title III.

“(E) The Attorney General may revoke any or all of the exemptions listed in subparagraph (D) for an individual regulated person if he finds that drug products distributed by the regulated person are being used in violation of this title or title III. The regulated person shall be notified of the revocation, which will be effective upon receipt by the person of such notice, as provided in section 1018(c)(1), and shall have the right to an expedited hearing as provided in section 1018(c)(2).”.

SUMMARY OF THE METHAMPHETAMINE ANTI-PROLIFERATION ACT OF 1999

Sec. 1. Short Title.

Methamphetamine Anti-Proliferation Act of 1999

Sec. 2. Manufacture and Distribution of Amphetamine and Methamphetamine.

Section 1 amends title 21 U.S.C. 841(b)(1) to make the statutory punishment for the manufacture and distribution of amphetamine the same as that of methamphetamine.

Sec. 3. Import and Export of Amphetamine and Methamphetamine.

Section 2 amends the Import and Export Act (21 U.S.C. 960(b)) to make the statutory punishment for amphetamine the same as that of methamphetamine.

Sec. 4. Sentencing Guidelines.

Section 3 amends the Sentencing Guidelines to adjust the penalty for amphetamine to meet the penalty for methamphetamine. It also provides for a 6 level enhancement if the manufacturing either meth or amphetamine created a substantial risk of danger to the health and safety of a minor or incompetent.

Sec. 5. Advertisements For Drug Paraphernalia and Schedule I Controlled Substances.

Section 8 amends 21 U.S.C. 863 (drug paraphernalia statute) to prohibit direct or indirect advertisements for the sale of paraphernalia. It defines advertisements for sale to include the use of any communication facility to post or publicize in any way any matter, including a telephone number or electronic or mail address, knowing that such matter has the purpose of seeking or offering, or is designed to be used, to receive, buy, distribute, or otherwise facilitate a transaction.

It also amends 21 U.S.C. 843(c) to prohibit direct or indirect advertising for the sale of a Schedule I Controlled Substance. The current statute arguably only prohibited the direct advertising of a schedule I drug in the print media.

Sec. 6. Continuing Criminal Enterprise.

Section 11 amends the Continuing Criminal Enterprise statute (21 U.S.C. 848) by replacing the phrase “continuing series of violations of” with the phrase “continuing series of 3 or more acts made punishable by.” This change is in response to the recent Supreme Court case Richardson v. United States (decided June 1, 1999) where the Court held that a jury in a CCE case must unanimously agree not only that the defendant committed some “continuing series of violations,” but also about which specific “violations” make up that “continuing series.” There was previously a split among the circuits (the 4th Circuit and the D.C. Circuit both had ruled unanimity with respect to particular “violations” was not required).

Sec. 7. Mandatory Restitution for Meth Lab Clean-Up.

Section 7 makes reimbursement for the costs incurred by the U.S. or State and local governments for the cleanup associated with the manufacture of amphetamine or methamphetamine mandatory. It also provides that the restitution money will go to the Asset Forfeiture Fund instead of the treasury.

Sec. 8. Endangering Human Life or the Environment While Illegally Manufacturing Amphetamine or Methamphetamine.

Section 8 increases the penalty under 21 U.S.C. 858 to not less than 10 years for manufacturing or trafficking a controlled substance that creates a substantial risk of harm to human life or the environment. It creates a rebuttable presumption that the manufacturing of amphetamine or methamphetamine constitutes the creation of a substantial risk of harm to human life and the environment.

Sec. 9. Criminal Prohibition on Distribution of Certain Information Relating to the Manufacture of Controlled Substances.

Section 9 prohibits teaching or demonstrating the manufacture or use of a Controlled Substance or distributing by any means information pertaining to the manufacture or use of a Controlled Substance (1) with the intent that this information be used for, or in furtherance of, an activity that constitutes a federal crime; or (2) knowing that such person intends to use this information for, or in furtherance of, an activity that constitutes a federal crime. The penalty for violation is not more than 10 years in prison.

Sec. 10. Notice; Clarification.

This section amends 18 U.S.C. 3103a to allow for the delay of any notice that is, or may be, required pursuant to the issuance of a warrant under this section or any other law.

Sec. 11. Training for Drug Enforcement Administration and State and Local Law Enforcement Personnel Relating to Clandestine Laboratories.

Section 11 authorizes $5.5 million in funding for DEA training programs designed to (1) train State and local law enforcement in techniques used in meth investigations; (2) provide a certification program for State and local law enforcement enabling them to meet requirements with respect to the handling of wastes created by meth labs; (3) create a certification program that enables certain State and local law enforcement to recertify other law enforcement in their regions; and (4) staff mobile training teams which provide State and local law enforcement with advanced training in conducting clan lab investigations and with training that enables them to recertify other law enforcement personnel. The training programs are authorized for 3 years after which the States, either alone or in consultation/com-bination with other States, will be responsible for training their own personnel. The States will be required to submit a report detailing what measures they are taking to ensure that they have programs in place to take over the responsibility after the three year federal program expires.

Sec. 12. Combating Methamphetamine in High Intensity Drug Trafficking Areas.

This section authorizes $5 million a year for fiscal years 2000-2004 to be appropriated to ONDCP to combat trafficking of methamphetamine in designated HIDTA's by hiring new federal, State, and local law enforcement personnel, including agents, investigators, prosecutors, lab technicians and chemists. It provides that the funds shall be apportioned among the HIDTA's based on the following factors: (1) number of Meth labs discovered in the previous year; (2) number of Meth prosecutions in the previous year; (3) number of Meth arrests in the previous year; (4) the amounts of Meth seized in the previous year; and (5) intelligence data from the DEA showing trafficking and transportation patterns in methamphetamine, amphetamine and listed chemicals. Before apportioning any funds, the Director must certify that the law enforcement entities responsible for clan lab seizures are providing lab seizure data to the national clandestine laboratory database at the El Paso Intelligence Center. It also provides that not more than five percent of the appropriated amount may be used for administrative costs.

Sec. 13. Combating Amphetamine and Methamphetamine Manufacturing and Trafficking.

This section authorizes $6.5 million to be appropriated for the hiring of new agents to (1) assist State and local law enforcement in small and mid-sized communities in all phases of drug investigations; (2) staff additional regional enforcement and mobile enforcement teams; (3) establish additional resident offices and posts of duty to assist State and local law enforcement in rural areas; and (4) provide the Special Operations Division with additional agents for intelligence and investigative operations.

Sec. 14. Environmental Hazards Associated With Illegal Manufacture of Amphetamine and Methamphetamine.

Authorizes the DEA to receive money from the Asset Forfeiture Fund to pay for cleanup costs associated with the illegal manufacture of amphetamine or methamphetamine. It also allows for reimbursements to State and local entities for cleanup costs when they assist in a federal prosecution on amphetamine or methamphetamine related charges.

Sec. 15. Antidrug Messages on Federal Government Internet Websites.

Requires all federal departments and agencies, in consultation with ONDCP, to place antidrug messages on their Internet websites and an electronic hyperlink to ONDCP's website. Numerous government agencies have children's websites, including the Social Security Administration.

Sec. 16. Mail Order Requirements.

This section represents changes to the reporting requirements of 21 U.S.C. 830(b)(3) worked out between the DEA and industry. Reporting will no longer be required for valid prescriptions, limited distributions of sample packages, distributions by retail distributors if consistent with authorized activities, distributions to long term care facilities, and any product which has been exempted by the AG. It also allows the AG to revoke an exemption if he finds the drug product being distributed is being used in violation of the Controlled Substances Act.

Mr. BIDEN. Mr. President, 3 years ago this week I joined with my distinguished friend and colleague, Senator HATCH, to introduce the “Hatch-Biden Methamphetamine Control Act” to address the growing threat of methamphetamine use in our country before it was too late.

Our failure to foresee and prevent the crack cocaine epidemic is one of the most significant public policy mistakes in recent history. Despite the warning signs of an outbreak, few took action until it was too late. But we did learn an important lesson from that mistake. When we began to see similar warning signs with methamphetamine, we acted swiftly to make sure that history would not repeat itself.

That Act provided crucial tools that we needed to stay ahead of the methamphetamine epidemic and avoid the mistakes made during the early stages of the crack epidemic. We increased penalties for possessing and trafficking in methamphetamine and the precursor chemicals and equipment used to manufacture the drug. We tightened the reporting requirements and restrictions on the legitimate sales of products containing precursor chemicals to prevent their diversion, and imposed even greater requirements on firms that sell those products by mail. We ensured that meth manufacturers who endanger the life of any individual or endanger the environment while making this drug receive enhanced prison sentences. And finally, we created a national working group of law enforcement and public health officials to monitor any growth in the methamphetamine epidemic.

I have no doubt that our 1996 legislation slowed this epidemic significantly. But we are up against a powerful and highly addictive drug. Meth stimulates the central nervous system, making the user feel energetic, clever and powerful. Unlike crack, whose effects sometimes last only a matter of minutes, a meth high lasts for hours.

Last year in my home State of Delaware law enforcement officers busted what was described as "the largest and most sophisticated drug lab in the Northeast," seizing 50 pounds of meth and meth base. This was only one of the 5,786 reported clandestine laboratory seizures in the United States last year.

We have countless heart wrenching stories of violence and families being tragically ripped apart by methamphetamine use, sadly reminiscent of what we saw with crack cocaine. A recent news story reported that a woman in California has been charged with the murder of her infant son. High on meth, she left him in a sealed car in the summer heat while she and her boyfriend slept in an air-conditioned motel room nearby. The innocent infant died a tragic and senseless death.

Unfortunately, this unspeakable tragedy is not an isolated incident. It is not unusual for a meth user to remain awake for days. And as the high begins to wane, the user is likely to be violent, delusional and paranoid. Not surprisingly, this behavior often leads to crime. In areas like San Diego where the meth epidemic rages, more than 33 percent of people arrested in 1998 tested positive for the drug.

On top of the violence associated with methamphetamine users, there is also the enormous problem of violence among methamphetamine traffickers and the environmental and life-threatening conditions endemic in the clandestine labs where the drug is produced.

But perhaps the most frightening fact of all is that despite all of the evidence that methamphetamine is a horribly destructive substance, the percentage of kids who perceive it as a harmful drug is on the decline.

And that is why I am joining my friend from Utah once again—along with Senators DEWINE, FEINSTEIN and BOND—to build on the 1996 methamphetamine legislation and continue to fight this pernicious drug.

Our Methamphetamine Anti-Profit Act, first and foremost, addresses the growing problem of amphetamines as a meth substitute by making the penalties for manufacturing, importing, exporting or trafficking amphetamine equivalent to those established for methamphetamine in our 1996 law. The two drugs are nearly identical—they differ by only one chemical. Whereas methamphetamine is made with ephedrine, a substance found in some over-the-counter cold remedies, amphetamine is produced with phenylpropanolamine, a chemical found in over-the-counter diet pills. The two drugs are produced in the same dangerous clandestine labs and are often sold interchangeably on the streets; the penalties for dealing in both substances should be the same.

This legislation also provides the Drug Enforcement Administration with much needed funding to clean up clandestine labs after they are seized as well as to train state and local law enforcement officers to handle the hazardous wastes produced in the meth labs. Methamphetamine is made from an array of hazardous substances—battery acid, lye, ammonia gas, hydrochloric acid, just to name a few—that produce toxic fumes and often lead to fires or explosions when mixed. I am revealing nothing by naming some of these chemical ingredients. Anyone with access to the Internet can download a detailed meth recipe with a few simple keystrokes. Our legislation would make such postings illegal.

This bill also tightens the restrictions on direct and indirect advertising of illegal drug paraphernalia and Schedule I drugs. Under this legislation, it would be illegal for on-line magazines and other websites to post advertisements for such illegal material or provide "links" to websites that do. We crafted this language carefully so that we restrict the sale of drug paraphernalia without restricting the First Amendment.

Finally, the bill provides more money for law enforcement. This includes hiring more Drug Enforcement Administration agents to assist state and local law enforcement in small and mid-size cities and rural areas and providing more money to combat meth in places designated as High Intensity Drug Trafficking Areas.

While I clearly support the goals of this legislation, I want to make it clear that I think we may need to tweak it as it goes through the process to ensure that we do not stymie a good idea with the fine print. Specifically, I have concerns about how we fund meth lab clean up. As written, some of the money would come from the asset forfeiture fund, a most important resource for law enforcement. We are now struggling with reforming the overall structure of asset forfeiture in this country and I would hope we could find an alternative pot of money to tap to do the important work of cleaning up meth lab sites.

That being said, I am confident that any concerns I may have at this time will be resolved during the committee process.

I want to commend Senator HATCH for his continued leadership on this issue. I urge all my colleagues to join us in protecting our children and our society from the devastations of methamphetamine by supporting this vital legislation.

ADDITIONAL COSPONSORS

S. 71

At the request of Ms. SNOWE, the name of the Senator from New Mexico (Mr. BINGAMAN) was added as a cosponsor of S. 71, a bill to amend title 38, United States Code, to establish a presumption of service-connection for certain veterans with Hepatitis C, and for other purposes.

S. 296

At the request of Ms. COLLINS, her name was added as a cosponsor of S. 296, a bill to provide for continuation of the Federal research investment in a fiscally sustainable way, and for other purposes.

S. 313

At the request of Mr. GRAMM, the name of the Senator from Idaho (Mr. CRAPO) was added as a cosponsor of S. 313, a bill to repeal the Public Utility Holding Company Act of 1935, to enact the Public Utility Holding Company Act of 1999, and for other purposes.

S. 376

At the request of Mr. BURNS, the name of the Senator from Maryland (Mr. SARBANES) was added as a cosponsor of S. 376, a bill to amend the Communications Satellite Act of 1962 to promote competition and privatization in satellite communications, and for other purposes.

S. 542

At the request of Mr. ABRAHAM, the name of the Senator from Iowa (Mr. HARKIN) was added as a cosponsor of S. 542, a bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to expand the deduction for computer donations to schools and allow a tax credit for donated computers.

S. 632

At the request of Mr. DEWINE, the name of the Senator from Tennessee (Mr. FRIST) was added as a cosponsor of S. 632, a bill to provide assistance for poison prevention and to stabilize the funding of regional poison control centers.

S. 680

At the request of Mr. HATCH, the name of the Senator from Illinois (Mr. FITZGERALD) was added as a cosponsor of S. 680, a bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to permanently extend the research credit, and for other purposes.

S. 1396

At the request of Mr. JEFFORDS, the name of the Senator from Rhode Island (Mr. REED) was added as a cosponsor of S. 1396, a bill to amend section 4532 of title 10, United States Code, to provide for the coverage and treatment of overhead costs of United States factories and arsenals when not making supplies for the Army, and for other purposes.

SENATE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION 9

At the request of Ms. SNOWE, the names of the Senator from South Carolina (Mr. HOLLINGS) and the Senator from Michigan (Mr. LEVIN) were added as cosponsors of Senate Concurrent Resolution 9, a concurrent resolution calling for a United States effort to end restrictions on the freedoms and human rights of the enclaved people in the occupied area of Cyprus.

SENATE RESOLUTION 92

At the request of Mrs. BOXER, the name of the Senator from Florida (Mr. GRAHAM) was added as a cosponsor of Senate Resolution 92, a resolution expressing the sense of the Senate that funding for prostate cancer research should be increased substantially.

SENATE RESOLUTION 95

At the request of Mr. THURMOND, the names of the Senator from Kentucky (Mr. BUNNING), the Senator from Maryland (Mr. SARBANES), and the Senator from Oklahoma (Mr. NICKLES) were added as cosponsors of Senate Resolution 95, a resolution designating August 16, 1999, as "National Airborne Day."

SENATE RESOLUTION 128

At the request of Mr. COCHRAN, the name of the Senator from Ohio (Mr. DEWINE) was added as a cosponsor of Senate Resolution 128, a resolution designating March 2000, as "Arts Education Month."

SENATE RESOLUTION 159—AUTHORIZING EXPENDITURES BY THE COMMITTEE ON AGRICULTURE, NUTRITION, AND FORESTRY

Mr. LUGAR, from the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry, reported the following original resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Rules and Administration:

S. RES. 159

Resolved, that, in carrying out its powers, duties, and functions under the Standing Rules of the Senate, in accordance with its jurisdiction under rule XXV of such rules, including holding hearings, reporting such hearings, and making investigations as authorized by paragraphs 1 and 8 of rule XXVI of the Standing Rules of the Senate, the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition and Forestry is authorized from October 1, 1999, through September 30, 2000, and October 1, 2000, through February 28, 2001, in its discretion (1) to make expenditures from the contingent fund of the Senate, (2) to employ personnel, and (3) with the prior consent of the Government department or agency concerned and the Committee on Rules and Administration, to use on a reimbursable or non-reimbursable basis the services of personnel of any such department or agency.

SEC. 2. (a) In order to comply with the Grams Resolution, which requires that subcommittee staff positions be funded, the expenses of the committee for the period October 1, 1999, through September 30, 2000, under this resolution shall not exceed $2,118,150 of which amount (1) not to exceed $4000 may be expended for the procurement of the services of individual consultations, or organizations thereof (as authorized by section 202(i) of the Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946, as amended) and (2) not to exceed $4000 may be expended for the training of the professional staff of such committee (under procedures specified by section 202(j) of the Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946).

(b) In order to comply with the Grams Resolution, which requires that subcommittee staff positions be funded, the expenses of the committee under this resolution, for the period of October 1, 2000, through February 28, 2001, shall not exceed $903,523, of which amount (1) not to exceed $4000 may be expended for the procurement of the services of individual consultants, or organizations thereof (as authorized by section 202(i) of the Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946, as amended), and (2) not to exceed $4000 may be expended for the training of the professional staff of such committee (under procedures specified by section 202(j) of the Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946).

(c) Should the Committee on Rules and Administration determine that the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition and Forestry not comply with the Grams Resolution, the expenses of the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition and Forestry under this resolution for the period October 1, 1999, through September 30, 2000, shall not exceed $1,933,796 of which amount (1) not to exceed $4000 may be expended for the procurement of the services of individual consultants, or organizations thereof (as authorized by section 202(i) of the Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946, as amended), and (2) not to exceed $4000 may be expended for the training of the professional staff of such committee (under procedures specified by section 202(j) of the Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946).

(d) Should the Committee on Rules and Administration determine that the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition and Forestry not comply with the Grams Resolution, the expenses of the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition and Forestry under this resolution for the period of October 1, 2000, through February 28, 2001, shall not exceed $824,772, of which amount (1) not to exceed $4000 may be expended for the procurement of the services of individual consultants, or organizations thereof (as authorized by section 202(i) of the Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946, as amended), and (2) not to exceed $4000 may be expended for the training of the professional staff of such committee (under procedures specified by section 202(j) of the Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946).

SEC. 3. The committee shall report its findings, together with such recommendations for legislation as it deems advisable, to the Senate at the earliest practicable date, but not later than February 29, 2000, and February 28, 2001, respectively.

SEC. 4. Expenses of the committee under this resolution shall be paid from the contingent fund of the Senate upon vouchers approved by the chairman of the committee, except that vouchers shall not be required (1) for the disbursement of salaries of employees paid at an annual rate, or (2) for the payment of telecommunications provided by the Office of the Sergeant at Arms and Doorkeeper, United States Senate, or (3) for the payment of stationery supplies purchased through the Keeper of the Stationery, United States Senate, or (4) for payments to the Postmaster, United States Senate, or (5) for the payment of metered charges on copying equipment provided by the Office of the Sergeant at Arms and Doorkeeper, United States Senate, or (6) for the payment of Senate Recording and Photographic Services, or (7) for payment of franked and mass mail costs by the Sergeant at Arms and Doorkeeper, United States Senate.

SEC. 5. There are authorized such sums as may be necessary for agency contributions related to the compensation of employees of the committee from October 1, 1999, through September 30, 2000, and October 1, 2000, through February 28, 2001, to be paid from the Appropriation account for "Expenses of Inquiries and Investigations."

SENATE RESOLUTION 160—TO RESTORE ENFORCEMENT OF RULE 16

Mr. LOTT submitted the following resolution; which was ordered placed on the calendar:

S. RES. 160

Resolved, That the presiding officer of the Senate should apply all precedents of the Senate under Rule 16, in effect at the conclusion of the 103d Congress.

SENATE RESOLUTION 161—TO AUTHORIZE THE PRINTING OF "MEMORIAL TRIBUTES TO JOHN FITZGERALD KENNEDY, JR."

Mr. DASCHLE (for himself and Mr. LOTT) submitted the following resolution; which was considered and agreed to:

S. RES. 161

Whereas John Fitzgerald Kennedy, Jr. was a notable and influential public figure who was born into and lived his life in the public sphere;

Whereas John Fitzgerald Kennedy, Jr. comported himself with modesty and dignity, consistently displaying an admirable grace under pressure and a genuine concern for the well-being of other persons, in the grand tradition of his family;

Whereas John Fitzgerald Kennedy, Jr. was a significant figure who ably represented a family dedicated to public service, and who personally won a place in the heart of the American people;

Whereas the nation mourns the tragic loss of John Fitzgerald Kennedy, Jr., his wife, Carolyn Bessette Kennedy, and her sister, Lauren Bessette; and

Whereas on July 19, 1999, the Senate expressed its condolences to the Kennedy and Bessette families: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved,

SECTION 1. PRINTING OF THE "MEMORIAL TRIBUTES TO JOHN FITZGERALD KENNEDY, JR."

(a) IN GENERAL.—There shall be printed as a Senate Document, the book entitled "Memorial Tributes to John Fitzgerald Kennedy, Jr.," prepared under the supervision of the Secretary of the Senate.

Mr. FITZGERALD (for himself, Mr. ASHCROFT, Mr. ENZI, Mr. BROWNBAC, Mr. BURNS and Mr. ROBERTS) submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by them to the bill, S. 1217, supra; as follows:

On page 65, after line 25, insert the following:

SEC. 2 ____ . SENSE OF SENATE ON AGRICULTURAL TRADE NEGOTIATIONS.—(a) FINDINGS.—The Senate finds that—

(1) the United States is the world's largest exporter of agricultural commodities and products;

(2) 96 percent of the world's consumers live outside the United States;

(3) the profitability of the United States agricultural sector is dependent on a healthy export market; and

(4) the next round of multilateral trade negotiations is scheduled to begin on November 30, 1999.

(b) SENSE OF SENATE.—The Senate supports and strongly encourages the President to adopt the following trade negotiating objectives:

(1) The initiation of a comprehensive round of multilateral trade negotiations that—

(A) covers all goods and services;

(B) continues to reform agricultural and food trade policy;

(C) promotes global food security through open trade; and

(D) increases trade liberalization in agriculture and food.

(2) The simultaneous conclusion of the negotiations for all sectors.

(3) The adoption of the framework established under the Uruguay Round Agreements for the agricultural negotiations conducted in 1999 to ensure that there are no product or policy exceptions.

(4) The establishment of a 3-year goal for the conclusion of the negotiations by December 2002.

(5) The elimination of all export subsidies and tightening of rules for circumvention of export subsidies.

(6) The elimination of all nontariff barriers to trade.

(7) The transition of domestic agricultural support programs to a form decoupled from agricultural production, as the United States has already done under the Agricultural Market Transition Act (7 U.S.C. 7201 et seq.).

(8) The commercially meaningful reduction or elimination of bound and applied tariffs, and the mutual elimination of restrictive tariff barriers, on an accelerated basis.

(9) The improved administration of tariff rate quotas.

(10)(A) The elimination of state trading enterprises; or

(B) the adoption of policies that ensure operational transparency, the end of discriminatory pricing practices, and competition for state trading enterprises.

(11) The maintenance of sound science and risk assessment for sanitary and phytosanitary measures.

(12) The assurance of market access for biotechnology products, with the regulation of the products based solely on sound science.

(13) The accelerated resolution of trade disputes and prompt enforcement of dispute panels of the World Trade Organization.

(14) The provision of food security for importing nations by ensuring access to supplies through a commitment by World Trade Organization member countries not to restrict or prohibit the export of agricultural products.

(15) The resolution of labor and environmental issues in a manner that facilitates, rather than restricts, agricultural trade.

(16) The establishment of World Trade Organization rules that will allow developing countries to graduate, using objective economic criteria, to full participation in, and obligations under, the World Trade Organization.

• Mr. FITZGERALD. Mr. President, I rise today along with my colleagues, Senators ASHCROFT, ENZI, BROWNBACK, and BURNS, to offer an amendment expressing the sense of the Senate regarding the next round of agricultural trade negotiations. As a member of the Senate Agriculture Committee, I am very concerned about U.S. agriculture's position in the next round of negotiations. This resolution establishes clear direction to the Administration as it enters the Seattle negotiations this November.

These process and procedural guidelines have been developed through a consensus process of the Seattle Round Agricultural Committee (SRAC). SRAC represents over 70 agricultural organizations—from the Farm Bureau to the National Oilseed Processors Association to Kraft Foods. This diverse group of agriculturalists have spent many hours developing these principles to ensure that our international agriculture markets remain strong, open and fair for our nation's farmers.

The U.S. agricultural sector is one of the only segments of our economy that consistently produces a trade surplus. In fact, our agricultural surplus totaled $27.2 billion in 1996. However, we must not rest on our laurels; the United States Department of Agriculture projects that our agricultural trade surplus in 1999 will dwindle to approximately $12 billion. We must not let this trend continue.

Free and open international markets are vital to my home state. Illinois' 76,000 farms cover more than 28 million acres—nearly 80 percent of Illinois. Our farm product sales generate nine billion dollars annually and Illinois ranks third in agricultural exports. In fiscal year 1997 alone, Illinois agricultural exports totaled $3.7 billion and created 57,000 jobs for our state. Needless to say, agriculture makes up a significant portion of my state's economy, and a healthy export market for these products is important to my constituents.

As you know, farm commodity prices have recently been in a severe slump.

This situation makes open debate on agricultural trade and the Seattle round even more timely and necessary. While the average tariff assessed by the United States on agricultural products is less than five percent, the average agricultural tariff assessed by other World Trade Organization members exceeds 40 percent. This situation is clearly unfair and certainly depresses U.S. agricultural commodity prices. Accordingly, this issue must be addressed in the next round.

I look forward to working with my colleagues on policies to tear down international trade barriers and ensure that our agricultural trade surplus expands and remains strong. This resolution is the first step toward ensuring that agriculture is a top priority of the Administration during the next round of multilateral trade negotiations.

With the Seattle round expected to initiate on November 30th of this year, the American farmer cannot wait for action on this resolution. While I would like to pass this sense of the Senate as a free standing resolution, action on this resolution simply cannot wait. The Commerce, State, Justice Appropriations bill, which contains funding for the United States Trade Representatives Office, provides the perfect vehicle for this trade resolution. I hope my colleagues will give it the consideration it deserves.

I want to recognize and commend my colleagues, Senators ASHCROFT, ENZI, BROWNBACK, and BURNS, for joining me as original co-sponsors of this resolution. This resolution should enjoy bipartisan support, and I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting this legislation important to our nation's farmers. Mr. President, I ask that a list of supporters of this resolution and a letter from Dean Kleeker, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation be printed in the RECORD.

AMERICAN FARM BUREAU FEDERATION,
Park Ridge, IL, June 18, 1999.

Hon. SPENCER ABRAHAM,
U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR ABRAHAM: The American Farm Bureau Federation strongly supports S. Res. 101, expressing the sense of the Senate establishing agriculture as a top priority of this Administration during the next round of multilateral trade negotiations. We ask you to support and cosponsor this resolution. Exports are agriculture's source of future growth in sales and income.

As the host of the 1999 World Trade Organization (WTO) Ministerial, the United States has a tremendous opportunity to influence the agenda for the next round of WTO negotiations. The U.S. also has the most to gain from the next round. The United States is the largest, most dynamic economy in the world. Further trade liberalization is needed to open new market opportunities for the ever-increasing output of U.S. agriculture. America's farmers and ranchers must have the freedom to compete in the international marketplace, and with the help of strong leadership by U.S. trade negotiators in Seattle later this year, that goal can begin to be realized.

S. Res. 101 embodies the procedure and policy developed through a consensus process by the Seattle Round Agricultural Committee (SRAC). The SRAC represents over 70 agricultural organizations, agribusinesses, and food processors, supporting the new round of multilateral trade negotiations under the auspices of the WTO. The fact is that 96 percent of the world's consumers live outside the U.S. and in many developing countries the demand for food and agricultural products is growing as income and population increase.

We are counting on this administration and Congress to ensure that U.S. farmers and ranchers have a significant place at the negotiating table, and are armed with the tools they need to be successful. The 1999 WTO Negotiations is the best opportunity for the U.S. agriculture to achieve more open and freer global markets.

Sincerely,

DEAN KLECKNER,
President.

BIDEN (AND OTHERS) AMENDMENT NO. 1285

Mr. BIDEN (for himself, Mr. SCHUMER, Mr. ROBB, Mr. DASCHLE, Mr. REID, Mr. HARKIN, Mr. LEAHY, Mr. AKAKA, Mr. BINGAMAN, Mr. DURBIN, Mr. GRAHAM, Mr. LIEBERMAN, Mr. HOLLINGS, Mr. JOHNSON, Mr. KENNEDY, Mr. KERRY, Mr. KOHL, Mr. LAUTENBERG, Mr. LEVIN, Mrs. LINCOLN, Mrs. MURRAY, Mr. REED, Mr. WELLSTONE, Mr. BREAUX, Mr. MOYNIHAN, Mr. BAYH, Mr. DORGAN, Mr. BRYAN, Mr. KERRY, Mr. CLELAND, Mr. SARBANES, Mr. ROCKEFELLER, Mr. DODD, Mrs. BOXER, Ms. LANDRIEU, Ms. MIKULSKI, Mr. FEINGOLD, Mr. BYRD, Mr. SPECTER, Ms. COLLINS, Ms. SNOWE, Mr. TORRICELLI, Mr. JEFFORDS, and Mr. EDWARDS) proposed an amendment to the bill, S. 1217, supra; as follows:

SEC. ____ SENSE OF THE SENATE REGARDING MEDICARE.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Senate finds the following:

(1) The Balanced Budget Act of 1997 (BBA) ushered in the single largest change to the medicare program under title XVIII of the Social Security Act since the program's inception in 1965.

(2) As a result of the Balanced Budget Act of 1997, hospitals in all parts of the country, both in urban and rural areas, are beginning to reduce health care services as hospitals implement the provisions of such Act.

(3) Beginning 5 years after the date of enactment of the Balanced Budget Act of 1997, total medicare margins for all hospitals will be negative 4.4 percent, and such margins for rural hospitals will be negative 7.1 percent.

(4) The Congressional Budget Office estimated immediately prior to the enactment of the Balanced Budget Act of 1997 that the provisions of such Act would result in $53,000,000,000 of savings to the medicare program because of payment cuts to hospitals; but

(5) Actual savings to the medicare program as a result of such cuts will be more in the range of $71,000,000,000, an $18,000,000,000 increase in the estimate described in paragraph (4).

(6) The Congressional Budget Office now projects that the provisions of the Balanced Budget Act of 1997 will result in a total $206,000,000,000 of savings to the medicare program, double the level of estimated savings when such Act was enacted 18 months ago.

(7) The passage and implementation of the Balanced Budget Act of 1997 has proved especially devastating to rural hospitals, as their patient base is typically older, poorer, and sicker, than non-rural hospitals and their most important payment source is the medicare program.

(8) The provisions of the Balanced Budget Act of 1997 have strained the resources of even the most fiscally healthy of these facilities, as rural hospitals are no longer able to recruit and retain qualified health care professionals, including physicians, and such hospitals no longer have access to capital for equipment replacement, maintenance, or repair.

(9) Rural hospitals are now being forced to severely limit, or even eliminate, the type and scope of health care services they provide, limiting access to health care and forcing patients to travel long distances.

(10) Rural hospitals are often the largest employers for many miles, and the only employer of highly skilled workers in the community.

(11) The systematic reduction of health care delivery prompted by the passage of the Balanced Budget Act of 1997 has the potential to deal a severe blow to the economic well being of many of our Nation's small towns.

(12) The concurrent resolution on the budget for fiscal year 2000 recognized the problems associated with the provisions of the Balanced Budget Act of 1997 and set aside funding to address the unintended consequences associated with the implementation of such provisions.

(b) SENSE OF THE SENATE.—It is the sense of the Senate that Congress and the President work expeditiously to develop proposals that would—

(1) reject—

(A) further reductions in the medicare program under title XVIII of the Social Security Act; and

(B) extensions of the provisions of the Balanced Budget Act of 1997; and

(2) target new resources from the onbudget surplus, as set forth in the concurrent resolution on the budget for fiscal year 2000, for the medicare program in order to address the unintended consequences that the Balanced Budget Act of 1997 has had on hospitals, and especially on hospitals located in rural areas.

AMENDMENT NO. 1287

On page 27, line 9, after the colon insert "Provided further, That $1,000,000 shall be available to the National Institute of Justice for research and development of next generation backscatter X-ray personnel scanning devices to assist in the detection of illegal drugs and narcotics."

AMENDMENT NO. 1288

On page 25, line 5, before "and" insert "of which $2,000,000 shall be made available to the Department of Psychiatry and Human Behavior at the University of Mississippi School of Medicine for research in addictive disorders and their connection to youth violence".

LUGAR (AND OTHERS) AMENDMENT NO. 1289

Mr. LUGAR (for himself, Mr. GRAHAM, Mr. MACK, Mr. HATCH, Mr. KERREY, and Mr. LIEBERMAN) proposed an amendment to the bill, S. 1217, supra; as follows:

On page 78, between lines 8 and 9, insert the following:

NATIONAL ENDOWMENT FOR DEMOCRACY

For grants by the Department of State to the National Endowment for Democracy as authorized by the National Endowment for Democracy Act, $30,000,000, to remain available until expended: Provided, That, in lieu of the dollar amount specified under the heading "CAPITAL INVESTMENT FUND" in this Act, the dollar amount under that heading shall be considered to be $50,000,000.

DURBIN (AND OTHERS) AMENDMENT NO. 1290

(Ordered to lie on the table.)

Mr. DURBIN (for himself, Ms. COLLINS, Mrs. MURRAY, Mr. KOHL, Ms. MIKULSKI, Mr. REID, and Mr. JEFFORDS) submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by them to the bill, S. 1217, supra; as follows:

At the appropriate place, insert the following:

SEC. ____ PROTECTION OF SENIORS AND THE DISABLED IN FEDERAL FAMILY VIOLENCE PREVENTION PROGRAMS.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds that—
 (1) of the estimated more than 1,000,000 persons age 65 and over who are victims of family violence each year, at least ⅔ are women;
 (2) national statistics are not available on the incidence of domestic or family violence and sexual assault against disabled women, although several studies indicate that abuse of disabled women is of a longer duration compared to abuse suffered by women who are not disabled;

(3) in almost 9 out of 10 incidents of domestic elder abuse and neglect, the perpetrator is a family member, and adult children of the victims are the largest category of perpetrators and spouses are the second largest category of perpetrators;

(4) the number of reports of elder abuse in the United States increased by 150 percent between 1986 and 1996 and is expected to continue increasing;

(5) it is estimated that at least 5 percent of the Nation's elderly are victims of moderate to severe abuse and that the rate for all forms of abuse may be as high as 10 percent;

(6) elder abuse is severely underreported, with 1 in 5 cases being reported in 1980 and only 1 in 8 cases being reported today;

(7) many older and disabled women fail to report abuse because of shame or as a result of prior unsatisfactory experiences with individual agencies or others who lack sensitivity to the concerns or needs of older or disabled individuals;

(8) many older or disabled individuals also fail to report abuse because they are dependent on their abusers and fear being abandoned or institutionalized;

(9) disabled women may fear reporting abuse because they are fearful of losing their children in a custody case;

(10) public and professional awareness and identification of violence against older or disabled Americans may be difficult because these persons are not integrated into many social networks (such as schools or jobs), and may become isolated in their homes, which can increase the risk of domestic abuse; and

(11) older and disabled Americans would greatly benefit from policies that develop, strengthen, and implement programs for the prevention of abuse, including neglect and exploitation, and provide related assistance for victims.

(b) IN GENERAL.—Part T of title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 is amended—

(1) in section 2001 (42 U.S.C. 3796gg)—

(A) in subsection (a)—

(i) by inserting “, including older women and women with a disability” after “combat violent crimes against women”; and

(ii) by inserting “, including older women and women with a disability” before the period; and

(B) in subsection (b)—

(i) in the matter preceding paragraph (1), by inserting “, including older women and women with a disability” after “against women”; and

(ii) in paragraph (6), by striking “and” after the semicolon;

(iii) in paragraph (7), by striking the period and inserting “; and”; and

(iv) by adding at the end the following:
 “(8) developing a curriculum to train and assist law enforcement officers, prosecutors, and relevant officers of the Federal, State, tribal, and local courts in identifying and responding to crimes of domestic violence and sexual assault against older individuals and individuals with a disability and implementing that training and assistance.”;

(2) in section 2002(c)(2) (42 U.S.C. 3796gg-1) by inserting “and service programs tailored to the needs of older and disabled victims of domestic violence and sexual assault” before the semicolon; and

(3) in section 2003 (42 U.S.C. 3796gg-2)—

(A) in paragraph (7), by striking “and” after the semicolon;

(B) in paragraph (8), by striking the period and inserting “; and”; and

(C) by adding at the end the following:
 “(9) both the term ‘elder’ and the term ‘older individual’ have the meaning given the term ‘older individual’ in section 102 of the Older Americans Act of 1965 (42 U.S.C. 3002); and

“(10) the term ‘disability’ has the meaning given the term in section 3(3) of the Americans with Disabilities Act of 1990 (42 U.S.C. 12102(3)).”

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to any grant made beginning with fiscal year 2000.

WELLSTONE (AND OTHERS)
 AMENDMENT NO. 1291

Mr. WELLSTONE (for himself, Mrs. MURRAY, and Mr. DURBIN) proposed an amendment to the bill, S. 1217, supra; as follows:

At the end of the bill, add the following title:

TITLE ____—CHILDREN WHO WITNESS DOMESTIC VIOLENCE PROTECTION ACT

SEC. ____01. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the “Children Who Witness Domestic Violence Protection Act”.

SEC. ____02. FINDINGS.

Congress finds the following:

(1) Witnessing domestic violence has a devastating impact on children, placing the children at high risk for anxiety, depression, and, potentially, suicide. Many children who witness domestic violence exhibit more aggressive, antisocial, fearful, and inhibited behaviors.

(2) Children exposed to domestic violence have a high risk of experiencing learning difficulties and school failure. Research finds that children residing in domestic violence shelters exhibit significantly lower verbal and quantitative skills when compared to a national sample of children.

(3) Domestic violence is strongly correlated with child abuse. Studies have found that between 50 and 70 percent of men who abuse their female partners also abuse their children. In homes in which domestic violence occurs, children are physically abused and neglected at a rate 15 times higher than the national average.

(4) Men who witnessed parental abuse during their childhood have a higher risk of becoming physically aggressive in dating and marital relationships.

(5) Exposure to domestic violence is a strong predictor of violent delinquent behavior among adolescents. It is estimated that between 20 percent and 40 percent of chronically violent adolescents have witnessed extreme parental conflict.

(6) Women have an increased risk of experiencing battering after separation from an abusive partner. Children also have an increased risk of suffering harm during separation.

(7) Child visitation disputes are more frequent when families have histories of domestic violence, and the need for supervised visitation centers far exceeds the number of available programs providing those centers, because courts therefore—

(A) order unsupervised visitation and endanger parents and children; or

(B) prohibit visitation altogether.

(8) Recent studies have demonstrated that up to 50 percent of children who appear before juvenile courts in matters involving allegations of abuse and neglect have been exposed to domestic violence in their homes.

SEC. ____03. DEFINITIONS.

In this title:

(1) DOMESTIC VIOLENCE.—The term “domestic violence” includes an act or threat of violence, not including an act of self defense, committed by a current or former spouse of the victim, by a person with whom the victim shares a child in common, by a person who is cohabiting with or has cohabited with the victim, by a person who is or has been in a social relationship of a romantic or intimate nature with the victim, by a person similarly situated to a spouse of the victim under the domestic or family violence laws of the jurisdiction of the victim, or by any other person against a victim who is protected from that person's act under the domestic or family violence laws of the jurisdiction.

(2) INDIAN TRIBAL GOVERNMENT.—The term “Indian tribal government” has the meaning given the term “tribal organization” in section 102 of the Older Americans Act of 1965 (42 U.S.C. 3002).

(3) STATE.—The term “State” means each of the several States of the United States, the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the United States Virgin Islands, Guam, American Samoa, and the Commonwealth of the Northern Mariana Islands.

(4) WITNESS DOMESTIC VIOLENCE.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The term “witness domestic violence” means to witness—

(i) an act of domestic violence that constitutes actual or attempted physical assault; or

(ii) a threat or other action that places the victim in fear of domestic violence.

(B) WITNESS.—In subparagraph (A), the term “witness” means to—

(i) directly observe an act, threat, or action described in subparagraph (A), or the aftermath of that act, threat, or action; or

(ii) be within earshot of an act, threat, or action described in subparagraph (A), or the aftermath of that act, threat, or action.

SEC. ____04. GRANTS TO ADDRESS THE NEEDS OF CHILDREN WHO WITNESS DOMESTIC VIOLENCE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (42 U.S.C. 10401 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end the following:

“SEC. 319. MULTISYSTEM INTERVENTIONS FOR CHILDREN WHO WITNESS DOMESTIC VIOLENCE.

“(a) GRANTS AUTHORIZED.—

“(1) AUTHORITY.—The Secretary, acting through the Director of Community Services, in the Administration for Children and Families, is authorized to award grants to eligible entities to conduct programs to encourage the use of domestic violence intervention models using multisystem partnerships to address the needs of children who witness domestic violence.

“(2) TERM AND AMOUNT.—Each grant awarded under this section shall be awarded for a term of 3 years and in an amount of not more than $500,000 for each such year.

“(3) ELIGIBLE ENTITIES.—To be eligible to receive a grant under this section, an entity shall—

“(A) be a nonprofit private organization;
 “(B)(i) demonstrate recognized expertise in the area of domestic violence and the impact of domestic violence on children; or

“(ii) enter into a memorandum of understanding regarding the intervention program that—

“(I) is entered into with the State or tribal domestic violence coalition and entities carrying out domestic violence programs that provide shelter or related assistance in the locality in which the intervention program will be operated; and

“(II) demonstrates collaboration on the intervention program with the coalition and entities and the support of the coalition and entities for the intervention program; and

“(C) demonstrate a history of providing advocacy, health care, mental health, or other crisis-related services to children.

“(b) USE OF FUNDS.—An entity that receives a grant under this section shall use amounts provided through the grant to conduct a program to design or replicate, and implement, domestic violence intervention models that use multisystem partners to respond to the needs of children who witness domestic violence. Such a program shall—

“(1)(A) involve collaborative partnerships with—

“(i) local entities carrying out domestic violence programs that provide shelter or related assistance; and

“(ii) partners that are courts, schools, social service providers, health care providers, police, early childhood agencies, entities carrying out Head Start programs under the Head Start Act (42 U.S.C. 9831 et seq.), or entities carrying out child protection, welfare, job training, housing, battered women’s service, or children’s mental health programs; and

“(B) be carried out to design and implement protocols and systems to identify, refer, and appropriately respond to the needs of, children who witness domestic violence and who participate in programs administered by the partners;

“(2) include guidelines to evaluate the needs of a child and make appropriate intervention recommendations;

“(3) include institutionalized procedures to enhance or ensure the safety and security of a battered parent, and as a result, the child of the parent;

“(4) provide direct counseling and advocacy for adult victims of domestic violence and their children who witness domestic violence;

“(5) include the development or replication of a mental health treatment model to meet the needs of children for whom such treatment has been identified as appropriate;

“(6) include policies and protocols for maintaining the confidentiality of the battered parent and child;

“(7) provide community outreach and training to enhance the capacity of professionals who work with children to appropriately identify and respond to the needs of children who witness domestic violence;

“(8) include procedures for documenting interventions used for each child and family; and “(9) include plans to perform a systematic outcome evaluation to evaluate the effectiveness of the interventions.

“(c) APPLICATION.—To be eligible to receive a grant under this section, an entity shall prepare and submit to the Secretary an application at such time, in such manner, and containing such information as the Secretary may require.

“(d) TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE.—Not later than 90 days after the date of enactment of this section, the Secretary shall identify successful programs providing multisystem and mental health interventions to address the needs of children who witness domestic violence. Not later than 60 days before the Secretary solicits applications for grants under this section, the Secretary shall enter into an agreement with 1 or more entities carrying out the identified programs to provide technical assistance to the applicants and recipients of the grants. The Secretary may use not more than 5 percent of the amount appropriated for a fiscal year under subsection (e) to provide the technical assistance.

“(e) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section $5,000,000 for each of fiscal years 2000 through 2002.

“(2) AVAILABILITY.—Amounts appropriated under paragraph (1) shall remain available until expended.

“(f) DEFINITIONS.—In this section, the terms ‘domestic violence’ and ‘witness domestic violence’ have the meanings given the terms in section ___03 of the Children Who Witness Domestic Violence Prevention Act.”.

(b) ADMINISTRATION.—Section 305(a) of the Family Violence Prevention and Services Act (42 U.S.C. 10404(a)) is amended—

(1) by striking “an employee” and inserting “1 or more employees”; and

(2) by striking “The individual” and inserting “Each individual”.

SEC. 4125. COMBATING THE IMPACT OF EXPERIENCING OR WITNESSING DOMESTIC VIOLENCE ON ELEMENTARY AND SECONDARY SCHOOL CHILDREN.

(a) AMENDMENT.—Subpart 2 of part A of title IV of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 7131 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end the following:

“SEC. 4124. GRANTS TO COMBAT THE IMPACT OF EXPERIENCING OR WITNESSING DOMESTIC VIOLENCE ON ELEMENTARY AND SECONDARY SCHOOL CHILDREN.

“(a) GRANTS AUTHORIZED.—

“(1) AUTHORITY.—The Secretary is authorized to award grants to and enter into contracts with elementary schools and secondary schools that work with experts described in paragraph (2), to enable the schools—

“(A) to provide training to school administrators, faculty, and staff, with respect to issues concerning children experiencing domestic violence in dating relationships and witnessing domestic violence, and the impact of the violence described in this subparagraph on children;

“(B) to provide educational programming to students regarding domestic violence and the impact of experiencing or witnessing domestic violence on children;

“(C) to provide support services for students and school personnel for the purpose of developing and strengthening effective prevention and intervention strategies with respect to issues concerning children experiencing domestic violence in dating relationships and witnessing domestic violence, and the impact of the violence described in this subparagraph on children; and

“(D) to develop and implement school system policies regarding identification and referral procedures for students who are experiencing or witnessing domestic violence.

“(2) EXPERTS.—The experts referred to in paragraph (1) are experts on domestic violence from the educational, legal, youth, mental health, substance abuse, and victim advocacy fields, and State and local domestic violence coalitions and community-based youth organizations.

“(3) AWARD BASIS.—The Secretary shall award grants and contracts under this section on a competitive basis.

“(4) POLICY DISSEMINATION.—The Secretary shall disseminate to elementary schools and secondary schools any Department of Education policy guidance regarding preventing domestic violence and the impact of experiencing or witnessing domestic violence on children.

“(b) USES OF FUNDS.—Funds provided under this section may be used for the following purposes:

“(1) To provide training for school administrators, faculty, and staff that addresses issues concerning children experiencing domestic violence in dating relationships and witnessing domestic violence, and the impact of the violence described in this paragraph on children.

“(2) To provide education programs for students that are developmentally appropriate for the students’ grade levels and are designed to meet any unique cultural and language needs of the particular student populations.

“(3) To develop and implement school system policies regarding identification and referral procedures for students who are experiencing or witnessing domestic violence.

“(4) To provide the necessary human resources to respond to the needs of students and school personnel when faced with the issue of domestic violence, such as a resource person who is either on-site or on-call, and who is an expert in domestic violence as described in subsection (a)(2).

“(5) To provide media center materials and educational materials to schools that address issues concerning children experiencing domestic violence in dating relationships and witnessing domestic violence, and the impact of the violence described in this paragraph on children.

“(6) To conduct evaluations to assess the impact of programs assisted under this section in order to enhance the development of the programs.

“(c) CONFIDENTIALITY.—Policies, programs, training materials, and evaluations developed and implemented under subsection (b) shall address issues of victim safety and confidentiality that are consistent with applicable Federal and State laws.

“(d) APPLICATION.—

“(1) IN GENERAL.—To be eligible to be awarded a grant or contract under this section for any fiscal year, an elementary school or secondary school, in consultation with an expert described in subsection (a)(2), shall submit an application to the Secretary at such time and in such manner as the Secretary shall prescribe.

“(2) CONTENTS.—Each application submitted under paragraph (1) shall—

“(A) describe the need for funds provided under the grant or contract and the plan for implementation of any of the uses described in subsection (b);

“(B) describe how the domestic violence experts described in subsection (a)(2) shall work in consultation and collaboration with the elementary school or secondary school; and

“(C) provide measurable goals and expected results from the use of the funds provided under the grant or contract.

“(e) DEFINITIONS.—In this section, the terms ‘domestic violence’ and ‘witness domestic violence’ have the meanings given the terms in section ___03 of the Children Who Witness Domestic Violence Protection Act.

“(f) APPLICABILITY.—The provisions of this part (other than this section) shall not apply to this section.”.

(b) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—Section 4004 of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 7104) is amended—

(1) in paragraph (1), by striking “and” after the semicolon;

(2) in paragraph (2) by striking the period and inserting “; and”; and

(3) by adding at the end the following:

“(3) $5,000,000 for each of the fiscal years 2000 through 2002 to carry out section 4124.”.

SEC. ___06. CHILD WELFARE WORKER TRAINING ON DOMESTIC VIOLENCE.

(a) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

(1) GRANTEE.—The term “grantee” means a recipient of a grant under this section.

(2) SECRETARY.—The term “Secretary” means the Secretary of Health and Human Services.

(b) GRANTS AUTHORIZED.—

(1) AUTHORITY.—The Attorney General and the Secretary are authorized to jointly award grants to eligible States, Indian tribal governments, and units of local government, in order to encourage agencies and entities within the jurisdiction of the States, organizations, and units to recognize and treat, as part of their ongoing child welfare responsibilities, domestic violence as a serious problem threatening the safety and well-being of both children and adults.

(2) TERM AND AMOUNT.—Each grant awarded under this section shall be awarded for a term of 3 years and in an amount of not less than $250,000.

(c) USE OF FUNDS.—Funds provided under this section may be used to support child welfare service agencies in carrying out, with the assistance of entities carrying out community-based domestic violence programs, activities to achieve the following purposes:

(1) To provide training to the staff of child welfare service agencies and domestic violence programs with respect to the issue of domestic violence and the impact of the violence on children and their nonabusive parents, which training shall—

(A) include training for staff, supervisors, and administrators, including staff responsible for screening, intake, assessment, and investigation of reports of child abuse and neglect; and

(B) be conducted in collaboration with child welfare experts, domestic violence experts, entities carrying out community-based domestic violence programs, relevant law enforcement agencies, probation officers, prosecutors, and judges.

(2) To provide assistance in the modification of policies, procedures, programs, and practices of child welfare service agencies and domestic violence programs in order to ensure that the agencies—

(A) recognize the overlap between child abuse and domestic violence in families, the dangers posed to both child and adult victims of domestic violence, and the physical, emotional, and developmental impact of domestic violence on children;

(B) develop relevant protocols for screening, intake, assessment, and investigation of and followup to reports of child abuse and neglect, that—

(i) address the dynamics of domestic violence and the relationship between child abuse and domestic violence; and

(ii) enable the agencies to assess the danger to child and adult victims of domestic violence;

(C) identify and assess the presence of domestic violence in child protection cases, in a manner that ensures the safety of all individuals involved and the protection of confidential information;

(D) increase the safety and well-being of children who witness domestic violence, including increasing the safety of nonabusive parents of the children;

(E) develop appropriate responses in cases of domestic violence, including safety plans and appropriate services for both the child and adult victims of domestic violence;

(F) establish and enforce procedures to ensure the confidentiality of information relating to families that is shared between child welfare service agencies and community-based domestic violence programs, consistent with law (including regulations) and guidelines;

(G) provide appropriate supervision to agency staffs who work with families in which there has been domestic violence, including supervision concerning issues regarding—

(i) promoting staff safety; and

(ii) protecting the confidentiality of child and adult victims of domestic violence; and

(H) develop protocols with law enforcement, probation, and other justice agencies in order to ensure that justice system interventions and protections are readily available for victims of domestic violence served by the social service agency.

(d) APPLICATION.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—To be eligible to receive a grant under this section, a State, Indian tribal government, or unit of local government shall submit an application to the Attorney General and the Secretary at such time and in such manner as the Attorney General and the Secretary shall prescribe.

(2) CONTENTS.—Each application submitted under paragraph (1) shall contain information that—

(A) describes the specific activities that will be undertaken to achieve 1 or more of the purposes described in subsection (c);

(B) lists the child welfare service agencies and domestic violence service agencies in the jurisdiction of the applicant that will be responsible for carrying out the activities; and

(C) provides documentation from 1 or more community-based domestic violence programs that the entities carrying out such programs—

(i) have been involved in the development of the application; and

(ii) will assist in carrying out the specific activities described in subparagraph (A), which may include assisting as subcontractors.

(e) PRIORITY.—In awarding grants under this section, the Attorney General and the Secretary shall give priority to applicants who demonstrate that entities that carry out domestic violence programs will be substantially involved in carrying out the specific activities described in subsection (d)(2)(A), and to applicants who demonstrate a commitment to educate the staff of child welfare service agencies about—

(1) the impact of domestic violence on children;

(2) the special risks of child abuse and neglect; and

(3) appropriate services and interventions for protecting both the child and adult victims of domestic violence.

(f) EVALUATION, REPORTING, AND DISSEMINATION.—

(1) EVALUATION AND REPORTING.—Each grantee shall annually submit to the Attorney General and the Secretary a report, which shall include—

(A) an evaluation of the effectiveness of activities funded with a grant awarded under this section; and

(B) such additional information as the Attorney General and the Secretary may require.

(2) DISSEMINATION.—Not later than 6 months after the expiration of the 3-year period beginning on the initial date on which grants are awarded under this section, the Attorney General and the Secretary shall distribute to each State child welfare service agency and each State domestic violence coalition, and to Congress, a summary of information on—

(A) the activities funded with grants under this section; and

(B) any related initiatives undertaken by the Attorney General or the Secretary to promote attention by the staff of child welfare service agencies and community-based domestic violence programs to domestic violence and the impact of domestic violence on child and adult victims of domestic violence.

(g) TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE.—

(1) IDENTIFICATION OF SUCCESSFUL PROGRAMS.—Not later than 90 days after the date of enactment of this section, the Secretary shall identify successful programs providing training to child welfare and domestic violence programs to address the needs of children who witness domestic violence.

(2) AGREEMENT.—Not later than 60 days before the Secretary solicits applications for grants under this section, the Secretary shall enter into an agreement with 1 or more entities carrying out the training programs identified under paragraph (1) to provide technical assistance to the applicants and recipients of the grants.

(3) FUNDING.—The Secretary may use not more than 5 percent of the amount appropriated for a fiscal year under subsection (h) to provide technical assistance pursuant to the agreement under paragraph (2).

(h) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out this section $5,000,000 for each of fiscal years 2000 through 2002.

(2) AVAILABILITY.—Amounts appropriated under paragraph (1) shall remain available until expended.

SEC. ___07. SAFE HAVENS FOR CHILDREN.

(a) GRANTS AUTHORIZED.—The Attorney General may award grants to States (including State courts) and Indian tribal governments in order to enable them to enter into contracts and cooperative agreements with public or private nonprofit entities (including tribal organizations and nonprofit organizations operating within the boundaries of an Indian reservation) to assist those entities in establishing and operating supervised visitation centers for purposes of facilitating supervised visitation and visitation exchange of children by and between parents. Not less than 50 percent of the total amount awarded to a State or Indian tribal government under this subsection for any fiscal year shall be used to enter into contracts and cooperative agreements with private nonprofit entities.

(b) CONSIDERATIONS.—In awarding grants under subsection (a), the Attorney General shall consider—

(1) the number of families to be served by the proposed visitation center;

(2) the extent to which the proposed supervised visitation center will serve underserved populations (as defined in section 2003

of title I of the Omnibus Crime Control and Safe Streets Act of 1968 (42 U.S.C. 3796gg-2);

(3) with respect to an applicant for a contract or cooperative agreement, the extent to which the applicant demonstrates cooperation and collaboration with nonprofit, nongovernmental entities in the local community served, including the State or tribal domestic violence coalition, State or tribal sexual assault coalition, local shelters, and programs for domestic violence and sexual assault victims;

(4) the extent to which the applicant demonstrates coordination and collaboration with State, tribal, and local court systems, including mechanisms for communication and referral; and

(5) the extent to which the applicant demonstrates implementation of domestic violence and sexual assault training for all staff members.

(c) USE OF FUNDS.—Amounts provided under a grant, contract, or cooperative agreement awarded under this section may be used only to establish and operate supervised visitation centers.

(d) APPLICATION.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Attorney General shall award grants for contracts and cooperative agreements under this section in accordance with such regulations as the Attorney General may establish by regulation, which regulations shall establish a multiyear grant process.

(2) CONTENTS.—Each application submitted under paragraph (1) shall—

(A) demonstrate recognized expertise in the area of domestic violence and a record of high quality service to victims of domestic violence or sexual assault;

(B) demonstrate collaboration with and support of the State or tribal domestic violence coalition, State or tribal sexual assault coalition, or local domestic violence shelter, program, or rape crisis center in the locality in which the supervised visitation center will be operated;

(C) provide supervised visitation and visitation exchange services over the duration of a court order to promote continuity and stability;

(D) ensure that any fees charged to individuals for use of services are based on an individual's income;

(E) demonstrate that adequate security measures, including adequate facilities, procedures, and personnel capable of preventing violence, are in place for the operation of supervised visitation; and

(F) describe standards by which the supervised visitation center will operate.

(3) PRIORITY.—In awarding grants for contracts and cooperative agreements under this section, the Attorney General shall give priority to States that, in making a custody determination—

(A) consider domestic violence; and

(B) require findings on the record.

(e) ANNUAL REPORT.—Not later than 120 days after the last day of each fiscal year, the Attorney General shall submit to Congress a report that includes information concerning—

(1) the total number of individuals served and the total number of individuals turned away from services (categorized by State), the number of individuals from underserved populations served and the number turned away from services, and the factors that necessitate the supervised visitation or visitation exchange, such as domestic violence, child abuse, sexual assault, and emotional or other physical abuse, or any combination of such factors;

(2) the number of supervised visitations or visitation exchanges ordered during custody determinations under a separation or divorce decree or protection order, through child protection services or other social services agencies, or by any other order of a civil, criminal, juvenile, or family court;

SEC. ____ INS GOVERNMENTAL LIAISON FUNCTIONS.

(a) ALLOCATION OF FUNDS.—Of the funds appropriated by this Act under the heading “Immigration and Naturalization Service, Salaries and Expenses” and available to the Office of the Commissioner of Immigration and Naturalization, $10,000,000 shall be made available for additional staff and necessary support in the various regional offices and service centers of the INS, who shall carry out their functions under procedures that—

(1) require INS governmental liaisons to work exclusively and directly with offices of Congress or Federal agencies other than INS, with no other responsibilities, and respond to telephone governmental inquiries within three days and written governmental inquiries within 30 days;

(2) set a national standard for customer service and treat customers with respect, including a plan to avoid long delays at INS information booths or offices and busy signals on information lines;

(3) require mandatory employee sensitivity training;

(4) provide clear, concise guidelines for how, when, and where governmental offices are to submit casework inquiries and any special procedures for each form or application; and

(5) provide for the scheduling of quarterly meetings between the INS district director (or designee) and the State or district director of the Member of Congress to discuss outstanding cases and other relevant issues.

(b) BIENNIAL REPORTS.—Not later than 6 months after the date of enactment of this Act, and every 6 months thereafter, the Commissioner of Immigration and Naturalization shall submit a report to Congress setting forth the status of responding to written governmental inquiries that are pending as of the date of the report. The contents of such report shall be itemized by congressional district.

(c) DISCIPLINARY ACTIONS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Attorney General, acting through the Commissioner of Immigration and Naturalization, shall by regulation establish a system of disciplinary actions that may be taken against any INS district director or local service manager who does not demonstrate progress in responding to written governmental inquiries within the 30-day period specified in that subsection.

(2) HEARING.—In any case in which administrative review is conducted to determine whether to take a disciplinary action against an individual under paragraph (1), the review shall include an opportunity for the individual to be heard.

(d) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

(1) GOVERNMENTAL INQUIRY.—The term “governmental inquiry” means an inquiry from the office of a Member of Congress or Federal agency other than INS with respect to the status of any case INS is adjudicating regarding an alien.

(2) GOVERNMENTAL LIAISON.—The term “governmental liaison” means an individual whose responsibility is to respond to any office of a Member of Congress or Federal agency other than INS on any casework or other inquiry of INS and who has the authority and access to obtain the information necessary for such response from other INS employees or offices.

(3) INS.—The term “INS” means the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

SMITH (AND WYDEN) AMENDMENT NO. 1295

(Ordered to lie on the table.)

Mr. SMITH of Oregon (for himself and Mr. WYDEN) submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by them to the bill, S. 1217, supra; as follows:

At the appropriate place, insert the following:

SEC. ____ TREATMENT OF VESSEL AS AN ELIGIBLE VESSEL.

Notwithstanding paragraphs (1) through (3) of section 208(a) of the American Fisheries Act (title II of division C of the Omnibus Consolidated and Emergency Supplemental Appropriations Act of 1999 (Public Law 105-277)), the catcher vessel HAZEL LORRAINE (United States Official Number 592211) shall be considered to be a vessel that is eligible to harvest the directed fishing allowance under section 206(b)(1) of that Act pursuant to a federal fishing permit in the same manner as, and subject to the same requirements and limitations on that harvesting as apply to, catcher vessels that are eligible to harvest that directed fishing allowance under section 208(a) of that Act.

COLLINS (AND OTHERS) AMENDMENT NO. 1296

Ms. COLLINS (for herself, Mr. GREGG, Mr. HOLLINGS, Mr. TORRICELLI, Mr. FEINGOLD, Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire, and Mr. LIEBERMAN) proposed an amendment to the bill, S. 1217, supra; as follows:

On page 111, between lines 7 and 8, insert the following:

SEC. 620 (a) FINDINGS.—The Senate makes the following findings:

(1) When telephone area codes were first introduced in 1947, 86 area codes covered all of North America. There are now more than 215 area codes, and an additional 70 area codes may be required in the next 2 years.

(2) The current system for allocating numbers to telecommunications carriers is woefully inefficient, leading to the exhaustion of a telephone area code long before all the telephone numbers covered by the area code are actually in use.

(3) The proliferation of new telephone area codes causes economic dislocation for businesses and unnecessary cost, confusion, and inconvenience for households.

(4) Principles and approaches exist that would increase the efficiency with which telecommunications carriers use telephone numbering resources.

(5) The May 27, 1999, rulemaking proceeding of the Federal Communications Commission relating to numbering resource optimization seeks to address the growing problem of the exhaustion of telephone area codes.

(b) SENSE OF SENATE.—It is the sense of the Senate that—

(1) the Federal Communications Commission shall release its report and order on numbering resource optimization not later than December 31, 1999;

(2) such report and order should minimize any disruptions and costs to consumers and businesses associated with the implementation of such report and order; and

amendment to the bill, S. 1217, supra; as follows:

“On page 27, lines 14 and 15, strike “for the Crime Identification Technology Initiative” and insert “to carry out section 102 of the Crime Identification Technology Act of 1998 (42 U.S.C. 14601), including for grants for law enforcement equipment for discretionary grants to States, Local units of Government, and Indian Tribes”.

GRAMS (AND OTHERS)
AMENDMENT NO. 1316

Mr. GREGG (for Mr. GRAMS (for himself, Mrs. BOXER, and Mr. DURBIN)) proposed an amendment to the bill, S. 1217, supra; as follows:

On page 81, line 25, insert the following after “reforms”: “:Provided further, That any additional amount provided, not to exceed $107 million, which is owed by the United Nations to the United States as a reimbursement, including any reimbursement under the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 or the United Nations Participation Act of 1945, that was owed to the United States before the date of enactment of this Act shall be applied or used, without fiscal year limitation, to reduce any amount owed by the United States to the United Nations, except that any such reduction pursuant to the authority in this paragraph shall not be made unless expressly authorized by the enactment of a separate Act that makes payment of arrearages contingent upon United Nations reform”.

GREGG AMENDMENT NO. 1317

Mr. GREGG proposed an amendment to the bill, S. 1217, supra; as follows:

At the end of title IV, insert the following:

SEC. . None of the funds appropriated or otherwise made available in this Act for the United Nations may be used by the United Nations for the promulgation or enforcement of any treaty, resolution, or regulation authorizing the United Nations, or any of its specialized agencies or affiliated organizations, to tax any aspect of the Internet.

GREGG (AND HOLLINGS)
AMENDMENT NO. 1318

Mr. GREGG (for himself and Mr. HOLLINGS) proposed an amendment to the bill, S. 1217, supra; as follows:

At the end of title I, insert the following: “SEC. . Section 286(q)(1)(A) of the Immigration and Nationality Act of 1953 (8 U.S.C. 1356(q)(1)(A)), as amended, is further amended—

- (1) by deleting clause (ii);
- (2) by renumbering clause (iii) as (ii); and
- (3) by striking “, until September 30, 2000,” in clause (iv) and renumbering that clause as (iii)”.

ASHCROFT AMENDMENT NO. 1319

Mr. GREGG (for Mr. ASHCROFT) proposed an amendment to the bill, S. 1217, supra; as follows:

On page 111, between lines 7 and 8, insert the following:

SEC. 620. (a) FINDINGS.—The Senate makes the following findings:

(1) Iran has been designated as a state sponsor of terrorism by the Secretary of State and continues to be among the most active supporters of terrorism in the world.

(2) According to the State Department’s annual report entitled “Patterns of Global Terrorism”, Iran supports Hizballah, Hamas, and the Palestinian Islamic Jihad, terrorist organizations which oppose the Middle East peace process, continue to work for the destruction of Israel, and have killed United States citizens.

(3) A United States district court ruled in March 1998 that Iran should pay $247,000,000 to the family of Alisa Flatow, a United States citizen killed in a bomb attack orchestrated by the Palestinian Islamic Jihad in Gaza in April 1995.

(4) The Government of Iran continues to maintain a repressive political regime in which the civil liberties of the people of Iran are denied.

(5) The State Department Country Report on Human Rights states that the human rights record of the Government of Iran remains poor, including “extra judicial killings and summary executions; disappearances; widespread use of torture and other degrading treatment; harsh prison conditions; arbitrary arrest and detention; lack of due process; unfair trials; infringement on citizen’s privacy; and restrictions on freedom of speech, press, assembly, association, religion, and movement”.

(6) Religious minorities in Iran have been persecuted solely because of their faith, and the Government of Iran has detained 13 members of Iran’s Jewish community without charge.

(7) Recent student-led protests in Iran were repressed by force, with possibly five students losing their lives and hundreds more being imprisoned.

(8) The Government of Iran is pursuing an aggressive ballistic missile program with foreign assistance and is seeking to develop weapons of mass destruction which threaten United States allies and interests.

(9) Despite the continuation by the Government of Iran of repressive activities in Iran and efforts to threaten United States allies and interests in the Near East and South Asia, the President waived provisions of the Iran and Libya Sanctions Act of 1996 (Public Law 104-172; 50 U.S.C. 1701 note) intended to impede development of the energy sector in Iran.

(b) SENSE OF SENATE.—It is the sense of the Senate that—

(1) the President should condemn in the strongest possible terms the failure of the Government of Iran to implement genuine political reforms and protect the civil liberties of the people of Iran, which failure was most recently demonstrated in the violent repression of student-led protests in Teheran and other cities by the Government of Iran;

(2) the President should support democratic opposition groups in Iran more aggressively;

(3) the detention of 13 members of the Iranian Jewish community by the Government of Iran is a deplorable violation of due process and a clear example of the policies of the Government of Iran to persecute religious minorities; and

(4) the decision of the President to waive provisions of the Iran and Libya Sanctions Act of 1996 intended to impede development of the energy sector in Iran was regrettable and should be reversed as long as Iran continues to threaten United States interests and allies in the Near East and South Asia through state sponsorship of terrorism and efforts to acquire weapons of mass destruction and the missiles to deliver such weapons.

HATCH AMENDMENT NO. 1320

Mr. GREGG (for Mr. HATCH) proposed an amendment to the bill S. 1217, supra; as follows:

At the appropriate place, insert:

SECTION 1. HATE CRIMES.

(a) DECLARATIONS.—Congress declares that—

(1) further efforts must be taken at all levels of government to respond to the staggering brutality of hate crimes that have riveted public attention and shocked the Nation;

(2) hate crimes are prompted by bias and are committed to send a message of hate to targeted communities, usually defined on the basis of immutable traits;

(3) the prominent characteristic of a hate crime is that it devastates not just the actual victim and the victim’s family and friends, but frequently savages the community sharing the traits that caused the victim to be selected;

(4) any efforts undertaken by the Federal Government to combat hate crimes must respect the primacy that States and local officials have traditionally been accorded in the criminal prosecution of acts constituting hate crimes; and

(5) an overly broad reaction by the Federal Government to this serious problem might ultimately diminish the accountability of State and local officials in responding to hate crimes and transgress the constitutional limitations on the powers vested in Congress under the Constitution.

(b) STUDIES.—

(1) COLLECTION OF DATA.—

(A) DEFINITION OF HATE CRIME.—In this paragraph, the term “hate crime” means—

(i) a crime described in subsection (b)(1) of the first section of the Hate Crime Statistics Act (28 U.S.C. 534 note); and

(ii) a crime that manifests evidence of prejudice based on gender or age.

(B) COLLECTION FROM CROSS-SECTION OF STATES.—Not later than 120 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Comptroller General of the United States, in consultation with the National Governors’ Association, shall select 10 jurisdictions with laws classifying certain types of crimes as hate crimes and 10 jurisdictions without such laws from which to collect data described in subparagraph (C) over a 12-month period.

(C) DATA TO BE COLLECTED.—The data to be collected are—

(i) the number of hate crimes that are reported and investigated;

(ii) the percentage of hate crimes that are prosecuted and the percentage that result in conviction;

(iii) the length of the sentences imposed for crimes classified as hate crimes within a jurisdiction, compared with the length of sentences imposed for similar crimes committed in jurisdictions with no hate crime laws; and

(iv) references to and descriptions of the laws under which the offenders were punished.

(D) COSTS.—Participating jurisdictions shall be reimbursed for the reasonable and necessary costs of compiling data under this paragraph.

(2) STUDY OF TRENDS.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 18 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Comptroller General of the United States and the General Accounting Office shall complete a study that analyzes the data collected under paragraph (1) and under the Hate Crime Statistics Act of 1990 to determine the extent of hate crime activity throughout the country and the success of State and local officials in combating that activity.

(B) IDENTIFICATION OF TRENDS.—In the study conducted under subparagraph (A), the Comptroller General of the United States and the General Accounting Office shall identify any trends in the commission of hate crimes specifically by—

(i) geographic region;

(ii) type of crime committed; and

(iii) the number of hate crimes that are prosecuted and the number for which convictions are obtained.

(C) MODEL STATUTE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—To encourage the identification and prosecution of hate crimes throughout the country, the Attorney General shall, through the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws of the American Law Institute or another appropriate forum, and in consultation with the States, develop a model statute to carry out the goals described in subsection (a) and criminalize acts classified as hate crimes.

(2) REQUIREMENTS.—In developing the model statute, the Attorney General shall—

(A) include in the model statute crimes that manifest evidence of prejudice; and

(B) prepare an analysis of all reasons why any crime motivated by prejudice based on any traits of a victim should or should not be included.

(D) SUPPORT FOR CRIMINAL INVESTIGATIONS AND PROSECUTIONS BY STATE AND LOCAL LAW ENFORCEMENT OFFICIALS.—

(1) ASSISTANCE OTHER THAN FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—At the request of a law enforcement official of a State or a political subdivision of a State, the Attorney General, acting through the Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, shall provide technical, forensic, prosecutorial, or any other form of assistance in the criminal investigation or prosecution of any crime that—

(i) constitutes a crime of violence (as defined in section 16 of title 18, United States Code);

(ii) constitutes a felony under the laws of the State; and

(iii) is motivated by prejudice based on the victim's race, ethnicity, or religion or is a violation of the State's hate crime law.

(B) PRIORITY.—In providing assistance under subparagraph (A), the Attorney General shall give priority to crimes committed by offenders who have committed crimes in more than 1 State.

(2) GRANTS.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—There is established a grant program within the Department of Justice to assist State and local officials in the investigation and prosecution of hate crimes.

(B) ELIGIBILITY.—A State or political subdivision of a State applying for assistance under this paragraph shall—

(i) describe the purposes for which the grant is needed; and

(ii) certify that the State or political subdivision lacks the resources necessary to investigate or prosecute the hate crime.

(C) DEADLINE.—An application for a grant under this paragraph shall be approved or disapproved by the Attorney General not later than 24 hours after the application is submitted.

(D) GRANT AMOUNT.—A grant under this paragraph shall not exceed $100,000 for any single case.

(E) REPORT.—Not later than December 31, 2001, the Attorney General, in consultation with the National Governors' Association, shall submit to Congress a report describing the applications made for grants under this paragraph, the award of such grants, and the effectiveness of the grant funds awarded.

(F) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out this paragraph $5,000,000 for each of fiscal years 2000 and 2001.

(E) INTERSTATE TRAVEL TO COMMIT HATE CRIME.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Chapter 13 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

“§ 249. Interstate travel to commit hate crime

“(a) IN GENERAL.—A person, whether or not acting under color of law, who—

“(1) travels across a State line or enters or leaves Indian country in order, by force or threat of force, to willfully injure, intimidate, or interfere with, or by force or threat of force to attempt to injure, intimidate, or interfere with, any person because of the person's race, color, religion, or national origin; and

“(2) by force or threat of force, willfully injures, intimidates, or interferes with, or by force or threat of force attempts to willfully injure, intimidate, or interfere with any person because of the person's race, color, religion, or national origin, shall be subject to a penalty under subsection (b).

“(b) PENALTIES.—A person described in subsection (a) who is subject to a penalty under this subsection—

“(1) shall be fined under this title, imprisoned not more than 1 year, or both;

“(2) if bodily injury results or if the violation includes the use, attempted use, or threatened use of a dangerous weapon, explosives, or fire, shall be fined under this title, imprisoned not more than 10 years, or both; or

“(3) if death results or if the violation includes kidnapping or an attempt to kidnap, aggravated sexual abuse or an attempt to commit aggravated sexual abuse, or an attempt to kill—

“(A) shall be fined under this title, imprisoned for any term of years or for life, or both; or

“(B) may be sentenced to death.”.

(2) TECHNICAL AMENDMENT.—The analysis for chapter 13 of title 18, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

“249. Interstate travel to commit hate crime.”.

SNOWE AMENDMENT NO. 1321

Mr. GREGG (for Ms. SNOWE) proposed an amendment to the bill, S. 1217 supra; as follows:

At the appropriate place, insert the following:

The General Services Administration is directed to provide interim space for a senior judge's chambers in Provo, Utah and to complete a permanent senior judge's chambers in the Federal Building located in that city as soon as practicable.

KERRY AMENDMENT NO. 1323

Mr. HOLLINGS (for Mr. KERRY) proposed an amendment to the bill, S. 1217, supra; as follows:

In the Salaries and Expense Account of the Small Business Administration, insert at the end of the paragraph: “Provided further, That $23,200,000 shall be available to fund grants for Microloan Technical Assistance as authorized by section 7(m) of the Small Business Act.”

HOLLINGS (AND OTHERS) AMENDMENT NO. 1324

Mr. HOLLINGS (for himself, Mr. DASCHLE, Mr. DURBIN, Mrs. FEINSTEIN, Mr. JEFFORDS, Mr. LEAHY, Mr. SCHUMER, Mr. SMITH of Oregon, Mr. WYDEN, Mr. DODD, Mr. LAUTENBERG, Mrs. BOXER, Mr. HARKIN, Mr. TORRICELLI, and Mr. LEVIN) proposed an amendment to the bill, S. 1217, supra; as follows:

At the appropriate place, insert the following:

TITLE —HATE CRIMES PREVENTION

SEC. . 01. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the “Hate Crimes Prevention Act of 1999”.

SEC. . 02. FINDINGS.

Congress finds that—

(1) the incidence of violence motivated by the actual or perceived race, color, national origin, religion, sexual orientation, gender, or disability of the victim poses a serious national problem;

(2) such violence disrupts the tranquility and safety of communities and is deeply divisive;

(3) existing Federal law is inadequate to address this problem;

(4) such violence affects interstate commerce in many ways, including—

(A) by impeding the movement of members of targeted groups and forcing such members to move across State lines to escape the incidence or risk of such violence; and

(B) by preventing members of targeted groups from purchasing goods and services, obtaining or sustaining employment or participating in other commercial activity;

(5) perpetrators cross State lines to commit such violence;

(6) instrumentalities of interstate commerce are used to facilitate the commission of such violence;

(7) such violence is committed using articles that have traveled in interstate commerce;

(8) violence motivated by bias that is a relic of slavery can constitute badges and incidents of slavery;

(9) although many State and local authorities are now and will continue to be responsible for prosecuting the overwhelming majority of violent crimes in the United States, including violent crimes motivated by bias, Federal jurisdiction over certain violent crimes motivated by bias is necessary to supplement State and local jurisdiction and ensure that justice is achieved in each case;

(10) Federal jurisdiction over certain violent crimes motivated by bias enables Federal, State, and local authorities to work together as partners in the investigation and prosecution of such crimes;

(11) the problem of hate crime is sufficiently serious, widespread, and interstate in nature as to warrant Federal assistance to States and local jurisdictions; and

(12) freedom of speech and association are fundamental values protected by the first amendment to the Constitution of the United States, and it is the purpose of this title to criminalize acts of violence, and threats of violence, carried out because of the actual or perceived race, color, religion, national origin, gender, sexual orientation, or disability of the victim, not to criminalize beliefs in the abstract.

SEC. 03. DEFINITION OF HATE CRIME.

In this title, the term "hate crime" has the same meaning as in section 280003(a) of the Violent Crime Control and Law Enforcement Act of 1994 (28 U.S.C. 994 note).

SEC. 04. PROHIBITION OF CERTAIN ACTS OF VIOLENCE.

Section 245 of title 18, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by redesignating subsections (c) and (d) as subsections (d) and (e), respectively; and

(2) by inserting after subsection (b) the following:

"(c)(1) Whoever, whether or not acting under color of law, willfully causes bodily injury to any person or, through the use of fire, a firearm, or an explosive device, attempts to cause bodily injury to any person, because of the actual or perceived race, color, religion, or national origin of any person—

"(A) shall be imprisoned not more than 10 years, or fined in accordance with this title, or both; and

"(B) shall be imprisoned for any term of years or for life, or fined in accordance with this title, or both if—

"(i) death results from the acts committed in violation of this paragraph; or

"(ii) the acts committed in violation of this paragraph include kidnapping or an attempt to kidnap, aggravated sexual abuse or an attempt to commit aggravated sexual abuse, or an attempt to kill.

"(2)(A) Whoever, whether or not acting under color of law, in any circumstance described in subparagraph (B), willfully causes bodily injury to any person or, through the use of fire, a firearm, or an explosive device, attempts to cause bodily injury to any person, because of the actual or perceived religion, gender, sexual orientation, or disability of any person—

"(i) shall be imprisoned not more than 10 years, or fined in accordance with this title, or both; and

"(ii) shall be imprisoned for any term of years or for life, or fined in accordance with this title, or both, if—

"(I) death results from the acts committed in violation of this paragraph; or

"(II) the acts committed in violation of this paragraph include kidnapping or an attempt to kidnap, aggravated sexual abuse or an attempt to commit aggravated sexual abuse, or an attempt to kill.

"(B) For purposes of subparagraph (A), the circumstances described in this subparagraph are that—

"(i) in connection with the offense, the defendant or the victim travels in interstate or foreign commerce, uses a facility or instrumentality of interstate or foreign commerce, or engages in any activity affecting interstate or foreign commerce; or

"(ii) the offense is in or affects interstate or foreign commerce.

"(3) No prosecution of any offense described in this subsection may be undertaken by the United States, except upon the certification in writing of the Attorney General, the Deputy Attorney General, the Associate Attorney General, or any Assistant Attorney General specially designated by the Attorney General that—

"(A) he or she has reasonable cause to believe that the actual or perceived race, color, national origin, religion, sexual orientation, gender, or disability of any person was a motivating factor underlying the alleged conduct of the defendant; and

"(B) that he or his designee or she or her designee has consulted with State or local law enforcement officials regarding the prosecution and determined that—

"(i) the State does not have jurisdiction or refuses to assume jurisdiction;

"(ii) the State has requested that the Federal Government assume jurisdiction; or

"(iii) actions by State and local law enforcement officials have or are likely to leave demonstratively unvindicated the Federal interest in eradicating bias-motivated violence."

SEC. 05. DUTIES OF FEDERAL SENTENCING COMMISSION.

(a) AMENDMENT OF FEDERAL SENTENCING GUIDELINES.—Pursuant to its authority under section 994 of title 28, United States Code, the United States Sentencing Commission shall study the issue of adult recruitment of juveniles to commit hate crimes and shall, if appropriate, amend the Federal sentencing guidelines to provide sentencing enhancements (in addition to the sentencing enhancement provided for the use of a minor during the commission of an offense) for adult defendants who recruit juveniles to assist in the commission of hate crimes.

(b) CONSISTENCY WITH OTHER GUIDELINES.—In carrying out this section, the United States Sentencing Commission shall—

(1) ensure that there is reasonable consistency with other Federal sentencing guidelines; and

(2) avoid duplicative punishments for substantially the same offense.

SEC. 06. GRANT PROGRAM.

(a) AUTHORITY TO MAKE GRANTS.—The Office of Justice Programs of the Department of Justice shall make grants, in accordance with such regulations as the Attorney General may prescribe, to State and local programs designed to combat hate crimes committed by juveniles, including programs to train local law enforcement officers in investigating, prosecuting, and preventing hate crimes.

(b) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out this section.

SEC. 07. AUTHORIZATION FOR ADDITIONAL PERSONNEL TO ASSIST STATE AND LOCAL LAW ENFORCEMENT.

There are authorized to be appropriated to the Department of the Treasury and the Department of Justice, including the Community Relations Service, for fiscal years 2000, 2001, and 2002 such sums as are necessary to increase the number of personnel to prevent and respond to alleged violations of section 245 of title 18, United States Code (as amended by this title).

SEC. 08. SEVERABILITY.

If any provision of this title, an amendment made by this title, or the application of such provision or amendment to any person or circumstance is held to be unconstitutional, the remainder of this title, the amendments made by this title, and the application of the provisions of such to any person or circumstance shall not be affected thereby.

GRAHAM AMENDMENT NO. 1325

Mr. HOLLINGS (for Mr. GRAHAM) proposed an amendment to the bill, S. 1217, supra; as follows:

At the end of title I, add the following:

SEC. ____ (a) In this section:

(1) The term "hate crime" has the meaning given the term in section 280003(a) of the Violent Crime Control and Law Enforcement Act of 1994 (28 U.S.C. 994 note).

(2) The term "older individual" means an individual who is age 65 or older.

(b) The Attorney General shall conduct a study concerning—

(1) whether an older individual is more likely than the average individual to be the target of a crime;

(2) the extent of crimes committed against older individuals; and

(3) the extent to which crimes committed against older individuals are hate crimes.

(c) Not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Attorney General shall submit to Congress a report containing the results of the study.

REED AMENDMENT NO. 1326

Mr. HOLLINGS (for Mr. REED) proposed an amendment to the bill, S. 1217, supra; as follows:

At the appropriate place in the bill, insert the following:

SEC. ____ EXTENSION OF TEMPORARY PROTECTED STATUS FOR CERTAIN NATIONALS OF LIBERIA.

(a) CONTINUATION OF STATUS.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, any alien described in subsection (b) who, as of the date of enactment of this Act, is registered for temporary protected status in the United States under section 244(c)(1)(A)(iv) of the Immigration and Nationality Act (8 U.S.C. 1254a(c)(1)(A)(iv)), or any predecessor law, order, or regulation, shall be entitled to maintain that status through September 30, 2000.

(b) COVERED ALIENS.—An alien referred to in subsection (a) is a national of Liberia or an alien who has no nationality and who last habitually resided in Liberia.

BRYAN AMENDMENT NO. 1327

Mr. HOLLINGS (for Mr. BRYAN) proposed an amendment to the bill, S. 1217, supra; as follows:

At the appropriate place in title II, insert the following:

SEC. 2 . . . SENSE OF SENATE WITH RESPECT TO PROMOTING TRAVEL AND TOURISM.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds that—

(1) an effective public-private partnership of Federal, State, and local governments and the travel and tourism industry can successfully market the United States as the premiere international tourist destination in the world;

(2) the private sector, States, and cities currently spend more than $1,000,000,000 annually to promote particular destinations within the United States to international visitors;

(3) other nations are spending hundreds of millions of dollars annually to promote the visits of international tourists to their countries, and the United States will miss a major marketing opportunity if it fails to aggressively compete for an increased share of international tourism expenditures as they continue to increase over the next decade;

(4) a well-funded, well-coordinated international marketing effort, combined with additional public and private sector efforts, would help small and large businesses, as well as State and local governments, share in the anticipated growth of the international travel and tourism market in the 21st century; and

(5) a long-term marketing effort should be supported to promote increased travel to the United States for the benefit of every sector of the economy.

(b) SENSE OF THE SENATE.—It is the sense of the Senate that Congress should enact this year, with adequate funding from available resources, legislation that would support international promotional activities by the United States National Tourism Organization to help brand, position, and promote the United States as the premiere travel and tourism destination in the world.

BINGAMAN AMENDMENT NO. 1328

Mr. HOLLINGS (for Mr. BINGAMAN) proposed an amendment to the bill, S. 1217, supra; as follows:

On page 65, after line 25, add the following:
SEC. 209. STUDY OF A GENERAL ELECTRONIC EXTENSION PROGRAM

Not later than six months after the enactment of the Act, the Secretary of Commerce shall report to Congress on possible benefits from a general electronic commerce extension program to help small businesses, not limited to manufacturers, in all parts of the nation identify and adopt electronic commerce technology and techniques, so that such businesses can fully participate in electronic commerce. Such a general extension service would be analogous to the Manufacturing Extension Program managed by the National Institute of Standards and Technology, and the Cooperative Extension Service managed by the Department of Agriculture. The report shall address, at a minimum, the following—

(a) the need for or opportunity presented by such a program;

(b) some of the specific services that such a program should provide and to whom;

(c) how such a program would serve firms in rural or isolated areas;

(d) how such a program should be established, organized, and managed;

(e) the estimated costs of such a program; and

(f) the potential benefits of such a program to both small businesses and the economy as a whole.

MURRAY AMENDMENT NO. 1329

Mr. HOLLINGS (for Mrs. MURRAY) proposed an amendment to the bill, S. 1217, supra; as follows:

At page 59, line 14 after the colon insert the following proviso: “Provided further, That, of the amounts provided, $6,000,000 shall be made available to Pacific coastal tribes (as defined by the Secretary of Commerce) through the Department of Commerce, which shall allocate the funds to tribes in California and Oregon, and to tribes in Washington after consultation with the Washington State Salmon Recovery Funding Board; Provided further, That the Secretary ensure the aforementioned $6 million be used for restoration of Pacific salmonid populations listed under the Endangered Species Act; Provided further, That funds to tribes in Washington shall be used only for grants for planning (not to exceed 10% of grant), physical design, and completion of restoration projects; and Provided further, That each tribe receiving a grant in Washington State derived from the aforementioned $6 million provide a report on the specific use and effectiveness of such recovery project grant in restoring listed Pacific salmonid populations, which report shall be made public and shall be provided to the Committees on Appropriations in the U.S. House of Representatives and the U.S. Senate through the Salmon Recovery Funding Board by December 1, 2000.”

BOXER AMENDMENT NO. 1330

Mr. HOLLINGS (for Mrs. BOXER) proposed an amendment to the bill, S. 1217, supra; as follows:

On page 45, between lines 9 and 10, insert the following:

SEC. . . (a) In implementing the Institutional Hearing Program and the Institutional Removal Program of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, the Attorney General shall give priority to—

(1) those aliens serving a prison sentence for a serious violent felony, as defined in section 3559(c)(2)(F) of title 18, United States Code; and

(2) those aliens arrested by the Border Patrol and subsequently incarcerated for drug violations.

(b) Not later than March 31, 2000, the Attorney General shall submit a report to Congress describing the steps taken to carry out subsection (a).

DODD AMENDMENT NO. 1331

Mr. HOLLINGS (for Mr. DODD) proposed an amendment to the bill, S. 1217, supra; as follows:

At the appropriate place in the bill add the following:

SEC. . NOTIFICATION OF INTENT TO SELL CERTAIN U.S. PROPERTIES.

At the appropriate place, insert the following:

SEC. . . SENSE OF THE SENATE REGARDING THE EUROPEAN COUNCIL NOISE RULE AFFECTING HUSHKITTED AND REENGINEED AIRCRAFT.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Senate finds that—

(1) For more than 50 years, the International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO) has been the single entity vested with the authority to establish international noise and emissions standards; through ICAO's efforts, aircraft noise has decreased by an average of 40 percent since 1970;

(2) ICAO is currently working on an expedited basis on even more stringent international noise standards, taking into account economic reasonableness, technical feasibility and environmental benefits.

(3) International noise and emissions standards are critical to maintaining U.S. aeronautical industries' economic viability and to obtaining their ongoing commitment to progressively more stringent noise reduction efforts;

(4) European Council (EC) Regulation No. 925/1999, banning certain aircraft meeting the highest internationally recognized noise standards from flying in Europe, undermines the integrity of the ICAO process and undercuts the likelihood that new Stage 4 standards can be developed;

(5) While no regional standard is acceptable, this regulation is particularly offensive; there is no scientific basis for the regulation and it has been carefully crafted to protect European aviation interests while imposing arbitrary, substantial and unfounded cost burdens on United States' aeronautical industries;

(6) The vast majority of aircraft that will be affected by EC Regulation No. 925/1999 are operated by U.S. flag carriers; and

(7) The implementation of EC Regulation No. 925/1999 will result in a loss of jobs in the United States and may cost the U.S. aviation industry in excess of $2,000,000.

(b) SENSE OF THE SENATE.—It is the sense of the Senate that—

(1) EC Regulation No. 925/1999 should be rescinded by the EC at the earliest possible time;

(2) that if this is not done, the Department of State should file a petition regarding EC Regulation No. 925/1999 with ICAO pursuant to Article 84 of the Chicago Convention; and

(3) the Departments of Commerce and Transportation and the United States Trade Representative should use all reasonable means available to them to ensure that the goal of having the rule repealed is achieved.

NOTICE OF HEARING

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

FULBRIGHT SCHOLARSHIP PROGRAM AND THE TIBETAN EXCHANGE PROGRAM

• Mr. JEFFORDS. Mr. President, I am a strong supporter of international exchange programs. Americans benefit from an opportunity to work and study abroad. Foreigners benefit from time in the United States both in their professional development and by exposure to the American system and values. Exchanges are a proven way to disperse American principals of freedom and democracy around the world. Therefore, I am disappointed that the committee report recommends reducing funding for several exchange programs, including the funding for students, scholars and teachers portion of the Fulbright Program. The Fulbright Program has served America and Americans very well for many years. It is not in our best interest to reduce funding for it at this time. I would hope that all of the programs on the committees reprioritization list will be carefully evaluated before any decision is made to reduce or eliminate them.

The Tibetan Fulbright Program touches Vermonters very close to home. Ngawang Choephel, a Tibetan exile living in India, was the recipient of a Fulbright Scholarship and studied ethnomusicology at Middlebury College in Middlebury, Vermont. He was unjustly arrested by the Chinese in 1995 in his native Tibet when he returned to document traditional Tibetan music. Although this young man's time in Vermont was brief, the passion he threw into his work to preserve endangered Tibetan culture gained him a large following in my state. His case is of the highest priority for me and the other members of Vermont's congressional delegation. Senator LEAHY has joined me in offering an amendment to this legislation to ensure that the Tibetan Exchange Program continues in fiscal year 2000.

I hope that in conference the necessary changes will be made to ensure adequate funding for our most important exchange programs. •

ON THE PASSING OF COACH RALPH TASKER

• Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, I rise today to speak on the life of a legendary figure in New Mexico sports history.

Ralph Tasker, the dean of New Mexico high school boys basketball, died earlier this week at the age of 80.

In New Mexico, you didn't have to refer to Ralph Tasker by name; you only had to say "Coach" and everyone knew who that was.

He coached in Hobbs for decades, and was known throughout our state as a superb teacher of the game of Basketball.

Ralph Tasker leaves behind an enduring legacy forged with the Hobbs Eagles, coaching 52 seasons in Lea County.

During that time, he amassed 1,122 wins with only 291 losses. That's almost an 80% winning record; a record difficult to achieve in any sport, at any level.

His teams won 12 state championships.

He was also recognized as the National Coach of the year.

He retired in 1998 as the third winningest head coach in the history of boys high school basketball in the United States and was elected to the National High School Coach Association Hall of Fame.

With all those accolades, if you asked Ralph Tasker what he was most proud of, he would tell you he was most proud of the hard work, dedication, and educational achievements of the young men on his teams.

When opposing teams prepared to play a Ralph Tasker-coached team, they knew they would face a disciplined and well-motivated team.

Coach Tasker knew the value of team work and inspired young men to respect one another as they worked together toward a common goal.

Coach Tasker coached and stood for the kind of ideals that we as state and country aspire as we work to motivate and teach young people.

I extend my condolences to his three children, Nancy, Diane, and Tim and to his four grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

New Mexicans appreciate Coach Tasker's life, and we will always remember his great achievements on and off the court. •

RETIREMENT OF ROBERT TOBIAS

• Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I rise today to acknowledge the retirement of Robert Tobias, President of the National Treasury Employees Union. I would like to take a moment to recognize the hard work and accomplishments of Mr. Tobias who, during a career with the NTEU of 31 years, has served as a prominent advocate for the over 155,000 federal employee members of the Union.

Under Bob's leadership, the NTEU has grown to become the nation's largest independent federal employees union, representing workers from 18 government agencies. Bob is one of the foremost authorities on federal employee issues and has been a vital resource to those of us who work on Capitol Hill, to the agencies he represents and throughout the federal government. Bob is highly respected among labor relations specialists as well. He has been instrumental in developing and enacting major legislation affecting federal employees including, creation and implementation of the Federal Employees Retirement System, pay parity issues, and he served as a member of the bipartisan National Commission Restructuring the IRS whose work was the basis for the comprehensive IRS reform legislation passed in the 105th Congress.

Furthermore, Bob has been successful in numerous landmark legal battles impacting employee rights in court and before various federal oversight bodies, such as the Merit Systems Protection Board, the Federal Labor Relations Authority and the Office of Personnel Management.

Again, I commend Mr. Tobias for his invaluable work on behalf of federal employees, and I wish continued success for Mr. Tobias in his future endeavors.●

LYBA COHEN

● Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, I rise today to congratulate a recent college graduate who resides in Rutland, Vermont. Lyba Cohen has joined the multitude of students who received their bachelor's degrees from colleges and universities across the country in the past months. She graduated from Lehman College in the Bronx, New York with a bachelor's degree in English literature with a minor in Italian. She also walked away with a nearly perfect GPA. Although Lyba Cohen speaks seven languages fluently, she considers the English language her greatest love. She has an insatiable love of learning, and plans to continue her education next fall.

There is one detail that I have failed to mention regarding this recent college graduate. Mr. President, Lyba Cohen is 82 years old. She was born and raised in Estonia, became part of the Zionist movement after high school, and was among the first people to settle the state of Israel. A woman who has worn many hats throughout her life, Mrs. Cohen is a tribute to students and senior citizens alike. She relocated to Rutland two years ago, and I am proud to honor this fascinating Vermonter. Mrs. Cohen has led a rich and fulfilling life, and at 82 she has embarked on yet another journey. This unique student deserves recognition, and I ask that the article from the Rutland daily Herald be printed in the RECORD so that all Senators may read about this remarkable woman.

The article follows.

A LIFELONG LEARNER—RUTLAND WOMAN
EARNS COLLEGE DEGREE AT AGE 82
(By Cauley Greene)

Lyba Cohen is a great student. She's graduating with a sky-high GPA and a bachelor's degree in English literature with a minor in Italian.

Like other graduates, she looks forward to a summer of rest before deciding whether to delve back into academia.

But unlike most college graduates, Cohen is 82 years old.

She'll be accepting her diploma from Lehman College in the Bronx, N.Y., on Friday with the rest of the class of 1999.

The more than 60 years between her high school diploma and her bachelor's degree have been packed full with feats that make her latest accomplishment seem more like a brief stop along the way than a final destination.

She has been a pioneer, a working mother and, most recently, a student.

Although her life as a traditional student began 10 years ago at a non-traditional age, Cohen has been something of a student all her life, learning as she went along.

Born and raised in Estonia, Cohen ventured off the beaten path early.

"When I graduated from high school I joined a group of friends that I had in a Zionist youth organization," she said. For two years the group trained for a life in agriculture, to be among the first to settle what is now Israel.

* * * * *

When war broke out in 1948, Abraham traveled back and forth to Israel while Lyba stayed in New York, helping her father-in-law with the family bakery. After the war ended her husband returned and took over the bakery. Cohen helped run the business until their two sons were out of school.

In 1970, she took the civil service test and took a position with the New York City Human Resources Administration, where she worked for 17 years, living in the Bronx. Widowed in 1973, Cohen lived and worked in the Bronx by herself. She retired in 1987.

Restless and driven by what she described as a love of the English language, she enrolled at Lehman College a year after she retired. An interest in English, sparked when Cohen was in high school, guided her toward a concentration in literature and modern language.

"I just fell in love with the English language," she said of her high school years.

She has been taking college classes since 1988, averaging two courses a semester.

"It took me a very long time because of health problems and hospital stays," she said. Her health and other factors prompted her move from the Bronx to Rutland in December 1997, but she stayed in school.

"I didn't give up," she said.

She now lives across the street from her son, Barry Cohen. Her other son, Boaz, who lives in Warren N.J., will join the family as they watch her accept her diploma.

The move made finishing her degree more difficult, but Lyba Cohen said she's glad she came north.

"I love it here, it's a wonderful place . . . I wish I had come here earlier," she said.

Her love of language is greater. She speaks seven different tongues, and when she speaks it seems every word she uses has been carefully chosen. She cites the same discrimination in her favorite author, Vladimir Nabokov, who also learned English as a second language.

"I like him, I like his linguistic proficiency," she said.

Cohen's love of language has also translated into academic success. She has received grades higher than an "A" in her last two semesters, and was told by her professor that three papers on author Toni Morrison she had recently done were written on a graduate level. Cohen's GPA is also very high, but she said that it doesn't really matter to her.

"It's close to 4.0, I think . . . It's really of no importance to me at all. The fact is I've acquired a lot of knowledge, she said.

Which begs the question: what will she do with her degree? Her answer probably echoes that of graduates 60 years her junior.

"After the summer I'm going to think about taking some courses . . . but I have the summer to think about it," she said.●
