(6) the Department of the Treasury is currently conducting a comprehensive study of all depreciation provisions in the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997 and the Omnibus Consolidated and Emergency Supplemental Appropriations Act, 1999;

(7) Congress should consider expanding the existing expensing provision to cover investments in depreciable real property in any reform legislation that results from this study or, if possible, in any earlier legislation.

(b) Sense of Congress.—It is the sense of Congress that—

(1) many small businesses trying to improve their storefronts on Main Street or investing to upgrade their property would benefit if Congress expanded the existing expensing provision to cover investments in depreciable real property; and

(2) Congress should consider including this proposal in any future tax legislation.
SEC. 1131. DISCLOSURE OF TAX INFORMATION TO FACILITATE COMBINED EMPLOYMENT TAX REPORTING.

Section 6011(d)(5) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 is amended to read as follows:

“(5) DISCLOSURE FOR COMBINED EMPLOYMENT TAX REPORTING.—The Secretary may disclose taxpayer identity information and signatures to any agency, body, or commission of any State for the purpose of carrying out this section. Such information shall be used in a manner consistent with the stated charitable purposes of the 501(c)(3) organization.

SEC. 1132. TREATMENT OF MAPLE SYRUP PRODUCTION.

Line 3 of subsection (k) of section 3206 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 is amended by inserting after “chapter” the following: “agricultural labor includes labor connected to the harvesting or production of maple sap into maple syrup or sugar.”

SEC. 1133. TREATMENT OF BONDS ISSUED TO ACQUIRE RENEWABLE RESOURCES ON LAND SUBJECT TO CONSERVATION EASEMENT.

(a) In General.—Section 145 (defining qualified 501(c)(3) bond) is amended by redesignating subsection (e) as subsection (f) and by inserting after subsection (d) the following new subsection:

“(e) Bonds Issued To Acquire Renewable Resources on Land Subject to Conservation Easement.—

(1) In General.—Section 145(a)(1)(C) is amended by striking the item relating to section 128 as section 138 and by inserting after section 138 the following new section: “SEC. 138. MODIFICATION OF ALTERNATIVE MINIMUM TAX FOR INDIVIDUALS.

Section 56(b)(1)(E) is amended by inserting “and striking $250” and inserting “$300.”

SEC. 1135. EXCLUSION FROM INCOME OF SEVERANCE PAYMENTS.

(a) In General.—Part III of subchapter B of chapter 1 (relating to items specifically excluded from gross income) is amended by redesignating section 139 as section 140 and by inserting after section 138 the following new section: “SEC. 139. SEVERANCE PAYMENTS.

(1) In General.—In the case of an individual, gross income does not include any qualified severance payment.

(2) Limitation.—The amount to which the exclusion under subsection (a) applies shall not exceed 2,000 with respect to any separation from employment.

(3) Qualified Severance Payment.—For purposes of this section—

(1) in General.—The term ‘qualified severance payment’ means any payment received by an individual if such payment was paid by such individual’s employer on account of such individual’s separation from employment.

(2) Such individual does not obtain employment within 6 months of such individual’s separation in which the amount of compensation is equal to or greater than 95 percent of the amount of compensation for the employment that is related to such payment.

SEC. 1136. CAPITAL GAIN TREATMENT UNDER SECTION 6116 TO APPLY TO OUTRIGHT SALES OF TIMBER.

(a) In General.—Subsection (b) of section 6116 (relating to disposal of timber with a retained economic interest) is amended—

(1) by adding after the last sentence the following sentence: “The requirement in the first sentence of this subsection to retain an economic interest in timber shall not apply to an outright sale of such timber by the owner thereof if the owner earns (or is deemed to earn) the fair market value (at the time of such sale) from which the timber is cut.”;

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this subsection shall apply to sales after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 1137. CREDIT FOR CLINICAL TESTING RESEARCH EXPENSES ATTRIBUTABLE TO CERTAIN QUALIFIED ACADEMIC INSTITUTIONS INCLUDING TEACHING HOSPITALS.

(a) In General.—Subparagraph D of paragraph (1) of section 41(b) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 is amended by striking the item relating to section 41(c) and by inserting after such section the following:

“SEC. 41A. CREDIT FOR MEDICAL INNOVATION EXPENSES.

(1) in General.—For purposes of section 41, the term ‘qualified medical innovation expenses’ means—

(A) the amount paid by an individual to a qualified medical institution (as defined in section 501(c)(3)) to conduct at any qualified academic institution clinical testing activities, performed in the United States, which involve—

(i) the use of a product developed by such individual or

(ii) the design or conduct of such clinical testing activities by such individual; and

(B) the amount described in subparagraph (A) for which the taxpayer’s use of the product was authorized by or under a protocol approved by such qualified academic institution and such qualified medical institution.

(2) Amendments.—The amendments made by this subsection shall apply to amounts paid after the date of the enactment of this Act.”
to the extent such amount is funded by any grant, loan, or other support of a governmental unit, the person eligible for the credit determined under section 41A(a) may be carried back to the medical innovation base period amount provided to the extent such amount is funded by any grant, loan, or other support of a governmental unit, the person eligible for the credit determined under section 41A(a) may be carried back to the medical innovation base period amount.

(d) DEDUCTION FOR UNUSED PORTION OF CREDIT.—Section 196(c) (defining qualified business expenses) is amended by striking "surplus" and inserting "plus".

(e) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1999.

SEC. 1201. PERMANENT EXTENSION AND MODIFICATION OF RESEARCH CREDIT (a) PERMANENT EXTENSION.— (1) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1998.

(b) TEMPORARY EXTENSION.—Sections 953(e)(10) and 514(h)(9) are each amended by striking "January 1, 2000" and inserting "January 1, 2001".

(c) INCREASED MEDICAL DEPRECIATION.—Subparagraph (H) of section 45(c)(4) is amended— (1) by striking "2.2 percent" and inserting "2.65 percent".

(d) SPECIAL RULES.—Paragraph (2) of section 51(i) is amended by striking paragraph (G)(1) and inserting a comma, by adding after subparagraph (E)(1) the following new paragraph: "(11) the medical innovation expenses credit determined under section 41A(a) may be carried back to the medical innovation base period amount.

(e) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1999.

SEC. 1202. TAXABLE INCOME LIMIT ON PERCENTAGE DEPRECIATION FOR MARGINAL PRODUCTION. (a) IN GENERAL.—Sections 51(c)(4) and 51A(f) (relating to termination) are each amended by striking "June 30, 1999" and inserting "June 30, 2004".

(b) CLARIFICATION OF FIRST YEAR OF EMPLOYMENT.—Paragraph (2) of section 51(i) is amended by striking "which was not a member of a targeted group".

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to individuals who begin work for the employer after June 30, 1999.

SEC. 1203. EXTENSION AND MODIFICATION OF FILING CREDITS FOR PRODUCING ELECTRICITY FROM CERTAIN RENEWABLE RESOURCES. (a) TEMPORARY EXTENSION.—Sections 51(c)(4) and 51A(f) (relating to termination) are each amended by striking "June 30, 1999" and inserting "June 30, 2004".

(b) CLARIFICATION OF FIRST YEAR OF EMPLOYMENT.—Paragraph (2) of section 51(i) is amended by striking "which was not a member of a targeted group".

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to individuals who begin work for the employer after June 30, 1999.

SEC. 1204. EXTENSION AND MODIFICATION OF CREDIT FOR PROMOTING THE USE OF WIND POWER. (a) TEMPORARY EXTENSION.—Sections 51(c)(4) and 51A(f) (relating to termination) are each amended by striking "June 30, 1999" and inserting "June 30, 2004".

(b) CLARIFICATION OF FIRST YEAR OF EMPLOYMENT.—Paragraph (2) of section 51(i) is amended by striking "which was not a member of a targeted group".

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to individuals who begin work for the employer after June 30, 1999.
TITLE XIII—REVENUE OFFSETS

Subtitle A—General Provisions

SEC. 1301. MODIFICATION TO FOREIGN TAX CREDIT
IT CARRYBACK AND CARRYOVER PERIODS.

(a) In General.—Section 904(c) (relating to limitation on carryback and carryover periods) is amended—

(1) by striking "in the second preceding taxable year," and

(2) by striking "or fifth and inserting "fifth, sixth, or seventh".

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply to credits arising in taxable years beginning after December 31, 1999.

SEC. 1302. RETURNS RELATING TO CANCELLATIONS OF INDEBTEDNESS BY ORGANIZATIONS LENDING MONEY.

(a) In General.—Paragraph (2) of section 6652(c) (relating to definitions and special rules) is amended by striking "and" at the end of subparagraph (B), by striking the period at the end of subparagraph (C) and inserting "and", and by inserting after subparagraph (C) the following new subparagraph:

"(D) any organization a significant trade or business of which is the lending of money.

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply to discharges of indebtedness after December 31, 1999.

SEC. 1303. INCREASE IN ELECTIVE WITHHOLDING RATES FOR PERIODIC DISTRIBUTIONS FROM DEFERRAL COMPENSATION PLANS.

(a) In General.—Section 401(k)(1) (relating to miscellaneous provisions) is amended by adding at the end of the following new section:

"Sec. 7527. INTERNAL REVENUE SERVICE USER FEES.

"(a) GENERAL RULE.—The Secretary shall establish a program requiring the payment of user fees for—

"(1) requests to the Internal Revenue Service for ruling letters, opinion letters, and determination letters, and

"(2) other similar requests.

"(b) PROGRAM CRITERIA.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The fees charged under the program required by paragraph (a) shall be determined after taking into account the average time for (and difficulty of) complying with requests in each category (and subcategories) established by the Secretary, and shall be payable in advance.

"(2) EXEMPTIONS, ETC.—The Secretary shall provide for such exemptions (and reduced fees) under such program as the Secretary determines to be appropriate.

"(C) AVERAGE FEE REQUIREMENT.—The average fee charged under the program required by subsection (a) shall not be less than the amount determined under the following table:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Category</th>
<th>Average Fee</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Employee plan ruling and opinion</td>
<td>$200</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Exempt organization ruling</td>
<td>$350</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Exempt organization determination</td>
<td>$500</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Chief counsel ruling</td>
<td>$250</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Tax-exempt organization determination</td>
<td>$200</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

"(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendment made by paragraph (a) shall apply to requests made after September 30, 2009.

(c) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(1) The table of sections for chapter 77 is amended by adding at the end the following new item:

"Sec. 7527. Internal Revenue Service user fees.

"(2) Section 10511 of the Revenue Act of 1967 is amended by striking "1967'' and inserting "2001''.

(c) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to requests made after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 1305. TRANSFER OF EXCESS DEFINED BENEFIT PLAN ASSETS FOR RETIREE HEALTH BENEFITS.

(a) Extension.—

(1) In General.—Paragraph (5) of section 420(b) (relating to expiration) is amended by striking "in any taxable year beginning after December 31, 2000'' and inserting "made after September 30, 2009''.

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

(2) Section 403(c)(1) of such Act (29 U.S.C. 103(c)(1)) is amended by striking "1995'' and inserting "2001''.

(4) Section 4082(b)(9) of such Act (29 U.S.C. 1082(b)(9)) is amended by striking "in a taxable year beginning after January 1, 2001'' and inserting "made before October 1, 2009'', and

(5) by striking "1995'' and inserting "2001''.

(6) APPLICATION OF MINIMUM COST REQUIREMENTS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—Paragraph (3) of section 420(c) is amended to read as follows:

""(3) MINIMUM COST REQUIREMENTS.—

"(A) IN GENERAL.—The requirements of this paragraph are met if each group health plan or arrangement under which applicable health benefits are provided provides that the applicable employer cost for each tax year during the cost maintenance period shall not be less than the higher of the applicable employer costs for each of the 2 taxable years immediately preceding the taxable year or the taxable year of the qualified transfer.

"(B) APPLICABLE EMPLOYER COST.—For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'applicable employer cost' means, with respect to any taxable year, the amount determined by dividing—

"(i) the qualified current retiree health liabilities of the employer for such taxable year determined—

"(1) without regard to any reduction under subsection (c)(1)(B), and

"(II) in the case of a taxable year in which there was no qualified transfer, in the same manner as if there had been such a transfer at the end of the taxable year, by

"(i) the number of individuals to whom coverage for applicable health benefits was provided during such taxable year,

"(C) ELECTION TO COMPUTE COST SEPARATELY.—An employer may elect to have this paragraph applied separately with respect to individuals eligible for benefits under title XVIII of the Social Security Act at any time during the taxable year and with respect to individuals not so eligible.

"(D) COST MAINTENANCE PERIOD.—For purposes of this paragraph, the term 'cost maintenance period' means the period of 5 taxable years beginning with the taxable year in which the qualified transfer occurs. If a taxable year is in 2 or more overlapping cost maintenance periods, this paragraph shall be applied by taking into account the highest applicable employer cost required under subparagraph (A) for such taxable year.

(2) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—

"(A) Clause (iii) of section 420(b)(1)(C) is amended by striking "benefits'' and inserting "cost''.

(B) Subparagraph (D) of section 420(e)(1) is amended by striking "and shall not be subject to the minimum benefit requirements of subsection (c)(3)'' and inserting "or in calculating applicable employer cost under subsection (c)(3)(B)''.
(c) Effective Dates.—
(1) In General.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to qualified transfers occurring after the date of the enactment of this Act.
(2) Transition Rule.—If the cost maintenance period for any qualified transfer after the date of the enactment of this Act includes any portion of a benefit maintenance period for any qualified transfer on or before such date, the amendments made by subsection (b) shall not apply to such portion of the cost maintenance period (and such portion shall be treated as a benefit maintenance period).

SEC. 1306. TAX TREATMENT OF INCOME AND LOSS ON DERIVATIVES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 1221 (defining capital assets) is amended—
(1) by striking “For purposes” and inserting the following:
“(a) IN GENERAL.—For purposes”,
(2) by striking the period at the end of paragraph (5) and inserting a semicolon, and
(3) by adding at the end the following:
“(b) any commodities derivative financial instrument held by a commodities derivatives dealer, unless—
“(A) it is established to the satisfaction of the Secretary that such instrument has no connection to the activities of such dealer as a dealer and “(B) such instrument is clearly identified in such dealer’s records as being described in subsection (a)(7), or “(c) supplies of a type regularly used or consumed by the taxpayer in the ordinary course of a trade or business of the taxpayer.

(b) Definitions and Special Rules.—
(1) Commodities Derivative Financial Instruments.—For purposes of subsection (a)(6)—
(A) Commodities Derivatives Dealer.—The term ‘commodities derivatives dealer’ means a person which regularly offers to enter into, as a principal, a contract or financial instrument with respect to commodities (other than a share of stock in a corporation, a beneficial interest in a partnership or trust, a note, bond, debenture, or other evidence of indebtedness, or a section 1256 contract as defined in section 1256(b)), the value or settlement price of which is calculated by or determined by reference to a specified index.
(B) Commodities Derivative Financial Instrument.—
(i) In General.—The term ‘commodities derivative financial instrument’ means any contract or financial instrument with respect to commodities (other than a share of stock in a corporation, a beneficial interest in a partnership or trust, a note, bond, debenture, or other evidence of indebtedness, or a section 1256 contract as defined in section 1256(b)), the value or settlement price of which is calculated by or determined by reference to a specified index.
(ii) Specified Index.—The term ‘specified index’ means—
(I) a fixed rate, price, or amount, or
(ii) a variable rate, price, or amount, which is based on any current, objectively determinable price or value of financial or economic information with respect to commodities which is not within the control of any of the parties to the contract or instrument and is not unique to any of the parties’ circumstances.

(2) Hedging Transaction.—
(A) In General.—For purposes of this section, the term ‘hedging transaction’ means any transaction entered into by the taxpayer in the normal course of the taxpayer’s trade or business primarily—

(1) to manage risk of price changes or currency fluctuations with respect to ordinary property which is held or to be held by the taxpayer,
(2) to manage interest rate or price changes occurring in any contract or financial instrument by which such changes are attributable to such property, or
(3) to manage such other risks as the Secretary may prescribe in regulations.

(3) Regulations.—The Secretary shall prescribe such regulations as are appropriate to carry out the purposes of paragraphs (1) and (2) of subsection (a) in the case of transactions involving related parties.

(b) Management of Risk.—
(1) Section 475(c)(7) is amended by striking “hedge” and inserting “reduces”.
(2) Section 471(h)(4)(C)(iv) is amended by striking “to reduce” and inserting “to manage”.
(3) Clause (i) and (ii) of section 988(d)(2)(A) are each amended by striking “to reduce” and inserting “to manage”.
(4) Paragraph (2) of section 1256(e) is amended to read as follows:
(2) Definition of Hedging Transaction.—For purposes of this subsection, the term ‘hedging transaction’ means any hedging transaction (as defined in section 1221(b)(2)(A)) if, before the close of the day on which such transaction was entered into (or such earlier time as the Secretary may prescribe by regulations), the taxpayer clearly identifies such transaction as being a hedging transaction.

(c) Conforming Amendments.—
(1) Each of the following sections are amended by striking “section 1221” and inserting “section 1221(a)”:
(A) Section 170(e)(3)(A),
(B) Section 170(e)(4)(B),
(C) Section 367(a)(3)(B)(ii),
(D) Section 341(d)(2),
(E) Section 861(b)(1),
(F) Section 1992(a)(2)(B)(i)(II),
(G) Paragraphs (C) and (D) of section 1231(b)(1),
(H) Section 1234(a)(3)(A),
(I) Each of the following sections are amended by striking “section 1221” and inserting “section 1221(a)”:
(A) Section 198(c)(1)(A)(i),
(B) Section 263A(b)(2)(A),
(C) Clauses (i) and (iii) of section 267(f)(3)(B),
(D) Section 341(d)(1),
(E) Section 543(a)(1)(D)(ii),
(F) Section 751(d)(1),
(G) Section 775(c),
(H) Section 836(c)(2)(D),
(I) Section 836(c)(3)(C),
(J) Section 856(e)(1),
(K) Section 856(e)(2)(B),
(L) Section 856(e)(2)(B)(ii),
(M) Section 857(b)(6)(B)(iii),
(N) Section 864(c)(4)(B)(iii),
(O) Section 864(d)(3)(A),
(P) Section 1015(b)(3)(B)(ii),
(Q) Section 955(c)(1)(B)(iii),
(R) Section 955(b)(1)(C),
(S) Section 1017(b)(3)(E)(ii),
(T) Section 1182(a)(2)(B),
(U) Section 1062(c)(2)(C),
(V) Section 7704(c)(3),
(W) Section 7704(d)(1)(D),
(X) Section 7704(d)(4),
(Y) Section 7704(d)(5).

(3) Section 418(b)(2) is amended by striking “section 1221(2)” and inserting “section 1221(a)(2)”.
(4) Section 1397B(e)(2) is amended by striking “section 1221(4)” and inserting “section 1221(a)(4)”.

(d) Effective Date.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to any instrument held, acquired, or entered into, any transaction entered into, and supplies held or acquired on or after the date of enactment of this Act.

Subtitle B—Loophole Closers

SEC. 1311. LIMITATION ON USE OF NON-ACCRUAL EXPERIENCE METHOD OF ACCOUNTING.

(a) In General.—Section 446(b)(5) (relating to special rule for services) is amended—
(1) by inserting “in fields described in paragraph (2)(A)” after “services by such person”, and
(2) by inserting “CERTAIN PERSONAL” before “SERVICES” in the heading.

(b) Effective Date.—In general.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to taxable years ending after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(c) Change in Method of Accounting.—In the case of any taxpayer required by the amend-ments made by this section to change its method of accounting for its first taxable year ending after the date of the enactment of this Act—
(A) such change shall be treated as initiated by the taxpayer,
(B) such change shall be treated as made with the consent of the Secretary of the Treasury,
(C) the net amount of the adjustments required to be taken into account by the taxpayer under section 481 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 shall be taken into account over a period (not greater than 4 taxable years) beginning with such first taxable year.

SEC. 1312. LIMITATIONS ON WELFARE BENEFIT FUNDS OF 10 OR MORE EMPLOYER PLANS.

(a) Benefits to Which Exception Applies.—Section 401(a)(46)(A) (relating to exceptions to 10 or more employer plans) is amended to read as follows:
(4) In general.—This subpart shall not apply to a welfare benefit fund which is part of a 10 or more employer plan if the only benefits provided through the fund are 1 or more of the following:
(1) Medical benefits.
(2) Disability benefits.
(3) Group term life insurance benefits which do not provide directly or indirectly for any cash surrender value or other money that can be paid, assigned, borrowed, or pledged for collateral for a loan.

(2) Limitation on Use of Amounts for Other Purposes.—Section 401(a)(46)(A) (defining disqualified benefit) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:
(5) Special Rule for N or More Employer Plans Exempted from PreFunding Limits.—For purposes of paragraph (1)(C), if—
(A) any part of the plan which maintains a cash reserve for the contributions is used for a purpose other than that for which the contributions were made, then such portion shall be treated as reverting to the benefit of the employers maintaining the fund.

(c) Effective Date.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to contributions paid or accrued after June 9, 1999, in taxable years ending on or after such date.

SEC. 1312. MODIFICATION OF INSTALLMENT METHOD AND REPEAL OF INSTALLMENT METHOD FOR ACCRUAL METHOD TAXPAYERS.

(a) Repeal of installment method for accrual basis taxpayers.—

(1) In general.—Subsection (a) of section 453 (relating to installment method) is amended to read as follows:

"(a) Use of installment method.—

"(1) In general.—Except as otherwise provided in this section, income from an installment sale shall be taken into account for purposes of this title under the installment method.

"(2) Accrual method taxpayer.—The installment method shall not apply to income from an installment sale if such income would be reported under an accrual method of accounting without regard to this section. The preceding sentence shall not apply to a disposition described in subparagraph (A) or (B) of subsection (b)(1).

"(2) Conforming amendments.—Sections 453(d)(1), 453(i)(1), and 453(k) are each amended by striking "(a)(1)" each place it appears and inserting "(a)(1)"

(b) Modification of pledge rules.—Paragraph (4) of section 453A(d) (relating to pledges, etc., of installment obligations) is amended by adding at the end the following: "A payment shall be treated as directly secured by an interest in an installment obligation to the extent an arrangement allows the taxpayer to satisfy all or a portion of the indebtedness with the installment obligation:"

(c) Effective Date.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to sales or other dispositions occurring on or after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 1313. TREATMENT OF GAIN FROM CONSTRUCTIVE OWNERSHIP TRANSACTIONS.

(a) In general.—Part IV of subchapter P of chapter 1 (relating to special rules for determining capital gains and losses) is amended by inserting after section 1259 the following new section:

"SEC. 1260. GAINS FROM CONSTRUCTIVE OWNERSHIP TRANSACTIONS.

"(a) In general.—If the taxpayer has gain from a constructive ownership transaction with respect to any financial asset and such gain would (without regard to this section) be treated as a long-term capital gain:

"(1) such gain shall be treated as ordinary income to the extent that such gain exceeds the net underlying long-term capital gain, and

"(2) to the extent such gain is treated as a long-term capital gain after the application of paragraph (1), the determination of the capital gain rate (or rates) applicable to such gain under section 1(h) shall be determined on the basis of the respective rate (or rates) that would have been applicable to the net underlying long-term capital gain.

"(b) Interest charge on deferral of gain recognition.—

"(1) In general.—If any gain is treated as ordinary income for any taxable year by reason of subsection (a)(1), the tax imposed by this chapter for such taxable year shall be increased by the amount of interest determined under paragraph (2) with respect to each prior taxable year during any portion of which the constructive ownership transaction was open. Any amount payable under this paragraph shall be taken into account in computing the amount of any deduction allowable to the taxpayer for interest paid or accrued on such taxable year.

"(2) Amount of interest.—The amount of interest determined under this paragraph with respect to a prior taxable year is the amount of interest which would have been imposed under section 6601 on the underpayment tax for such year which would have resulted if the gain (which is treated as ordinary income by reason of subsection (a)(1)) had been included in gross income in the taxable years in which it accrued (determined by treating the income as accruing at a constant rate equal to the applicable Federal rate as in effect on the day the transaction closed). The period during which such interest shall accrue shall end on the due date (without extensions) for the return of tax imposed by this chapter for the taxable year in which such transaction closed.

"(3) Applicable Federal rate.—For purposes of this paragraph (2), the applicable Federal rate shall be determined in accordance with section 6601 on the underpayment tax for such year which would have resulted if the gain treated as ordinary income under subparagraph (A) of section 1274(d)(1) (compounded semiannually) had not been included in gross income in the taxable years in which it accrued (determined by treating the income as accruing at a constant rate equal to the applicable Federal rate as in effect on the day the transaction closed).

"(4) No credits against increase in tax.—Any increase in tax under paragraph (1) shall not be treated as tax imposed by this chapter for purposes of determining the amount of any credit allowable under this chapter, or.

"(b) Amount of any credit allowable under this chapter, or.

"(B) the amount of the tax imposed by section 55.

"(c) Financial asset.—For purposes of this section—

"(1) In general.—The term 'financial asset' means—

"(A) any equity interest in any pass-thru entity, and

"(B) to the extent provided in regulations—

"(i) any stock in a corporation which is not a pass-thru entity,

"(ii) any interest in a partnership, and

"(iii) any stock in a corporation which is not a pass-thru entity.

"(2) Pass-thru entity.—For purposes of paragraph (1), the term 'pass-thru entity' means—

"(A) a regulated investment company,

"(B) a real estate investment trust,

"(C) an S corporation,

"(D) a partnership,

"(E) a trust,

"(F) a common trust fund,

"(G) a pass-thru investment company (as defined in section 1297 without regard to subsection (e) thereof),

"(H) a foreign personal holding company, and

"(J) a REMIC.

"(d) Constructive ownership transaction.—For purposes of this section—

"(1) In general.—The taxpayer shall be treated as having entered into a constructive ownership transaction with respect to any financial asset if the taxpayer—

"(A) holds a long position under a notional principal contract with respect to any financial asset if such person—

"(i) has the right to be paid (or receive credit for) all or substantially all of the investment yield (including appreciation) on such financial asset for a specified period, and

"(B) is obligated to reimburse (or provide credit for) all or substantially all of any decline in the value of such financial asset.

"(2) Exception for positions which are marked to market.—This section shall not apply to any constructive ownership transaction in which all or substantially all of such transaction are marked to market under any provision of this title or the regulations thereunder.

"(e) Long position under notional principal contract.—A person shall be treated as holding a long position under a notional principal contract with respect to any financial asset if such person—

"(A) has the right to be paid (or receive credit for) all or substantially all of the investment yield (including appreciation) on such financial asset for a specified period, and

"(B) is obligated to reimburse (or provide credit for) all or substantially all of any decline in the value of such financial asset.

"(2) Forward contract.—The term 'forward contract' means any contract to acquire in the future (or provide or receive credit for the future value of) any financial asset.

"(3) Net underlying long-term capital gain.—For purposes of this section, in the case of any constructive ownership transaction with respect to any financial asset, the term 'net underlying long-term capital gain' means—

"(a) the fair market value on the date such transaction was opened and sold for fair market value on the date such transaction was closed, and

"(b) any gains and losses which would have resulted from the deemed ownership under paragraph (1) were taken into account.

The amount of the net underlying long-term capital gain with respect to any financial asset shall be treated as zero unless the amount thereof is established by clear and convincing evidence.

"(f) Special rule where taxpayer takes deferred gain recognition.—Except as provided in regulations prescribed by the Secretary, if a constructive ownership transaction is closed by reason of taking delivery, this section shall be applied as if the taxpayer had sold all the contracts, options, or other positions which are part of such transaction for fair market value on the closing date. The amount of gain recognized under the preceding sentence shall not exceed the amount of gain treated as ordinary income under subsection (a), proper adjustments shall be made in the amount of any gain or loss subsequently realized for gain recognized, and treatment as ordinary income under subsection (a).

"(g) Regulations.—The Secretary shall prescribe such regulations as may be necessary or appropriate to carry out the purposes of this section, including regulations—

"(1) to permit taxpayers to mark to market constructive ownership transactions in lieu of applying this section, and

"(2) to exclude certain forward contracts which do not convey substantially all of the economic return with respect to a financial asset.

"(2) Clerical amendment.—The table of sections for part IV of subchapter P of chapter 1 is amended by adding at the end the following new item:

"Sec. 1260. Gains from constructive ownership transactions.."

(c) Effective date.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to transactions entered into after July 11, 1999.

SEC. 1313. CHARITABLE SPLIT-DOLLAR LIFE INSURANCE, ANNUITY, AND ENDOWMENT CONTRACTS.

(a) In general.—Subsection (f) of section 170 (relating to disallowance of deduction in certain charitable purposes) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(D) the amount of any credit allowable under this chapter, or.

"(B) amount of any credit allowable under this chapter, or.

"(e) Net underlying long-term capital gain.—For purposes of this section, in the case of any constructive ownership transaction with respect to any financial asset, the term 'net underlying long-term capital gain' means—

"(A) the fair market value on the date such transaction was opened and sold for fair market value on the date such transaction was closed, and

"(2) any gains and losses which would have resulted from the deemed ownership under paragraph (1) were taken into account.

The amount of the net underlying long-term capital gain with respect to any financial asset shall be treated as zero unless the amount thereof is established by clear and convincing evidence.

"(f) Special rule where taxpayer takes deferred gain recognition.—Except as provided in regulations prescribed by the Secretary, if a constructive ownership transaction is closed by reason of taking delivery, this section shall be applied as if the taxpayer had sold all the contracts, options, or other positions which are part of such transaction for fair market value on the closing date. The amount of gain recognized under the preceding sentence shall not exceed the amount of gain treated as ordinary income under subsection (a), proper adjustments shall be made in the amount of any gain or loss subsequently realized for gain recognized, and treatment as ordinary income under subsection (a).

"(g) Regulations.—The Secretary shall prescribe such regulations as may be necessary or appropriate to carry out the purposes of this section, including regulations—

"(1) to permit taxpayers to mark to market constructive ownership transactions in lieu of applying this section, and

"(2) to exclude certain forward contracts which do not convey substantially all of the economic return with respect to a financial asset.

"(2) Clerical amendment.—The table of sections for part IV of subchapter P of chapter 1 is amended by adding at the end the following new item:

"Sec. 1260. Gains from constructive ownership transactions.."
(II) SPLIT-DOLLAR LIFE INSURANCE, ANNUITY, AND ESTATE TRUSTS.—If the owner of such an insurance contract is a decedent, the amount of the premium paid is the greater of—

(A) the lesser of—

(1) the amount of the value of the insurance provided by the contract, or

(2) the amount of the value of the annuity or estate trust provided by the contract; or

(B) the amount of the value of the interest in the trust described in section 664(f)(1) allocable to such owner.

SEC. 1316. RESTRICTION ON USE OF REAL ESTATE INVESTMENT TRUSTS TO AVOID EN-TITIZED TAX PAYMENT REQUIREMENTS.

(A) IN GENERAL.—Subsection (e) of section 1364 of title 26 (relating to estimated tax calculation) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(5) TREATMENT OF CERTAIN REAL ESTATE INVESTMENT TRUST DIVIDENDS.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Any dividend received from a closely held real estate investment trust by any person which owns (after application of subsection (d)(5) and (1)(B) of section 656(e)(1)) 5 percent or more (by value or vote) of the stock or beneficial interests in the trust shall be taken into account in computing annualized income or income for purposes similar to the manner under which partnership income inclusions are taken into account.

(B) CLOSELY HELD REAL ESTATE INVESTMENT TRUST.—For purposes of subsection (A), the term 'closely held real estate investment trust' means a real estate investment trust with respect to which 5 or fewer persons own (after application of subsections (d)(5) and (1)(B) of section 656(e)) 5 percent or more (by value or vote) of the stock or beneficial interests in the trust.

(C) ESTATE TRUST.—The amendment made by this subsection (A) shall apply to returns payments due on or after September 15, 1999.

SEC. 1317. PROHIBITED ALLOCATIONS OF S CORPORATION STOCK HELD BY AN ESOP.

(A) IN GENERAL.—Section 409 (relating to qualifications for tax credit employee stock ownership plans) is amended by redesignating subsection (p) as subsection (q) and by inserting after subsection (q) the following new subsection:

"(p) PROHIBITED ALLOCATION OF SECURITIES IN AN S CORPORATION.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—An employee stock ownership plan holding employer securities consisting of stock in an S corporation shall provide that no portion of the assets of the plan attributable to (or allocable in lieu of) such employer securities may, during a nonallocation year, accrue to any plan participant or beneficiary under the employee stock ownership plan holding employer securities consisting of stock in such S corporation.

(B) NONALLOCATION YEAR.—For purposes of this subsection—

(A) The plan shall be treated as having distributed to any disqualified individual the amount allocated to the account of such individual in violation of paragraph (1) at the time of such allocation.

(B) The provisions of section 4974A shall apply, and

(C) the statutory period for the assessment of any tax imposed by section 4974A shall not expire before the date which is 3 years from the later of—

(i) the date on which the allocation of employer securities resulting in the failure under paragraph (1) giving rise to such tax, or

(ii) the date on which the Secretary is notified of such failure.

(C) NONALLOCATION YEAR.—For purposes of this subsection—

(A) In general.—The term 'nonallocation year' means any plan year of an employee stock ownership plan if, at any time during such plan year—

(i) such plan holds employer securities consisting of stock in an S corporation, and

(ii) disqualified individuals own (after taking into account the number of outstanding shares of stock in such S corporation) more than 5 percent of the number of outstanding shares of stock in such S corporation.

(B) RULES.—For purposes of paragraph (A)—

(i) The term 'qualified individual' means any individual who owns (after taking into account the number of outstanding shares of stock in such S corporation)

more than 5 percent of the number of outstanding shares of stock in such S corporation.

(ii) The term 'qualified individual' includes all members of an individual's family described in paragraph (4)(D), and

(iii) the term 'qualified individual' includes all members of an individual's family described in paragraph (4)(D).

(F) DEEMED-OWNED SHARES.—Notwithstanding the employee stock option exception in section 318(a)(2)(B)(i), disqualified individuals shall be treated owning deemed-owned shares.

(G) DISQUALIFIED INDIVIDUAL.—For purposes of this section—

(A) The term 'disqualified individual' means any individual who is a participant or beneficiary under the employee stock ownership plan if—

(B) the employee stock option exception in section 318(a)(2)(B)(i) does not apply, and

(C) the employee stock option exception in section 318(a)(2)(B)(i) does not apply.
(1) IN GENERAL.—The amendments made by this section apply to plan years beginning after December 31, 2000.

(2) EXCEPTION FOR CERTAIN PLANS.—In the case of any—
(A) employee stock ownership plan established after July 14, 1999, or
(B) employee stock ownership plan established on or before such date if employer securities held by the plan consist of stock in a corporation with respect to which an election under section 1362(a) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 is in effect on such date, the amendments made by this section shall apply to plan years ending after July 14, 1999.

SEC. 1318. MODIFICATION OF ANTI-ABUSE RULES RELATED TO ASSUMPTION OF LIABILITY.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 357(h)(1) (relating to tax avoidance purpose) is amended—
(1) by striking “the principal purpose” and inserting “a principal purpose”; and
(2) by striking “on the exchange” in subparagraph (A).

(b) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall apply to assumptions of liability after July 14, 1999.

SEC. 1319. ALLOCATION OF BASIS ON TRANSFERS OF INTANGIBLES IN CERTAIN NON-RECOGNITION TRANSACTIONS.

(a) TRANSFERS TO CORPORATIONS.—Section 351 (relating to transfer to corporation controlled by transferor) is amended by redesignating subsection (h) as subsection (i) and by inserting after subsection (g) the following new subsection:

(1) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of clause (i)(II), an individual’s share of unallocated S corporation stock held by the trust is the amount of the unallocated stock which would be allocated to such individuals if the unallocated stock were allocated to individuals in the same proportions as the most recent stock allocation under the plan.

(2) EXCEPTION FOR CERTAIN PLANS.—In the case of a qualified entity (as defined in section 351(h)(3)(B)) held by the plan consist of stock in a corporation, or

(b) TRANSFERS TO PARTNERSHIPS.—Subsection (h) of section 721 is amended to read as follows:

(1) TRANSFERS OF LESS THAN ALL SUBSTANTIAL RIGHTS.—
(A) IN GENERAL.—A transfer of an interest in intangible property (as defined in section 367(h)(3)(B)) shall be treated under this section as a transfer of property even if the transfer is of less than all of the substantial rights of the transferor in the property.

(B) ALLOCATION OF BASIS.—In the case of a transfer of less than all of the substantial rights of the transferor in the intangible property, the transferor’s basis immediately before the transfer shall be allocated among the rights retained by the transferee in the same proportion as the rights retained by the transferor. .

(c) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section—

(1) EMPLOYEE STOCK OWNERSHIP PLAN.—The term ‘employee stock ownership plan’ has the meaning given such term by section 497(e)(7).

(2) EMPLOYER SECURITIES.—The term ‘employer security’ has the meaning given such term by section 409(b).

(3) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary shall prescribe such regulations as may be necessary to carry out the purposes of this subsection, including regulations providing for the treatment of any stock option, restricted stock, stock appreciation right, phantom stock unit, performance unit, or similar instrument granted by an S corporation as stock or not stock.

(d) E X C I S E T A X.—
(1) IN GENERAL.—Section 407(a)(4) (defining prohibited allocation) is amended by striking “and” at the end of paragraph (1), by striking the period at the end of paragraph (2) and inserting “; and”, and by adding at the end the following REIT election paragraph:

(3) any allocation of employer securities which violates the provisions of section 409(p).”,

(2) LIABILITY.—Section 407A(c) (defining liability) is amended by adding after the end of the following sentence: “In the case of a prohibited allocation described in subsection (b)(3), such tax shall be paid by the S corporation that stock in which was allocated in violation of section 409(p).”,

(3) EFFECTIVE DATE.—
SEC. 1321. DISTRIBUTIONS TO A CORPORATE PARTNER OF STOCK IN ANOTHER CORPORATION.

(a) In General.—Section 732 (relating to basis of distributed property other than money) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

"(f) Corresponding Adjustment to Basis of Assets of a Distributed Corporation Controlled by a Corporate Partner.—

"(1) In General.—If—

"(A) a corporation (hereafter in this subsection referred to as the 'corporate partner') re- sells control of a partnership of stock in another corporation (hereafter in this subsection referred to as the 'distributed corporation'),

"(B) the corporate partner has control of the distributed corporation immediately after the distribution or at any time thereafter, and

"(C) the partnership's adjusted basis in such stock immediately before the distribution exceeded the corporate partner's adjusted basis in such stock immediately after the distribution, then an amount equal to such excess shall be applied in determining the basis of the distributed corporation at such time (or, if the corporate partner does not control the distributed corporation at such time, as of the time the corporate partner first has such control).

"(2) Exception for Certain Distributions Before Control Acquired.—Paragraph (1) shall not apply to any distribution of stock in the distributed corporation if—

"(A) the corporate partner does not have control of such corporation immediately after such distribution, and

"(B) the corporate partner establishes to the satisfaction of the Secretary that such distribution was not part of a plan or arrangement to acquire control of the distributed corporation.

"(3) Limitations on Basis Reduction.—

"(A) In General.—The amount of the reduc- tion under paragraph (1) shall not exceed the amount by which the sum of the aggregate ad- justed bases of the property and the amount of money of the distributed corporation exceeds the corporate partner's adjusted basis in the stock of the distributed corporation.

"(B) Reduction Not to Exceed Adjusted Basis of Property.—No reduction under para- graph (1) in the basis of any property shall ex- ceed the adjusted basis of such property (de- termined without regard to such reduction).

"(4) Gain Recognition Where Reduction Limited.—If the amount of any reduction under paragraph (1) (determined after the application of paragraph (3)(A)) exceeds the aggregate ad- justed bases of the property of the distributed corporation—

"(A) such excess shall be recognized by the corporate partner as long-term capital gain, and

"(B) the corporate partner's adjusted basis in the stock of the distributed corporation shall be increased by such excess.

"(5) Control.—For purposes of this sub- section, the term 'control' means ownership of stock meeting the requirements of section 267(b).

"(6) Indirect Distributions.—For purposes of paragraph (1), if a corporation acquires control of a partnership of stock in a corporation (hereafter in this subsection referred to as the 'distributed corporation')—

"(A) the property held by the distributed corporation is stock in a corporation which the distributed corporation controls, this subsection shall be reapplied to any prop- erty of any controlled corporation which is stock in a corporation which it controls, and

"(7) Regulations.—The Secretary shall pre- scribe such regulations as may be necessary to carry out the purposes of this subsection, in- cluding regulations to prevent the abuse of such purposes.''.

(b) Effective Date.—The amendment made by this subsection shall apply to distributions made after April 29, 1999.
(1) Subparagraph (A) of section 165(g)(3) is amended—

"(v) if the corporation was an S corporation, or a partner of a partnership or a shareholder during any part of the period covered by such return during which an election under section 1362(a) was in effect, or"

(2) Paragraph (3) of section 165(g) is amended by striking the last sentence.

(3) The amendments made by this subsection shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1998.

(b) REFERENCE TO CERTAIN STATE PLANS.—

(1) Subparagraph (B) of section 51(d)(2) is amended—

(A) by striking "plan approved" and inserting "program funded", and

(B) by striking "(relating to assistance for needy families and children)".

(2) The amendment made by paragraph (1) shall take effect as if included in the amendments made by section 1201 of the Small Business Job Protection Act of 1996.

(c) Amount of IRA Contribution of Lesser Earning Spouse.—

(1) Clause (ii) of section 219(c)(1)(B) is amended—

(A) by striking "and", and

(B) by redesignating clause (II) as clause (III), and

(c) the amendments made by section 1201 of the Small Business Job Protection Act of 1996.

(d) MODIFIED ENDOWMENT CONTRACTS.—

(1) Paragraph (2) of section 7702A(a) is amended by inserting "or this paragraph" before the period.

(2) Clause (b) of section 7702A(c)(3)(A) is amended by striking "under the contract" and inserting ", under the old contract".

(3) The amendments made by this subsection shall take effect as if included in the amendments made by section 1012 of the Technical and Miscellaneous Revenue Act of 1988.

(e) LUMP-SUM DISTRIBUTIONS.—

(1) Clause (ii) of section 401(k)(10)(B) is amended by adding at the end the following new sentence: "Such term includes a distribution of an annuity contract from a stock to which a participant is an employee." In such contract, reference to the lowest rate of compensation prescribed for GS–16 of the General Schedule under section 5332 and inserting "the lowest rate of basic pay for the Senior Executive Service under section 5382".

SECTION 1406. TECHNICAL CORRECTIONS TO SAVINGS ACT.

Section 517 of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (29 U.S.C. 1147) is amended—

(1) in subsection (a), by striking "2001 and 2003 on or after September 1 of each year involved" and inserting "2001, 2005, and 2009 in each of the subsequent summits, respectively";

(2) in subsection (b), by striking "the last sentence" and inserting "the 2005 on or after September 1 of each year involved";

(3) The heading for subparagraph (b) is struck out and inserting "(2)" for "(1)".

(b) REFERENCE TO CERTAIN STATE PLANS.—

(1) In paragraph (2) of section 4046(c)(3) is added by striking "under the old contract" and inserting "under the contract".

(2) Clause (b), by striking "(relating to assistance for needy families and children)".

(3) The amendments made by this subsection shall take effect as if included in the amendments made by section 1201 of the Small Business Job Protection Act of 1996.

(c) Amount of IRA Contribution of Lesser Earning Spouse.—

(1) In paragraph (2) of section 7702A(a) is amended by inserting "or this paragraph" before the period.

(2) Clause (b) of section 7702A(c)(3)(A) is amended by striking "under the contract" and inserting "under the old contract".

(3) The amendments made by this subsection shall take effect as if included in the amendments made by section 1012 of the Technical and Miscellaneous Revenue Act of 1988.

(TITLE XV—COMPLIANCE WITH CONGRESSIONAL BUDGET ACT

SEC. 1501. SUNSET OF PROVISIONS OF ACT.

All provisions of, and amendments made by, this Act which are in effect on September 30, 2009, shall cease to apply as of the close of September 30, 2009.

CHEMICAL SAFETY INFORMATION, SITE SECURITY AND FUELS REGULATORY RELIEF ACT

Mr. LUGAR. Mr. President, I ask the Chair lay before the Senate a message from the House of Representatives that the bill (S. 880) to amend the Clean Air Act to remove flammable fuels from the list of substances with respect to which reporting and other activities are required under the risk management plan program.

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the following message from the House of Representatives:

Resolved, That the bill from the Senate (S. 880) entitled "An Act to add the Clean Air Act to remove flammable fuels from the list of substances with respect to which reporting and other activities are required under the risk management plan program", do pass with the following amendments:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:

"(1) Subparagraph (A) of section 165(g)(3) is amended—

"(v) if the corporation was an S corporation, or a partner of a partnership or a shareholder during any part of the period covered by such return during which an election under section 1362(a) was in effect, or".

(2) Paragraph (3) of section 165(g) is amended by striking the last sentence.

(3) The amendments made by this subsection shall apply to taxable years beginning after December 31, 1998.

(b) REFERENCE TO CERTAIN STATE PLANS.—

(1) Subparagraph (B) of section 51(d)(2) is amended—

(A) by striking "plan approved" and inserting "program funded", and

(B) by striking "(relating to assistance for needy families and children)".

(2) The amendment made by paragraph (1) shall take effect as if included in the amendments made by section 1201 of the Small Business Job Protection Act of 1996.

(c) Amount of IRA Contribution of Lesser Earning Spouse.—

(1) Clause (ii) of section 219(c)(1)(B) is amended—

(A) by striking "and", and

(B) by redesignating clause (II) as clause (III), and

(c) the amendments made by section 1201 of the Small Business Job Protection Act of 1996.

(d) MODIFIED ENDOWMENT CONTRACTS.—

(1) Paragraph (2) of section 7702A(a) is amended by inserting "or this paragraph" before the period.

(2) Clause (b) of section 7702A(c)(3)(A) is amended by striking "under the contract" and inserting "under the old contract".

(3) The amendments made by this subsection shall take effect as if included in the amendments made by section 1012 of the Technical and Miscellaneous Revenue Act of 1988.

(e) LUMP-SUM DISTRIBUTIONS.—

(1) Clause (ii) of section 401(k)(10)(B) is amended by adding at the end the following new sentence: "Such term includes a distribution of an annuity contract from a stock to which a participant is an employee." In such contract, reference to the lowest rate of compensation prescribed for GS–16 of the General Schedule under section 5332 and inserting "the lowest rate of basic pay for the Senior Executive Service under section 5382".

SECTION 1406. TECHNICAL CORRECTIONS TO SAVINGS ACT.

Section 517 of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (29 U.S.C. 1147) is amended—

(1) in subsection (a), by striking "2001 and 2003 on or after September 1 of each year involved" and inserting "2001, 2005, and 2009 in each of the subsequent summits, respectively";

(2) in subsection (b), by striking "the last sentence" and inserting "the 2005 on or after September 1 of each year involved";

(3) The heading for subparagraph (b) is struck out and inserting "(2)" for "(1)".

(b) REFERENCE TO CERTAIN STATE PLANS.—

(1) In paragraph (2) of section 4046(c)(3) is added by striking "under the old contract" and inserting "under the contract".

(2) Clause (b), by striking "(relating to assistance for needy families and children)".

(3) The amendments made by this subsection shall take effect as if included in the amendments made by section 1201 of the Small Business Job Protection Act of 1996.

(c) Amount of IRA Contribution of Lesser Earning Spouse.—

(1) In paragraph (2) of section 7702A(a) is amended by inserting "or this paragraph" before the period.

(2) Clause (b) of section 7702A(c)(3)(A) is amended by striking "under the contract" and inserting "under the old contract".

(3) The amendments made by this subsection shall take effect as if included in the amendments made by section 1012 of the Technical and Miscellaneous Revenue Act of 1988.

(TITLE XV—COMPLIANCE WITH CONGRESSIONAL BUDGET ACT

SEC. 1501. SUNSET OF PROVISIONS OF ACT.

All provisions of, and amendments made by, this Act which are in effect on September 30, 2009, shall cease to apply as of the close of September 30, 2009.

CHEMICAL SAFETY INFORMATION, SITE SECURITY AND FUELS REGULATORY RELIEF ACT

Mr. LUGAR. Mr. President, I ask the Chair lay before the Senate a message from the House of Representatives that the bill (S. 880) to amend the Clean Air Act to remove flammable fuels from the list of substances with respect to which reporting and other activities are required under the risk management plan program.

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the following message from the House of Representatives:

Resolved, That the bill from the Senate (S. 880) entitled "An Act to add the Clean Air Act to remove flammable fuels from the list of substances with respect to which reporting and other activities are required under the risk management plan program", do pass with the following amendments:

Strike out all after the enacting clause and insert:
(B) shall not list a flammable substance when stored for sale as fuel at a retail facility under this subsection solely because of the explosive or flammable properties of the substance, unless a fire or explosion caused by the substance results in acute adverse health effects from human exposure to the substance, including the unburned fuel or its combustion byproducts, other than those caused by the heat of the fire or impact of the explosion;

(3) by inserting at the end of paragraph (3) the following:

(B) The term ‘retail facility’ means a station located in the person’s State to a State or local government;

(4) by adding at the end of paragraph (4) the following:

(B) shall not list a flammable substance when stored for sale as fuel at a retail facility under this subsection solely because of the explosive or flammable properties of the substance, unless a fire or explosion caused by the substance results in acute adverse health effects from human exposure to the substance, including the unburned fuel or its combustion byproducts, other than those caused by the heat of the fire or impact of the explosion;

and

(5) by inserting the following new subparagraphs at the end of paragraph (9):

(i) DEFINITIONS.—In this subparagraph:

(A) The term ‘covered person’ means—

(aa) an officer or employee of the United States;

(bb) an officer or employee of an agent or contractor of the Federal Government;

(cc) an officer or employee of a State or local government;

(dd) an officer or employee of an agent or contractor of a State or local government;

(ee) an individual affiliated with an entity that has been given, by a State or local government, responsibility for preventing, planning for, or responding to accidental releases;

(ff) an officer or employee or an agent or contractor of an entity described in item (ee);

(gg) a qualified researcher under clause (viii).

(ii) OFFICIAL USE.—The term ‘official use’ means an action of a Federal, State, or local government agency or an entity referred to in subparagraph (B)(ii), respectively, and indenting appropriately;

(III) O FFICIAL USE.—The term ‘official use’ means an action of a Federal, State, or local government agency or an entity referred to in subparagraph (B)(ii), respectively, and indenting appropriately;

(iii) AVAILABILITY UNDER FREEDOM OF INFORMATION ACT.—

(I) First year.—Off-site consequence analysis information, and any ranking of stationary sources derived from that information, shall be made available under section 522 of title 5, United States Code, during the 1-year period beginning on the date of enactment of this subparagraph.

(ii) After first year.—If the regulations under section 522 of title 5, United States Code, during the 1-year period beginning on the date of enactment of this subparagraph,

(iii) APPLICABILITY.—Subclauses (I) and (II) apply to off-site consequence analysis information submitted to the Administrator before, on, or after the date of enactment of this subparagraph.

(iv) AVAILABILITY OF INFORMATION DURING TRANSITION PERIOD.—The Administrator shall make off-site consequence analysis information available to covered persons for official use in a form that does not meet the definition of ‘official use’ for purposes of this subparagraph.

(v) LIST.—The Administrator shall maintain and make publicly available a list of all stationary sources that have provided notification under subparagraph (bb).

(vi) QUALIFIED RESEARCHERS.—

(V) ENDING ON THE EARLIER OF THE DATE OF PROMULGATION OF THE REGULATIONS UNDER CLAUSE (II) OR THE DATE THAT IS 1 YEAR AFTER THE DATE OF ENACTMENT OF THIS SUBPARAGRAPH.

(VI) PROHIBITION ON UNAUTHORIZED DISCLOSURE OF OFF-SITE CONSEQUENCE ANALYSIS INFORMATION.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Beginning on the date of enactment of this subparagraph, a covered person shall not disclose to the public off-site consequence analysis information in any form, or any statewide or national ranking of identified stationary sources derived from such information, except as authorized by this subparagraph and the regulations promulgated under clause (ii). After the end of the 1-year period beginning on the date of enactment of this subparagraph, if regulations have not been promulgated under clause (ii), the proceeding sentence shall not apply.

(2) CRIMINAL PENALTIES.—Notwithstanding section 3571 of title 18, a covered person that willfully violates a restriction or prohibition established by this subparagraph (including the regulations promulgated under clause (ii)) shall, upon conviction, be fined for an infraction under section 3571 of title 18, United States Code, (but shall not be subject to imprisonment) for each unauthorized disclosure of off-site consequence analysis information, and, in the case of a conviction of a violation under subsection (d) of such section 3571, shall not apply to a case in which the offense results in pecuniary loss unless the defendant knew that such loss would occur. The disclosure of off-site consequence analysis information for each specific stationary source shall be considered a separate offense. The total of all penalties that may be imposed on a single person or organization under this Act shall not exceed $1,000,000 for violations committed during any 1 calendar year.

(III) APPLICABILITY.—The owner or operator of a stationary source may use off-site consequence analysis information relating to stationary sources available to the public without restriction.

(A) subclauses (I) and (II) shall not apply with respect to the information; and

(bb) the owner or operator shall notify the Administrator of the public availability of the information.

(VI) ENDING ON THE EARLIER OF THE DATE OF PROMULGATION OF THE REGULATIONS UNDER CLAUSE (II) OR THE DATE THAT IS 1 YEAR AFTER THE DATE OF ENACTMENT OF THIS SUBPARAGRAPH.

(VII) PROHIBITION ON UNAUTHORIZED DISCLOSURE OF OFF-SITE CONSEQUENCE ANALYSIS INFORMATION.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Beginning on the date of enactment of this subparagraph, a covered person shall not disclose to the public off-site consequence analysis information in any form, or any statewide or national ranking of identified stationary sources derived from such information, except as authorized by this subparagraph and the regulations promulgated under clause (ii). After the end of the 1-year period beginning on the date of enactment of this subparagraph, if regulations have not been promulgated under clause (ii), the proceeding sentence shall not apply.

(2) CRIMINAL PENALTIES.—Notwithstanding section 3571 of title 18, a covered person that willfully violates a restriction or prohibition established by this subparagraph (including the regulations promulgated under clause (ii)) shall, upon conviction, be fined for an infraction under section 3571 of title 18, United States Code, (but shall not be subject to imprisonment) for each unauthorized disclosure of off-site consequence analysis information, and, in the case of a conviction of a violation under subsection (d) of such section 3571, shall not apply to a case in which the offense results in pecuniary loss unless the defendant knew that such loss would occur. The disclosure of off-site consequence analysis information for each specific stationary source shall be considered a separate offense. The total of all penalties that may be imposed on a single person or organization under this Act shall not exceed $1,000,000 for violations committed during any 1 calendar year.
an information technology system that provides for the public of燃料电池 off-site consequence analysis information by means of a central data base under the control of the Federal Government that contains information that users may read, but that provides no means by which electronic or mechanical copy of the information may be made.

(ii) Voluntary industry accident prevention standards.—The Environmental Protection Agency, the Department of Justice, and other appropriate agencies may provide technical assistance to owners and operators of stationary sources to participate in the development of voluntary industry standards that will help achieve the objectives set forth in paragraph (I).

(I) EFFECT ON STATE OR LOCAL LAW.—

(aa) the preliminary findings under subparagraph (I) and (bb) the methods used to develop the findings; and

(c) an explanation of the activities expected to occur that could cause the findings of the report under subparagraph (I) to be different than the preliminary findings.

(ii) Availability of information under state or local law.—This subparagraph includes a State from making available data on the off-site consequences of chemical releases collected in accordance with State law.

(a) In general.—Not later than 3 years after the date of enactment of this subparagraph, the Attorney General shall submit to Congress a report that describes the extent to which regulations promulgated under this paragraph have resulted in actions, including the design and maintenance of safe facilities, that are effective in detecting, preventing, and minimizing the consequences of releases to public health threats; and

(b) Enforcement.—The Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency may bring an action in the appropriate United States district court against any person who fails or refuses to comply with the requirements of this section, and such court may issue such orders, and take such other actions, as may be necessary to require compliance with such requirements.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, I was heavily involved in the negotiations over the manager's amendment to S. 880 as passed by the Senate by unanimous consent on June 23, and have carefully studied the House's amendments to S. 880. I accept today, I rise to clarify the congressional intent with respect to S. 880, the Chemical Safety Information, Site Security and Fuels Regulatory Relief Act of 1999, as we pass it and send it to the President.

Balance between the right-to-know effect and risks of criminal activity (New section 112(r)(7)(H)(ii))

The amendment directs the President to promulgate regulations governing the disclosure of the off-site Consequence Analysis (OCA) information in a way that minimizes the likelihood of releases of the regulated chemicals, whether these releases are accidental or the result of criminal activity. In other words, the amendment calls for a balance of the risk-reducing effect of public disclosure (the “Right-to-Know Effect”) against the potential of increased risk of criminal activity associated with the posting of the OCA information on the Internet. Most importantly, reducing the threat of criminal activity is not the sole or even primary focus of the rule-making. Rather the objective is to minimize the release of regulated chemicals, which requires a balanced approach, and nothing in this Act necessarily precludes the eventual electronic dissemination of the information.

Off-site consequence analysis information (New section 112(r)(7)(H)(i) and (V), and (x)), and (xii))

The amendment defines “off-site consequence analysis information” (OCA information) as a portion of a “risk management plan,” which is in turn defined as referring only to information “submitted to the Administrator by an owner or operator of a stationary source under subparagraph (B) of section 112(r)(7) of the Clean Air Act. Similarly, the amendment makes clear that its restrictions apply only to OCA information in the form submitted to the Administrator.
The amendment directs any facility to disclose OCA information on any facility in the State or community. This reflects, among other things, the fact that a comprehensive evaluation of the facility next door should include comparison with other facilities, including those owned by the same company or its competitors. Similarly, a comprehensive evaluation of the hazard reduction programs of Community A requires a comparison of the hazards presented by facilities in Community A with those in Community B.

Public access to OCA information regardless of geographic location changes (New section 112(r)(7)(H)(i)(II)(aa)): The amendment makes clear that the regulations shall allow any member of the public access to the OCA information for a limited number of facilities regardless of geographic location. This reflects the fact that the need to compare the neighborhood facility with facilities in other locations, or to compare the facility with those presented in Community B, is just as important and appropriate for the public as it is for officials.

Voluntary disclosure of OCA information (New section 112(r)(7)(H)(v)(III)): The amendment directs any facility that chooses to provide its OCA information for public access to the public without legally-binding restriction to inform the public, through EPA, of that voluntary disclosure.

Qualified researchers (New section 112(r)(7)(H)(vi)): The amendment directs the Administrator, in consultation with the Attorney General, to develop a system for providing access to OCA information for 'qualified researchers.' The Administrator is given authority to determine whether researchers are "qualified." This is other than for research purposes. The Administrator is given authority to deny researchers or to deny them access to OCA information on the basis of political persuasion, likely findings, purpose to which findings would be put, or any other such factor.

Reports on vulnerability to criminal activity (New section 112(r)(7)(H)(x)(I)): The amendment makes clear that States with existing or new laws that collect even data that is identical to OCA information are not precluded from making the State- or local-gathered data available.

Reevaluation of disclosure regulations (Section 3(c)): The Act directs the Attorney General to reevaluate the regulations governing disclosure within six years. This reevaluation should be made on the same basis used to promulgate the regulations—i.e. the President should perform two separate assessments: (1) an assessment of the increased risk of criminal activity associated with the Internet posting of OCA information, and (2) an assessment of incentives created by public disclosure of OCA information for reduction in the risk of accidental releases. Written documentation of the two assessments and all information and data the President utilizes in preparation of the assessments should be a part of the administrative record associated with any determination the President makes regarding the regulations, or any modification of the regulations.

General duty (New section 112(r)(7)(H)(x)(II)): The Act leaves the general duty clause of section 112(r) of the Clean Air Act unchanged, in recognition of the fact that the Environmental Protection Agency believes that the general duty clause applies to releases caused by criminal or terrorist activities.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, I rise today to discuss my legislation, S. 880, the Fuels Regulatory Relief Act, which passed Congress today, and according to the President, was signed into law shortly. This bill was passed in the Senate by unanimous consent on June 23, 1999, and passed by the House with amendments, on July 21, 1999.
CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE 19085

August 2, 1999

the motions to reconsider be laid upon the table, and that any statements relating to the nominations be printed in the RECORD, the President be immediately notified of the Senate’s action, and the Senate then return to legislative session.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The nominations were considered and confirmed, as follows:

BARRY GOLDWATER SCHOLARSHIP & EXCELLENCE IN EDUCATION FOUNDATION

James Roger Angel, of Arizona, to be a Member of the Board of Trustees of the Barry Goldwater Scholarship and Excellence in Education Foundation for a term expiring February 4, 2002.

NATIONAL COMMISSION ON LIBRARIES AND INFORMATION SCIENCE

Jack E. Hightower, of Texas, to be a Member of the National Commission on Libraries and Information Science for a term expiring July 19, 1999.

NATIONAL FOUNDATION ON THE ARTS AND THE HUMANITIES

Jerry D. Florence, of California, to be a Member of the National Museum Services Board for a term expiring December 6, 2002.

DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE

Alejandro N. Mayorkas, of California, to be a Member of the Board of Trustees of the Barry Goldwater Scholarship & Excellence in Education Foundation for a term expiring July 19, 1999.

DEPARTMENT OF TRANSPORTATION

Neal S. Wolin, of Illinois, to be General Counsel for the Department of Transportation, Vice Edward W. English, resigned.

MISSISSIPPI RIVER COMMISSION

Sam Epstein Angel, of Arkansas, to be a Member of the Mississippi River Commission for a term of nine years. (Reappointment)

BRIGADIER GENERAL ROBERT H. GRIFFIN, UNITED STATES ARMY

To be a Member of the Mississippi River Commission, under the provisions of section 2 of an Act of Congress approved June 1897 (2) Stat. 77 (33 USC 442).

Whereas Alexander K. Clark has had an outstanding record of military service to the United States of America; and

Whereas General Wesley K. Clark was integral to the military action of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization; and

Whereas General Wesley K. Clark has had distinguished military career, which includes graduating first in the class of 1966 from the United States Military Academy at West Point and serving in command positions at every level in the United States Army, culminating in service concurrently in the positions of Supreme Allied Commander, Europe and Commander-in-Chief of the United States European Command; and Whereas General Wesley K. Clark is the recipient of the Medal of Honor and has been lauded as one of the greatest military leaders of our time.

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED—

(1) The United States Senate commends and expresses its gratitude to General Wesley K. Clark, United States Army, for his outstanding record of military service to the United States of America; and

(2) The Secretary of the Senate shall transmit a copy of this resolution to General Wesley K. Clark.

ADJOURNMENT UNTIL 9:30 A.M. TOMORROW

Mr. LUGAR. Mr. President, if there is no further business to come before the Senate, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate stand in adjournment under the previous order.

There being no objection, the Senate, at 7:16 p.m., adjourned until Tuesday, August 3, 1999, at 9:30 a.m.

NOMINATIONS

Executive nominations received by the Senate August 2, 1999:

DEPARTMENT OF TRANSPORTATION

Stephens D. Van Beek, of the District of Columbia, to be Associate Deputy Secretary of Transportation, Vice John Charles Horsley, resigned.

DEPARTMENT OF THE TREASURY

Neal S. Wolin, of Illinois, to be General Counsel for the Department of the Treasury, Vice Edward W. English, resigned.

MISSISSIPPI RIVER COMMISSION

Sam Epstein Angel, of Arkansas, to be a Member of the Mississippi River Commission for a term of nine years. (Reappointment)

CONFIRMATIONS

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate August 2, 1999:

BARRY GOLDWATER SCHOLARSHIP AND EXCELLENCE IN EDUCATION FOUNDATION

James Roger Angel, of Arizona, to be a Member of the Board of Trustees of the Barry Goldwater Scholarship and Excellence in Education Foundation for a term expiring April 2, 2002. (Reappointment)

NATIONAL COMMISSION ON LIBRARIES AND INFORMATION SCIENCE

Jack E. Hightower, of Texas, to be a Member of the National Commission on Libraries and Information Science for a term expiring July 19, 1999.

WHEREAS General Clark's record of exemplary and dedicated service is an example which all military officers should seek to emulate and is deserving of special recognition: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That—

(1) the United States Senate commends and expresses its gratitude to General Wesley K. Clark, United States Army, for his outstanding record of military service to the United States of America; and

(2) the Secretary of the Senate shall transmit a copy of this resolution to General Wesley K. Clark.
THE VIOLENCE PREVENTION TRAINING FOR EARLY CHILDHOOD EDUCATORS ACT

HON. SAM GEJDENSON OF CONNECTICUT
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Monday, August 2, 1999

Mr. GEJDENSON. Mr. Speaker, I rise to introduce the Violence Prevention Training for Early Childhood Educators Act.

Students, parents, teachers and members of communities across our country have been grappling with the issue of school violence. There is no magic solution to this difficult matter, there is no single cause that can be addressed to guarantee our schools will be violence-free. However, I believe that to effectively address this issue we must ensure that those who are entering careers in early childhood development and education are properly trained in violence prevention.

The legislation that my colleagues and I are introducing today will authorize the Secretary of Education to award grants ranging from $500,000 to $1,000,000 to institutions of higher learning and other facilities in order to assist them in making violence prevention training available to prospective teachers and those returning for additional professional development. Moreover, the bill will ensure that teachers, school counselors and child care providers are provided with the skills necessary to prevent violent behavior in young children at the very earliest stages. In 1992, Congress enacted legislation which funded similar training programs at Eastern Connecticut State University, University of Colorado at Denver, University of Kansas, University of Minnesota, University of North Carolina, Temple University and a dozen other colleges and universities.

There is evidence that strongly suggests that early intervention and education is effective in preventing delinquency. For example, one study has indicated that when preschool teachers instruct young children about interpersonal problem-solving skills and other forms of conflict resolution, children are less likely to demonstrate problematic behavior, which is effective in preventing delinquency later on. In addition, there is further evidence that indicates that support programs for families with very young children—those under the age of five—are effective in preventing delinquency.

Teachers are on the frontline every day. They need to be prepared to discuss with the children and the entire family how to resolve issues without resorting to violence. I believe we must reinvest in this proven, worthwhile program in order to ensure that our teachers, daycare providers and school counselors have the training they need to combat violence in school and society at large.

I am pleased to be joined in this effort by Mr. KUCINICH of Ohio, Mr. HILLIARD of Alabama, Ms. Lee of California, Ms. CHRISTENSEN of Virginia Islands, Mr. MALONEY of Connecticut, Mr. Wu of Oregon, Mr. ETHERIDGE of North Carolina, Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas, Ms. MILLER-McDONALD of California, Mr. SCOTT of Virginia, and Mr. MCGOVERN of Massachusetts.

HONORING DINO PETRUCCI
HON. GEORGE RADANOVICH
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Monday, August 2, 1999

Mr. RADANOVICH. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor Dino Petrucci for receiving the Senior Farmer of the Year Award. Dino Petrucci’s efforts to educate and inspire young people toward agriculture render him deserving of this award.

Dino was born on a farm in Madera and still lives on the property his family cultivated while he was growing up. He attended Howard Elementary School, graduated from Madera High School in 1947, and earned a college degree in Crop Science from Cal Poly, San Luis Obispo.

During his four years at Madera High, Dino was actively involved in student government and the Future Farmers of America. He was elected Student Body Vice President and Senior Class Speaker. He also served as Chapter President of FFA and won the FAA State Speaking contest.

Petrucci went on to hold numerous leadership positions in various organizations as a young adult. He was elected the State FFA President and was a National Public Speaker at the National FFA Convention in Kansas City. In addition, he served as President of the Crop Science Department at Cal Poly.

Mr. Petrucci was successful in his undertakings on behalf of these organizations and in his academic endeavors. He earned the coveted American Farmer Degree and co-authored a book that was used in school agriculture departments across the state.

After college, Dino began his teaching career in the Ag Department in Victorville. Two years later, he returned to Madera and embarked upon a 29-year career with the Madera High Ag Department. During this time, Dino was actively farming a variety of crops with his brother, Enzo. Dino and wife, Peggy were also raising a family of two children and supporting them on their 4-H and FFA projects.

Many of his former students attest that Mr. Petrucci was a committed teacher, giving more hours than were required of him. For fifteen years, he advised the California Young Farmers and was instrumental in the Madera Chapter receiving recognition as “Outstanding Chapter” for many of those years. He also served as State President of the California Ag Teachers Association, and found time to serve as Chairman of the Livestock Department at the Madera District Fair.

While balancing a family and career Dino has made time for community involvement by serving as President of the Lion’s Club, President of Madera Toastmasters, and President of Madera County Farm Bureau. He was also elected last year to serve as a Trustee on the Madera Unified School District Board. In addition, Mr. Petrucci began the MUST Center and served as its Director for two years. This program was designed to teach vocational skills to the underprivileged to order to afford them better job opportunities. Currently, Petrucci is actively involved at Howard Elementary School where he attended as a boy, his children attended, and his grandchildren now attend.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor Dino Petrucci for his outstanding accomplishments and service to his community. I urge my colleagues to join me in wishing Dino many more years of continued success and happiness.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

HON. GEORGE MILLER
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Monday, August 2, 1999

Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California. Mr. Speaker, I submit the following statement into the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD.

On rollover call No. 344 on July 29, 1999 I mistakenly voted “yea.” I would like the RECORD to reflect the fact that I oppose the amendment and should have voted “nay.” The amendment would prohibit the District of Columbia from spending its own funds on a need-exchange program that has saved hundreds of residents from death and disease caused by the HIV–AIDS epidemic. I support such proven programs and oppose efforts by Congress to intrude into the affairs of the District of Columbia in such a misinformed and heavy-handed fashion.

TRIBUTE TO CORMAC HENNESSY
HON. PETER T. KING
OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Monday August 2, 1999

Mr. KING. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize the commitment and selfless dedication one young man, Cormac Hennessy has made to himself, my staff and the people of the Third District of New York. Cormac began interning in my office in the Summer of 1998 and since... that time he has exhibited all the qualities: intellectual, wit and a certain style that make him truly the son of a Diplomat. In fact, Cormac was an inspiration to those who loved the game of golf, for there was never too dull an assignment or too onerous a task that Cormac did not shirk for the sake of eighteen holes. I am confident that in the care of two truly wonderful people, Pat and Pauline Hennessy, Cormac will amount to something more than the self-proclaimed title of “King of all Interns.” Indeed I am certain that his unsurpassed sarcasm, his indecipherable “Southern” dialect and his unique charm will cause him to rise to the highest levels of leadership and success. I wish him all the best in his future endeavors and I thank him for all that he has done and meant to me.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION
HON. ASA HUTCHINSON OF ARKANSAS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Monday, August 2, 1999

Mr. HUTCHINSON. Mr. Speaker, on Friday, July 30, 1999, I was inadvertently detained and did not vote on rolloc No. 354 or 355. Had I been present, I would have voted “aye” on both.

HONORING JAN DUKE
HON. GEORGE RADANOVICH
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Monday, August 2, 1999

Mr. RADANOVICH. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor Jan Duke for receiving the prestigious Milken Educator Award. Duke teaches fourth grade at John Adam’s Elementary School in the Madera Unified School District.

Jan Duke was one of four teachers in California to receive this honor, and one of 160 to be honored nationwide. She is the first from Madera Unified School District to be given this award.

Beyond her role as an exemplary teacher, Jan is a skilled writer and presenter. Duke has written two books on teaching fourth-graders to read. She also advises individuals to teach fourth-grade teachers nationwide.

Mr. Speaker, I strongly encourage my colleagues to take a hard look at this issue.

EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS
19087

The people of Puerto Rico are truly American citizens, part of America’s great democracy, and that is wonderful. However, the people of Puerto Rico currently lack the single most important tool that our democracy provides, two Senators and a voting delegation in the House of Representatives, and that is abhorrent. It is precisely because the people of Puerto Rico don’t have equal representation in Congress that they need our help now. If they had real representation here, the military would have had the proper incentive to solve the problem of live ammunition testing on Vieques. I trust that my colleagues in the House of Representatives would agree with me. If this practice were occurring in any one of the fifty States, I know we would all stand together to oppose it. We owe our fellow American citizens in Puerto Rico the same level of respect. They deserve nothing less. In fact, their safety and their lives may depend on it.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize the City of Lomita, California. Lomita is celebrating its 35th year as an incorporated city. The City of Lomita is widely recognized for its rustic, small-town atmosphere amongst the larger cities of the South Bay.

Lomita was first established as a German farming community in 1907. The farming community continued to grow throughout the years, and in June of 1964, after several unsuccessful attempts, Lomita was finally incorporated as a city.

While surrounding communities have experienced tremendous growth, Lomita has remained relatively unchanged since incorporation. Lomita’s small town attributes attract young families in search of a safe, close knit community. Lomita is a culturally diverse community and it also boasts one of the lowest crime rates in the South Bay region. It is an ideal place to raise a family and live the American Dream, and many of its residents are homeowners and small business entrepreneurs.

The future looks bright for the city of Lomita. Preparations are currently underway for an ambitious revitalization of Lomita’s downtown area to ensure that Lomita maintains its small-town atmosphere.

Lomita has thrived over the last 35 years, and as we enter the 21st century, Lomita will continue to stand out as a small, unique town of the South Bay. I congratulate the City of Lomita and its 20,000 residents on this milestone.
Ms. SANCHEZ. Mr. Speaker, today I rise to honor Myldred Jones, an Orange County resident, and a great humanitarian, on this her ninetieth birthday.

Myldred moved to California from Pennsylvania with her family when she was four years old. Growing up during the Depression, the Jones family experienced the poverty that affected millions of Americans. Even so, Myldred’s parents, who were also her greatest mentors, would share whatever food they had with other people. Although the Jones’ family was also poor, they seemed to always have enough to give to others.

Early on, Myldred learned the lessons of humanitarianism, of unconditional love, and of providing and caring for others. These gifts were to become the very essence of her life.

Myldred began her career as a high school teacher and, later, became a juvenile probation officer. During World War II, she was one of the first of eight WAVES from California. Her military career included duty as a Special Assistant to Commandant 14th Naval District, Assistant Director of the Department of Welfare, and a faculty member on international relations for the Armed Forces Graduate School. She was also the Naval Liaison Officer for both the United Nations and the National Red Cross. When she retired in 1959, she was the director of Social Services of the Navy Relief Society.

After her retirement, Myldred became active in the Civil Rights Movement and marched with Martin Luther King from Selma, Alabama, to Montgomery, Alabama. In 1969, she joined Cesar Chavez on his marches for the United Farm Workers. Her work in the Watts district of Los Angeles, California, earned her recognition from Governor Ronald Reagan, who extended his birthday greetings.

Myldred moved to California from Pennsylvania with her family when she was four years old. Growing up during the Depression, the Jones family experienced the poverty that affected millions of Americans. Even so, Myldred’s parents, who were also her greatest mentors, would share whatever food they had with other people. Although the Jones family was also poor, they seemed to always have enough to give to others.

Early on, Myldred learned the lessons of humanitarianism, of unconditional love, and of providing and caring for others. These gifts were to become the very essence of her life.

Myldred began her career as a high school teacher and, later, became a juvenile probation officer. During World War II, she was one of the first of eight WAVES from California. Her military career included duty as a Special Assistant to Commandant 14th Naval District, Assistant Director of the Department of Welfare, and a faculty member on international relations for the Armed Forces Graduate School. She was also the Naval Liaison Officer for both the United Nations and the National Red Cross. When she retired in 1959, she was the director of Social Services of the Navy Relief Society.

After her retirement, Myldred became active in the Civil Rights Movement and marched with Martin Luther King from Selma, Alabama, to Montgomery, Alabama. In 1969, she joined Cesar Chavez on his marches for the United Farm Workers. Her work in the Watts district of Los Angeles, California, earned her recognition from Governor Ronald Reagan, who extended his birthday greetings.

Myldred moved to California from Pennsylvania with her family when she was four years old. Growing up during the Depression, the Jones family experienced the poverty that affected millions of Americans. Even so, Myldred’s parents, who were also her greatest mentors, would share whatever food they had with other people. Although the Jones family was also poor, they seemed to always have enough to give to others.

Early on, Myldred learned the lessons of humanitarianism, of unconditional love, and of providing and caring for others. These gifts were to become the very essence of her life.

Myldred began her career as a high school teacher and, later, became a juvenile probation officer. During World War II, she was one of the first of eight WAVES from California. Her military career included duty as a Special Assistant to Commandant 14th Naval District, Assistant Director of the Department of Welfare, and a faculty member on international relations for the Armed Forces Graduate School. She was also the Naval Liaison Officer for both the United Nations and the National Red Cross. When she retired in 1959, she was the director of Social Services of the Navy Relief Society.

After her retirement, Myldred became active in the Civil Rights Movement and marched with Martin Luther King from Selma, Alabama, to Montgomery, Alabama. In 1969, she joined Cesar Chavez on his marches for the United Farm Workers. Her work in the Watts district of Los Angeles, California, earned her recognition from Governor Ronald Reagan, who extended his birthday greetings.

Myldred moved to California from Pennsylvania with her family when she was four years old. Growing up during the Depression, the Jones family experienced the poverty that affected millions of Americans. Even so, Myldred’s parents, who were also her greatest mentors, would share whatever food they had with other people. Although the Jones family was also poor, they seemed to always have enough to give to others.

Early on, Myldred learned the lessons of humanitarianism, of unconditional love, and of providing and caring for others. These gifts were to become the very essence of her life.

Myldred began her career as a high school teacher and, later, became a juvenile probation officer. During World War II, she was one of the first of eight WAVES from California. Her military career included duty as a Special Assistant to Commandant 14th Naval District, Assistant Director of the Department of Welfare, and a faculty member on international relations for the Armed Forces Graduate School. She was also the Naval Liaison Officer for both the United Nations and the National Red Cross. When she retired in 1959, she was the director of Social Services of the Navy Relief Society.

After her retirement, Myldred became active in the Civil Rights Movement and marched with Martin Luther King from Selma, Alabama, to Montgomery, Alabama. In 1969, she joined Cesar Chavez on his marches for the United Farm Workers. Her work in the Watts district of Los Angeles, California, earned her recognition from Governor Ronald Reagan, who extended his birthday greetings.

Myldred moved to California from Pennsylvania with her family when she was four years old. Growing up during the Depression, the Jones family experienced the poverty that affected millions of Americans. Even so, Myldred’s parents, who were also her greatest mentors, would share whatever food they had with other people. Although the Jones family was also poor, they seemed to always have enough to give to others.

Early on, Myldred learned the lessons of humanitarianism, of unconditional love, and of providing and caring for others. These gifts were to become the very essence of her life.

Myldred began her career as a high school teacher and, later, became a juvenile probation officer. During World War II, she was one of the first of eight WAVES from California. Her military career included duty as a Special Assistant to Commandant 14th Naval District, Assistant Director of the Department of Welfare, and a faculty member on international relations for the Armed Forces Graduate School. She was also the Naval Liaison Officer for both the United Nations and the National Red Cross. When she retired in 1959, she was the director of Social Services of the Navy Relief Society.

After her retirement, Myldred became active in the Civil Rights Movement and marched with Martin Luther King from Selma, Alabama, to Montgomery, Alabama. In 1969, she joined Cesar Chavez on his marches for the United Farm Workers. Her work in the Watts district of Los Angeles, California, earned her recognition from Governor Ronald Reagan, who extended his birthday greetings.

Myldred moved to California from Pennsylvania with her family when she was four years old. Growing up during the Depression, the Jones family experienced the poverty that affected millions of Americans. Even so, Myldred’s parents, who were also her greatest mentors, would share whatever food they had with other people. Although the Jones family was also poor, they seemed to always have enough to give to others.

Early on, Myldred learned the lessons of humanitarianism, of unconditional love, and of providing and caring for others. These gifts were to become the very essence of her life.

Myldred began her career as a high school teacher and, later, became a juvenile probation officer. During World War II, she was one of the first of eight WAVES from California. Her military career included duty as a Special Assistant to Commandant 14th Naval District, Assistant Director of the Department of Welfare, and a faculty member on international relations for the Armed Forces Graduate School. She was also the Naval Liaison Officer for both the United Nations and the National Red Cross. When she retired in 1959, she was the director of Social Services of the Navy Relief Society.

After her retirement, Myldred became active in the Civil Rights Movement and marched with Martin Luther King from Selma, Alabama, to Montgomery, Alabama. In 1969, she joined Cesar Chavez on his marches for the United Farm Workers. Her work in the Watts district of Los Angeles, California, earned her recognition from Governor Ronald Reagan, who extended his birthday greetings.

Myldred moved to California from Pennsylvania with her family when she was four years old. Growing up during the Depression, the Jones family experienced the poverty that affected millions of Americans. Even so, Myldred’s parents, who were also her greatest mentors, would share whatever food they had with other people. Although the Jones family was also poor, they seemed to always have enough to give to others.

Early on, Myldred learned the lessons of humanitarianism, of unconditional love, and of providing and caring for others. These gifts were to become the very essence of her life.

Myldred began her career as a high school teacher and, later, became a juvenile probation officer. During World War II, she was one of the first of eight WAVES from California. Her military career included duty as a Special Assistant to Commandant 14th Naval District, Assistant Director of the Department of Welfare, and a faculty member on international relations for the Armed Forces Graduate School. She was also the Naval Liaison Officer for both the United Nations and the National Red Cross. When she retired in 1959, she was the director of Social Services of the Navy Relief Society.

After her retirement, Myldred became active in the Civil Rights Movement and marched with Martin Luther King from Selma, Alabama, to Montgomery, Alabama. In 1969, she joined Cesar Chavez on his marches for the United Farm Workers. Her work in the Watts district of Los Angeles, California, earned her recognition from Governor Ronald Reagan, who extended his birthday greetings.
that know no State boundaries. Effective way to deal with airborne pollutants 30 years ago, Federal legislation is the only to deal with this problem. As Congress recognizes, and regional initiatives alone are not sufficient to pass legislation to cut mercury pollution. Maine and Vermont have passed legislation to cut mercury pollution, and the problem in the U.S. comes primarily from a few categories of combustion units and incin- erators. Together, these sources emit more than 155 tons of mercury into our environment each year. These emissions can be suspended in the air for up to a year, and travel hundreds of miles before settling in bodies of water and soil.

Nearly every State confronts the health risks posed by mercury pollution, and the problem is growing. Just six years ago, 27 States had issued mercury advisories warning the public about consuming fish contaminated with mer- cury. Today, the number of States issuing advisories has risen to 40, and the number of water bodies covered by the warnings has nearly doubled. In some States, including my own home State of Maine, every single river, lake, and stream is under a mercury advisory.

This growing problem has already prompted action at the State and regional level. Last year the New England Governors and Eastern Canadian Premiers enacted a plan to reduce mercury emissions, educate the public and label products that contain mercury. Maine and Vermont have passed legislation to cut mercury pollution, and Massachusetts and New Jersey have enacted strict mercury emissions standards on waste incinerators.

Although there is a clear consensus that mercury pollution poses a serious threat, State and regional initiatives alone are not sufficient to deal with this problem. As Congress recognizes, when it passed the Clean Air Act nearly 30 years ago, Federal legislation is the only effective way to deal with airborne pollutants that know no State boundaries.

That is why I am introducing legislation to reduce the amount of mercury emitted from the largest polluters. This bill sets mercury emissions standards for coal-fired utilities, waste combustors, commercial and industrial boilers, chlor-alkali plants and Portland cement plants. According to EPA's report to Congress, these sources are responsible for more than 87 percent of all mercury emissions in the U.S.

My bill also phases out the use of mercury in products and ensures that municipalities work with waste incinerators to keep products that contain mercury out of the waste stream. It would also require a recycling program for products that contain mercury as an essential component, and increases research into the effects of mercury pollution.

With mercury levels in the environment growing every year, it is long past time to enact a comprehensive strategy for controlling mercury pollution. We have the technology for companies to meet these standards, and this bill will allow them to choose the best approach for their facility. We have reduced or eliminated other toxins, without the catastrophic effects that mercury has predicted. Now we should eliminate dangerous levels of mercury. I urge my colleagues to support this legislation and stop mercury from polluting our waters, infecting our fish and wildlife, and threatening the health of our children. DISAPPROVING EXTENSION OF NONDISCRIMINATORY TREATMENT TO PRODUCTS OF PEOPLE'S REPUBLIC OF CHINA

SPEECH OF HON. KAREN McCARTHY OF MISSOURI IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES Tuesday, July 27, 1999

Ms. McCARTHY of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to speak in favor of extending Normal Trade Relations to China for the coming year and against House Joint Resolution 57. Extending Normal Trade Relations will maintain the economic strength of China, the world's fourth largest economy, and allow us to move closer to agreement on a stable and acceptable plan for China's international economic engagement.

China today is America's fourth largest trading partner. In 1998 Americans exported $14 billion worth of goods to China, making China the 13th largest market abroad for U.S. goods, such as aircraft and aircraft parts, fertilizer, and electronic equipment.

My district exports plastic materials and resins, automotive parts, telecommunications equipment, building materials, food and dairy products, agricultural machinery, and pollution control equipment to China. Continued en- gagement with China enhances future eco- nomic opportunities for U.S. workers and busi- nesses. Dan Bunch Enterprises, a company in Kansas City that exports cleaning products to China, has shared with me that they have seen significant increases in available jobs for their company this year as a direct result of trade relations with China, and they expect this trend to continue in the coming years.

Another company in my district that de- pends on extensive and successful participa- tion in the Chinese market is AlliedSignal. China is one of the top 3 global markets where AlliedSignal is focusing its efforts to grow. AlliedSignal presently has 1,000 em- ployees in China and 60,000 U.S. employees. Among the major products they export to China are commercial aircraft equipment (e.g., engines, auxiliary power units, landing sys- tems, avionics), turbochargers, electrical power distribution transformer cores, fabrics, fibers, and friction materials. AlliedSignal has taken a proactive stance regarding the issue of security, especially cyber security, even going so far as to hire an outside firm to at- tempt to penetrate their firewalls.

AlliedSignal's interests in China also pro- mote capitalist and democratic ideals in China. They provide their Chinese associates with comprehensive training in economics fundamentals, as well as management and managerial fundamental skills training. This training teaches things like delegation of au- thority, team participation, high performance team practices, priority setting, respect for individuals, and due process under the work rule and plant adjudication processes. They also provide funding for their associates to attend China-Europe International Business School to receive a western style MBA.

Approximately 400,000 American jobs de- pend on exports to China and Hong Kong, and exports to these countries have more than tripled over the past decade. In 1998, Missouri exported $137 billion worth of goods to China. The most recent statistics from the Interna- tional Trade Administration indicate that Greater Kansas City's merchandise export sales to China total $61 million per year, a 151% increase since 1993.

I applaud the extension of Normal Trade Relations with China, which has helped to lift 200 million Chinese out of poverty since 1978. Mr. Speaker, let us continue our efforts toward engaging China in negotiations to reform human rights, worker rights, and international security.

THE SOUTH PACIFIC GAMES

HON. ROBERT A. UNDERWOOD OF GUAM IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES Monday, August 2, 1999

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, one of the largest regional multi-sporting events in the Pacific, the South Pacific Games, was recently hosted by the island of Guam. The 11th South Pacific Games consisted of roughly 6,000 ath- letes and officials. Athletes from 22 countries competed in 26 sporting events over a 15 day period in May and June.

Once again, athletes from the North and South Pacific gathered and engaged in vari- ous sporting events—a celebration of good- will, cultural exchange, brotherhood and healthy competition. This year's competitors represented the geographic locations of Mela- nesia, Polynesia and Micronesia.

The island of Guam was responsible for all aspects of the organization of the 11th South Pacific Games. Every effort was made to make this year's Games the most memorable in the history. Organizers developed and im- plemented a Master Plan that guided the Games to a successful conclusion. The 1999 Guam South Pacific Games Commission con- sisted of the chairman, executive chairman, eleven board members, and the commission staff. As chairman, the island's governor, the Honorable T. C. Gutierrez, committed extensive resources and support of the Games. It was all a great success.

Competing on home turf, Guam athletes gave their best performance yet. I would like to commend and congratulate Team Guam for their superb performance, efforts and contributions toward the success of the Games. Participating in regional competitions such as the South Pacific Games strengthens our relations with our neighbors and prepares our athletes for higher levels of competition.

I am pleased to submit for the RECORD the names of the Guam athletes who have distinguished themselves by winning medals in the 11th South Pacific Games.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>TRACK &amp; FIELD</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Brent Butler: 10k—Men: Silver</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Darrick Bollinger: 500m Freestyle: Bronze</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ezekiel Bong: 4x100 Medley Relay: Silver</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Guam Team: Bronze</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Table Tennis</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Anthony Santos: 54 kg: Gold</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Christian Lee: 67 kg: Silver</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>SAILING</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Brett Chivers: Laser—Men: Gold</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Daniel O'Keefe: 400m Freestyle: Bronze</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Guam Team: Bronze</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>SOFTBALL</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Guam Team: Fast Pitch—Men: Silver</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Guam Team: Slow Pitch—Women: Bronze</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>SWIMMING—MEN</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Darrick Bollinger: 50m Freestyle: Bronze</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Peter Manglona: 100m Breaststroke: Silver</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Daniel O'Keefe: 200m Breaststroke: Silver</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Guam Team: Bronze</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>SWIMMING—WOMEN</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Eleanor Minor: 57 kg: Gold</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Guam Team: Bronze</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>TAEKWONDO—MEN</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Anthony Santos: 54 kg: Gold</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Guam Team: Bronze</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>TAEKWONDO—WOMEN</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Guam Team: Bronze</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>IN MEMORY OF G. SAGE LYONS</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Mr. Speaker, while Sage's name may not appear as often in Alabama history as some others, I recall with great fondness one of his many friends and family, as well as his his grandchildren. They remain in our thoughts and prayers, just as Sage remains in a select group which is clearly among the best and brightest our state has ever produced.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>RECOGNIZING ROBERT HUME BRADY</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Mr. LUCAS of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize one man’s many accomplishments and contributions to the University of Oklahoma and the State of Oklahoma. Mr. Robert Hume Brady was born and raised in Sailing, Oklahoma. He was awarded the OU Regents' Alumni Award in 1998 for his exceptional dedication and service to the University of Oklahoma and served as an honorary chair of the 100th anniversary celebration of the OU Association’s founding. A 1960 graduate with a bachelor’s degree in business</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
administration, he joined Travelers Property Casualty Corporation in 1963 and today serves as regional vice president. In many of the cities where his company has taken root, he has made the OU presence stronger. He formed the OU Club of New Orleans in 1969, reactivated the OU Club of Kansas City in 1985, and organized the OU Club of Charlotte in 1991. He served as president of the OU Club of Charlotte for seven years and currently is a member of the Board of Directors. He has worked to raise funds for scholarship support to potential OU students and to bring new energy to the OU Club through recruiting and nominating younger members to leadership positions. He continues a long OU family tradition established by his great-uncle C. Ross Hume, a member of the first graduating class in 1898 and one of the founders of the OU Alumni Association in 1899. His grandfather, Dr. R.R. Hume, a member of the second graduating class, was instrumental in the selection of OU’s colors of crimson and cream.

Robert Brady will retire July 31, 1999, after 37 years with Travelers, and he and his wife Betty plan to return to Oklahoma City. Bob started with Travelers in 1963 after graduating from the University of Oklahoma. Further tours of duty included New Orleans, Home Office, Oklahoma City, Kansas City and Charlotte. While in Charlotte, Bob helped make Travelers North Carolina’s leading Independent Agency carrier.

Respected among his peers for his elegance and character, Bob is a colleague, mentor, friend, husband, father and grandfather.}

CONGRATULATIONS TO DEBBIE McGOLDRICK AND NIALL O’DOWD UPON THE BIRTH OF THEIR DAUGHTER ALANA KATHLEEN

HON. PETER T. KING

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, August 2, 1999

Mr. KING. Mr. Speaker, I rise to inform the House that on Sunday, July 25, 1999, at 1:34 a.m., Debbie McGoldrick and Niall O’Dowd were blessed by the proud parents of a baby daughter, Alana Kathleen. Alana Kathleen weighed in at 8 pounds, 5 1/2 ounces and is 21 inches long. The best news is that Alana Kathleen and her mother Debbie are in perfect health.

I am proud to be able to call Debbie and Niall my good friends. Niall is the Founding Publisher of the Irish Voice newspaper and Irish America magazine. Debbie, who is clearly the brains and the beauty of the operation, is the Senior Editor of the Irish Voice. Niall and Debbie are leaders in the Irish-American community and have been in the very forefront of the Irish peace process.

As happy as Niall and Debbie are over the birth of their beautiful daughter, I know that Alana Kathleen will soon realize how fortunate she is to have such outstanding parents. On behalf of myself and my family I wish them the very best of health and happiness.

EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

VAN ARSDALES HONORED

HON. PAUL E. KANJORSKI

OF PENNSYLVANIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, August 2, 1999

Mr. KANJORSKI. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to bring to the attention of my colleagues, two distinguished community leaders, Tom and Suzette van Arsdale. My good friends Tom and Suzette will be honored this month by the Luzerne Foundation for their community service and leadership. I am pleased and proud to have been asked to participate in this tribute.

Born in New York City in 1937, Tom van Arsdale grew up in New England. Tom joined the U.S. Army after high school and served in the Signal Corps as a top secret cryptographer for two years before receiving an honorable discharge. Tom began his business career in 1959.

Within two years, Tom was a bank officer and within four years, he was a senior executive. While pursuing his career, Tom was also earning degrees from Rutron Valley Community College and Edison State College.

Tom’s business acumen gained the attention in the banking world when he assumed the position of President of a troubled New Jersey bank, guided it out of its financial crisis, converted it to a public bank and subsequently sold it to the Dime Bank of New York. Tom continued to serve as the bank’s President and CEO and was named to a directorship of the Dime Bank of New York.

Tom moved to northeastern Pennsylvania in 1990 after being named President and CEO of Franklin First Financial Corporation and Franklin First Savings Bank. After Franklin First was sold to Onbancorp in 1993, Tom continued to serve as its President and was elected to the parent bank’s board until his recent retirement.

Suzette van Arsdale also spent her early years in banking. Born in New Jersey, Suzette rose in the ranks rapidly after beginning her banking career, becoming a corporate officer of one of the Nation’s largest commercial banks. While working full time, Suzette earned a degree in management from Kean University. Tom and Suzette were married in 1986 and have now two children: Thomas Robert, age 1,2, and Matthew Ernest, age 20 months.

Mr. Speaker, both van Arsdales have been active members of the community. Tom serves on several local boards, including the Luzerne County Community College Foundation, the Committee for Economic Growth, the Wyoming Valley United Way, Wyoming Seminary, College Misericordia, the Central Division of Pennsylvania Economy League, WVIA public radio and television, and the Northeast Philharmonic Orchestra, to name just a few.

He is a member of the Pennsylvania Bankers Association and America’s Community Bankers and a former chair of the Community Bankers Council of the Federal Reserve Bank of Philadelphia.

Suzette has an equally impressive resume of community activity and involvement, currently serving or having served as President of the Junior League, member of the Presidents Council of King’s College, second chair the Wyoming Valley Red Cross, member of the Wyoming Seminary Board of Directors, and as an active member of United Way of Wyoming Valley, Leadership Wilkes-Barre, Family Service Association and the Luzerne Foundation.

Suzette has helped raise funds for the Osterhout Library, the Back Mountain Library, the Northeast Philharmonic, the American Cancer Society, the St. Vincent’s South Kitchen, the Catherine McAuley House, the Meals on Wheels program, the Fine Arts Fiesta, and the Theater on the Green at College Misericordia.

In 1998, both Tom and Suzette were honored by Her Majesty, the Queen of England. Tom was invited to the Order of St. John as an Associate Commander while Suzette was given a similar honor by the Queen and also invited to the Cathedral of the Church of St. John by Lord Prior.

Mr. Speaker, I am extremely proud to call Tom and Suzette van Arsdale my friends. In just 10 years, they have both had an enormous impact on northeastern Pennsylvania. I have called on them numerous times to help support community efforts and they have always provided their leadership. More importantly, they have been wonderful friends to my wife, Nancy, and to many people throughout the area. I am proud to join with the community in thanking them for their years of service and wishing them the best for the future.

TRIBUTE TO TOM TIPPY, SR.

HON. SONNY CALLAHAN

OF ALABAMA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, August 2, 1999

Mr. CALLAHAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to an important constituent, a fine community and business leader, and a close personal friend, Mr. Tom Tippy, Sr., who passed away back on March 12th following a long illness, will be sorely missed by his family and many friends, as well as numerous associates throughout the First District of Alabama.

Tom Tippy’s relationship with the people of South Alabama began over twenty-five years ago when, as an executive with Parsons & Whittmore, he came to the area as part of the delegation sent by the Landegger family to locate a site for the construction of a new pulp and paper facility.

This mill, which became known as Alabama River Pulp, now employs hundreds of men and women from Monroe County and the surrounding area, and it is a testament to the hard work of the entire Parsons & Whittmore corporate family, as well as the tremendous dedication and perseverance displayed by Tom Tippy and his staff.

Prior to entering the world of business, Tom was a distinguished veteran of the United States Army Air Corps and saw a great deal of service in the Pacific Theater of operations. While serving as a gunner with the crew of a B-24 Liberator in the 9th Army Air Corps, and later as a top turret gunner and flight engineer on a crew assigned to the 500th Bomber Group, Tom exhibited the same qualities of leadership, professionalism and dedication to his crew mates and his nation that he displayed repeatedly throughout his life. I was saddened, but nonetheless honored, to have an American flag flown over this very building, a shrine to democracy throughout the world, which was draped over Tom’s casket and presented to his family at his burial.
EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

August 2, 1999

Perhaps one of the finest comments on Tom’s life was offered by his dear friend and mine, Monroe County Probate Judge Otha Lee Biggs, when he said, “He wasn’t happy unless he was present with the employees of that company. They were a part of his family. If they needed him, he wanted to be there for him. And, for the leadership he gave to them, they gave him their support in return. For he was a people’s man and he was a working man’s executive.”

Indeed he was.

Mr. Speaker, I offer this memorial tribute to Tom Tippy with the belief that his legacy of good works, wise decisions and of always being a man of his word, will continue in perpetuity. Truly, he lived his life with an enthusiasm toward helping others and in so doing, I believe he inspired the rest of us to try to do a little better ourselves as we approach our fellow man.

Tom is survived by his lovely wife, Rita; three sons, Tommy Tippy, Jr., Bill Tippy and Richard Tippy; one stepdaughter, Melanie Lee Ford; eight grandchildren and five great-grandchildren. My condolences go out to each of them.

DISAPPROVING EXTENSION OF NONDISCRIMINATORY TREATMENT TO PRODUCTS OF PEOPLE’S REPUBLIC OF CHINA

SPEECH OF HON. ZOE LOFGREN
OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, July 27, 1999

Ms. LOFGREN. Mr. Speaker, I rise to express my opposition to House Joint Resolution 57 disapproving the extension of nondiscriminatory treatment (or normal trade relations) to the People’s Republic of China. The continued extension of normal trade relations (NTR) to China will do much to benefit the United States domestically, while engagement with China remains the most powerful means of advancing our interests abroad.

I share the concerns of many of my colleagues over China’s record on human rights. In particular, the plight of the people of Tibet is one that we must not ignore. As we engage China economically, we should work to engage China in a policy that allows Tibetan peoples, cultures, and beliefs to flourish. As President Clinton has repeatedly emphasized, engagement with China is one path by which to encourage reform. The Clinton administration and Congress will continue to press China for human rights’ reform and democratization of its political process.

Approximately 400,000 American jobs depend on trade with China. Nearly all of China’s other major trading partners, including Japan and Europe, currently grant normal trade status to the People’s Republic of China. Were China to retaliate with trade restrictions against the United States, these nations would gain a competitive trade edge against the United States and jeopardize vast numbers of American jobs.

Additionally, the revocation of China’s NTR status would likely simply replace Chinese imports with goods imported from its neighboring nations, harming only the American consumer. Let us also remember that over the past decade, American exports to China have quadrupled to $14.3 billion, a large portion of which is made up by high-technology imports produced in locations such as my district in Silicon Valley.

It is also possible that China might soon gain entrance into the World Trade Organization (WTO), an action that might result in the critical and historic acceptance by Chinese markets of American agricultural and industrial products. The chances of opening these Chinese markets would be severely diminished if the United States were to revoke NTR status at this point.

China also plays an extremely important role in guaranteeing regional security and stability from the Korean Peninsula to the Indian Subcontinent. China’s constructive efforts for peace between North and South Korea, and its push for restraint by India and Pakistan in the wake of their nuclear tests, highlight the positive role China is capable of playing in the international arena. And our policy of engagement has exhibited some meaningful success; as a result of our policy China has signed the Nuclear Nonproliferation Treaty and the Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty and joined the Chemical Weapons Convention and the Biological Weapons Convention.

China clearly must take substantial steps to improve its record on human rights and democratize its government if it wishes to be fully accepted by the international community.

Yet only further engagement with China will allow the United States the opportunity to advocate on behalf of its own interests and those of the Chinese people. I urge you vote against House Joint Resolution 57.

SUPPORT FOR BULGARIA, H. CON. RES. 170

HON. BENJAMIN A. GILMAN
OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, August 2, 1999

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, House Concurrent Resolution 170 outlines our United States foreign policy towards Bulgaria, notes the objectives of our new, post-Cold War relationship with Bulgaria, and states that the United States recognize and commend Bulgaria’s efforts to make progress in the midst of its current economic difficulties. House Concurrent Resolution 170 does that and makes it clear that the United States also supports Bulgaria’s eventual integration into pan-European and trans-Atlantic economic and security institutions.

Bulgaria is working hard to overcome the legacy of four decades of communist rule and to assume its proper place in the trans-Atlantic community of states. Accordingly, I strongly encourage my colleagues to support House Concurrent Resolution 170, which I believe to be a recognition of our new relationship with this important country. I submit the text of H. Con. Res. 170 to be inserted at this point in the RECORD.

H. CON. RES. 170

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), as follows:

SECTION 1. FINDINGS.

The Congress finds the following:

(1) Elections held in April 1997 in the Republic of Bulgaria brought to office a government committed to full economic reforms, discipline in government budgetary and currency policies, increased foreign, direct investment in Bulgaria, and energetic efforts to combat corrupt and criminal activities that had undermined previous economic reforms.

(2) The Government of the Republic of Bulgaria has worked to ensure the proper treatment of its citizens, regardless of ethnic background, including those of ethnic Turkish background, many of whom were subjected to forced assimilation campaigns and deportation under the former communist regime in Bulgaria.

(3) The Government of the Republic of Bulgaria has made Bulgaria’s integration into pan-European and trans-Atlantic institutions, including the European Union and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO), the highest priority of its foreign policy, and has undertaken efforts to promote stability in southeastern Europe and the Black Sea region.

(4) The economy of the Republic of Bulgaria has suffered considerable decline due to the disruption of important markets caused by the break-up of the former, Soviet-dominated “COMECON” economic and trade organization, the application of international sanctions on Iraq, and the failure of the Government of the Republic of Bulgaria to confront widespread corrupt activities prior to the elections held in April 1997 that resulted in the theft of large sums from both the government and industry and that bankrupted many Bulgarian banks.

(5) The economy of the Republic of Bulgaria has suffered as well from the imposition of international sanctions on neighboring Serbia and nearby Iraq during most of this decade have placed serious burdens on the Bulgarian economy.

I believe it is important that the United States recognize and commend Bulgaria’s efforts to make progress in the midst of its current economic difficulties. House Concurrent Resolution 170 does that and makes it clear that the United States also supports Bulgaria’s eventual integration into pan-European and trans-Atlantic economic and security institutions.
SECTION 1. FINDINGS.

The Congress finds the following:

(1) to promote the development in the Republic of Bulgaria of a market-based economy, democratic government that respects the rights of all of its citizens, regardless of ethnic background;

(2) to support the territorial integrity of the Republic of Bulgaria;

(3) to insist that the territorial integrity of the Republic of Bulgaria be respected by neighboring countries and by all political movements within and outside Bulgaria; and

(4) to support the integration of the Republic of Bulgaria into pan-European and trans-Atlantic economic and security institutions.

SEC. 2. POLICY TOWARD THE REPUBLIC OF BULGARIA.

It is the policy of the United States—

(1) to promote the development in the Republic of Bulgaria of a market-based economy, democratic government that respects the rights of all of its citizens, regardless of ethnic background;

(2) to support the territorial integrity of the Republic of Bulgaria;

(3) to insist that the territorial integrity of the Republic of Bulgaria be respected by neighboring countries and by all political movements within and outside Bulgaria; and

(4) to support the integration of the Republic of Bulgaria into pan-European and trans-Atlantic economic and security institutions.

SEC. 3. SENSE OF THE CONGRESS.

It is the sense of Congress that—

(1) the Government of the Republic of Bulgaria is to be commended for its efforts to ensure proper treatment of all of its citizens, regardless of ethnic background, particularly those of ethnic Turkish background;

(2) the Government of the Republic of Bulgaria is to be commended for its efforts to accelerate the privatization of state-owned enterprises in a fair and transparent process;

(3) for its establishment of a currency board to ensure the value of the Bulgarian currency; and

(4) for its efforts to combat corrupt and criminal activities that undermine reforms and the viability of Bulgaria’s government and industry;

(5) the Government of the Republic of Bulgaria should continue to implement programs that may qualify Bulgaria for entrance to the European Union and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) and is to be commended for its continuing support of the NATO effort to ensure stability and democratization across Europe;

(6) the Republic of Bulgaria is suffering the adverse economic impact of the disruption of commerce in southeastern Europe and an influx of refugees caused by the conflict in neighboring Serbia;

(7) the Government of the Republic of Bulgaria should undertake steps to immediately halt any illicit transfer of arms and military equipment that occur in Bulgaria or may cross Bulgarian territory;

(8) the Government of the Republic of Bulgaria should play a central role in any effort by the NATO to create a zone free of weapons involving military units involving personnel from throughout the countries of southeastern Europe or in the creation of facilities in support of such a peacekeeping unit;

(9) the United States should join other official creditors of the Republic of Bulgaria in providing Bulgaria with relief from such official debt through rescheduling and, where appropriate, forgiveness.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

HON. NICK J. RAHALL II OF WEST VIRGINIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, August 2, 1999

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, on Thursday, July 29, 1999, I inadvertently voted “no” on roll call vote No. 352, the Moakley amendment to prohibit any funding for the U.S. Army School of the Americas located at Fort Benning, GA. As a cosponsor of legislation calling for the closure of the School of the Americas, and having consistently voted to prohibit funding for the School of the Americas in the past, I fully intended to cast my vote in favor of the Moakley amendment, roll call vote No. 352.

TRIBUTE TO HUGH CHISOLM DALE

HON. SONNY CALLAHAN

OF ALABAMA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, August 2, 1999

Mr. CALLAHAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in honor of Hugh Chisolm Dale who received the honorary Doctor of Humanities degree on May 15, 1999, from Erskine College in Due West, South Carolina.

Without question, Hugh Dale is one of Erskine’s most loyal alumni, and one of South Alabama’s most outstanding citizens. Erskine awarded him the Alumni Distinguished Service Award in 1972 and the Algermon Sydney Sullivan Award in 1987. In addition, he served as a member of the Erskine Board of Trustees for twelve years, and was Chairman of the Board from 1967 to 1969.

While he is naturally proud of his relationship to his alma mater, Mr. Dale has also been a one-man chamber of commerce for his hometown of Camden, Alabama. He retired as senior vice president with the Camden National Bank in 1973, having started with the bank back in 1931. In this capacity, he was often called upon to help lead numerous civic and community events which, in turn, helped the growth and development of Camden and Wilcox County.

Mr. Dale is the son of Hugh Henry Dale and Lillie Packer Dale and was born in Camden in 1911. He was valedictorian of the 1928 Wilcox County High School class and graduated cum laude from Erskine with a B.A. in chemistry in 1932. In 1935, he received a Master of Arts degree, also in chemistry, from Columbia University.

The first ten years after graduation were spent teaching school in Alabama, South Carolina, and Georgia. He then served in the United States Air Force as a preflight instructor during the Second World War, rising to the rank of major. In the five years immediately following the war he worked for the Veterans Administration in Montgomery. After that, he returned to his hometown of Camden, where he has lived ever since.

Mr. Dale is married to the former Margaret Isabel Ware, and they have two daughters, Margaret Caroline Dale Askew and Jane Shelton Dale, both of whom also graduated from Erskine College. He has been a deacon and elder in the Associate Reformed Presbyterian Church, in Camden, where he served for years as its treasurer.

Mr. Speaker, Hugh Dale is a man of the highest moral character, and he has lived his entire life with the aim of serving his fellow man. It is appropriate that Erskine College recognized one of its most outstanding alumni in this way, and it is a tribute for a job well done. I salute Mr. Dale for his many lifetime achievements, and wish him only good health and God’s Blessings as he continues on life’s journey.

SUPPORT FOR ROMANIA, H. CON. RES. 169

HON. BENJAMIN A. GILMAN

OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, August 2, 1999

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, House Concurrent Resolution 169 outlines our United States foreign policy towards Romania, recognizes the strides Romania has taken in economic and political reforms since the end of the cold war, recognizes the steps Romania has taken to improve relations with its neighbors and to prepare itself for eventual integration into the pan-European and trans-Atlantic communities, and urges Romania forward in its reforms, despite its current economic difficulties.

Mr. Speaker, although Romania had taken reform-oriented steps early in this decade, the elections of November 1996, the first since 1937 that led to a peaceful transfer of power under a democratic system, provided a fresh opportunity to push reforms forward. These reforms undertaken in the midst of economic hardship made worse by corruption, criminal activities, and the disruptions in commerce in southeast Europe caused by international sanctions and military actions against neighboring Serbia, have a long way to go.

I believe, however, that it is important to encourage Romania to continue with its reforms. I also believe that it should be our policy to support Romania’s eventual integration into pan-European and trans-Atlantic economic and security institutions. In this regard, I note that Romania was the very first country to join NATO’s “Partnership for Peace” program and that it has spent most of this decade working to reform its military and adopt procedures for its military forces that are compatible with those of the NATO alliance.

Mr. Speaker, I strongly encourage my colleagues to support House Concurrent Resolution 169, an important statement of United States support for Romania, for its program of reforms, and for its eventual integration into the trans-Atlantic community. I submit that the text of H. Con. Res. 169 be inserted at this point in the RECORD.

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring).

SECTION 1. FINDINGS.

The Congress finds the following:

1. The United States as the “Former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia”, its ongoing long-standing dispute over the language to be used in those agreements.

2. The Government of the Republic of Bulgaria has undertaken to reform Bulgaria’s armed forces, adopting a military doctrine to that effect in March 1999.

3. The Government of the Republic of Bulgaria has accelerated its continuing support for the mission of NATO in supporting democratization and stability across Europe.

4. As a result of the conflict in Serbia with respect to the region of Kosovo, the Republic of Bulgaria has accepted several thousand refugees from the conflict.

5. The Government of the Republic of Bulgaria has undertaken to reform Bulgaria’s armed forces, adopting a military doctrine to that effect in March 1999.

6. The Government of the Republic of Bulgaria should play a central role in any effort by the NATO to create a zone free of weapons involving military units involving personnel from throughout the countries of southeastern Europe or in the creation of facilities in support of such a peacekeeping unit.

7. The United States should join other official creditors of the Republic of Bulgaria in providing Bulgaria with relief from such official debt through rescheduling and, where appropriate, forgiveness.
(1) Romania has negotiated, agreed to, and ratified a bilateral treaty with the neighboring Republic of Hungary that recognizes the borders of those two countries and provides for the protection of the civil liberties of citizens who are members of national minorities.

(2) Romania has negotiated, agreed to, and ratified an important bilateral treaty with neighboring Ukraine that recognizes the borders of those two countries.

(3) The November 1996 electoral change in the Government of Romania was the first such change under a democratic political system in Romania since 1937.

(4) Romania was the first country to join the “Partnership for Peace” program of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO), in January 1994, has since become an active participant in that program, is a member of NATO’s Euro-Atlantic Partnership Council, and has shown strong interest in admission into NATO and into the European Union.

(5) The Government of Romania has worked to ensure civilian control over its armed forces and has begun to implement military reform through force reductions, reorganization of officer ranks, and adoption of NATO-compatible procedures.

(6) Romania has provided military personnel for participation in and support of multinational peacekeeping operations.

(7) The Government of Romania has stated its continuing support for the mission of NATO in supporting democratization and stability across Europe.

SEC. 2. POLICY TOWARD ROMANIA.

It is the policy of the United States—

(1) to promote the development in Romania of a market-based economy and a democratic government that respects the rights of all of its citizens, regardless of ethnic background;

(2) to support the territorial integrity of Romania and to insist that the territorial integrity of Romania be respected by all neighboring countries and by all political movements within and outside Romania; and

(3) to support the integration of Romania into a pan-European and trans-Atlantic economic and institutional framework.

SEC. 3. SENSE OF THE CONGRESS.

It is the sense of the Congress that—

(1) the United States should support efforts by Romania to integrate into the Atlantic community and a democratic government that respects the rights of all of its citizens, regardless of ethnic background;

(2) the United States should support efforts by Romania to integrate into the Atlantic community and a democratic government that respects the rights of all of its citizens, regardless of ethnic background;

(3) the United States should support efforts by Romania to integrate into the Atlantic community and a democratic government that respects the rights of all of its citizens, regardless of ethnic background.

(4) the United States should provide assistance to Romania in consolidating democratic government in Romania;

(5)罗马尼亚 with relief from such official debt through rescheduling and, where appropriate, forgiveness.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

HON. JULIA CARSON
OF INDIANA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, August 2, 1999

Ms. CARSON. Mr. Speaker, I was unavoidably absent for one vote on Friday, July 30, 1999, missing rollcall vote 355. Had I been present, I would have voted “yes.”

TRIBUTE TO ROBERT A. GUTHANS

HON. SONNY CALLAHAN
OF ALABAMA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, August 2, 1999

Mr. CALLAHAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor Bobby Guthans a respected leader in his field, an outstanding citizen in our community and quite frankly, as fine a gentleman as I have ever known. On a personal note, I am also pleased and honored to call Bobby Guthans my friend.

Bobby recently retired as president of Midstream Fuel Inc., Petroleum Energy Products Co., and Tenn-Tom Towing Co. As one of the founders of Midstream back in 1974, Bobby helped build a company that soon became recognized around the world as one of the innovative leaders in the maritime industry.

Bobby’s success at Midstream didn’t just happen because he’s a nice guy with a great outlook on life, although he is certainly that. It was the product of hard work, a good business head on his shoulders and a work ethic and respect for others that is second-to-none. In addition, Bobby, and his lovely wife Barbara Ann, come from the old school who believe “it is better to give than receive.”

As such, they have volunteered literally untold hours in worthy civic and charitable endeavors, always with the attitude that it is right to give something back to your community and to your fellow man. Both Bobby and Barbara Ann are without peers when it comes to their generosity.

While being a first-class CEO, as well as a wonderful husband, father and grandfather, Bobby has also found time to hold down many wonderful roles in our civic community. He is the Vice President of the Warrior-Tombigbee Development Association, a director of the Midstream Energy Corp., and Tenn-Tom Towing Co., as well as a director of Midstream Worldwide, Inc., Petroleum Energy Products Co., and Tenn-Tom Towing Co.

Bobby Guthans has been able to do for his community, his state and his nation while he was also running a multi-million dollar corporation, just think what he’ll be able to do now that he doesn’t have to show up to work at seven o’clock in the morning.

Mr. Speaker, I salute Bobby Guthans. He’s a good man and a wonderful role model for us all.

THE PASSING OF FATHER PETER LAPPIN

HON. BENJAMIN A. GILMAN
OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, August 2, 1999

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I deeply regret informing our colleagues of the passing of one of the most remarkable and accomplished residents of my 20th Congressional District of New York.

Father Peter Lappin, the author of 17 books on Christian theology, has been considered the spiritual leader of the Irish community in my congressional district. He long served as chaplain to the Rockland County Ancient Order of Hibernians and was a longtime supporter of the peace process in Ireland.

Father Peter Lappin devoted his life to the Salesian Fathers of which he was a member. He resided at the Marian Shrine and Don Bosco Retreat in Rockland County for over 25 years. He had first taken his vows as a Salesian of Don Bosco back in 1933, and lived in our Hudson Valley region of New York since 1951.

Father Lappin, who was 88 years young when a heart attack claimed him suddenly yesterday, was born in Belfast. He attended the Belfast School of Technology, the Pallackery College, and the Salesian College, Cowley, Oxford. Father Lappin then traveled to China where he continued his studies at the International School of Theology in Shanghai and the Salesian Studenate in Hong Kong. Father Lappin was finally ordained as a Salesian Priest in Shanghai, and subsequently he spent 16 years in Shanghai as a teacher and a parish priest.

Father Lappin also studied at Fordham University and the Columbia School Writing, both in New York City.

Father Lappin gained fame in many ways. In addition to his noted best selling books, including “Stories of Don Bosco” and biographies of contemporary Christian heroes, he was the author of the “Salesian Bulletin”. He was an editorial board member of “The Biographical Memoirs of Saint John Bosco” and was a lecturer on South America and the Far East. Father Lappin was active in the Knights of Columbus and in the Cambridge Society of Biographers.

Father Lappin was widely regarded for his talent at writing children’s books which expressed the Catholic faith in a manner that youngsters could readily understand. He has a tremendous impact on countless generations of young readers.

Father Lappin’s writings earned for him the Venice Festival awards, the Catholic Family Club award, and two Catholic Literary Foundation awards.

Mrs. Gilman and I came to know Father Peter Lappin over many years, as a result of his deeply felt passion for a permanent peace in Ireland. Father Lappin traveled to the emerald isle extensively in his quest for a lasting peace in his homeland. He devoted much of his life to a resolution of the troubles in the north, and closely followed—and supported—the recent peace initiatives for Ireland.

In losing Father Lappin, Georgia and I have lost not only a fond friend but an outstanding advocate of peace throughout the world.

Danny Withers, one of the more prominent of Irish-American leaders in my district, stated:

“Father Lappin was a great supporter of Irish independence for Ireland, and he used his God-given gift of the written word to help garner support for this worthy cause.

Father Lappin came to our Nation in 1961. He worked out of the New Rochelle headquarters of the Salesians for 11 years, traveling throughout our Nation and continuing his writings. He became a household word in Rockland Country for the past quarter century, due to his compassion, his love of all people but most especially children, and his dynamic personality.

Mr. Speaker, I invite my colleagues to join with me in extending our condolences to Father Lappin’s half brother, Father James Brawley of Australia, and to all of his fellow Salesian fathers. His were huge footsteps that will be difficult to fill.

SENATE COMMITTEE MEETINGS

Title IV of Senate Resolution 4, agreed to by the Senate on February 4, 1977, called for establishment of a system for a computerized schedule of all meetings and hearings of Senate committees, subcommittees, joint committees, and committees of conference. This title requires all such committees to notify the Office of the Senate Daily Digest—designated by the Rules committee—of the time, place, and purpose of the meetings, when scheduled, and any cancellations or changes in the meetings as they occur.

As an additional procedure along with the computerization of this information, the Office of the Senate Daily Digest will prepare this information for printing in the Extensions of Remarks section of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD on Monday and Wednesday of each week.

Meetings scheduled for Tuesday, August 3, 1999 may be found in the Daily Digest of today’s RECORD.

MEETINGS SCHEDULED

AUGUST 4

8:30 a.m.  Judiciary  To hold hearings on the nomination of David W. Ogden, of Virginia, to be an Assistant Attorney General; and the nomination of Robert Raben, of Florida, to be an Assistant Attorney General.

9 a.m.  Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry  To continue hearings on farm crisis issues.

9:15 a.m.  Rules and Administration  To hold hearings on certain proposed committee resolutions requesting funds for operating expenses.

9:30 a.m.  Indian Affairs  To hold hearings on S. 299, to elevate the position of Director of the Indian Health Service within the Department of Health and Human Services to Assistant Secretary for Indian Health; and S. 406, to amend the Indian Health Care Improvement Act to make permanent the demonstration program that allows for direct billing of medicare, medicaid, and other third party payors, and to expand the eligibility under such program to other tribes and tribal organizations; followed by a business meeting to consider pending calendar business.

10 a.m.  Judiciary  To hold hearings on S. 1172, to provide a patent term restoration review procedure for certain drug products, focusing on proposed remedies for relief, relating to pipeline drugs.

10:30 a.m.  Foreign Relations  To hold hearings on S. 693, to assist in the enhancement of the security of Taiwan.

AUGUST 5

9 a.m.  Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry  To continue hearings on farm crisis issues.

9:30 a.m.  Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs  To hold oversight hearings on activities of the Office of Multifamily Housing Assistance Restructuring of the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

10 a.m.  Foreign Relations  To hold hearings on United States strategic interests in India.

10:30 a.m.  Judiciary  To hold hearings on S. 486, to provide for the punishment of methamphetamine laboratory operators, provide additional resources to combat methamphetamine production, trafficking, and abuse in the United States; and S. 620, to grant a Federal charter to Korean War Veterans Association, Incorporated.

2:15 p.m.  Foreign Relations  To hold hearings on pending nominations.
EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

AUGUST 6
9:30 a.m.
Joint Economic Committee
To hold hearings on the employment and unemployment situation for July.
Room to be announced

SEPTEMBER 28
9:30 a.m.
Veterans' Affairs
To hold joint hearings with the House Committee on Veterans Affairs to review the legislative recommendations of the American Legion.
345 Cannon Building

POSTPONEMENTS

AUGUST 4
9:30 a.m.
Veterans' Affairs
To hold hearings on the maintenance of unneeded medical facilities of the Department of Veteran Affairs.
SD-106
The Senate met at 9:30 a.m. and was called to order by the President pro tempore [Mr. THURMOND].

PRAYER

The Chaplain, Dr. Lloyd John Ogilvie, offered the following prayer:

Gracious God, all that we have and are is the result of Your goodness. We dedicate this day to counting our blessings and naming them one by one all through the hours of this day. We praise You for the gift of life. You have given us intellect to know You, emotions to praise You, and determination to do Your will. You have blessed us with loved ones, families, and friends. And what a privilege it is to live in this free land of opportunity. Today, help us recount the privileges that we have as citizens and leaders of this Nation.

Father, we also want to praise You for the courage and the strength You give us as individuals and as a Senate. Thank You for problems that define the next steps of what You want us to do. You have shown us that problems are only the flip side of an undiscovered answer. Our problems give us an opportunity to discover Your power.

With everything within us, we praise, thank, and glorify You, our God, Savior, Lord, Provider, and Friend. Amen.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The Honorable GEORGE VINOVIICH, a Senator from the State of Ohio, led the Pledge of Allegiance as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

RECOGNITION OF THE ACTING MAJORITY LEADER

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. VINOVIICH). The Senator from Nebraska, Mr. HAGEL, is recognized.

SCHEDULE

Mr. HAGEL. Mr. President, on behalf of the leader I wish to announce that today the Senate will be in a period of morning business until 10:30 a.m. Following morning business, the Senate will resume consideration of the pending disaster relief amendment to the Agriculture Appropriations Act. It is hoped that the Senate will be able to dispose of those amendments today at a reasonable hour. As a reminder, the Senate will recess today from 12:30 to 2:15 so that the weekly party conferences can meet. As a further reminder, a cloture motion on the dairy compact amendment was filed on Monday. Therefore, under the provisions of rule XXII, that cloture vote will take place 1 hour after the Senate convenes tomorrow, unless an agreement is made by the two leaders.

Prior to the August recess, it is the intention of the leader to complete action on the Agriculture appropriations bill, the Interior appropriations bill, and it is also hoped that the conference report to the tax reconciliation bill will be available for consideration.

I thank my colleagues for their attention.

RESERVATION OF LEADER TIME

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the leadership time is reserved.

MORNING BUSINESS

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, there will now be a period for the transaction of morning business not to extend beyond the hour of 10:30 a.m. Senators are permitted to speak therein for up to 5 minutes each.

Under the previous order, the Senator from Nebraska or his designee is recognized to speak for up to 30 minutes.

Mr. HAGEL. Mr. President, I yield such time as I may require.

AGRICULTURE APPROPRIATIONS

Mr. HAGEL. Mr. President, over the weekend in Nebraska, I met with a number of agricultural producers about the current prices in American agriculture. Over the last 3 weeks, my staff and I have spoken to over 100 agricultural producers in Nebraska—hog producers, cattle producers, grain producers; and then the second rim, the outer rim representing the agricultural community—bankers, implement dealers, automobile dealers. All had a consistent theme as to what we must do to direct our attention and our efforts to dealing with this crisis in America.

As we begin debate today on the fiscal year 2000 Agriculture appropriations bill and on the emergency appropriation for agriculture, we should keep in mind some important dynamics about American agriculture. Leaders of both parties in the Senate committed last week to including in the fiscal year 2000 Agriculture appropriations bill an emergency funding measure to provide the short-term assistance needed for our agricultural producers, and that assistance should include increasing the market transition payments—I am confident we will see legislation to do that—lifting the cap on loan deficiency payments, and additional funding for crop insurance. I know that part of Freedom to Farm in 1996 was the commitment to America’s agricultural producers to, in fact, reform crop insurance. We are on our way in that area, but we have not yet arrived at that reform.

Crop insurance is a very key dynamic to the future of American agriculture. The emergency appropriations bill should include relief for livestock producers, and I am confident we will see that in both of the bills that will be presented today, plus other emergency measures.

As we address this immediate crisis, we must continue to work on the long-term priorities. The perspective is clear. We have an immediate problem, and we will address that immediate problem. But let us not lose sight of the long-term priorities for American agriculture.

To do that, we must focus on the demand side of the equation. When I talk about the demand side of the equation, I am talking about trade. I am talking about trade policies that encourage market development and the opening of new markets for our producers. We must continue to work for trade and sanctions reform—another critical component of the 1996 farm bill. I regret to say that Congress and the President have not done a very good job in the area of trade and sanctions reform. We are working on it, but we are a long way from being where we should be.

For example, it is estimated that current unilateral sanctions cost the U.S. economy more than $20 billion each year. Who do we penalize? Who do we hurt? We hurt ourselves. We must stop using agricultural policy as a foreign policy weapon. Instead, we must extend a strong message to our customers and competitors around the world that U.S. agricultural producers are consistent and reliable suppliers of quality and plentiful agricultural products.

We need fast track authority for the President in order to reach trade agreements that will open more markets to our agricultural goods and allow our producers to compete on a level playing field.

Today we stand in a situation that is unprecedented in the last 25 years. This President of the United States has been without fast track negotiating authority since 1994. Obviously, there has been a lack of focus on priority on this issue. Every day the President does not have the authority to negotiate trade treaties, they have the European Union is doing it; the South American trade organization Mercosur is doing it; others are doing it. We are not. Do we not understand that we will pay a very significant price, a high price, for being moved out of those markets because we have not placed trade as a high priority? Fast track authority is certainly a very clear example.

We must work to break down protectionist barriers in the next round of the World Trade Organization negotiations being held this fall in Seattle and strongly oppose the European Union’s delay on lifting the ban on hormone-enhanced beef.

We must work with China to encourage its entrance into the WTO. Do we really not understand that it is surely in the best interests of America, stability in the world, and new markets for all American products to have China in the World Trade Organization, not cutting corners but complying with all the necessary criteria to be a member of the WTO? It is in our best interests to continue to bring China into responsible organizations where China has more responsibility and accountability and opens a market of 1.3 billion people. We need more focus in that effort.

The President must make trade a top priority. He must make trade a top priority and then lead. It is not good enough to say our trade ambassador will negotiate. The President sets the agenda; the President sets the priority. Presidents lead. The next President of the United States is going to be consumed with an immense series of challenges and needs a higher priority on working in these challenges.

We must fulfill our commitment to American agriculture for tax and regulatory reform. Our national tax policy should encourage long-term investment in production agriculture that helps our current producers stay in business.

We must reduce Government regulation and cut taxes. There are a number of things we can do, that we promised we would do in 1996: Eliminate the estate tax. Our family farmers should not have to sell the family farm to pay taxes in order to keep the farm going. That cuts right to the core for our future and for the next generation of farmers.

Provide capital gains tax relief on the sale of the farmland by our producers, expanding on the exclusion given to homeowners in 1997. Eventually, we should abolish capital gains taxes. The Chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, Alan Greenspan, affirmed his view on that before the Senate Banking Committee;

Create tax-deferred farm and ranch risk management accounts to help ease fluctuations in income, thereby giving our producers another management tool;

Ensure that farmers and ranchers receive the full benefits of the permanent income-averaging provisions and not lose them because of the alternative minimum tax;

Obviously, we must eliminate the marriage penalty and provide 100 percent deductibility for health insurance premiums.

These are real; these connect; they are relevant. They will help American agriculture; they will help our country.

We must ease the regulatory burdens on our agricultural producers. The USDA, the EPA, and other regulatory agencies hit farmers with dozens of different and unnecessary, to provide on their land, they tie up their time, they tie up their capital, and reduce their efficiency and reduce their profits. To what end? What is the cost-benefit ratio?

Let’s take a real-life example. Two of our biggest competitors, Brazil and Argentina, have been gaining in their share of the world’s commodity trade, especially in corn and wheat. The Brazilians and the Argentines are able to make a profit on these crops at prices lower than production costs in the United States.

Why? There are many reasons we can measure. I will state a couple. The Brazilians and Argentinians pay much lower taxes than our American agricultural producers pay. Second, they have fewer Government regulations to contend with. Their Government does not place added burdens on them, not only as producers but as marketers. Their Government actually helps. Their Government does not stand in the way. We need to do the same thing.

In 1996, we got the Federal Government out of the farmers’ fields. Now we need to get the Federal Government off the farmers’ backs. In the short term, we must swiftly conclude action on an agricultural appropriations bill that will provide emergency relief to our commodity and our livestock producers. Over the long term, it is good public policy, domestically and internationally, to provide for abundant and inexpensive food. We can support that policy by adopting prudent Government policies, Government policies such as trade policies that encourage market development, policies which create international financial stability.

Here is a very clear example of how the globe connects, how all 6 billion people in the world connect. Stability is the base from which we work to help develop emerging democracies, market economies, opening new opportunities and new markets. All of our policies are connected—national defense, foreign policy, trade policy—and "ground" all of our other policies with an anchor of stability so that the people of the world will have the hope that they can have a better life. It gives all people of the world an opportunity to build bridges to each other.

We need tax policies which encourage long-term investments in production agriculture to help sustain our current producers. These are the most important ways we can help our farmers and our consumers, our taxpayers, and our international trade partners.

In the short term, we need to share the risks—yes, share the risks—that from time to time will adversely impact farming, such as has been the case for the last 2 years. We cannot sustain a long-term policy of providing abundant and inexpensive food without occasionally producing more than the market will absorb in the short term. We cannot control the weather or international markets. We need to factor in those realities of farming and not act shocked every time this happens.

Most agricultural producers I have spoken to, not just in the last month but in the last 4 years, 5 years, 10 years, do not believe that the United States should retreat to the 1980 set-aside, higher price support policies which they believe only produced more and deepened problems of the 1980s and certainly would extend and deepen the current crisis. I agree.

To support production agriculture and sustain the producer base which has contributed so much to our economic stability and prosperity, we need to provide short-term support to our agricultural producers now.

Congress needs to pass a realistic and a responsible emergency agriculture bill. The Congress must act this week. I yield the floor, and I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. HAGEL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

THE REGULATORY OPENNESS AND FAIRNESS ACT

Mr. HAGEL. Mr. President, last week, 20 of my colleagues of both parties joined me in introducing the Regulatory Openness and Fairness Act, a bill to amend the Food Quality Protection Act to ensure that the EPA used sound science in its evaluation of pesticide uses. This legislation is particularly relevant when yesterday’s announcement by the EPA that they will ban two important pesticides.

Let me begin by saying that a safe food supply is, of course, in everyone's best interests. We all want to ensure that our children and American consumers continue to have access to abundant, safe agricultural products. It is in the best interests of consumers and agricultural producers that decisions on pesticide uses are based on sound scientific analysis—sound scientific analysis. That was the intent of the law which passed, with strong bipartisan support, 3 years ago. In 1996, Congress passed the Food Quality Protection Act to ensure the safety of our Nation’s food supply. It passed with the overwhelming support of the agricultural industry and was seen as a much-needed modernization of laws governing all pesticide use.

As written and signed by the President, the FQPA requires the EPA to reassess all of the Nation’s pesticides, using more rigorous science, as faced many consumers’ bills. The FQPA also requires that these standards be based on hard data and sound science, not arbitrary assumptions or computer models.

Under the FQPA, next week the EPA faces its first deadline for announcing its evaluation of some 3,000 uses of pesticides. As EPA prepares for its deadline, it has not fully used the sound scientific analysis called for in the 1996 FQPA bill. Instead, the EPA has relied on theoretical computer models and worst case scenarios in many of these cases. The EPA frequently prefers this approach, partly as a result of not having the resources or the time to focus. But this is not what Congress intended in 1996. We did not intend for farmers to lose the use of safe and effective pesticides. We did not intend for public health officials dealing with pest control issues to lose the products that help them protect the public.

The President and I have introduced, the Regulatory Openness and Fairness Act, makes sure that EPA follows what was the intent of Congress 3 years ago. It will lessen the chance that safe and effective pesticides would be removed from the market without scientific justification; it provides a clear and predictable regulatory process based on scientific data; it streamlines the process for evaluating new pesticides; and it provides Congress with facts on how the act, as applied by the EPA, affects agriculture exports.

Lastly, we must make sure that public health is not ignored or put on the back burner. The administration needs to get serious about health care reform and work with Congress to pass a bill that will provide health care for all Americans. The President is right when he says that we need to work together to find a solution. The American people deserve nothing less.
If we are going to do that and reduce the debt, we can do it in a fashion that is fair to everyone or do it in a way that preserves Social Security and Medicare. Many senior citizens are not even aware of the fact the Medicare system is in trouble. Yet it is. They would like to see Medicare expanded, as I would cover prescription drugs and to be even a better program so seniors can remain healthy and independent for a longer period of time. But, sadly, the Republican approach to this includes no money for Medicare, no money for Medicare out of this surplus. Do you know what that means? Seniors who are striving to be independent and healthy will not get a helping hand when they should. That is what this budget and tax debate has been about.

Sadly, that is where we find ourselves as we head toward the August recess—our failure to enact the juvenile justice bill to make our schools safer; our failure to enact the Patients' Bill of Rights—fighting against them—and our people from gun violence. It strikes me that the same thing happened in the 20th century, with all the demands on our children, what they need to learn to be competitive and succeed is the very best educational system. The Republicans, with their tax bill to create shortfalls in spending on education, are really shortsighted.

So as you look at it, here we stand on the third day of August, about to adjourn at the end of this week, with precious little to point to. We have been here for months. We have not listened to the American people. We have not responded to them. As we go home, I hope that we can build up some bipartisan approach as we conclude this year to address safety in schools, the Patients' Bill of Rights, and a sensible approach to using any budget surplus that is good for the long-term needs of America.

I thank the Senator from California for joining me on the floor.

Mrs. BOXER. I thank my friend.

Mr. DURBIN. That is a fact. It has been a sad commentary that we know in the year 2015, if I am not mistaken, the Medicare system, as we know it—this current system—is going to go bankrupt, be insolvent. Many seniors want additional benefits to help them stay healthy and independent, like the prescription drug program which we support. When we made an effort on the floor, in a vote just last week we could not rally any support from the Republican side of the aisle for the prescription drug program so that seniors can stay independent and healthy. That, I think, is a shame.

I would like to go home this August and say to seniors and those of us soon to be in the program: We have done something positive. You can live a longer, more independent, and healthier life. But we can’t even point to that. Instead, the Republicans suggest we can give tax cuts to wealthy people and substantial tax breaks to certain businesses.

Mrs. BOXER. I want to pick up on that Medicare question. Because when my friend said seniors want to live fuller lives, this is so true. That is where we are now. We have come such a long way with our health research and with our ability to take certain prescription drugs that help us live fuller lives; that when we look out into the future, with the demographic changes that are coming, this is our biggest challenge. How do we make sure that when we pass age 60, 65, 70, 75, we are living full lives?

This tax bill turns its back on this whole matter by doing zero for Medicare. They can say: Oh, we left a whole lot of money over here, and we can possibly use it, but the fact is, it is zero for something we know is coming down the road at us and something that is very important.

So it seems to me—and I would just ask my friend to comment; then I will yield the floor—that when we go home, assuming this Republican tax bill continues to roll—and from what we can tell it may well continue to roll right through—what will have been done will be bad for Medicare, bad for paying down the debt, and threatens this economy. Just listen to Alan Greenspan. He is the one my friends from the other side of the aisle have followed very religiously.

Suddenly, Alan Greenspan gets up and says: You better not now. Don’t stimulate this economy now. You could threaten recovery. They roll right over Alan Greenspan, and they are going to roll right over us. So we are going to lose hope. They didn’t do what they should have done on juvenile justice, sensible gun control, HMOs—fighting against them—and what they did do threatens this economic recovery and does nothing for Medicare. It is a bad deal all the way around.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CRAPO). The time of the Senator has expired.

Mrs. BOXER. I ask for 1 additional minute.

Mr. DURBIN. In response to the Senator from California, I agree with her. The sad thing is, if we give these tax cuts to the wealthiest among us, as proposed by the Republican bill, we are going to ultimately shortchange, in the outyears, some critically important programs for America, such as education. Think about it. As we go into the 21st century, with all the demands on our children, what they need to learn to be competitive and succeed is the very best educational system. The Republicans, with their tax bill to create shortfalls in spending on education, are really shortsighted.
THE FARM CRISIS

Mr. CONRAD. Mr. President, I wanted an opportunity to talk about the farm crisis that is now facing our country, and certainly facing my State. I represent North Dakota, which is one of the most agricultural States in the Nation. There is no question that our farmers are facing a crisis of really unprecedented proportion.

As I go around my State, every place that I have a farm meeting, farmers have a sense of hopelessness. One of the reasons is that is happening to farm income. I have just come from a hearing where the Secretary of Agriculture is testifying. We were talking there about the pattern of farm income. It is very interesting, if you back out Government payments, which have been increasing now in the last several years in response to this economic calamity—in 1996, farm income absent Government payments was $46 billion. This year, my income, absent Government payments, is estimated to be $27 billion. Farm income from the prices that farmers receive for the commodities they sell is in a virtual free-fall.

This chart shows headlines from the newspapers back home talking about what is happening to farm prices. The first one is from the major paper in our State: “Going down, down, down. USDA sees lower prices for wheat, corn, soybeans, and other major crops.”

Another major story: “Lower crop prices predicted.”

Again, the story is the same—collapsing farm prices.

Farmers have been hurt by more than low prices. They have been hurt by what I call the “triple whammy” of bad prices, bad weather, and bad policy.

The bad prices are right at the heart of what is causing this farm collapse. This chart shows farm prices of two major commodities, wheat and barley, for a 53-year period. It really tells the story.

These are inflation-adjusted prices. So we are comparing apples to apples. These are what farmers have been receiving for these major commodities from 1946 to 1999. You can see that the blue line is wheat. Wheat has gone from almost $18 a bushel back in the 1940s to about $2.50 a bushel today—a long-term price decline without many real interruptions, although we saw a major one back in the 1970s. We all remember that period when farm prices skyrocketed. But absent that, we have really been in a long-term price decline for wheat, barley, and many other commodities as well.

I think this chart tells a very important story because it compares the prices farmers receive for what they sell and the prices they pay for what they buy.

The green line goes back to 1991 and shows what prices farmers are paying for the inputs that they must buy to produce crops. You can see that the prices farmers pay have been going up very sharply. On the other hand, prices that farmers have been receiving went up to a peak in 1996—interestingly enough, right at the time we passed the last farm bill. In fact, we were told at the time we would see permanently high farm prices. That proved to be absolutely wrong. Those permanently high prices lasted about 90 days. Since then, we have seen a virtual price collapse.

Just as I indicated before, prices farmers have been receiving have been dropping dramatically, and the prices for the things they pay have being rising inexorably. That creates this enormous gap between the prices they are paying and the prices they are receiving. That is what has led to that reduction in farm income I talked about in my initial remarks. This is a crisis by any definition.

If we look at what is happening to individual commodities in relationship to the prices farmers receive and the actual costs of producing those commodities, we can see it very clearly.

This is what has happened with respect to wheat prices. The green line is the cost of production. The red line is the prices farmers are receiving for their crops. The farmers receive are far below the costs of producing the product. That is what has led to this cash flow crunch. That is why farmers are telling us: If you do not take dramatic action, tens of thousands of us are going to go out of business.

In my State, the estimates are that we will lose 20 or 30 percent of our farmers in the next 18 months unless we act. Let me repeat that. In North Dakota, we are being told by the experts at the State University and major farm organizations that unless we act we will lose 20 to 30 percent of the farmers in my State in the next 18 months. That is a crisis.

It is not just in wheat. You see the same pattern. This is soybeans. We don’t grow many soybeans in North Dakota. Soybeans are grown further south and to the east. But you can see the same kind of pattern.

Here is the cost of production. Here is what the farmers are actually receiving. Since 1997, farmers are well below the cost of production with respect to soybeans. In wheat, the pattern is the same, and in soybeans. But there are other crops as well that are critically important.

This shows what has happened in corn. The red line again is the price. The green line is the cost of production. Since 1997, we have been below the cost of production in corn.

You can’t stay in business very long when you are getting less in terms of a price for your product than what it costs you to produce that product. You can hang in there a while as you give up equity and as you go backwards on your balance sheet, but at some point the banker comes calling. He says: Mr. farmer, you are out of business. You can’t continue to lose equity.

The result has been that we have started to lose farm families in my State. In the 20 years from 1980 to 1999 we had lost 18,000 family farmers in our State. We can see that we held that in 1990, and in 1991 we lost a drop of about a thousand farmers. Then, in 1992, we actually got some recovery. In 1993, we dropped down to about 26,000. Since then, it has been a constant erosion. So that now we are down to about 22,000 family-sized farms in our State. It is really a dramatic decline in the last 20 years—almost a 20-percent drop. Remember what I said. The experts are telling us now that we could see another 20-percent drop in just the next 18 months—perhaps even more than that; perhaps even as much as a 30-percent loss unless we act.

What are the reasons for this? Part of the reason is the financial collapse in Asia and the financial collapse in Russia because those were major customers for our farm commodities. But there are other reasons as well.

I believe one of the key reasons is the budget decisions that were made at the time of the last farm bill. The last farm bill had some strengths to it, some pluses. The biggest strength, I believe, is the flexibility it provided to farmers to plant for the market rather than a farm program. But we also made some budget decisions at the time that made it very difficult to write any kind of reasonable farm bill.

This chart shows what I am talking about. It shows the resources that were provided in a very similar farm bill to the previous farm bill. That averaged $10 billion a year. The new farm bill provided $5 billion a year. In other words, the support for agriculture was cut in half at the time of the last farm bill.

That has special implications because if we look at what was happening with our major competitors, we see that they were doing something quite differently. While we were dramatically cutting our support for producers, our European competitors—our major competitors—were maintaining very high levels of support. The Europeans were spending, on average, $44 billion a year—on average, $6 billion for us. This into negotiations with them this fall, ground is market share. He is right. They believe there will be a cease-fire. They believe there will be a cease-fire in place, and we want to occupy the high ground. The high ground is market share.

That is exactly what they are up to. And how do we do it? Why are we giving up, in 20 years, from being major importers to being major exporters. In fact, they have surpassed the United States in terms of agriculture exports. One of the ways they have done it is to spend enormous sums of money to put themselves in a position of superiority.

This chart shows how the European Union is flooding the world with agricultural export subsidies. This is the European share of world agricultural export subsidies, accounting for nearly 84 percent of all world agricultural export subsidies; the United States’ share, this little red piece of the pie, is 1.4 percent. They are outgunning the United States 60 to 1.

It is no wonder farm income is declining. It is no wonder exports are declining. It is no wonder our farmers are under enormous pressure. They are under enormous pressure because our European friends have a plan and a strategy for world agricultural trade. Again, they are doing it the old-fashioned way: They are buying these markets. They think the United States is not going to roll over; we are not going to surrender; we are not going to wave a white flag and turn over world agricultural trade to them; we will insist on a level playing field.

In the last trade negotiation, that gap existed as well. The Europeans have more support than we have. Did that gap close? Did our level of support go up? Did the European level go down? Did the gap close? No, it did not. Instead, we got equal percentage reductions on both sides from an unequal base, leaving the Europeans in the superior position.

If we look back at the last trade negotiation, we got a 36 percent reduction in export trade subsidy and a 24 percent reduction in internal support on both sides. But the Europeans were at a much higher level. When there are equal percentage reductions from unequal bases, the Europeans remain in a superior position. It does not take a whole lot to figure out that if we continue that pattern of equal percentage reductions from an unequal basis, we will continue to leave the Europeans in a superior position; we will continue to leave our farmers at a competitive disadvantage; we will continue to sign the death warrant of tens of thousands of family farmers.

That is the hard reality of what we confront. We have before the Senate a disaster response. It is clearly called for. It is clearly necessary to meet this collapse of farm income and to meet these adverse weather conditions.

With respect to weather, in my State there are 3 million acres of land not even planted this year. There are millions more planted very late because of overly wet conditions. It may sound strange out here on the east coast. I saw a story in an east coast newspaper that in one location they are out painting the grass green because of the drought. We can’t paint a crop; we can’t go out and paint wheat and some other crops.

I was referring to the trade negotiator for the Europeans saying to me they believe we are in a trade war. They believe at some point there will be a cease-fire. They believe there will be a cease-fire in place, and they want to occupy the high ground. The high ground is market share. He is right. That is the high ground. We are headed into negotiations with them this fall, and we have no leverage. How will we possibly get a good result when they have Americas spent 7 to 1 in overall support, 60 to 1 in export subsidies? How are we going to win that negotiation? What is our leverage to change this relationship? There is no leverage. We are going to lose unless we do something.

I personally believe we have to rearm in agriculture, to put more resources into the fight, to send the Europeans a clear and unmistakable message that the United States is not going to roll over; we are not going to surrender; we are not going to wave a white flag and turn over world agricultural trade to them; we will insist on a level playing field.

The estimate is now available and contains that enactment of S. 244, which authorizes the appropriation of $244
CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE

August 3, 1999

19103

Mr. ABRAHAM. Mr. President, I rise today to discuss the Holocaust Era Assets Tax Exclusion Act amendment to the Taxpayer Relief Act of 1999. I am pleased that this amendment was cleared on both sides of the aisle and has been accepted by the full United States Senate. The passage of the Abraham-Fitzgerald-MoyNIahan-Schumer Holocaust Era Assets Tax Exclusion Act amendment by unanimous consent, demonstrates beyond shadow of a doubt the United States Senate’s firm solidarity with those who suffered during World War II. Documented, I would like to offer my sincere gratitude to Chairman Roth for his leadership and support during this process, without which we might not have had this opportunity to pass such important legislation.

The passing decades have not obscured the horrors of the Nazi regime and the horrors it committed during its 12 years in power. Many people in America and around the world live every day with memories of atrocities they suffered during this terrible time. Routed up, placed in ghettos or death camps, left to starve or tortured and murdered, millions had their lives taken from them, figuratively and literally.

We must never forget these atrocities. Thanks to the hard work of many, particularly within the Jewish community, we have numerous reminders of this inhumanity which can and must serve as a reminder of our commitment to preventing any such events from occurring ever again. But there is more that we must do. Only recently has public attention been properly directed toward another great crime of the Nazi regime and those who cooperated with it: the systematic looting of Jewish economic assets. In addition to committing outright theft and looting, the Nazis seized liquid assets that could be converted easily into cash, such as insurance policy proceeds and bank accounts. Documents discovered over the past several years show that the Nazis specifically targeted insurance policies held by Jews as a source of funding for their expansionist, totalitarian regime. I am sorry to say that some insurance companies also specifically (and illegally) targeted Jewish families. Knowing that Jewish policy holders were casualties in our war against drugs. They were fighting to keep drugs off our streets and out of our schools. They know that this is essential to our national security and our national values.

Captain Odom grew up in Brunswick, Maryland. She was a valedictorian at Brunswick High School. She was active in so many areas—from sports to theater. As a scholar, an athlete and a leader—it’s not surprising that she chose to attend the U.S. Military Academy at West Point. She wanted to use her many talents to serve her country.

She graduated from West Point in the top quarter of her class. She served in the United States Army with valor and distinction—raising to rank of Captain.

But it is not just for her accomplishments that she will be missed. I’ve spoken to her family several times in the past few days. What comes across is their pride in the kind of person that she was. She was so dear to her friends and neighbors that the entire community joined in a prayer chain to pray for her and for her family.

Captain Jennifer Shafer Odom served our country with distinction. Her courage and her sacrifice remind us that our freedom abides in the heroism of pilots like Captain Odom.

Her death was a tragedy—but her life was a triumph. She leaves behind a grieving husband, and her heartbroken parents. I ask my colleagues to join me in keeping Captain Odom and her family in our prayers.

Ms. MIKULSKI. Mr. President, it is with great sadness that I rise to pay tribute to the life of Captain Jennifer Shafer Odom. She died on a mountainside in Colombia—defending our nation and our values.

This morning, her grieving family is at Dover Air Force Base—to bring their daughter home for the last time.

On July 23, Captain Odom was on an Army reconnaissance plane that was flying near a major drug-producing region of Colombia. During bad weather, the plane crashed into a mountainside—killing the five Americans and two Colombians on board. These brave soldiers were casualties in our war against drugs. They were fighting to keep drugs off our streets and out of our schools. They know that this is essential to our national security and our national values.

Captain Odom grew up in Brunswick, Maryland. She was a valedictorian at Brunswick High School. She was active in so many areas—from sports to theater.

As a scholar, an athlete and a leader—it’s not surprising that she chose to attend the U.S. Military Academy at West Point. She wanted to use her many talents to serve her country.

She graduated from West Point in the top quarter of her class. She served in the United States Army with valor and distinction—raising to rank of Captain.

But it is not just for her accomplishments that she will be missed. I’ve spoken to her family several times in the past few days. What comes across is their pride in the kind of person that she was. She was so dear to her friends and neighbors that the entire community joined in a prayer chain to pray for her and for her family.

Captain Jennifer Shafer Odom served our country with distinction. Her courage and her sacrifice remind us that our freedom abides in the heroism of pilots like Captain Odom.

Her death was a tragedy—but her life was a triumph. She leaves behind a grieving husband, and her heartbroken parents. I ask my colleagues to join me in keeping Captain Odom and her family in our prayers.

Mr. President, it is with great sadness that I rise to pay tribute to the life of Captain Jennifer Shafer Odom. She died on a mountainside in Colombia—defending our nation and our values.

This morning, her grieving family is at Dover Air Force Base—to bring their daughter home for the last time.

On July 23, Captain Odom was on an Army reconnaissance plane that was flying near a major drug-producing region of Colombia. During bad weather, the plane crashed into a mountainside—killing the five Americans and two Colombians on board. These brave soldiers were casualties in our war against drugs. They were fighting to keep drugs off our streets and out of our schools. They know that this is essential to our national security and our national values.

Captain Odom grew up in Brunswick, Maryland. She was a valedictorian at Brunswick High School. She was active in so many areas—from sports to theater.

As a scholar, an athlete and a leader—it’s not surprising that she chose to attend the U.S. Military Academy at West Point. She wanted to use her many talents to serve her country.

She graduated from West Point in the top quarter of her class. She served in the United States Army with valor and distinction—raising to rank of Captain.

But it is not just for her accomplishments that she will be missed. I’ve spoken to her family several times in the past few days. What comes across is their pride in the kind of person that she was. She was so dear to her friends and neighbors that the entire community joined in a prayer chain to pray for her and for her family.

Captain Jennifer Shafer Odom served our country with distinction. Her courage and her sacrifice remind us that our freedom abides in the heroism of pilots like Captain Odom.

Her death was a tragedy—but her life was a triumph. She leaves behind a grieving husband, and her heartbroken parents. I ask my colleagues to join me in keeping Captain Odom and her family in our prayers.

Mr. President, it is with great sadness that I rise to pay tribute to the life of Captain Jennifer Shafer Odom. She died on a mountainside in Colombia—defending our nation and our values.

This morning, her grieving family is at Dover Air Force Base—to bring their daughter home for the last time.

On July 23, Captain Odom was on an Army reconnaissance plane that was flying near a major drug-producing region of Colombia. During bad weather, the plane crashed into a mountainside—killing the five Americans and two Colombians on board. These brave soldiers were casualties in our war against drugs. They were fighting to keep drugs off our streets and out of our schools. They know that this is essential to our national security and our national values.

Captain Odom grew up in Brunswick, Maryland. She was a valedictorian at Brunswick High School. She was active in so many areas—from sports to theater.

As a scholar, an athlete and a leader—it’s not surprising that she chose to attend the U.S. Military Academy at West Point. She wanted to use her many talents to serve her country.
KOSSOVO’S DEADLY LEGACY

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, as NATO soldiers struggle to keep the peace in Kosovo, war crimes investigators labor to identify the victims from hundreds of mass graves, and the costly effort to rebuild homes and communities gets underway, we are seeing a repeat of many of the challenges that confront any post-conflict society.

I want to begin my remarks today by noting that there is a threat that is hidden among the debris, killing and horribly injuring civilians and NATO peacekeepers indiscriminately as they work to rebuild what was destroyed in the war.

The threat is unexploded ordinance, and in Kosovo that means landmines left by the Serbs and the Kosovo Liberation Army, and cluster bombs dropped by NATO forces, mostly by American aircraft.

I have often spoken about the problem of landmines. There are tens of thousands of them scattered in the fields, forests, and roads of Kosovo.

Each one is designed to blow the legs off the unsuspecting person who triggers it. Usually it is a farmer, or child, or some other innocent person trying to rebuild a normal life. The United States is helping to clear the mines, but it is a tedious, costly, and dangerous job.

But even more than landmines, it is unexploded cluster bombs which pose the greatest danger to civilians and NATO peacekeepers in Kosovo.

Cluster bombs are a favorite anti-personnel weapon of the U.S. military, and hundreds of thousands of them were dropped by NATO planes over Kosovo. They cover wide areas, are designed to explode on impact, and they spread shrapnel in all directions.

People and lightly armored vehicles are the usual victims of cluster bombs. They are often dropped from high altitudes; they often miss the target.

Not only do they too often miss the target, between 5 and 20 percent of cluster bombs do not explode on impact. According to the State Department, there may be as many as 11,000 of these deadly bomblets currently lying on Kosovo soil, waiting for someone, anyone, to walk or drive by and set them off.

Unlike landmines, their location cannot be accurately mapped. We do not know where they are. Like landmines, it is the victim who pulls the trigger.

The usual victims of these explosions, like landmines, are innocent civilians, not military targets. And they remain active for years. In Laos, where millions of United States cluster bombs were dropped during the Vietnam war a quarter century ago, people are still losing their lives, their limbs, or going blind by touching these weapons.

Cluster bombs do not discriminate. NATO peacekeepers are not immune. Children are not immune. Approximately 5 Kosovars each day are killed by unexploded ordnance, mostly U.S. cluster bombs. Over 170 people have died this way since Operation Allied Force ended.

Even though we have known about this problem for decades, little has been done to try to minimize the harm to civilians from cluster bombs.

Recently, to its credit, the Pentagon began studying this problem. There are two things that could and should be done immediately.

First, we need to significantly reduce or eliminate the problem of dud cluster bombs that remain active and dangerous. We have the technology to make landmines self-destruct or self-deactivate after a short period of time.

Why can’t that same technology—usually a simple battery that runs out after a few hours—be applied to cluster bombs? It needs to be done.

Second, the Pentagon should revisit its rules of engagement regarding the use of cluster bombs. In Kosovo, NATO showered cluster bomb clusters over densely populated areas. Was this militarily necessary or justified? Was it consistent with international law?

Since too often they miss the target, what limits should be imposed on where and when cluster bombs can be used so the innocent are not harmed? These questions need answers.

I am not the only one concerned about this. The same concerns have been conveyed to me by military, civil, and retired members of our Armed Forces. Just recently, the House Armed Services Committee included language in its report accompanying the fiscal year 2000 National Defense Appropriation Act, which directs the Secretary of Defense to establish a defense-wide program to develop affordable, reliable self-destruct fuses for munitions.

I see a real problem, and countless tragedies, resulting from the way these munitions are designed and used. We can do better.

There is always too much death and destruction in any military conflict. The lingering threat of landmines and unexploded bombs can be significantly reduced. If implemented, the changes I have suggested could save many innocent lives in the aftermath of war.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a brief article and a letter to the editor about cluster bombs that appeared in the August 3, Washington Post, be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

[From the Washington Post, August 3, 1999]

THE REMAINS OF WAR

U.S. warplanes dropped 1,100 cluster bombs during Operation Allied Force against Yugoslavia, says the Defense Department. Each contained 202 bomblets. That’s 222,200 bomblets each. With a dud rate of 5 percent, it is likely, a DOD spokesman said, that about 11,110 bomblets are sitting around unexploded.
The problem of high dud rates in cluster bombs has been known to the military for years. The 5 percent dud rate mentioned in “NATO ‘Duds’ Keep Killing in Kosovo” (front page, July 19) must be characterized as more serious than a fact: Dud rates among cluster munitions were as high as 30 percent during the Vietnam War. Dud rates during the Gulf War were as high as 20 percent.

Laos remains littered with millions of duds in unmarked minefields. They continue to kill farmers who strike them with implements and children who mistake them for toys. Many young victims’ parents were not even born when the United States dropped these weapons in unprecedented numbers. The grandchildren of Kosovars and Serbs alike will die as they discover unexploded bombs in the future.

The military was aware of how attractive these “blunt bullets” were. Numerous similar stories came out of the Gulf War explaining that the brightly colored and appealing shapes made unexploded cluster bombs irresistible to children.

These weapons should be banned from the battlefield ensuring our nation’s technological and economic leadership in the New Economy.

First, I would like to take this opportunity to thank the Chairman for his leadership and support during this process, without which we might not have had this opportunity to pass such important legislation. In addition, I would like to express my thanks to Senator Wyden who has worked closely with me to develop this strong legislation which, I hope, will bridge the digital divide between technological haves and have-nots, ensuring that all our nation’s students, and seniors, enjoy access to quality technology and the Internet.

When I first introduced this legislation, I was joined by Senators Wyden, Hatch, Kerrey, Coverdell, Daschle, Jeffords, Lieberman, Allard, Gorton, Burns, and McConnell. Like me, they believe it will encourage companies and individuals to donate more computers to schools, helping these institutions train kids for jobs in the fast-growing high technology sector of our economy. Since then we have been joined by 14 additional colleagues from both sides of the aisle.

To President, our kids must be prepared for the jobs of the 21st century, which requires training and experience with computers and the Internet. Unfortunately, not enough schools have the equipment they need to teach the essential skills our kids and our nation need to keep our economic future bright.

Education Secretary Riley recently testified before the Joint Economic Committee, saying that he expects us to see 70 percent growth in computer and technology-related jobs in the next six years alone. In less than six months, 60 percent of all jobs will require computers.

However, Mr. President, our classrooms have too few computers. And the ones that are available are outdated and cannot run the most basic software or even access the Internet. One of the more common computers in our schools today is the Apple IIc, a model so archaic that is now on display at the Smithsonian.

Mr. President, the problem is even worse for those already disadvantaged.

A recent Commerce Department report, Falling through the Net: Defining the Digital Divide sheds a growing disparity between technological haves and have-nots. Among the study’s findings:

- The gap between white and black, Hispanic, and low-income households with incomes between $15-$35,000 per year has increased, from 8% five years ago to 13% today.
- Households with annual incomes of at least $75,000 are more than 20 times as likely to have Internet access than households at the lowest income levels.
- All this points us the need to encourage access to the Internet from classrooms, offices, and homes, as well as libraries, where access is often limited, internets, and brownstone.
- Bringing high technology to schools, especially schools in economically disadvantaged areas, and senior centers will provide students and seniors the opportunity to succeed in the next millennium that they might not have had otherwise.

The Detwiler Foundation, an organization with unparalleled status as a facilitator of computer donations to K-12 schools nationwide, estimates that in just 10 percent of the computers taken out of service each year were donated to schools, the national ratio of students to computers would be brought down to five to one, or even less.

Mr. President, this amendment, through tax incentives, would increase the amount of computer technology donated to schools.

Our amendment would do the following:
- First, allow a tax credit equal to 30 percent of the fair market value of the donated computer equipment, including software, peripheral equipment, and license.
- Increase the age limit to include equipment three years old or less. Many companies update their equipment every 3 to 5 years. Yet three year old computers equipped with Pentium-based or equivalent chips have the processing power, memory, and graphics capabilities to provide sufficient Internet and multi-media access and run any necessary software.
- Third, expand the pool of eligible donors. By expanding the number of donating companies, we could increase the number of computers available as well.

In addition, this amendment would require that donated computers include an installed operating system. Sophisticated hardware can be easily damaged during transport or even when the donating company’s private files and documents are removed. Without the operating system, it could be weeks before the school is aware of any problems concerning the donation. Further, inclusion of an operating system will ensure that students can begin using the machines as soon as they are plugged in, without further burdening school budgets with the added purchasing costs of an operating system and license.

This amendment has been endorsed by: the National Association of Secondary School Principals, Microsoft, The Information Technology Industry Council, The National Association of Manufacturers, The National Policy Taskforce Tax Credit Coalition, 11 senior executives of leading technology companies, and venture capital firms, The National Association of State Universities and Land Grant Colleges, TechNet, and the United States Chamber of Commerce.

All of these organizations agree that this amendment will provide powerful tax incentives for businesses to donate high-tech equipment to our classrooms.

Mr. President, without doubt increasing federal expenditures or creating yet another federal program or department this amendment will give all our children an equal chance to succeed in the new millennium.

1 yield the floor.

DR. GERALD WALTON, RETIRED UNIVERSITY OF MISSISSIPPI PROVOST
Mississippi. Dr. Walton has served Ole Miss for nearly forty years in several capacities at various Miss. He has been English instructor in 1959 to the position of Provost from which he is retiring.

Born and raised in Neshoba County, Mississippi, Dr. Walton has been a great servant of higher education in Mississippi. He graduated from the University of Southern Mississippi in 1956 with a degree in English. He then attended Ole Miss, where he obtained his master’s degree and then his doctorate. Dr. Walton’s next step was a stint as a teaching assistant. Once he got his foot in the door, he quickly gained the respect of his colleagues and began to move up in the ranks. He has demonstrated exemplary commitment to public education.

In addition to managing the demands of a career in academia, Dr. Walton has been dedicated to his family. He has always put his wife and three daughters first. Among the many years of all the years of all the years of all he will have for his four grandchildren.

Mr. President, Dr. Walton has stood the test of time. He has adjusted to the many changes Ole Miss and our society have experienced. Dr. Walton has always stood by his principles of right and wrong, which were first professionally tested in 1962. He was one of only a handful of faculty who publicly supported James Meredith and the integration of Ole Miss. Several members of the faculty advised him not to sign a letter of support, but as Dr. Walton would say, “I felt it was the right thing for me to do.” His character was challenged early and he passed with flying colors.

Dr. Walton’s abilities and personal demeanor have made him one of the favorite administrators on campus, a fact which is evidenced by his holding several leadership positions during his tenure. I am sure all the faculty and staff will move into the next phase of his life knowing that the words, ‘Well done, my faithful servant,’ apply to him.”

THE VERY BAD DEBT BOXSCORE

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, at the close of business yesterday, Monday, August 2, 1999, the Federal debt stood at $5,626,552,692,300.04 (Five trillion, six hundred twenty-six billion, six hundred fifty-two million, six hundred ninety-two thousand, three hundred dollars and four cents).

Five years ago, August 2, 1994, the Federal debt stood at $4,648,620,000,000 (Four trillion, six hundred forty-eight billion, six hundred twenty million).

Ten years ago, August 2, 1989, the Federal debt stood at $2,815,326,000,000 (Two trillion, eight hundred fifteen billion, three hundred sixty-two million, three hundred ten thousand, six hundred fifty billion, six hundred twenty million)

Fifteen years ago, August 2, 1984, the Federal debt stood at $1,555,502,000,000 (One trillion, five hundred fifty-two billion, five hundred million, five hundred sixty-two million).

Twenty-five years ago, August 2, 1974, the Federal debt stood at $775,930,000,000 (Seven hundred seventy-five billion, nine hundred thirty million) which reflects a debt increase of more than $5 trillion—$5,150,622,692,300.04 (Five trillion, one hundred fifty billion, five hundred sixty-two million, six hundred twenty-two million, six hundred ninety-two thousand, three hundred dollars and four cents) during the past 25 years.

TOBACCO MARKETS IN SOUTH CAROLINA

Mr. HOLLINGS. Mr. President, I rise today to discuss the opening of the 1999 tobacco marketing season in my home state of South Carolina. According to the U.S. Department of Agriculture, the United States is one of the world’s leading producers of tobacco. It is second only to China in total tobacco production. Tobacco is the seventh largest U.S. crop, with over 130,000 tobacco farms in the United States.

In South Carolina tobacco is the top cash crop, worth about $200 million annually. It also generates over $1 billion in economic activity for my state. Tobacco production is responsible for more than 40,000 jobs on over 2,000 farms. Additionally, it accounts for about one-fourth of all crops and around 13 percent of total crop and livestock agriculture in South Carolina.

It has been a hard couple of years for tobacco farmers in my state. Last year, a settlement between the State Attorneys General and five tobacco companies was completed. This settlement has created insecurity in these farmers’ lives, as well as in their communities. Once again tobacco quota was cut this year. The cut was 17 percent, which means that these farmers have seen their quota reduced by 35 percent over the last 2 years.

In recent years, we have seen a rise in tobacco imports, as domestic purchases by companies have declined. This has had a direct effect on the economy of my state. Many of the rural towns in South Carolina have grown up around producing tobacco, and decreased demand for domestic tobacco has affected them greatly. I hope this year will reverse that trend. To purchase more domestic tobacco and decrease the amount of tobacco they import. It is imperative for these rural communities’ economic stability that domestic tobacco purchases rise.

Mr. President, in conclusion I want to wish the tobacco farmers and warehousemen in South Carolina the best of luck this year. I wish that I could be down in South Carolina for this festive occasion of opening day, but duty calls. Although I can’t be there physically, they all know that I’m there in spirit. And as hard as I have worked in the past for them, they can expect me to work even harder to ensure farmers and their communities remain economically sound.

TRIBUTE TO DR. RUDOLPH E. WATERS

Mr. LOTTT. Mr. President, I want to pay tribute to a great educator who has fought diligently on behalf of all Mississippi students.

Dr. Rudolph E. Waters has been employed at Alcorn State University, the nation’s oldest historically black land-grant institution since 1957. Over the past 40 years, Dr. Waters has worked tirelessly to improve education standards.

While at Alcorn State, Dr. Waters has served as Dean of Students, Dean of Instruction, Coordinator of Title III, Provost, President, and Executive Vice President. In 1964, while serving as Dean of Instruction, he was a participant in the Institute for Academic Deans at Harvard University.

Born in Brookhaven, Mississippi, Waters received his B.S.C. from DePaul University in 1954. After studying for his master’s degree at Boston University and doing a stint at Southern Illinois University, he received his Doctor of Philosophy degree from Kansas State University in 1977.

His professional affiliations include the American Association for Higher Education, the National Association of Dr. Waters has worked with youth of all ages. He has been a member of the Commission on School Accreditation; the Commission of Interinstitutional Cooperation for Alcorn State University and Mississippi State University; and a member of the board of directors for several organizations including the Andrew Jackson Council of the Boy Scouts of America, the University Press of Mississippi and the National Commission for Cooperative Education.

Dr. Waters’s commitment to excellence has allowed him to serve on visitation teams for the Commission on Colleges of the Southern Association of Colleges and Schools and the Council on Study and Accreditation. In his work, he has advised schools across the southeast including Morris Brown College in Atlanta, Alabama Lutheran Junior College in Selma, Morris College of Sumter, South Carolina, and Natchez College in Mississippi.

He has been awarded several special honors and commendations throughout his professional career including the Outstanding Educator Award from Rust College in 1976, the Alumni Fellow Award from Alcorn State University in 1982 and the Kappan Of The Year from the Utica chapter of Phi Delta Kappa in 1993.

Dr. Waters’s writings have focused on teaching and the shaping of young minds. He authored “Implications of Studies on Class and School Size for Programs in Business Education in the Public Secondary Schools” and “A Profile of Presidents of Historically Black Colleges and Universities.” He also co-authored “Justice, Society, and the Individual: Improving the Human Condition” which was published in the 1978 Yearbook of the Association for Supervision and Curriculum Development.

Dr. Waters is not only a great educator, but a great rhetorician and historian. On numerous occasions, he has been called upon to represent the university at both state and national events. He has a great knowledge of history and a distinguished usage of rhetoric and philosophy.

On the campus, Dr. Waters is loved by administrators, students and faculty. His kindness and gentle manner are always appreciated, and his upbeat spirit and attitude are an attribute is caught by all who come in contact with him.

I commend Dr. Waters for all he has accomplished and all that he has yet to achieve. Dr. Waters is truly a shining star for Alcorn State University and for all Mississippians.

CONCLUSION OF MORNING BUSINESS

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Morning business is closed.

AGRICULTURE, RURAL DEVELOPMENT, FOOD AND DRUG ADMINISTRATION, AND RELATED AGENCIES APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 2000—RESUMED

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the pending business.

The legislative assistant read as follows:

A bill (S. 1233) making appropriations for Agriculture, Rural Development, Food and Drug Administration, and Related Agencies programs for fiscal year ending September 30, 2000, and for other purposes.

Pending:

Last (for Daschle) amendment No. 1999, to provide emergency and income loss assistance to agricultural producers.

Lott (for Cochran) amendment No. 1500 (to Amendment No. 1999), of a perfecting nature.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, I thank the distinguished Senator from North Dakota for his willingness to let the Senate resume the bill. I appreciate very much also his efforts to try to identify the ways we can develop a comprehensive response to the disaster situation and the economic crisis that exists in agriculture today.

Last evening, before the Senate adjourned, the distinguished Senator from Indiana, Mr. LUGAR, spoke for about 30 minutes, focusing the attention of the Senate, as we should be focused, on the difficulties of designing a plan to deal with this problem in agriculture that affects all commodities, all regions of the country, because there are disparities around the country in terms of economic losses, weather-related damages to crops, and market influences in the agricultural sector. All of that means some farmers are doing fairly well.

There was an article in my home State press yesterday, as a matter of fact, talking about the aquacultural industry in the State of Mississippi, and what a good year those who are producing farm-raised fish are having in comparison with the other agricultural producers in our State. This is probably replicated in many other States. Some farmers are having a good year but many are not. We are trying to identify ways we can design a program of special assistance to deal with those catastrophic situations where the Government does need to respond. It is my hope we can design a disaster program that sends money directly to farmers who need financial assistance rather than create larger Government programs with money going into the bureaucracy, or expanding conservation programs, as the first-degree amendment would do, and instead opt for the alternative that is the second-degree amendment which I have offered that sends the money directly to farmers.

I was called this morning by one of the network radio news reporters and was asked whether or not the program we are recommending is more loans for farmers. Farmers, he had heard, do not want more loans. I assured him that is not what we were proposing. We are not proposing that farmers be given more loans. We are proposing that they be given more money, direct payments, using the vehicle of the existing farm legislation that gives authority to the Secretary of Agriculture to make direct payments to farmers in the form of transition payments. We are doubling the amount of the transition payments in this second-degree amendment. That makes up the bulk of the dollar cost of the second-degree amendment. I ask that I follow Senator WELLSTONE on this side of the aisle.

Several Senators addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Minnesota.

Mr. WELLSTONE. Mr. President, actually, I do not know whether it is a jump ball. I will be pleased to go in order, if we could do it that way. I see the Senator from Kansas was ready to speak, and the Senator from North Dakota. Can we alternate from side to side?

I ask unanimous consent to follow Senator from Kansas. I didn’t mean to beat him to the punch. I am anxious to get this debate started.

Mr. ROBERTS. I have no objection to that whatsoever. I have about 15 or 20 minutes of remarks.

Mr. WELLSTONE. I will listen to my colleague and then ask unanimous consent I be able to follow.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. DORGAN. Reserving the right to object, and I will not object, but if we are going to establish an order, and if there is an appropriate back and forth, I ask that I follow Senator WELLSTONE on this side of the aisle.

Mr. COCHRAN. Rather than agree to that, and I think it is a good idea to go back and forth from one side of the aisle to the other, we do not have a time agreement, and I think it is a mistake now to try to get a time agreement. Senator GRASSLEY, I know, was on the floor making notes a while ago. He stepped off the floor just now. I wouldn’t want to jeopardize his right. He has been here for some time this morning.

I hope what we can do is, if the Senator from Kansas can proceed as suggested by the Senator from Minnesota, and then the Senator from Minnesota, at that time we can take a look and see who wants to speak. But I know the Senator from North Dakota is interested in this debate and participated in the debate yesterday. We look forward to hearing his comments again today.

Several Senators addressed the chair.

Mr. DORGAN. Reserving the right to object, I think the Senator from Mississippi misunderstood. My intention was to say if there is a request after Senator WELLSTONE to speak on that side, I understand that. But if we are going to establish an order, because I am here and would like to speak, I am happy to leave and come back at an appropriate time. If we going are to establish an order now, I would like to be in that order.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, if the distinguished Senator from Kansas will yield further, I had suggested we not try to establish an order. That was my response to the question. He asked if we were going to establish an order. My answer is, as the manager of the bill, I recommend against it at this point.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the unanimous consent request?

Mr. HARKIN. Reserving the right to object, what is the unanimous consent request?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The unanimous consent request of the Senator from Minnesota is, immediately following the remarks of the Senator from Kansas, be allowed to speak.

Mr. WELLSTONE. May I clarify this? I had the floor. I was trying to be accommodating.

Mr. COCHRAN. Yes. He was.

Mr. WELLSTONE. I simply said, if the Senator jumped in, beat him to the punch, I would be pleased to follow the Senator from Kansas. I am ready to yield, or I will keep the floor. Shall we do that?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the unanimous consent request?

Mr. ROBERTS. Who has the floor?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Minnesota has the floor and has propounded a unanimous consent request. Is there objection?

Mr. ROBERTS. Reserving the right to object, I was thanking the Senator from Minnesota for his graciousness, for his generosity of spirit, for his courtesy to the Senator from Kansas. I appreciate that very much, as the manager of the bill. I think what he suggested was eminently fair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ENZI). No objection is heard. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Kansas is recognized.

Mr. ROBERTS. I thank my colleagues.

Mr. President, I rise to discuss the need to provide emergency financial relief to our country's farmers and ranchers and to rural America in what will hopefully be short-term assistance. But I also think our producers to meet their cash flow needs while Congress also pursues the long-term objectives needed to provide a profitable agriculture sector into the 21st century.

As one Kansas farmer told me recently, 'Paw, in farm country today we are just not in very good shape for the shape we are in.'

Farmers today, as many of my colleagues are pointing out, are struggling with depressed prices and cash flow difficulties, especially farmers who do not receive program payments under the current farm bill.

We can and should provide relief to enable our producers to get through these very difficult times, and that is why I have propounded a unanimous consent request. Is there objection?

I have been urging Congress to act on a program of limited but effective assistance before this August break to send a strong signal to farmers, ranchers, and most important, the agriculture lending community. Land values have not tailed off, but the continuing stress certainly could lead to that. We need to nip that in the bud.

On the other hand, I do not believe it is in the interest of American agriculture to rewrite the current farm bill or to enact policy that will be market interfering, market disruptive, and lead us back down the road to command and control farm policy from Washington. Unfortunately, I believe both of the proposals that are before us today, do fall into that category, especially the amendment offered by the distinguished Senator from South Dakota, Mr. DASCHLE.

I will discuss the shortcomings of these proposals later, but first let me point out, this emergency assistance debate is only part of the story. The rest of the story involves the drumbeat of rhetoric we have heard from our Democrat colleagues and friends across the aisle, and the Clinton administration, who, month after month, week after week, day after day, have blamed the 1996 farm bill, called Freedom to Farm, for the collapse of commodity prices, if not the end of production agriculture and family farms in the United States.

Reading the press releases, the resulting headlines, and listening to my colleagues, you would think the current farm bill was the result of some sinister plot concocted in the dead of night.

Apparently, they would like farmers and ranchers to believe our current farm policy is responsible for record worldwide production; increasing and record yield production and productivity; the worst international economic crisis since the early 1980s; decimating our largest markets; record subsidies by the European Union, some $60 billion; weather—to much rain, too little rain, the obvious drought in the Atlantic States, La Ni˜ a and El Ni˜ a; persistent plant and crop infestation in all other regions; new technology and precision agriculture; currency changes and the value of the dollar that have reduced American exports—that would be some farm bill. But those are the causes that have actually led to the low commodity prices.

In fact, the current farm bill came after 38 full committee and subcommittee hearings in the House Agriculture Committee during my tenure as Chairman, 21 of which were held in farm country—every region, every commodity—all open-microphone listening sessions. Extensive hearings were also held here in Washington on the other side of the Capitol in the Senate Agriculture Committee. Literally thousands of farmers and ranchers voiced their opinion. They overwhelmingly stated they wanted the Government to get out of their planting decisions, to quit interfering in the marketplace, so they could make their own marketing decisions based on what was best for their farms, their ranches, according to the market. The bottom line farmers told us there was too much in command and control that came from Washington. They were tired of standing in line outside the Farm Service Agency so that Washington could tell them what to plant in exchange for a Government subsidy.

As one 89-year-old Kansas farmer told us in Dodge City—and I quote: 'I farmed for nearly 60 years and I never planted a crop that the government had not told me I could plant.

The single most important goal and rationale behind the 1996 farm bill was to restore decision making back to the individual producer, i.e., the freedom to farm.

It is true—all almost all of the speeches that have been made on the floor of the Senate, and all of the press conferences that we have had all throughout farm country—it is true our commodity prices are depressed. Markets are depressed worldwide. Everyone involved in agriculture certainly knows and is dealing with that firsthand.

But as the saying goes in farm country: Comin’ as close to the truth as a man can come without gettin’ there is comin’ pretty close but it still ain’t the truth.

Or put another way, no matter who says what, don’t believe it if it doesn’t make sense. With all due respect to my colleagues who apparently believe the 1996 Farm Act is the root cause of problems in farm country, I do not believe that is simply the case.
I understand the politics of the issue. As scarce as the truth is, the supply seems greater than demand. Ask my friend and colleague, the Secretary of Agriculture, Dan Glickman, said a few weeks ago when we attended a joint meeting—unprecedented—about the problem with regard to farm country.

There was an interesting press report about a week ago. It was on the front page of a newspaper about the severity of the agriculture situation—and it is severe. The lead of the story said:

In the wake of dismal farm income projections, agriculture officials emphasized the need for an improved long term safety net. If something is not done we are going to lose a lot of farmers.

But you know, that story was not about the United States; it was about Canada and their farm crisis. Canadian farmers are facing bleak prospects; and the same is true in Great Britain; and the same is true in Europe; and the same is true all over this world, in Latin America and South America, as well.

I do not think that Freedom to Farm caused their problems. This is a worldwide market decline, and as such is unprecedented.

What has caused the low commodity prices?

First, farmers worldwide have had good growing weather and produced record crops for 3 years in a row—unprecedented. That is what my good friend and colleague, the Secretary of Agriculture, Dan Glickman, said a few weeks ago when we attended a joint meeting—unprecedented record crops.

Second, we have experienced a world depression in regard to our export markets, both in Asia and Latin America and South America.

Third, the European Union is now spending a record $60 billion—85 percent of the world's ag subsidies—on their subsidies.

Fourth, the currency exchange rates reduced the level of farm exports and farm prices. A 16-percent appreciation in the value of the U.S. dollar has been responsible for 17 to 25 percentage points of the decline in corn and wheat prices.

Fifth, a market-oriented farm program depends on an aggressive trade policy. In regard to trade, although it is very controversial, we did not do fast track. We had a very historic agreement with China, with bipartisan work on it, and then it was pulled back; and then it was followed by the bombing of the Chinese Embassy. That was not the intent, but that is what has happened. And we are about to put agriculture last—certainly not first—in the coming WTO trade talks in Seattle. We continue to employ counterproductive sanctions that punish U.S. farmers and reward our competitors with market share and have no effect on our foreign policy.

The administration has moved in this regard. We have bipartisan support for sanctions reform, but we still cannot use the USDA export programs in regard to making those sales.

Again, the cause for these low prices is not the 1996 farm bill. Quite the contrary, under Freedom to Farm—and I want everybody to listen to this—farmers in each State represented by most of the critics of the 1996 act have and are receiving more income assistance on average than they did under the old bill.

Under Freedom to Farm, farmers themselves—not Washington—have set aside their crop production and switched to other higher value crops. Nevertheless, we hear the mantra that we do not have a safety net.

Let me point out, for the past 3 years the current farm bill we have provided transition payments—somehow or other in this debate the reality of the freedom to farm package is the critical life of the farm bill has been ignored. It is almost like they do not exist in the minds of the critics, but we have provided them. They are direct income support, and that amounts to approximately $23 billion to our farmers and ranchers for the past 3 years of the bill.

On the downside, we have also provided nearly $3 billion in what is called loan deficiency payments. That means the price goes below the loan rate. The loan rate was pretty low. We would never have imagined we would have to use the LDP program, but we had to—$3 billion. Recent estimates by the USDA are projecting possible LDPs totaling $8 billion this year.

These numbers total to nearly $34.5 billion by the end of 1999, and they do not include the $6 billion in lost market payments and disaster relief that were paid to farmers in 1998.

If you add in the $6 billion emergency package of last year, and the proposed transition payments for 1999, the total is unprecedented—unprecedented—but even before these disaster payments you still had more income under the current farm bill than farmers would have received under the old one, under the 5-year average. So from that standpoint, I want to think about the structure in the past 3 years in Minnesota, for the benefit of my dear friend and colleague, Senator Wellstone, the safety net for farmers under Freedom to Farm averaged $136 million more in total payments compared to the state average under the old bill.

In South Dakota, the safety net for farmers under Freedom to Farm averaged for the past 3 years was $58 million more than the state average under the old bill.

In North Dakota—Senator Dorgan and Senator Conrad are two Members who fight for their farmers and believe very passionately that we must address this problem—$15 million more; in Nebraska, $109 million more; and in Iowa, the safety net for farmers under Freedom to Farm in the last 3 years provided $162 million more than the previous bill.

Is it enough in regard to the problems we face that are unprecedented? Is it enough for the northern prairie States with border problems and wheat scab and weather you can’t believe? I do not know. That is for those Senators and those farmers to determine. But there has been a significant increase in that direct income assistance to those producers.

Finally, for those who like roosters at the dawn and coyotes at dusk, crow and howl that we have ripped the rug out from underneath our farmers and the safety net, let me point out that during the first 3 years of Freedom to Farm, the average amount of income assistance to hard-pressed farmers was higher in every one of the 50 States than the 5-year average for each State during the previous farm bill. Again, these higher 3-year averages do not include emergency assistance that producers received through the structure of the Freedom to Farm Act that farmers received last year and they will receive this year when we finally get to the determination of whatever emergency package we should pass.

In making these statements, let me urge my colleagues to do their homework. Take time to read an assessment of the 1996 Farm Act by the Coalition for Competitive Food in the Agriculture System, published this June. In brief, the summary concluded the act did not cause the low commodity prices—I mentioned the two causes—supported the underlying health of the farm economy, and has provided a strong safety net—yes, buttressed by the emergency legislation and one of the biggest conclusions, forces U.S. competitors to adjust to the world market.

There is a summary of this report, and I ask unanimous consent to have the summary printed in the Record, as follows:
AN ASSESSMENT OF THE FAIR ACT

Food and agriculture remains the US economy's largest single economic sector accounting for $1 trillion in national income, and employing 18 percent of the nation's entire work force. Almost one-fourth of US econyomic growth has shifted from 52 MMT below trend in the early 1990s to 11 MMT in the latter half of the 1990s. As a response to record high prices, the SAF FAIR Act was introduced in 1996 and enacted in 1997. It was designed to provide farmers with a strong safety net, coupled with the freedom to plant for the market. It ended the coun-

The passage of the FAIR Act coincided with sea changes in the global economy, which have dramatically affected the US ag-cultural economy. Years of worldwide economic growth, particularly in middle income developing countries, led to rising demand for meat and animal feed. Increased market access achieved by the Uruguay Round Ag-cord, as well as regional agreements such as NAFTA, allowed US farmers to take advantage of that growth overseas. New technologies (biotechnology, precision farming, no till agriculture) were increasing crop yields at the same time as record high prices led farmers in the United States and overseas to expand acreage.

Two years after the enactment of the FAIR Act, the global economy suffered its worst international crisis since the early 1980s. The fast growing Asian economies, which together are the largest single market for US exports, were the fastest growers of US food and agricultural products, suffering dramatic reversals, as did Russia.

Asian demand was down 17 percent in 1998, and was up 25 percent this year. Ironically, sales to Mexico were up 17 percent, and NAFTA is the fastest growing market for US farmers.

The sharp drop in demand for food and agricultural products coincided with record harvests in the United States, Brazil, Argentina and other food producing nations. Between 1995 and 1997, world wheat production has shifted from 55.4 MMT below trend to 31.7

MMT above trend—an increase in supply of nearly 100 MMT. World corn production has shifted from 52 MMT below trend in the early 1990s to 36 MMT above trend in the late 1990s—an increase of 88 MMT. Soybean production has shifted from similar trends, with production 7 MMT below trend in the early 1990s, and 11 MMT in the latter half of the 1990s. As a result of these huge shifts in supply, world prices for all major commodi-

ities have plummeted because our farmers have not followed suit. World stocks are not expected to return to normal levels of storage during the 5-year period from 1992 to 1998

when the United States harvested 12 million fewer acres of soybeans and, during the same period, Argentina and Brazil increased their production by 14 million acres. Guess which countries are now the largest competitors of the United States in the soybean market.

Critics will also claim that plantings and stockpiling. Under the terms of the FAIR Act, $35.6 billion will be provided to farmers through direct income payments over seven years, for an average of $5 billion annually. In addition, expenditures under the commodity loan program, which makes up the difference between the loan rate and a lower market price, have added an additional $1 billion annually, an amount that could reach $3.5 billion in 1999 alone. In addition, the disaster relief and market loss payments during 1998 added an additional $6 billion in government payments to farmers. In all, payments under the FAIR Act have totaled $35.6 billion per year for the past 5 years.

The FAIR ACT FORCES U.S. COMPETITORS TO EXPAND AROUND THE WORLD MARKET

In the past, when the United States took land out of production in response to low prices, our competitors in Brazil, Argentina and other countries simply expanded their crop acreage to take up the slack. When the United States raised its support prices in the early 1980s, farmers in other countries took advantage of the price floor set by the United States, to expand their production. In effect, the United States functioned as the Saudi Arabia of the World grain market. Those policies provided a safety net not just to US farmers and consumers, but to farmers around the world.

Under the FAIR Act, U.S. farmers face no government-mandated set-asides. As a result, they have brought nearly 10 million acres back into production. With the safety net of the marketing loan in place, U.S.

farmers are guaranteed to receive the loan rate, even if world prices fall to lower levels.

This means that farmers in other countries will be able to receive the full benefit of those higher prices.

This means that farmers in other countries will be able to receive the full benefit of those higher prices.

This means that farmers in other countries will be able to receive the full benefit of those higher prices.

This means that farmers in other countries will be able to receive the full benefit of those higher prices.

This means that farmers in other countries will be able to receive the full benefit of those higher prices.

stocks will depress prices. Do we then extend the loan rate or raise it, leading to an endless cycle, leading to a return to price supports and the Washington telling farmers to set aside ground to control production and limit the budgetary costs?

How do higher loan rates help producers who have suffered crop failures and have crops underneath the loan rate?

We had low prices in the mid-1980s. As a matter of fact, in 1985, and, it seems to me, in 1986, we spent almost $25.9 billion. We tried PIK and Roll; we tried certificates; we tried set-asides. We tried everything under the sun. We passed the 1985 act dealing with unprecedented world conditions. So we tried that. We had the higher loan rates.

It is one thing to propose a new farm program, albeit we haven’t seen anything too specific. But how do you pay for the budget cost, notwithstanding the emergency declaration of this legislation, which I think is appropriate? There was no request from the President, after 3 years of complaining, no request from Secretary Glickman for additional funding. It seems to me it is one thing to propose changes in the farm bill in the form of increased loan rates, however you want to change it—or, as the President says, we just need a better farm bill—and another to propose how we pay for it.

The reason I am bringing this up is, I think we need a little truth in budgeting, aside from the proposed emergency legislation that we need. Do the advocates of change pay for the new program, set-asides, and increased loan rates or whatever it is in regards to the new farm program by taking away the transition payments now provided to farmers from Farm Bill income? When farmers willingly give up the transition payments, direct income assistance, and go back to the days of standing in line at the Farm Service Agency, filling out the forms and the paperwork, and set aside 20 percent or more of their acreage?

What do we tell farmers who have on their own made historic planting changes from primary crops in the past to crops of higher value—oil seeds, sorghum, dry peas, navy beans, soybeans, and, yes, cotton? Under Freedom to Farm, I tell my distinguished friend and colleague from Mississippi, in the heart of cotton country, we have 40,000 acres in Kansas that are now in cotton production. When Steve Foster wrote the song “Those Old Cotton Fields Back Home,” he was talking about Kansas. We have the most cost-efficient cotton in the world because the temperatures are so low, you don’t have to use pesticides on the insects. None of this would have happened without the flexibility in regards to the new farm bill.

The reduction in wheat acreage going to other crops has been dramatic in 1997 to 1998: 15 percent down in North Dakota, 15.5 percent in South Dakota; 18 percent in Kansas; 18 percent in Minnesota; 15 percent in Texas. These are farmer-made decisions, and the changes in American agriculture have exceeded all expectations. Farmers have switched because it made economic sense.

The plain and simple and sometimes painful truth is that all U.S. producers are no longer the most efficient producers of certain crops, now wheat, in the world. That is true of other crops. But if you give the farmer the proper research and the proper export tools and the proper precision agriculture tools and the proverbial so-called level and fair trading field—which does not exist right now—he can be.

But we must also have the flexibility and the predictability to market signals. So instead of looking back to the failed policies of the past, I think we must look to a long-term agenda for the future that allows our farmers and ranchers to be successful. That agenda includes most of what was promised during the passage of the Freedom to Farm Act—promises, promises, promises. I held up this ledger. I had two of them. On one side it said, if we go to a market-oriented farm program, these are the things we will have to do to complement it in order that it may work. And we listed them. That was the other side of the ledger.

Unfortunately, I am sad to say that those promises have not been kept by either side of the aisle. If I get a little thin skinned in regards to all the criticism in regards to the act that we put together, I am more than a little unhappy in regards to the Republican and Democratic leadership and the lack of peer pressure. This, I think, is a promise that would complement Freedom to Farm, things that attract bipartisan support from all of us who are privileged to represent agriculture.

I am talking about an aggressive and consistent trade policy, fast track legislation, sanctions reform with authority to use USDA export programs, a strategy for WTO negotiations that puts agriculture first, a renewed effort to complete the trade breakthrough we had with China. I am talking about tax legislation. Some of it is in the tax bill. Unfortunately, we have a political fusing and feuding exercise, and some of these will not actually take place—100-percent self-employed health insurance deductibility, farm savings accounts. If we had farm savings accounts, this situation would be tough but it wouldn’t be grim.

Capital gains and estate tax reform. I am talking about crop insurance reform. Senator Kerrey and I have what I think is a very important insurance bill. I am talking about regulatory reform and about commonsense management of the Food Quality Protection Act. And, yes, I am talking about reasonable emergency assistance to provide income assistance due to the unprecedented record crops, EU subsidies, world depression of the export markets. And that brings us to the two proposals we have before us today.

Let me point out that, given the dynamic change in agriculture and world markets, no farm bill has ever been perfect or set in stone. That has been the case with the seven farm bills I have been directly involved with since I have had the privilege—seven of them. That statement is buttressed by the fact that, in the last 10 years, there have been no less than 13 emergency supplemental or disaster bills. Given the current drought in the Atlantic States and our price and cash flow problems due to the unprecedented developments I have already discussed, there are going to be 14. It is just what form it will take. But it seems to me we should not be in the business of spending more than is necessary, or making changes in farm policy that will be market disruptive, or that will lead us back down the road to command and control agriculture in Washington. That, of course, depends on your definition.

There are several questions, or concerns, I have in regard to the emergency assistance package introduced by my friend, Senator Harkin, and my friend from Mississippi, the distinguished chairman of the Agriculture Subcommittee. The income loss assistance that has been proposed by Senator Harkin, as I understand it, has a fixed amount of $6.4 billion made available. But it sets up a parallel supplemental loan deficiency payment system with a separate $40,000 payment. It provides that payments be made to producers with failed acreage, or acreage prevented from plantings, based on actual production history, and provides for advance payments to producers as soon as possible. And we want that.

I think we are headed toward a train wreck in regards to the payment limitation. One of the major concerns among farmers is the $75,000 payment limitation on an existing $7 billion to $8 billion worth of loan deficiency payments. Now we are trying to cram an additional $6.4 billion through a payment limitation half that size, and it seems to me we are going to have some real problems. Per unit payments will go up, and a smaller and smaller percentage of production will be covered.

Now, if this new payment form is supposed to go to those who have not been hurt, it is ironic that we are going to see 85 percent of the producers who produce the field crops shortchanged to bulk up payments to those that really create 15 percent of the crops. This isn’t the big producer/small producer argument. I think the penalty will reach down to the medium-size commercial farmer, while the part-timer with a job in town may reap a windfall.
Discretion to the Secretary. Last year’s disaster program was predicated on giving the Secretary maximum discretion to use his expertise to create a fair and speedy program. The delivery of disaster payments was delayed for 8 months. This program relieves even more heavily on the Secretary. I hope that Secretary Glickman has magic in the way he can get the payments out.

The Secretary must take a fixed amount of money and fairly divide it among producers; guess in August the total production of a variety of crops for the year; determine which producers will have failed acres and determine their actual production history; calculate how a $40,000 payment limit will affect the division of the funds; create a per bushel, pound, or hundred-weight payment for crops not yet harvested; determine how to make advanced payments; and he must prorate payments when and if all the guesses happen to turn out to be wrong.

Last year, with a far simpler task, the Secretary decided to do it and waited until June to make the payments. Let me point out that transition payments under the AMTA supplemental plan went out in 10 days. They were delivered to producers in 10 days. Direct income assistance: A farmer could take the check and show it to his banker and say: I can make it through the next year.

WTO limits. Almost unnoticed in the farm crisis is the rapid increase in payments made to producers. The United States is rapidly approaching the limit allowed in the treaty for payments defined in something called the amber box as trade distorting. All payments associated with ad hoc emergency or commodity loans, including LDPs, are counted in the amber box. They are not counted in the AMTA box if you provide farmers direct assistance due to unprecedented things. That will nearly double LDPs allowed in the treaty for payments deemed trade distorting. All payments advanced payments; and he must prorate payments when and if all the guesses happen to turn out to be wrong.

I have already mentioned the payment limitation concern. I must say, if you look at the Harkin amendment, it not only deals with emergency assistance—and Senator HARKIN truly believes we ought to rewrite the farm bill, and he is doing that in regard to his amendment. We have peanuts, dairy payments, and livestock payments; and I am assuming most of it would go to the hog producers, but we means test that again. We have set-aside authority and we have disaster funding, where we set aside whether we backfill the 1998 disaster assistance. Then we have money to establish a permanent program for land that has been flooded for continuous years. With all due respect to my colleagues from the Northern Plains, we farmed a land, free of a land, in Kansas that has been covered with water for 3 years; it is called a lake.

We have millions for tobacco producers. My golly, are we going back to 1982 when we all decided in the House of Representatives—and we were all there at that time—we were going to get the Government out of subsidizing tobacco farmers? Are we back to that? Be careful what you ask for. So we have included tobacco in this bill. I am not making any aspersions on the 19th century tobacco producers, but, folks, that is not PC. I am not sure about that one. And then we have mandatory price reporting, something I have supported in the Agriculture Committee, with some changes made by Senator KLEIN, but wanting funding for legislation and we haven’t even marked it up yet.

Then we have mandatory country-of-origin labeling for meat and vegetables. Right now, we have a tremendous problem with the European Union and all countries in Europe on GMOs, genetically modified organisms. People in white coats are descending upon the fields over in Great Britain, ripping up the GMO crops. The problem is, they made a mistake, and ripped up the wrong crop. We ought to go to sound science and work out these problems, and we are trying to do that.

In regard to the trade problems we have—which Secretary Glickman talks about and most aggie’s are worried about—we are going to put this in country-of-origin labeling on top of that issue. I don’t think it has really been proven that our producers will increase prices and that it will result in higher retail prices.

We have $200 million for a short-term set-aside. I don’t want to go back to set-asides; I think that would be counterproductive. Some of these provisions have been included in the bill.
Of course, the payments were up when we were doing well. But the whole point of what we had in our farm bill before it came to fall, or when we had some countercyclical measures to make sure there was some price stability. That is the point.

The point is that when part of our export market collapses, and when family farmers can't make a go of it, or when you continue to have to deal with conglomerates that control almost all phases of the food industry—when I hear my good friend from Kansas talking about laws of supply and demand, I smile. Family farmers in the Midwest want to know, where is Adam Smith's invisible hand? Family farmers in the Midwest want to know, where is the competition? Because when they look to whom they buy from, and when they look to whom they sell to, they are riveted with a few large conglomerates that dominate the market.

I say to my good friend from Iowa that in Fayette County—I guess there is a town of Fayette also in northeast Iowa—I went to a pig roast. This farmer said: I am out of business. This is the last pig. This is it for me. Our pork producers are facing extinction, and the packers are in hog heaven.

We have a frightening concentration of power. All of my colleagues who are strong free enterprise men and women, all my colleagues who talk about the importance of the market and competition, ought to look at what my friend from Kansas talks about as a painful truth, which is we don't have Adam Smith's invisible hand and law of supply and demand. Everywhere we look in this industry, you have conglomerates that have moved in to the dominant, exercising their raw political and economic power over our producers, over consumers, and I also argue over taxpayers.

In all due respect, when my friend from Kansas says we ought to look at the failed policies of the past, I want to say that we ought to look at the failed policy of the present.

My colleagues on the other side of the aisle can talk about anything they want to talk about. All of it is relatively important. Crop insurance is important. We can do better. We can do better in a lot of different areas. But let's not talk about failed policies of the past. Let's talk about the failed policy of the present because that is what farmers are dealing with. Family farmers are going under, and time is not neutral.

I want to shoot it from the mountain top of the Senate in response to the remarks of my good friend and colleague from Iowa. The most important thing that we can do is rewrite that farm bill. The most important thing we can do is make the kind of structural changes we need to make so that family farmers can get a fair shake because right now what we did in that “freedom to fail” bill is take away any opportunity a farmer has to have any kind of leverage and bargaining in the marketplace with these large grain companies. And, in addition, we took away any kind of safety net.

So when people and the support market isn't there, although we are doing fine and the exporters are doing well, our family farmers aren't.

The point is that for those farmers who do not have huge reserves for capital and aren't the conglomerates, they go under.

Senators and United States of America, this debate about this emergency package—and more importantly the debate that is going to take place this fall about how we write a farm bill—is a debate that is as important as we can have for anyone who values the family farm structure of agriculture because we will lose it all if we don't change this course of public policy.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, will the Senator yield on that point?

Mr. WELLSTONE. I am pleased to yield.

Mr. HARKIN. Just for a question.

I think the Senator from Minnesota put his finger on it. When I heard the Senator from Kansas speak, it seemed to me that what he was saying was that we are going to leave farmers and ranchers at the mercy of the grain companies, the packers, the wholesaler, the retailers, and the processors. They are making money in the domestic market, but the farmers are not.

I ask the Senator from Minnesota: Does the Senator believe that it is a viable responsibility for our government to ensure that family farmers have some bargaining power, some power out there in the marketplace so that they can get a better share of the consumer dollar that is being spent in America today?

I add to that, I say to the Senator, that under previous farm programs—and under what we have been advocating in terms of raising loan rates and providing for storage and things such as that—they provided that farmers have a little bit better bargaining power in terms of selling their crops, and thus hopefully getting a better portion of their income from the marketplace.

I thought it was a curious argument for a conservative from Kansas to be making that the measure of the success of the Freedom to Farm bill is how the Government is going out to help farmers. I find that a curious argument.

My question to the Senator is whether or not it is a legitimate role for the Federal Government to play to help level the playing field between farmers and those who buy their products from the farm.

Mr. WELLSSTONE. Mr. President, let me respond to my friend from Iowa. First, I agree it is ironic to hear some of our colleagues try to boast about direct payments to farmers when they talk about the “freedom to fail” bill. By definition, if we are spending $17 billion a year for payments to farmers, the market is not doing a very good job.

Second, let me say to my colleague from Iowa, when I hear my good friend from Kansas talk about the law of supply and demand, I smile because the family farmers throughout the country want to know where is Adam Smith's invisible hand? Where is the competition? It misses the very essence of our debate. Conglomerates basically control almost all phases of the food industry, whether it is from whom the farmers buy to or whom they sell.

There are two questions: No. 1, how can we give family farmers some kind of leverage in the marketplace? We tried to do that in some of our past farm bills through the loan rate, and also a safety net, to try and deal with farmers when prices plummeted. Second is the compelling case for antitrust action.

Let me say we are going to pass a bill that will provide some assistance to farmers, but there are two questions: What kind of assistance? I will analyze that in a moment. The challenge before the Senate is the kind of assistance. I think there are pretty huge differences. In our bill, the Democrats' bill, we have about $2 billion in assistance for disaster relief. In case anybody hasn't noticed, we have drought in the country. We have people who are devastated, people who cannot grow anything. We have some disaster relief, $2 billion. I don't think our colleagues on the other side have anything in that bill, in which case I say to colleagues when they vote on these amendments, it would seem to me Members would be better off to vote against an amendment purporting to provide emergency disaster relief that doesn't take into account the weather. Not only are my colleagues not taking into account the failed policy of the present, they are not taking into account the drought.

My second point: I far prefer, to the extent we can, to make sure the assistance gets to those farmers who need it the most. The AMTA payments tend to go to the larger producers and tend to go to land owners, even if they are not producers. It is quite different than LDP, I would like the LDP targeted, as targeted as possible.

There are some differences between these new proposals. The Republican plan is similar to the tax plan. They parcel out benefits in inverse relationship to need. What farmers are saying to me in Minnesota or when I was in Iowa this past weekend: Look, we want to get the price. We want to deal with the price crisis. We want to have a future.

If you are going to provide some assistance, I didn't hear farmers talking...
I yield the floor.

Mr. GRAMM. I am happy to yield.

Mr. BYRD. The Senator is very gracious to offer that. I do not ask that. However, I wanted to have an understanding as to how we are proceeding. I believe I probably was on the floor ahead of most others other than the Senator. If the Senators are alternating, does the Senator from North Dakota wish to go next?

All I want is a chance to speak at some point.

Mr. DORGAN. Let me ask the Senator to yield for a question.

Mr. GRAMM. I am happy to yield to the Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. DORGAN. I say to the Senator from West Virginia, I sought an answer to that question some while ago. I have been on the floor an hour. I stepped off the floor for a moment. The Senator from Mississippi indicated the Senator from Iowa, Mr. GRASSLEY, perhaps wanted to speak next. In any event, I think perhaps it would be helpful if we established some order, and I am willing to accept whatever order the managers wish to establish. If I am not able to speak now or soon, I will ask consent to be recognized at 2:15 to speak.

Mr. BYRD. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. GRAMM. I am happy to yield to the Senator.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I propose the following unanimous consent request, if it is agreeable to the Senator from Texas, the Senator who is managing the bill, and Senator HARKIN. I am happy to report that after Mr. GRAMM has completed his remarks, Mr. DORGAN be recognized, then Senator GRASSLEY, and then I be recognized.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BYRD. I thank all Senators. I thank the Senator from Texas.

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, I did not come over this morning to get into a political debate about farm policy, but I want to make the point that I believe we are drifting far afield from any kind of rational farm policy in what we are doing. Maybe some would view it as an unkind judgment, but in my opinion we are engaged now in a political bidding contest where we simply are seeing figures made up on both sides of the aisle, I would say, where we are competing to show our compassion and competing to show our compassion with somebody else’s money. I would be moved into thinking this was pure compassion if we were debating giving our own money. But since we are debating giving the taxpayers’ money, it is hard to be compassionate with somebody else’s money.

Having said that, I see this farm problem a little bit differently than my many colleagues. Since I do not think this point has been made in the debate, I want to make it. First of all, it is clear, and I think everybody is in agreement on this, that American agriculture has been affected by the Asian financial crisis and that the demand for American farm products from Asia has fallen off by 40 percent. The demand for farm products is what economists call “inelastic.” That is, when the price changes, it doesn’t have an immediate, instantaneous or substantial impact on demand. So this decline in the demand for products in Asia has had a substantial impact on price.

Obviously, we are all hopeful that Asia is going to recover from its financial crisis and that they are going to be back in the market and that this part of the factors that are driving down farm prices will go away over time. That is the basic logic of the proposal that has been offered by Senator COCHRAN. It basically is the belief that the Asian financial crisis is solved, as Asians get used to, once again, consuming American farm products—the best rice, the best meat, the best cotton; as they get used to the joys of wearing cotton underwear made of American cotton—they are going to buy a lot more of it and even everything is going to come back and prices are going to be good again. To the extent that thesis is correct, the right thing to do is to adopt the Cochran substitute.

The Democrat substitute is really based on the logic that there are no markets. Our Democrat colleagues do not largely believe in markets and do not, by and large, believe in the basic principles of economics. They would rather the Government make the price of farm products. So it is not surprising that their substitute has grown from $9.9 billion to $10.7 billion, 50 percent bigger than Senator Cochran, but they would basically begin to take steps to go back to the old supply mangement only. Where the Government would be the setter of prices and where we would, in essence, take American agriculture ultimately under this program out of the world market.

The problem with that, besides having a substantial impact on the state of the American economy, is that primarily, while there are many farm State Senators, there are relatively few farm district Members of the House. If we go back to supply management, given the apportionment of representation in the House, we will never set prices that will be high enough to produce prosperity in rural America.

So I know all of the rhetoric, going back to the 1920s, much of which has very leftist roots, would lead many of our Democrat colleagues to believe if we could get Government to manage agriculture, we could make it great.
The problem is—and I say this as a per-onson representing an agricultural State, a State that most farm products, the only State in the Union that produces both cane and beet sugar, a State that is in virtually every kind of ariculture that you can name—the plain thrust is that agriculture does not have eough political clout, day in and day out, to get the Government to set prices high enough that we will ever have true prosperity in rural America.
That is why I am never supporting going back to the Government managing agriculture.

The only course we have to make rural America not just a good place to live—because it is the best place to live. When I ultimately leave Washington—and I hope to be here as long as Strom Thurmond, which would give me another 40 years—I do not ever plan to live in a town that has a stoplight again. I prefer rural America. I think it is the best place to live. I want to make it one of the best places to make living, which is why I was for Freedom to Farm and why the underlying philosophy of the Cochran program is superior.

It does not appeal to people who want Government to manage things, who believe that Government can do it better.
But the plain truth is, without being unkind, there is only one place in the entire world where we have dedicated adherents, and that is on the floor of the Senate and the floor of the House of Representatives. Everywhere else in the world it has been rejected.
But here it still has dedicated adher-ents, people who believe if we just let Government run things—health care, ariculture, whatever—that it would go better. I do not believe that is true.

But I want to go beyond simply pointing out the superiority of the Cochran approach to the Democrat subsitute. I want to raise a question about both because there is another force at work that nobody is talking about, and with which we are going to have to come to grips. Frankly, in rep-technology, driven by basic science. It is something about which I worry.

It is a blessing that creates a problem. The blessing is that while America is in the midst of a technological explosion, technology in agriculture is growing much faster than in technology in the economy as a whole. Productivity per farm worker is growing twice as fast as the productivity of the worker in the economy as a whole. So there is an underlying factor which is driving down farm prices which has nothing to do with the Asian financial crisis. That underlying factor is the explosion of farm technology. Farm technology, by driving down the cost of production, is driving down the cost of farm products by increasing supply.

Let me give an example of it. We have fewer chickens in America today than we had 10 years ago. Yet we are producing more poultry. We have fewer pigs today and yet we are producing more pork. How is that possible? Because of a technological revolution that is occurring in American agriculture.

As I look at agriculture and as I look at the use of sensors, as I look at the use of new technology, nobody can know the future but it seems to me looking at it—the only way we can see the future is by looking to the past.
Looking at the recent past, it seems to me we are probably on the edge of an explosion of technology driven by biotechnology, driven by sensing devices.
We are probably looking at a 20-year period where the natural trend in farm prices, independent of the Asian financial crisis, will be down.

In looking at the current law, it seems to me that we are probably looking at an income level that is basically $1.9 billion below that level.
If you look at the last 5 years of average farm income, it has been $46.7 billion. So in looking at that number, we are looking at an income level where we are about $2.9 billion below that level.

Part of the story that is not being told in this debate, as we sort of jockey back and forth as to who can tell the grimmest tale in agriculture, is that the current farm program is doing a lot for American agriculture.

Last year, the American farm program, in dealing with a decline in prices, put into American agricultural $12.2 billion of income. Under the existing programs that are in place, through guaranteed minimum prices, and other programs, we are looking already, without any legislative action, because of the way the current law is written, at the taxpayer paying $16.6 billion of payments to farmers. Other people who work in agriculture estimates that net farm income next year is $43.8 billion, 39 percent of that estimate is made up of payments that are being made under the existing farm program.

Especially when our Democrat colleagues get up and talk about the sky falling, they completely leave out of the story that under existing programs we have guaranteed minimum prices, through our loan program, that will mean $16.6 billion of payments to farmers from the Federal Treasury to the American farmer without any legislative action whateversoever by the Congress.

So I guess the first question that I pose is, that if farm income today is $2.9 billion below the average of the last 5 years, and if the income for the last 5 years has been the highest level of income in the modern era, Why are we talking about $10.7 billion of new payments to American agriculture?

Where is the additional 20 percent come? And $10.7 billion added to the level of farm income today would put average farm income substantially above the average for the last 5 years,
congressional record—senate

August 3, 1999

substantially above the average for the last 8 years, and substantially above the average of farm income in the modern era of America. From where did the $10.7 billion come? It seems to me that the $10.7 billion figure is simply a political figure. It started out fairly low at the beginning of the year. It has gotten bigger every month. I now understand that in the House, Democrats are asking for $12.9 billion. So what is happening is we are in a bidding contest.

Let me also say that in terms of the $6.9 billion that has been proposed on our side of the aisle, I do not see the logic of that number, either. It seems to me that since we have a loan program which in some cases has yet to be triggered because we have not harvested the crops, so that we do not know what farm in period, and not to the farmer.

and in reality, much of this money satuating, in some cases, several times; if you spent the money by giving it to farmers, you'd have to do this. I know people are going to object to the fact that someone would actually try to raise concerns about the actual numbers. We are talking about in American agriculture, when we are engaged in a debate about trying to outbid each other and spending money. This is from the Economic Research Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture. This is their agricultural outlook, just published in July of this year on page 55.

Let me tell my colleagues why this is important, and then I will go through the numbers. Why this is important is, we are basically pointing fingers back and forth saying we are not doing enough for American agriculture and that we should spend $10.7 billion or we ought to spend, in the House, $12.9 billion. I will go over a few figures which stand out to me in that somehow what is being shown in the actual numbers about agriculture and what is being debated on the floor of the Senate are two entirely different things.

Facts are persistent things. In listening, especially to our colleagues on the Democrat side of the aisle, one would assume that farm assets are falling right through the floor. One would assume we are virtually back in the Depression and the Dust Bowl and that USDA initial estimates for 1999 would be falling dramatically. Anybody who is listening to this debate would believe that is true.

Well, it is not true. In fact, in 1998, the preliminary number is that the total value of farm assets was $1,124,700,000,000. The initial estimate by USDA—is this the Clinton administration—is that farm assets at the end of this year will be $1,140,300,000,000. So while we are talking about the world coming to an end in agriculture, we have to junk the farm program and go back to letting Government dictate farm prices and engage in artificial support of agriculture and basically turn agriculture into one giant cooperative on the Soviet style plan because of the collapse in American agriculture. The reality is that we are projecting farm assets to rise this year and not fall. In fact, last year was a terrible year in agriculture. We had a huge farm payment at the end of the year as part of our emergency spending.

What do you think happened to farm assets last year? They went up, not down. They rose from $1,088,800,000,000 to $1,124,700,000,000. Something about this picture doesn't fit.

Let me go on. What do you think is happening to financial assets held by American agriculture will actually rise this year from $50 billion to $51 billion. Now, what do you think is happening to farm debt? You listen to all of this doomsday scenario from our Democrat colleagues about how we have to junk the farm program and go back to a Government-run program, you would think farmers and ranchers are having to sell off financial assets, cash in their retirement, withdraw money out of the bank, close down their IRAs to try to stay in agriculture.

Facts are persistent things. In fact, we are projecting that financial assets held by American agriculture will actually rise this year from $50 billion to $51 billion. Now, what do you think is happening to financial assets held by American agriculture? These are financial assets. What is the justification for all these program proposals? The justification, you would think, would be that farm debt is exploding; right? We are having a crisis?

Does anybody listening to this debate believe that farm debt in America is not exploding? You would never believe it wasn't exploding. You would think farmers are going deeper and deeper into debt. You would be wrong. In fact, the USDA estimate is that farm debt will actually decline in 1999, and it will decline from $170.4 billion to $168.1 billion.

What would you think would be happening to real estate debt? In listening to our Democrat colleagues talk about how we have to have the Government take over agriculture and go back to a program where you basically work off Government edicts because of a collapse in agriculture, you would think real estate debt is rising. People are having to borrow money against their land. They are having massive foreclosures. Could anybody listening to this debate not believe that real estate debt was exploding in America? They couldn't. They would know it had to be happening somewhere. It is a persistent thing. The fact is that real estate debt is actually declining in America. The projection by USDA is that the amount of real estate debt that farmers and ranchers have will decline from $576.6 billion to $574.7 billion of Agricultural debt.

Could anybody listen to this debate and not believe that non-real estate debt that farmers have is exploding?
That is not possible. You listen to this debate, you have to conclude that every farmer in America is going deeper and deeper and deeper into debt.
They are borrowing money. They are losing money. There is a catastrophe, a crisis, and we have to have Governtment take over agriculture. But as-to agriculture, fundamentally all the numbers, non-real estate debt in agriculture is actually projected to decline in 1999 from $82.6 billion to $82.4 billion.

Finally, there could be no doubt about it, listening to this debate. Eq-ity in farms and ranches in America has to be plummeting. There is no way that you can have all these catestrophes we have heard about, leading us to the argument that we need to spend in excess of $10 billion right now in agriculture, and we need to junk our whole export production-based farm system to go back to a program that we couldn't make work in a simpler era when the Government basically ran ag-ticulture. No one could doubt, not one person who listened to this debate, if you did a survey, not one person in 1,000 would have any doubt that farm equity, the equity of farmers and ranchers, what they own, has to be declining as a result of this agricultural crisis. But it is not so. In fact, equity, by the amount of Agricultural equity, is projected to not only rise but to rise substantially in 1999, to rise from $564.3 billion to $614.2 billion. How can farm equity be rising when we have a crisis of such magnitude that we are debating having the Government take over American agriculture?

Well, the reality is, it is rising.
Let me mention two other figures. Could anybody listening to this debate believe that the debt-to-equity ratio in American agriculture, which is growing twice as fast in terms of technological advances as the whole American economy, if this is going to mean that for 20 years we are going to tend to have downward pressure on agriculture prices because of expansion in production and lower cost of production, to be in essence subsidizing and encouraging people to come into agriculture, or stay in it if they are inefficient, we are working counter to what we know has to happen for agricultural prosperity to occur.

The reason I went through all these numbers is, we should not be having the Government take over agriculture. No one could doubt, not one person listening to this debate, if you can have all these catastrophes we have heard about, leading us to the argument that we need to spend in excess of $10 billion right now in agriculture. We ought to be talking about risk management and what we can do to deal with it. We ought to be talking about regulatory reform, where regulations are having a heavier and heavier burden on American agriculture. But we are not. What are we doing is talking about spending vast sums of money when we have no documentation of the exact magnitude of our problem or the distribution of that problem.

Now, I know the vote is going to be on, and I know we are going to have it this afternoon. I know we are going to have an opportunity to spend $10.7 billion to junk the American farm program and go back to supply management. I know we are going to have a vote on spending $6.9 billion to keep the current system and just allocate $6.9 billion to be given away if and when, later on, the administration gets around to allocating it. But surely the raised question by the people who are overriding the natural adjustment mechanism whereby, as people can produce more and more product with fewer inputs, we are going to see a decision by USDA is that farm income will increase from $954.3 billion to $971.2 billion. How can farm income for the last 5 years has been $46.7 billion. The projection by USDA is that farm income will be $43.8 billion, and the adoption of either one of these amendments will mean that farm income next year will be above the average for the last 5 years.

Why is that a problem? It is a problem because if I am right that this exploration of technology in agriculture, which is growing twice as fast in terms of technological advances as the whole American economy, if this is going to mean that for 20 years we are going to tend to have downward pressure on agriculture
prices because of expansion in production and lower cost of production, to be in essence subsidizing and encouraging people to come into agriculture, or stay in it if they are inefficient, we are working counter to what we know has to happen for agricultural prosperity
to occur.

The reason I went to the trouble to come over here and raise all these unpleasant facts in the midst of a debate about giving money is that there is one other figure that just is extraordinary to me. What would you think is happening to the amount of land being rented by American farmers? Prices are falling. We are falling behind last year, and we had an emergency spending bill. What would you think would be happening to cash rents? Well, everything I know about economics and about agriculture would tell me that, knowing what happened last year with prices declining and knowing the projections for this year, cash rents would have gone down. Everything you know would suggest that. But, in reality, cash rents are up—up—so that farmers are spending more money renting land in 1999 than they did in 1998. What does that suggest? Well, it suggests that what we did in 1998 actually pulled in more production, not less, and that we actually contributed to this problem by, put, paid in 1998. The world is not going to come to an end if we spend $10.7 billion or $6.9 billion. Every penny of it is going to be added to the deficit. That is money that is not going to go to reduce debt, or fix Medicare, or pay for Social Security. We have all heard and used all those arguments—mostly when it benefited our side of the argument.

But please consider what is going to happen if we continue with these programs where the net impact is to bring more resources into an industry that is having a technological explosion, which is expanding supply, where we are producing more pork with fewer pigs, more poultry with fewer chickens—what is going to happen if we continue for 3 or 4 more years the kind of program we had last year, which appartently—and I simply raise the concern because nobody has mentioned it—what is going to happen if we are pay-ning so much money that we are actually contributing to a problem rather than compensating people partially for their losses. The adoption of either one of these amendments will mean that farm income next year will be above the average for the last 5 years.

Now, I would like farm income to be high. But the point is, I am afraid we are overriding the natural adjustment mechanism whereby, as people can produce more and more product with fewer inputs, what tends to happen is they put fewer inputs into the industry. If I am right about this technology change, we are, with either one of these dollar figures, planting a seed that is going to destroy American agriculture as we know it because we are going to end up exacerbating oversupply and driving prices further and further down, and then we are going to have no choice except to let an awful lot of people go broke or to have the Government come in and say: OK, you produce at 50 percent of your capacity, and you produce at 50 percent of your capacity.

I just wish we were having somebody look at these kinds of problems before we get into this bidding war in the midst of an Agriculture appropriation bill. I wish we could wait until the fall and know what the losses were. None of this money will be available until October 1. Then we can come up with a reasonable program to try to compensate for some of these losses. But to simply be making up numbers in the billions is very dangerous and irresponsible, and we could end up really hurting the most efficient farmers and ranchers.

I thank my colleagues for giving me all this time. I yield the floor.

Mr. BYRD addressed the Chair.

The PRESSING OFFICER. The Chair recognizes the Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, has the order been entered as yet with reference to the conference luncheons today?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Yes, it has.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the time for the Senate to recess for those luncheons be tempered only for a half hour.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Reserving the right to object, the Presiding Officer has something that I have to do in the policy session and would not be able to Chair.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I would be happy to Chair.

I have done a little bit of that. The PRESSING OFFICER. If the request were propounded to be here to hear the Senator's speech, the Chair would be willing to do that.

Mr. BYRD. The Chair is very gracious.

I ask unanimous consent that I be permitted to proceed at this point in lieu of Mr. DORGAN. The list of names of Senators, I think, that have been entered up to this point would be, as of this moment, Mr. DORGAN, Mr. GRASSLEY, and Mr. BYRD. And I have permission of Mr. DORGAN to substitute myself for his name at the moment, and let his name fall in place for my name under the present circumstance. So it would be Mr. BYRD, Mr. GRASSLEY, and Mr. DORGAN.

I seek the help of the distinguished manager of the bill, Mr. COCHRAN, who is my friend. I ask unanimous consent that I may proceed at this point.

Would it be the wish of the manager, then, that the Senate recess, and the others on the list be recognized following the conferences?

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, if the Senator will yield, I think that is a good suggestion.

Mr. BYRD. Very well. I thank the Senator.

The PRESSING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, I was on the floor and objected.

Mr. BYRD. If the Senator will allow me, I haven't forgotten my promise to the Senator.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that following the recognition of Mr. DORGAN, in order to comport with the understanding that there be alternative speakers, that a Republican Senator be recognized, and that he then be followed by Mr. BAUCUS. This will all occur after the conference luncheon.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, I have no objection. I think that is a good suggestion.

I thank the distinguished Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. BYRD. I thank the distinguished Senator.

Mr. BAUCUS. I thank the Senator.

The PRESSING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, what is the Chair's understanding as to how long I will speak and when the Senate will recess for the conference luncheons?

The PRESSING OFFICER. It is the Chair's understanding that the Senator will speak as long as he wishes.

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, the Chair recognizes which the conference luncheons will occur.

The PRESSING OFFICER. Until the hour of 2:15.

Mr. BYRD. Yes. At which time those Senators on the list as presently drawn would be recognized in the order stated.

The PRESSING OFFICER. That is correct.

Mr. BYRD. I thank the Chair.

Mr. President, usually, in this town, newspaper headlines are about politics. News stories feature articles about tax cuts, health care plans, and various partisan tactics.

But, yesterday's headline in the Washington Post, reads "Drought is West's Force of Depression," and the story that follows warns of drought conditions that have gripped the Mid-Atlantic that are second only to those seen during the bleak years of the Great Depression.

We have begun to feel the pinch of this drought, with water usage limited in certain areas. With these restrictions, many people are inconvenienced by the loss of their home landscaping investments—watching their grass, flowers, and shrubs slowly withering and turning brown.

But, this drought is more than an inconvenience for those employed in one of America's hardest-working, most selfless professions. That is farming. Farming is hard luck even at best.

I speak of the farmers throughout our region, including West Virginia, Virginia, Pennsylvania, Maryland, and Delaware. They are more than just inconvenient. They are watching their livelihoods slowly wither and turn to dust.

In West Virginia, this drought has devastated—devastated—the lives of hundreds of family farmers, and I am deeply concerned about the fate of West Virginia's last 17,000 surviving small family farms. West Virginia farmers work hard on land most often held in the same family for generations. They farm an average of 194 acres in the rough mountain terrain, and they earn an average of just $25,000 annually. That is $25,000 annually for 365 days of never-ending labor.

The distinguished occupant of the Chair, who hails from Wyoming, understands that farming is an every-day, every-week, every-month, 365-day operation every year with no time off. In farming there is no time off. That is $68.50 a day for days that begin at dawn and run past sunset in this scorching heat. Today, as the drought lingers on, West Virginia farmers, particularly cattle farmers, find themselves in critical financial circumstances.

To address this crisis, I urge my colleagues to support the inclusion of a $200 million emergency relief program for cattle farmers in the Fiscal Year 2000 Agricultural Appropriations Bill which will be before the provision—if enacted—would provide Federal disaster payments to cattle farmers for losses incurred as a result of this year's heat and drought. Compensation would depend on the type and level of losses suffered, and would be available to cattle farmers in counties across the Nation which have received a Federal declaration of disaster for severe drought and heat conditions.

My provision provides direct assistance to farmers who have dedicated their lives to feeding this Nation, and who suffer at the will of Mother Nature with no recourse.

In West Virginia, my emergency drought aid for cattle farmers will literally decide the future fate of hundreds of small family farmers. The drought has sucked the life from the land, and is on the verge of draining the last resources from the pockets of the drought-stricken farmers.

As of yesterday, Senator ROCKEFELLER and I went to West Virginia and were there when the Secretary of Agriculture, Mr. Glickman, was there to witness some of the drought-stricken areas in the eastern panhandle.

On that trip to West Virginia, Gus Douglas, the West Virginia commissioner of agriculture, told of being at a market where animals were being taken for sale.

One farmer, who had worked his entire life breeding a herd of which he could be proud, was there with his animals. He was there to sell his cattle at the auction. He was not there just with ten or twenty head of cattle. He was there with his entire herd. He knew that he did not have enough feed to make it through winter, so despite the fact that his animals would be poor prospects at auction, he had brought them all to be sold. They had already consumed the fodder that would otherwise sustain them through the coming winter months.
This farmer was losing twice. First, he would make no profit on the cattle he would sell. Second, he could no longer afford to keep his herd. It was time to completely liquidate the herd. As the farmer unloaded his animals at the market, there were tears in his eyes.

It was too late for this farmer, and if we do not act quickly to get an emergency assistance package passed, it will be too late for many, many more family farmers throughout the land.

During our visit to West Virginia, Secretary Glickman declared all fifty-five West Virginia counties a federally designated disaster area. West Virginia is not alone, and my provision will help. If it is accepted, if it is adopted, will help cattle farmers in Virginia, Maryland, Pennsylvania, and any other region that receives a natural disaster declaration for excessive heat and drought.

During this visit with the Secretary, more than twenty farmers and their wives, gathered inside a barn on Mr. Dunn's property in Jefferson County to share their personal stories about how the drought is impacting them and what kind of help they need. The overwhelming consensus was that programs that were designed to work at a time when our agriculture markets were strong, are not going to be enough to keep a new generation on the family farm.

In spite of all types of adversity, family farmers have had the ingenuity to keep their farms working for generations. Surely they can be trusted to wisely use direct federal payments, and with this same time-tested ingenuity, keep their farms running. Farmers in West Virginia have wisely diversified their crops. In ordinary years, many farmers grow enough different kinds of crops to be able to feed their animals, their families, and still take produce to market for a good portion of the summer. But, the extraordinary times of this drought require that we act now to help West Virginia's farmers and other farmers in the non "farm states" who are currently experiencing difficulties as the result of extreme weather conditions.

According to government statistics, West Virginia is experiencing some of the most severe water shortages in the nation. Crop losses in one county alone, Jefferson County, were estimated two weeks ago to be almost $8.0 million and they are above that now. In the Potomac Headwaters region of the state, conditions are much worse. Total damages in the state for crop losses are more than $100 million. This figure does not even include the value of grazing pasture lost and winter feed eaten during the summer, or losses incurred by selling livestock early, due to extreme weather conditions.

Almost fifty percent of West Virginia's cropland is pasture, forty-six percent is harvested, and the remaining four percent is idle. The hay and corn that normally feed the cattle herds are gone. The ponds are shallow and foul, the springs are dried up, and the wells are dry.

Although West Virginia farmers are willing to work day and night to keep up with the backbreaking work of farming, no amount of work will replace the drought conditions that are now being used to keep animals alive at the height of the summer growing season, when pastureland should be more than enough to satiate an animal's hunger. No amount of sweat can restore vigor to stunted crops that have gone too long without a soaking downpour of rain reaching the deepest roots. There is little that these farmers can do to fill their wells or farm ponds with water.

I traveled to see the damage that the drought in West Virginia is causing for farmers. I heard from myself the stories they told. I saw for myself the impact this drought is having, and I saw on those tired, drawn faces the impact this drought is having on the bodies, the minds, and the souls of men and women who earn their bread by the sweat of their brow, in accordance with the edict that was issued by the Creator Himself when He drove Adam and Eve from the Garden of Eden.

We visited a corn field on Terry Dunn's farm. The reddish soil was dust at my feet. The corn stalks that should have grown beyond my head by this time of the season were barely knee high.

I wanted to see what kind of ears these stunted stalks were producing. The ear of corn that I reached down and selected snapped too easily from the stalk. This not yet shucked ear of corn was barely bigger than two rolls of quarters. I saw the conditions of the cattle and pastureland in West Virginia. I saw the dry, cracked fields; I saw the stunted corn stalks; and I heard the stories of farmers. It all amounts to a heart-breaking picture.

I urge my colleagues to help all cattle farmers in areas declared as Federal disaster areas as a result of excessive heat or drought, and to support my provision in their behalf. My amendment will ensure direct relief to the cattle farmers in the Northeast affected by this natural disaster. It will serve to bolster other important aid for fruit and crop losses.

The sweltering temperatures have brought us to a point where we have had different approaches, and it was just a question of how to do it and exactly how much. While this debate was going on, we have had different approaches, and it has brought us to a point where we... have a Republican proposal and a Democrat proposal and we are talking past each other. I am hoping sometime before this debate is over today and we have a final document to vote on, that we are able to get together in a Republican and Democrat way and have a bipartisan solution, at least for the essential aspects of the debate today, which is to have an infusion of income into agriculture considering that we have the lowest prices we have had in a quarter century.

I think there are two stumbling blocks to this. I think on the Democrat side the stumbling block to bipartisan cooperation is a belief among some of those Members that some of the money should find its way to the farmers through changes in the LDP programs as opposed to the transition payments.
On our side, the stumbling block seems to be that we are locked into no more than $7 billion to be spent on the agricultural program.

So I hope somewhere along the line we can get a compromise on this side and a compromise on that side of those two points of contention. Hopefully, we on this side could see the ability to go some over $7 billion—and that the Democrats would see an opportunity to use the most efficient way of getting all the money into the farmer's pocket through the AMTA payments.

The reason for doing it that way is because we do have a crisis. The best way to respond to that crisis is through that mechanism because within 10 days after the President signs the bill, the help that we seek to give farmers can be out there, as opposed to a con-voluted way of doing it through the LDP payment.

I do not know why we could not get a compromise with the 10,000 acres as a corporate farm—meaning a farm giving to that extent—Republicans willing to spend more money and the Democrats willing to give it out in the way that most efficiently can be done.

So I see ourselves right now as two ships passing in the night, not speaking to each other. We ought to be able to get together to solve this. That is my hope. I know there are some meetings going on about that now. I am part of some of those meetings. I hope they can be successful.

In the meantime, talking about helping the family farmer, I think it is very good to have a description of a family farm so we kind of know what we are talking about. I am going to give it the way I understand it in the Midwest, and not only in my State of Iowa.

But it seems to me there are three factors that are essential in a family farming operation: That the family makes all the management decisions; that the family provides all or most of the labor; and thirdly, that the capital, whether it is self-financed or whether it is borrowing from the local bank or from another institution, is controlled by the family farmer—the management by the family, the labor by the family, and the capital controlled by the family.

Some people would say: Well, you have a lot of corporate farms. I do not know what percent, but we do have family corporate farms. But that is a structure they choose to do business in, especially if they have a multigenerational operation to pass on from one generation to the other and want to with a little more ease.

In addition, some people would say:
Well, you have a lot of corporate agriculture. You might have a lot of corporate agriculture in America, but I do not have a lot of corporate agriculture, at least in grain farming in my State of Iowa—mainly because most corporate people who want to invest their money do not get the return on land and labor through grain production that they normally want for a return on their money. Of course, that strengthens the opportunity to family farm. But at least when I talk about the family farmer, that is the definition that I use.

In my State, the average family farm is about 340 acres. We have about 92,000 farming units in my State. By the way, if we do not get this agricultural economy turned around, we are going to have a lot less than 92,000 in a few months, as well.

Nationwide, there are about 2 million family farming operations with an average acreage of about 500 acres. So the average family farm size nationally is bigger than in my State. But remember, we are looking at about 10,000 acres as a cattle farmer in Wyoming or 2,000 or 3,000 acres as a wheat farmer in Kansas or 350 as a corn, soybean, or livestock operation in my State of Iowa, it still is one job or maybe two jobs being created with all that capital investment.

Let me tell you, it takes a tremendous amount of capital—both machinery as well as land—to create one job in agriculture compared to a factory, and many times more than for a service job. So those are the family farmers
I am talking about whom I want to protect.

Earlier in this debate there was some hinting about the problems of the farmers being related directly to the situation with the 1996 farm bill. I am not going to ever say that a farm bill is perfectly written and should never be looked at, but I think when you have a 7-year program, to make a judgment after 3 1/2 years that it ought to be changed, then what was the point in having a 7-year program in the first place?

It was that we wanted to bring some certainty for the family farmer without politics meddling in their business.

A 7-year program was better than a 4-or 5- or 6-year program. So we wanted to bring some certainty to agriculture.
Obviously, a 7-year program does that more so than a shorter program. So a family farm manager would not have to always be wondering, as he was making decisions for the long term:
Well, is Washington going to mess this up for me as so many times decisions made by bureaucrats in Washington have the ability to do?

So I am saying some people here are hinting at the 1996 farm bill being that way. Others of us are saying that the trade situation is the problem because farmers have to sell about a third of their product in export if they are going to have a financially profitable situation.

I want to quote from Wallaces Farergy, January 1998, in which there were tremendous prospects, even just 18 months ago, before the Southeast Asia financial crisis was fully known, for opportunities for exports to Southeast Asia. That situation for the farmer was further complicated by the problems in Latin America. So I want to quote, then, a short statement by a person by the name of John Otte: "World financial worries rock grains."

"Expanding world demand, particularly in Asia, is the cornerstone of the case for continued strength in corn, wheat and soybean prices," points out Darrel Good, University of Illinois economist.

Quoting further from the article:
"Asian customers bought 57% of our 1995–96 corn exports, 66% of our 1996–97 corn exports and almost 50% of our wheat exports in both years. They [meaning Asian markets] are important markets. No wonder Asian currency and stock market problems bring grain market jitters.

"Signs of stability in Asian financial markets today, because of central banks' support and currency values brought a sigh of relief to U.S. commodity markets," says Good.

"Whether late fall problems represent an economic hiccup or the beginning of more serious problems is still unknown. However, the developments underscore the importance of Asian markets for U.S. crops."

We know the end of that story. The end of that story is that we did have that collapse of markets. And it very dramatically hurt our prosperity in grains in the United States last year, and more so this year.

Now, just to put in perspective the debate today, because there is so much crepe-hanging going on, particularly from the other side of the aisle, there is a quote here by Michael Barone of the August 26, 1995, U.S. News and World Report. One sentence that will remind everybody about the greatness of our country and our ability to overcome some of the problems we face comes from an article called "A Century of Renewal." It is a review of the 1900s. He says:

"There is something about America that makes things almost always work out very much better than the cleverest doomsayers predict."
So for my colleagues, particularly those on the other side of the aisle who wash of corn cropped this year, to talk about the disastrous situation we are in right now, I do not want to find fault with their bringing to the attention of our colleagues the seriousness of that problem. But they should not leave the impression that there is no hope because this is America. We have gone through tough times before. All you have to do is remember 1985 and 1986 in agriculture and the 1930s in agriculture. Yet the American family farm that was the backbone of this country and the family doing the labor. Yet the American family farm was still run by the family farmer, the family making the management decisions, the family controlling the capital, and the family doing the labor.

Please remember that, even the most cleverest of doomsayers here today: Don't give up on America. Don't give up on the American family farm. We are in a partnership during the period of time of this farm bill. We have to meet our obligations, and that is what this debate is about. But this debate ought to be about hope for the family farmer as well.

I rise in support of our family farmers. Agriculture producers are in desperate need of immediate assistance. We need to find the best options available in these trying times. The Democrat proposal attempts to address the problems confronting our family farmers but, I think, falls short of our most important goal, which is providing assistance possible.

I realize this disaster affects farmers all across the Nation, but at this moment I am most concerned about my friends and neighbors back home. I am concerned that the Democrat alternative, by tying a large part of the LDP payments, will delay the efficiency of delivering the payment, unlike the transition payment which is more efficient.

The Democratic alternative offers provisions that would have a long-term effect upon agriculture. I don’t want anyone to misunderstand me on that point. There are many things we can do to improve the agricultural economy, but the task before us today is to develop and to pass a short-term relief package that we can get out to those in need as quickly as possible.

According to the Farm Service Agency’s estimate, the transition payments provided to corn growers this year will pay out at a rate of 36 cents per bushel. The supplemental transition payment Republicans are offering will equal an additional 36-cent increase on every bushel of corn produced this year. That is 76 cents in assistance for Iowa family farmers, before you figure in any income through the loan deficiency payment.

As a Senator from my State of Iowa, I believe it is also particularly important to include language providing relief for soybean growers. Soybean growers are not eligible for the transition payments. That is why our proposal also contains $475 million in direct payments to soybean and other oilseed producers. I am proud to say that Iowa is No. 1 in the nation in production of soybeans, but our growers have been hard hit by devastatingly low prices. Prices for soybeans are the lowest they have been in nearly a quarter of a century, down from the $7-a-bushel range just a couple of years ago to less than $4 today, which is way, way below the cost of production. That is why I and other Senators representing soybean-producing States wanted to make sure that soybean growers were not left out of any relief.

Finally, the Democrat proposal falls short in another very important area. I think it undermines our U.S. negotiating objectives in the new multilateral trade negotiations that the United States will launch for the first time. I think about the European Union subsidies still help those who least need help. Twenty percent of the European Union budget. Moreover, the largest production-based European Union subsidies still help those who need less help. Twenty percent of the European Union’s richest farmers receive 80 percent of the common agriculture policy handout.

World farming is sliding deeper into recession with prices of some commodities at historic lows. Now is not the time to give up on pressing the European Union hard to truly reform this vastly wasteful subsidy program in their continent. But that is exactly what we would end up doing if we go down the same road of tying part of these payments to production, as the Democrat alternative would do.

There are many enemies of agriculture market reform in the European Union who are just looking for any criticisms at this time. I am afraid that is exactly what the Democrat plan would do. I think about the International Trade Subcommittee, I have a responsibility to tell my colleagues this.

We should not hand the European Union an excuse to back away from real reform that opens the European Union’s huge agricultural markets to American farmers.

The proposal that we pass today should be the fastest and most efficient option available to help our family farmers. The most important thing we can do today is to work towards providing emergency revenue relief to our farmers as quickly as possible.

It is for that reason I urge my colleagues to vote for our Republican alternative, to provide ample and immediate relief for hard-hit farmers assuming we are not able to work out some sort of bipartisan agreement between now and that final vote.

I only ask, in closing, for people on the other side of the aisle who are criticizing the 1996 farm bill to remember that what we call the 1996 farm bill relates mostly to agricultural programs and totally to the subject of agriculture. We need to look beyond that basic legislation and realize there were a lot of things promised in conjunction with that farm bill through public policy that we have not given the American farmer, which makes it difficult to say we have fully given the American farmer—the family farmer—the tools he or she needs to manage their operation in the way they should.

Yes, we have given them the flexibility to plant what they want to plant without waiting for some Washington bureaucrat to do that. We have given them the certainty of a certain payment every year, from 1996 through the year 2002. We have told them, with the 7-year farm program, that they have 7 years where we are going to have some certainty, political certainty, in Washington of what our policies are. But we also promised them some certainty in their programs.

We have not made the maximum use of the Export Enhancement Program so that we have a level playing field for our farmers. We have not given the President fast track trading authority so that in the APEC agreements that have been reached around the world among other countries we could have been at the table, and haven’t been at the table, and that there is no President of the United States looking out for U.S. interests in those negotiations; and for the sake of the American farmer, we should be at some of those tables—at least those tables where agriculture is being talked about.

We have not given the farmer the regularity of the payments that has been promised. And from the standpoint of taxes, we haven’t given the farmer the opportunity, through the farmers savings account, to level out the peaks and valleys of his income by being able to retain 20 percent of his income to tax in a low-income year, so that he is not paying high taxes one year and no taxes another year. We haven’t given him the ability to do income averaging without running into the alternative minimum tax. We haven’t reduced the capital gains tax enough. And we still have the death tax, the estate tax, which makes a lot of family farmers who want to keep the farm in the family sometimes have to sell the farm to pay the inheritance tax, instead of keeping the family farm and passing it down from one generation to another. Sometimes, if they can’t afford to do that, they either make their operation so insufficient that they close down business or else they have a terrific tax burden on the farm.

So here we have an opportunity to—in the spirit of the 1996 farm bill, when we told the farmers of America we were going to have a smooth transition over the next 7 years, we said to them we were going to set aside $43 billion for each of those next 7 years—not for each, but cumulative for those 7 years. This year, it is $5.6 billion. Well, we look back now, and in 1996 we did not anticipate the dramatic drop-off in exports because we could not have predicted the Southeast Asian financial crisis and the contagion that caught on in Latin America. So we are going back now, unapologetically, on keeping a promise to the family farmers that we promised them, and that is what the amount of money we are talking about here on the floor is all about.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I have waited some while to be able to speak on these disaster bills and on this general issue. I am very pleased to have the opportunity for my colleague from New York who asked if I would yield for a minute for a question. I am happy to answer it. Mr. President, I am going to respond.

Mr. SCHUMER. First, I thank the Senator from North Dakota and Senators HARKIN and DASCHLE for the farm aid amendment, and for their hard work. This measure will help farmers across the country, including the farmers of New York State, who were hard hit by drought and last year’s storms.

We are in the midst of the worst drought since the Dust Bowl in my State. There is not a penny of relief for farmers with drought assistance. This drought is affecting farmers throughout the Eastern United States. When I meet with farmers in New York who tell me they are facing unprecedented losses, they are now pointing to letting fields go bare, to conserve water, or other fields. We can’t do anything about the rain, but the Democratic amendment would increase section 32 funding to give farmers some relief from the devastation on the farm and would set aside $43 billion for disaster relief fund—something that would help New York’s apple and onion farmers who faced tens of millions in losses last year.

In urging my colleagues to support the Democratic amendment, I simply ask the Senator from North Dakota, am I correct in assuming that the Democratic amendment does have this kind of drought relief, which is not in the other bill?

Mr. DORGAN. The Senator from New York is correct. That is one of the distinctions between these two pieces of legislation. As the drought spreads across the eastern seaboard and other parts of the country and begins to devastate producers there, needs to be some kind of relief fund. We have two pieces of legislation proposed today, one of which has no disaster relief at all, even in the face of this increasingly difficult drought.

So the Senator from New York, speaking on behalf of producers who are hard-hit in New York, is certainly accurate to say that the amendment we have offered provides drought relief and the alternative does not.

Mr. SCHUMER. I thank the Senator for his great support.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, this is not about Republicans and Democrats. I start by saying to my colleague from Iowa that I hope, whatever comes from all of this debate, at the end of the time we can, as Republicans and Democrats, find a way to provide appropriate relief to people who are hurting. There is not a Republican or a Democratic way to go broke on the family farm. The destruction of hopes and dreams on the family farm is something that is tragic and something to which we need to respond.

This is not of the family farmers’ making. They didn’t cause prices to collapse or the Asian economies to have difficulty, and they didn’t cause a world cycle or crop disease. It is not their fault. We must try to respond. It is not about Republicans or Democrats. It is appropriate, I think, for there to be differences in the way we respond. There is a philosophical difference in the way we respond. Also, there has been a difference in the aggressiveness and interest in responding. I know that if this kind of economic trouble were occurring on Wall Street or in the area of corporate profits, we would have a legislative ambulance, with its sirens, going full speed in trying to find a solution. It has not been quite so easy because it is family farmers.

Darrel Sudzback is an auctioneer from Minot, ND. Blake Nicholson, an Associated Press writer, wrote a piece the other day. He said:

Darrel Sudzback likens farm sales to funerals. He said, “If you don’t know the deceased, you are not likely to cry.”

But more often than not these days, auctioneers must help a friend or a neighbor sell off a lifetime of hard work. Marvin Hoffman says, “It just hurts me to do this. When they hurt, I hurt.” With many families [Mr. Nicholson writes] sliding deeper into an economic nightmare, the number of farm sales in North Dakota continues to rise: “It used to be,” one auctioneer said, “that a farm auction was kind of like a social event, a joyful event when somebody was retiring.” Julian Hageman said that he conducted auction sales for 43 years, but he said, “Now there is a different atmosphere at auction sales. If people know that a man is forced out, that is not a good feeling. It is tough to deal with when you have known a family farmer for quite a few years, and now they have to give up a career or property they have had in the family for generations. I try to stay as upbeat as I can. Bankers in north-central North Dakota say that area has been hit by 5 years of incurring and crop diseases and many farmers have been forced off the land.

People need to think of this problem in terms of not only lost income, but assume you are on a farm and you have a tractor; you have some land; you have a family; you have hopes and dreams. You put a crop in the ground and see that this is what has happened to your income—to your price.

Then on top of that, add not only collapsed prices, but add the worst crop disease in this century—the worst in a century in North Dakota. On top of that, add a wet spring so that 3.2 million acres—yes, I said 3.2 million acres—of land could not be planted. It was left idle. Add all of those things together, and you have a catastrophe for families out there struggling to make a living.

Will Rogers was always trying to be funny. He used to talk about the differences between Republicans and Democrats. He said on April 6, 1930, “Even the Lord couldn’t stand to wait on the Republicans forever.”

He was talking about the farm program.
There is a difference, it seems to me. There is a difference between Republicans and Democrats in how we construct a solution to the disaster and the crisis, and how we feel the underlying farm bill should be changed.

Will Rogers also said, “If farmers could harvest the political promises made to them, they would be sitting pretty.”

I want to talk a bit about those political promises—the political promises given farmers early on to say that we want to get rid of the farm program as we know it in this country, get rid of the safety net as we know it, and create something called “transition payments” under the Freedom to Farm bill.

I mentioned yesterday that the title was interesting to me. Sometimes titles can change things. The silent spring documented how the products of America’s industrial production, including DDT, were poisoning America’s natural environment. It was called “The Silent Spring.”

Interest. What is in a name. The name for the farm bill a few years ago was Freedom to Farm. We passed a Freedom to Farm bill. The wheat price slumped on this chart may be unrelated, or maybe not to Freedom to Farm. Here are the wheat prices before—Freedom to Farm—and wheat prices since. Chance? Happenstance? Maybe. Maybe not. Maybe we face a circumstance in this country where the underlying farm bill was never aligned to work and allowed for collapsed prices. Maybe that is the fact.

I want to begin with a bit of history. About 40 years ago, a biologist by the name of Rachel Carson wrote a book that in many ways changed our country. It was called “The Silent Spring.”

The book documented how the products of America’s industrial production were seeping into our country’s food chain. The modern environmental movement was also from Rachel Carson’s book, “The Silent Spring.”

Today we face another “silent spring” in this country. Like the first, it is of a human making. But it is not about birds, and it is not about fish. It involves our country’s independent family farmers and producers. It involves our social habitat—the farm communities of which family farmers are the base.

We know that family farmers are hurting. In fact, many would consider it an extraordinary year if they had any opportunity at all to meet their cost of production. I know of cases that break my heart—people who have fought for decades, and now are losing everything they have. What is worse is that some opinion leaders are starting to throw in the towel. They say, well, maybe family farming is a relic of the past. Maybe it is not of value to our country anymore. Maybe it is time to do something else.

I don’t buy that at all. I think one thing we can say about the future is that people will be eating. The world’s population is growing rapidly. Every month in this world we add another New York City in population. Every single month, another New York City in population is added to our globe. We know there is no more farmland being created on this Earth. It doesn’t take a genius to put those two together.

Mr. DORGAN. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. SARBANES. I am happy to yield. Mr. SARBANES. I want to underscore the point the distinguished Senator from North Dakota is making.

Yesterday, I had the opportunity to go with Secretary Glickman and Governor Glendening to visit one of the farms that has been affected by the drought in our State. It is devastating to see. Of course, it is a compound of two things. Today one of the things which the Senator is demonstrating with his charts—this is not only wheat but the same thing applies to other basic commodities as well—and the drought, which is crippling certain parts of the country.

We talked to this farmer who has been farming ever since he was a young boy. His father was a farmer. His grandfather was a farmer. He doesn’t know whether he will be in farming next year because of what has hit them—the combination of the low commodity prices and the drought which is now desperately affecting our country.

He is not alone. Farmers across Maryland and the Mid-Atlantic are finding themselves facing similar circumstances. Nearly one fourth of Maryland’s corn crop is in poor to very poor condition. Likewise, 55 percent of pastures and hay fields are in poor or very poor condition. Milk production has decreased because of the high temperatures. And because pastures and field crops are in such bad shape, cattle and dairy farmers are now faced with a dilemma, whether or not to sell their animals or begin feeding them hay which should be utilized for the winter.

Maryland has suffered extensive drought damage for three consecutive years. However the drought this year is much more severe than the two previous ones. Yesterday, the United States Geological Survey reported that we may be in the midst of what could become the worst drought of the 20th century. Rainfall throughout Maryland is currently below normal. Throughout Maryland, counties are reporting losses as high as 100 percent for certain crops. Most alarmingly, there is no end in sight.

But the crisis affecting agriculture is about more than the drought. The dramatic drop in commodity prices, since passage of the Farm Act, has had its affect on farmers throughout the country and the State of Maryland. The poultry industry, which is Maryland’s largest agricultural producer, has witnessed a 45 percent decrease in these income assistance for farmers is bleak and many are losing their businesses.

Mr. President, Maryland depends on agriculture. Agriculture is Maryland’s largest industry contributing more than $11 billion annually to our economy. More than 350,000 Marylanders—some 14 percent of our State’s workforce—are employed in all aspects of agriculture from farm production of wholesaling and retailing. Forty percent of Maryland’s farm income is derived from the Mid-Atlantic drought.

Mr. President, the need for this amendment is real. Until we are able to reform the Freedom to Farm Act or provide the income assistance farmers need, the Federal government must address the preservation of the farm industry throughout the State of Maryland and the United States.

In my judgment, it is imperative that we pass this legislation.

I very much appreciate the Senator from North Dakota yielding. I want to underscore the crisis nature of the situation to which he is referring.

I want to acknowledge the consistent and effective leadership which he has exercised on an array of farm and agricultural issues. He and others of us expressed concerns and questions at the time the 1996 act was passed. Much of that now seems to have come around to hit us—compounded, of course, by these serious weather circumstances which exist not in all parts of the country but in certain parts of the country.

I thank the Senator for yielding.

Mr. DORGAN. I thank the Senator from Maryland. He is talking about a problem which is devastating part of our country even as collapsed prices have been devastating wheat farmers and the grain farmers in my part of the country.
I want to respond to some things that were said earlier today that somehow we are not as efficient as we need to be as family farmers, and I think the problem is that we have a marketplace that is fundamentally corrupt.
We do it in very different ways. That is the purpose of the two bills on the floor of the Senate today. We do it in very different ways. As my colleague from New York mentioned, the majority party bill doesn’t even respond to any part of the disaster. Senator Dorgan’s disaster provisions at all. Of course, we have a substantial part of this country now facing a serious drought, so it is a very serious problem. We have very different ways in which we provide income support to family farmers. The majority party follows the Freedom to Farm bill, which of course is a total flop, total failure. It gives payments to people who are not producing. It says: You are not producing; you are not in trouble; you don’t have any crop; here’s some money. What kind of logic is that? It doesn’t make any sense.

We propose a mechanism by which we provide help to people who are producing and are losing money as a result of that production. We are talking about helping to shore up that family farm. Our position is simple. When prices hit a valley, we want a bridge across that valley so family farmers can get across that valley. We want to build a bridge, and other people want to blow up the bridge. But if we don’t take the first step to provide some crisis and disaster relief and then follow it very quickly in September and October, as I discussed with my colleague from Iowa and others, with a change in the underlying farm bill, we will not have done much for farmers.

Farmers say to me: We very much appreciate some disaster help, but it will not provide the hope that is necessary for me to plant a crop and believe that I can make it. We need a change in the farm bill. We need a safety net that we think has a chance to work for us in the future.

Mr. HARKIN. If the Senator will yield?

Mr. DORGAN. I will be happy to yield.

Mr. HARKIN. First, I thank the Senator from North Dakota for his statement, which is exemplary in its clarity. The arguments the Senator has made, the point he made, this should crystallize clearly what this debate is all about, what is happening, what we are all talking about.

I picked up on one thing the Senator said—that under the Republican’s proposal the payments would go out without regard to whether someone was producing anything or not; it could actually go out to absentee landlords, people who are not on the farm, hadn’t even planted anything.

As the Senator knows, the AMTA payments that are in their bill go out without regard to whether they are planting anything or not. It is based upon outdated, outmoded provisions of base acreages and proven yields. It goes back as far as 1981, and it is bluntly cruel. It is no basis for the radical, total collapse of the grain markets. What has happened is, we have a payment system that says, under Freedom... to Farm, when prices are high, you get a payment that you do not need, and when prices are low, you don’t get a payment that is sufficient to give you the help you need.

Mr. HARKIN. If the Senator will yield further, the Senator has stated it absolutely correctly. I was interested in the chart there of wheat prices. I ask the Senator if he would put it back up there again, on wheat prices. It just about mirrors corn and soybeans, all the major production crops in the Southwest.

I have an article from the Wichita Eagle, from 1996, I believe, it is an article written by the distinguished Senator from Kansas. I think he was a House Member at the time, Senator Roberts. So this article says:

Good Bill for Farm Reality, by Pat Roberts.

The first sentence says:

My Freedom to Farm legislation now before Congress is a new agricultural policy for a new century.

“‘My Freedom to Farm. . .’ That is by Pat Roberts, now Senator Roberts. I want to read to the Senator from North Dakota this paragraph in there. He says:

Finally, Freedom to Farm enhances the farmer’s total economic situation. In fact, the bill results in the highest net farm income over the next seven years of any proposal before Congress.

He says:

The AMTA payment cushions the Nation’s agriculture economy from collapse during the 7-year transition process.

I have to ask my friend from South Dakota, are your farmers receiving the highest net farm income that they have received ever in any farm program? Are they receiving the highest farm income? And are your farmers being cushioned by the Freedom to Farm bill?

Mr. DORGAN. I say to the Senator from Iowa, the answer to that question is, clearly, farm income is collapsing. It is collapsing with grain prices, with commodity prices generally, and family farmers are put in terrible trouble as a result of it. Many of them are facing extinction.

I have here a report from the Economic Policy Institute that describes the almost complete failure of the current farm bill and current strategy. It is written by Robert Scott. It is about an eight-page report. I ask unanimous consent to have that printed in the RECORD following my remarks.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Ms. Collins). Without objection, it is so ordered.

(See Exhibit 1.)

Mr. DORGAN. Let me make one final point, and then I will relinquish the floor. I know my colleagues wish to speak.

This is a map of the United States. This map shows in red the counties of our country that have lost more than 10 percent of their population. It shows where people are moving out, not coming in. We have cities growing in various parts of America, but in the center of our country, in the farm belt of our country, we are being depopulated. People are leaving. My home county, which is about the size of the State of Rhode Island, was 5,000 people when I left, in population. It is now 3,000. The neighboring county, which is about the same size, the size of the State of Rhode Island, had 920 people last year. The fact is, people are moving out. Why? Because family farmers cannot make a living.

We have had other farm policies that have not worked. I mean we have had Democratic and Republican failures. Both parties have failed in many ways in farm policy.

It is just the circumstance today where we have farm prices, in constant dollars, that are at Depression level; and we have a farm program that, like it or not, was offered by the majority party that the President does not work at all in the context of what our needs are to try to save family farmers.

We will have two votes today: One on a disaster package or a price relief package that offers more help, and one that offers less; one that offers some help for disaster relief, and one that does not.

A whole series of differences exist between these proposals. My hope is that at the end of this day the Senate will have agreed to the proposal that Senators Daschle, Harkin, Conrad, myself, and others have helped draft and that we will be able to send a message of hope to family farmers, to say, we know what is happening, we know what is happening, we will launch that step. The second step, in September or October, will be to force a fundamental change in our underlying farm policy.

Madam President, I yield the floor.

EXHIBIT 1

TO DEATH THE FAILURE OF AGRICULTURAL DEREGULATION
(Chairman Robert E. Scott)

In 1996, free market Republicans and budget-cutting Democrats offered farmers a deal: accept a cut in farm subsidies and, in return, the government would promote exports in new trade deals with Latin America and the World Trade Organization (WTO) and in the deregulation strategy. But rising exports—they more than doubled between 1985 and 1999. The rapid growth in U.S. agricultural exports—they more than doubled between 1985 and 1996—encouraged many farmers to buy into the deregulation strategy. But rising exports have not translated into rising incomes. Due to globalization and relentless declines in the real prices of basic farm products, the structure of American agriculture has been transformed, and, as a result, real U.S. farm income has been declining for many years despite the long-run trend of rising exports.

In the two decades from 1978 to 1997, real grain prices were slashed in half. Then, in 1998, prices fell an additional 10–20%, pushing many family farmers to the brink of bankruptcy.1 In this environment, only the largest and most capital-intensive farms are able to survive and prosper. Growing concentration throughout the food chain

There are about 2 million farms in the U.S., but three-quarters of those generate minimal or negative net incomes (USDA 1996). Since farms with less than $50,000 in gross revenues tend to be primarily part-
Corporate influence is growing throughout the U.S. food supply system. While the share of farms owned by individuals and families (operating as sole proprietors) was roughly constant between 1978 and 1992, at about 85% of all farms, the output share of such farms declined during this period from about 62% to 54% (USDA 1996). CORPORATIONS</ref> absorbed most of this production lost by sole proprietors between 1978 and 1992. Moreover, an increasing number of family farmers are raising crops under contract for big purchasers. Corporate control is becoming much more concentrated both upstream and downstream from farmers. On the input side, considerable consolidation is taking place among firms that supply farmers with seeds and chemical inputs. A small number of companies are assuming control of the seed production business, including MONSANTO, DUPONT, and NOVARTIS (Melcher andcarey 1999, 32). The story is similar on the distributional side. Grain distribution, for example, which has been tightly controlled by a handful of companies since the 19th century, is becoming even more concentrated. Recently, CARGILL has proposed to purchase Continental’s grain storage unit, which would result in a single firm that would control more than one-third of U.S. grain exports (Melcher and Carey 1999, 32).

INTERNATIONAL TRADE: THE SIREN’S SONG

The growth in agricultural exports, especially in the first half of 1990, suggested to small farmers that sales to foreign markets were the key to solving their problems. However, export markets have proven to be more volatile than domestic ones, and globalization has increased the vulnerability of farmers to sudden price swings.

Unreliable export markets

The U.S. agricultural trade balance with the rest of the world increased by almost $11 billion between 1990 and 1996 (Table 2), then declined by $31.2 billion between 1996 and 1998. This drop in the volume of exports, which was equal to a 6% decline in farm revenues, was compounded by a sharp decline in domestic commodity prices (discussed below). These two factors combined in 1997 and 1998 to severely depress farm incomes. Close examination of regional trends in U.S. farm trade shows that only a limited number of markets were open to U.S. farm products. The U.S. agricultural trade balance with Europe declined sharply between 1990 and 1998, as shown in Table 2. During that time exports to Europe fell by about $2 billion while U.S. imports increased by $3 billion (U.S. Department of Commerce 1999; USDA 1999b).

U.S. trade problems with Europe result from continued high subsidies to European farms and European resistance to certain U.S. farm products, such as hormone-treated beef. The Uruguay Round trade agreements were designed, in part, to reduce agricultural subsidies, but European farm spending actually increased from $46.0 billion in 1995 (the year before the agreements went into effect) to $55 billion in 1997. During the same period, U.S. government payments to farmers were $7 billion, less than 13% of the European level.

Under NAFTA and the earlier U.S.-Canada Free Trade Agreement (which went into effect in 1989), the volume of farm trade has significantly increased throughout the region. However, the net result has been a small but significant decline in the U.S. farm trade surplus with Mexico and Canada. This fact contradicts the U.S. Trade Representative’s statement that “NAFTA has been a tremendous success for American agriculture” (Huenemann 1999).

NAFTA has also resulted in a massive shift in the structure of trade and production within North America. U.S. exports of corn and other feed grains (such as sorghum) have increased, but U.S. imports of fruits, vegetables, wheat, barley, and cattle have all increased much more. For example, U.S. grain exports to Canada (primarily corn and other feed grains) increased by 427% between 1990 and 1998, but at the same time U.S. imports of wheat from Canada increased by 249%, from $79 million in 1990 to $278 million in 1998. Similarly, U.S. corn exports to Mexico increased by 47% during that period, while cattle and calf imports from Mexico soared by 1,280%.

Since the trade balance with Europe and North America was relatively flat from 1990 to 1996, what was the source of strongly growing demand for U.S. farm products in the 1990s? Answer: the trade balance with Asia increased by $3 billion (Table 2). Unfortunately for U.S. farmers, though, the demand that pulled in U.S. farm exports to Asia was driven by the same inflationary bubble that ultimately caused the world financial crisis. An unprecedented inflow of short-term capital into Asia stimulated a huge growth in consumption. When this capital flowed out even more quickly in the wake of the Thai financial crisis in July 1997, the U.S. agricultural trade balance with Asia collapsed back to its 1990 level.

Thus, the boom in U.S. agriculture in the early 1990s, which convinced farmers that trade liberalization was the solution to their problems, was built on the false foundation of a speculative bubble. Increased trade has certainly increased the volatility of farm incomes, but it has yet to improve their average level. Globalization has also stacked the deck against family farmers, since they tend to be under-capitalized and more vulnerable to financial cycles in comparison to large and diversified corporate farms.

Globalization and future farm prices

The U.S. Department of Agriculture has fueled expectations that global demand for U.S. agricultural products will increase in the future. Its most recent baseline forecasts predict that commodity prices, net farm income, and U.S. exports will all recover rapidly in 2000 and climb steadily thereafter. The USDA has also forecast that U.S. agriculture would benefit from further trade liberalization. For example, it estimated that the proposed Free Trade Agreement of the
These results show why farmers have been mislabeled the "losers" of global agricultural liberalization. Previous rounds of trade negotiations have failed to generate sustained, reliable growth in demand for U.S. farm products. In addition, the diffusion of advanced agricultural technology (the "green revolution") around the globe has had a depressing effect on U.S. farm prices, despite, or perhaps because of, the benefits generated for farmers and consumers throughout the developing world.

TIME FOR A NEW FARM POLICY

There is nothing wrong with expanding trade in agriculture as long as it can be achieved in ways that benefit U.S. farmers. However, unless the U.S. government is willing to address such fundamental problems as global excess crop supplies and rising currency values, then pushing for freer trade in agriculture will be counterproductive. It is time to stop artificially expanding trade without regard for the consequences.

The Omnibus 1996 Farm Bill was a complete failure. It failed to generate export-led growth, and it transferred substantial risks to farmers with no visible benefits. Given the diffusion of technology to the rest of the world, and because other countries seek to maintain their own food security, agriculture will never have a substantial growth industry for the U.S. Even on this score, an important reason, the U.S. needs a viable farm sector, one that can deliver a high and rising standard of living for family farmers and consumers. A number of policies could help achieve these goals, including:

- Carefully managed reductions in the value of the dollar.
- The shift of agricultural subsidies away from large farms and corporate farmers to independent, family-run farms.
- An increase in expenditures for research and development, and the construction of infrastructure and distribution systems for new, higher-valued products that can be produced with sustainable technologies and that meet consumer demand for high-quality, niche, and specialty foods such as organic products and humanely raised livestock; and
- The expansion of other possibilities for stimulating agricultural consumption (such as the conversion of biomass to energy) to build domestic demand for agricultural products.

Mr. CRAIG addressed the Chair.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Idaho is recognized.

Mr. CRAIG. I yield to the Senator.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Mississippi.

AMENDMENT NO. 100, AS AMENDED

Mr. COCHRAN. Madam President, I asked the Senator to yield so I can send a modification of my amendment to the desk. I do send the modification of my amendment to the desk.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendment is so modified.

The amendment, as modified, is as follows:

Beginning on page 1, line 3, strike all that follows "Sinc. to the end of the amendment and insert the following:

EMERGENCY AND MARKET LOSS ASSISTANCE.—(a) MARKET LOSS ASSISTANCE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of Agriculture shall make available to the "Secretary") shall not use more than $5,544,453,000 of funds of the Commodity Credit Corporation to provide assistance to owners and producers on a farm under this subsection shall be proportionate to the amount of the contract payment received by the owners and producers for fiscal year 1999 under a production flexibility contract for the farm under the Agricultural Market Transition Act (7 U.S.C. 7271f).

(2) PAYMENTS TO CERTAIN PRODUCERS.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall use such amounts as are necessary to provide payments to producers of quota peanuts or additional peanuts to partially compensate the producers for continuing low commodity prices, and increasing costs of production, for the 1996 crop year.

(B) AMOUNT.—The amount of a payment made to producers on a farm of quota peanuts or additional peanuts under subparagraph (A) shall be equal to the product obtained by multiplying—

(1) the quantity of quota peanuts or additional peanuts produced or considered produced by the Secretary under section 155 of the Agricultural Market Transition Act (7 U.S.C. 7271f); by

(ii) the price obtained by multiplying—

(i) the quantity of quota peanuts or additional peanuts produced or considered produced by the Secretary under section 155 of the Agricultural Market Transition Act (7 U.S.C. 7271f); by

(ii) the amount equal to 5 percent of the loan rate established for quota peanuts or additional peanuts, respectively, under section 155 of that Act.

(3) CONDITION ON PAYMENT OF SALARIES AND EXPENSES.—None of the funds made available under section 155 of the Agricultural Market Transition Act (7 U.S.C. 7271f) is available for salaries and expenses of personnel of the Department of Agriculture or the Commodity Credit Corporation for the 1996 crop year.

(c) LIMITATION ON MARKETING LOAN GAINS AND LOAN DEFICIENCY PAYMENTS.—Notwithstanding section 10012 of the Food Security Act of 1985 (7 U.S.C. 1301), the total amount of the payments specified in section 10012 of that Act is not limited by the Commodity Credit Corporation to provide assistance to owners and producers on a farm under section 155 of the Agricultural Market Transition Act (7 U.S.C. 7271f).
such price levels, as the Secretary determines following the purposes of cotton user marketing certificates and inserting “owned by the Commodity Credit Corporation or pledged to the Commodity Credit Corporation as collateral in such manner, and at such price levels, as the Secretary determines will best reflect the purposes of cotton user marketing certificates, including enhancing the competitiveness and marketability of United States cotton; and (D) by striking paragraph (2) and (E) by redesignating subparagraphs (G) through (L) as subparagraphs (H) through (Q), as amended—

(1) by striking paragraph (1) and inserting the following:—

“(1) Establishing.—

“(A) in General.—The President shall carry out an import quota program during the period ending July 31, 2003, as provided in this subsection.

“(B) Program Requirements.—Except as provided in subparagraph (C), whenever the Secretary determines and announces that for any consecutive 4-week period, the Friday through Thursday average price quotation for the lowest-priced United States growth, as quoted for Middling (M) 1% long cotton, delivered C.I.F. Northern Europe, adjusted for the value of any certificate issued under subsection (a), exceeds the Northern Europe price by more than 1.25 cents per pound, there shall immediately be in effect a special import quota.

“(C) Tight Domestic Supply.—During any month for which the Secretary estimates the season-ending United States and upland cotton stocks as determined under subparagraph (D), to be below 16 percent, the Secretary, in making the determination under subparagraph (B), shall not adjust the Friday through Thursday average price quotation for the lowest-priced United States growth, as quoted for Middling (M) 1%-inch cotton, delivered C.I.F. Northern Europe, for the value of any certificates issued under subsection (a).

“(D) Season-ending United States stocks.—For purposes of making the estimates under subparagraph (C), the Secretary shall, on a monthly basis, estimate and report the season-ending United States and upland cotton stocks, including difference between projected raw cotton imports but including the quantity of raw cotton that has been imported into the United States during the marketing year; and (B) by adding at the end the following:

“(7) Limitation.—The quantity of cotton entered into the United States during any marketing year under the special import quota established under this subsection may not exceed the equivalent of 5 week’s consumption of upland cotton by domestic mills at the seasonally adjusted average rate of the 5 months immediately preceding the first special import quota established in any marketing year.

(3) Removal of Suspension of Marketing Certificate Authority.—Section 171(b)(1) of the Agricultural Market Transition Act (7 U.S.C. 7231) is amended—

(A) by striking subparagraph (G); and (B) by redesignating subparagraphs (H) through (L) as subparagraphs (G) through (K), respectively.

(4) Redemption of Marketing Certificates.—Section 115 of the Agricultural Act of 1949 (7 U.S.C. 1431) is amended—and (B) in the second sentence of subsection (c), by adding after subparagraph (B), a new subparagraph (C) and inserting “marketing program or the export enhancement program established under the Agricultural Market Transition Act of 1978 and inserting “market access program or the export enhancement program established under sections 203 and 301 of the Agricultural Act of 1978 (7 U.S.C. 5623, 5651)”;

(A) in subsection (a), by striking “rice (other than negotiable marketing certificates for upland cotton or rice)” and inserting “rice, including the issuance of negotiable marketing certificates for upland cotton or rice”; (B) in paragraph (1), by striking “and” at the end; (C) in paragraph (2), by striking the period at the end and inserting “and”; and (D) by adding at the end the following:—

“(3) redeem negotiable marketing certificates for cash under such terms and conditions as are established by the Secretary.”;

(e) Oilseed Payments.—

(1) in General.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Secretary shall use not less than $750,000,000 of funds of the Commodity Credit Corporation to provide payments to producers of the 1999 crop of oilseeds that are eligible to obtain a marketing assistance loan under section 131 of the Agricultural Market Transition Act (7 U.S.C. 7231).

(2) Computation.—A payment to producers on a farm under this subsection shall be computed by multiplying—

(A) a payment rate determined by the Secretary; by (B) the quantity of oilseeds that the producers on the farm are eligible to place under loan under section 131 of that Act.

(3) Limitation.—Payments made under this subsection shall be considered to be contract payments for purposes of section 1001(1) of the Food Security Act of 1985 (7 U.S.C. 1308a).

(f) Assistance to Livestock and Dairy Producers.—The Secretary shall use $325,000,000 of funds of the Commodity Credit Corporation to provide assistance to livestock and dairy producers in a manner determined by the Secretary;

(g) Tobacco.—The Secretary shall use $228,000,000 of funds of the Commodity Credit Corporation to make distributions to tobacco growers with the formulas established under the National Tobacco Grower Settlement Trust.

(h) Sense of Congress Regarding Fast-track Authority and Future World Trade Organization Negotiations.—It is the sense of Congress that—

(1) the President should make a formal request for appropriate fast-track authority for future United States trade negotiations; (2) regarding future World Trade Organization negotiations—

(A) rules for trade in agricultural commodities should be strengthened and trade-distorting import and export practices should be eliminated or substantially reduced; (B) the rules of the World Trade Organization should be strengthened regarding the practices or policies of a foreign government that unreasonably restrict market access for products of new technologies, including products of biotechnology; or (i) delay or preclude implementation of a report of a dispute panel of the World Trade Organization; and (C) negotiations within the World Trade Organization should be structured so as to be able to provide for the successful conclusion of negotiations on agricultural products;

the President should—

(1) conduct a comprehensive evaluation of all existing export and food aid programs, including—

(i) the export credit guarantee program established under section 303 of the Agricultural Market Transition Act of 1978 (7 U.S.C. 5651); (ii) the market access program established under section 203 of that Act (7 U.S.C. 5623); (iii) the export enhancement program established under section 301 of that Act (7 U.S.C. 5651); (iv) the foreign market development cooperation program established under section 702 of that Act (7 U.S.C. 5722); and (v) programs established under the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954 (7 U.S.C. 1701 et seq.); and (B) transmit to Congress—

(i) the results of the evaluation under subparagraph (A); and (ii) recommendations on maximizing the effectiveness of the programs described in subparagraph (A); and (4) the Secretary should carry out a purchase, conservation or conversion of agricultural commodities in each of fiscal years 1999 and 2000 to promote the export of additional quantities of soybeans, beef, pork, poultry, and products derived from commodities, including soybean meal, soybean oil, textured vegetable protein, and soy protein concentrates and isolates) using programs established under—

(A) the Commodity Credit Corporation Charter Act (15 U.S.C. 714 et seq.); (B) section 416 of the Agricultural Act of 1949 (7 U.S.C. 1431); (C) titles I and II of the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954 (7 U.S.C. 1701 et seq.); and (D) the Food for Progress Act of 1985 (7 U.S.C. 1736).

(1) Emergency Requirement.—The entire amount necessary to carry out this section and the amendments made by this section shall be available only to the extent that an official budget request for the entire amount, that includes designation of the entire amount of the request as an emergency requirement as defined in the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985, as amended, is transmitted by the President to the Congress: Provided, That the entire amount is designated by the Congress as an emergency requirement pursuant to section 251(b)(2)(A) of such Act.

Mr. CROCHER. I thank the Senator. Mr. CRAIG addressed the Chair. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Idaho is recognized. Mr. CRAIG. Thank you, Madam President.

For the last 20 minutes, I have listened to my colleague from North Dakota with some degree of clarity discuss the issue that is true in his State to be true in most areas of American agriculture. I will in no way attempt to modify or suggest any different kind of impact on the family farm, but I suggest that most family farms in Idaho today are multimillion-dollar operations. And I should not attempt to invoke the image of a small farm, a husband and wife, struggling to stay alive.

A husband and wife and family team in production agriculture today are struggling to stay alive in an industry that recognizes their investment in the hundreds of thousands, if not millions, of dollars.
There is no question that the character of American agriculture has changed. This is perhaps best seen in the rhetoric of the family farm, and there are still some small farming units—most of those who farm small units today recognize some years ago that their life could not be made there unless they supplemented it with outside income. That, of course, has been the character of the change in production agriculture for the last good number of decades—true in Idaho, true in North Dakota, true in Mississippi, true in almost every other agricultural State in our Nation.

How do I know that? That is what the statistics show.

But in 1965 and 1966, as a young person, I was given a unique opportunity to travel through our Nation on behalf of agriculture as a national officer of FFA, Future Farmers of America. I was in almost every agricultural State in this Nation speaking to young farmers and young ranchers.

I happened to have had the privilege of staying on many of those farms and ranches. For the course of 1 year, I saw American agriculture like few are given the opportunity to see it. I must tell you, it was an exciting time because I met wonderful people, I saw a unique lifestyle that is true in many instances today, and I did see and feel the heartland of America as few get the opportunity to experience.

While I was traveling, I gave many speeches. The speech oftentimes started like this: That a family farmer or a farmer in American agriculture today produces enough for him or herself and 30 other people. That was 1965.

Today, if I were that young FFA officer traveling the Nation, my speech would be to change, because I would say that that farmer or rancher produces enough for him or herself and 170 to 180 additional Americans.

Has the family unit changed? Oh, very significantly. In almost all instances, it is four or five times larger than it was in 1965 and 1966. But it is phenomenally more efficient and much more productive. Because of those efficiencies, instituted by new technology or biogenetics, we have seen great productivity. So it isn't just a measurement of change in agriculture and ranching for those crops; it is a combination of the whole.

I think it is very important that we portray American agriculture today for what it is and for what it asks from us.

In 1965 and 1966, it was not just Government and politicians that suggested farm policy in this country ought to change; it was American agriculture itself that came to us in 1965 and 1966 and said: Get Government off our backs, because agriculture has changed. We don't want to farm to a program. We want to farm to a market. We don't want to be restricted in limited acreages. We don't want to be restricted in limited markets. We want the ability to be flexible to move with the market.

Congress listened. Out of that listening came the Federal Agriculture Improvement and Reform Act of 1996, which is now called Freedom to Farm. The Senator from North Dakota said it is a failure. The Senator from North Dakota was wrong. It has met every objective it was intended to meet—expanded markets, expanded production, with flexibility for the individual producer. All of those goals that were a part of Freedom to Farm have been met.

Today, before the Ag Committee, we heard about a comprehensive study that said agricultural income in the decade of the 1990s will surpass any other decade, at a time when the number of farmers has gone down and productivity has gone up dramatically. That is all part of the good news of the story.

So it is not an abject failure, unless you did not vote for it because you did not believe in it. That is not the case. And if you really do want Government controls, and you really do want a Government plan to which farmers farm instead of the market. My guess is, that is part of what the Senator from North Dakota was talking about. That is not what I am here to talk about today. That is where we differ substantially.

But we do not differ on the other issue. That is the issue of the current commodity price crisis in production agriculture across our Nation and across the world. That is very real today. Many of our commodities are finding their price in the marketplace at or below Depression-era prices. That is itself a crisis, and that is why we should respond.

Last year, we did not cast a deaf ear on production agriculture in this country. The taxpayers of this country, recognizing the plight the American producer in agriculture was in, gave handsomely. Billions of dollars flowed into production agriculture, and directly through to the farmer, and to the rancher in some instances. As a result of that, farm income was substantially buoyed. That will happen again this year. But it will happen in the context of Freedom to Farm.

We are not going to go in and start changing long-term farm policy until the Senator from North Dakota and the Senator from Idaho can agree that Freedom to Farm was an abject failure—when, in fact, I do not believe it was; and I think the Senator from North Dakota would be hard pressed, looking at the facts and the intent, to argue that it was either.

So we are here today not to talk about a long-term policy change but to talk about the current crisis. It is a crisis that is not just taking place within this country; it is a commodity crisis that is worldwide.

Let's talk about 1996, 1997, and part of 1998. That is when we crafted a new farm bill. That is when that commodity prices were higher than they have ever been around the world, and we drained all of our reserves, and we were told never again would we see low prices. But there were some things missing from that “never again” argument. We didn't anticipate a general downturn in world economies, especially the Asian economy, an Asian economy that had increased its overall import of agricultural foodstuffs from the United States by nearly 27 percent in the period of a 5- to 6-year span. Those imports are down by 11 percent today. Those are the facts. Is that a direct result of Freedom to Farm policy failing? I suggest that it isn't. I don't think the Senator from North Dakota would disagree.

Now, what has that caused? It has plummeted commodity prices in our country. We agree that there is a current farm crisis, and we agree that that crisis could extend itself for some time to come. We agree that Congress ought to respond to it. So we don't lose those production units and the families and the human side of it that is so critical across our country and to smalltown Idaho just as much as smalltown North Dakota.

The difference, at least in the current situation of the moment, is the heavy hand of politics, tragically enough.

Last year we were able to agree, and we worked at crafting a bipartisan package. This morning, while we were there in the Ag Committee holding a hearing with the Secretary, all of a sudden the committee room emptied. I wondered where they had gone. The chairman said: Well, they have gone out to hold a press conference with the Vice President. The heavy hand of Presidential politics now tragically plays at this issue. It shouldn't have to be that way and, in the end, it won't be that way, if we are to craft the right kind of policy to deal with a crisis that isn't Democrat or isn't Republican, but it is at the heartland of America's fundamental production unit, American agriculture.

The chairman of the Ag Subcommittee of Appropriations has struggled mightly over the course of the last several weeks to try to see if we couldn't arrive at a package that would respond. Our goal is not to add hundreds of billions of dollars to programs that don't have any sense of immediacy or any sense of getting money directly into the farmer. Our bill is substantially smaller in that regard than the bill offered by the minority leader of the Senate. But our bill, when it comes to money to production units, money to farmers, and money to ranchers, is there. It is real and it is the same dollar amount.

I am willing to talk farm policy, and I am willing to debate it, but not in the short-term and not in the immediate sense of an emergency, because it is awfully hard to argue that the emergency was produced by Freedom to Farm.

Let me read briefly from a report called "Record and Outlook," put together by a very responsible group called the Sparks Company out of McLean, VA. This report is called "Freedom to Farm, Record and Outlook," prepared for the Coalition for Competitive Food in the Agricultural System.

Here is their analysis. Most people say that the Sparks Company is widely recognized as reputable and is non-partisan in its analyses of those issues that it examines. Here is what they say:

The recent slowing of the farm economy primarily reflects two major factors: farm-ers response worldwide to mid-decade record high prices. . .

In other words, what they are saying was those prices in 1996 and 1997 sent a message to world agriculture: Gear up your production. They sent a message to world agriculture: Gear up your production. Consumption and prices are here to stay. And that is what happened, and worldwide production is at an all-time record. They go on:

...and the downturn in the economic and financial health of one region of the world, Asia, which also is the largest market for U.S. farm and food products.

I have already mentioned the tremendous ramp up in the increase in purchases of agricultural foodstuffs in Asia and now the dramatic decline.

The study concludes that both the high record prices of 1995, 1996, and part of 1997, and the more recent readjustments, are the result of "ordinary market developments and reactions, with some unusually good weather patterns helping boost output, while the economic downturn in Asia and elsewhere has weakened the prices. As a result, the current market downturn reflects temporary, rather than fundamental market changes."

Temporary problems, but a real crisis. Permanent problems? They say not so. So if you are going to change permanent policy, you ought to be able to determine that there is first a permanent policy. That is what I think the Senator from North Dakota has failed to argue, while he and I would agree on the sense of immediacy to the current crisis.

The report goes on to talk about modest shortfalls in harvests and yields during 1993 through 1995, during the time when these markets were ramping up. Output fell below the 10-year trend and stocks plummeted. In other words, storage and surplus. Strong world economic growth then stimulated demand and record high grain and oilseed prices; world planting and harvests above trends in the United States and worldwide during 1996 through 1998; also good weather and high grain and oilseed yields, especially in the United States, rapidly rebuilding world grain and oilseed stocks, and significantly above-trend consumption during that period. In other words, we were pushing production, but the world was consuming. Significant increases in non-U.S. production competing for growing world markets largely in response to record high prices of the mid-1990s. For example, all of the very considerable above-trend wheat production has been outside the United States, while the share of increased production outside the United States has been 44 percent for corn and 35 percent for soybeans.

Lastly, they point out that the downturn in economic and financial health of key world markets, especially Asia, the largest with the largest pressure on U.S. prices, although world grain and oilseed use has been well above trend during the last 3 years.

What is the point of those comments? The point is that no matter how we would have designed the policy, we were working against a world situation, both economically and climatically, and productionwise that would have been very difficult to foresee. We did not foresee it, nor was it debated in 1995 and 1996, as we were crafting Freedom to Farm. We didn't recognize it in 1997. Toward the tail end of 1997, it became an indicator of problems to come. By 1998, it was very clear, and Congress responded. It is now 1999 and Congress will respond again, with a multibillion-dollar direct aid package to production agriculture.

I said before the Ag Committee today and before Secretary Glickman that I am willing, starting next year, to re-examine the financial health of one region of the world, Asia, which also is the largest market for U.S. farm and food products. You mean your bureaucracy has been asleep at the switch now for many years. Do they have a division down at the Department of State that goes out and aggressively markets on a daily basis American agricultural surpluses? No, they don't. We offered them and provided them the tools. They were able to knock down the sanctions against Pakistan and India to move markets. This year, at our urging—and I applaud the President; now that I have criticized him, let me applaud him for bringing forth an Executive order that said that foodstuffs and medical supplies would not be subject to sanction. That was 3 months ago, and months later, in an agriculture crisis, they are just getting the regulations out.

Well, now, give me a break, Mr. President. You mean your bureaucracy takes 3 months to write a regulation that says farmers can supply a world market that they were denied? There is a lot of blame to be shared here, but, Mr. Vice President, you were on the Hill today talking about a farm crisis. Last I checked, the Department of Agriculture was under your watch, and for 3 long months you have sat and watched as the bureaucracy ground out regulations that allow access to world markets. I am sorry, Mr. President and Mr. Vice President, there is blame to be shared all around.

Let me shift just a little of it to you, Mr. Vice President, and you, Mr. President. The spirit is in the right place, but couldn't you have cut to the chase? Could we not be promoting grains, rice, and food commodities, and lentils into mid-Asian and the Central Eastern markets today like we should be? Well, we will be by fall and into the winter, thanks... to a policy you put in place, Mr. President. But 3 months later, we are finally beginning to see its results. Late is better than no results at all. When it is nation-to-nation, our Government at the Federal level has to be responsible, and we fail to be.

My credit goes to the chairman of our Senate Agriculture Committee who, for several years, has been pushing legislation to pull down those barriers. Last year, he offered it on the floor. It passed. This year, it will pass this Senate again, and I hope it passes the Congress. I hope the President can deal with it, and I hope he will sign it. Those are long-term provisions, but once in place, they are a legitimate and responsible role for Government to participate in.

Manipulating the market, shaping the prices. Absolutely not. We have to let the marketplace work its will. But it is very important that Government play the role it should play, and that is in dealing with the political barriers of trade, most assuredly in times of need, providing some safety nets. We did that last year, and we are going to do it again this year. I hope in the end we can craft a crop insurance plan that will provide the risk management tools that we have said to production agriculture we would provide.

Well, those are the circumstances in which we find ourselves today. In the course of the next few hours, the Senate will have an opportunity to vote on two very different measures, in the sense of the size. They are similar in the dollars and cents that go directly to production agriculture. I hope that, in the end, out of this can come a bipartisan package. There is a great deal in the Daschle-Harkin package that may be OK at some point down the road; but my guess is not without hearings held and no understanding of some broad policy changes that are at this moment not necessarily justifiable in this time of dealing with crises, both a price crisis and the situation that deals with weather disaster.

Those are the circumstances as I see it. I hope my colleagues will vote with the chairman of the Agriculture Appropriations Subcommittee in supporting his amendment and not allowing it to be tabled, so we can get at a clear vote and finalize this work today. If that can’t be done, I hope my colleagues on the other side of the aisle will join with us in seeing if we can make some adjustments to a final package. But I believe that the package offered up by the chairman is certainly in good faith and responds in an immediate way to need, and that the money can move directly to production agriculture, sending a very critical message to the families and the men and women engaged in agriculture who care and we understand the importance of them and what they do for all of us as Americans, and Americans are responding by a substantial ag package of nearly $7 billion.

Mr. BAUCUS addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Montana is recognized.

Mr. BAUCUS. Madam President, a lot of us have listened quite intently, and some of us not very intently, to the debate. Very simply, cutting to the chase, the question before us is whether or not to adopt an agriculture emergency assistance bill in the amount of roughly $10 billion—$10.6 billion, I think—infinitely on this side of the aisle, or, in the alternative, a bill that is about half that much.

The main difference between the two is not only the amount, but also the legislation in the bill on the one hand to provide drought assistance. It is emergency drought assistance. We have all watched on television in the last several days how dry so much of America is and how farmers’ crops are not growing and are not going to be harvested. In some parts of the country, it is not only drought; paradoxically, strangely, it is flooding. There is too much moisture in some parts of the country, making it impossible for farmers to grow a productive crop.

Compounding that, there is a very low price. According to the wheat producers and barley producers, livestock, hogs—you name it—the prices are just rock bottom, and they have been very low for a long time. So it is a combination of very low prices, historically low prices, for some commodities, and the weather.

The outlook is not good. The outlook for increased prices in the basic commodities we are talking about, as well as livestock, is grim. Nobody can project or foresee a solid, sound reason why prices necessarily are going to go up in the next several years.

What conditions are going to cause prices to go up? What is going to change or be different? To be truthful, there isn’t much we can see that is going to be much different. Producers are going to still produce. Other countries, particularly emerging and developing countries, are going to try to produce more agricultural products than they now are producing. On top of that, there is the phenomenon of a growing concentration of economic power in the beef packing industry, or in the grain trade, or the middlemen, if you will—that is, the traders, the packing plants, and retailers—are making money but the producers are not. That is not going to change in the foreseeable future. At least I don’t see anything that will cause that change.

So, essentially, we are here today because farmers are getting deeper and deeper and deeper in trouble. Their prices are continually falling. I hope my colleagues took a good look at the chart presented by my good friend, the Senator from North Dakota, Mr. Dorgan—the one that showed in current dollars what the price of wheat was in 1930, 1940, 1950, and 1960. The current price of wheat in today’s dollars is roughly $2 a bushel. Back in 1930, in current dollars, adjusted for inflation, it was about $7.50 a bushel. In 1940 and in 1950—I have forgotten the chart, but I think it was as high as maybe $13 or $14 a bushel.

You can see how the price generally has declined over the years for farmers, and it has declined greatly. This is not just a minor drop in price. It is a precipitous drop in price. It is steady. It is constant.

As I said, I can’t see much that is going to cause a significant difference in the conditions in the United States and in the country make the changes, which I will get to in a few minutes.

On the other hand, the prices that farmers pay for their products over the same period of time have risen dramatically—whether it is the prices the farmers pay for fertilizer, for gasoline, for tractors or combines, for fencing, or for labor costs. You name it.

All of the costs that farmers pay have continually risen to a very steep trend over the past 20 or 30 years since the Depression, and at the same time prices that farmers get for their products generally have fallen, although there was a period several years ago where prices were high—$5, $6, or $7 a bushel, and that was about 5, 6, 7, or 8 years ago, as I recall. But generally the trend is down.

Why has this happened? It has happened for a couple of reasons: One, many more countries are producing products—wheat, barley, and so on and so forth. Second, as I mentioned, the concentration of economic power in the retail industry, in the wholesale industry, and in the packing industry, but not a concentration of power for the farmers.

On top of that, recently there is the Asian downturn where the Asian economies a couple of years ago began to deteriorate. Their purchasing power dropped dramatically. They devalued their currencies in order to try to prop themselves up. As a consequence, American exports to Asia fell dramatically—in combination with the low demand, particularly from Asia, and the higher supply, particularly in countries producing and, on top of that, the drought and too much rain in some parts of the country.

So we are here today to try to decide what size of the emergency assistance should be.
I submit that we should not only make the direct payments to farmers but also accommodate the drought. We should accommodate the farm disaster that has beset the farmers in addition to the economic disaster.

That is just a short-term, immediate solution. We should get on it right away, and we should get it passed this week, lock, stock, and barrel—all of it passed this week to give farmers a little bit of hope.

Then, to begin to give farmers a little more hope for the future, we have to pass a modification to the so-called Freedom to Farm bill. We have to pass a new farm bill.

I remember when Freedom to Farm was debated. Most farmers I talked to in my home State of Montana were very leery and very nervous about this Freedom to Farm bill. A lot of them—I daresay a majority of them—went along with it because at that time prices were higher. As I recall, it was about one-plus a bushel. The so-called AMTA payments were a little higher. There was more money in farmers’ pockets. But farmers knew—the ones I talked to, and I talked to a whole bunch of them—that we would get on with it then, but on down the road there was going to be a real problem, and probably times were not going to be nearly as good as they were then. But we kind of swept that problem under the rug and thought we would cross that bridge when we got there.

We are there. It has happened. We are in trouble. Farmers know it. So let’s just get this thing passed. But we very quickly have to begin to address the peaks and the valleys in the prices that farmers face.

I would like to remind folks in the cities that farmers are in a much different situation from most any other businessperson because farmers cannot control their price. The price is determined by the vagaries of the market, the vagaries of weather, and it is international; it is an international price in most cases. They have virtually no control over their prices. Take any other businessperson. He or she can raise or lower their prices to sell to retailers or to sell to consumers. There are ways to adjust to help maximize their return.

Moreover, farmers cannot control their costs. They have to pay what that farm implement dealer charges. They have to pay what that fertilizer costs. They just have to pay that price. They have to bear those costs. Any other businessperson has a lot of control over his or her costs—either by downsizing, laying a few people off here or there, making other adjustments, or cutbacks. Big businesses can certainly make big adjustments to their costs, and have, with major downsizing. The farmer can’t do that. The farmer has no control over costs and virtually no control over prices.

That is why we have to have some kind of legislation that eaves out the peaks and valleys and gives farmers a modicum of safety net. We need that desperately, and, for the sake of farmers, we need to get that passed.

One final point: This is a subject for a later day. But we need a level international playing field. We do not have it today. I give a lot of credit to our USTR, to the administration, and to others who have worked to try to make it more level. They have worked hard, if the truth be known, than other administrations have. We are nowhere close to the position where we have to be.

I will mention two subjects, and then I will close. One is export subsidies. We need an end to world export subsidies for agriculture. They have to be eliminated.

Today the European Union accounts for about 86 percent of all the world’s agricultural export subsidies. We Americans account for about 1 to 2 percent.

Europeans have 60 times the agricultural export subsidies that we have. That is a very great distortion of the market. Agricultural export subsidies are paid to European farmers if they export. What is the farmer going to do in Europe? He exports. He gets a subsidy for it—and a big, healthy subsidy for it. That is to say nothing about all the internal price supports the Europeans have that are much greater than ours.

The ministerial in Seattle begins at the end of this year. As we approach the next WTO, one of our main objectives, one of our main goals should be the total elimination of agricultural export subsidies. That is going to help. That is going to help reduce the worldwide supply just a little bit. And every little bit helps. I have a lot of other ideas about what we can do, but I list that one that is very critical.

Point No. 2: In general, on the WTO, there are a lot of things we have to do to level the playing field so that Americans are no longer suckers and taken for granted to the degree that we have been.

But to sum it all up, let’s pass this agriculture emergency aid bill immediately. Let’s pass the bill that makes sense, the one that helps farmers. And that is the one that not only puts some money back into farmers’ pockets for the short term but also addresses the drought, which the other bill does not address. It addresses the drought there and everywhere. We have to give the farmer the oxygen mask. We have to give the farmer the blood transfusion so that the farmer is no longer in intensive care.

That oxygen mask and that blood transfusion is this bill. It is the bill that is sponsored by the Democratic leader and the Senator from Iowa. That is the bill that is going to take care to get that patient back out of intensive care. The next step, which we have to take very soon, is to get that patient rehabilitated and get that patient some physical therapy, if you will. Like some other procedures in the hospital so that the farmer can compete in the real world as a real person again. I hope we get to that point very quickly.

I yield the floor.

Mr. ROCKEFELLER. Madam President, I urge my colleagues, on both sides of the aisle, to vote for the Harkin-Daschle farm crisis aid amendment. This legislation is the desperately needed response for many thousands of American farmers and their families whose survival is threatened. This is precisely the situation that obligates us to use our authority to enact emergency spending, and to provide enough funding to save our farmers and their livelihoods. This is a crisis that demands the Senate’s immediate approval of emergency spending, and the Harkin-Daschle amendment is the step we must take now to respond to a genuine and severe crisis.

My plea is for the farmers I represent in West Virginia. Yesterday, the President declared all 55 counties of West Virginia a federal drought disaster area, along with over 30 counties from neighboring states. In West Virginia, the relentless drought has dried up our crops, drained our streams, and brought death to livestock and despair to thousands of farmers suffering these horrendous losses. Yesterday, with the senior Senator of West Virginia and Secretary Glickman, I visited the farm of Terry Dunn in Charles Town, West Virginia. We witnessed the tragic effects of the drought on his farm, and sat down with farmers across the state to hear their similar stories. The drought has devastated agricultural production in West Virginia in a way that even old-time farmers have never seen.

Because of the desperate situation, Senator BYRD has once again stepped up to ensure that help will be on the way. Through his devoted efforts and working with the sponsors of the Harkin-Daschle amendment, there are various sources of funds that will be available for West Virginia’s farmers—and, I emphasize this point, funds that will also be available to farmers in similar straits in Kentucky, Ohio, Maryland, Virginia, and Pennsylvania. There is nothing partisan or parochial about voting for this amendment and the drought assistance included. All of us are in a universality about this crisis like the one created by the drought.

I share the feelings of my colleagues on both sides of the aisle who have risen to extol the virtues of family agriculture and to extol the virtues of this amendment.

I yield the floor.
farmers and rural America. I truly believe that farmers may be the hardest working people—day in, day out, morning, night, in all the land. We can decide that we owe it to our farmers to stand with them in this time of severe crisis, and adopt the Harkin-Daschle amendment that will truly address their needs. Or we can settle for the far smaller level of funding provided by the distinguished chairman of the Agriculture Appropriations Subcommittee, Senator Cochran, that won't be nearly enough help.

For anyone who represents a drought-stricken state, there really is no choice. The Harkin-Daschle amendment is the humane and right thing to do. And for anyone who represents states and counties that have received disaster assistance after a tornado or hurricating drought have struck, or following a crippling flood, this is the time to extend the same kind of immediate help to a different but very real disaster.

We have heard for some time that rural America is in crisis. I doubt that many people in this body think of West Virginia when agriculture and farming are the topic. But in fact, in West Virginia thousands of farmers and their families labor hard to grow a variety of crops and raise livestock. They are farmers who have rarely asked for help from anyone, but today they are facing the crisis of a lifetime, and they do not want to give up the life and work they love.

I am asking my colleagues to vote for the Harkin-Daschle amendment because it will help the West Virginia farmers who have been the victim of two years of historic drought conditions that have ravaged their fields, orchards, and herds. Some of these families have run the same farms since before West Virginia was admitted to the union, and now they are in danger of losing everything.

Farmers in my state and many others need the Senate to act and to provide a level of assistance that matches the magnitude of the crisis. We have the means to do that today—in the form of the Harkin-Daschle amendment. We have the authority to do that today—by voting for emergency funding in a time of real crisis. We have the obligation to respond, not along partisan lines and not only if we represent farmers in need—but because a disaster has struck that requires the entire Senate to respond.

The Democratic leader is recognized.

Mr. DASCHLE. Madam President, I commend the distinguished Senator from Montana for his powerful state-ment and for the empathy that he again demonstrates for the people in rural America. He has been an extraordinary leader, and he is committed to solving issues as well as on so many issues relating to the farmer over the years. Again, his eloquence this afternoon clearly illustrates the degree to which he understands their problem and the degree to which he stands with them.

There is a silent death in rural America today—a death that is pervasive, a death that increasingly is affecting not only farmers but people who live in rural America, whether it is on the farm or in the town. Thousands upon thousands of family farmers and small businessmen and people who run the schools and run the towns are being forced to change their lives—are being forced to leave their existence in rural America, in an economy because it isn't economically viable.

The situation we have all called attention to over the course of the last 24 months has worsened. Just in the last 12 months, more than 1,900 family farmers have left the farm in South Dakota alone.

So there can be no question, this situation is as grave as anything we will face in rural America at any time in the foreseeable future. The question is, what should we do about it? Our response is the amendment that Senator Harkin and I have offered. I will have more of an opportunity to discuss that in a moment.

Let me say, regardless of what legislation I have offered, and what legislation may have been offered on the Republican side, I think there are five factors that should be included, five factors that ought to be considered as we contemplate what kind of an approach and in the manner we in the Congress must subscribe to if we are going to respond to the disastrous situation we find in rural America today.

The first is that this must be immediate. We cannot wait until September, or October, or November, at least to take the first step. I realize the legislative process is slow and cumbersome, but if we don't start now, we will never be able to respond in time to meet the needs created by the serious circumstances we face today. First and foremost, in the manner we respond, this has to be responsive to the situation by allowing the Senate to work its will and do something this week.

Second, it has to be sufficient. The situation, as I have noted, is already worse than it was last year. Last year, we were able to pass a $6 billion emergency plan. I believe $6 billion this year is a drop in the bucket, given the circumstances we are facing in rural America today. Our bill recognizes the insufficiency of the level of commitment we made in emergency funding last year. Our bill is sufficient. Our bill recognizes the importance and the magnitude of this problem and commits resources to it: $10.7 billion. Groups from the Farm Bureau to the Farmers Union to virtually every farm organization I know of believe we cannot underestimate how serious this situation is. We recognize that, provide the resources, and provide the sufficient level of commitment that will allow Members to address this problem.

So, No. 2, it has to be fair. No. 3, it has to be fair. Our country is very diverse. I heard Senator SARBANES talk about the disastrous circumstances we are facing right now in Maryland. Maryland is different. We don't have a drought in South Dakota, we have floods. We have low prices. We have commodities that cannot be sold because they cannot be stored. We have agricultural situations, regardless of commodity, that are the worst since the Great Depression in terms of real purchasing power. Southerners have disastrous crop problems. We have to recognize that there are regional differences and there are differences in commodities. Our emergency response has to address them all.

We also have to recognize that we must respond to the disaster that is there. Unfortunately, our Republican colleagues have drafted legislation that, at least in its current form, does not respond at all to the disaster. There is no disaster commitment in that legislation. For a lot of reasons—its insufficiency, its lack of fairness to commodities, its lack of appreciation of the problems within regions, the fact that it doesn't respond to the disaster—this side is convinced that if we were to pass the Republican bill today, it would not do the job.

I congratulate my colleagues for joining in responding to the situation, but I don't think it is broad enough. I don't think it is sufficient enough. I certainly don't think it is fair enough, given the circumstances we are facing today.

The final factor is simply this: As my colleague from Montana said, emergency assistance alone will not do it. We passed emergency assistance last year and here we are, back again, less than a year later, with an urgent plea on the part of all of agriculture to provide them with additional assistance. Why? Because the market isn't working. Why is the market not working? There are a lot of reasons, but I argue first and foremost it is not working because we don't have an agricultural policy framework for it to work.

Freedom to Farm is not working. We can debate that on and on and on, but there are more farm organizations, there are more economic experts, there are more people from all walks of life, they all agree that we are not where we are arguing today that we have to change the framework, that we have to reopen the Freedom to Farm bill. That is a debate for another day.
Today, this week, the debate must be: can we provide sufficient emergency assistance to bridge the gap to that day when we can achieve better prices, a better marketplace, more stability, and greater economic security?

In just a moment I will move to table the Republican plan. This is in keeping with an understanding I have with the majority leader and the distinguished chair of the Appropriations Committee. It would be my hope, once it is tabled, we can have a debate on the Democratic alternative and have a vote on that at some point in the not-too-distant future, once people have had the chance to be heard. Then, hopefully, we will find some resolution.

I think it is important at the end of the week, or no later than the end of the week, for the Senate to have agreed on something. I don't think it is enough to simply have a Republican vote and a Democratic vote and leave it at that. It is my hope that we can work together to resolve the deficiencies in the Republican bill and listen to them as they express themselves on what it is about the Democratic bill with which they are uncomfortable. At the end of the week, we simply cannot close and leave without having acted successfully on this issue. It is too important. It sends the wrong message if we simply walk away without having accomplished anything.

I am very hopeful we can accomplish something, that as Republicans and Democrats we can come together to send the right message to farmers that we hear them, to send the right message to rural America that we understand, and that we are prepared to respond.

As I noted, we have two versions that have not yet been reconciled. Because I don't think the Republican plan is sufficient, because I don't think it is fair, because it doesn't respond to all the needs, and I don't believe the Republican plan is adequate, because I don't think it is sufficient, because I don't think it is fair, because it doesn't respond to all regions and all commodities, I believe today we can do better than that and we must find a way with which to do better than that.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa.

Mr. HARKIN. I thank the leader for yielding before he makes a motion. I will not take more than 5 minutes. I didn't get a chance to make a couple of points earlier in the day.

I want to say a few words about the great work of the Senator from West Virginia. I opened the New York Times this morning and saw his picture. He was standing in a drought-stricken cornfield in West Virginia yesterday with the Secretary of Agriculture, Secretary Glickman. He called me on the phone yesterday before the Secretary had gone out to the taxed and drying away upon the terrible drought situation facing the farmers in West Virginia. Senator BYRD wanted to make sure that we addressed that situation, which we have in our bill, to address the severe drought situation not only in West Virginia who have suffered losses from excessive heat and drought in declared disaster areas.

As I noted, we have two versions that have not yet been reconciled. Because I don't think the Republican plan is sufficient, because I don't think it is fair, because it doesn't respond to all the needs, and I don't believe the Republican plan is adequate.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, at this point I move to table the amendment offered by the distinguished Senator from Mississippi.

Mr. KOHL. Mr. President, I rise in support of the Daschle amendment to provide relief to the farmers of this nation who now suffer from the irony of an economic crisis in rural America at a time when the rest of the nation is enjoying one of our history's greatest periods of economic prosperity. Senator DASCHLE's amendment will bring much needed relief to America's farmers who face the real threat of a failed market and, in some cases, farmers who are caught in the grips of one of the worst farm crises in our country's history.

Last year, Congress provided similar relief to farmers totaling nearly $6 billion. The amendment offered by Senator DASCHLE is in the $10 billion range. Without question, these are huge sums of money and this Congress should not recommend their expenditure without serious consideration of the need and the consequences. I should like to remind my colleagues that during the farm crisis of a decade ago, farm spending for commodity assistance programs in some years exceeded $25 billion. By comparison, the Daschle amendment, when coupled with USDA farm outlays under current law, especially when adjusted for inflation, are modest by comparison.

Ask any farmer across America, including dairy farmers in Wisconsin who a few months ago witnessed the greatest drop in milk prices in history, and you will learn just how serious the current farm crisis is. The Daschle amendment is necessary to protect our farmers and their ability to protect our national food security. We can point to many different reasons why the farm economy is now suffering. But more importantly, action is needed in deal with the immediate problem. Farmers now suffer from a failed safety net and Senator DASCHLE's amendment will help patch the holes in that safety net and until one of greater substance and success can be put in place.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, at this point I move to table the amendment offered by the distinguished Senator from Iowa.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, at this point I move to table the amendment offered by the distinguished Senator from Utah.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, at this point I move to table the amendment offered by the distinguished Senator from Iowa.
The result was announced—yeas 47, nays 51, as follows:

[Roll Call Vote No. 249 Leg.]

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. CRAIG. I move to lay that motion on the table.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I now withdraw the amendment I offered on behalf of Senator Cochran, amendment No. 1500.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment is withdrawn.

Mr. HARKIN. The Senator from Iowa [Mr. HARKIN], for himself, Mr. DASCHLE, Mr. DORGAN, Mr. KERREY, Mr. JOHNSON, Mr. CONRAD, Mr. RUSCUS, Mr. DURBIN, Mr. WELLSSTONE, Mrs. LINCOLN, and Mr. BAHNANES, proposes an amendment numbered 1506 to amendment No. 1499.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Iowa [Mr. HARKIN], for himself, Mr. DASCHLE, Mr. DORGAN, Mr. KERREY, Mr. JOHNSON, Mr. CONRAD, Mr. RUSCUS, Mr. DURBIN, Mr. WELLSSTONE, Mrs. LINCOLN, and Mr. BAHNANES, proposes an amendment numbered 1506 to amendment No. 1499.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(End of text of amendment as printed in today’s Record under “Amendments Submitted.”)

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I move to table the pending amendment and I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a vote occur on the motion to table that I just made at 5 p.m., with the time between now and then equally divided.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I ask the majority leader, for the purpose of scheduling, as I understand it, this will be the last vote and we will return to the dairy debate following this, is that correct?

Mr. LOTT, Mr. President, if I can respond, I understand that, depending on how this vote goes, there may be a second-degree amendment that would be offered by Senator Hagel.

But after that is dispensed with, that would be the final vote of the day, I believe, once we dispense with this whole process. Then we can go on to debate dairy, and the vote on dairy cloture will occur in the morning. We would have time for debate on cloture tonight.

Mr. DASCHLE. I thank the majority leader.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, as I understand it, time is equally divided, so we have about 7 minutes on our side.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa is recognized on the Democrats’ time.

Mr. HARKIN. I thank the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. There is less than 15 minutes remaining before the 5 o’clock vote.

Mr. HARKIN. Mr. President, we just had a vote on a package that was proposed by the other side which would have gone out in direct payments to farmers as sort of income support for the low prices this year. The motion to table that was voted on, I believe, was 51-to-47, very close vote, to be sure. So now, under the previous arrangement, the first-degree amendment offered by Senator DASCHLE and I, and others on this side, is now the pending amendment.

I would like to explain for a couple of minutes the differences between what we have proposed and what was previously voted on. The package that was previously voted on was basically direct payments to farmers, ATMA payments, transition-type payments, which would go out.

Our package is a lot more comprehensive in that it addresses not only the income loss of farmers this year because of disastrously low prices, but our proposal also has $2.6 billion in there for disaster assistance. It covers such things as the 30-percent premium discount for crop insurance, so we can get farmers to buy more crop insurance all over America. We have money in there for 1998 disaster programs that were not fully compensated for with money from last fall’s disaster package. We have some livestock assistance programs, Section 32 funding, related to natural disasters, and flooded land programs. I might also point out that because of the disastrous drought affecting the East Coast, we have money in our proposal that would cover disaster payments to farmers up and down the Middle Atlantic because of the severe drought that is happening.

I would also point out that it was because of the need to get this money out quickly to farmers, we have adequate funds in our disaster provision for staffing needs for the Farm Service Agency, so they can get these funds out in a hurry to our farmers.

I also point out that in the proposal now before us, we have an emergency conservation program for watershed and for wetlands restoration. We have some trade provisions that I think are eminently very important. They include $1.4 billion that would go for humanitarian assistance. This would be to purchase oilseed and products, and other food grains that would be sent in humanitarian assistance to starving people around the world. That was not in the previous amendment we voted on.

Mr. DORGAN. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. HARKIN. In one second, I will. Also, we have some emergency economic development because the disasters that have befallen our farmers and the low grain prices have affected many of our people in the smaller communities. We have funds for those problems also.

I yield for a question.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I wonder if the Senator can emphasize disaster relief. As the Senator indicated—and I knew this—the previous initiative we voted on by the majority party, and consistently was one that did not include disaster relief. We know disaster is occurring. Drought is spreading across the country. Disaster relief is necessary. Is it the case that the proposal we just voted on had no disaster relief and the proposal we will vote on at 5 o’clock, which you and I and so many others helped draft, does include disaster relief; is that not a significant difference?

Mr. HARKIN. The Senator from North Dakota is absolutely right. There was no disaster assistance in the other bill. There is disaster assistance in ours—$2.6 billion that would cover the droughts, cover the floods, and
The drought has destroyed between 30 percent and 80 percent of the crops in nineteen counties in Maryland. Loss of crops means no money to help farmers. Because of the severity of the drought, the Department of Agriculture has made it a challenge to draft a law to conserve water. The United States has had to take such drastic measures. Up to this point, water conservation efforts have been voluntary. The Governor has had to take such drastic action in Maryland's history that the State's history. Last week, Governor Glendenning declared a state-wide drought emergency. This is the first time in Maryland's history that the Governor has had to take such drastic measures. Up to this point, water conservation efforts have been voluntary. Now, Marylanders will be required by law to conserve water. The United States Geological Survey officials are calling the drought of 1999 possibly the century's worst in the Mid Atlantic region. We can't stand by and let our farmers face this drought on their own. These are hard working, tax paying farmers who, through no fault of their own, have been put in devastating situations. These are farmers we need. I will not stand by and allow them to go under. We must pass this farm package to save our farms.

Finally, Mr. President, I support this package because it supports farmers in all regions of the country. The combination of low prices, lack of adequate crop insurance and natural disasters has made it a challenge to draft a package that helps everyone. Different areas of the country suffer from one or all of these contingencies. As I mentioned, Maryland suffers from all three. This makes it especially hard for us. It also makes it especially vital that we pass this farm relief package today.

I strongly urge my colleagues to vote to help our American farmers and to save our farms.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there any objection to voting at this time?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

The question is on agreeing to the motion to table the amendment. On this question, the yeas and nays have been ordered, and the clerk will call the roll.

The legislative assistant called the roll.

Mr. NICKLES. I announce that the Senator from Utah (Mr. HATCH) and the Senator from New Mexico (Mr. DOMENICI), are necessarily absent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. SMITH of Oregon). Are there any other Senators in the Chamber who desire to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 54, nays 44, as follows:

[Rollcall Vote No. 290 Leg.]

YEAS—54
Abraham Frist McConnell
Allard Gorton Murkowski
Ashcroft Graham Nickles
Bennett Gramm Roberts
Bond Grams Roth
Brownback Grassley Santorum
Bunning Gregg Sessions
Campbell Hagel Shelby
Chafee Helms Smith (NH)
Cochran Hutchinson Smith (OK)
Collins Hutchison Snowe
Coverdell Inhofe Specter
Craig Jeffords Stevens
Crago Kyl Thomas DeWine Lott Thompson
Enzi Lugar Thurmond
Fitzgerald Mack Voinovich
Fitzgerald McCaин Warner

NAYS—44
Akaka Durbin Lieberman
Baucus Edwards Lincoln
Bayh Feinstein Mikulski
Biden Harkin Moynihan
Bingaman Hollings Murray
Boxer Inouye Reed
Breault Johnson Reid
Bryan Kennedy Robb
Burns Kerry Rockefeller
Byrd Kerry Sarbanes
Cleland Kohl Schumer
Conrad Landrieu Torricelli
Daschle Lautenberg Wollstone
Dodd Leahy Wyden
Dorgan Levin

NOT VOTING—2
Domenici Hatch

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. COCHRAN. I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. CRAIG. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. COCHRAN. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. ASHCROFT. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AMENDMENT NO. 1507 TO AMENDMENT NO. 1499
(Purpose: To provide stability in the United States agriculture sector and to promote adequate availability of food and medicine for humanitarian assistance abroad by requiring congressional approval before the imposition of any unilateral agricultural or medical sanction against a foreign country or foreign entity)

Mr. ASHCROFT. Mr. President, it is my intention to send an amendment to the desk.

Mr. HARKIN. May we have order, please. This is an important amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate will be in order.

Mr. ASHCROFT. I thank the Chair. And I am grateful to the Senator for asking for order in the Chamber.

I intend to send an amendment to the desk relating to something that I think is very important to the members of the agricultural community in the United States of America.

This is an amendment that relates to farmers because it relates to their ability to sell the things they work hard to produce. It would require the President for the United States to make sure we do not provide the President of the United States to sanction—meaning, to curtail—the right of farmers to export and sell that which they produce on their farms.

The farmers work hard, they get a bumper crop, and then, because the President would decide that he wanted to make some foreign power or another respond to his interests or his requirements, or our interests or our requirements, the President would impose an embargo, a trade embargo, which would forbid our agriculture community to export corn or wheat or soybeans—agricultural products—to these other countries.

Sanctions do play an important and vital role in the United States foreign policy. But I think when you talk about unilateral sanctions that the Government of the United States enters into alone, and you talk about food and medicine as the subject of sanctions, you have to ask yourself a variety of different questions that I think really result in sort of a different conclusion about food and medicine type sanctions than a lot of other sanctions.

Put it this way. I think it is important that we make sure we do not provide countries with the wrong kind of hardware, the wrong kind of commercial assets. But it makes very little sense, in most circumstances, to say to other countries: We are not going to let you spend money on food; we are not going to let you spend money on medicine.

This amendment, which I will be offering, is an amendment that is designed to involve the Congress in the important decision about whether or not we would have unilateral sanctions that relate to food and medicine that are unilaterally imposed by the United States of America, not in conjunction with any other powers.

To summarize the kind of regime that would be specified in this amendment, the bill would not tie the hands of the executive branch but make it necessary for the President to get the consent of Congress. The President’s hands wouldn’t be tied. He could still get sanctions. He would simply have to have the agreement of the Congress so that while the President would need the agreement of Congress, his hands would not be tied. He would literally have to shake hands with Congress before he embargoes agriculture or medicine. The amendment would not restrict or alter the President’s current ability to impose broad sanctions with other nations. It certainly does not preclude sanctions on food and medicine. It simply says the President may include food and medicine in a sanction regime, but he must first obtain congressional consent.

We did add a special provision to this amendment with regard to countries that are already sanctioned. For the seven countries under a broad sanctions regime, the President would have to afford the President and the Congress some time to review the sanctions on food and medicine on a country-by-country basis. Therefore, the bill would not take effect until 180 days after it is signed by the President. This gives both branches of Government enough time to review current policy and to act jointly, as would be necessary if jointly they were to decide that sanctions against food and medicine should be maintained.

There are some exceptions. If Congress declares war, there is no question about it; the President should have the authority to sanction food and medicine without congressional approval. The President’s authority to cut off food or medicine would obviously should exist and would continue to exist.

The bill specifically excludes all dual-use items and products that could be used to develop chemical or biological weapons. There are not many agricultural or medicinal products that have military applications, but the bill provides safeguards to ensure our national security is not harmed.

We made sure that no taxpayer money could be used to subsidize exports to any terrorist governments. We specifically exclude any kind of agricultural credits or guarantees for governments that are sponsors of international terrorism. However, we do allow credit guarantees to be extended to private sector and nongovernmental organizations. This targeted approach helps us show support for the very people who need to be strengthened in these countries, and by specifically excluding terrorist governments, we send a message that the United States will in no way assist or endorse the activities of nations which threaten our interests.
Just last week, the American Farm Bureau and all State farm bureaus across the Nation released another recovery action alert. It noted an $18 billion reduction in emergency funding. I think it is a serious request. It is not a request that I take lightly. We are now considering proposals in the Congress from about $7- to $11 billion. We need to be addressing the emergency needs of farmers, but we also need to reduce our own barriers that our own farmers suffer under such as unilateral agricultural embargoes.

The USDA estimated that there has been a $1.2 billion annual decline in our economy during the mid-1990s as a result of these kinds of embargoes. The National Association of Wheat Growers estimated that sanctions have shut U.S. wheat farmers out of 10 percent of the world’s wheat market. The Washington Wheat Commission projects that if sanctions were lifted this year, our wheat farmers could export an additional 4.1 million metric tons of wheat, a value of almost half a billion dollars. The University of St. Thomas and the American farmers. American soybean farmers could capture a substantial part of the soybean market in sanctioned countries. For example, an estimated 90 percent of the demand for soybean meal in one country, 60 percent of the demand for soybeans in another. Soybean farmers’ income could rise by an estimated $100- to $147 million annually, according to the American Soybean Association.

For us to raise barriers against the freedom of our farmers to market the things they produce and hold them hostage to our foreign policy objectives would require that we could get great foreign policy benefit from these objectives. And there isn’t any clear benefit. One of the economic studies about agricultural sanctions was the study of our grain embargo against the Soviet Union in the late 1970s. Indeed, there were upset about activities in the Soviet Union, so we indicated we wouldn’t sell to the Soviet Union the grain we had agreed to sell to them. It was something like 17 million tons.

It turns out that by canceling our agreements, the Soviets went to the world market and according to the best studies I know of, and they saved $250 million buying grain on the world market instead of buying it from us. So our embargo not only hurt our own farmers but aided the very country to which we had directed our sanction. It seems to me we should not be strengthening our targets when we are weakening American farmers through the imposition of unilateral sanctions on food and medicine—the idea somehow that we allow foreign farmers to starve their people and to spend their resources on things that are used to destabilize their neighbors or weaponry and the like. I believe it is important for us to say to our farmers that we are not going to make them a pawn in the hands of people for international diplomacy. The rest of America continues to go meekly forward, and they are bearing the brunt because they operate in a world marketplace where there are markets for these commodities that, in the event the foreign powers want them, they get them and replace them very easily.

It is with that in mind that this amendment has been constructed, carefully constructed, and designed to respect the need for sanctions where they are appropriate. When in sanctions multilaterally, this does not come into play. This is designed to affect unilateral sanctions on food and medicine, and it doesn’t prohibit them. It simply says that in order for the President to impose them, he would have to gain the consent of the Congress.

I am pleased that there is a long list of individuals who have been willing to cosponsor this amendment with me. Frankly, this amendment is a combination of provisions that were in a number of different proposals in the Congress and the President HAGEL of Nebraska and I had proposed. We have come together to work on it. Senator Baucus, Senator Roberts, Senator Kerrey of Nebraska, Senator Dodd of Connecticut, Senator Brownback of Kansas, Senator Grams of Minnesota, Senator Warner of Virginia, Senator Leahy of Vermont, Senator Craig of Idaho, Senator Fitzgerald of Illinois, Senator Dorgan, Senator Sessions, Senator Lincoln of Arkansas, Senator Harkin, Senator Conrad, Senator Inhofe and others have been willing to cosponsor this amendment. I think it is an important amendment. I am pleased to have this opportunity to offer the amendment.

I send the amendment to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Missouri (Mr. Ashcroft), for himself, Mr. Haged, Mr. Baucus, Mr. Roberts, Mr. Kerrey, Mr. Dodd, Mr. Brownback, Mr. Grams, Mr. Warner, Mr. Leahy, Mr. Craig, Mr. Fitzgerald, Mr. Dorgan, Mr. Sessions, Mrs. Lincoln, Mr. Landrieu, Mr. Harkin, Mr. Inhofe, and Mr. Chafee, proposes an amendment numbered 1307 to amendment No. 1499.

Mr. Ashcroft. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

(The text of the amendment is printed in today’s RECORD under “Amendment Submitted.”) while we work to improve farm legislation, we cannot continue to ask our farmers to bear the brunt of U.S. foreign policy decisions.

The amendment we are currently considering would be a positive first step in addressing sanctions reform. Under current law, agricultural and medicinal products may be included under a sanctions package without any special protections against such actions. However, if this amendment is adopted, agricultural products and medicine would be precluded from any new unilateral sanctions unless the President submits a report to Congress specifically requesting these products be sanctioned. Congress would then have to approve the request by joint resolution. Furthermore, should an agricultural sanction be imposed, it would automatically sunset after two years. Renewal would require a new request from the President and approval by the Congress.

This amendment undoubtedly sets a high standard for the imposition of unilateral economic sanctions for food and medicine. It is a standard that seeks to end the practice of using food and medicine as a foreign policy weapon at the expense of our agricultural producers.

Mr. President, the strong support we are receiving from commodity groups is a testament to the importance of this amendment to our agricultural producers. Organizations such as the American Soybean Association, the National Corn Growers Association, and the National Association of Wheat Growers—groups that represent America’s farmers—support this amendment because they understand and the costs and consequences associated with unilateral economic sanctions.

Mr. President, this measure will help our agricultural producers by returning some common sense to the imposition of U.S. sanctions. I urge my colleagues to join with the cosponsors of this amendment to take the first step toward economic sanctions reform.

Mr. TORRICELLI addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Jersey.

Mr. TORRICELLI. Mr. President, I rise in opposition to the Ashcroft amendment. As every other Member of this institution, I understand the hardship in American agriculture. I know the suffering of American families, and I know something of the problem of the policy. This amendment is based on a false premise. We are telling the American farmer that with all of his problems, a significant difference in his life can be made if only we can stop these sanctions.

It is a false premise. All of these countries combined, their total importation of agricultural products is 1.7 percent of agricultural imports.

So even if they bought nothing from Canada, nothing from Argentina, nothing from Australia, and nothing from Europe, altogether it would be 1.7 percent. What is the potential of the countries that we are being told markets will open by the Ashcroft amendment? How much money is it that these people have to spend to help the American farmer? In North Korea, the total per capita annual income is $480. In Cuba, it is $150.

Mr. President, the American farmer is being told: There is a rescue here for you. Rather than deal with the substantive problems of American agriculture at home, we have an answer for you. We are going to open up importation and export to all these terrorist nations, and that will solve the problem. Really? With $150 in purchasing power in Cuba? The purchasing power of the North Koreans?

The fact of the matter is, to the extent there is any potential in these countries to purchase American agricultural products, the administration has already responded. There may not be much of an opportunity, but what there is, we have responded to.

Last week, the administration permitted the limited sale of food and agricultural commodities to these countries by licenses on a country-by-country basis. We did so for a responsible reason. If the North Koreans are going to import American agricultural products, we want to know who is importing them and who is getting them—in other words, that they are going to go to the people of North Korea and not the military of North Korea. If they are going to Cuba, we want to know the Cuban people are getting them, not the Cuban military. The same goes for Iran and Libya.

The potential of what Mr. Ashcroft is asking we have already done but in a responsible way. Indeed, potentially, with Iran, Libya, and Sudan, this could be $2 billion worth of sales to those countries—but ensuring that they go to people—not militaries, not terrorist sects, but the people. Here is an example of the policy the administration has had since May 10 with regard to Cuba. Regulations permit the license and sale of food and commodities on a case-by-case basis if they go to non-governmental, religious organizations, private farmers, family-owned businesses. If your intention is to sell food to any of those entities, you can get a license and you can do it. To whom can’t you sell? The Communist Party, the Cuban military for re-export by the Cuban Government for Fidel Castro.

The amendment offered by the Senator from Missouri solves no problem and simply contradicts the administration’s policy on curtailing the food that goes to the people we want to be the end users. The same is true in North Korea.

today, the United States is in a humanitarian assistance program to North Korea. Over $459 million worth of food has been donated to North Korea through the World Food Program. UNICEF has done the same. But we send monitors. When the food arrives in North Korea, we monitor that it is going to the people of North Korea, not the military. We want to know the end users.

The amendment by the Senator from Missouri will be a wholesale change in American foreign policy. Sanctions that have been in place since the Kennedy administration, through Johnson, Nixon, Carter, and Reagan, will be abandoned wholesale—a radical change in American foreign policy.

What are the nations and what are the policies that would be changed? I want my colleagues to walk down memory lane with me. Before you vote to end a limited humanitarian food program, I want you to understand who will be getting these food exports, without licenses, which are not required to ensure the end users. I cannot be the only person in this institution who remembers Mr. Qadhafi, his refusal to bring the terrorists to justice who did so to Pan Am 103. We are now in an agreement with Libya to bring those terrorists to trial. Now, in the middle of the trial, while there is an agreement, this amendment would lift the sanctions and allow the exportation of those products.

The Sudan. Sanctions have not been in place long. In an act I am sure my colleagues recall, Mr. bin Laden’s lieutenant plotted and executed the destruction of American embassies in Kenya and Tanzania in August 1998; 224 people were murdered. The administration appropriately responded with sanctions prohibiting the exportation of products of any kind to the Sudan. The amendment of the Senator from Missouri would lift those sanctions.

North Korea. The intelligence community and the Japanese Government have put us on notice that, in a matter of weeks or months, the North Korean Government may test fire an intermediate to long-range missile capable of hitting the United States. We are in discussions with the North Koreans urging them not to do so. We have entered into a limited humanitarian food program to convince them not to engage in the design or testing of an atomic weapon. The amendment of the Senator from Missouri would negate that program, where we already sell food, knowing its end use and end sanctions.

Iran. The administration has already entered into a program where we can license the exportation of food to Iran if we know its end use. But only this year, the administration again noted that Iran supports terrorist groups responsible for the deaths of at least 12 Americans and has funded a $100 million program to undermine the Middle Clinton. You are. And you are undertradicting the foreign policy of Bill this floor and argue that you are conscious but would you like to do busi-planes, and then to say: It is out-rorist list because they kill our citi-

Is our policy to put nations on the ter-long memories.

Are we going to salvage American agriculture. If Cuba was capable of importing food today, they would do so from Argentina, Canada, or Europe. They don’t because they can’t, because they have no money. The same is true of North Korea. If North Korea had the money to import food, they would do so from every other nation in the world that does not have sanctions on them. They don’t because they can’t, because they have no money. You are making an offer no one can accept—an answer to the American farmer that has no substance. I don’t believe there is a single farmer in America who either believes this argument or, even if it would be successful, even if they did have money, would want to import food, or the Iranians. American farmers—all of the American people—have long memories.

These people are outliers. Every one of these nations is on the terrorist list. Is our policy to put nations on the terrorist list because they kill our citizens, bomb our embassies, destroy our planes, and then to say: It is outrageous but would you like to do business? Can we profit by you? We know our citizens have been hurt. But, you know, that was yesterday; now we would like to make a buck.

Please, my colleagues, don’t come to this floor and argue that you are contracting the foreign policy of Bill

Clinton. You are. And you are undermining his negotiations as to the North Korean missile tests and atomic weapons, and you are undermining our effor-to bring people to justice in Libya and for human rights in Cuba. But don’t come to this floor and just claim you are undermining Bill Clinton. Half of these sanctions were put in place by Ronald Reagan and George Bush. This is 30 years of American for-gain policy with a single vote, with a stroke of a pen, that you would undermine.

Some of you may be prepared to forget some of the things through all of these years. Maybe some of these acts are distant. But my God. Saddam, the destruction of American embas-dies? Some of those families are still grief-

ing. We haven’t even rebuilt the embassies. We are still closing them because of terrorist threats. The man who mas-termined it is still being hunted.

The Sudan?

This is our idea of how to correct

American foreign policy? My colleagues, I want to see this amendment defeated. But, indeed that is not enough.

If from North Korea to the Sudan to Iran there is a belief that you can just wait the United States out, that we are the kind of people who will forget that quickly, who will profit in spite of these terrible actions against our people, what a signal is that to others. What a signal it is to others who engage in terrorism.

I do not hold a high standard with whom we do business. Business is business. Politics is politics. But there is a point at which they meet. These rogue nations, identified after careful analysis of having engaged in the sponsoring of international terrorism, deserve these sanctions. On a bipartisan basis, we have always given them the part-sanctions. Don’t desert that policy.

Bin Laden in his cave in Afghanistan, Abu Nidal in the Middle East are even now plotting against Israel and the peace process. I don’t know whether the American farmer will know of or appreciate this vote. But I know that in those capitals in those countries where the people committed these acts it will be noted.

This is not a partisan affair. I am very proud of CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE 19141

NA McGwire, who has joined this fight for some years, to the distinguished chairman of the committee, Chairman HELMS, to Bob GORMAN, to our own leadership in HARRY REID, to, indeed, the majority leader, Senator LOTT, they have all joined in defeating this amendment because it is right for American foreign policy.

Let’s do justice to the American farmer by dealing with the substantiveproblems, not to find excuses, and not dealing with other matters. We do nothing by fooling the American farmer. The American farmer stands shoulder to shoulder with every other American against terrorism and the defense of our country and its interests.

Mr. President, I yield the Commerce Depart-

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. HAGEL. Thank you, Mr. President.

Mr. President, I rise to strongly support this amendment. I am a cospon-sor. As Senator ASHCROFT noted, it is the blending of Senator ASHCROFT’s bill and my bill that produced this amendment.

This amendment establishes a basic principle: Food and medicine are the most fundamental of human needs and should not be included in unilateral sanctions.

The rate of change in today’s world is unprecedented in history. Trade, and particularly trade in food and medicine, is the common denominator that ties together the nations of the world. American exports of food and medicine act to build bridges around the world. It strengthens ties between people and demonstrates the innate goodness and humanitarianism of the American people.

This amendment recognizes that there could be reasons to restrict food and medicine exports and recognizes that, in fact, sometimes unilateral sanctions are in the best interests of this Nation’s security. We do not take that ability away from the President of the United States. That is not what this amendment does. We all recognize that there are times when unilateral sanctions should, in fact, be in the arsenal of our foreign policy tools, but it also recognizes that the Congress should have a role in that decision.

This amendment recognizes that there are circumstances where export controls may be necessary, such as in times of war, if it is a dual-use item controlled by the Commerce Department, or if the product could be used in the manufacture of chemical or biological weapons. That is not the debate here. That is not the debate.

But we have had a long and sad history in understanding what unilateral sanctions do to those who impose them. We don’t isolate Cuba. We don’t isolate China. We don’t isolate any nation other than our own interests when we say: We will not sell you our grain, our medicines.

Do we really believe that in the world we live in today a nation cannot get wheat from Australia, from Can-da, or cannot get soybeans from Brazil? The fact is that the world is dynamically changing all the time. The challenges change. The solutions to those challenges, the answers to those challenges, must be dynamic as well.

We need to send a strong message to our customers and our competitors around the world that our agricultural producers are going to be consistent and reliable suppliers of quality and plentiful agricultural products.
I heard the discussion on the floor of the Senate today about this amendment—talking about, my goodness, are we going to fix the plights of farmers with this amendment with sanctions reform? No, No, we are not.

But I think it is important we understand that this is connected. This is linked. Trade reform and sanctions reform were, in fact, part of the commitment that this Congress made to our agricultural community in 1996.

We need to lead. We need to be creative. We need to be relevant. We need to connect the challenges with the policy. USDA, for example, reports that the value of agricultural exports this year will drop to $49 billion. That is a reduction from $60 billion just 3 years ago. American agriculture is already suffering from depressed prices and reduced global markets, as we have heard very clearly today, making sanctions reform even more important. Again, let’s not blur the lines of this debate.

I noted as well the debate today on the floor regarding the Iranian piece of sanctions reform.

Let’s not forget that when America broke diplomatic relations with Iran, Iran was the largest importer of American wheat in the world. I think, as has been noted, Iran this year will import almost $3 billion worth of wheat. Are we talking about just the commercial interests and the agricultural interests of America and national security interests be damned? No, we are not talking about that.

This amendment gives the President the power, when he thinks it is in our national security interests or in our national interests as he defines those through his policy, to impose unilateral sanctions. However, he does it with the Congress as a partner: the Congress has a say when we use unilateral sanctions.

This is not just about doing what is right for the American farmer and rancher, the agricultural producer. This amendment also makes good humanitarian and foreign policy sense.

Our amendment will say to the hungry and oppressed of the world that the United States will not make their suffering worse by restricting access to food and medicine. I had the opportunity to hear the arguments; I understand the arguments. I don’t believe I live in a fairyland about where the food goes, where the medicine goes. We understand there always is that issue when we export food, sell food, give food to dictators, to tyrants. We understand realistically where some of that may be placed.

To arbitrarily shut off to the people, the oppressed masses of the world, food, medicine, and opportunities is not smart foreign policy. It will make it harder for an oppressive government, the tyrants and dictators, to blame the United States for humanitarian plights of their own people. In today’s world, unilateral trade sanctions primarily isolate those who impose them.

For those reasons and many others that Members will hear in comments made yet this afternoon on the floor of the Senate, I strongly encourage my colleagues to take a hard look at what we are doing, what we are trying to do, to make some progress toward bringing a unilateral sanctions policy into a world that is relevant with the borderless challenges of our time. I believe we do protect the national interests of this country, that we sacrifice none of the national interests on behalf of American agriculture. In fact, this amendment accomplishes both.

I yield the floor.

Mr. GRAHAM. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. HAGEL. I am happy to yield to the Senator.

Mr. GRAHAM. I am struck with some of the inconsistencies within this amendment. I appreciate my colleague’s elucidation as to their significance.

Under “New Sanctions,” it states: . . . the President may impose a unilateral agricultural sanction or a unilateral medical sanction against a foreign country or a foreign entity for any fiscal year, unless—

And there are certain exceptions. In terms of “new sanctions,” we are speaking as to presidially imposed.

Under “Existing Sanctions” it says: . . . with respect to any unilateral agricultural sanction or unilateral medical sanction that is in effect as of the date of enactment of this Act for any fiscal year. . . .

As my colleague knows, some of the sanctions that would be covered by this existing sanctions language are currently imposed, not presidially imposed.

The question I have is, Why make the distinction for new sanctions, that they must be presidially imposed, assumedly reserving to Congress the right to impose a new sanction? Yet with old existing sanctions, the amendment wipes out both those that were presidially as well as those which had been sanctioned by action of Congress, what is the rationale?

Mr. HAGEL. I will yield to Senator Ashcroft. That is in his part of the bill. Our two bills were melded together.

Mr. ASHCROFT. May I respond to the question of the Senator from Florida?

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BROWNBACK). The Senator from Missouri.

Mr. ASHCROFT. I thank the Senator from Florida for his question.

This bill is to harmonize the regime of potential sanctions and basically requires an agreement by the President and the Congress for any unilateral sanction that would be expressed by this country against exporting agricultural or medicinal commodities to other countries.

This results in having to come back to establish any existing sanctions, and that has been considered in the drafting of this bill. This bill is not to go into effect for 180 days after it is signed by the President, to give time for the consideration of any sanctions that exist in the measure, and if the President and Congress agree that there are additional sanctions to be levied unilaterally against any of these countries, then those can in fact be achieved.

The intention of the bill is to give the Congress and the President the ability to so agree on those issues.

Mr. GRAHAM. To continue my question, I don’t think that was quite responsive to the issue I am raising.

Now, a Congress in the future could, the principal argument was that we should not allow the President to unilaterally be imposing these sanctions, and in terms of new sanctions as outlined on page 4, you clearly restrict the application by the President of prohibition to those that are unilateral.

As it relates to existing sanctions, this language appears to sweep up both sanctions that were unilaterally imposed by the President, such as the one against Sudan last year, as well as those that were imposed by action of Congress, such as the legislation that bears the name of the chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee which was adopted some time ago. That was an action which had the support of the Senate, the House of Representatives, and was signed into law by the President of the United States.

Who else does the Senator want to have sanctioned in order to be an effectual enforcement of policy of the United States of America?

Mr. ASHCROFT. Mr. President, in response to the inquiry of the Senator from Florida, it is clear that the intent of this bill and the language which would be carried forward is that sanctions should be the joint agreement between the Congress and the President. This bill does set aside existing sanctions and establish a singular regime in which sanctions would exist unless another bill or enactment changed that.

Mr. HAGEL. I will yield to Senator Ashcroft. That is in his part of the bill. Our two bills were melded together.

Mr. ASHCROFT. May I respond to the question of the Senator from Florida?”
during which that is to happen provided for in this amendment.

Mr. GRAHAM. Continuing with the question, would the Senator from Missouri be amenable to a modification of this amendment to make the existing sanctions provision on page 5 consistent with the new sanctions standards on page 4?

Mr. ASHCROFT. Mr. President, I am willing to consider and would like to have an opportunity to discuss that. I am pleased during the course of the debate this evening to see if something can be worked out. If the Senator from Florida believes there is progress to be made in addressing that, we would be pleased to talk about those issues.

Mr. GRAHAM. If I could move to another provision, which is beginning at line 12, we have the “Countries Supporting International Terrorism” section, which I refer to as the Graham amendment.

This subsection shall not affect the current prohibitions on providing, to the government of any country supporting international terrorism, all aid, including United States foreign assistance, United States export assistance, or any United States credits or credit guarantees.

What is missing from that set of prohibitions is prohibitions against direct, unaided commercial sales. As I gather from the Senator’s earlier presentation of this amendment, it is his intention that a nonassisted commercial sale between a U.S. entity and one of these terrorist states would be acceptable, i.e., would not be subject to continued prohibitions?

Mr. ASHCROFT. It is our intention, absent an agreement by the President of the United States and the Congress, to embargo such sales. Such entities would be able to use their hard currency to buy arms or other things we have sought to do in this legislation. But if you have or you do not have, we are willing and pleased to have you spend that to acquire things that will keep you from oppressing individuals.

I suppose you could argue rich terrorist states are going to be better off than poor terrorist states. I think that is something that exists independent of this particular proposal of this particular amendment. Rich nations, be they good, bad or indifferent, generally are better off than poor ones. But I think it is pretty clear that we do not have an intention of saying we are going to take a regime which is in power and we are going to sustain it by allowing it to do otherwise be its purchases of food by providing credit so they can then use their hard currency to buy arms or other things that would be repressive.

Our intention is to make sure, if the money is spent, they spend it on food and medicine to the extent we can have them do so.

Mr. GRAHAM. Is it a fair characterization of subsection 4 that commercial sales of food and medicine to a rich terrorist state are acceptable; i.e., would be exempt from the current licensing provisions but humanitarian sales, that is, sales that qualify for one of the various forms of U.S. Government assistance to a poor terrorist state, would continue to be subject to those licensing requirements?

Mr. ASHCROFT. I think one of the things we have sought to do in this legislation is to indicate we are not at war with the people of these regimes as a matter of fact, these regimes are at war with their people. Our intention is to be able to provide food and medicine to those people because we are not at war with them. As a matter of fact, too frequently their government is.

That means we are willing to sell it to them. We are willing to sell it to nongovernmental organizations, to commercial organizations, even to governments, if the governments will put an acceptable indication that we are not against the people of these countries; we are against these countries’ repressive, terrorist ways.

The terror is worse on their own people, in most of these cases. When we align ourselves with the people, align ourselves with the population in terms of their food and in terms of their health care and in terms of their medicine, that is good foreign policy. It shows the United States, while it will not endorse, fund or sustain, creditwise, a terrorist government, is not at war with people who happen to have to sustain the burden of living under a terrorist government.

So, yes, this allows people in those settings to make purchases if they have the capacity to do so. But it does not allow the government to command the credit of the United States, and in our view it should not.

Mr. GRAHAM. So I think the answer to the question is yes. That raises the question: I notice before the amendment was sent to the desk there was a handwritten insertion in the title of the amendment. The original title had said, “to promote adequate availability of food and medicine abroad by requiring congressional approval.” . . .” In the handwritten insertion, the prepositional phrase was added so it now reads “promote adequate availability of food and medicine for humanitarian assistance abroad by requiring congressional approval.” . . .” It seems actually the substance of the amendment does quite the opposite of the prepositional phrase.

The substance of the amendment says, if you are rich enough to be able to buy at commercial standards, you can avoid the necessity of licensing and all of the constraints that have been imposed by action of Congress, action of the President, or both on terrorist states, and that if you are a poor terrorist state and have been sanctioned by Congress or the President, or both, and would require some assistance in order to be able to get food, then you are still subject to all of these licensing requirements.

So the actual substance of the amendment is inconsistent with the modification that was made in the title. I suspect I know why that was done.

Mr. ASHCROFT. Let me just say, if it is permissible for me to respond, I thank the Senator from Florida for his careful questioning and the opportunity to make a response. I think this is a very constructive way to handle these issues.

I do not think there is anything that is not humanitarian about allowing nongovernmental organizations, commercial organizations, to buy food so... people can eat. I think that is humanitarian. I do not find that to be inconsistent with the title. I do not think in order to have the character of being as assistance and humanitarian, they have to be gifts or they have to be credit guarantees. The mere fact that Americans would make possible the sale of vital medicinal supplies and vital food supplies in a world marketplace to people who are hungry and people who need medicinal care is humanitarian.

We do make it possible for certain kinds of nongovernmental organizations and commercial organizations to get credit, but we simply draw a line in extending credit to governments which have demonstrated themselves to be unwilling to observe the rules of human decency and have been perpetrators of international terrorism and partakers in the worst of the instability that such terrorism promotes in the world community.

So it is with that in mind that we want people to be able to eat, understanding that the United States is not at war with the people of the world but has very serious disagreements with terrorist governments. We want people to be able to get the right kind of medicinal help, understanding that we are not at war with people who are unhealthy and who need help medically, and understanding that when people get that kind of help, and understand that the United States is a part of it, it can be good foreign policy for the United States.

But we do not believe that addressing the needs of the Government itself, especially allowing them to take their hard currency to buy arms, by our providing them with credit guarantees for their purchase of foodstuffs, would be appropriate.

Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. President, I appreciate the answers to the questions, and I think the summary of those answers is that we have established an inconsistent policy as between actions of the Congress relative to new sanctions and to existing sanctions.

Second, we have established a policy that, if you are a rich terrorist state and have the money to buy food at straight commercial standards, you can do so; if you are a poor terrorist state, that would require the access to some of these various trade assistance programs, then you cannot buy American food.

I do not believe this is an amendment that, once fully understood, the Members of the Senate will wish to be associated with.

Mr. MACK addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from the great State of Florida, Mr. MACK.

Mr. MACK. I thank the Chair.

First, I want to address a point that was made a few moments ago, an argument that went something like this: If we were to open up our markets, that action would, in essence, allow terrorists or countries to buy more food products. I just think that is fundamentally wrong. I think in fact they are buying all of the product that they can afford to buy now. And I would make the case that if they buy the product from us at a cheaper price because of it being subsidized, we are in fact subsidizing them.

So I just fundamentally disagree with where the proponents of this amendment are going.

Mr. ASHCROFT. Will the Senator yield?

Mr. MACK. Sure.

Mr. ASHCROFT. Is it the Senator’s belief that somehow all our agricultural products are subsidized; therefore, it would be cheaper than the world market price?

Mr. MACK. Again, I say to my colleague who has raised this question that I do find it strange that at just the time when Members are coming to the floor and asking the American taxpayer to come to the aid of the American farmer, they are at the same time asking us to lift sanctions to allow them to sell products to terrorist states.

I think, in fact, there is a connection between what is happening today—that is, some $6–$9 billion, depending on what this bill finally turns out to produce, $8–$9 billion in aid to American farmers, just after a few months ago with the additional aid to the American farmer—that you would find it appropriate to say to the American taxpayer: Now that you have given us this aid, we would like to have permission to sell our product to terrorist countries. I just find that unsustainable.

I thank the Senator for raising the question.

Mr. ASHCROFT. That is not the question I raise. But if I may ask, the Senator’s answer, then, is that he thinks what we are talking about in disaster assistance to farmers in this aid is a subsidy that would allow us to sell below world market prices, and that is why we will not do that?

Mr. MACK. It clearly is a subsidy to the American farmer. What kind of effect it will have on the world price I do not think I am qualified to say. But it seems to me it is clear that if in fact there is a subsidy being received by the American farmer, that farmer could sell the product at a lower price.

I thank the Senator for his question.

Mr. President, I oppose trade with tyrants and dictators, and I emphatically oppose subsidized trade with terrorist states. Again, make no mistake, that is exactly what this amendment does. Specifically, with my colleagues from New Jersey, and the distinguished chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, we oppose the amendment to prevent any action by this body to limit the President of the United States’ ability to impose sanctions on terrorist states.

Freedom is not free. I know my colleagues understand this simple axiom—this self-evident truth. But today we hear from our colleagues that the farmers of our Nation are undergoing a difficult time. So today, they have put before us a fundamental question: Does this great Nation, the United States of America, support freedom, or do we support terror?

A few weeks ago, as I was preparing a statement on another issue, I came across a letter from His Holiness, the Dalai Lama of Tibet. In this letter the Dalai Lama says, and I quote, “America’s real strength comes not from its status as a superpower, but from the ideals and principles on which it was founded.”

How many times have my colleagues been with me when a visiting head of state delivered to us the same message as the Dalai Lama’s? I will provide one example.

Last summer, the President of Romania addressed a joint session of Congress. He began his remarks by reminding us that Romania considered the United States the country of freedom and the guardian of fundamental human rights all over the world. He went on to say:

“Throughout its history, your country has been a beacon of hope for the oppressed and the needy, a source of inspiration for the creative, the courageous and the achieving. It has always been, and may it ever remain, the land of the free and the home of the brave.

We are a nation founded on principles—the principles of freedom, liberty, and the respect for human dignity. And our commitment to these principles gives us our real strength today. It is that simple.

I began this statement by posing a question on freedom versus terror. We know, even take for granted, the answer to that question—the United States opposes terror. But what about the strength or our commitment to these principles? On occasion, a short-term crisis can blind us—cause us to lose sight of our values and their importance to who we are and from where we derive our strength.

Today’s debate typifies one such moment. The poster which has been shown on this floor indicates the issue before us: support freedom or support terrorist states. At the risk of stating the obvious, let me try to explain once again why the Senate should not change this position.

In exchange for very limited market expansion, some would take away the President’s authority to restrict trade with terrorist regimes—six countries whose combined markets represent a mere 1.7 percent of global agricultural imports; yet these minor importers perpetrate or harbor those who commit the world's greatest acts of terror.

Some would have us open trade in agricultural products with these terrorists—in effect placing our principles up for sale. So what is the strength of our commitment to these principles? If we are to choose freedom over terror, what price should we expect to pay? There can be no doubt in anyone's mind the value of our commitment to freedom certainly exceeds the U.S. share of 1.7 percent of the world's agriculture market.

But for those who may actually find this less clear than I do, it gets easier. The request by those who wish to trade with terrorists gets more extreme. With this amendment to language providing subsidies of U.S. agriculture, we are in effect being asked to subsidize global terrorist support. The sponsors of this amendment are asking the taxpayers of the United States to subsidize American farmers, who will then sell to terrorist states.

The United States must not subsidize terrorist regimes. I find it unconscionable that we would even consider such a proposal. When two countries engage in a trade, even if just one commodity is being exported, both countries benefit from the exchange. So by opening agricultural exports to Iran, Sudan, Cuba, Iraq, Libya, and North Korea, we are offering direct support to the regimes in power. If they chose to purchase from the United States, they would be doing so because they see it as being in their best interest. Their benefit would be greater in this case because the products sold to terrorists would be subsidized by the U.S. taxpayer.

Terrorism poses a direct threat to the United States. The threat was considerable during the cold war when the Soviet Union and its allies often backed movements or governments that justified the use of terror. The threat is even greater today, when chemical or biological weapons, no bigger than a suitcase, can bring death to a target. Our principles provide the real source of America's strength. If we are serious about battling terrorism, there can be no compromise with terror and no trade with terrorist nations.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

Mr. FITZGERALD. I thank the Chair.

Mr. President, I am proud to rise in support of Senator ASHCROFT'S amendment, of which I am a cosponsor. Before getting into the specifics of Senator ASHCROFT'S amendment, I want to lay the table a little bit by describing what I have heard in the agricultural community in my State and to talk for a moment about a farm rally that I attended last Saturday in Plainfield, IL.

At that rally, which was held on the University of Illinois campus in Plainfield, IL, there were more than 500 farmers, not just from Illinois but from all over the country. There were farmers from as far away as Washington State and from Oklahoma and from the Southern and Eastern States as well.

The one message I heard, talking to the farmers, not just those from Illinois but those from all across the country, was that there is a severe crisis in agriculture right now. Crop prices are at almost record low levels, if you compare to the levels in the 80's. The prices are low not just for corn and soybeans but also for hogs and wheat, and the list goes on.

On top of that, we are seeing a trade situation now in which the countries in the European Union, to whom we used to export large amounts of our grain and livestock products, are, with increasing frequency, raising not just tariff barriers to the importation of American agricultural goods but also nontariff barriers. Pseudoscientific trade barriers, objections to the safety of our food, objections for which very few in the scientific community have said there is any basis.

Also we have seen a slump in the economy in Asia. The near depression in Asia in the last year has caused a severe drop-off in the amount they are importing from the United States and from our farmers in this country. On top of that, as was said earlier today, some parts of our country are experiencing drought, other parts floods.

Farmers have complaints, as we all know, about the tax code and its consequences that are particularly felt by family farmers who can't deduct health insurance, for example, who have a very hard time meeting the obligations of the death tax, which taxes their family farms at 55 and, in some cases, 60 percent of their value when a farmer dies.

I am very pleased that Senator COCHRAN and the Agriculture Appropriations Subcommittees both support this amendment. I am happy to say that in the Appropriations Committee we were able to support an amendment to exempt food and medicine from unilateral sanctions.

So I think it is very important that we think about long-term solutions for the farm crisis in this country so that we don't have to come back every year and face ongoing crises year after year. Perhaps the best thing we can do for the long-term survival and success of our American farmers is to improve the trade climate.

Several years ago, we passed the Freedom to Farm Act. The farmers in my State of Illinois frequently say: You gave us the freedom to farm, but you didn't give us the freedom to trade. What good is that freedom to farm, that freedom to plant all the acres we wish, if we don't have the freedom to sell our products abroad as we need?

So I think it is very important that we work on a variety of fronts in the trade area. I favor fast track trade negotiating authority for our President. I think that normal trade relations with China would help our farmers. Accession of China into the WTO would be helpful. Agriculture needs a seat at the trade table next fall in the negotiations for the Seattle round of the multilateral trade negotiations. We need to have representatives from the USDA right there with Charlene Barshefsky when we are negotiating trade issues next fall. We also need strong enforcement of WTO trade disputes and, of course, open access for our GMO food products in Europe.

One step toward improving the trade climate for our Nation's farmers is the pending amendment that Senator ASHCROFT and I and a number of my colleagues have cosponsored. I am rising today to support that amendment to exempt food and medicine from unilateral sanctions. Unilateral sanctions on food and agricultural products clearly hurt American agriculture

August 3, 1999

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE
Mr. GRAHAM addressed the Chair.

With that, I yield the floor.
Despite this cold war’s intensity, which more or less monopolized foreign relations in the United States for half of this century, we found ourselves during that same period of time trading and selling food to Russia, the Soviet Union, and selling foodstuffs to China and other countries. I guess we adopted the premise that former Senator Hubert Humphrey used to say should guide us when it comes to this economy. We asked him whether he would sell food to the Communists and he said, “I will sell them anything they can’t show up at.” The Point Four was a practical viewpoint that, when it gets down to it, we are not the sole suppliers of food in the world. For us to cut off food supplies to any given country is no guarantee they will starve. In fact, they can turn to other resources.

So let me say to us we should impose unilateral sanctions on a country such as Cuba, I think, have forgotten the lesson of history that, not that long ago, we were selling wheat, at a time when we were at the height of the cold war. I think that is a lesson in history to be remembered.

The second question is whether or not we should, as a policy, exempt food and medicine when it comes to any sanctions. I believe that is the gravamen of the amendment offered by the Senator from Missouri. I think he is right. I say to those who believe that by imposing unilateral sanctions involving the sale of food and medicine from the United States on these dictatorial regimes we will have some impact, please take a look at the pictures of the dictators that you presented for us to view this evening.

Now I have been watching Mr. Castro in the media for over 40 years and I don’t see him thin and emaciated or malnourished. He seems to be finding food somewhere, as do many other people in states where we have our differences. But I do suspect that when you get closer to the real people in these countries, you will find they are the ones who are disadvantaged by these sanctions on food and medicine.

Let me tell you, there was a report issued 2 years ago by the American Association for World Health, “Denial of Food and Medicine: The Impact of the U.S. Embargo on Health and Nutrition in Cuba.” It concluded that:

The U.S. embargo of Cuba has dramatically harmed the healthcare and nutrition of large numbers of ordinary Cubans.

The report went on to say:

The declining availability of foodstuffs, medicines, and such basic medical supplies as replacement parts for 30-year-old x-ray machines has turned a logic human toll. The embargo has caused many windows that, in some instances, Cuban physicians have found it impossible to obtain life-saving machines from any source under any circumstances. Patients have died.

I quote from a letter I received from Bishop William Purcell from the Diocese of Chicago who told me his experience in visiting villages.

He says:

I was especially struck by the impact of the American embargo on people’s health. We saw huge boxes of expired bill samples in a hospital. Other than those, the shelves of the pharmacy were almost bare. We talked with patients waiting for surgeons who could not be operated upon because their x-ray machines from Germany had broken down. A woman was choking from asthma from lack of inhaler.

I hope you will pay particular attention to this. The bishop says:

At the AIDS center, plastic gloves had been washed and hung on a line to dry for reuse. The examples of people directly suffering from the impact of our government’s policy after all of these years was sad and embarrassing to see.

That was in the letter he sent to me.

But many of the peculiar groups in the United States have reached the same conclusion. The U.S. Catholic Conference and others have termed our policy with Cuba “morally unacceptable.”

I don’t come to the floor today to in any way apologize or defend the policies of Fidel Castro in Cuba or for shooting the plane down in 1997. That was a savage, barbaric act. No excuse can be made for that type of conduct. But when we try to focus on stopping the conduct of leaders such as Castro by imposing sanctions that embargo food and medicine, I don’t think we strike at the heart of the leadership of these countries. Instead, we strike at poor people—poor people who continue to suffer.

Many folks on this floor will remember the debate just a few weeks ago when we were shocked to learn that India and Pakistan had detonated nuclear devices. This was a dramatic change in the balance of power in the world, with two new entries in the nuclear club. Countries which we suspected were developing nuclear weapons had in fact detonated them to indicate that our fears were real.

Under existing law, we could have imposed sanctions on India and Pakistan at that time to show our displeasure. We did not. We made a conscious decision to vote in the Senate not to do that. We concluded, even at the risk of nuclear war in the subcontinent, that it was not in our best interests or smart foreign policy to impose these sanctions.

So you have to ask yourself, why do we continue to cling to this concept when it comes to Cuba, that after some 40 years this is the way we are going to change the Cuban regime?

I think the way to change the regime in Cuba and many other countries has been demonstrated clearly over the last decade. Think about the Berlin Wall coming down and the end of communism in Eastern Europe. It had as much to do with the fact that we opened up these countries after years of isolation. Finally, these countries saw what the rest of the world had to have. They utilize some foreign lifestyles and quality of life meant in the Western part of the world, and when they compared that to the Communist regime, they started racing for democracy.

That, to me, is an indication of what would also happen in Cuba. If we start opening up trade in food and medicine and other relations with that country, I predict that we would have much more success in bringing down an objectionable regime than anything we have done over the past four decades.

We have learned the lesson from the cold war. We know you cannot bring a country to its knees by denying export of food and medicine. We should also know that the best way to end dictatorial and totalitarian regime is to open trade, open commerce, and open channels of communication.

The amendment that has been offered by the Senator from Connecticut is an attempt to address not only the agricultural crisis that faces America but, from my point of view, a much more sensible approach to a foreign policy goal which all Americans share.

Let us find ways to punish the terrorists and punish those guilty of wrongdoing. But let us not do it at the expense of innocent people, whether they are farmers in the United States or populations overseas which are the unwitting pawns in this foreign policy game.

I support this amendment. I hope my colleagues will join in that effort.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut is recognized.

Mr. DODD. Mr. President, I thank the Chair.

I join with my colleague, Senator Markey, and others in urging the adoption of this amendment with respect to exempting exports of food and medicine from U.S. sanctions regimes.

Mr. President this amendment is quick, simple, and straightforward—it would exempt donations and sales of food, other agricultural commodities, medicines and medical equipment from being used as an economic weapon in conjunction with the imposition of unilaterally imposed economic sanctions.

Since last year, we have heard about the serious economic crisis that confronts America’s heartland and is bankrupting American farm families. Not only do American farm families have to worry about weather and other natural disasters which threaten their livelihood. They also must worry about actions of their own government which can do irreparable harm to the farm economy by closing off markets to American farm products because we happen to dislike some foreign government official or some policy action that has been taken. Time and time again unilateral sanctions on agricultural products have cost American farmers important export markets. Time and time again the offending official remains in power or the offensive policy continues.

On July 23 of last year, President Clinton stated that "food should not be used as a tool of foreign policy except under the most compelling circumstances." On April 28 of this year, the Clinton Administration took some long overdue steps toward bringing U.S. practice in this area into conformity with the President's pronouncement. It announced that it would reverse existing U.S. policy of prohibiting sales of food and medicine to Iran, Libya, and Sudan—three countries currently on the terrorism list.

In announcing the change in policy, Under Secretary of State Stuart Eizenstat stated that President Clinton had arrived at this decision after a two-year review concluded that the sale of food and medicine "doesn't encourage a nation's military capability or its ability to support terrorism." I am gratified that the administration has finally recognized what we determined some time ago, namely that "sales of food, medicine and other human necessities do not generally enhance a nation's military capacities or support terrorism." On the contrary, funds spent on agricultural commodities and products are not available for other, less desirable uses.

Regrettably, the Administration did not include Cuba in its announced policy changes. It seems to me terribly inconsistent to say that it is wrong to deny the children of Iran, Sudan and Libya access to food and medicine, but it is all right to deny Cuban children—living ninety miles from our shores, similar access. The administration's rationale including the stated rationale is rather confused. The best I can discern from the conflicting rationale for not including Cuba in the announced policy changes was that policy toward Cuba has been established by legislation rather than executive order, and therefore should be changed through legislative action.

I disagree with that judgement. However, in order to facilitate the lifting of such restrictions on such sales to Cuba, and to prevent such sanctions from being introduced against other countries in the future, I have joined with Senators ASHCROFT, HAGEL, ROBERTS, LEAHY and others in offering the Senators ASHCROFT, HAGEL, ROBERTS, and to prevent such sanctions from being introduced against other countries in the future, I have joined with Senators ASHCROFT, HAGEL, ROBERTS, and LOVELAND in an amendment that is currently pending. Not only would it codify in law the administration's decision with respect to Iran, Libya, and Sudan, it would also create a politically viable way for such sanctions to be lifted from Cuba, unless the President and the Congress both take the affirmative step of acting to keep them in place.

What about those who say that it is already possible to sell food and medicine to Cuba? To those people I would say, "if that is what you think, then you should have no problem supporting this legislation.

However, I must tell you, Mr. President, that the people who say that are not members of the U.S. agricultural or pharmaceutical industries. Ask any representative of a major drug or grain company about selling to Cuba and they will tell you it is virtually impossible.

The Administration's own statistics speak for themselves. Department of Commerce licensing statistics prove our point:

Between 1992 and mid-1997, the Commerce Department approved only 28 licenses for such sales, valued at less than $1 million, for the entire period. In 1998, following the introduction of procedures to "expedite license reviews" Commerce reported that, three years after the policy change was approved, however no exports occurred because of difficulties with on-site verification requirements.

Even if these three exports had occurred, the assistance being provided would be minuscule. To give you some perspective: prior to the passage of the 1992 Cuba Democracy Act which shut down U.S. food and medicine exports, Cuba was importing roughly $700 million of such products on an annual basis from U.S. subsidiaries.

Moreover, since Commerce Department officials do not follow up on whether proposed licenses culminate in actual sales, the high water mark for Commerce licensing process, coupled with on-site verification requirements, serve as de facto prohibitions on U.S. pharmaceutical companies doing business with Cuba. Do we really believe that aspirin or bandaid are possible instruments of torture that mandate the U.S. companies have in place a costly on-site verification mechanism to monitor how each bottle of aspirin is dispensed?

I cannot come up with a rationale for arguing that we are on strong moral grounds in barring access to American medicines and medical equipment. American pharmaceutical companies and medical equipment manufacturers are dominant in the international marketplace with respect to development and production of state of the art medicines and equipment. In some cases there are no other foreign suppliers that make comparable products—particularly in the case of the most life threatening diseases such as cancer.

How can we justify denying innocent people access to drugs that could save them or their children's lives. How can we justify prohibiting access to vaccines that ensure the protection of the public health of an entire country or large segments thereof, simply because we disagree with the government leaders? I don't believe we should.

Food sales to Cuba continue to be prohibited as well, despite the so called January measures promulgated by the Clinton Administration. At that time, the outright prohibition on the sale of food was modified to provide a narrow exception to that prohibition. With the change in regulations, the Commerce Department will now consider licensing, on a case-by-case basis, sales of food "to independent non-government entities in Cuba, including religious groups, private farmers and private sector enterprises such as restaurants."

For those of my colleagues who have any knowledge about the Cuban economy and politics, this translates into virtually zero sales of food to Cuba. Yes, there are some private restaurants in Cuba—so called paladares—but they are run out of family homes serving at most ten people at lunch and dinner on a daily basis. These small operations are hardly in any position logistically or financially to contract with foreign exporters, navigate U.S. and Cuban customs in order to arrange for U.S. shipments to be delivered to their restaurants—shipments that are otherwise barred to the Cuban government. Who are we kidding when we say it is possible to sell food in the current regulatory environment.

I don't believe except in the most limited of circumstances that we should deny food and medicine to anyone. I take strong exception to argument that we are doing it for the good of the Cuban people or the Libyan people, that we are putting pressure on authorities to respect human rights in doing so.

The highly respected human rights organization, Human Rights Watch—a severe critic of the Cuban government's human rights practices—recently concluded, that the "(U.S.) embargo has not only failed to bring about human rights improvements in Cuba," it has actually "become counterproductive" to achieving that goal.

America is not about denying medical care to people in Sudan, in Libya, or in Iran, and it shouldn't be about denying food and medicine to the Cuban people either, certainly not my America.

Let me be clear—I am not defending the Cuban government for its human rights practices or some of its other policy decisions. I believe that we should speak out strongly on such matters as respect for human rights and the treatment of political dissidents. But U.S. policy with respect to Cuba goes far beyond that—it denies eleven million innocent Cuban men, women and children access to U.S. food and medicine.
That is why I hope my colleagues will support this amendment and restrict future efforts to water down its scope.

The United States stands alone among all of the nations of the world as an advocate for respecting the human rights of all peoples throughout the globe. In my view denying access to food and medicine is a violation of international recognized human rights and weakens the ability of the United States to advocate what is otherwise a very principled position on this issue. It is time to return U.S. policy to the moral high ground.

Mr. President, I commend my colleagues from Missouri, Mr. Ashcroft, and Senator Hagel, Senator Fitzgerald, Senator Craig, Senator Lincoln, Senator Conrad, Senator Brownback, to name a few, and myself to the Presiding Officer, Senator Warner, and all of the others who are cosponsors of this amendment.

It is a very solid, thoughtful, precise amendment that principally, of course, allows us to be involved as a legislative branch if unilateral sanctions are going to be imposed. That is not a radical idea. We have seen the effects of the importance and the significance of unilateral sanctions.

Certainly those who represent the farm community can speak not just theoretically about this but in practice as to the damage that can be done. It certainly is hard enough to have to face weather conditions, drought, and floods. But when you have to also face unilateral decisions that deny your community the opportunity to market in certain areas, that can make the life of a farm family even more difficult.

I happen to agree with my colleague from Illinois, Senator Durbin, and others who believe that if we are truly interested in creating change, it is not in the interest of our own Nation to take actions which would deny innocent people—be they the 11 million innocent people who live 90 miles off our shore in Cuba, or in other nations—the opportunity to benefit from the sale of medicine and food supplies that can improve the quality of their life.

It is radical, in my view, to impose that kind of a sanction, particularly unilaterally. That is not my America. My America, as Senator Lugar Sanctions Reform Act shows, is an America that is very principled, of course, that we can get rid of dictators and to change governments which deny their people basic rights. But my America doesn’t say to the innocents who live in these countries that if we have food that can make you stronger, if we have medicine that can make you healthier, we are going to deny the opportunity for the average citizens of these countries to have access to these products through sale. That is not my America.

In a bigger, a larger country, which has stood as a symbol of understanding, of human decency, and of human kindness, even with adversaries that have taken the lives of our fellow citizens—in a Vietnam, in a Germany, in other nations around the globe. My America, a big America, at the end of the day, is, I think, that we stand up for the average peop...
In the underlying amendment, there is reference made to two agricultural programs: The Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954 and section 416 of the Agricultural Act of 1949. Both of those statutes are again referenced in the amendment that has been offered by the Senator from Missouri.

Where are they offered in the amendment offered by the Senator from Missouri? They are offered in the section of the amendment which is the definition, so they are stated to be agricultural programs and then listed in the definition section.

I can find no other reference to those specific statutes other than in the definition section, raising the question as to whether they were inserted in the definition section in order to attempt to over commercial sales are rendered the humanitarian provision is prohibited relevant. This is considered a relevant amendment.

Mr. HELMS. Mr. President, inasmuch as the amendment of the Senator from Missouri, however well intentioned, would have the effect of lifting restrictions on trade with terrorist states or governments and would allow trade with the coercive elements of these repressive, hostile, regimes, I move to table the amendment and I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There is a sufficient second. The yeas and nays were ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the motion. The yeas and nays have been ordered. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. NICKLES. I announce that the Senator from New Mexico (Mr. DOMENICI) is necessarily absent.

Mr. REID. I announce that the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. KENNY) is necessarily absent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 28, nays 70, as follows:

[Roll Call Vote No. 251 Leg.]

YEAS—28

Bryan Bunning
Byrd
Coverdell
DeWine
Graham
Grimm Gregg
Helms Kohl
Robb

NAYS—70

Abraham
Akaka
Ashcroft
Baucus
Bayh
Bennett Biden Bingaman
Bond
Breault
Brownback
Burns
Campbell
Chafee

Leahy
Reed
Lew Lincoln Lugar
Mikulski
Murray
Ney
Shelby
Specter
Lott Rockefeller Sessions
Shiley
Smith (OR) Wyden

Santerum
Sarbanes
Smith (NJ)
Snowe
Stevens
Thompson
Thurmond
Torricelli

Gorton
Cochran
Grassley
Hagel
Harkin
Hatch
Hollings
Hutchinson
Hutchison
Inhofe
Ingram
Jefords Johnson
Kerry
Landrieu

Smith (MA)
Craig
Conrad
Cochran
Dick primary language en is rotation valid true rotation correction 0 is table false is diagram false natural text

Mr. President, with that description of what I think the amendment is, what the underlying amendment and what the purpose of the unanimous consent agreement was, which was a narrow exception for agricultural relief amendments and amendments to that amendment which related to the same subject, since this fails to meet that standard, I raise the point of order under rule XVI that this amendment constitutes, clearly, explicitly, legislation on an appropriations bill and therefore, under rule XVI, is out of order.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. BURNS. Mr. President, I rise today as an individual who has spent his entire life involved in agriculture. I am extremely concerned about the current state of the agricultural economy. Farmers and ranchers in my state of Montana and across America cannot afford another year of zero profit. Price declines for agricultural commodities have had a devastating impact on agricultural producers in Montana and the economy of the entire state, which depends so heavily on agriculture. The farmers and ranchers in Montana have suffered too much already. With continued low prices, many agricultural producers have been forced to sell the farms and ranches that they have spent their entire lives working.

They seem to have all the cards stacked against them. Agricultural producers face high numbers of imports as well as a downward trend in demand for their product. Further, the world market is not providing adequate opportunities for international trade. The European Union continues to place non-scientific trade barriers on U.S. beef as well as bans on Genetically Modified organism products. Asia, usually a strong export market, continues to recover from the economic flu and many of our other trade partners have been subjected to sanctions by this administration. Additionally, the value of beef and grain imports have decreased dramatically as a percent of the world market.

Montana may not be able to survive another year of this economic plight. If market prices continue to go down as they have, I am fearful that more farmers and ranchers will be forced out of business. If a drastic measure is not passed in Congress this year, I don’t know how much longer the agricultural community can persevere.

As I said before, the impact is not limited to those working the fields or raising livestock. Look at Main Street, Rural America. The agricultural economy is so bad that other businesses are failing as well. And not just agri-business.

No longer is it just the livestock feed store or seed companies that are failing due to the economic crunch. It reaches much further. All kinds and types of businesses are feeling the depressed agricultural economy. Montana is ranked in the bottom five per capita income by state, in the nation. Obviously, I also read recently that Montana was the 7th most desirable place to live in America. That won’t be the case much longer if we can’t return more of the economic dollar to the agricultural producer. Montana is a desirable place to live because of agriculture. Without the wheat fields and grazing pastures, Montana loses its very being. Without the return of more of the economic dollar to the agricultural producer there will be no more farming or ranching and consequently no more wheat fields or pastures to graze livestock.

I have used the comparison before of the agricultural producer drowning. I believe he is. The way I see it, the farmer is drowning in a sea of debt and many of the farm bills passed. This will not vote to send lifeboats. The problem is, that once the producer makes it into the boat he never makes it to shore. He just keeps paddling trying to keep his head above water, and waiting for the next blow.

I want the farmer to get back to land and on his feet. We have to provide them the oars to get to shore and then keep them out of the water. I would like to see a strong agriculture assistance package passed and then a base for long-term benefits in the form of laws on country of origin labeling, crop insurance reform and mandatory price reporting.

My Montana farmers and ranchers need help now. They need a package that provides solid short-term assistance. They need AMTA payments at 100% to bring the price of wheat per bushel to a price that will allow them to meet their cost-of-production. Additionally, they need funding for specialty crops, wheat up to $3.84. It also contains important provisions for specialty crops, that grain producers need. The Republican package contains 100% AMTA payments, which will bring the price of wheat up to $3.84. It also contains important provisions for specialty crops, lifts the LDP cap and encourages the President to be more aggressive in strengthening negotiations with the authorities for American agriculture.

Freedom to Farm needs a boost. It is a good program, but simply cannot provide for the needs of farmers and ranchers during this kind of economic crunch. From 1995 to 1999, $50.9 billion have been distributed as direct payments. This tells us that commodity prices are not going up. Farmers and ranchers are not doing better on their net income sheets.

We need to let Freedom to Farm work. I believe it will. When more of the economic dollar is returned to the producer and when the farmer or rancher receives a price for commodities that meet the cost-of-production. For now, we must keep the agricultural producer afloat. An assistance measure which will provide them a means to stay in business at a profitable level is the only way to do that this year.

Mr. McCAIN. Mr. President, as I travel around the country, I see the devastation caused by the ongoing drought in many sections of the country. Crops are stunted and dying, fields are dusty, streams and lakes are drying up. Many farmers are still reeling from the effects of last year’s Asian economic crisis. Clearly, assistance is needed to prevent the demise of more of America’s family farms, and I support efforts to provide needed government aid to farmers and their families.

Both pending proposals specify that aid to farmers is to be considered emergency spending, which is not counted against the budget caps. Mr. President, again, I recognize the dire circumstances that have many Americans in the agriculture industry facing economic ruin. However, already this year, the Senate has approved appropriations bills containing $7.9 billion in wasteful and unnecessary spending. Surely, among these billions of dollars, there are at least a few programs that we can get rid of. Clearly, assistance is needed to prevent the economic ruin. However, already this year, the Senate has approved appropriations bills containing $7.9 billion in wasteful and unnecessary spending. Surely, among these billions of dollars, there are at least a few programs that we can get rid of.

Both pending proposals specify that aid to farmers is to be considered emergency spending, which is not counted against the budget caps. Mr. President, again, I recognize the dire circumstances that have many Americans in the agriculture industry facing economic ruin. However, already this year, the Senate has approved appropriations bills containing $7.9 billion in wasteful and unnecessary spending. Surely, among these billions of dollars, there are at least a few programs that we can get rid of. Clearly, assistance is needed to prevent the economic ruin. However, already this year, the Senate has approved appropriations bills containing $7.9 billion in wasteful and unnecessary spending. Surely, among these billions of dollars, there are at least a few programs that we can get rid of.

My colleagues should be aware that every dollar spent above the budget caps is a dollar that comes from the budget surplus. This year, the only surplus is in the Social Security accounts, so this farm aid will be paid for by further exacerbating the impending financial crisis in the Social Security Trust Funds. And every dollar that is spent on future emergencies comes from the surplus we just promised last week to return to the American people in the form of tax relief. It is the same surplus that we have to use to shore up Social Security and Medicare, and begin to pay down the national debt.

Unfortunately, though, it seems to be easier to slap on an emergency designation, rather than try to find lower priority spending cuts as offsets.

Once again, Mr. President, Congress is considering this usual opportunistic approach to any disaster or emergency—adding billions of dollars in non-emergency spending and policy proposals to the emergency farm aid proposals. The competing amendments pending before the Senate contain provisions that provide special, targeted relief to dairy producers, the agricultural community. For example, in addition to the billions of dollars of assistance payments for which all farmers would be eligible:

Both proposals single out peanut producers for special direct payments to partially compensate them for low prices and increasing production costs.

The Republican proposal also provides $50 million to be used to assist fruit and vegetable producers, at the Secretary of Agriculture’s discretion.

Both proposals give the Secretary of Agriculture broad authority to provide some kinds of assistance to livestock and dairy producers, the only difference being the amount of money set aside for this unspecified relief. The Democrats set aside $756 million, the Republicans $325 million.

Both proposals set up more restrictive import quotas and new price supports for cotton producers.

The Republican proposal also specifically targets $475 million for direct payments to oilseed producers, most of which is to be paid to soybean producers.

The Democrat proposal, which is about $3 billion more expensive than the Republican proposal, expands to address non-agricultural disaster-related requirements, such as wetlands and watershed restoration and conservation, short-term land diversion programs, and flood prevention projects. It also establishes a new $500 million disaster reserve account, in anticipation of future disasters, I assume. But the proposal then adds a number of narrowly targeted provisions and provisions wholly unrelated to the purposes of aiding economically distressed farmers, including:

$90 million for salaries and expenses of the Farm Service Agency, apparently to administer $1.2 billion in new loan programs.

$100 million for rural economic development.

$50 million for a new revolving loan program for farmer-owned cooperatives.

$1 million to implement a new mandatory price reporting program for livestock.

$8 million for a new product labeling system for imported meat.

$1 million for rapid response teams to enforce the Packers and Stockyards Act; and finally, $1 million for a Northeast multispecies fishery.

These provisions have no place in a bill to provide emergency assistance to America’s farmers. There is an established process for dealing with spending and policy matters that are not emergencies. It is the normal authorization and appropriations process, where each program or policy can be assessed as part of a merit-based review. Many of the provisions I have listed above may very well be meritorious and deserving of support and funding, but the process we are following does not provide an appropriate forum for assessing their relative merit compared to the many other important programs for which non-emergency dollars should be made available. I think even some of the potential recipients of these non-emergency programs would agree that they should be considered in the normal appropriations and authorization processes.

There is one special interest provision of the Republican proposal that I would like to discuss further and that I intend to address directly in an amendment later in the debate. The Republican proposal gives the already heavily subsidized sugar industry one more reason to lobby for higher price supports that cost American consumers over $1.4 billion a year in high and unnecessary sugar subsidies. It simply adds one more perk to the already heavily subsidized sugar industry one which fortunately has been eliminated as a result of the Balanced Budget Act, what about the $5.6 trillion national debt?

This little bit of targeted tax relief for big sugar comes on top of a $130 million per year government-subsidized loan program for sugar producers, and price supports that cost American consumers over $1.4 billion a year in higher sugar prices at the store. The sponsors of the proposal make no claim that this provision is in any way related to a disaster or drought-related economic crisis in the sugar industry that would merit its inclusion in this emergency farm aid bill. Its inclusion simply adds one more perk to the already broad array of special subsidies for big sugar companies.

I intend to offer an amendment later during the debate on this bill to terminate taxpayer support of the sugar industry. If the Republican farm aid proposal is adopted, I expect it will be a sub a cut assessment of just 25 cents on each 100 pounds of sugar. This tiny tax raises just $37.8 million last year, and was supposed to be the sugar industry’s sole contribution to reducing annual budget deficits. Thanks to their successful lobbying, for the next three years, big sugar will not have to pay this assessment if the federal government has a budget surplus. While the assessment was initially imposed to help reduce annual budget deficits, which fortunately have now been eliminated as a result of the Balanced Budget Act, what about the $5.6 trillion national debt?

Yet, I also urge the conferees to consider the following here today does not provide an answer to the question which families are eligible to receive the emergency spending. This kind of fiscal irresponsibility undermines the balanced budget and hinders debt reduction efforts. It exacerbates the need to preserve and protect Social Security and Medicare, and threatens efforts to provide meaningful tax relief to American families.

Once again, I can only hope that the final farm aid proposal will be targeted only at those in need—America’s farmers. I urge the conferees on this legislation to eliminate the provisions that are only in need-America’s farmers. I urge the conferees on this legislation to eliminate the provisions that solely benefit special interests who have once again managed to turn needed emergency relief into opportunism. I also urge the conferees to seek offsets for the additional spending in this bill, to avoid again dipping into the Social Security surplus and putting our balanced budget at risk.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, for the information of all Senators, there will be no further votes this evening. The discussion regarding the dairy issue will occur from 9 a.m. until 9:40 a.m. on Wednesday, with the cloture vote occurring at approximately 9:45 a.m.

Assuming cloture is not invoked on Wednesday morning, I anticipate the Senate will resume consideration of the pending Ashcroft amendment, which is an amendment to the disaster amendment by Senators HARKIN and DASCHLE.

Also, if an opportunity does present itself, I understand that there will be another disaster-related amendment by Senator ROBERTS and Senator SANTORUM. Of course, that will be in line behind the other amendments because of procedure. But at the appropriate time there is a plan by those two Senators, and others, to offer another amendment.

Mr. ASHCROFT. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

PRIVILEGE OF THE FLOOR

Mr. GRAHAM. Mr. President, I ask that Mr. Sean McCluskie, Mr. Adam Foslid, and Ms. Brooke Russ of my office be granted the privilege of the floor for the duration of the Agriculture appropriations bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT

Messages from the President of the United States were communicated to the Senate by Mr. Williams, one of his secretaries.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGES REFERRED

As in executive session the Presiding Officer laid before the Senate messages from the President of the United States submitting sundry nominations which were referred to the appropriate committees.

The nominations received today are printed at the end of the Senate proceedings.

MESSAGES FROM THE HOUSE

At 2:30 p.m., a message from the House of Representatives, delivered by Mr. Berry, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House has passed the following bills, with amendment, in which it requests the concurrence of the Senate:

S. 1297. An act to amend statutory damage provisions of title 47, United States Code.

The message also announced that the House has passed the following bills, in which it requests the concurrence of the Senate:

H.R. 211. An act to designate the Federal building and United States courthouse located at West 920 Riverside Avenue in Spokane, Washington, as the "Thomas S. Foley Federal Building and United States Courthouse".

H.R. 695. An act to direct the Secretary of Agriculture and the Secretary of the Interior to convey an administrative site in San Juan County, New Mexico, to San Juan College.

H.R. 747. An act to protect the permanent trust funds of the State of Arizona from erosion due to inflation and modify the basis on which distributions are made from those funds.

H.R. 1094. An act to amend the Federal Reserve Act to broaden the range of discount window loans which may be used as collateral for Federal reserve notes.

H.R. 1198. An act to amend the Cuban Democracy Act of 1992 to authorize the Secretary of the Treasury to use proceeds from the sale of oil produced in Cuba to support democracy, human rights, and other freedom enhancing activities in Cuba.

H.R. 1219. An act to amend the Miller Act, relating to payment protections for workers and contractors.
agrees to the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 2567) making appropriate and governed State of the District of Columbia and other activities chargeable in whole or in part against revenues of said District for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2000, and for other purposes and agrees to the conference asked by the Senate on the disagreement votes of the two Houses thereon; and appoints the following members as managers of the conference on the part of the House:

Mr. ISTOOR, Mr. CUNNINGHAM, Mr. TAHERT, Mr. ADERHOLT, Mrs. EMERSON, Mr. SUNUNU, Mr. YOUNG of Florida, Mr. MORAN of Virginia, Mr. DIXON, Mr. MOLOLHOAN, and Mr. OBAY.

MEASURES REFERRED

The following bills were read the first and second times by unanimous consent and referred as indicated:

H.R. 1094. An act to amend the Federal Reserve Act to broaden the range of discount window loans which may be used as collateral for Federal reserve notes; to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

H.R. 1424. An act to assure the long-term conservation of mid-continent light geese and the biological diversity of the ecosystem upon which many North American migratory birds depend, by directing the Secretary of the Interior to implement and local governments of certain property for law enforcement, public safety, and emergency response purposes.

H.R. 2614. An act to amend the Small Business Investment Act to make improvements to the certified development company program, and for other purposes.

H.R. 2615. An act to amend the Small Business Act to make improvements to the general business loan program, and for other purposes.

The message further announced that the House disagrees to the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 2468) to provide for reconciliation pursuant to sections 105 and 211 of the concurrent resolution on the budget for fiscal year 2000, and agrees to the conference asked by the Senate on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon; and appoints the following members as managers of the conference on the part of the House:

For consideration of the House bill, and the Senate amendment, and modifications committed to conference: Mr. ARCHER, Mr. ARMY, Mr. CRANE, Mr. THOMAS, Mr. RANGEL, and Mr. STARK.

As additional conferees for consideration of sections 315, 316, 318, 325, 335, 338, 341–42, 344–45, 351, 362–63, 365, 369, 371, 381, 1361, 1305, and 1406 of the Senate amendment, and modifications committed to conference: Mr. GOODLING, Mr. BOEINER, and Mr. CLAY.

The message also announced that pursuant to the provisions of section 581(a)(2) of the Foreign Operation, Export Financing, and Related Programs Appropriations Act, 1999 (112 Stat. 2681–210) the Minority Leader appoints the following individuals to the National Commission on Terrorism: Ms. Juliette N. Kayyem of Cambridge, Massachusetts.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED

At 4:05 p.m., a message from the House of Representatives, delivered by Mr. Hanrahan, one of its reading clerks, announced that the Speaker has signed the following enrolled bill: S. 1475. A bill to amend the Federal Reserve Act to remove flammable fuels from the list of substances with respect to which reporting and other activities are required under the risk management plan program, and for other purposes.

The enrolled bill was signed subsequently by the President pro tempore (Mr. THURMOND).

At 6:20 p.m., a message from the House of Representatives, delivered by Mr. Hanrahan, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House dis
STATEMENTS ON INTRODUCED BILLs AND JOINT RESOLUTIONS

By Mr. REED (for himself, Mr. Dodd, Mr. Kennedy, Mrs. Feinstein, Mr. Inouye, and Mrs. Murray):

S. 1475. A bill to amend the Child Care and Development Block Grant Act of 1990 to provide incentive grants to improve the quality of child care; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.

CHILD CARE QUALITY INCENTIVE ACT OF 1999

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I rise to talk about a crisis that is affecting the families of this country. That crisis is the child care system, the ability to obtain safe, affordable, high-quality child care.

Today there are an estimated 13 million children, 6 million of them infants and toddlers, who require some form of day care. For working families, the price of this day care is exceedingly difficult to afford, and every day.

Full-day child care ranges from $4,000 to $10,000 a year. For some low-income families, that represents 25 percent of their income.

This is a huge obligation. We have, I fear and believe, the responsibility to ensure that we can help these families meet this obligation to protect their children. Not only is this necessary simply for the custodial protection and care of children, it is necessary for their development, their advancement, for their intellectual development.

We have discovered over the last several years, because of all the research that is being done at the National Institutes of Health, and other places, the crucial role of the early development of children in their ultimate intellectual and social development as adults.

We know if we have good, nurturing care in the early days of life, this care will lead to better cognitive performance later on. It will increase classroom success. It will lead to more fully developed individuals who can cope with the challenges of this next century that is just upon us.

So an investment in child care is not simply something that is altruistic—something we want to do because it is for the kids and for working families—it is in the best interests of this country in order to provide for the citizens of this country of the next century.

We know also, as we look around, that one of the problems in child care, I say to Senators, is that because of the low reimbursement rates that the child care centers receive from the States that they have no incentive to retain good employees and that they are not able to train the employees they can retain—particularly in this booming economy we see today.

So what you have in so many child care centers is a situation where they cannot retain their employees, they cannot attract the very best employees, they do not have the resources to fully develop the potential for these employees, and as a result, ultimately, children suffer.

In fact, there have been numerous studies. The one that I found most disturbing is one where four States were studied in the United States, and it was found that in those States only one out of seven child care centers provided care that promoted the healthy development of the child. Even more shocking, one in eight of these child care centers actually provided care that threatened the health of the child. We need to do something about this.

Prior to welfare reform, there was a law on the books that said the State, when they were subsidizing day care for low-income parents, had to at least try to achieve the 75th percentile in terms of their reimbursement rate. What that means is that they had to have a reimbursement rate that could at least meet the cost of 75 out of 100 of the centers in their particular State. That has gone by the wayside. But in order to keep quality in our child care system, we have to get to reimbursement rates that will, in fact, provide the resources for child care centers to have quality, enhancing care to benefit the children of this country.

What has happened in the last several years is even the attempt by the States to go ahead and do surveys of the market so they know what it costs different child care centers to provide care and know what it costs for the parents to send their children to day-care centers. Having abandoned these market surveys, essentially there is no connection between their subsidy rate and, in fact, the cost of day care.

So working families who receive these subsidies—and there are more and more families who are receiving subsidies as we move welfare recipients to work—have no correlation between what they are getting and essentially what the cost of child care is in the real world.

What I have done, along with some of my colleagues, is introduce legislation that would, in fact, give the States an incentive, first to do their market surveys, to find out the cost of day care in their communities, and then to strive to meet those market surveys.

I have been very pleased to be joined by Senators Chris Dodd and Ted Kennedy, who are leaders in the field of improving child care in this country, together with Senators Feinstein, Inouye, and Murray in introducing the Child Care Quality Incentive Act. Essentially this legislation would establish a new mandatory pool of funding, $300 million each year over the next 5 years, as part of the Child Care Development Block Grant Program. This funding would be an incentive for States to first conduct a market survey and then to make significant movement towards raising their subsidy rates to that market rate. In so doing, we can directly contribute to the bottom line of these child care centers. They, in turn, can retain personnel, train their personnel, and create a more enhancing environment for the development of children. This, I think, is a goal we should have.

Increased reimbursement rates also express the moral obligation that every American child—that every American child, whether they are from low-income families or middle-income families or upper-income families, should have in finding quality child care.

We will also, I hope, at the same time try to increase the overall scope of the child development block grants. One of the consequences of simply increasing the funding for the child development block grant, is many States will not increase the subsidy they pay for children; they will simply try to enroll more children. This puts centers in a very cruel dilemma because the more children they have at that far-below-market rate, the greater the economic pressure on the centers.

The program I am presenting today with my colleagues would do what child care providers have argued must be done, and that is to give them additional resources so they can, in fact, improve the quality of day care—not simply the number of children in day care but the quality of day care. If we do these things we are going to be in a strong position to face the challenges ahead.

One of the greatest challenges for working families is the cost of day care for their children. I have been very pleased to note that this legislation has been endorsed by the USA Child Care, the Children's Defense Fund, Catholic Charities of the United States, the Child Welfare League of America, the YMCA of the United States, the National Association of Child Care Resource and Referral Agencies, the National Child Care Association and a host of other agencies and organizations throughout the country. They recognize, as I do, and as my colleagues who are introducing this legislation do, that we can talk a lot about child care, we can emphasize how important it is to families, we can stress the importance to our economy and to our long-run future in this country, but until we put real resources to work, we will not be able to meet the real needs of families. These are the crises of the day. I urge strong support for this legislation. Again, I thank and commend my colleagues who have joined me in this... effort: Senators DODD, KENNEDY, FRIEDMAN, NOUYE, and MURRAY, and I encourage the United States.

I thank my colleagues for joining me, and I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a copy of the legislation.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1475

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE. This Act may be cited as the “Child Care Quality Incentive Act of 1999”.

SEC. 2. FINDINGS AND PURPOSES.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress makes the following findings:

(1) Research on early brain development reveals that much of a child’s growth is determined by early learning and nurturing care. Research also shows that quality early care and education leads to increased cognitive abilities, positive classroom learning behavior, increased likelihood of long-term school success, and greater likelihood of long-term economic and social self-sufficiency.

(2) Each day an estimated 13,000,000 children, including 6,000,000 infants and toddlers, spend some part of their day in child care. However, a study in 4 States found that only 1 in 7 child care centers provide care that promotes healthy development, while 1 in 8 child care centers provide care that threatens the safety and health of children.

(3) Full-day child care can cost $4,000 to $10,000 per year.

(4) Although Federal assistance is available for child care, funding is severely limited. Even with Federal subsidies, many families cannot afford care. For families with young children and a monthly income under $1,200, the cost of child care typically consumes 25 percent of their income.

(b) PURPOSE.—The purpose of this Act is to improve the quality of, and access to, child care by increasing child care payment rates.

SEC. 3. INCENTIVE GRANTS TO IMPROVE THE QUALITY OF CHILD CARE.

(a) FUNDING.—Section 658B of the Child Care and Development Block Grant Act of 1990 (42 U.S.C. 9858) is amended by—

(1) by striking “There” and inserting the following:

“(c) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—

There”: and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

“(d) APPROPRIATION OF FUNDS FOR GRANTS TO IMPROVE THE QUALITY OF CHILD CARE.—

(1) In general.—The Secretary shall make annual payments to each eligible State out of the allotment for that State determined under subsection (c).

(2) Annual Payments.—The Secretary shall make annual payments to each eligible State out of the allotment for that State determined under subsection (c).”.

(b) GRANTS TO IMPROVE THE QUALITY OF CHILD CARE.—The Child Care and Development Block Grant Act of 1990 (42 U.S.C. 9858 et seq.) is amended by inserting after section 658G the following:

“SEC. 658H. GRANTS TO IMPROVE THE QUALITY OF CHILD CARE.

“(a) IN GENERAL.—To be eligible to receive a grant under this section, a State shall submit an application to the Secretary for a grant under this section for any other activity that the State demonstrates to the Secretary will enhance the quality of child care services provided in the State.

(2) PAYMENT RATE.—In this section, the term ‘payment rate’ means the payment rate for the provision of child care assistance in accordance with this subchapter up to the 100th percentile of the market rate survey described in subsection (b)(1)(A).

(3) ADDITIONAL USE.—An eligible State shall make annual payments to each eligible State out of the allotment for that State determined under subsection (c).”.

(c) ELIGIBILITY STANDARDS.—The Child Care and Development Block Grant Act of 1990 (42 U.S.C. 9858 et seq.) is amended by—

(1) the Secretary determines that the State has achieved a payment rate of the 100th percentile of the market rate survey described in subsection (b)(1)(A), and

(2) the Secretary determines that the State shall receive a grant under this section for any other activity that the State demonstrates to the Secretary will enhance the quality of child care services provided in the State.

(4) SUPPLEMENT NOT SUPPLANT.—Amounts paid to a State under this section shall be used to supplement and not supplant other Federal, State, or local funds provided to the State under this subchapter or any other program of the Federal Government.

(d) USE OF FUNDS.—

(1) PRIORITY USE.—An eligible State that receives a grant under this section shall use the funds received to significantly increase the payment rate for the provision of child care assistance in accordance with this subchapter.

(2) ADDITIONAL USE.—An eligible State that demonstrates to the Secretary that the State has achieved a payment rate of the 100th percentile of the market rate survey described in subsection (b)(1)(A), and

(3) SUPPLEMENT NOT SUPPLANT.—Amounts paid to a State under this section shall be used to supplement and not supplant other Federal, State, or local funds provided to the State under this subchapter or any other program of the Federal Government.

(e) EVALUATIONS AND REPORTS.—

(1) STATE EVALUATIONS.—Each eligible State shall submit to the Secretary, at such time and in such manner as the Secretary may require, information concerning the State’s efforts to increase payment rates and the impact increased rates are having on the quality of, and accessibility to, child care in the State.

(2) REPORTS TO CONGRESS.—The Secretary shall submit biennial reports to Congress on the information described in paragraph (1). Such reports shall include data from the applications submitted under subsection (b)(2) as a baseline for determining the progress of each eligible State in maintaining increased payment rates.”.

By Mr. MURkowski (for himself, Mr. Stevens, Mr. Inouye, and Mr. Akaka):

S. 1476. A bill to amend title XVIII of the Social Security Act to provide an increase in payments for physician services provided in health professional shortage areas in Alaska and Hawaii; to the Committee on Finance.

HEALTH PROFESSIONAL SHORTAGE IN ALASKA AND HAWAI'I

Mr. MURkowski: Mr. President, I rise today to introduce legislation co-sponsored by my colleagues Senator Stevens, Senator Inouye and Senator Akaka: Mr. Inouye which will help to alleviate some of the financial hardships that currently face physicians who practice in remote areas of Alaska and Hawaii.

Access to health care is the overwhelming problem for Alaska’s elderly. Almost weekly, I receive letters from seniors in Alaska who tell me that their doctor is no longer willing to accept Medicare patients. Why? Because allow continuation of tribal-state IV-E agreements.

In its report, HHS found that the best way to serve this underfunded group is to provide direct assistance to tribal governments and qualified tribal families. This bill would not reduce the entitlement funding for states, as they would continue to be reimbursed for expenses incurred under the law. I strongly believe Congress should address this oversight and provide equitable benefits to Native American children under the jurisdiction of their tribal governments, and I hope my colleagues will join me in supporting this bill.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1478

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SEC. 1. AUTHORITY OF INDIAN TRIBES TO RECEIVE FEDERAL FUNDS FOR FOSTER CARE AND ADOPTION ASSISTANCE.

(a) CHILDREN PLACED IN TRIBAL CUSTODY ELIGIBLE FOR FOSTER CARE FUNDING.—Section 472(a)(2) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 672(a)(2)) is amended—

(1) by striking ‘‘or (B)’’ and inserting ‘‘(B);’’ and

(2) by inserting before the semicolon the following: ‘‘, or (C) an Indian tribe as defined in section 479B(b)(5), in the case of an Indian child (as defined in section 4(4) of the Indian Child Welfare Act of 1978 (25 U.S.C. 1903(4))) if the tribe is not operating a program pursuant to section 479B and (1) has an agreement with a State pursuant to section 479B(b)(3) or (ii) submits to the Secretary a description of the arrangements, jointly developed or in consultation with the State, made for the payment of funds and the provision of the child welfare services and protections required by this title;’’;

(b) PROGRAMS OPERATED BY INDIAN TRIBAL ORGANIZATIONS.—Part E of title IV of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 670 et seq.) is amended by adding after section 479B the following:

‘‘PROGRAMS OPERATED BY INDIAN TRIBAL ORGANIZATIONS.—Sec. 479B. (a) Except as provided in subsection (b), this part shall apply to an Indian tribe that chooses to operate a program under this part in the same manner as this part applies to a State.

(b)(1) In the case of an Indian tribe submitting a plan for approval under section 471, the plan shall—

‘‘(A) in the lieu of the requirement of section 471(a)(3), identify the service area and population to be served by the Indian tribe; and

‘‘(B) in lieu of the requirement of section 471(a)(10), provide for the approval of foster homes pursuant to tribal standards and in a manner that ensures the safety of, and accountability for, children placed in foster care.’’

C. CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE

August 3, 1999

19156
“(II) An Indian tribe may submit to the Secretary an alternative demonstration in which the tribe considers it may be reasonable to make the calculation of the per capita income of the tribe different from the one used under section 426a(3), except that in no case shall an Indian tribe receive a lesser proportion than specified in States in that section.

“(C) An Indian tribe may use Federal or State funds to pay for which the Indian tribe is eligible under section 471.

“(3) An Indian tribe and a State may enter into a cooperative agreement for the administration or payment of funds pursuant to this part. Any such agreement that is in effect as of the date of the enactment of this section shall remain in full force and effect subject to the right of either party to revoke or modify the agreement pursuant to its terms.

“(4) The Secretary may prescribe regulations that alter or waive any requirement under this part with respect to an Indian tribe or tribes if the Secretary, after consulting with the tribes, determines that the strict enforcement of the requirement would not advance the best interests and the safety of children served by the Indian tribe or tribes.

“(5) For purposes of this section, the term ‘Indian tribe’ means any Indian tribe, band, nation, or organized group or community of Indians within the United States in that section.

“(6) Nothing in this section shall preclude the development and submission of a single plan under section 471 that meets the requirements of this section by the participating Indian tribes of an intertribal consortium.

“EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this Act take effect on the date of enactment of this Act.

Mr. McCAIN. Mr. President, I am pleased to co-sponsor legislation with my colleagues, Senators DASCHELLE and INOUYE that the in-achievement is a highly qualified teacher. Outside of parental involvement, no other factor has as much impact on determining whether a student will succeed or fail in school. Unfortunately, we know that over 25% of those who enter the teacher workforce are poorly qualified to teach. Furthermore, we know that many teachers who are already in the classroom lack necessary skills or do not possess adequate knowledge of the subject area in which they teach.

Since teacher quality is the most significant determinant to student success and there is a shortage of high quality teachers in our schools, it is readily apparent that we need to focus our efforts on increasing teacher quality. Nothing else will improve our public schools or lead to increased student achievement. TEA does this through a variety of measures. It permits schools to recruit and retain highly skilled and knowledgeable teachers. It permits schools to recruit individuals who have had careers outside of teaching but whose life experiences provide a solid foundation for teaching. And, it permits schools to invest in teacher mentors and master teachers; studies and teacher polls have found that hiring master teachers who mentor new teachers improves both teacher quality and the likelihood that new teachers will stay and thrive at the school.

In addition to promoting high quality professional development programs and to giving school districts the ability to retain, recruit and train high quality teachers, TEA also promotes a number of innovative common sense reforms, such as tenure reform, teacher testing, merit-based performance systems, teacher academies, and alternative certification programs.

TEA also creates Teacher Opportunity Payments (TOPS), payments that would be provided directly to teachers so they can choose their own professional development. Teachers have reported that professional activities selected by the school districts are often not as helpful as those activities they might have selected themselves. Under TOPS, if a group of teachers is not satisfied with the professional opportunities offered by the school district, they could request that the LEA pay for them to attend a professional development program of their choice, provided the program met the professional activity requirements under the Act. This means that science teachers could attend a local university that has a reputation for intensive professional development programs in math and science; programs that they otherwise might not have had the opportunity to attend.

I urge my colleagues to cosponsor TEA. TEA gives States and schools the resources and the flexibility to use those resources to retain, recruit, train and hire highly qualified teachers. I ask that the bill be printed in the RECORD.

The bill follows:

S. 1479

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE. This Act may be cited as the ‘‘Teacher Empowerment Act’’.

SEC. 2. TEACHER EMPowerment.

(a) In General.—Title II of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 6601 et seq.) is amended—

(1) by striking the heading for title II and inserting the following:

‘‘TITLE II—TEACHER QUALITY’’;

(2) by repealing sections 2001 through 2003; and

(3) by amending part A to read as follows:

‘‘PART A—TEACHER EMPowerment

SEC. 2001. PURPOSE.

The purpose of this part is to provide grants to States and local educational agencies, in order to assist their efforts to increase student academic achievement through such strategies as improving teacher quality.

Subpart 1—Grants to States

SEC. 2011. FORMULA GRANTS TO STATES.

(a) In General.—In the case of each State that, in accordance with section 2014, submits to the Secretary and obtains approval of an application for a fiscal year, the Secretary shall make a grant for the year to the State for the uses specified in section 2012. The grant shall consist of the allotment determined for the State under subsection (b).

(b) Determination of Amount of AlloTment.—

(1) ReserveNtion of fundS.—

(A) In General.—From the total amount made available to carry out this part for any fiscal year, the Secretary shall reserve—

(i) 25 percent for the Secretary of the Interior for programs under this part for professional development activities for teachers, other staff, and administrators in schools operated or funded by the Bureau of Indian Affairs;

(ii) 1/2 of 1 percent for the Secretary of the Interior for programs under this part for professional development activities for teachers, other staff, and administrators in schools operated or funded by the Bureau of Indian Affairs.

(B) limitation.—In reserving an amount for the purposes described in clauses (i) and (ii) of subparagraph (A) for a fiscal year, the Secretary shall not reserve more than the total amount the outlying areas and the school districts selected by the Secretary in accordance with the purpose of this part; and

(2) State alloTments.—

(A) hold harmless.—

(i) In General.—Subject to subparagraph (B) the total amount made available to carry out this part for any fiscal year and not reserved under paragraph (1), the Secretary shall allot to each of the 50 States, the District of Columbia, and the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico an amount equal to the total amount that such State received for fiscal year 1999 under—

(II) section 220(b) of this Act (as in effect on the day before the date of enactment of the Teacher Empowerment Act);

(ii) determination.—If the total amount made available to carry out this part for any fiscal year and not reserved under paragraph (1) is insufficient to pay the full amounts that all States are eligible to receive under clause (i) for any fiscal year, the Secretary shall ratably reduce such amounts for such fiscal year.

(b) alloTment of additional funds.—

(i) In General.—Subsection (a) is amended by inserting after subsection (ii), for any fiscal year for which the total amount made available to carry out this part and not reserved under paragraph (1) exceeds the total amount made available to the 50 States, the District of Columbia, and the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico for fiscal year
1999 under the authorities described in subparagraph (A) of this section, the Secretary shall allot to each of the States the sum of—

"(I) an amount that bears the same relation to 50 percent of the excess amount as the number of individuals age 5 through 17 in the State, as so determined; and

"(II) an amount that bears the same relation to 50 percent of the excess amount as the number of those individuals in the geographic areas served by all the local educational agencies in the State, as so determined; and

"the basis of the most recent satisfactory data, bears to the number of those individuals in the geographic areas served by all the local educational agencies in the State, as so determined; and "the number of individuals age 5 through 17 in the State, as so determined; and

"(B) ALTERNATIVE FORMULA.—A State may increase the percentage described in subparagraph (A)(ii) (and commensurately decrease the percentage described in subparagraph (A)(i)) by not more than 10 percent of the amount described in subsection (b)(1) through a competitive process.

"(B) PARTICIPANTS.—The competitive process carried out under subparagraph (A) shall be open to local educational agencies and eligible partnerships (as defined in section 2021(d)). In carrying out the process, the State shall give priority to high-need local educational agencies that focus on math, science, or reading professional development programs.

"(C) SUBGRANTS TO ELIGIBLE PARTNERSHIPS.—A State receiving a grant under this subsection shall distribute a portion equal to 20 percent of the amount described in subsection (b)(1) through a competitive process.

"(B) PARTICIPANTS.—A State receiving a grant under this subsection shall use the funds provided under the grant for the improvement of teaching and learning.

"(1) REQUIRED EXPENDITURES.—The Secretary may make a grant to a State under this subpart only if the State agrees to expend not less than 90 percent of the amount allocated under this paragraph for such purposes.

"(b) REQUIRED AND AUTHORIZED EXPENDITURES.—

"(1) REQUIRED EXPENDITURES.—State that receives a grant under this subpart may expend a portion equal to not more than 10 percent of the amount described in subsection (b)(1) for carrying out subparagraphs (A) and (B) of section 2021(d).

"(2) AUTHORIZED EXPENDITURES.—A State receiving a grant under this subpart may expend a portion equal to not more than 10 percent of the amount described in subsection (b)(1) for carrying out subparagraphs (A) and (B) of section 2021(d).

"(3) REALLOTTMENT.—If any State does not expend a portion equal to not more than 10 percent of the amount described in subsection (b)(1) for carrying out subparagraphs (A) and (B) of section 2021(d), the Secretary shall reallocate such amount to the remaining States in accordance with this subsection.

"SEC. 2021. ALLOCATIONS WITHIN STATES.

"(a) USE OF FUNDS.—Each State receiving a grant under this subpart shall allocate the funds provided under the grant for the improvement of teaching and learning.

"(b) REQUIRED AND AUTHORIZED EXPENDITURES.—

"(1) REQUIRED EXPENDITURES.—The Secretary may make a grant to a State under this subpart only if the State agrees to expend not less than 90 percent of the amount under the grant for the purpose of making subgrants to local educational agencies and eligible partnerships (as defined in section 2021(d)), in accordance with subsection (c).

"(2) AUTHORIZED EXPENDITURES.—A State receiving a grant under this subpart may expend a portion equal to not more than 10 percent of the amount under the grant for the purpose of making subgrants to local educational agencies and eligible partnerships (as defined in section 2021(d)), in accordance with subsection (c).

"(3) REALLOTTMENT.—If any State does not expend a portion equal to not more than 10 percent of the amount described in subsection (b)(1) for carrying out subparagraphs (A) and (B) of section 2021(d), the Secretary shall reallocate such amount to the remaining States in accordance with this subsection.

"SEC. 2022. ALLOCATIONS TO ELIGIBLE PARTNER SHIPS.

"(a) AUTHORIZED STATE ACTIVITIES.—The authorized State activities described in section 2021(c) shall be—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—A State that receives a grant under this subpart may use the funds provided under the grant for the purpose of—

"(ii) to the eligible partnerships to enable the partnerships to carry out subpart 3 (but not more than 5 percent of the funds made available to the eligible partnerships through the subgrants may be used for planning and administration related to carrying out such purpose).

"(c) PUBLIC ACCOUNTABILITY.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—A State that receives a grant under this subpart shall—

"(2) DISAGGREGATED DATA.—The information described in clauses (1) and (2) of paragraph (1) shall be—

"(ii) an amount that bears the same relation to 50 percent of the excess amount as the number of those individuals in the geographic areas served by all the local educational agencies in the State, as so determined; and

"(3) PUBLIC AVAILABILITY.—Such information shall be made widely available to the public, including parents and students, through major print and broadcast media outlets throughout the State.

"SEC. 2014. APPLICATIONS BY STATES.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—A State receiving a grant under this subpart, a State shall submit an application to the Secretary at such time, in such manner, and containing such information as the Secretary may reason-ably require.

(b) CONTENTS.—Each application submitted under this section shall include the following:

"(1) A description of how the State will ensure that a local educational agency receiving a subgrant to carry out subpart 3 will comply with the requirements of such subpart.

"(2)(A) A description of the performance indicators that the State will use to measure the achievement of the eligible local educational agencies and schools in the State with respect to—

"(i) subject to section 2013(c)(2), improving student academic achievement, as defined by the State;

"(ii) closing academic achievement gaps, as defined by the State, between groups described in section 2013(c)(2)(ii); and

"(iii) increasing the percentage of classes in core academic subjects that are taught by highly qualified teachers.

"(B) An assurance that the State will require each local educational agency and school in the State receiving funds under this part to publicly report information on the agency or school’s annual progress, as measured by the performance indicators.

"(3) A description of how the State will hold the local educational agencies and schools accountable for making annual gains toward meeting the performance indicators described in paragraph (2).

"(4)(A) A description of how the State will coordinate professional development activities authorized under this part with professional development activities provided under other Federal, State, and local programs, including those authorized under title I, title II, title III, title IV, part A of title VII, and (where applicable) the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (20 U.S.C. 1400 et seq.) and the Carl D. Perkins Vocational and Technical Education Act of 1998 (20 U.S.C. 2301 et seq.).

"(B) A description of the comprehensive strategy that the State will use as part of the effort to carry out the coordination, to ensure that teachers are trained in the utilization of technology so that technology and technology applications are effectively used in the effort to carry out this subpart.

"(5) A description of how the State will encourage the development of proven, innovative strategies to deliver intensive professional development programs that are both effective and easily accessible, such as through the use of technology and distance learning.

"(6) Activities that provide teacher opportunities to learn.

"(7) An assurance that the State will ensure that a local educational agency receiving a subgrant to carry out this subpart shall use the funds made available through the subgrant to carry out the following activities:

"(i) Recruiting and hiring certified or лиcensed teachers, including teachers certified through State and local alternative routes, in order to reduce class size, or hiring special education teachers.

"(ii) Programs that provide other incentives, including financial incentives, to retain teachers who have a record of success in helping low-achieving students improve their academic success.

"(iii) Programs and activities that are designed to improve the quality of the teacher force, such as—"(A) innovative professional development programs (which may be through partnerships with teacher certification programs), including programs that train teachers to utilize technology to improve teaching and learning, that are consistent with the requirements of section 2022.

"(B) development and utilization of proven, cost-effective strategies for the implementation of professional development activities, such as through the utilization of technology and distance learning;

"(C) professional development programs that provide instruction in how to teach children with disabilities and children with special learning needs (including children who are gifted and talented); and

"(D) professional development programs that provide instruction in how best to discipline children in the classroom and identify early and appropriate interventions to help children described in subparagraph (C) to learn.

"(8) Programs and activities related to—

"(A) tenure reform;

"(B) professional merit pay; and

"(C) testing of elementary school and secondary school teachers in the academic subjects taught by such teachers.

"(9) Programs that provide teacher opportunity payments, consistent with section 2032.
(A) LIMITATION RELATING TO CURRICULUM AND ACADEMIC SUBJECTS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), funds made available to carry out this subpart may not be provided for a teacher and a professional development activity if the activity is not—

(A) directly related to the curriculum and academic subjects in which the teacher provides instruction; or

(B) designed to enhance the ability of the teacher to understand and use State standards for the academic subjects in which the teacher provides instruction.

(2) Providers of technical assistance from the State in order to have a positive and lasting impact on the preparation of a teacher in the classroom (which shall not include 1-day or short-term workshops and conferences), except that this paragraph shall not apply to an academic subject or substantially increasing the knowledge and teaching skills of the teachers participating in the activities;

(3) shall be tied to scientifically based research demonstrating the effectiveness of the activities in increasing student achievement or substantially increasing the knowledge and teaching skills of the teachers participating in the activities;

(4) shall be of sufficient intensity and duration to have a positive and lasting impact on the preparation of a teacher in the classroom (which shall not include 1-day or short-term workshops and conferences), except that this paragraph shall not apply to an academic subject or substantially increasing the knowledge and teaching skills of the teachers participating in the activities; and

(5) shall be developed with extensive participation by virtue of—

(A) the teachers' lack of full certification or licensing to teach the academic subjects in which the teachers teach; or

(B) the teachers' need for additional assistance to ensure that their students make progress toward meeting challenging State content standards and student performance standards.

(c) SELECTION OF TEACHERS.—In the event that adequate funding is not available to provide payments under this section to all teachers seeking such payments, or recommended for adequate funding is not available to provide payments under this section to all teachers submitting an application under this subpart, to provide payments under this section to all teachers receiving funds under this subsection shall (or in the case of section 2032(c)(3), may serve as models to be disseminated to other schools and local educational agencies)

(1) A description of how the local educational agency distributing payments under this Act (20 U.S.C. 1400 et seq.) and the Carl D. Perkins Vocational and Technical Education Act of 1998 (20 U.S.C. 2931 et seq.)

(2) A description of how the local educational agency will integrate funds received to carry out this subpart with funds received under title III that are used for professional development for train teachers in how to use technology to improve learning and teaching.

SEC. 2033. TEACHER OPPORTUNITY PAYMENTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—A local educational agency receiving funds to carry out this subpart may (or in the case of section 2032(c)(3), may serve as models to be disseminated to other schools and local educational agencies)

(b) ACCOUNTABILITY AND REQUIRED PAYMENTS.—

(1) A description of how the local educational agency seeking to receive a subgrant from a State to carry out this subpart will submit an application to the State that—

(A) have the lowest proportions of highly qualified teachers; or

(B) are the design and implementation of a model professional development activity that meets the criteria set forth in subsections (a) and (b) of section 2032.

SEC. 2034. LOCAL APPLICATIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—A local educational agency seeking to receive a subgrant from a State to carry out this subpart shall submit an application to the State that—

(1) at such time as the State shall require; and

(2) that is coordinated with other programs carried out under this Act (other than programs carried out under this Act).

(b) LOCAL APPLICATION CONTENTS.—The local application described in subsection (a) shall include, at a minimum, the following:

(1) A description of how the local educational agency intends to use funds provided to carry out this subpart.

(2) An assurance that the local educational agency will target funds to schools served by the local educational agency that—

(A) have the lowest proportions of highly qualified teachers; or

(B) are identified for school improvement under section 1116(c).

(3) A description of how the local educational agency will coordinate professional development activities authorized under this subpart with professional development activities authorized under this Act (20 U.S.C. 1400 et seq.) and the Carl D. Perkins Vocational and Technical Education Act of 1998 (20 U.S.C. 2931 et seq.).

(4) A description of how the local educational agency will integrate funds received to carry out this subpart with funds received under title III that are used for professional development for train teachers in how to use technology to improve learning and teaching.

(b) USE OF FUNDS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary may award grants on a competitive basis to eligible consortia to carry out activities described in this subpart.

(1) USE OF FUNDS.—

(1) A description of how the local educational agency distributing payments under this subpart shall use the funds to pay the costs associated with the establishment or expansion of a teacher academy, in an elementary school or secondary school facility, that carries out—

(A) the activities promoting alternative routes to State teacher certification specified in subparagraph (B); or

(B) the model professional development activities specified in subparagraph (C).

(B) PROMOTING ALTERNATIVE ROUTES TO TEACHER CERTIFICATION.—The activities promoting alternative routes to State teacher certification referred to in paragraph (1) are the design and implementation of a course of study and activities providing an alternative route to State teacher certification that—

(1) provide opportunities to highly qualified individuals with a baccalaureate degree, including mid-career professionals from other occupations, paraprofessionals, former military personnel, and recent college or university graduates with records of academic distinction;

(2) provide stipends, for not more than 2 years, to permit individuals described in clause (i) to participate as student teachers able to fill teaching needs in academic subjects in which there is a demonstrated shortage of teachers;

(3) provide for the recruitment and hiring of master teachers to mentor and train student teachers within such academies; and

(4) include a reasonable service requirement for individuals completing the course of study and alternative certification activities described by virtue of—

(A) have the lowest proportions of highly qualified teachers; or

(B) serve as models to be disseminated to other schools and local educational agencies.

(C) MODEL PROFESSIONAL DEVELOPMENT.—The model professional development activities specified in this subparagraph are activities promoting ongoing professional development opportunities for teachers, such as—

(i) innovative programs and model curricula in the area of professional development, which may serve as models to be disseminated to other schools and local educational agencies; and

(ii) provide for the recruitment and hiring of master teachers to mentor and train student teachers within such academies; and

(iv) include a reasonable service requirement for individuals completing the course of study and alternative certification activities described by virtue of—

(A) have the lowest proportions of highly qualified teachers; or

(B) are the design and implementation of a model professional development activity that meets the criteria set forth in subsections (a) and (b) of section 2032.

SEC. 2035. NATIONAL ACTIVITIES

SEC. 2041. ALTERNATIVE ROUTES TO TEACHING. (a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of Education may award grants on a competitive basis to eligible consortia to carry out activities described in this subpart.

(b) TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE.—A local educational agency that has received notification from the State in order to have a positive and lasting impact on the preparation of a teacher in the classroom (which shall not include 1-day or short-term workshops and conferences), except that this paragraph shall not apply to an academic subject or substantially increasing the knowledge and teaching skills of the teachers participating in the activities; and

(c) SELECTION OF TEACHERS.—In the event that adequate funding is not available to provide payments under this section to all teachers seeking such payments, or recommended for adequate funding is not available to provide payments under this section to all teachers submitting an application under this subpart, to provide payments under this section to all teachers receiving funds under this subsection shall (or in the case of section 2032(c)(3), may serve as models to be disseminated to other schools and local educational agencies)
SEC. 4. GENERAL PROVISIONS.

(a) In General.—Title II of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 6951 et seq.), is amended—

(1) by repealing part D;

(2) by redesignating part E as part C; and

(3) by repealing sections 2401 and 2402 and inserting the following:

''SEC. 2401. PROHIBITION ON MANDATORY NATIONAL CERTIFICATION OR LICENSING OF TEACHERS.

''(a) Prohibition on Mandatory Testing, Certification, or Licensing.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Secretary may not use Federal funds to plan, develop, implement, or administer any mandatory national teacher test or method of certification or licensing.

''(b) PROHIBITION ON WITHHOLDING FUNDS.—The Secretary may not withhold funds from any State or local educational agency if such State or local educational agency fails to adopt a specific method of teacher certification or licensing.

''SEC. 2402. PROVISIONS RELATED TO PRIVATE SCHOOLS.

''The provisions of sections 1400 through 14506 apply to programs carried out under this title.

SEC. 2403. HOME SCHOOLS.

''Nothing in this title shall be construed to permit, allow, encourage, or authorize any Federal control over any aspect of any private, religious, or home school, whether a home school is treated as a private school under the law of the State involved, except that the Secretary may require that funds provided to a school under... this title be used for the purposes described in this title. This section shall not be construed to bar private, religious, or home schools from participating in or receiving programs or services under this title."

(a) Coordination.—Section 1202(c)(2)(C) of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 6302(c)(2)(C)) is amended by striking "PART C" and inserting "PART B".

(b) Definition of Covered Program.—Section 1410(10)(C) of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act of 1965 (20 U.S.C. 6801(10)(C)) is amended by striking "other than section 2103 and part D of such title".

(c) Private School Participation.—Section 14003(b)(1)(B) (20 U.S.C. 6803(b)(1)(B)) of such Act is amended by striking "other than section 2103 and part D of such title"

Mr. MACK. Mr. President, I rise today to speak on behalf of the Teacher Empowerment Act, which is legislation introduced by this body and cosponsored by Senator Gregg. I am proud to be an original cosponsor of this legislation, which responds to several critical needs facing American education. In particular, it addresses teacher quality and quantity. It addresses local control of educating our children. It requires accountability to parents and students. In short, it is a plan to ensure that every child in America is prepared for global competition in the 21st Century.

The Teacher Empowerment Act recognizes the expertise of our state and local governments in educating our children. American parents trust their teachers and principals to make appropriate educational decisions for their children. In reality, Washington bureaucrats have called the shots for far too long. The results indicate that in lieu of achievement, we now have reams of paperwork and a myriad of programs to address local problems at the national level. We can and must do better.

The Teacher Empowerment Act puts decision making authority back into the hands of local schools. It encourages states to implement innovative teacher reforms and high quality professional development programs to increase teacher knowledge and student achievement. Local schools would be encouraged to fund innovative programs such as teacher testing—a concept which I have strongly supported and which topped the agenda last year in a bipartisan vote—as well as tenure reform, merit-based pay, alternative routes to teacher certification, differential and bonus pay for teachers in high need subject areas, teacher mentoring, and in-service teacher academies.

Our children are counting on us to ensure that they receive an education second to none. That starts with exceptional teachers and schools that are able to address the individual needs of its students. This bill returns to local schools the ability and authority to accomplish these goals. I urge my colleagues to support this bill.

Mr. ROBB. Mr. President, I rise to amendment of S. 37, a bill to amend title XVIII of the Social Security Act to eliminate the time limitation on benefits for immunosuppressive drugs under the medicare program, to provide continued entitlement for such drugs for certain individuals after medicare benefits end, and to extend certain medicare secondary payer requirements.

S. 37

At the request of Mr. MOYNIHAN, the name of the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. KENNEDY) was added as a cosponsor of S. 659, a bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to require pension plans to provide adequate relief to distributions in cases of hardship.

At the request of Mr. LUGAR, the name of the Senator from California (Mrs. FEINSTEIN) was added as a cosponsor of S. 666, a bill to authorize a national program to reduce the prison population and increase the number of non-violent offenders released.

At the request of Mr. HELMS, the name of the Senator from Washington (Mr. GORTON) was added as a cosponsor of S. 693, a bill to authorize the establishment of a national program to reduce the prison population and increase the number of non-violent offenders released.

At the request of Mr. WELLSTONE, the name of the Senator from Connecticut (Mr. DODD) and the Senator from South Dakota (Mr. JOHNSON) were added as cosponsors of S. 796, a bill to provide additional funding for the national program to reduce the prison population and increase the number of non-violent offenders released.

At the request of Mr. DORGAN, the name of the Senator from the District of Columbia (Ms. LANDREU) was added as a cosponsor of S. 1022, a bill to authorize the appropriation of an additional $1,700,000,000 for fiscal year 2000 for health care for veterans.

At the request of Mr. VINOVICH, the name of the Senator from Colorado (Mr. ALLARD) was added as a cosponsor of S. 1144, a bill to provide increased flexibility in use of highway funding, and for other purposes.

At the request of Mr. DORGAN, the name of the Senator from Oregon (Mr. WYDEN) was added as a cosponsor of S. 1187, a bill to require the Treasury to mint coins in commemoration of the bicentennial of the Lewis and Clark Expedition, and for other purposes.

At the request of Mr. DORGAN, the name of the Senator from Maine (Ms. SCHUMER) was added as a cosponsor of S. 1214, a bill to prohibit limits on the number of mental health providers for low-income individuals.

At the request of Mr. THOMPSON, the name of the Senator from Maine (Ms. S. 631, a bill to amend the Social Security Act to eliminate the time limitation on benefits for immunosuppressive drugs under the medicare program, to provide continued entitlement for such drugs for certain individuals after medicare benefits end, and to extend certain medicare secondary payer requirements.

At the request of Mr. MOYNIHAN, the name of the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. KENNEDY) was added as a cosponsor of S. 659, a bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to require pension plans to provide adequate relief to distributions in cases of hardship.

S. 37

At the request of Mr. GRASSLEY, the name of the Senator from Virginia (Mr. ROBB) was added as a cosponsor of S. 37, a bill to amend title XVIII of the Social Security Act to eliminate the time limitation on benefits for immunosuppressive drugs under the medicare program, to provide continued entitlement for such drugs for certain individuals after medicare benefits end, and to extend certain medicare secondary payer requirements.

S. 37

At the request of Mr. MOYNIHAN, the name of the Senator from Massachusetts (Mr. KENNEDY) was added as a cosponsor of S. 659, a bill to amend the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to require pension plans to provide adequate relief to distributions in cases of hardship.
AMBITIONS SUBMITTED

AGRICULTURE, RURAL DEVELOPMENT, FOOD AND DRUG ADMINISTRATION AND RELATED AGENCIES APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 2000

ABRAHAM AMENDMENT No. 1502

(Ordred to lie on the table.)

Mr. ABRAHAM submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill (S. 1233) making appropriations for Agriculture, Rural Development, Food and Drug Administration, and Related Agencies programs for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2000, and for other purposes; as follows:

On page 68, line 5, before the period insert the following: ‘‘, or the Food and Drug Administration Detroit, Michigan District Office; or to reduce the Detroit Michigan Food and Drug Administration District Office below the operating and fulltime equivalent staffing level of July 31, 1999; or to change the Detroit District Office a Federal employee, resident post or similarly modified office; or to reassign residence posts assigned to the Detroit District Office.’’

ROBERTS AMENDMENTS Nos. 1503–1504

(Ordred to lie on the table.)

Mr. ROBERTS submitted two amendments intended to be proposed by him to the bill, S. 1233, supra; as follows:

AMENDMENT No. 1503

On page 76, between lines 6 and 7, insert the following:

Sec. 7. Prohibited Activities on CRP Acreage.—None of the funds made available by this Act shall be used to implement No. 1499.

AMENDMENT No. 1504

On page 76, between lines 6 and 7, insert the following:

Sec. 7. Sense of the Senate Regarding Access to Items and Services Under the Medicare Program.

(a) Findings.—The Senate finds the following:

(1) Total hospital operating margins with respect to items and services provided to Medicare beneficiaries are expected to decline from 4.3 percent in fiscal year 1997 to negative 4.4 percent in fiscal year 2002.

(2) Total operating margins for small rural hospitals are expected to decline from 4.2 percent in fiscal year 1998 to negative 7.1 percent in fiscal year 2002.

(3) The Congressional Budget Office recently has estimated that the amount of savings that would result from the proposed Medicare reform in fiscal years 1998 through 2002 would result in a savings of $268,000,000,000, which could be reduced by 10 percent in fiscal year 2002.

(4) Health care providers are beginning to receive less from Medicare payments for services provided to Medicare beneficiaries in both urban and rural areas as a result of the implementation of the Balanced Budget Act of 1997.

(5) The concurrent resolution on the budget for fiscal year 2000 recognized that Congress has the responsibility to review payment levels under the Medicare program to ensure that Medicare beneficiaries have access to care and related services.

(b) SENSE OF THE SENATE.—It is the sense of the Senate that Congress should—

(1) reject further reductions in the Medicare program under title XVIII of the Social Security Act;

(2) reject extensions of the provisions of the Balanced Budget Act of 1997; and

(A) address the unintended consequences of the Balanced Budget Act of 1997; and

(B) ensure the access of Medicare beneficiaries to high-quality skilled nursing services, home health care services, teaching hospitals, inpatient and outpatient hospital services, and health care services in rural areas.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR AND RELATED AGENCIES APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 2000

CRAPO (AND OTHERS) AMENDMENT NO. 1505

(Ordered to lie on the table.)

Mr. CRAPO (for himself, Mr. Burns, Mr. Baucus, and Mr. Craig) submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by them to the bill (H.R. 2466) making appropriations for the Department of the Interior and related agencies for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2000, and for other purposes; as follows:

On page 10, line 16, after “herein,” insert “of which $300,000 of the amount available for consultation shall be available for development of a voluntary-enrollment habitat conservation plan for cold water fish in cooperation with the States of Idaho and Montana (of which $250,000 shall be made available to each of the States of Idaho and Montana), and”.

AGRICULTURE, RURAL DEVELOPMENT, FOOD AND Drug Administration, AND RELATED AGENCIES APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 2000

HARKIN (AND OTHERS) AMENDMENT NO. 1506

Mr. HARKIN (for himself, Mr. Daschle, Mr. Dorgan, Mr. Kerrey, Mr. Johnson, Mr. Conrad, Mr. Baucus, Mr. Durbin, Mr. Wellstone, Mrs. Lincoln, and Mr. Sarbanes) proposed an amendment to amendment No. 1499 proposed by Mr. Daschle to the bill, S. 1233, supra; as follows:

Beginning on page 1, line 3, strike all that follows “Sec. 1.” to the end of the amendment and insert the following:

... EMERGENCY AND INCOME LOSS ASSISTANCE.—(a) ADDITIONAL CROP LOSS ASSISTANCE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in paragraph (2), in addition to amounts that have been made available to carry out section 1102 of the Commodity Credit Corporation (referred to in this section as the ‘Secretary’) shall use not more than $70,000,000 of funds of the Commodity Credit Corporation to provide crop loss assistance in accordance with that section in a manner that, to the maximum extent practicable—

(A) fully compensates agricultural producers for crop losses in accordance with that section (or any successor section, or any provision of law, that supersedes or amends that section); and

(B) provides equitable treatment under that section for agricultural producers described in subsections (b) and (c) of that section.

(2) CROP INSURANCE.—Of the total amount made available under paragraph (1), the Secretary shall use not less than $400,000,000 to assist agricultural producers in purchasing additional coverage for the 2000 crop year under the Federal Crop Insurance Act (7 U.S.C. 1501 et seq.).

(3) COMPENSATION FOR DENIAL OF CROP LOSS ASSISTANCE BASED ON TAXPAYER IDENTIFICATION NUMBERS.—The Secretary shall use not more than $70,000,000 of funds of the Commodity Credit Corporation to provide crop loss assistance in accordance with that section in a manner that, to the maximum extent practicable—

(A) fully compensates agricultural producers for crop losses in accordance with that section (or any successor section, or any provision of law, that supersedes or amends that section); and

(B) provides equitable treatment under that section for agricultural producers described in subsections (b) and (c) of that section.

(4) IN GENERAL.—Of the funds made available under section 119 of the Agriculture, Rural Development, Food and Drug Administration, and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 1999 (7 U.S.C. 1421 note; Public Law 105–277) under paragraph (1), the Secretary shall ensure that Medicare beneficiaries have access to high-quality skilled nursing services, home health care services, teaching hospitals, inpatient and outpatient hospital services, and health care services in rural areas.

...
this subsection shall be used for development purposes that foster United States agricultural exports.

(f) UPLAND COTTON PRICE COMPETITIVENESS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Section 136(a) of the Agricultural Market Transition Act (7 U.S.C. 2326(a)) is amended—

(A) in paragraph (1), by inserting ‘‘(in the case of each of the 1999–2000, 2000–2001, and 2001–2002 marketing years for upland cotton, at the option of the recipient)’’ after ‘‘or cash payments’’;

(B) in subsection (a) (i), by striking ‘‘(or, in the case of each of the 1999–2000, 2000–2001, and 2001–2002 marketing years for upland cotton, 1.25 cents per pound)’’ after ‘‘3 cents per pound’’ each place it appears;

(C) in paragraph (3), by striking subparagraph (A) and inserting the following:

‘‘(A) REDEMPTION, MARKETING, OR EXCHANGE.—

‘‘(i) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall establish procedures for redeeming marketing certificates for cash or marketing or exchange. The Secretary determines will best effectuate the purposes of cotton user marketing certificates; or

‘‘(ii) PRICE RESTRICTIONS.—Any price restrictions that would otherwise apply to the disposal of agricultural commodities by the Commodity Credit Corporation shall not apply to the redemption of certificates under this subparagraph;’’;

and

(D) in the second sentence of subsection (a), by striking ‘‘The’’ and inserting ‘‘(in the

(2) SEASON-ENDING UNITED STATES STOCKS-TO-USE RATIO.—For the purposes of making estimates under subparagraph (C), the Secretary may cause such estimates to be made and report the season-ending United States upland cotton stocks-to-use ratio, excluding projected raw cotton imports but including the 1999–2000, 2000–2001, and 2001–2002 marketing years for upland cotton during any marketing year described in subparagraph (A) under the special import quota established under this paragraph may not exceed the equivalent of 5 weeks’ consumption of upland cotton by domestic mills at the seasonally adjusted average rate of the 3 months immediately preceding the special import quota established in any marketing year.’’;

(3) REMOVAL OF SUSPENSION OF MARKETING CERTIFICATE AUTHORITY.—Section 171(b)(1)(G) of the Agricultural Market Transition Act (7 U.S.C. 7301(b)(1)(G)) is amended by inserting before the period at the end the following: ‘‘, except that this subparagraph shall not apply to each of the 1999–2000, 2000–2001, and 2001–2002 marketing years for upland cotton’’.

(4) REDEMPTION OF MARKETING CERTIFICATES.—Section 115 of the Agricultural Act of 1949 (7 U.S.C. 145k) is amended—

(A) in subsection (a), by inserting ‘‘rice (other than negotiable marketing certificates for upland cotton or rice)’’ and inserting ‘‘rice, including the issuance of negotiable marketing certificates for upland cotton or rice’’;

(B) in paragraph (1), by striking ‘‘and’’ at the end;

(C) in paragraph (2), by striking the period at the end and inserting ‘‘; and’’;

and

(D) in the second sentence of subsection (c), by striking ‘‘export enhancement program or the marketing promotion program established under the Agricultural Trade Act of 1978’’ and inserting ‘‘market access program or the export enhancement program es-established under sections 203 and 301 of the Agricultural Trade Act of 1978 (7 U.S.C. 5623, 5651)’’.

(5) FARM SERVICE AGENCY.—For an additional amount for the Farm Service Agency, there is appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, $14,000,000, of which—

(1) $40,000,000 shall be used for salaries and expenses of the Farm Service Agency; and

(2) $40,000,000 shall be for the direct or guaranteed farm ownership, operating, or emergency loans under the Consolidated Farm and Rural Development Act (7 U.S.C. 1921 et seq.).

(h) STATE MEDIATION GRANTS.—For an additional amount to carry out an emergency short-term land diversion program, there is appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, $60,000,000.

(i) ENVIRONMENTAL QUALITY INCENTIVES PROGRAM.—For an additional amount for the environmental quality incentives program established under section 302(b) of the Agricultural Credit Act of 1987 (7 U.S.C. 5102(b)), there is appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, $2,000,000.

(j) WEATLANDS RESERVE PROGRAM.—For an additional amount to carry out an emergency short-term land diversion program, there is appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, $200,000,000.

(k) FLOOD PREVENTION PROGRAM.—For an additional amount to carry out the emergency conservation program authorized under sections 401, 402, and 404 of the Agricultural Credit Act of 1978 (7 U.S.C. 2201, 2202, 2204) for expenses resulting from natural disasters, there is appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, $30,000,000.

(l) WEATLANDS RESERVE PROGRAM.—For an additional amount to carry out the wetlands reserve program in a manner that is consistent with section 1124 of the Agriculture, Rural Development, Food and Drug Administration, and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 1999 (7 U.S.C. 7101 note; Public Law 105–277), there is appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, $250,000,000.

(m) EMERGENCY ASSISTANCE PROGRAM.—For an additional amount to carry out an emergency disaster assistance to persons or entities that have incurred losses from a commercial fishery failure described in section 308(b)(1) of the Interjurisdictional Fishery Act of 1986 (16 U.S.C. 1407(b)) with respect to a Northeast multispecies fishery.

(n) FLOOD PREVENTION PROGRAM.—For an additional amount to carry out an emergency short-term land diversion program, there is appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, $200,000,000.

(o) GRAIN INSPECTION, PACKERS, AND STOCKYARDS ADMINISTRATION.—For an additional amount for the Grain Inspection, Packers, and Stockyards Administration to support rapid response teams to enforce the Packers and Stockyards Act, 1921 (7 U.S.C. 181 et seq.), there is appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, $1,000,000.

(p) WEATLANDS RESERVE PROGRAM.—For an additional amount for the wetlands reserve program established under title XII of the Food Security Act of 1985 (7 U.S.C. 1921 et seq.), there is appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, $52,800,000.

(q) WEATLANDS RESERVE PROGRAM.—For an additional amount for the wetlands reserve program established under section 613 of the Agricultural Act of 1970 (7 U.S.C. 1427a), there is appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, $50,000,000.

(r) июн
CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE

August 3, 1999

additional amount for the wetlands reserve program under subchapter C of chapter 1 of title XII of the Food Security Act of 1985 (16 U.S.C. 3837 et seq.), there is appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, $70,000,000.

(q) FOREIGN MARKET DEVELOPMENT COOPERATOR PROGRAM.—For an additional amount for the foreign market development cooperator program established under section 702 of the Agricultural Trade Act of 1978 (7 U.S.C. 1922), there is appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, $10,000,000.

(2) RURAL ECONOMIC ASSISTANCE.—For an additional amount for rural economic development assistance, there is appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, $150,000,000, of which—

(1) $100,000,000 shall be used for rural economic development, with the highest priority given to the most economically disadvantaged rural communities; and

(2) $50,000,000 shall be used to establish and carry out a program of revolving loans for the support of farmer-owned cooperatives.

(b) MANDATORY PRICE REPORTING.—For an additional amount to carry out a program of mandatory price reporting for livestock and livestock products, on enactment of a law establishing a program, there is appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, $1,000,000.

(1) LABELING OF IMPORTED MEAT AND MEAT FOOD PRODUCTS.—

(1) DEFINITIONS.—Section 1 of the Federal Meat Inspection Act (21 U.S.C. 601) is amended by adding at the end the following:

(w) "BEef.—The term 'beef' means meat produced from cattle (including veal).

(x) IMPORTED BEef.—The term 'imported beef' means beef produced from cattle imported into the United States in sealed trucks for slaughter.

(y) UNITED STATES BEEF.—The term 'United States beef' means beef produced from cattle slaughtered in the United States.

(z) IMPORTED PORK.—The term 'imported pork' means pork produced from hogs imported into the United States in sealed trucks for slaughter.

(aa) UNITED STATES PORK.—The term 'United States pork' means pork produced from hogs slaughtered in the United States.

(bb) UNITED STATES LAMB.—The term 'United States lamb' means lamb produced from sheep slaughtered in the United States.

(cc) UNITED STATES SHEEP.—The term 'United States sheep' means sheep produced from flocks of sheep slaughtered in the United States.

(dd) UNITED STATES PORK.—The term 'United States pork' means pork produced from hogs slaughtered in the United States.

(2) EXCLUSION.—The term 'United States beef' does not include beef produced from cattle imported into the United States in sealed trucks for slaughter.

(ee) UNITED STATES PORK.—The term 'United States pork' means pork produced from hogs slaughtered in the United States.

(ff) UNITED STATES LAMB.—The term 'United States lamb' means lamb produced from sheep slaughtered in the United States.

(gg) UNITED STATES SHEEP.—The term 'United States sheep' means sheep produced from flocks of sheep slaughtered in the United States.

(hh) IMPORTED LAMB.—The term 'imported lamb' means lamb that is not United States lamb, whether or not the lamb is graded with a quality grade issued by the Secretary.

(i) IMPORTED PORK.—The term 'imported pork' means pork that is not United States pork, whether or not the pork is graded with a quality grade issued by the Secretary.

(jk) IMPORTED BEER.—The term 'imported beer' means beer produced from beer produced from the United States.

(kk) UNITED STATES BEER.—The term 'United States beer' means beer produced from the United States.

(ll) IMPORTED PORK.—The term 'imported pork' means pork produced from hogs imported into the United States in sealed trucks for slaughter.

(mm) UNITED STATES PORK.—The term 'United States pork' means pork produced from hogs slaughtered in the United States.

(nn) UNITED STATES LAMB.—The term 'United States lamb' means lamb produced from sheep slaughtered in the United States.

(oo) UNITED STATES SHEEP.—The term 'United States sheep' means sheep produced from flocks of sheep slaughtered in the United States.

(pp) UNITED STATES BEEF.—The term 'United States beef' means meat produced from cattle produced from the United States.

(qq) UNITED STATES PORK.—The term 'United States pork' means pork produced from hogs produced from the United States.

(rr) UNITED STATES LAMB.—The term 'United States lamb' means lamb produced from sheep produced from the United States.

(ss) UNITED STATES SHEEP.—The term 'United States sheep' means sheep produced from flocks of sheep produced from the United States.

(tt) UNITED STATES PORK.—The term 'United States pork' means pork produced from hogs produced from the United States.

(uu) UNITED STATES LAMB.—The term 'United States lamb' means lamb produced from sheep produced from the United States.

(vv) UNITED STATES SHEEP.—The term 'United States sheep' means sheep produced from flocks of sheep produced from the United States.

(ww) IMPORTED BEER.—The term 'imported beer' means beer produced from beer produced from the United States.

(xx) UNITED STATES BEER.—The term 'United States beer' means beer produced from the United States.

(yy) IMPORTED PORK.—The term 'imported pork' means pork produced from hogs produced from the United States.

(zz) UNITED STATES PORK.—The term 'United States pork' means pork produced from hogs produced from the United States.

(aaa) IMPORTED LAMB.—The term 'imported lamb' means lamb that is not United States lamb, whether or not the lamb is graded with a quality grade issued by the Secretary.

(bbb) UNITED STATES LAMB.—The term 'United States lamb' means lamb produced from sheep produced from the United States.

(ccc) UNITED STATES SHEEP.—The term 'United States sheep' means sheep produced from flocks of sheep produced from the United States.
there is appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, $10,000,000.

(y) Emergency Requirement.—The entire amount necessary to carry out this section and the amendments made by this Act shall be available only to the extent that an official budget request for the entire amount, that includes designation of the entire amount of the request as an emergency requirement as defined in the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985, is transmitted to the President by the Congress. Provided, That the entire amount is designated by the Congress as an emergency requirement pursuant to section 252 of such Act.

(2) Availability.—The amount necessary to carry out this section and the amendments made by this section shall be available upon enactment of this Act for the remainder of fiscal year 1999 and for fiscal year 2000, and shall remain available until expended.

ASHCROFT (AND OTHERS)

AMENDMENT NO. 1507

Mr. ASHCROFT (for himself, Mr. HAGEL, Mr. BACUS, Mr. ROBERTS, Mr. KERREY, Mr. DODD, Mr. BROWNBACK, Mr. GRASS, Mr. LEAHY, Mr. CRAIG, Mr. FITZGERALD, Mr. DORGAN, Mr. SESSIONS, Mrs. LINCOLN, Ms. LANDRIEU, Mr. CONRAD, Mr. HARKIN, Mr. INHOFE, Mr. CHAFEE, Mr. WELSTON, and Mr. BURNS) proposed an amendment to amendment No. 1490 proposed by Mr. DASCHLE to the bill, S. 1233, supra; as follows:

At the appropriate place, insert the following:

(1) Requirement of congressional approval of any unilateral agricultural or medical sanction.

(1) Definitions.—In this subsection:

(A) Agricultural commodity.—The term "agricultural commodity" has the meaning given in the term in section 402 of the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954 (7 U.S.C. 1732).

(B) Agricultural program.—The term "agricultural program" means—

(i) any program administered under the Agricultural Trade Development and Assistance Act of 1954 (7 U.S.C. 1732);

(ii) any program administered under section 410 of the Agricultural Act of 1949 (7 U.S.C. 1431);

(iii) any commercial sale of agricultural commodities, including a commercial sale of an agricultural commodity that is prohibited under a unilateral agricultural sanction that is in effect on the date of enactment of this Act; or

(iv) any export financing (including credits or credit guarantees) for agricultural commodities.

(C) Joint resolution.—The term "joint resolution" means—

(i) in the case of paragraph (2)(A)(i), only a joint resolution introduced within 10 session days of Congress after the date on which the President submits to Congress a report containing the approval of Congress for the report submitted under clause (i)

(ii) in the case of paragraph (5)(B), only a joint resolution introduced within 10 session days of Congress after the date on which the President submits to Congress a report containing the approval of Congress for the report submitted under clause (i)

(iii) used to facilitate the development or production of a chemical or biological weapon.

(4) Countries supporting international terrorism.—This subsection shall not affect the current prohibitions on providing, to the government of any country supporting international terrorism, United States government assistance, including United States foreign assistance, United States export assistance, or any United States credits or credit guarantees.

(5) Termination of sanctions.—Any unilateral agricultural or unilateral medical sanction that is imposed pursuant to the procedures described in paragraph (2)(A) shall terminate not later than 2 years after the date on which the sanction became effective unless—

(A) no later than 60 days after the date of termination of the sanction, the President submits to Congress a report containing the recommendation of the President for the continuation of the sanction for an additional period of not to exceed 2 years and the report is referred to the appropriate committee or committees of the House of Representatives and to the appropriate committee or committees of the Senate.

(B) Referal of joint resolution.—

(1) in general.—A joint resolution shall be referred to the committees in each House of Congress with jurisdiction.

(2) Reporting date.—A joint resolution referred to in clause (i) may not be reported before the eighth session day of Congress after the introduction of the joint resolution.

(C) Discharge of committee.—If the committee to which is referred a joint resolution has not reported the joint resolution (or an amendment to a joint resolution) within 30 session days of Congress after the date of introduction of the joint resolution—

(i) the committee shall be discharged from further consideration of the joint resolution; and

(ii) the joint resolution shall be placed on the appropriate calendar of the House concerned.

(D) Floor consideration.—

(i) Motion to proceed.—

(I) in general.—When the committee to which a joint resolution is referred has reported, or when a committee is discharged under subparagraph (C) from further consideration of, a joint resolution—

(aa) it shall be at any time thereafter in order (even though a previous motion to the same effect has been disagreed to) for any member of the House concerned to move to proceed to the consideration of the joint resolution; and

(bb) all points of order against the joint resolution (and against consideration of the joint resolution) are waived.

(ii) Privilege.—The motion to proceed to the consideration of the joint resolution—

(aa) shall be highly privileged in the House of Representatives and privileged in the Senate; and

(bb) not debatable.

(iii) Amendments and motions not in order.—No motion to the effect that the joint resolution be subject to—

(1) introduction to the House of Representatives or consideration in the Senate;

(2) recommit to the House;

(3) recommit with instructions; or

(4) any other provision of law, the President submits to Congress a report containing the approval of Congress for the report submitted under paragraph (2)(A) or (5)(A) shall be referred to the appropriate committee or committees of the House of Representatives and to the appropriate committee or committees of the Senate.

(E) Joint resolution clause.—The term "joint resolution clause" means—

(i) a clause contained in a joint resolution, which is transmitted on the date of introduction of the joint resolution, the joint resolution clause of which is as follows:

That Congress approves the report of the President pursuant to section (5)(A) of the Act transmitted on "", with the blank completed with the appropriate date.

(ii) an item for which export controls are administered by the Department of Commerce for foreign policy or national security reasons; or

(iii) used to facilitate the development or production of a chemical or biological weapon.

(1) in general.—When the committee to which a joint resolution is referred has reported, or when a committee is discharged under subparagraph (C) from further consideration of, a joint resolution—

(aa) it shall be at any time thereafter in order (even though a previous motion to the same effect has been disagreed to) for any member of the House concerned to move to proceed to the consideration of the joint resolution; and shall be limited to not more than 10 hours, if a motion to proceed to the consideration of the joint resolution is agreed to, the joint resolution shall be disposed of by the House concerned until disposed of.

Limitations on debate shall be in order and shall not be debatable.

Further debate limitations.— A motion to limit debate shall be in order and shall not be debatable.

Amendments and motions not in order.— An amendment, or a motion to reconsider the vote by which the joint resolution is agreed to or disagreed to shall not be in order.

Vote on final passage.— Immediately following the conclusion of the debate on a joint resolution, and on all debatable motions and appeals in connection with the joint resolution, shall be decided without debate.

Rulings of the Chair on procedure.— An appeal from a decision of the Chair relating to the application of the rules of the Senate or House of Representaives, as the case may be, to the procedure relating to a joint resolution shall be decided without debate.

Coordination with action by other House.— If, before the passage by 1 House of a joint resolution of that House, that House receives from the other House a joint resolution, the following procedures shall apply:

No committee referral.— The joint resolution of the other House shall not be referred to a committee.

Floor procedure.— With respect to a joint resolution of the House receiving the joint resolution the following procedures shall apply:

The procedure in that House shall be the same as if no joint resolution had been received from the other House; but the vote on final passage shall be on the joint resolution of the other House.

Disposition of joint resolutions of receiving House.— On disposition of the joint resolution received from the other House, it shall no longer be in order to consider the joint resolution originated in the receiving House.

Procedures after action by both the House and Senate.— If a House receives a joint resolution from the other House after the receiving House has disposed of a joint resolution originated in that House, the action of the receiving House with regard to the disposition of the joint resolution originated in the other House shall be deemed to be the action of the receiving House with regard to the joint resolution originated in the other House.

Rulemaking power.— This paragraph is enacted by Congress—as an exercise of the rulemaking power of the Senate and House of Representatives, respectively, and as such this paragraph—is deemed to be a part of the rules of each House, respectively, but applicable only with respect to the procedure to be followed in that House in the case of a joint resolution; and supersedes other rules only to the extent that this paragraph is inconsistent with those rules.

full recognition of the constitutional right of either House to change the rules (so far as the rules relate to the procedure of that House) at any time, in the same manner and to the same extent as in the case of any other rule of that House.

Effective date.— This subsection takes effect 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act.

McCain (And Gregg) Amendment No. 1508
(Ordered to lie on the table.)

Mr. McCain (for himself and Mr. Gregg) submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by them to the bill, S. 1233, supra; as follows:

on page 76, between lines 6 and 7, insert the following:

Sec. 7. Sugar Program.— None of the funds appropriated or otherwise made available by this Act may be used to pay the salaries and expenses of personnel of the Department of Agriculture to carry out section 156 of the Agricultural Market Transition Act (7 U.S.C. 7272), other than subsection (f).

Notice of Hearing

Committee on Energy and Natural Resources

Mr. Murkowski. Mr. President, I would like to announce for the public that a hearing has been scheduled before the full Energy and Natural Resources Committee to receive testimony regarding S. 1052, to implement further the Act (Public Law 94–241) approving the Covenant to Establish a Commonwealth of the Northern Marianas Islands in Political Union with the United States of America, and for other purposes.

The Governor of the Commonwealth and the Administration will be the only witnesses. Other individuals wishing to testify will be asked to submit their testimony for the record.

The hearing will take place on Tuesday, September 14, 1999, at 9:30 a.m. in room SD–366 of the Dirksen Senate Office Building.

For further information, please call James Beirne, Deputy Chief Counsel at (202) 224–2564 or Betty Nevitt, Staff Assistant at (202) 224–0765.

Authority for Committees to Meet

Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry

Mr. Cochran. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Committee on Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry be so authorized to meet during the session of the Senate on Tuesday, August 3, 1999, at 2:30 p.m., to conduct a hearing on S. 692, a bill to provide for equitable compensation for the Cheyenne River Sioux Tribe. The hearing will be held in room 485, Russell Senate Office Building.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Committee on Indian Affairs

Mr. Cochran. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate Committee on Indian Affairs be authorized to meet during the session of the Senate on Tuesday, August 3, 1999, at 10 a.m., to conduct a hearing on S. 964, a bill to provide for equitable compensation for the Cheyenne River Sioux Tribe. The hearing will be held in room 485, Russell Senate Office Building.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Committee on Governmental Affairs

Mr. Cochran. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Governmental Affairs Committee be so authorized to meet on Tuesday, August 3, 1999, at 10 a.m., for a business meeting to consider pending business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Additional Statements

Tribute to Charles Bennett Greenwood

Mr. McConnell. Mr. President, I rise today to pay tribute to a fellow Kentuckian and friend, Bennett Greenwood of Central City, who died July 16, 1999, at his home.

Charles, or C.B. to his friends, was a unique individual who loved his home state of Kentucky and revered life in small-town Central City. You see, C.B. lived all of his 93 years within a four-block area of downtown Central City. Almost all of the milestones of his life occurred within the same four blocks of Central City. C.B. never went away to college and took very few vacations. It was obvious to everybody who knew him that C.B. was satisfied with his view of the world from Central City.

C.B. was born to William H. and Viola “Louisa” Greenwood on March 6,
Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I rise today to pay tribute to His Holiness Karekin I, Catholicos of the Armenian Orthodox Church, who will lead us into the next century.

His Holiness also decentralized the infrastructure of the church in Armenia by adding new diocese throughout the country, and he restored churches and monasteries which had been closed during the era of Soviet rule.

The Armenian people throughout the world are mourning the death of His Holiness, and Armenia will be paying tribute to his extraordinary life by holding a period of national mourning through August 8. I urge my colleagues to join with the Armenian community in remembering the legacy of hope, courage, and compassion left by His Holiness Karekin I.

TRIBUTE TO LELAND PERRY

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, this Friday, on the campus of Brigham Young University, in Provo, Utah, the family, friends, former associates and successors of Leland M. Perry will gather to honor his quiet but substantial contributions to the dynamic growth and greatness that characterizes BYU.

Leland Perry, who marks his 98th birthday on August 25, and who still lives in Provo, was the director of the physical plant at BYU from April 1947 to July 1957, when he and his late wife, McNone Perry, set their vocations aside for several years to organize and preside over the West Spanish American Mission of the LDS Church.

Afterward, Mr. Perry went on to head the physical plant at Ricks College in Idaho, which is also an institution in the system of higher education affiliated with the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, during that college’s explosive building program. From there, he was appointed director of all physical plants in the LDS Church’s higher education system, except BYU, until he retired in the mid-1980s.

Leland Perry directed BYU’s physical plant during a time when the university was beginning an era of enormous growth; and, from the account I have heard, it is clear that he played an important role during that critical period.

One especially noteworthy example typifies his vital contributions. In 1955, he learned about a new concept for heating widely spread, isolated buildings, in a more efficient and less costly way, using pressurized water, which was heated to levels much higher than the boiling point, and combined with a method of forced circulation. Until then, steam was commonly used in such settings, delivered through pipes that often leaked. Heating by steam engineering was still a young science, so he took it upon himself to learn all he could about this new technique. He then advocated its use in modernizing the BYU physical plant.

Leland Perry did such a good job in mastering the concept and then in explaining and advocating the system that his idea was accepted, and BYU became the first university in the United States to install and use it campus-wide. Since then, virtually all other campuses of any size have followed BYU’s lead, savings untold millions of dollars for American colleges and universities—and for students—nationwide.

At the dedication ceremony for the new system in 1957 former BYU President William F. Edwards said, “Leland caught the vision of a new idea and had the courage to promote the idea.”

The physical plant of any major facility or complex of buildings is easy to take for granted. We tend not to notice the pipes and the boilers and the controls unless they break down. But they are the structural bones and the circulatory system that make our buildings useful, comfortable, and practical.

I might mention that I was a student at BYU during Leland’s tenure as plant manager. I confess that I did not fully appreciate at the time that there was heat in the library, the classrooms and in the dorms because of Leland Perry. Mr. Perry, like many Utahns, is truly a pioneer. With humility and dedication, he has made the vocation of caring for Utah’s physical plant a calling. And, he led the way through the last half of this century and created the standards applied to his successors who will lead us into the next century.

I want to join my fellow Utahns and fellow Cougars in commending Leland Perry for his years of service and in wishing him a happy 98th birthday.

TRIBUTE TO SIGURD OLSON

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I rise today to pay tribute one of our nation’s... most beloved nature writers and dedicated wilderness conservationists, Mr. Sigurd Olson. As an architect of the federal government's protection of wilderness areas, as well as a poetic voice that captured the importance of these pristine sites, Mr. Olson left us and our children a legacy of natural sanctuaries, with an ethic by which to better appreciate them.

Mr. President, 1999 marks the 100th anniversary of the birth of Sigurd Olson. Over the July recess, I had the opportunity to travel to Northern Minnesota to commemorate and celebrate Sigurd Olson's life and work. I think it is fitting that the Senate take this opportunity to honor the life of Mr. Olson, who sadly passed away 17 years ago, and to renew our dedication to continue his legacy of wilderness preservation.

Born in Chicago in 1899, Sigurd Olson and his family soon moved to the beautiful Door County Peninsula of Wisconsin. It was there that he formed his life-long love of the outdoors and outdoor recreation. Half a century later, he described what he experienced as a boy along the coast of Green Bay:

A school of perch darted in and out of the rocks. They were green and gold and black, and I was fascinated by their beauty. Seagulls wheeled and cried above me. Waves crashed against the pier. I was alone in a wild and lovely place, part of the dark forest through which I had come, and of all the wild sounds and colors and feelings of the place I had found. That day I entered into a life of indescribable beauty and delight. There I believe I heard the singing wilderness for the first time.

A few years after graduating from the University of Wisconsin in Madison, Olson moved to northeastern Minnesota and traveled and guided for many years in the surrounding millions of acres of lakeland wilderness—what eventually became the Boundary Waters Canoe Area Wilderness—and he grew convinced that wilderness provided the unique experience in modern society. This was his conviction that formed the basis of both his conservation and his writing careers. As he said at a Sierra Club conference in 1965:

I have not discovered in a lifetime of traveling in primitive regions, a lifetime of seeing people living in the wilderness and using it, that there is a hard core of wilderness need in everyone, a core that makes its spiritual values a basic necessity. There is no hiding it... Unless we can preserve places where the endless spiritual needs of man can be fulfilled and nourished, we will destroy our culture and ourselves.

Olson became an active conservationist in the 1920's, fighting to keep roads, dams and airplanes out of his "special place" in northeastern Minnesota. He went on to serve as the president of both the National Parks Association and the Wilderness Society. Yet, perhaps his greatest contribution to conservation came during his tenure as an advisor to Secretary of the Interior from 1959 to the early 1970's, when he helped draft the Wilderness Act, which became law in 1964 and established the U.S. wilderness reservation system that still exists today.

While I never knew Sigurd Olson, those who worked with "Sig," as he was called, were infected by his unwavering commitment to the Boundary Waters and his desire to help people truly understand the meaning and legacy of wilderness.

Central to Olson's agenda was his perseverance as public advocate for the Boundary Waters, in spite of the sometimes quite open hostility that he faced in taking that stand. Twenty-two years ago on July 8, 1977, a public field hearing was held at Ely High School on Congressman Fraser's bill that became the Boundary Waters Canoe Area Wilderness Act of 1978. Sigurd Olson, then 77 years old, stepped forward to testify in the midst of hises, catcalls and boos from the roughly thousand-person crowd that packed the hearing. Despite the fact that the legacy of the Listening Point cabin was hanging outside the school, he testified, saying in part:

Some places should be preserved from development and exploitation for they satisfy a human need for solace, belonging, and perspective. In the end we turn to nature in a frenzied chaotic world to find silence—oneseness—wholeness—spiritual release.

I am inspired by Sigurd Olson's actions throughout my professional odyssey. I have been inspired by my predecessor in the United States Senate Gaylord Nelson. I also share Olson's great respect for America's public lands and for the Boundary Waters.

Mr. President, as I mentioned, I recently visited the Boundary Waters and spent a day canoeing in the pristine area that Olson loved so dearly on the Hegman Lake chain. His words, from his first book, The Singing Wilderness, best describe the experience:

The movement of a canoe is like a reed in the wind. Silence is part of it and the sounds of lapping water, bird songs, and wind in the trees. It is part of the medium through which it floats, the sky, the water, the shore. There is magic in the feel of a paddle and the movement of a canoe, a magic compounded of distance, adventure, solitude, and peace. The way of a canoe is the way of the wilderness, and a freedom almost forgotten. It is an antidote to insecurity, the open door to waterways of ages past and a life without the holding of self-satisfaction. When a man is part of his canoe, he is part of all that canoes have ever known.

In addition to canoeing the Hegman Lakes, I also had an opportunity to visit Listening Point on Burntside Lake with Sigurd Olson's son, Bob Olson, and Bob's wife, Vonnie Olson. Many people have a special place where they go to experience nature. Perhaps it is a park, or a campsite, or a favorite hiking trail. For Sigurd Olson, it was a cabin on a tree-covered glaciated point of rock. He called it his "Listening Point," and it is at the center of his book of the same name.

In his book, Sigurd Olson talks about that place on Burntside Lake from his first night sleeping there under the stars to the eventual building of his cabin:

"From this one place I would explore the entire north and all life, including my own," he writes. "For me, visiting a Listening Point from which I might even hear the music of the spheres."

From his cabin, Olson also experienced the wonder and danger of significant storms in the Boundary Waters, an experience nearly identical to my own. Over the Fourth of July weekend this year, shortly before I arrived, serious winds hit the Boundary Waters, downing trees in a quarter of the wilderness area.

I was comforted to learn, as I arrived at Listening Point to see Bob Olson clearing trees from the driveway, that Listening Point has weathered significant storms before. Sigurd Olson writes of another storm, and its aftermath in Of Time and Place:

As we approached Listening Point we could see the damage, trees down and twisted, blocking the road to the cabin. We chopped and hacked our way through to the turn-around and found the trail to the cabin was a crisscross of broken treetops, a jackstraw puzzle of tangled debris. It was unbelievable; I looked at the trees, remembering how over the years we had treasurer each one of them...

Olson continues:

I sometimes wonder about the meaning of such things as this tornado—why it happened, why it leaptfrogged over some areas and hit others. We paddled to the islands beyond Listening Point and saw where many trees had been blown over, all old landmarks along the shore. They would lie there for many years until they, too, would sink into the soil and disappear.

Mr. President, I have been a defender of the Boundary Waters, and my constituents adore this national treasure. I have also joined in the fight to protect the public lands of Southern Utah, and have sponsored legislation to have the lands of wilderness potential in the Apostle Islands National Lakeshore identified. All my efforts are linked to unfinished business that Sigurd Olson began in the Boundary Waters and to his commitment to designating and protecting our country's special wild places.

In addition to conveying my own admiration for Sigurd Olson, I rise today to share the reflections of my own home state. Wisconsinites have a special fondness for Sigurd Olson for several reasons. Olson, who began his environmental odyssey as a Northern Wisconsin who loved the outdoors, turned out to be a serious conservationist whose name is among the greatest conservationists of the Twentieth Century. With his special wilderness writing, Olson was a reformer who didn't come across as some old gent.

Second, Wisconsinites truly appreciate an accomplished outdoor enthusiast turned advocate. That's a rarity in politics, especially these days. Olson will be long remembered for his character and fundamental decency, defense of the wilderness he loved. On behalf of myself and the citizens of my state, as well as all Americans, I wish Sigurd Olson a very happy birthday. We are a greater country for his dedication.

TRIBUTE TO FREDERICK A. MEISTER

Mr. BUNNING. Mr. President, my home state, the great Commonwealth of Kentucky is known throughout the world for many fine things—fast horses, bluegrass countryside, the best burley tobacco in the world and winning basketball teams. And of course, Kentucky is also known as the home of fine Bourbons.

Bourbon is interwoven through the history, heritage and economy of our Commonwealth. First developed in 1797 by an early settler from Virginia named Elijah Pepper who settled in Versailles and built the still behind the Woodford County Court-house, Bourbon is a distinctively Kentucky product that still plays an important role in our state’s economy.

For the past nineteen years, the interests of this deeply rooted Kentucky industry have been served very well by a gentleman with no Kentucky roots of his own: a man from the snowy plains of Minnesota—Frederick A. Meister. For the past nineteen years, Fred Meister has served as President and CEO of the Distilled Spirits Council of the United States (DISCUS). He is planning to retire soon and I wanted to take this opportunity to thank him, on behalf of the many Kentuckians who are employed by the distillery industry throughout our Commonwealth for a job well done.

While the leadership of many Washington trade associations seems to come and go, Fred’s tenure at DISCUS stands out as a distinguished exception. For almost two decades, the millions of Americans who choose to drink in moderation could not have had a more zealous advocate. At the same time, Fred and DISCUS have wisely taken a hard line against drunk driving and other forms of reckless drinking.

Whether the issue has been taxes, free trade or the First Amendment freedom of distillers to advertise their products on television and radio, Fred has been there making a persuasive case for the spirit industry’s legitimate commercial interests. No one has fought harder or more effectively on these issues than Fred Meister.

At the same time, Fred and DISCUS long ago recognized that the beverage alcohol industry must do its part to stop drunk driving and other forms of reckless drinking. Under Fred’s leadership, the industry has made great progress in this regard.

Under his leadership, DISCUS has successfully developed model legislation, the Drunk Driving Prevention Act of 1993 which encourages the states to pass life saving laws preventing drunk driving, including a ban on open containers and “zero tolerance” for underage consumption. Fred was among the first to call for the establishment of the Presidential Commission on Drunk Driving. Subsequently, he served with distinction on this panel. Under Fred’s leadership, DISCUS has maintained and enforced a strict Code of Good Practice governing the advertising and marketing of distilled spirits.

In 1991, the majority of the DISCUS companies made a multi-million dollar investment to form an organization known as the Century Council which went on to develop a number of life saving programs aimed at the problems of underage drinking, drunk driving and, most recently, college binge drinking.

As Fred Meister steps down from the leadership at the Distilled Spirits Council, he leaves behind him a proud and positive legacy and he leaves behind an industry that is both commercially strong and socially responsible.

I know that I can safely speak on the behalf of the thousands of Kentuckians who earn their living in the distilling industry when I say “Congratulations and thank You” to Fred Meister for a job well done.

APPROPRIATION TO JOHN BRADLEY

Mr. SPECTER. Mr. President, on Friday, August 6, 1999 John Bradley completes a two year assignment to the Senate Committee on Veterans’ Affairs. In view of his outstanding performance on the Committee and our country’s veterans, I am taking this occasion to recognize John.

In mid 1997, the Committee was without a professional staff member with expertise in veterans’ health care delivery system. I turned to the Department of Veterans Affairs for the temporary assignment of such a person. In truth, I anticipated retaining whoever was assigned only until such time as my Staff Director was able to interview and propose a permanent professional staff member. VA’s then Acting Secretary Herschel Gober agreed to the detailing of John Bradley since John had served a similar assignment to this Committee in the 103rd Congress.

John Bradley turned out to be the consummate professional and the search for a permanent professional staff member was halted. A veteran of the Vietnam conflict and a career employee of the VA with over 25 years of service, primarily with the Veterans Health Administration, John made an immediate impact. With the Committee’s legislative agenda completed, he directed with great professional skill the rigors of staff conferencing with his House counterparts. It also soon became apparent that John was not a bureaucrat or intent on maintaining the status quo. In fact, he is an intellectual and innovative thinker who is willing to explore new ideas to advance the cause of veterans health care.

During his assignment to the Committee, John played a major role in shaping the following legislation: the Veterans’ Health Care Improvements Act of 1998, the Persian Gulf War Veterans Act of 1998, and the Veterans Compensation Cost of Living Adjustment Act of 1998. Additionally, John has spent many hours this year working on S. 1076, the Veterans Benefits Improvements Act of 1999 which I hope will pass the Senate soon.

Upon his departure and on behalf of the Committee, I extend my deep appreciation to John for his courage, his innovation, his professionalism and, above all, his enduring concern for veterans. He shall be missed.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

EXECUTIVE CALENDAR

Mr. LOTTT. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate immediately proceed to executive session to consider the following nominations on the floor: Executive Calendar Nos. 192, 193, and 200. These nominations are Michael A. Sheehan to be Coordinator for Counterterrorism; Robert S. Gelbard, to be Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary of the United States of America to the Republic of Indonesia; and William B. Taylor to be Ambassador during tenure of service as Coordinator of the U.S. Assistance for the New Independent States.

I further ask unanimous consent that the nominations be confirmed en bloc, the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table, any statements be printed in the Record, the President be immediately notified of the Senate’s action, and the Senate then return to legislative session.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The nominations considered and confirmed en bloc are as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF STATE

Michael A. Sheehan, of New Jersey, to be Coordinator for Counterterrorism, with the rank and status of Ambassador at Large.

Robert S. Gelbard, of Washington, a Career Member of the Senior Foreign Service, Class of Career Minister, to be Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary of the United States of America to the Republic of Indonesia.

William B. Taylor, Jr., of Virginia, for the Rank of Ambassador during tenure of service as Coordinator of U.S. Assistance for the New Independent States.
NOMINATION OF JACK E. HIGHTOWER OF TEXAS TO BE A MEMBER OF THE NATIONAL COMMISSION ON LIBRARIES AND INFORMATION SCIENCE

Mr. LOTT. In executive session, I ask unanimous consent that the nomination of Jack E. Hightower be discharged from the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions, and further the Senate proceed to its consideration.

I further ask unanimous consent that the nomination be confirmed, the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table, any statements be printed in the RECORD, the President be immediately notified of the Senate's action, and the Senate then return to legislative session.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The nomination considered and confirmed is as follows:

NATIONAL COMMISSION ON LIBRARIES AND INFORMATION SCIENCE

Jack E. Hightower of Texas, to be a Member of the National Commission on Libraries and Information Science for a term expiring July 19, 2004.

LEGISLATIVE SESSION

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate will resume legislative session.

MILITARY CONSTRUCTION APPROPRIATIONS 2000—CONFERENCE REPORT

Mr. LOTT. I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of the conference report to accompany H.R. 2465.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The committee on conference on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the amendment of the Senate to the bill (H.R. 2465), have agreed to recommend and do recommend to their respective Houses this report, signed by all of the conferees.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the Senate will proceed to the consideration of the conference report. (The conference report is printed in the House proceedings of the RECORD of July 27, 1999.)

Mr. BURNS. Mr. President, I am very pleased to bring before the Senate the Military Construction Conference Report for fiscal year 2000.

Mr. President, this conference report was passed by the House of Representatives last week by a vote of 412 to 8. It was sent to the Senate late last week and now awaits or final passage.

We have worked hard with our House colleagues to bring the Military Construction Conference to a successful conclusion. It reflects a strong bipartisan effort of behalf of the Senate and the House of Representatives.

Both bodies took a different perspective on the allocation of military construction funding for the Department of Defense.

However, in the final conference report, we met our goals of promoting quality of life initiatives and enhancing mission readiness.

Mr. President, this bill has some points I want to highlight. It provides a total of $8.37 billion for military construction.

Even though this is an increase of $2.9 billion over the President's budget for fiscal year 2000, it is still a reduction of $79 million from what was appropriated last year.

The conference rejected the administration proposal to incrementally fund military construction and family housing projects throughout the Department of Defense.

Instead the conferees believed that fully funding these projects was essential for the well being and moral of the men and women who serve in uniform.

Some 43 percent of the bill is allocated to family housing—a total of $3.6 billion. This includes new construction, improvements to existing units and funding for operation and maintenance of that housing.

We strongly protected quality of life initiatives. We provided $543 million for barracks, $22 million for child development centers, and $151 million for hospital and medical facilities.

We provided a total of $695 million for the Guard and Reserve components. Overall this represents an increase of $560 million from the President's budget request.

Many of those projects will enhance the readiness and mission capabilities of our Reserve and Guard forces, vital to our national defense.

I would like to thank my ranking member, Senator Murray, for her assistance and support throughout this process. She and her staff were extremely helpful.

I commend this product to the Senate and recommend that it be signed by the President without delay.

Mrs. MURRAY. Mr. President, I am pleased to bring before the Senate this conference report on the fiscal year 2000 military construction appropriations bill—the first of the 13 regular appropriations bills to be completed this year.

This is a good bill, leaner than we would wish but sufficient to meet the Services' most pressing military construction needs, particularly in terms of readiness and quality of life projects. The projects funded in this bill will give the men and women of our armed forces—and their families—a wide array of improved facilities in which to work, to train, and to live.

In my home state of Washington, for example, this bill provides nearly $129 million in funding for 16 different military construction projects plus $9 million for Army family housing at Fort Lewis.

Congress was faced with a difficult situation this year when the Pentagon, in a radical departure from regular procedure, requested incremental funding for the entire slate of fiscal year 2000 military construction projects. Thanks to the cooperation of Chairman STEVENS and Ranking Member BYRD, and to the efforts of Senator BURNS on the Subcommittee, it didn't happen. What's more, we included language in our Committee report directing the Administration to fully fund all military construction requests in future budgets.

Unfortunately, this bill reflects a continued decline in the amount of money that is being allocated to military construction. This year's bill is funded at a level of $8.374 billion, which is $76 million less than the fiscal year 1999 bill. And this is at a time when funding for the Defense appropriations bill is heading toward a major increase. Military construction does not have the glamour of some of the gee whiz, high-tech items in the defense bill, but it is an integral part of readiness and quality of life in the military. If military construction is underfunded, we will wind up undercutting our nation's war fighting capability. We must not allow that to occur.

We will continue to fight the good fight for military construction dollars, ably led by our chairman, Senator BURNS, who is an extremely effective advocate for the needs of the military and a pleasure to work with on the Committee. I thank Senator BURNS, and Senators STEVENS and BYRD, for their unflagging support, and I also thank the Subcommittee staff for their hard work on this bill.

This is a good bipartisan conference report, and I urge my colleagues to accept it so that it can be sent to the President without delay and become the first fiscal year 2000 regular appropriations bills to be signed into law.

Mr. LOTT. I ask unanimous consent that the conference report be agreed to, the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table, and any statements relating to the conference report be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The conference report was agreed to.

FOREIGN RELATIONS AUTHORIZATION ACT, FISCAL YEARS 2000 AND 2001

Mr. LOTT. I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of calendar No. 229, H.R. 2415.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the bill by title.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:
A bill (H.R. 2415) to enhance security of the United States missions and personnel overseas, to authorize appropriations for the Department of State for fiscal year 2000, and for other purposes.

Mr. LOTT. I ask unanimous consent that all after the enacting clause be stricken and the text of S. 886 as passed by the Senate be inserted in lieu thereof. I further ask consent that the bill be read the third time and passed, the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table. I further ask consent that the Senate insist on its amendment, request a conference with the House, and the Chair be authorized to appoint conferees on the part of the Senate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The bill (H.R. 2415), as amended, was passed.

(The text of S. 886 was printed in the RECORD of June 22, 1999)

The Presiding Officer (Mr. ALLARD) appointed Mr. HELMS, Mr. LUGAR, Mr. COVINGTON, Mr. Grahams of Minnesota, Mr. BIDEN, Mr. SARABANES, and Mr. DODD conferees on the part of the Senate.

NATIONAL AIRBORNE DAY

Mr. LOTT. I ask unanimous consent that the Senate now proceed to the immediate consideration of Calendar No. 241, S. Res. 95.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The assistant legislative clerk reads as follows:

A resolution (S. Res. 95) designating August 16, 1999, as “National Airborne Day.”

Mr. LOTT. I ask unanimous consent that the resolution be agreed to, the preamble be agreed to, the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table, and any statements relating to this resolution be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The resolution (S. 95) was agreed to. The preamble was agreed to. The resolution, with its preamble, reads as follows:

S. Res. 95

Whereas the Parachute Test Platoon was authorized by the War Department on June 25, 1940, to experiment with the potential use of airborne troops;

Whereas the Parachute Test Platoon was composed of 48 volunteers that began training in July, 1940;

Whereas the Parachute Test Platoon performed the first official Army parachute jump on August 16, 1940;

Whereas the success of the Parachute Test Platoon led to the formation of a large and successful airborne contingent serving from World War II until the present;

Whereas the 11th, 13th, 17th, 82nd, and 101st Airborne Divisions and the numerous other regimental and battalion-sized airborne units were organized following the success of the Parachute Test Platoon;

Whereas the 501st Parachute Battalion participated successfully and valiantly in achieving victory in World War II;

Whereas the airborne achievements during World War II provided the basis for maintaining the development of a diversified force of parachute and air assault troops;

Whereas paratroopers, glidermen, and air assault troops of the United States were and are proud members of the world’s most exclusive and honorable fraternity, have earned and wear the “Silver Wings of Courage”, have participated in a total of 93 combat jumps, and have distinguished themselves in battle by earning 68 Congressional Medals of Honor, the highest military decoration of the United States, and hundreds of Distinguished Service Crosses and Silver Stars;

Whereas these airborne forces have performed in important military and peacekeeping operations, wherever needed, in World War II, Korea, Vietnam, Lebanon, Sinai, the Dominican Republic, Panama, Somalia, Haiti, and Bosnia; and

Whereas the Senate joins together with the airborne community to celebrate August 16, 1999, as “National Airborne Day”:

Therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate—

(1) designates August 16, 1999, as “National Airborne Day”;

(2) requests that the President issue a proclamation calling on Federal, State, and local administrators and the people of the United States to observe the day with appropriate programs, ceremonies, and activities.

ORDERS FOR WEDNESDAY,
AUGUST 4, 1999

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that when the Senate completes its business today, it adjourn until the hour of 9 a.m. on Wednesday, August 4. I further ask consent that on Wednesday, immediately following the prayer, the Journal of proceedings be approved to date, the morning hour be deemed expired, the time for the two leaders be reserved for their use later in the day, and the Senate immediately begin 40 minutes of debate on the dairy issue to be equally divided between the opponents and proponents, and the cloture vote occur at 9:45 a.m. with the mandatory quorum having been waived.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

PROGRAM

Mr. LOTT. Therefore, the Senate will convene at 9 a.m. and we will have 40 minutes of debate, equally divided, on the dairy issue; at 9:45 we will be the cloture vote on the dairy amendment.

Following the vote, the Senate will resume consideration of the pending Agriculture appropriations bill. Amendments and votes are expected throughout tomorrow’s session of the Senate with the anticipation of completing action on the bill.

After that is completed, we could have a vote on a nomination after some period of debate, and then we would turn to the Interior appropriations bill.

ADJOURNMENT UNTIL 9 A.M.
TOMORROW

Mr. LOTT. If there is no further business to come before the Senate, I now ask unanimous consent the Senate stand in adjournment under the previous order.

There being no objection, the Senate, at 8:15 p.m., adjourned until Wednesday, August 4, 1999, at 9 a.m.

NOMINATIONS

Executive nominations received by the Senate August 3, 1999:

DEPARTMENT OF TRANSPORTATION

MICHAELE J. FRAZIER, OF MARYLAND, TO BE AN Assistant Secretary of Transportation, Vice Steven G. Palmer, Resigned.

DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE

GREGORY ROHRER, OF NORTH DAKOTA, TO BE ASSISTANT SECRETARY OF COMMERCIAL COMMUNICATIONS AND INFORMATION, Vice CLARENCE L. IRVING, JR.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR

DAVID J. BAYES, OF VIRGINIA, TO BE DEPUTY SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR, Vice JOHN RAYMOND GARAMENDI, Resigned.

DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY

IVAN MNKIN, OF PENNSYLVANIA, TO BE DIRECTOR OF THE OFFICE OF CIVILIAN RADIOACTIVE WASTE MANAGEMENT, DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY, Vice DANIEL A. DRYFUSS, Resigned.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE

EDWARD W. STIMPSON, OF IDAHO, FOR THE RANK OF AMBASSADOR DURING HIS TENURE OF SERVICE AS REPRESENTATIVE OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA ON THE COUNCIL OF THE INTERNATIONAL CIVIL AVIATION ORGANIZATION.

THE JUDICIARY

GAIL S. TUSAN, OF GORGIA, TO BE UNITED STATES DISTRICT JUDGE FOR THE NORTHERN DISTRICT OF GEORGIA, Vice C. BENNETT TOWELL, Retired.

RICHARD K. EATON, OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA, TO BE A JUDGE OF THE UNITED STATES COURT OF INTERNATIONAL TRADE, Vice R. KENTON MUSGRAVE, Retired.

DEPARTMENT OF THE JUDICIARY

KATHERYN M. TURMAN, OF VIRGINIA, TO BE DIRECTOR OF THE OFFICE FOR VICTIMS OF CRIME, Vice AILEEN CATHERINE ADAMS.

IN THE ARMY

To be colonel
ROGER P. HALL, JR., 0000 JOHN R. BERLIN, 0000 HOWARD E. MILLER, JR., 0000
THOMAS R. JOHNSON, 0000
ROBERT A. MARTINEZ, 0000 HERBY C. MCCAIN, 0000 ALAN E. FETTERSON, 0000 TIMOTHY L. ROUTER, 0000 ARNEH D. SORDH, 0000 STEPHEN C. TRUESDELL, 0000 PAUL E. WOHL, 0000

IN THE AIR FORCE

THE FOLLOWING NAMED OFFICERS FOR APPOINTMENT TO THE GRADES INDICATED IN THE UNITED STATES AIR FORCE FOR AND FOR REGULAR APPOINTMENT (IDENTIFIED BY AN AN Asterisk (*) UNDER TITLE 10, U.S.C., SECTIONS 621, 628, AND 531.

To be colonel
MICHAEL L. COLOPY, 0000 STEPHEN A. GARELLI, 0000 STEVEN J. FRICNOVSKY, 0000 KEITH L. ROBERTS, 0000

To be lieutenant colonel MARIO T. AVALOS, 0000 PETER J. BLOME, 0000 LANCE J. CHOICICIO, 0000 DOUGLAS L. DURAND, 0000 ALAN V. KELLED, 0000 MARK R. SHARMILL, 0000 DAVID E. JOHNSON, 0000 CHARLES E. LATTNER, 0000 RICHARD L. MILLER, 0000
CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE

August 3, 1999

To be major
CHARLES G. BELENY, 0000 LORI L. EVERTT, 0000 BENEDICT G. HEIDERSCHEDIT, 0000 DEREK A. KNIGHT, 0000 JOHN G. LINK, 0000
EDMOND K. SAFARIAN, 0000 EVELINE F. YAOTIU, 0000

IN THE ARMY

The following named officers for appointment to the grade indicated in the United States Army and for regular appointment as chaplain (identified by an asterisk (*)) under Title 10, U.S.C. Sections 624, 531, and 3064:

To be major
*ERIC J. ALBERTSON, 0000
*CARLETON W. BIRCH, 0000
*RANDY L. BRANDT, 0000
*DAVID B. CRARY, 0000
*OCTAVIO J. DIULIO, 0000
*JACK E. DIXON, 0000
*KENNETH J. DLAZADA, 0000
*JAMES C. HARRIS, 0000
*IRA C. HOUCK III, 0000
*STEVEN K. HOLLANDER, 0000
*GREGORY R. LAND, 0000
*ROBERT F. LAND, 0000
*RICHARD C. LYNDS, 0000
*JAMES J. MADDEN, 0000
*JO A. MAINE, 0000
*MARK R. NORDSTROM, 0000
*THOMAS D. PERRI, 0000
*MARK B. PERRY, 0000
*MARK B. STRUTT, 0000
*MARK J. THOMAS, 0000
*ROBERT H. WHITLOCK, 0000
*STANLEY E. WHITTEN, 0000

CONFIRMATIONS

Executive nominations confirmed by the Senate August 3, 1999:

DEPARTMENT OF STATE

MICHAEL A. SHEEHAN, OF NEW JERSEY, TO BE COORDINATOR FOR COUNTERTERRORISM, WITH THE RANK AND STATUS OF AMBASSADOR AT LARGE.

ROBERT S. GELBARD, OF WASHINGTON, A CAREER MEMBER OF THE SENIOR FOREIGN SERVICE, CLASS OF CAREER MINISTER, TO BE AMBASSADOR EXTRAORDINARY AND PLENIPOTENTIARY OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA TO THE REPUBLIC OF INDONESIA.

WILLIAM B. TAYLOR, JR., OF VIRGINIA, FOR THE RANK OF AMBASSADOR DURING TENURE OF SERVICE AS COORDINATOR OF U.S. ASSISTANCE FOR THE NEW INDEPENDENT STATES.

NATIONAL COMMISSION ON LIBRARIES AND INFORMATION SCIENCE

The above nominations were approved subject to the nominees’ commitment to respond to requests to appear and testify before any duly constituted committee of the Senate.
The House met at 9:00 a.m.

MORNING HOUR DEBATES

The SPEAKER. Pursuant to the order of the House of January 19, 1999, the Chair will now recognize Members from lists submitted by the majority and minority leaders for morning hour debates. The Chair will alternate recognition between the parties, with each party limit not to exceed 25 minutes, and each Member except the majority leader, the minority leader, or the minority whip limited to not to exceed 5 minutes, but in no event shall debate continue beyond 9:50 a.m.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Oregon (Mr. BLUMENAUER) for 5 minutes.

WAIVER FOR VIETNAM

Mr. BLUMENAUER. Mr. Speaker, it is not often that on the floor of this Chamber we can deal with several major issues simultaneously, but such is the case today as we deal with House Resolution 58, which would deny the waiver of the Jackson-Vanik for Vietnam that will accelerate the economic prospects of that country. We have in this capital today, Ambassador Pete Peterson, who has performed a tremendous service over the last few years in his work in Vietnam. He is arguably the best qualified person in America to bring about the reconciliation. His political and military experience, his passion and his compassion set him apart and make him uniquely qualified. I continue to be amazed at his efforts.

We have the opportunity to build on his efforts with the rejection of the disallowal, to make progress on human rights, transparency of economic activities. We have the opportunity to help in Southeast Asia, the world’s 12th most populous country, hasten their economic progress, but it goes far beyond that. The defeat of House Resolution 58 will help accelerate the integration of Vietnam into the world economy. It will help open up their society, but more important it will be an opportunity for us here on this floor to acknowledge the United States needs to get beyond this terrible legacy.

It is not just economics. It is an opportunity for America to get things right.

I strongly urge my colleagues to join with us this morning in the Capitol, room H-137. Pete Peterson will be meeting with us individually to talk about his experience, to talk about this opportunity, to give us a chance to not only move Vietnam forward economically but to do what is right by the American people in this conflict.

GAO REPORT CLAIMS VETERANS ADMINISTRATION WASTES MILLIONS

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SIMPSON). Under the Speaker’s announced policy of January 19, 1999, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. STEARNS) is recognized during morning hour debates for 5 minutes.

Mr. STEARNS. Mr. Speaker, all of us know that here on the Republican side we are trying to fight to increase the amount of money we give to the Veterans Administration because the President’s budget was a flat line budget which did not provide enough money and particularly the fact that there are many more cases of hepatitis C. And we hope to increase cost of living for a lot of the employees, but I wanted to call my colleagues’ attention to a GAO audit that was performed on the Veterans Affairs on July 22 that found over the next 5 years as much as $20 billion could be wasted. And I think that is a concern for all of us here in Congress. The Veterans Health Administration is spending one of every four medical care dollars just caring for buildings that are old and obsolete. They spend it to operate and maintain major delivery locations, but these locations have very low occupancy and a lot of unused space. So as I mentioned earlier, there is $20 billion that could be saved over the next 5 years.

I think many of my colleagues know that the Veterans Health Administration hospital utilization plan has been dropping because the number of patients has gone down. That is right, it has gone from 49,000 patients a day in 1989 to 21,000 in 1998. Almost half of this decline has occurred over the past 3 years. Not only has the hospital utilization dropped but the number of hospital admissions has decreased from over 1 million in 1989 to about 400,000 in 1998. So that is about a 40 percent drop, Mr. Speaker.

By the VA’s own estimates, the veteran population is now 25 million and will drop to about 16 million in the year 2020. So I am concerned, I think all of us should be concerned, about those facilities that cost so much to operate. More than 40 percent of the VA health care facilities are over 50 years old and we are just not getting a good bang for the buck for the taxpayers. It cost as much as $1 million a day to run these underutilized and unused facilities, according to the GAO; and I do not think we should continue to do that. That is why myself and my colleagues, the gentleman from Alabama (Mr. EVERTT), who is chairman of the Subcommittee on Oversight and Investigations, have held hearings to discuss this and try to correct this egregious use of taxpayers’ money.

Let us not forget, of course, that veterans pay taxes themselves, so we want...
CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE

OMNIBUS MERCURY EMISSIONS REDUCTION ACT OF 1999

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker’s announced policy of January 19, 1999, the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. GUTKNECHT) is recognized during morning hour debates for 5 minutes.

Mr. GUTKNECHT. Mr. Speaker, very soon the Congress will be engaged in a very vicious debate about milk. And that may surprise some people; but when we start talking about milk marketing order reforms, it is amazing how aggressive some Members can become.

Mr. Speaker, in the last couple of days our colleague, the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. GREEN) and myself have sent to all of our other colleagues a copy of an editorial which appeared recently in the Kansas City Star.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to read some excerpts of that editorial because as far as I am concerned they got the debate exactly right. I read and I quote, in 1996, Congress ordered the administration to simplify the pricing of milk. That is easy enough. Stop regulating it. But this is the farm sector and a free market in milk is somehow inconceivable. Instead, milk prices are calculated from rules and equations during several volumes of the Code of Federal Regulations.

The administration’s proposed reform would reduce the number of regions for which the price of wholesale to make sure that the taxes they pay are effectively used also.

The GAO has found that the Veterans Health Administration has made limited progress over the past 4 months in implementing a realignment process. They also found that the VA contains a diverse group of competing stakeholders who oppose plan changes in the areas that are obsolete and not being used and close them, but it does not seem to want to. I think what we need to do is allow a new process to get this started. So my bill calls for a process to be sure that decisions on closing hospitals can only be made based upon comprehensive planning with veterans’ participation, and that is very important and very appropriate.

The bill sets numerous safeguards in place and would specifically provide that VA can only stop operating a hospital and walk away from its responsibilities to veterans. It must, quote, reinvest savings in a new, improved treatment facility or improve services in the area.

The bill responds to the pressing veterans’ needs. It opens the door to an expansion of long-term care, to greater access to outpatient care and to improved benefits, including emergency care coverage.

So in turn, Mr. Speaker, I think it provides the reforms we need for the next millennium that could advance the goals of the GAO, and I think it is another important feature towards getting better efficient use of the money.
milk is regulated from 33 to 11. Fine, but it would also perpetuate the loopy Depression-era notion that the price of milk should be in some respects be based in part on its distance from Eau Claire, Wisconsin. Under current policy, producers farther away from this supposed heart of the dairy region generally receive higher premiums or differentials.

The administration called for slightly lower differentials for beverage milk in many regions, but in Congress even this minuscule step towards rationality is being swept aside. The Committee on Agriculture has substituted a measure that essentially maintains a status quo. Similar moves are afoot in the Senate. Worse, some dairy supporters are working to reauthorize and expand the Northeast Interstate Dairy Compact, a regional milk cartel, and allow similar grouping for southern States. Missouri’s legislature, by the way, has already voted to join the Southern Compact, even though it would result in higher prices for consumers. The American Farm Bureau Federation of America reports that the Northeast Dairy Compact raised retail milk prices by an average of 15 cents a gallon over 2 years.

Dairy producers concerned about the long view should be worried. Critics point out that the higher milk differentials endorsed by the House Committee on Agriculture may well lead to lower revenue for many producers. This is because higher prices will encourage more production, driving down the base milk price and negating the higher differential.

The worst idea in this developing stew is the prospect for dairy-compact proliferation. A compact works like an internal tariff, because the cartel prohibits sales above an agreed-upon floor price. Producers within the region are protected from would-be outside competitors.

Opponents point out that more regional compacts, and the higher prices they support, will breed excessive production, creating dairy surpluses that will be dumped into markets of other regions. This will prompt other States to demand similar protection, promoting the spread of dairy compacts.

Ultimately, as in the 1980s, political pressure will build to liquidate the dairy surplus in a huge multibillion dollar buyout of cheese, milk powder, and even entire herds.

Congress should permit the Northeast Compact to sunset or expire, which will occur if the lawmakers simply do nothing. In fact, doing nothing to the administration’s proposal seems to be the best choice in this case, or more properly the least bad. Perhaps some day Washington will debate real price simplification as in ditching dairy socialism and letting prices fluctuate in the law of supply and demand, closed quote.

Mr. Speaker, the Kansas City Star is right. We should allow Secretary Glickman’s modest reforms to go forward. We should sunset the Dairy Compact. Mr. Speaker, markets are more powerful than armies. They allow the market to set the price of milk in Moscow. Maybe we should try it right here in Washington, D.C.

TWO OF THE MANY PROBLEMS WITH THE PROPOSED TAX CUT

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker’s announced policy of January 19, 1999, the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. OLVER) is recognized during morning hour debates for 5 minutes.

Mr. OLVER. Mr. Speaker, for this week the high profile, main business of the Republican leadership in Congress is to reach a final version of the $800 billion tax cut that has been proposed.

Now, the Republican leadership says that their tax cut is for the middle class, but that is clearly not true.

The House-passed version of the bill passed here, passed this branch 2 weeks ago, would cost the Treasury $6 trillion in lost revenue for high-income taxpayers, which represent about 5 percent of all taxpayers in this country, with incomes of over $250,000 a year, would get 61 percent, more than three-fifths of the total tax reduction, while the other 120 million taxpayers in this country, 95 percent of all the taxpayers, would get only 39 percent of the total tax reduction that is involved.

Now, I do not think that many people would consider that a middle class tax cut. In fact, it is designed to make the already rich a very great deal richer, while the broad middle class of people in this country, the families that are living on an income of between $20,000 to say, $50,000 or even lower, are only going to receive a tax cut that is worth one or two cups of coffee a day for those families.

But that is only a small part of the story. The rest of the story is what can’t be done if the Republican leadership’s tax bill were to become law. For that, I would like to just indicate a couple of areas of what cannot be done. Look at and consider the question of the national debt. On this chart, this chart shows what the publicly-held national debt of $3.7 trillion is made up of.

These pie chart sections, 38 presidents from 1789 until 1977 produced this blue piece. This is President Carter’s portion of the debt, this is President Reagan’s. This is President Bush’s. This is President Clinton’s. The interest on that $3.7 trillion of debt now is about as large, it is about $230 billion a year, is about as large as the whole debt that was created during the Carter administration, that was built up during the Carter administration.

What happens? The tax cut makes certain that we will not be able to pay off that debt, and we will have to continue paying $200 billion or more per year for years into the future. That means higher interest rates for every American family that wants to buy a home, higher interest rates for every business person who wants to create a business that is going to provide more jobs.

So, the debt problem.

Let me take a different issue. If you take a look at the Social Security situation, the tax cut, if it were to become law in its present form, would make it very much more difficult to extend the Social Security system beyond the year 2030. We know the demographics. We know how many people are going to be retiring between now and then. We know how many are going to enter the workforce between now and then, and we know that the reserve funds in the Social Security system will run out in 2030. And we will only be able to operate on the basis of whatever is paid into the Social Security trust fund year by year, which means the benefits for the ever-growing number of senior citizens will have to be reduced or the retirement age for people will have to go up.

At the same time, at the same time, we know that for those people who are businesspeople who are wealthy Americans, the retirement age is going down. People are retiring, if they are wealthy enough, at 50, 55, some even younger than that. Some of them never have worked so they never have to retire.

So the Social Security system is in serious jeopardy of not having any additional revenue to put into the protection and preservation of the Social Security system.

Now, my mother, who is 92 years old, is living now on Social Security that is under $500 per month. She also has a couple hundred dollars of income from other sources but she certainly could not live on a reduced benefit as would happen if this tax cut were to become law.

So those are two reasons. There are many others but those are two of what the problems are with the tax cut that is being proposed.

WE MUST TAKE ACTION TO ENSURE THE SAFETY AND SECURITY OF ALL AMERICANS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker’s announced policy of January 19, 1999, the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. JONES) is recognized during morning hour debates for 5 minutes.

Mr. JONES of North Carolina. Mr. Speaker, 3 weeks ago I first learned the story of a lieutenant colonel working for the Department of Energy whose job had been threatened. Colonel Ed McCallum was the director of the Office of Safeguards and Security for the Department of Energy. He and his staff were responsible for the policy that governs the protection of the Energy Department's national security assets. This includes nuclear weapons, nuclear materials, highly classified information, and personnel clearances.

In his position within the Department, Colonel McCallum was responsible for evaluating and working to prevent security challenges with regard to our Nation's most sensitive technology. In his 9 years as director, Colonel McCallum worked under Clinton appointee Secretary Hazel O'Leary and then under current Energy Secretary Bill Richardson. Under both, he worked to highlight security lapses within the Department. Unfortunately, he faced a steep uphill battle getting anyone in the department to listen to his concerns.

Instead, his reports and memos were ultimately carelessly set aside. Even after pulling out information on our adversaries' use of nuclear materials, little or no action was taken. Time after time, his efforts were stonewalled.

Now Colonel McCallum is speaking out about the Department's efforts to ignore or downplay the post-Cold War threats of national security at our weapons laboratories. Since coming forward with the truth, Colonel McCallum was placed on administrative leave and his career was threatened. Now with the help of Bill O'Reilly and Fox News, I have been working to draw attention to the subject of China and other nations' efforts to steal American military secrets, as well as the administration's treatment of the men and women who are coming forward with the truth.

Colonel McCallum and members of his staff are working to protect the security of each and every American citizen. Rather than being rewarded for their patriotism, they are being punished for their integrity.

After appearing on the O'Reilly Factor last month, my office has received numerous calls and letters from concerned citizens asking that we continue working to address this issue.

Mr. Speaker, the American people care that our national security has not been compromised. The American people care about what other sensitive U.S. information China and rogue nations have been able to access. Our potential adversaries may have been able to steal information on our most advanced stealth technology. Our military space research or information on our most advanced communications equipment.

Each of these technologies by themselves pose real risks to the security of the American people. For that reason, I am concerned not only for the safety of our generation but also that of the future generations. My friend and colleague, the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Wolow), and I have asked the Committee on Armed Services chairman, the gentleman from South Carolina (Mr. Spence), to hold a hearing allowing members of Colonel McCallum's staff to testify. The information they can provide will be critical in assessing Congress' effort to halt the leakage of sensitive military secrets.

Mr. Speaker, we must take action to protect those individuals who are willing to come forward with the information that will keep our sensitive national security information protected and secret. We must take actions to ensure the safety and security of all Americans.

EILEEN COLLINS, A TESTAMENT OF THE POSSIBILITIES THAT DREAMS PRESENT TO US

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 19, 1999, the gentlewoman from Maryland (Ms. Holt) is recognized during morning hour debates for 5 minutes.

Mrs. MORELLA. Mr. Speaker, as a testament of the possibilities that dreams present to us, I rise this morning to honor the entrance of our nation's first woman into space.

After two frustrating but necessary delays, STS–93 finally launched early in the morning on July 23, and last Tuesday the Space Shuttle Columbia landed safely at the Kennedy Space Center after the successful completion of its mission. On its 26th voyage to Earth's orbit, Columbia launched the Chandra X-Ray Observatory. This marvelous technology promises to unlock many secrets of the origins of the universe and the formation of galaxies, stars and planets. As promising and as exciting as this latest enterprise of exploration is to scientists and students everywhere, there is still a greater significance to this mission.

The commander of this mission, U.S. Air Force Lieutenant Colonel Eileen Marie Collins, was born in 1956, just one year before the space race began with the Soviet launch of Sputnik 1. She grew up in the tense climate of the Cold War, fully aware that as demonstrated by Sputnik the Soviet Union could launch a missile with enough force to threaten her home. No doubt, she shared the apprehension that would spark the space race and see the United States play catch-up to the apparent dominance of the world's other superpower.

She just turned 12 when Apollo 8 made its 10 historic orbits of the Moon on Christmas day 1968, and I have no doubt she was among the millions who watched Neil Armstrong, Michael Collins, and Buzz Aldrin make their voyage in Apollo 11 in July of 1969.

She dreamed of being a test pilot and an astronaut but it did not come easy for her. Though women were early pioneers of flight, since the 1930s fewer opportunities were open to women. It was not until the mid-1970s that women became eligible for positions as military aviators, the traditional route to the astronaut program.

Collins was working her way through community college during this time and earned a scholarship to Syracuse. She studied mathematics and economics, going on to later earn a Master of Science degree in operations research from Stanford University and a Master of Arts in space systems management from Webster University.

In 1979, the same year Skylab fell out of Earth's orbit, she completed her pilot training for the Air Force. She became a flight instructor, and in 1983 when Sally Ride became the first American woman in space, she was a C–141 commander and instructor. As a test pilot, she eventually logged over 5,000 hours in 30 different aircraft.

She was selected as an astronaut in 1990, became the first woman pilot of the Space Shuttle aboard the Discovery on STS–63 in February of 1995. Going into this most recent mission, she had already logged over 419 hours of time in space.

With her latest mission, however, she embarked on an adventure that marks another moment in history. She became the first woman commander of a mission to space.

As chair of the Subcommittee on Technology, I introduced the legislation that created the Commission on the Advancement of Women and Minorities in Science, Engineering and Technology Development, working to reverse the underrepresentation of these groups in the sciences through better education and encouragement at all levels of learning. Through my work on the Committee on Science, I have had the pleasure of meeting Colonel Collins. I have been impressed by her down-to-earth personality and sense of self in such a historic context. Commenting on the low number of women astronauts, she said, "If you do not have large numbers of women apply, it will be hard to select large numbers of women."

Mr. Speaker, H. Res. 267 seeks to recognize the wider possibilities demonstrated by this flight. This latest mission is a signal to little girls who dream. Space is there for them, too. And the next time humankind endeavors to take another joint leap, it could well be a woman to make it.
and it is with a sense of profound anxiety that I come to the floor today to talk about the elements in our world that could imperil these dreams.

The lead story, Mr. Speaker, in today's Washington Times reads as follows: "China Tests New Long Range Missile." Bill Gertz, the byline he writes and I quote, "China successfully test-fired its newest long-range missile yesterday amid heightened tensions with Taiwan over pro-independence remarks by the island's President. The CIA believes the DF-31 test launched from a base in central China will be the first new Chinese intercontinental ballistic missile to incorporate stolen U.S. warhead design and missile technology, according to U.S. officials."

Mr. Speaker, when I read those words this morning, I could not help but reflect on the revelations that have rocked our Nation's capital and our entire country in the past several months. The fund-raising scandals, the apparent absence of concern at our Nation's nuclear laboratories, the wholesale theft of our nuclear secrets and the apparent cooperation of some in the private sector, and some in alleged government service to make it so. Mr. Speaker, what perverse pride can anyone derive from these revelations? Is there actually pride in the part of the Clinton-Gore gang and their fund-raisers this morning? Is there actually pride in the heart of Bernard Schwartz, the leading giver to the Democratic National Committee, whose firm, Loral, gave technology to the Communist Chinese? C. Michael Armstrong, the one-time CEO of Hughes, another company that gave technology to the Communist Chinese, can he feel pride at these revelations this morning? Is this security advisor, Sandy Berger, who sat on this information and apparently withheld it from the highest levels of government, does he feel pride this morning that our Nation is at risk?

How proud former Energy Secretary Hazel O'Leary must be this morning, with her socialist utopian vision of sharing our nuclear technology with those who oppose us in the world. And finally and sadly, how proud the President is today. Mr. Speaker, when will we awaken to the threat that has been created by naïve or crass political advantage that some have sought in direct contravention and dereliction of the oath of office which we all take as constitutional officials to provide for the common defense, to defend and the Constitution of the United States?

Mr. Speaker, when will the partisan press awaken to these revelations?

Mr. Speaker, what perverse pride can anyone derive from these revelations? Is there actually pride in the part of the Clinton-Gore gang and their fund-raisers this morning? Is there actually pride in the heart of Bernard Schwartz, the leading giver to the Democratic National Committee, whose firm, Loral, gave technology to the Communist Chinese? C. Michael Armstrong, the one-time CEO of Hughes, another company that gave technology to the Communist Chinese, can he feel pride at these revelations this morning? Is this security advisor, Sandy Berger, who sat on this information and apparently withheld it from the highest levels of government, does he feel pride this morning that our Nation is at risk?

How proud former Energy Secretary Hazel O'Leary must be this morning, with her socialist utopian vision of sharing our nuclear technology with those who oppose us in the world. And finally and sadly, how proud the President is today. Mr. Speaker, when will we awaken to the threat that has been created by naïve or crass political advantage that some have sought in direct contravention and dereliction of the oath of office which we all take as constitutional officials to provide for the common defense, to defend and the Constitution of the United States?

Mr. Speaker, when will the partisan press awaken to these revelations?

Mr. Speaker, what perverse pride can anyone derive from these revelations? Is there actually pride in the part of the Clinton-Gore gang and their fund-raisers this morning? Is there actually pride in the heart of Bernard Schwartz, the leading giver to the Democratic National Committee, whose firm, Loral, gave technology to the Communist Chinese? C. Michael Armstrong, the one-time CEO of Hughes, another company that gave technology to the Communist Chinese, can he feel pride at these revelations this morning? Is this security advisor, Sandy Berger, who sat on this information and apparently withheld it from the highest levels of government, does he feel pride this morning that our Nation is at risk?

How proud former Energy Secretary Hazel O'Leary must be this morning, with her socialist utopian vision of sharing our nuclear technology with those who oppose us in the world. And finally and sadly, how proud the President is today. Mr. Speaker, when will we awaken to the threat that has been created by naïve or crass political advantage that some have sought in direct contravention and dereliction of the oath of office which we all take as constitutional officials to provide for the common defense, to defend and the Constitution of the United States?

Mr. Speaker, when will the partisan press awaken to these revelations?

Mr. Speaker, what perverse pride can anyone derive from these revelations? Is there actually pride in the part of the Clinton-Gore gang and their fund-raisers this morning? Is there actually pride in the heart of Bernard Schwartz, the leading giver to the Democratic National Committee, whose firm, Loral, gave technology to the Communist Chinese? C. Michael Armstrong, the one-time CEO of Hughes, another company that gave technology to the Communist Chinese, can he feel pride at these revelations this morning? Is this security advisor, Sandy Berger, who sat on this information and apparently withheld it from the highest levels of government, does he feel pride this morning that our Nation is at risk?

How proud former Energy Secretary Hazel O'Leary must be this morning, with her socialist utopian vision of sharing our nuclear technology with those who oppose us in the world. And finally and sadly, how proud the President is today. Mr. Speaker, when will we awaken to the threat that has been created by naïve or crass political advantage that some have sought in direct contravention and dereliction of the oath of office which we all take as constitutional officials to provide for the common defense, to defend and the Constitution of the United States?

Mr. Speaker, when will the partisan press awaken to these revelations?

Mr. Speaker, what perverse pride can anyone derive from these revelations? Is there actually pride in the part of the Clinton-Gore gang and their fund-raisers this morning? Is there actually pride in the heart of Bernard Schwartz, the leading giver to the Democratic National Committee, whose firm, Loral, gave technology to the Communist Chinese? C. Michael Armstrong, the one-time CEO of Hughes, another company that gave technology to the Communist Chinese, can he feel pride at these revelations this morning? Is this security advisor, Sandy Berger, who sat on this information and apparently withheld it from the highest levels of government, does he feel pride this morning that our Nation is at risk?

How proud former Energy Secretary Hazel O'Leary must be this morning, with her socialist utopian vision of sharing our nuclear technology with those who oppose us in the world. And finally and sadly, how proud the President is today. Mr. Speaker, when will we awaken to the threat that has been created by naïve or crass political advantage that some have sought in direct contravention and dereliction of the oath of office which we all take as constitutional officials to provide for the common defense, to defend and the Constitution of the United States?

Mr. Speaker, when will the partisan press awaken to these revelations?

Mr. Speaker, what perverse pride can anyone derive from these revelations? Is there actually pride in the part of the Clinton-Gore gang and their fund-raisers this morning? Is there actually pride in the heart of Bernard Schwartz, the leading giver to the Democratic National Committee, whose firm, Loral, gave technology to the Communist Chinese? C. Michael Armstrong, the one-time CEO of Hughes, another company that gave technology to the Communist Chinese, can he feel pride at these revelations this morning? Is this security advisor, Sandy Berger, who sat on this information and apparently withheld it from the highest levels of government, does he feel pride this morning that our Nation is at risk?

How proud former Energy Secretary Hazel O'Leary must be this morning, with her socialist utopian vision of sharing our nuclear technology with those who oppose us in the world. And finally and sadly, how proud the President is today. Mr. Speaker, when will we awaken to the threat that has been created by naïve or crass political advantage that some have sought in direct contravention and dereliction of the oath of office which we all take as constitutional officials to provide for the common defense, to defend and the Constitution of the United States?
I am very pleased to see that Secretary Richardson is taking this initiative both with regard to the peaceful uses of energy as well as on the nuclear power issue and what might happen in terms of our national security interests. I think this is a strong indication of further U.S. India cooperation in an area that is very crucial to all of us, and that is our energy resources.

RECESS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 12 of rule I, the Chair declares the House in recess until 10 a.m. Accordingly (at 9 o’clock and 45 minutes a.m.), the House stood in recess until 10 a.m.

□ 1000

AFTER RECESS

The recess having expired, the House was called to order by the Speaker pro tempore (Mrs. WILSON) at 10 a.m.

PRAYER

The Reverend Dr. Donald Carter, Pastor, Baptist Temple of Alamance County, Burlington, North Carolina, offered the following prayer:

May we pray.

Heavenly Father, thank You for our forefathers who carved out of the wilderness a great Nation, a Nation that has enjoyed the blessings of Almighty God. We acknowledge Your protective and guiding hand upon our Nation during these 223 years.

I request that You give the men and women who are servants of our trust and who represent us understanding of the problems and needs of our country. Give them wisdom to address them. We have sinned as a people and as a Nation. Forgive us of our sins, May these who represent us do what is right, not what is popular, as John Adams said.

May that being who is supreme over all, the Patron of Order, the Fountain of Justice and the Protector of all ages of the world of virtuous liberty, continue His blessings upon this, our Nation.

In Jesus’ name I pray.

THE JOURNAL

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair has examined the Journal of the last day’s proceedings and announces to the House her approval thereof. Pursuant to clause 1, rule I, the Journal stands approved.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Will the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. TRAFICANT) come forward and lead the House in the Pledge of Allegiance.

Mr. TRAFICANT led the Pledge of Allegiance as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

WELCOME TO REVEREND DR. DONALD CARTER, BAPTIST TEMPLE OF ALAMANCE COUNTY, BURLINGTON, NORTH CAROLINA

(Mr. COBLE asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. COBLE. Madam Speaker, the gentleman who opened the House today, Reverend Carter, I came to know him, his wife, Betty, his son David, and the Baptist Temple Church family when I initially was a candidate for Congress in 1984.

Don and his church family and the entire Alamance County Ministerial Association serve their county well, and we are honored to have Don to open our service today.

The bad news is I no longer represent him. As a result of redistricting, Alamance County was assigned to another Congressional District, and they are now ably represented by the gentleman to whom I yield.

I am pleased to yield, Madam Speaker, to the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. BURR).

Mr. BURR of North Carolina. Madam Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Madam Speaker, I also welcome Pastor Carter and his wife Betty. In fact, in every community, we find families that we represent. Pastor Carter represents a family in Burlington of several hundred of his parishioners that every week turn to him for their spiritual guidance and for the leadership that they need, both personally and professionally. Dr. Carter, we are glad to have you today and your lovely wife.

I also pledge to my dear colleague, the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. COBLE) that I will carry on the good tradition that he has established, not only with the Baptist Temple, but with Alamance County.

TAX CUTS TO BENEFIT ALL TAXPAYERS

(Mr. ROGAN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. ROGAN. Madam Speaker, we Republicans across the country campaigned last year on the issue of tax relief for working families. We said that Americans are overtaxed, and America agreed. That is why last year more Americans voted for Republicans than voted Democrat in the Congressional elections.

By now it is no surprise that Republicans actually meant what they said.

The House of Representatives under the Republicans have passed tax relief for working families. This is upsetting to many on the left, still locked in the 1960s mentality that demonizes those that save, invest, create jobs, and pay the lion’s share of taxes.

Our relief package is fair and balanced. It puts aside $2 for Social Security and Medicare for every $1 in tax relief for working families.

It does something foreign to the left that controlled this chamber for 40 years before us. It pays down the national debt by some $1 trillion, and it cuts taxes so that all taxpaying families will benefit.

The Republican Party is the party of tax relief for working families.

ADDRESSING THE PROBLEMS OF HEPATITIS C

(Mr. WEINER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. WEINER. Madam Speaker, the Queens Courier, a distinguished local newspaper in New York, recently concluded in an exclusive study that they did in this edition that hepatitis C has reached near epidemic proportions in New York City and, in fact, in the Nation as a whole.

The Queens Courier study actually does a great national service to bring our attention to what is an often and unrecognized epidemic: Nearly 4 million Americans have been affected by hepatitis C. As a result, there are almost 10,000 deaths every year in this country, and it causes over $600 million in medical bills in our country. This is indeed an epidemic, albeit a quiet one. This is particularly poignant to New York City, where there are so many immigrant communities.

Now the time for the government, not only authorities in New York State, but the Center for Disease Control here in Washington, to finally recognize that hepatitis C has reached a crisis proportion. The Queens Courier has done a very important job by calling this to our attention. Now we in Congress have to take up this call and address the problems of hepatitis C.

NETWORKS NOT COVERING GREEN-SPAN STATEMENTS PROPERLY

(Mr. HEFLY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HEFLY. Madam Speaker, today is the first installment of our Media Watch. Media Watch is an effort to cover the stories the networks will not cover, the stories which are distorted by liberals, and the stories which are buried in the back pages for political reasons.

As always, there is a lot to choose from, but I think most people would... agree that the way the major networks covered Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan’s comments on the Republican tax proposal deserves a second look.

Anybody watching ABC, NBC, CBS or CNN would come away thinking that the Federal Reserve Chairman opposed the Republican tax cuts and felt them unwise.

Well, Alan Greenspan’s comments were not exactly as they were portrayed. In fact, the Chairman warned against more spending. Those comments were ignored. In fact, the Chairman said that if the choice were between more spending and tax cuts, he thought tax cuts made sense, and that more spending would be the worst of all outcomes.

Surprise, surprise. We get spin from the networks.

STRENGTHENING AND MODERNIZING MEDICARE

(Mr. ALLEN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. ALLEN. Madam Speaker, anyone who has been paying attention in this country in the last year would think, would know, that we have got some problems with Medicare. The program becomes insolvent in the year 2015.

So let us look at this Republican tax cut proposal. It devotes $792 billion for tax cuts and does absolutely nothing to strengthen and modernize Medicare. The GOP plan does not extend the solvency of Medicare by one day.

By contrast, the Democratic plan invests $325 billion of the on-budget surplus over the next 10 years in the Medicare Trust Fund and extends it out to 2027.

The GOP plan contains absolutely nothing for prescription drug benefits. The Democratic plan contains $45 billion over 10 years to help provide our seniors with help in buying their prescription drugs.

There is no question, this tax cut and helping Medicare, improving Medicare, providing the prescription drug benefit, they cannot both be done. Moreover, the surplus, frankly, is not there.

WESTERN SAHARA PRISONERS OF WAR NEED TO GO HOME

(Mr. PITTS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. PITTS. Madam Speaker, the country of Morocco has been in the news a lot the last couple of weeks. This morning, I rise on behalf of 83 freed Moroccan POWs in the midst of the Sahara Desert. These men were originally imprisoned due to the conflict between Western Sahara and Morocco.

These prisoners were released in 1997 by Western Sahara as a goodwill gesture when the former Secretary of State George Baker, who was the emissary of the UN Secretary General, visited the Sahrawi people in their refugee camps. Eighty-five prisoners were released and filled with anticipation of going home. Unfortunately, two of the men have died while waiting for permission from their government to visit Morocco.

Last year I visited these released POWs in their camp. You can see these men in the photo around me.

Madam Speaker, some of these men have languished, along with the Sahrawi refugees, in the desert for 20 years. Yet, even though they are free, Morocco has not allowed them to return home to Morocco to their families.

Why? No one knows.

Madam Speaker, I urge the new King of Morocco as a gesture of good will to accept the freed Moroccan citizens so they can return home to their families.

ENACT PATIENTS’ BILL OF RIGHTS NOW

(Mr. STUPAK asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. STUPAK. Madam Speaker, I rose just about a year ago to join my colleagues in offering a one minute on a proposed patients’ bill of rights. We were discussing this topic in the House because the leadership of the majority, both in the House and the other body, had finally entered into the public discussion on adoption of a Patients’ Bill of Rights.

I regret to say that my optimism was misplaced. I have to say now 1 year and 2 weeks later, we still have not passed the Patients’ Bill of Rights.

Since that time, public clamor for a real, genuine Patients’ Bill of Rights has only grown. The public recognizes that, like the first ten amendments to the Constitution, there are real people and real rights that need to be protected. Medical decisions which affect the very livelihood of people and their quality of life must be made by doctors, in consultation with patients, not insurance accountants. Patients must be able to hold HMOs liable, accountable, for decisions that affect their lives and the quality of life, not some travesty of an internal review process.

REPUBLICAN BUDGET PROPOSAL BEING MISREPRESENTED AND MISCHARACTERIZED

(Mr. BALLenger asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BALLenger. Madam Speaker, if you take a look at this chart here, you will notice that the Republican budget proposal will reduce the debt held by the public by approximately $2 trillion. You will also notice that the Republican debt reduction proposal bears absolutely no relation whatsoever to the rhetoric we are hearing on the other side of the aisle.

Democrat after Democrat, over the past several weeks, has come down to the House floor and railed against the Republican tax cut proposal, claiming that it would do nothing for debt reduction, do nothing for Social Security, blah, blah, blah. But our proposal reduces the debt by $2 trillion. The Congressional Budget Office confirms this. Not only that, but the Congressional Budget Office scores our budget proposal as $200 billion better on debt reduction than the Democrat plan. In other words, our plan reduces the debt more than the Democrats do.

How are we to take their rhetoric seriously? How can we possibly have an honest debate, when our budget proposal is routinely mischaracterized and misrepresented beyond any recognition?

All I can say is thank God for C-SPAN.

INTENSIFY WAR ON DRUGS

(Mr. TRAFICANT asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. TRAFICANT. Madam Speaker, the Drug Czar said only 38 percent of teenagers in America have tried drugs, and he is all excited.

Now, look, I like the Czar. I think he is doing a good job. But 38 percent is not exactly a number we should be celebrating, folks.

Tell it like it is: Drugs account for 80 percent of all crime, 70 percent of all murder, 50 percent of all healthcare costs, and heroin and cocaine is as easy to get as aspirin in every city in America, and it all comes across the border. Our borders are wide open and our eyes are wide shut.

Beam me up. We do not have a war on drugs going on; we have a propaganda game going on in America.

THE LAKE TAHOE ENVIRONMENTAL SUMMIT

(Mr. GIBBONS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GIBBONS. Madam Speaker, today I rise to pay tribute to Lake Tahoe. Mark Twain once said, as he described Lake Tahoe, it was “the fairest picture the whole Earth afforded.”

With an estimated 50 percent of the trees and forests surrounding Lake Tahoe dead or dying, and the lake losing almost a foot of clarity a year, many environmental changes must be made to ensure that we pass on to our
Mr. BARTLETT of Maryland. Madam Speaker, for 40 years Democrats controlled Congress. For 40 years Democrats expanded government, spent beyond our needs, and called Republicans extremists or mean-spirited any time they tried to limit spending, cut wasteful government programs, and return power back to the State and local level. They have a 40-year track record of being the party for which fiscal discipline was the last thing on their minds.

So please, with all due respect, Democrat allegations that Republicans are being fiscally irresponsible for proposing tax relief in the face of increasing surpluses do not pass the credibility test. As C-Span junkies know, on virtually every amendment, on virtually every bill, Democrats attempt to increase spending and Republicans try to reduce spending. How is it that increased spending is not a threat to fiscal discipline, but tax cuts are? Just how liberal am I to conclude the Democrat party has become if tax cuts are viewed as dangerous to the economy? One has to wonder just where they learned economics. Taxpayers know which party is careful with their money and which party is not.

CONGRESS MUST PASS A MEANINGFUL PATIENTS’ BILL OF RIGHTS

(Ms. DeLAURO asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. DeLAURO. Madam Speaker, for the past 2 years the American people have consistently asked for reasonable health care reforms that put those decisions back in the hands of doctors and patients and out of the hands of insurance company bureaucrats. People want to be able to choose their own doctor, to have access to the nearest emergency room, to see a specialist when necessary, to be free from HMO gag rules that prevent doctors from discussing treatment options for them, and to have the right to hold HMOs accountable for their decisions.

This Congress can and should pass these reforms now. The Members of this body who are doctors, whether Democrats or Republicans, almost all agree that these measures will benefit patients, make our health system stronger.

In the past year, thousands of Medicare recipients have been dropped by their HMOs. Millions of Americans have health care without basic coverage protections. We must pass a meaningful Patients’ Bill of Rights. It must reflect our values for quality health care in this country. If we do, we can once again make the doctor’s office a place for medical decisions.

TAXPAYERS KNOW WHICH PARTY IS CAREFUL WITH THEIR MONEY

(Mr. BARTLETT asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)
THE REPUBLICAN AGENDA IS THE BEST AGENDA

(Mr. SHIMKUS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SHIMKUS. Madam Speaker, what is the Republican agenda? The Republican agenda is the best agenda for all Americans, B is for bolstering our national security, E is for education excellence, S is for strengthening retirement security, and T is for tax relief for working Americans.

Republicans have the BEST agenda. It is a positive, forward-looking agenda that recognizes that our military needs must be given a higher priority in a dangerous world, that our schools need to be improved if our kids are going to enjoy a bright future, that our seniors need to be protected against a looming social security and Medicare crisis, and that Americans who pay the taxes should be given tax relief, not more rhetoric about why Washington needs more money.

Bolstering national security, education excellence, strengthening retirement security, tax relief for working Americans, Republicans have the BEST agenda.

THE PATIENTS’ BILL OF RIGHTS

(Ms. SLAUGHTER asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Madam Speaker, I am continually amazed by the misinformation spread about the Patients’ Bill of Rights. I know the businesses in my district believe this Patients’ Bill of Rights would allow enrollees to sue their employers for denied benefits, but nothing could be further from the truth. In fact, the Patients’ Bill of Rights contains explicit provisions stating that employers cannot be sued for decisions made by health insurers.

I hope that the American people this time will see through the smokescreen being thrown up by too many groups who have too much interest in killing this legislation. The more time goes by, we risk losing this opportunity altogether. The powerful forces lined up against this legislation will accept another delay to give them the chance to marshall their forces.

We have plenty of time to pass an irresponsible tax cut, time to prevent the Department of Labor from protecting people against workplace injuries, time to name buildings and courthouse, but evidently we do not have the time to protect the very lives and limbs of our constituents.

After this Friday, this Chamber is out of session for 36 days. How many of those days will we fritter away on sound bites and legislation designed for special groups?

POLITICS AS USUAL WHEN IT COMES TO SPENDING THE MONEY OF THE PEOPLE OF AMERICA

(Mr. KINGSTON asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. KINGSTON. Madam Speaker, it is politics as usual when it comes to spending our money, the money of the people of America.

The Republican approach is three-fold. Number one, the Republican party wants to preserve 100 percent of the social security surplus as compared to 62 percent that the President wants to protect.

Now, we do this, we put aside $1.9 trillion for social security and Medicare, and the second thing we do is we pay down the debt, $2 trillion, as seen on this chart. The third thing we do, and only after social security, Medicare, and debt reduction, we return to American people their money for over-payment on taxes.

The President’s attitude is somewhat epitomized in this statement: “We could give the surplus all back to you and hope you spend it right.” Gee, whiz, people of America, Bill Clinton can spend your money better than you can spend it. Does that not make us feel good?

All I can say is, the people in America must not know how to spend money at all, judging by the responsibility exhibited over at the White House the past 2 years.

Let me say this, this is Americans’ money. It ought to go back to them.

UNDER THE REPUBLICAN TAX CUT, WORKING AMERICANS GET THE SHAFT

(Mr. SHERMAN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. SHERMAN. Madam Speaker, I ran down to this floor when I heard my colleague, the gentleman from California, refer to the Republican tax cut as fair and balanced. I thought, how could such a huge tax cut, aimed almost exclusively at the super wealthy and the giant corporations, be called balanced? And then I understood what he must have meant.

See, under this tax cut, the top 1 percent wealthiest Americans get ten times the tax relief as 100 million Americans, constituting the lower 40 percent of income earners. At the same time, this tax cut provides more tax relief to job-exporting corporations than it provides to over 50 million Americans.

Madam Speaker, that is the balance. Compared to the super wealthy, working Americans get the shaft. Compared to giant corporations, working families get the shaft. That is the only sense in which the Republican tax cut is balanced.

CONGRESS MUST PASS THE PATIENTS’ BILL OF RIGHTS

(Mr. HOEFFFEL asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HOEFFFEL. Madam Speaker, we must pass the Patients’ Bill of Rights. Our system of HMOs has run amok.

As evidence, I offer a survey of doctors conducted by one of the newspapers in my district, the Reporter, in Lansdale, Pennsylvania. Most of the doctors responding were not against the original idea of HMOs, they have just said the rules have gone haywire.

Eighty-seven percent of the doctors responding have had conflicts with HMOs. Fifty-eight percent of those say the conflicts have been serious, and happen frequently. Seventy percent of the doctors say they do not have sufficient control over treatment.

Another doctor said, “The American people need to wake up. Their lives are in danger with HMO control. Doctors have to put away their medical books and do what the HMO manual says for their patients.”

A third doctor was afraid to sign his survey for fear of HMO retaliation. Something has gone wrong. “HMO” stands for How Much Outrage must the American people put up with? Pass the Patients’ Bill of Rights.

FOREIGN OPERATIONS, EXPORT FINANCING, AND RELATED PROGRAMS APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 2000

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mrs. WILSON). Pursuant to House Resolution 263 and rule XVIII, the Chair declares the House in the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the further consideration of the bill, H.R. 2606.

IN THE COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

Accordingly, the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the further consideration of the bill (H.R. 2606) making appropriations for foreign operations, export financing, and related programs for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2000, and for other purposes, with Mr. THORNBERRY in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

THE CHAIRMAN. When the Committee of the Whole rose on Monday,
August 3, 1999

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE

A recorded vote was ordered.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

(3) abortion procedures.

Amendment offered by Mr. PAUL:

Amendment No. 9 offered by Mr. PAUL:

SEC. 2. None of the funds appropriated or otherwise made available by this Act may be used to provide for the United Nations Man and the Biosphere (MAB) Program or the United Nations World Heritage Fund.

Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to withdraw my request for a recorded vote.

The Clerk will redesignate the amendment.

The text of the amendment as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. TANCREDO:

Page 118, after line 5, insert the following:

SERC. None of the funds appropriated or otherwise made available by this Act may be used to provide for the United Nations Man and the Biosphere (MAB) Program or the United Nations World Heritage Fund.

Mr. George Miller of California. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to withdraw my request for a recorded vote.

The Clerk will redesignate the amendment.

The text of the amendment as follows:

Amendment No. 9 offered by Mr. PAUL:

At the end of the bill, insert after the last section (preceding the short title) the following:

LIMITATION ON FUNDS FOR ABDUCTION, FAMILY PLANNING, OR POPULATION CONTROL EFFORTS

SERC. None of the funds appropriated or otherwise made available by this Act may be used for—

(1) population control or family planning programs;

(2) family planning activities; or

(3) abortion procedures.

A recorded vote was ordered.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

(A) death procedures.

Amendment No. 360, I inadvertently voted incorrectly. I intend to vote "aye."
to wind up this measure. I urge our collected efforts to make the investments that our world economy so desperately needs. The funding level is not increased and the objectionable language is not removed and the President vetoes the bill that we may be called upon it.

The allocation of discretionary resources available in this bill is insufficient to make the investments that our citizens need and expect in implementing our foreign policy. With that thought in mind, I say to Members, it was a free vote, I will be voting “yes,” but we may be calling upon you at a future date to sustain a presidential veto.
So the amendment was rejected.

Mr. Chairman, I want to commend the distinguished chairman of the committee. He had too little money to work with, but he allocated it well. I also commend staff: Mark Murray and Carolyn Bartholomew on the Democratic side; and Charlie Flickner, John Shank, Chris Walker, Lori Maes and Nancy Tippins on the Republican side.
Mr. GILMAN, Mr. Chairman, will the gentlewoman yield?

Ms. PELOSI. I yield to the gentleman from New York, chairman of the authorizing committee.

Mr. GILMAN. I thank the gentlewoman for yielding.

Mr. Chairman, I rise to commend both the gentleman and the distinguished chairman of the Subcommittee on Foreign Operations, Export Financing and Related Programs for an outstanding bill and for their hard work and to their staffs for bringing this to the floor in a very expeditious manner.
They worked long and late last night
to wind up this measure. I urge our colleagues to fully support this measure.
Ms. PELOSI. Reclaiming my time, Mr. Chairman, many people who follow this bill have told me this over and over again, but I want to make the point another time. Every person in America is familiar with President Kennedy’s inaugural address when he said, “My fellow Americans, ask what you can do for your country.” The very next line in that speech, Mr. Chairman, says, “To the citizens of the world, ask not what America can do for you but what you can do for your country.” That is a responsibility that we have in this bill. That is why we are disappoointed the funding level is so low, but we want to move it forward in the hope that the funding level will be raised so that we can work together with the people of the world for the freedom of mankind.

The CHAIRMAN. There being no further amendments, under the rule the Committee rises.

Accordingly, the Committee rose; and the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. HANSEN) having assumed the chair, Mr. THORNBERY, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, reported, that the Committee, having had under consideration the bill (H.R. 2606) making appropriations for foreign operations, export functions, and for other purposes, pursuant to the request of the Senate had passed a bill of the following title, in which the concurrence of the House is requested:

Pursuant to clause 10 of rule XX, the following amendments, adopted by the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, are ordered:

A message from the Senate by Mr. Kyl, Mr. Stevens, Mr. Durbin, and Mr. Inouye, to be the conferees on the part of the Senate:

ON THE PART OF THE HOUSE:

H.R. 2606. An act making appropriations for the government of the United States for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2000, and for other purposes, pursuant to the request of the Senate, which was concurred in by the House, as above recorded.

As above recorded.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate by Mr. Lundregan, one of its clerks, anotified the House that the Senate had passed the bill with an amendment in which the concurrence of the House is requested, a bill of the House of the following title:

H.R. 2587. An act making appropriations for the government of the District of Columbia and other activities chargeable in whole or in part against revenues of said District for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2000, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate insists upon its amendment to the bill (H.R. 2587), "An Act making appropriations for the government of the District of Columbia and other activities chargeable in whole or in part against revenues of said District for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2000, and for other purposes," requests a conference with the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and appoints Mrs. HUTCHISON, Mr. KYL, Mr. STEVENS, Mr. DURBIN, and Mr. INOUYE, to be the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The Senate also announced that a public bill has passed the Senate, the following title, in which the concurrence of the House is requested:
S. 335. An act to amend chapter 30 of title 29, United States Code, to provide for the nonannulability of certain deceptive matter relating to sweepstakes, skill contests, facsimile checks, administrative procedures, orders, and civil penalties relating to such matters and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate agrees to the amendment of the House to the bill (S. 880) "An Act to amend the Clean Air Act to remove flammable fuels from the list of substances to which reporting and other activities are required under the risk management plan program."

\[1130\]

TWENTY-FIRST AMENDMENT ENFORCEMENT ACT

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 272 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. Res. 272

Resolved, That at any time after the adoption of this resolution the Speaker may, pursuant to clause 2(b) of rule XVIII, declare the House resolved into the Committee of the Whole House on the state of the Union for consideration of the bill (H.R. 2031) to provide for injunctive relief in Federal district court to enforce State laws relating to the interstate transportation of intoxicating liquor. The first reading of the bill shall be dispensed with. General debate shall be confined to the bill and shall not exceed one hour equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on the Judiciary. After general debate the bill shall be considered for amendment under the five-minute rule for a period not to exceed two hours. It shall be in order to offer amendments to the original bill for the purpose of amendment under the five-minute rule the amendment in the nature of a substitute recommended by the Committee on the Judiciary now printed in the bill. The Committee amendment in the nature of a substitute shall be considered as read. During consideration of the bill for amendment, the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole may accord priority in recognition on the basis of whether the Member offering an amendment has caused it to be printed in the portion of the Congressional Record designated for that purpose in clause 8 of rule XVIII. Amendments so printed shall be considered as read. The Chairman of the Committee of the Whole may: (1) postpone until the Committee of the Whole a request for a time during further consideration in the Committee of the Whole a request for a recorded vote on any amendment; and (2) reduce to five minutes the minimum time for electronic voting on any postponed question that follows another electronic vote without intervening business, provided that the minimum time for electronic voting on the first five minutes of questions shall be 15 minutes. At the conclusion of consideration of the bill for amendment the Committee shall rise and report the bill to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted. Any Member may demand a separate vote in the House on any amendment adopted in the Committee of the Whole to the bill or to the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute. The previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit with or without instructions.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. HANSEN). The gentleman from Florida (Mr. Goss) is recognized for one hour.

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, for the purpose of debate only, I yield the six minutes limit to the distinguished gentleman from the Commonwealth of Massachusetts (Mr. MOAKLEY), my friend and colleague, pending which I yield myself such time as I may consume. During consideration of this resolution, all time yielded is for the purposes of debate only.

Mr. Speaker, this is a fair rule. It provides for adequate and appropriate consideration of H.R. 2031, the Twenty-first Amendment Enforcement Act. It is a modified open rule that will accommodate Member interests in the amendment process while keeping us on track to meet our Friday deadline for August recess, a deadline that many Members, including the minority leader, have urged the Speaker, in writing, to keep.

While the lack of time may argue for a more closed structure, the Committee on Rules has erred on the side of openness and provided an open rule with a 2-hour limit on amendments. Of course, the rule also provides for a motion to recommit, with or without instructions.

Introduced by my colleague, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. SCARBOROUGH), H.R. 2031 was reported favorably by the Committee on the Judiciary on July 20 by voice vote. I understand that while hearings were not held in this Congress, the Subcommittee on Courts and Intellectual Property did convene hearings in the 105th Congress on nearly an identical bill.

I would like to commend the gentleman from Florida (Mr. SCARBOROUGH) for his continued efforts on behalf of American children, particularly when it comes to the tricky business of alcohol access. It is clearly a difficult question to resolve. However, it is encouraging to see the major players, the beer and wine distributors, as well as the vintners, the growers, fully engaged in the deliberative process.

Mr. Speaker, while the underlying legislation may engender some debate, this rule should receive unanimous support. It is certainly an open and fair rule.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MOAKLEY. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I thank my dear friend, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. Goss), for yielding me the customary half-hour.

Mr. Speaker, as most people know, the Twenty-First Amendment to the Constitution ended prohibition. It also bestowed upon the States the authority to write their own liquor laws. The problem, Mr. Speaker, is there is no interstate enforcement mechanism. The way the law is written, States have virtually no way to enforce the liquor laws when they are violated by distributors in other States, especially now that there are so many ways to buy alcohol.

People can call a 1-800 number, they can order over the Internet, they can do all sorts of things to buy alcohol, and with the limited judicial options available to them now, State attorneys general are having a very hard time making sure that people abide by the law.

This bill will give the State attorneys general another option. If they believe someone is in violation of their State’s liquor laws, this bill will enable them to file suit in Federal Court to get them to stop. It says you cannot ship alcohol into a State in violation of that State’s liquor laws. It is that simple.

It is not a new Federal law, it is not a new State law. It is not a threat to anyone who sells alcohol legally. It is just a way for State attorneys general to get people who sell alcohol illegally to stop.

Mr. Speaker, in my home State of Massachusetts, Massachusetts is considered a limited personal importation State. We allow Massachusetts residents to buy alcohol from outside of Massachusetts but only for their own consumption and only in limited quantities.

The Commonwealth of Massachusetts determined how alcohol could cross its borders. If a liquor distributor outside of Massachusetts breaks that law, our attorney general should be able to get them to stop.

This bill will help stop the illegal interstate shipments of alcohol by giving State attorney general power to enforce State laws. In particular, Mr. Speaker, it takes us a step closer to stopping the sale of alcohol to minors over the Internet. But I still believe we can do more to stop underage drinking, especially underage driving and drinking.

This is a good bill, and I urge my colleagues to support it.

Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. GOSS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, we have no requests for time, and I do not anticipate any. Again, the purpose of this hour of debate is to discuss the rule, which is an open and fair rule. I would prefer that we not engage in the debate on the substance of the bill until we get to the time carefully set aside. I have not encouraged any speakers to come forward.
Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, I yield back the balance of my time, and I move the previous question on the resolution.

The previous question was ordered.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. Goss), Pursuant to House Resolution 272 and rule XVIII, the Chair declares the House in the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill, H.R. 2031.

1139

IN THE COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

Accordingly, the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 2031) to provide for injunctive relief in Federal district court to enforce State laws relating to the interstate transportation of intoxicating liquor, with Mr. HANSEN in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to the rule, the bill is considered as having been read the first time.

Under the rule, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. SCARBOROUGH) and the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. DELAHUNT) each will control 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Florida (Mr. SCARBOROUGH).

Mr. SCARBOROUGH. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, I would like to begin my testimony by reading Section 2 of the Twenty-First Amendment to the Constitution: The transportation or importation into any State, Territory or possession of the United States for delivery or use therein of intoxicating liquors, in violation of the laws thereof, is hereby prohibited.

Mr. Chairman, the Twenty-First Amendment’s import is clear. States have been given the right to stop interstate bootlegging. This right was re-affirmed by Congress in the Webb-Kenyon Act 65 years ago, by 6 decades of Supreme Court case law, and by subsequent Congressional acts. Yet, today, some modern-day bootleggers still seek refuge from the Twenty-First Amendment.

They seek to avoid State laws and constitutional amendments so they can sell their liquor more profitably than small businesses who dare to play by the rules. Bootleggers sell liquors to minors over the Internet, again avoiding State laws given preeminence by the Twenty-First Amendment.

Shamed by the countless media stories detailing how young children are buying liquor from these modern-day bootleggers over the Internet, they have shrugged off such media stories, calling them nothing more than stings by their economic enemies. But the only sting here comes from the harsh reality that too many young children can buy alcohol over the Internet.

Selling liquor to minors, or anyone, illegally, is simply wrong. It is bootlegging, and bootlegging is not protected by the commerce clause. Bootlegging is not cleansed by full page ads or media campaigns or by hiring public relations firms. You can dress it stylistically, but, in the end, just like Fitzgerald’s Jay Gatsby, a bootlegger is a bootlegger.

Mr. Speaker, our bill allows States simply to protect themselves from illegal alcohol sales. It also allows States to protect children, like my 11- and 8-year-old boys, from interstate bootleggers over the Internet, and it allows States to enforce the laws that they passed because of direction given them by the Twenty-First Amendment.

With that in mind, this bill allows State attorneys general to seek injunctive relief to stop illegal shipments of alcohol into their respective States. Nothing more, nothing less. This bill only affects those people who break liquor laws.

Now, you will have people coming up here today, saying some of these laws are not fair and saying some of these laws do not allow wineries to sell to this State or that State.

The bottom line is if you do not break the law, then this bill will not apply to you. If you play by the rules, you have nothing to worry about. Yet we are going to have red herrings piled high on this floor today, like we had in the Committee on the Judiciary. Opponents will distract. They will talk about fairness, they will talk about the commerce clause. They will talk about the Internet, trying to claim that this bill will destroy E-commerce in the 21st Century.

And get, the one E-commerce this will destroy in the 21st Century is illegal E-commerce. You can make the same arguments if you want to import pot from Amsterdam and say nobody can stop me from importing pot from Amsterdam, because doing so will compromise the future of E-commerce.

1145

That is laughable. If someone imports wine or alcohol legally, our bill is inapplicable. If they do it illegally, then all this does is allow States Attorneys General to bring the person to court, to get injunctive relief to stop illegal shipments.

Some people do not like that. They say it will destroy some wineries in California. We are going to have a lot of people from California talking today on the floor, talking about how small wineries are going to be destroyed.

Let me tell the Members something. Small wineries will only be destroyed if small wineries’ existence depends on the illegal sale of alcohol to minors and adults.

What needs to be understood is that this narrowly focused bill assures States that they have a course of action against bootleggers. They need to enforce their own alcohol laws to control out-of-State companies, many of whom have shown no interest in preventing the sales of alcohol to minors.

It would make clear that States have the right once again, under Webb-Kenyon that was passed 60 years ago, under the 21st amendment that was passed 56 years ago, under existing Supreme Court case law that has been ruled on over the past six decades, it will simply allow them to enforce these laws in the Constitution, and to use Federal courts to enforce their laws against individuals, against modern-day bootleggers who are illegally shipping alcohol products into States from other jurisdictions.

These direct shipments bypass a key part of the States’ control method, the face-to-face transaction, in order to sell their products at the highest possible profit margin.

This new black market in alcohol is dangerous. It is dangerous because, if left unchecked, it will ultimately frustrate the ability of States to regulate and control the shipment of alcoholic products, a responsibility mandated under the 21st amendment to the Constitution. It will also cut off the regulation, it will cut off any fees they collect, it will cut off tax revenue that States depend on to regulate alcohol inside their own border. That is the way we have set this up. That is the way we have set it up.

Mr. Speaker, it is very important today to ask those coming to the floor and opposing this bill, to ask the simple question: How does the bill affect people that play by the rules, that abide by the law, and that understand the Constitution and the constitutional amendments?

I think if we ask those direct questions, we will understand that this is something that needs to be passed to stop illegal interstate bootlegging, and to protect not only minors but to protect everybody from the scourge of illegal alcohol shipping across State lines.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. DELAHUNT. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the bill. As my friend, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. SCARBOROUGH) indicated, this bill is very simple, Mr. Chairman.

It does nothing more than to confer upon a State the right to go to Federal court to stop someone from outside the State from violating its liquor laws. It is nothing more, it is nothing less. It in no way changes substantive law at the State or Federal level.

The bill is necessary not only to prevent illegal shipments to minors, but to enable States to police licensing standards, track sales, and collect taxes on those sales.

Last year, illegal alcohol shipments cost States some $600 million in lost revenues. State taxes on alcohol are an important source of support for State programs, and protecting that funding stream is a legitimate State objective. Some who are opposed to this legislation argue that it would impede the development of electronic commerce by taxing the Internet, or chilling direct sales of wine and spirits over the Internet. Well, whatever the merits of chilled wine are, Mr. Chairman, there is no merit whatsoever to these arguments.

As my friend, the gentleman from Florida, pointed out, lawful sales of alcohol over the Internet are thriving. Such online enterprises as wineshopper.com, somwine.com, and virtualvineyard.com, generated hundreds of millions of dollars in lawful online sales last year alone.

Just last month, Geerlings & Wade of Massachusetts, which has endorsed this bill as the nation’s largest direct marketer of wines, announced another website called winebins.com, which will sell thousands of labels in the 27 States in which the company is operating, is licensed to operate. No doubt it will continue to add new labels.

Let us be clear, the bill would impose no new taxes on any of these electronic transactions, nor would it make them illegal. The State laws we seek to defend were put into place to regulate alcohol sales after the failure of Prohibition. In effect, they were the instrument by which an illegal enterprise, bootlegging, was turned into a lawful and regulated activity.

Some will argue that now these laws are an anachronism. Well, maybe they are correct. Maybe there is a better way for States to protect minors, track sales, ensure quality control, and to raise taxes. But that is an argument better addressed by State legislators, which have the power to rewrite those laws. Until they do so, they have a right to expect that the laws on the books will be enforced.

That is really what the legislation is all about. If we permit States to pass laws but then allow when those laws are broken, we encourage disrespect for the law. It is really that simple. That is why attorneys general from across the country support this legislation.

I include for the RECORD, Mr. Chairman, letters of support from the chief law enforcement officers of Alabama, Alaska, Arkansas, Colorado, Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Michigan, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, New Hampshire, North Carolina, North Dakota, Oregon, Utah, Virginia, West Virginia, Wyoming, and my own Commonwealth of Massachusetts. The letters referred to are as follows:

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE

Commonwealth of Virginia
Office of the Attorney General
Hon. LEE TERRY
House of Representatives
Washington, DC

DEAR Mr. TERRY: As the chief law enforcement officers of our respective states, we are pleased that on July 20 the Judiciary Committee voted overwhelmingly in favor of H.R. 2031, the 21st Amendment Enforcement Act, and understand that the House is expected to vote on this important legislation soon.

We are very concerned by media reports that opponents of this common sense, law and order legislation are raising superficial issues and misrepresenting the facts in an effort to defeat it, and would like to underscore the following points:

This is not anti-Internet legislation. There is no language or intent in the bill that could even be remotely construed to impede lawful Internet commerce in wine or any other consumer product. This bill does not even mention online sales. H.R. 2031 merely seeks to stop illegal alcohol distribution, regardless of how the order was placed—by computer, toll-free number, or by mail.

We strongly support online commerce for all legal products and want to encourage its growth to improve consumer choice and convenience. This goal is actually harmed, however, by those who distribute their products illegally. H.R. 2031 would not impose a burden on any manufacturer, wholesaler or retailer of alcohol beverages that is operating lawfully. In fact, it would still be possible to purchase alcohol over the Internet and have it shipped to a licensed distributor, where it could then be obtained.

This is a states’ rights issue. The 21st Amendment recognizes the right of each state to structure its laws accordingly, and as law enforcement officials we have an obligation to stand in strong opposition to businesses that ignore them. We are not asking for any new federal laws regarding the transportation or distribution of alcohol; we are merely asking for the power to enforce our own state laws recognized in the books.

None of us has a vested interest in the alcohol beverage industry beyond making sure that our alcohol-related laws are obeyed and that we have control over the distribution and sale of alcoholic beverages. H.R. 2031 will give us access to federal courts, thereby simplifying the legal process for prosecuting those who are distributing in our states illegally.

Sincerely,

MARK L. EARLEY, Attorney General of Virginia.
BILL PRIOR, Attorney General of Alabama.
BRUCE M. ROTELHO, Attorney General of Alaska.
MARK PRIOR, Attorney General of Arkansas.
KEN SALAZAR, Attorney General of Colorado.
THURBER E. BAKER, Attorney General of Georgia.
JIM TAYLOR, Attorney General of Illinois.
JEFFREY A. MOISSET, Attorney General of Indiana.
TOM MILLER, Attorney General of Iowa.
CARLA J. STOVALL, Attorney General of Kansas.
JENNIFER GRANHOLM, Attorney General of Michigan.
JOSEPH P. MAZUREK, Attorney General of Montana.
DON STENBERG, Attorney General of Nebraska.
FRANKIE SUZ DEL PAPA, Attorney General of Nevada.
PHILIP T. MCLAUGHLIN, Attorney General of New Hampshire.
MICHAEL F. EASLEY, Attorney General of North Carolina.
HEIDI HERKAMP, Attorney General of North Dakota.
HARRY MYERS, Attorney General of Oregon.
JAN C. O’BRIEN, Attorney General of Utah.
DARRELL V. MCGHAW, JR., Attorney General of West Virginia.
GAY WOODHOUSE, Attorney General of Wyoming.

STATE OF MICHIGAN DEPARTMENT OF ATTORNEY GENERAL
Detroit, MI, July 2, 1999.

Hon. JOHN CONYERS, House of Representatives, Longworth House O.B., Washington, DC.

DEAR CONGRESSMAN CONYERS: I am writing to ask that you support and co-sponsor H.R. 2031, a bill introduced by Congressman Scarborough, which will give my office the ability to better enforce our laws against underage access to alcohol, excise and sales tax collection and other restrictions on alcoholic beverage distribution and sale.

H.R. 2031 will allow states to file for federal court injunctions against out-of-state wineries and retailers who illegally bypass our state system and ship alcohol directly to consumers. These clandestine shipments make it easier for young people to obtain alcohol and make a mockery of our other alcoholic beverage laws. Recent court decisions in Utah and Florida make it clear that all states need this federal court access to ensure their ability to enforce their alcoholic beverage laws.

H.R. 2031 is common sense legislation that makes no change in current state law and makes no restrictions on Internet or catalogue sales. H.R. 2031 simply gives my office the tools we need to take against out-of-state interests that bypass our existing regulations and controls with impunity. As you may know, H.R. 2031 may be brought to the House floor in the next few days. I would appreciate your support of this bill.

Very truly yours,

JENNIFER M. GRANHOLM, Attorney General.
In addition to contacting my own state’s Congressional delegation in support of this amendment, I have written other attorneys general encouraging them to do the same. If anyone in your office has questions about this legislation, they can call Jonathan Anonymous at 844-786-4066. Thank you for your consideration of this matter.

Sincerely,

Mark L. Earley, Attorney General.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS,

Senor Edward M. Kennedy,
Russell Senate Office Building, Washington, DC.

Dear Ed Kennedy: I am writing to enlist your support for H.R. 2031, a bill introduced by Congressmen Scarborough, Delahunt, Sensenbrenner and Cannon, to provide State Attorneys General with the ability to seek federal injunctive relief against out-of-state alcohol distributors which ship alcohol directly to minors in contravention of state laws and regulations.

Specifically, H.R. 2031 allows states to file for federal injunctive relief where the Attorney General has reasonable cause to believe that an out-of-state entity is engaging in, or about to engage in, an act that would constitute a violation of a state law regulating the importation or transportation of alcohol. Shipments by alcohol distributors to minors provide our youth with the opportunity to obtain alcohol that is operating lawfully. As things stand, those companies that are doing business in a manner that respects the law are at a competitive disadvantage to those who are engaged in illegal tactics.

This amendment is not an attempt to change existing liquor laws; rather, it would simply give attorneys general the ability to enforce their state laws, whatever those laws may be. If an individual or entity can flout our state liquor laws without consequence, it erodes the very integrity of our state’s legislative authority.

In the fall of 1997, five Virginia college students died due to binge drinking related accidents. In response, my office launched a statewide task force to address the subject of college binge drinking. After speaking with students and parents who have been affected by alcohol abuse, I have made a personal commitment to fighting binge drinking among our young people, and I am convinced that curtailing the direct shipment of alcohol to minors is an important part of that effort.

Beyond college alcohol abuse, there are many other health and safety issues related to underage drinking. These concerns are shared by parents across the nation, in every state of the union. Attorneys general must have the enforcement tools needed to help combat this problem.

I urge you to support this important amendment, H.R. 2031, introduced by Congressmen Scarborough (R-FL), Delahunt (D-MA), and Sensenbrenner (R-WI). It will give attorneys general the option to use the federal court system for injunctive relief to stop the direct shipment of alcohol to minors and other violations of state liquor laws.

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE 19191

COMMONWEALTH OF PENNSYLVANIA,

Hon. Arlen Specter,
U.S. Senate, Hart Senate Office Building, Washington, DC.

Dear Senator Specter: I am writing to urge your support for H.R. 2031, the proposed “Twenty-First Amendment Enforcement Act.” This legislation, introduced by Congressmen Scarborough (R-FL), Delahunt (D-MA) and Sensenbrenner (R-WI), will help prevent illegal shipments of alcohol to minors, and the evasion of state tax laws.

The “Twenty-First Amendment Enforcement Act” would give state attorneys general access to federal courts to seek injunctive relief against individuals and businesses who violate state laws by shipping alcohol directly to consumers. These transactions, usually completed over the Internet, allow purchases to be made without adequate proof of age, giving minors easy access to alcohol.

It is important to note that this measure will have no impact on legitimate sales of alcoholic beverages by manufacturers, wholesale suppliers or retailers who operate within the parameters set by law. House Resolution 2031 merely gives the states a better opportunity to enforce their current liquor and tax laws.

The problem of underage drinking has been exacerbated by the explosion of Internet liquor sales. Passage of H.R. 2031 would provide a valuable tool with which state attorneys general can work to prevent the direct shipment of alcohol to minors. Again, I urge you to support this important legislation.

Very truly yours,

Mike Fisher,
Attorney General.

STATE OF UTAH,

Congressmember James V. Hansen,
House of Representatives, Rayburn Building, Washington, DC.

Dear Jim Hansen: I am writing to encourage you to support a bill that will be voted upon this week. H.R. 2031, introduced by Congressmen Scarborough, Delahunt, and Sensenbrenner, contains an amendment to help stop the illegal shipment of alcohol to minors and other violations of state liquor laws.

The amendment was first introduced last March by Senator Hatch, days after Utah secured a significant ruling in the Court of Appeals which asserted state jurisdiction of all violations of state liquor laws.

The amendment gives state attorneys general access to federal courts to seek injunctive relief against those who are violating their state laws. Passage of H.R. 2031 would provide our state with the enforcement tools needed to help combat this problem.

I urge you to support this important amendment.

Sincerely,

Tom Reilly,
Attorney General.

STATE OF NEBRASKA,

Congressman Bil Barrett,
Rayburn House Office Building, Washington, DC.

Dear Congressman Barrett: H.R. 2031 would give states access to federal courts to enforce their laws against illegal, direct shipping of alcoholic beverages. I urge you to support this bill.

Illegal, direct shipping of alcoholic beverages into the State of Nebraska undercuts our liquor wholesalers and retailers who are complying with the Liquor Control Act and who are paying applicable taxes, and creates a risk of alcohol shipment of underage persons.

A copy of H.R. 2031 is enclosed for your quick reference. As you can see it is a simple, common sense approach to a rapidly growing problem.

Yours truly,

Don Stenberg,
Attorney General.
Mr. Delahunt. Mr. Chairman, let me make no mistake, the online bootleggers who evade State alcohol control laws are hopefully not the future of electronic commerce. They are a throwback to a bygone era. Let us embrace e-commerce and do all we can to encourage it, but let us do it in a manner that respects the rule of law.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. Scarrow. Mr. Chairman, this legislation will allow State Attorneys General to seek Federal court injunctions against any out-of-State companies that illegally direct ship alcohol to consumers. These illegal direct shippers are bypassing State excise and sales taxes, operating without required licenses, and most appallingly, illegally selling alcohol to underage persons.

It is important to note what H.R. 2031 does not do. It does not change existing State laws, and makes no restrictions on legal Internet or catalog sales. It does not open the door to Internet tax-exoneration of those States regarding the regulation that damage coming forward, where secrets and very important military national security information was disclosed and made available to China, including information made available to China by companies seeking to exercise so-called free enterprise.

Free enterprise does not mean that corporations and companies in America can do whatever they want whenever they want with whom they want. They have to act responsibly, and they have to subject themselves to legitimate enforcement of State law.

The sale of alcohol to minors in particular States, and other laws within those States regarding the regulation of the sale of alcoholic beverages, is a long-standing authority recognized by the courts and by this Congress. As a matter of fact, in the Constitution itself, as the gentleman from Florida (Mr. Scarborough) indicated, is a legitimate area where there are going to be placed and have been placed some restrictions.

But that power is hollow if, in fact, companies are allowed, as they are doing now, to circumvent State law by Internet sales of alcohol in circumvention of and derogation of and flouting State laws.

This legislation that the gentleman from Florida has proposed, supported by the gentleman from Massachusetts, mandates nothing. It simply empowers those States who wish to exercise the power through their attorneys general, duly elected by the people of the several States, to enforce laws against the sale of alcoholic beverages in their State which are in violation of State laws. It does nothing more. It does nothing less.

We hope to keep the debate focused, Mr. Chairman, with regard to amendments that might be opposed on that fundamental power of States’ rights.

One certainly will see, as amendments are proposed, we suspect that it is commercial interests that are behind the amendments. Again, while all of us are very, very strong proponents of free enterprise, we also are proponents of States rights and to protect American families.

In an age where we are seeing far too much youth violence, for example, Mr. Chairman, I think we need to be especially mindful that our families all across America need to be empowered and need to be able to rely on the legitimate authorities that they have elected in their States, such as the attorneys general, to protect their children in those legitimate areas where State exercise of authority can, indeed, do so in regulation of alcohol; and sales of alcoholic beverages is one such area.

We will oppose any legislation. It is a very specific, very narrow, very limited response to a problem that has developed in recent years that is a very real problem. Again, to emphasize Mr. Chairman, while we are in favor of Internet sales, we are in favor of commerce generally between the States. This is a legitimate area long recognized by the Congress, by the courts, and by the legislatures of the several States for State regulation.

In order for that State regulation to be meaningful, the State attorneys general must have the power to enforce the interstate sale of alcoholic beverages in derogation of State laws. I urge support of this bill.

Mr. DELAHUNT. Mr. Chairman, I yield as much time as he may consume to the distinguished gentleman from California (Mr. THOMPSON).

Mr. THOMPSON of California. Mr. Speaker, it is unfortunate that this bill is on the floor today. This bill is no more than an attempt to advantage one industry group over another. It comes at a time when we should be working to find a solution to the problem, the problem of consumers not having access to the wines of their choice because distributors are unable to service the growth in small wineries.

In 1963, there were 375 wineries. Today, in 1999, there are 2,000 wineries. In 1963, we had 10,900 distributors. Today, we have 300 distributors. This is the problem. This is why small wineries and consumers who want to buy premium wine from small wineries are looking for other available places in order to purchase it.

There is an Amador Foothill grower in California that was interviewed by the press; and he said, “A lot of large distributors look on wineries of our size as a nuisance. They cannot sell much of our wine. And the larger wineries are banking on them to sell 10 percent more each year, so they do not have time to sell small premium wines.”

That is the problem. This problem is not about kids buying wine in cyberspace. As a matter of fact, that argument does not even pass the giggle test. The fact of the matter is, teenage Internet users this Summer are not going in to be purchasing premium Cabernet wine from my district, from anywhere from $40 to $150 a bottle.

Everyone has been able to see through this clever cover. As a matter of fact, two of the original supporters of this idea, the Mothers Against Drunk Driving and the Emergency Room Nurses have withdrawn their support. The Mothers Against Drunk Driving stated that, in fact, this is a battle between various elements within the alcohol beverage industry. They go on to say that they are dismayed that the industry would go this far or go to such lengths to misrepresent their views.

We have given the National Council on State legislatures is opposed to this measure. They have been working on this issue for the past couple of years, and they see some progress being made. Last week, they voted 41 to 7 in opposition to this legislation. They, too, understand it is a turf issue and have asked this Congress not to interfere.

The Wall Street Journal just editorialized against this, citing it as “an obstacle to interstate commerce of precisely the type the Founders intended to prohibit.” The Journal goes on to say and to warn that “Today wine; tomorrow any out-of-State competition that some local interest with campaign money did not want to deal with.”

I also want to point out that this bill deals with all liquor violations, not just the ones that were mentioned by the supporters of the bill.

Attorneys General across this Nation could take all and any liquor violation regarding importation and transportation to the Federal courts. This is true even in States that allow direct shipment of wine.

Oklahoma, for example, has a limited personal importation. However, they disallow any transaction on Memorial Day, Labor Day, or Election Day. So if one transports an alcoholic beverage in Oklahoma on the day of a special election to pass a school bond, one could find oneself in Federal court.

Wyoming has a law that prohibits the sale of private labeled wines. So if one sells or transports private labeled wines in Wyoming, it could be Federal court.

Now, the supporters will tell us that this is farfetched; that an Attorney General would not do that. I want to tell my colleagues that it is no more farfetched than the supporters’ claims that kids are buying high-priced premium wine over the Internet.

Most troubling, Mr. Chairman, is the fact that one of the coauthors of this bill has informed me that small wineries are allowed, as they are going to be disenfranchised because, in the end, the distributors will go online and sell online themselves.

I cannot understand why direct sales can be harmful to one industry, the small wineries, but then be good in their eyes for the distributors who are trying to sell these wines.

Finally, I want to point out that this bill has had no public input. It was rushed to the floor. It was a markup in the Committee on the Judiciary. The public has not been able to speak. Small wineries have not been able to speak. Consumers have not been able to speak. That is particularly troubling, given the long list of amendments that we are looking at today on the bill.

One of the amendments, I understand, is going to provide immunity for Internet service providers. What does this mean, that Yahoo can go online and sell wine direct in States that prohibit the direct sale of alcoholic beverages? I think this is a huge loophole, and it is one that the supporters of this bill were not counting on.

There was also a great deal of discussion about the loss of tax revenue. I can tell my colleagues that, without an analysis of this bill, I do not know how one can ascertain what the impact, the economic impact of this bill would be one way or the other.

I also want to point out that there are a couple of local laws that could end up landing their constituents in Federal court. Indiana allows a person to bring one bottle of wine home per trip every time they come back to Indiana. If one brings back two bottles of wine, it could be Federal court.

Maryland allows one bottle at a time, but not more than two bottles per calendar month. What if someone visits the Virginia wine country three times over the course of the month and brings back three bottles of wine? They are subject to Federal court.

Right here in D.C., you can bring back four bottles of wine. If one visits Virginia wine country or my district in...
Mr. THOMPSON of California. I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from California.

Mr. THOMPSON of California. Mr. Chairman, has the gentleman from California any idea of what he is doing? I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from California (Ms. WOOLSEY).

Ms. WOOLSEY. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong opposition to this legislation that would criminalize the efforts of the small wineries in my district in responding to their consumers.

This bill is a wolf in sheep's clothing. It is not about State's rights, it is not about combating the problem of underage drinking. Instead, this bill is about wholesalers and distributors that do not want small wineries to move into their turf.

Make no mistake, I firmly believe that we have a national obligation to take care of our children and protect them from threats to their health and safety. Nobody speaks more to that than I do. Too many young people are starting to drink at an early age leading to alcohol and other substance abuse problems. That is why I have fought so strongly in this Congress to support the passage of zero tolerance legislation for underage drinking and driving.

But this legislation does not address that pressing issue. In fact, Mothers Against Drunk Driving, MADD, will not even endorse this bill. That is because they recognize this bill for what it is: A power grab by wholesalers and distributors.

This power grab involves a 65-year-old regulatory scheme that grew out of prohibition and stands on three legs: Politics, policy, and profits. Through the three-tier system, manufacturers are required to sell their beer, wine, and liquor to licensed wholesalers who are the sole suppliers for stores, bars and restaurants, sports arenas, and other retailers. They have got it all tied up and they do not want to give any of that up.

But guess what, this distribution system does not work for consumers who want to access hard-to-find good wines from small wineries. The wineries in my district in Sonoma and Marin Counties, just north of the Golden Gate Bridge, produce some of the world’s finest wines, and we will have to say Napa too, because that is where my colleague, the gentleman from California (Mr. THOMPSON) is from but many of them cannot get their products to markets the traditional ways.

Wholesalers and distributors will not carry their products because the wineries are not big enough. These winemakers now are joining the point-and-click world of Internet commerce to get their products directly to the consumers. So, do not inhibit their ability to sell their product.

At another time support efforts to ensure that children and teenagers do not buy alcoholic beverages directly from the Coast Guard; it is not the day to address that. Vote against H.R. 2031.

Mr. SCARBOROUGH. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 4 minutes.

The gentleman has made that alcohol sales to minors over the Internet is not a real problem. In fact, one individual stood up and said that I was clever in using this as a front. I thank him for calling me clever, but I am not clever enough to have about 30 news stations across the country running stories specifically on minors purchasing alcohol over the Internet.

WBRC–TV in Birmingham; WIAH–TV in Birmingham; KFMO in Phoenix, Arizona; KSAT in San Antonio; WUSA–CBS in Washington; WPEC in West Palm Beach; WPLG in Miami; WWSB in Sarasota, Florida; WICS in Springfield, Illinois, a three-part series; WEVV–TV in Evansville, Indiana, a two-part series; WBFF in Baltimore; stations also in Boston; Lansing, Michigan; Greenville, Mississippi; Syracuse, New York; Charlotte, North Carolina; Columbus, Ohio; Cleveland, Ohio; Oklahoma City; Philadelphia; Lancaster, Pennsylvania; Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania; Providence, Rhode Island; Spartanburg, South Carolina; Amarillo, Texas, a three-part series; San Antonio; Salt Lake City; Norfolk; Seattle; Green Bay; WISC, Wisconsin; WMVT, Wiscogna, New Morning News; Hard Copy; NWCN–TV cable news in Seattle; and ZDTV cable news have all done stories on illegal sales of alcohol to minors over the Internet.

While I yield myself 4 minutes for say- ing I am clever and suggesting that I would be resourceful enough to set up such a media explosion on this happening from coast to coast, but regretfully I would have to disagree with the gentleman and say I am not quite that clever.

Also, regarding the question of no public input, I sat through the Committee on the Judiciary hearings and can report we heard all the input we could get in about 6 or 7 hours. There have been 2 other days and two other committee hearings over the past several years where this issue has been debated over and over and over again.

In all it comes down to is the fact that there are some people that want to allow small businesses to sell wine illegally over the Internet. I want to be able to have my rich Republican supporters to be able to purchase the finest wine from Napa valley, or purchase the finest wine from Sausalito, a beautiful region I recently visited. I have nothing against that. It just has to be legal.

And it does not matter how small the winery is, it does not matter how fine the wine is, it does not matter how strong my wine lovers in my district may support my colleagues in their districts, or how strong the wine is, it does not matter how fine wineries stay afloat, while at the same time helping to satisfy a growing consumer demand for smaller, lesser-known wines produced in this country. They have fine products, but they do not have the money and the know-how to get it into the stores.

Finally, technology has given them the opportunity to break through these barriers and to be able to sell their products, subject to State law. Now, we know that one of the things that Congress wants to do is to get government out of the lives of people, especially the Federal Government, and we do not have a lot of attorneys general pleading, knocking down our doors and saying, for God’s sake come in here and provide oversight for us.

If we are going to start doing this with wine, there is no reason why we do not start controlling competition in books and recordings and in clothing and taking away the very same technology that is pumping up our economy and allowing people to be able to get their wares to the marketplace.

Mr. SCARBOROUGH. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 30 seconds just to respond.

There is a big difference between books and liquor. Amazon.com can still continue to sell books. There is nothing in the Constitution regarding the importance of books. There is nothing in the Constitution regarding the Twenty-First Amendment, which says it is going to be the province of the States to regulate alcohol sales. So there is a big difference.

Regarding guns, guns can also be shipped, they just have to be shipped legally.

Mr. RANGEL. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from California (Mr. RADANOVICH). We violently disagree on this issue, but he is a good friend, nonetheless.

Mr. RADANOVICH. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time on this issue, even though I oppose this legislation.

I am not a lawyer. I am not a small winery owner. I am not a wine aficionado. I am one of more than 2,000 wineries in about 47 States, however, only 50 wines are available in a typical retail marketplace. More specifically, about 20 wineries produce 90 percent of all the wine produced. Despite this, sales of regional or limited availability wines, of which there are perhaps over 10,000 labels, have grown. Unfortunately, at the same time the traditional distribution avenues have decreased from over 20,000 wholesalers to fewer than 400.

These wholesalers are not sufficient to handle the shipment and delivery of wines from numerous small producers. Direct mail and the Internet, on the other hand, have caused some small wineries stay afloat, while at the same time helping to satisfy a growing consumer demand for smaller, lesser-known wines produced in this country.

The reason H.R. 2031 is proposed is to stop these alternative avenues to market in favor of existing monopolistic wholesalers. The Twenty-First Amendment to the Constitution is not an absolute divestment of Federal power of the States. The U.S. Supreme Court has long established that the amendment has its limits and must be considered in the context of the constitutional provisions, including Congress’ exclusive right to regulate interstate commerce.

Proponents of this legislation claim that it is necessary to curb the delivery of alcohol products to underage purchasers. I believe that there are few more important causes than to stem the tide of underage drinking in this country, however, I am convinced that direct shipment of wine, beer, and spirits does not contribute to the problem.

The two States with the highest consumption of wines, California and New York, have long permitted interstate shipments over the phone or by mail. Surely if these mechanisms were inherently open to abuse the authorities in those States would have discovered that by now, but they have not.

I am sure we can all remember when we were kids, when we were teenagers in high school and we stole our dad’s credit card to order a $200 case of premium wine over the phone to have parties with our friends 30 days down the line. And in the meantime, 38 percent of those kids who go into retail stores in the District of Columbia to purchase beer over the counter succeed. So my advice to those that are so concerned about underage purchasers is to focus their direction where the problem really is. The issue is not an issue under this piece of legislation.

The National Conference of State Legislatures recently passed a resolution that opposed legislation which allowed Federal interference in the purchase and delivery of wine across State borders. Forty-one States joined in the passage of the resolution, with only 7 States supporting this attempt to Federalize the laws. The Federal Government should not empower States to engage in this kind of activity. This is monoply protection at its best. And even those wineries can ship into approximately 12 States now, they will through the support of the attorneys general, limit that as well.

I am a California farmer. In 1982, I established a small vineyard and winery in the Sierrra foothill community of Mariposa, my hometown. The Radanovich Winery, which produces Sauvignon blanc, Chardonnay, Merlot, Zinfandel and Cabernet Sauvignon, has grown to over 4,000 cases annually.

Like most wineries, mine is small. Of the more than 3,500 wineries in this country, only 50 are available in a typical retail marketplace. More specifically, about 20 wineries produce 90% of all the wine produced. Despite this, sales of regional or limited availability wine—of which there are perhaps over ten thousand labels—have grown. Unfortunately, traditional distribution avenues are insufficient for the shipment and delivery of wines from these numerous small producers. Direct mail, the Internet and other alternative forms of distribution have helped these small wineries stay afloat, while at the same time helping to satisfy the growing consumer demand for smaller, lesser known wines produced in this country.

Grape growing is a very important agricultural crop, the largest crop in California and the sixth largest crop in the nation. Over 60% of the grape crop is used in the production of wine. The resulting wine industry in total annually contributes over $45 billion to the American economy; provides 556,000 jobs, accounting for $12.8 billion in wages; and pays $3.3 billion in state and local tax revenues. In addition, wine is our third largest horticultural export. Wine is commercially produced in 47 states.

Consumers in every state should be able to obtain access to a wide variety of wines, especially the wines of small producers who lack the distribution channels of the major wine producers in this nation. To meet these consumer needs, I point to the 20 states which have chosen to enact limited interstate shipments directly from winery to consumer or retailer to consumer. Intransate direct shipments are legal in 30 states. I also direct your attention to recently passed “shipper permit” legislation in New Hampshire and Louisiana and to the special order system developed and implemented by the Pennsylvania state liquor monopoly. I am concerned that passage of the proposed legislation would have a chilling effect on efforts underwritten to lift creative state-by-state solutions as these.

Legislation to allow states to bring to Federal court an action to enjoin shipment or transportation of liquor in violation of the laws of a particular state would have the unintended consequence of crippling small wineries in this country. The proposed legislation does much more than simply providing a remedy for a violation of the Webb-Kenyon statute that generally governs states authority over interstate shipments. I fear that it will authorize discriminatory state barriers to interstate commerce, which will be used to favor in-state commercial interests to the detriment of out-of-state wine producers. The Commerce Clause protects against state imposed barriers to free trade. That protection should apply to wineries as well as all other businesses.

The twenty-first amendment to the Constitution is not an absolute divestment of Federal power to the States. The U.S. Supreme Court has long established that the amendment has its limits and must be considered in the context of other constitutional provisions, including Congresses exclusive right to regulate interstate commerce.

Further, existing remedies are available for violations of liquor laws. In the case of wine (as with harder liquors) there is an underlying federal permit which is required to operate a winery. That permit is subject to oversight by the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, and requires conformance to applicable laws. There have been successful compliance actions through this mechanism. An additional mechanism is not necessary.

Professor Jesse H. Choper, a distinguished scholar in the field of constitutional law from the University of California has written expressing his concerns about the possible consequences of Federal legislation in this area. Professor Choper concludes that the proposed legislation would violate the Commerce Clause protection against barriers to free trade among the states, by allowing states, rather than the Congress, to establish those barriers.

I am also concerned that the thrust of this legislation is to allow states to use the Federal courts to obtain direct jurisdiction over small wineries located in other states in a manner which invites abuse of the court system and a trampling of the rights of out-of-state citizens in order to satisfy the demands of politically powerful local interests. Allowing the federal courts to be used as enforcement machinery for state action seems to me a huge expansion of federalism and a very dangerous precedent.

Proponents of this legislation claim it is necessary to curb the delivery of alcohol product to underage purchasers. I believe that there are few more important causes than to stem the rise of underage drinking in this country. A Health and Human Services survey reflects that more than half of 18-20 year olds were drinking alcohol in the month prior to the survey, and an astonishing quarter of that age group have engaged in binge drinking during the same period.

However, I am convinced that direct shipment of wine, beer or spirits does not contribute to the problem. The two states with the highest consumption of wines—California and New York—have long permitted Intransate shipments ordered by phone or mail. Surely, if such mechanisms were inherently open to abuse the authorities in those states would have discovered that by now. But they have not.

Manuel Espinoza, Chief Deputy Director of the California Alcoholic Beverage Control agency has written to Congressman Thompson and myself that as a result of remote sales of alcohol in California, a practice that has been legal for almost fifty years, the state has experienced no enforcement problems or impediments in its ability to enforce laws related to sales to minors. California has only received one complaint about the delivery of alcohol to underage recipients via interstate mail orders. That complaint originated from a private organized “sting” and subsequent investigation determined that the actual delivery, though left at the door, was accepted by the minor’s mother.

Another concern raised by proponents is the avoidance of state excises taxes by interstate shippers. There is no indication that taxes avoided by shippers constitute a significant loss of revenue to any state. It is estimate that interstate direct shipments consist primarily of ultra premium wine and never constitute more than one-half of one percent of a state’s total wine volume. For the entire country, a tax loss of that magnitude would be $2 million annually. For the State of Maryland, even if it were to allow direct shipment of wine, annual tax losses at full volume would be less than $250,000 per year.

To address even this minuscule problem, forty-one members of California’s Congressional delegation have written to the Advisory Commission on Electronic Commerce requesting that the Commission address this problem when it examines means to ensure the fair imposition of consumption, sales and use taxes arising from remote sales of all products, a far more significant revenue problem estimated to involve many billions of dollars in lost revenue. Congress established this Commission for just such a purpose, and this member suggests that we wait for the report we requested of them.

Legislation which preempts the Advisory Commission on Electronic Commerce regarding reaching its ear is an anomaly in regulation of the Internet before the Commission has done its work. We are moving into an arena that all of us have not had the opportunity to think through, and our narrow attempts with wine may end up with far-reaching impacts on the sale of anything through the Internet. That is why Andy Sernovitz, the President of the Association for Interactive Media (AIM) a 300 member Internet trade group, said; “If they can stop you from selling wine on the Internet, books and music are next.\textsuperscript{9} State laws, the National Conference on State Legislatures recently passed a resolution that opposed legislation which allowed federal interference in the purchase and delivery of wine across state borders.\textsuperscript{10} Forty-one states joined in passing that resolution, with only 7 states supporting this bodies attempt to federalize state laws.

Mr. Chairman, I am not convinced there is an urgent national problem which needs to be solved by allowing virtually unprecedented use of federal courts to solve state problems which can be addressed by state legislative and judicial means. States can make it a crime for a person under 21 to attempt to purchase alcohol. Most have. Why don't the Attorneys general in the states prosecute their own citizens when they violate state laws? Rather than the proposed legislation, alternatives include legislation which would encourage the development of open markets so that consumers can have access to the products which they wish to purchase.

I close by quoting for you from a letter by Florida Attorney General Robert Butterworth urging the veto of a bill making direct inter-state shipment of wine to a Florida consumer a felony: “[The bill] is the perfect tool for the vested interests who seek additional control over the marketplace, at the expense of competition and consumer choice.”

The federal government should not empower states to engage in anti-competitive actions favoring their in-state businesses. The federal government should not use the power of the courts to suppress competition. The federal government should not expand its reach into the private purchases of consumers, or the activities of the small businesses, which make up the largest part of the wine business.

Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman once again for yielding me this time, but I must ask my colleagues to join me in opposing the bill.

Mr. DELAHUNT. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. Barrett.)

Mr. BARRETT of Wisconsin. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman from Massachusetts for yielding me the time.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the 21st Amendment Enforcement Act, which will help States such as my home State of Wisconsin crack down on the illegal shipment of alcoholic beverages.

But I am concerned that today’s debate is being framed as an effort to restrict E-commerce. Ironically, this bill does not even mention Internet and would have no effect on the direct shipment of alcohol and other products just as long as those shipments comply with State law.

The issue today is whether a State should have the right to take action against a company that violates the law of that State by shipping alcohol directly to the customer.

The 21st Amendment to the Constitution repealed prohibition but gave each State the right to regulate the sale of alcoholic beverages. Direct sales, whether over the Internet, by phone, or through the mail, violate the laws of certain States, make it easier for children to obtain alcohol, and drain needed tax revenue. This bill merely gives these States an additional tool to stop a practice that is already illegal.

Commerce over the Internet continues to grow at an incredible rate, and Congress should do nothing to discourage fair growth. But companies in one State should not be able to disregard the laws of another State in an effort to reach new customers.

I urge my colleagues to cast a vote for fair Internet commerce and for States’ rights by passing the 21st Amendment Enforcement Act.

Mr. SCARBOROUGH. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Washington (Mr. Nethercutt) another friend and classmate with whom I disagree today.

Mr. NETHERCUTT. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman from Florida for his gracious yielding of time even though we disagree on this.

My colleagues, I think this is a legislation that is ill-advised. And I commend to the sponsors and the managers today, the gentlemen from Florida, Massachusetts, and Georgia, to the National Conference of State Legislatures vote which occurred on July 29, just a few days ago, by a vote of 41-7.

Forty-one States oppose H.R. 2031, including Massachusetts, Georgia, and Florida. These State legislators who made this judgment believe that the direct shipping issue should be resolved at the State and local levels of government. And so I ask that there be a disconnection here between the perceived problem, as I see it, by the sponsors and an actual problem.

I come from a State and represent a district, Washington State, and the Fifth Congressional District, where we have emerging small wineries who do direct customer transfers and shipments. They are not trying or do not violate the law. But there is a chilling effect that this legislation would have on it on this emerging business.

It is clear that this is a job loser to the extent that there is a restriction on these emerging companies over the Internet. What they do and what they have explained to me very clearly is there is a very complicated process they must go through in order to ship a bottle of wine or a case of wine from manufacturer A to customer B in another State.

The Federal Express transfer company has to make sure there is a signature on the other end from an adult over the age of 18 able to buy this kind of product. And if not, it has to be sent back. So it is the shipper and the shipping company that is the most at risk.

So I urge my colleagues to reject this bill.

Mr. DELAHUNT. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Tennessee (Mr. Gordon).

Mr. GORDON. Mr. Chairman, as I have listened to the debate this morning, I have discovered that there has been an abundance of debate on pros and cons of this legislation, contradictory pros and cons.

However, there has been one common denominator. That common denominator is that no one wants to see the Internet used to encourage alcohol abuse by minors. So the real question before us today is how can we stop the Internet from being used or being misused as a vehicle for alcohol abuse by minors?

After reviewing this legislation, it seems to me that there is a better way, that legislation, they try to overstep and that a better approach would be requiring sellers and shippers to clearly label packages as containing alcohol and that they obtain proof that the recipient is of legal drinking age.

I am co-sponsoring legislation to do that and would suggest that is a better approach.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Florida (Mr. Scoborough) has 3 minutes remaining. The gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. Delahunt) has 7½ minutes remaining.

Mr. DELAHUNT. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentlewoman from California (Mrs. Capss).

Mrs. CAPPS. Mr. Chairman, I thank my colleague for yielding me the time.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong opposition to H.R. 2031. This legislation would restrict interstate commerce and limit consumers’ choices throughout the country. It would also seriously discourage fair growth. But companies in one State should not be able to disregard the laws of another State in an effort to reach new customers.

We have listened to the debate this morning to hear that there is a disconnection here between the perceived problem, as I see it, by the sponsors and an actual problem.

I come from a State and represent a district, Washington State, and the Fifth Congressional District, where we have emerging small wineries who do direct customer transfers and shipments. They are not trying or do not violate the law. But there is a chilling effect that this legislation would have on it on this emerging business.

It is clear that this is a job loser to the extent that there is a restriction on these emerging companies over the Internet. What they do and what they have explained to me very clearly is there is a very complicated process they must go through in order to ship a bottle of wine or a case of wine from manufacturer A to customer B in another State.

The Federal Express transfer company has to make sure there is a signature on the other end from an adult over the age of 18 able to buy this kind of product. And if not, it has to be sent back. So it is the shipper and the shipping company that is the most at risk.

So I urge my colleagues to reject this bill.
Mr. Chairman, in opposition to the bill of the gentleman and in the interest of full and complete disclosure, I have got to tell my colleagues that I am an avid wine enthusiast and that my wife and I took our honeymoon vacation to the wineries of California, and we have enjoyed our subsequent visits there. But I will tell my colleagues, Mr. Chairman, this is not just an issue that affects California but one that impacts Texas, Oregon, Washington, Virginia, New York. And my own beloved State of Missouri is home to many family-run wineries whose intentions are not criminal.

Instead, these small businesses attempt to satisfy long-time repeat customers and cultivate new ones, those who have left those well-worn tourist paths and have chosen to adventure experience the adventure and hospitality of a small but friendly winery. These long-time family businesses in my district, one dating back to 1855, nonetheless depend on E-commerce, a way to attract new business and survive alongside the large wholesalers.

Mr. Chairman, this bill, in my belief, is unnecessary. I have listened and I have accepted the invitation of my friend from Florida, and I have listened to the debate; and I have got to tell my colleagues that I am unmoved by arguments offered by the proponents that underage drinking is a serious problem, that minors are searching the Internet for base-price bottles of Bordeaux to binge with their friends on their parents’ next night out. I am struck, however, by the apparent inconsistency and apparent immorality of those who are leading the charge in favor of this measure.

A few weeks ago, the gentleman from Georgia, we were leading the charge, a very emotional debate, about the availability of alcohol. And we were discussing whether further restrictions were needed. Many argued against further intrusions claiming appropriately, in my view, that additional gun laws were in violation of the rights of law-abiding citizens.

Here is my question: If gun manufacturers are immune from civil liability in the case of criminal conduct committed by a violent felon who has purchased a firearm, and I support that immunity, then how can we hold vintners responsible for the unlawful purchases of wine? I urge the defeat.

The CHAIRMAN. Both gentlemen have 30 seconds remaining. The manager of the bill has the right to close.

Mr. GOODLATTE. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. BARR).

Mr. BARR of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding me the time.

Mr. Chairman, this particular analogy just put forth by the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. HULSHOF) with gun liability is completely misplaced.

Mr. Chairman, this particular analogy is not something that anybody should or should not be immune from ultimate illegal use of the alcohol, such as the drunk driver. This bill simply goes to the shipping into the State in violation of an existing State law. Now, if those States, and we have heard from a number of Members that are speaking for the wineries, if those States have a disagreement with a particular alcoholic restrictive law of a particular State, then their remedy short is going to be for State legislators and change the State laws that relate to how liquor can be brought into and distributed within that State.

But again, to make perfectly clear, and let us remove the clouds of the gun statute and the commerce debate here, this is a bill that simply empowers attorneys general of the States to seek injunctive relief to stop shippers, large or small, from shipping into their State in violation of State laws. It does not affect the legal sale or distribution of the drink.

I urge support of the bill.

Mr. DELAHUNT. Mr. Chairman, I yield 30 seconds to the gentleman from Oregon (Mr. DEFAZIO).

Mr. DEFAZIO of Oregon. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for the generous grant of time.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the bill. Where in this bill do we target or state explicitly that what we are doing is going after underage purchasers of wine over the Internet or microweb over the Internet?

This is a very broad bill. The target is much larger than underage drinking and access to alcohol. They are still going to go down to the concern and give the guy an extra couple of bucks who is a bad guy to go into the store and buy the stuff. They are not going to do it over the Internet and buy an expensive case of wine. That is not what we are after here. We are trying to close down the small wineries and breweries.

Mr. SCARBOROUGH of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, how much time do I have remaining?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Florida (Mr. SCARBOROUGH) has 1½ minutes remaining. The gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. DELAHUNT) has 2 minutes remaining.

Mr. DELAHUNT. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, I think the point has been made again and again that this particular proposal has nothing whatsoever to do with impeding the growth of E-commerce in the sale of wine or any spirits or alcohols.

What it has to do is with respect to State laws. The fact and the reality is that we should be here to respect and provide an opportunity to States that do not affect the legal shipped capacity and ability to enforce their own laws.

Now, the gentleman from New York (Mr. RANGEL) spoke to the issue of...
Mr. SCARBOROUGH. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume. I would just like to say in closing, again bringing up what I brought up at the very beginning of the debate. We can talk about a lot of different things, we can throw red herrings in front of the people in this Chamber, but in the end the dividing line of this bill is between legal alcohol sales and illegal alcoholic sales.

We have had some people who are angry because they say we are trying to destroy local wineries. Again, the only local wineries that will be destroyed will be the local wineries whose very existence depends on illegal sales, because their legal sales will not be affected. We have people that are angry because we are not limiting this to merely people under 21 years of age. Their argument seems to be that if you are 21 years old and 1 day, then illegal alcoholic sales are so devoted to fighting underage drinking, you would think they would have joined forces with me. Instead, they fought tooth and nail against establishing an effective effort to combat illegal alcohol use by teenagers.

Not only is this bill bad policy, it’s also anti-business. As small vintners in California and across the nation seek innovative ways to promote their quality product, they are naturally looking for new opportunities. Among the innovations presented by the Internet. This bill would work directly against such marketing and trade opportunities.

Direct access has been a long-standing problem for the 1,600 family-owned wineries who compete with the 10 mega-wineries that produce 90% of the wine in the United States. Wholesalers cannot supply all of the unique wines available from smaller wineries to the majority of consumers and thus, these small wineries are excluded from the national market. The Internet is a vital sales tool for the small wineries to directly promote their wines to consumers.

H.R. 2031’s proponents contend that it will address the problem of illegal sales to minors without seriously supporting cracking down on underage drinking, but this bill does nothing to address this serious problem. Rather, H.R. 2031 is nothing more than an intra-industry battle between liquor wholesalers and Internet liquor retailers. Under the guise of protecting minors from Internet alcohol sales, this bill’s true intent is to tie up Internet liquor retailers in federal litigation.

Supporters of this legislation have failed to provide evidence of any wide-spread problem with illegal, under-age Internet alcohol sales. In fact, in California, we have had telephone and mail-ordered wine deliveries since 1963 and our law enforcement agencies report they have not encountered problems with these deliveries. Moreover, legitimate concerns over underage Internet purchases of alcohol have been adequately addressed by the industry’s practice of verifying the identity of Internet purchasers through the use of credit card payments and requiring the signature of persons over the age of 21 for receipt.

Finally, state and federal enforcement mechanisms already exist to address illegal alcohol sales. H.R. 2031 will add a duplicative and unnecessary layer to already existing law.

I find it ironic that one of the chief proponents of this bill, the National Beer Wholesalers Association, actively opposed my efforts to include language in the Treasury-Postal Appropriations Bill to include underage drinking in the billion-dollar anti-drug media campaign administered by the Office of National Drug Control Policy. If the National Beer Wholesalers are so devoted to fighting underage drinking, one would think they would have joined forces with me. Instead, they fought tooth and nail against establishing an effective effort to combat illegal alcohol use by teenagers.

As small vintners in California and across the nation seek innovative ways to promote their quality product, they are naturally looking for new opportunities. Among the innovations presented by the Internet. This bill would work directly against such marketing and trade opportunities.

Direct access has been a long-standing problem for the 1,600 family-owned wineries who compete with the 10 mega-wineries that produce 90% of the wine in the United States. Wholesalers cannot supply all of the unique wines available from smaller wineries to the majority of consumers and thus, these small wineries are excluded from the national market. The Internet is a vital sales tool for the small wineries to directly promote their wines to consumers.
“(2) NOTICE.—No preliminary injunction or permanent order to enjoin or other order may be issued under paragraph (1) without notice to the adverse party and an opportunity for a hearing.

(3) FORM AND SCOPE OF ORDER.—Any preliminary or permanent injunction or other order entered in an action brought under this section shall—

(A) set forth the reasons for the issuance of the order;

(B) be specific in its terms;

(C) describe in reasonable detail, and not by reference to the complaint or other document, the act or acts sought to be restrained;

(D) be binding upon—

(i) the parties to the action and the officers, agents, employees, and attorneys of such parties; and

(ii) persons in active concert or participation with the parties to the action who receive actual notice of the order by personal service or otherwise.

(4) ADDITIONAL REMEDIES.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Aside from any other remedy allowed by law.

(2) STATE COURT PROCEEDINGS.—Nothing in this section may be construed to prohibit an authorization of the official proceeding in State court on the basis of an alleged violation of any State law.”.

SEC. 2. EFFECTIVE DATE; APPLICATION OF AMENDMENT.

(a) EFFECTIVE DATE.—Except as provided in subsection (b), this Act and the amendment made by this Act shall take effect on the date of the enactment of this Act.

(b) APPLICATION OF AMENDMENT.—The amendment made by this Act shall apply only to new laws, regulations, or orders relating to commerce and not to the enforcement of applicable laws, not against communications companies used by these service providers for the actions of third parties. The approach of this bill is to allow the Communications and Internal Revenue Service to block Internet sites can seriously disrupt lawful Internet communications and slow the operations of a service provider’s network for all users.

Mr. Chairman, if we do not adopt this amendment, we risk needless legal uncertainty and pointless litigation against Internet service providers and other communications companies. The amendment has the support of groups such as America Online, the Commerce Internet Exchange, Prodigy, PSI Net, BellSouth and Bell Atlantic.

Mr. Chairman, aiming injunctive relief at the individual engaged in the commercial activity we are concerned about, not the offending company, is a common-sense solution. Unlike the seller or transporter engaged in an illegal transaction, the communications company has no idea what States the transaction affects and is not in a position to tailor the transaction to comply with the different laws of 50 States. Furthermore, Internet service providers and other communications companies are in no position to monitor the conduct of their users or to prevent transactions. Indeed, enforcement approaches such as injunction to block Internet sites can seriously disrupt lawful Internet communications and slow the operations of a service provider’s network for all users.

Mr. Chairman, I urge my colleagues to adopt the tech-friendly, common-sense solution and pass this amendment.

Mr. DELAHUNT. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the amendment. I want to applaud the gentleman from Virginia and the gentleman from California. I concur that this is an amendment that is needed and it addresses a problem. I support the amendment.

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I wish to thank the author of the bill to offer the sanctions from Florida (Mr. SCARBOROUGH) and the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. GOODLATTE) who just offered this amendment for their excellent work in support not only of the main purpose of the law but also in another area, and that is, Internet freedom. Internet freedom from regulation and Internet freedom from taxation so that that dynamic medium can continue to grow and prosper.

The amendment’s language makes it clear that search engines, Internet service providers, web hosting services and other interactive computer services will not be adversely affected by this bill. In addition, the bill makes it clear, as presently written with this amendment, that it is for the enforcement of the 21st amendment that we are granting State attorneys general the power to enter Federal court. This is not the beginning of a slippery slope in which new laws can be written to regulate or tax the Internet under the guise of regulating alcoholic beverage transactions. To the contrary, it is the 21st amendment which will control, and the Supreme Court has told us that... the 21st amendment did not have the effect of repealing the interstate commerce clause. Rather, States are free to regulate within their boundaries the sale, distribution and production of alcoholic beverages and the importation of alcoholic beverages produced and sold elsewhere in order to promote temperance, in order to maintain their status as dry States or even counties to be dry counties, to promote those social purposes behind the 21st amendment. But in doing so, in vindicating the purposes of the 21st amendment, a State cannot discriminate as to economic protectionism against other sellers, other producers in the rest of the United States. I think that this language that is agreed upon all around makes it clear so that today what we are talking about is alcohol, we are talking about the 21st amendment. We are not talking about new found powers of the parochial, of the municipality, the county, the State, to tax or regulate either instrumentalities of commerce, particularly the Internet and other telecommunications, and neither are we talking about new opportunities to tax and regulate the things that move across it. We are limiting ourselves, as properly we should, to those things that are covered by the 21st amendment and nothing else.

Mr. BARR of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COX. I yield to the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. BARR of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman would engage in a brief colloquy. It is, then, with the language that the gentleman is proposing here, if in fact hypothetically, if you have the recipient State which prohibits the sale of alcoholic beverages to anyone under the age of 21 and you have a seller winery in another State and there is a transaction made over the Internet, the alcoholic beverage to somebody in the recipient State who is in fact under 21, the language that the gentleman is proposing here, which is really clarifying language, would not prohibit the attorney general of the recipient State from seeking injunctive relief if they can otherwise meet the burdens of the legislation, is that correct?

Mr. COX. Yes. That is true if the underlying state legislation is itself consistent with the 21st amendment and the interstate commerce clause.

Mr. BARR of Georgia. In other words, if a State, as many States do, have a flat out prohibition on the sale of alcoholic beverages to a person under the age of 21, then the language that the gentleman is proposing here would not prohibit the recipient State from seeking injunctive relief from an out-of-State seller using the Internet to sell the alcohol to somebody under 21 in the recipient State?

Mr. COX. Yes. The State law itself is authorized, to the extent it is authorized, by the 21st amendment to the Constitution. And because the United States Supreme Court has interpreted the 21st amendment to mean that it does not empower States to pass laws that favor local liquor industries by erecting barriers to competition and that State laws that constitute mere economic protectionism are not entitled to the same deference as laws enacted to combat the perceived evils of an unrestricted traffic in liquor. We are simply restating those constitutional principles in the statute.

Mr. BARR of Georgia. In other words, so long as there is the basis for the recipient State’s prohibition on the sale of alcoholic beverages to somebody under 21.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from California (Mr. Cox) has expired.

(On request of Mr. BARR of Georgia, and by unanimous consent, Mr. Cox was allowed to proceed for 1 additional minute.)

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, I continue to yield to the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. BARR of Georgia. In other words, just to clarify this point, I appreciate the indulgence of the gentleman from California. If in fact the law prohibiting the sale of alcoholic beverages to anyone under the age of 21 in the recipient State is based on a legitimate public interest and public safety, not on economic protectionism, then under the scenario that I indicated, the attorney general of the recipient State could, under this legislation as proposed to be amended by the gentleman from California, seek injunctive relief. Mr. COX. That is correct. What we are trying to do is restate in simple, easy to understand language the balance that the courts, I think, have properly struck between vindicating the purposes of the 21st amendment and at the same time making sure that we do not subtract in any way from the interstate commerce clause. They are both parts of the Constitution, both read together. I think that the current case law that we have cited and that we repeat in the statute expresses it as elegantly and simply as it can be expressed.

Ms. LOFGREN. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, I do want to comment briefly on the amendment offered by the gentleman from California (Mr. Cox).

I will support this amendment. It does clarify issues relative to Internet service providers and to the Net itself. However, I do want to point out that, although this amendment should be supported and I intend to vote for it, it does not cure other problems that we find troubling in the underlying bill.

The issues relate to the commerce clause and to the conflict between that clause and the 21st amendment. This conflict continues to be problematic. As we discussed at some length in the Committee on the Judiciary when the bill was considered, the 21st amendment did not repeal the commerce clause. So even though this amendment does accommodate the Internet—and I credit the gentleman from California (Mr. Cox) for bringing this forward and commend the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. Goodlatte) and the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. Conyers) for their considerable effort on Internet issues—the problem in the underlying bill persists. If this bill becomes law, State AG’s shall be able to burden impermissibly interstate commerce using the cover of the 21st amendment.

Thus, even with this fine amendment, the underlying bill continues to be overbroad. We can’t seem to agree to limit it to the one issue that we all agree is significant, namely that we should not permit underage drinking. By contrast, this bill would allow a variety of arcane blue laws that have nothing whatsoever to do with underage drinking or any other legitimate concern of the Federal Government to be enforced by a State attorney general in a Federal court.

I will wholeheartedly support this amendment, and I sincerely hope it is approved, but I intend, even if it is adopted, to oppose the underlying bill because of the other problems I’ve enumerated.

Mr. SCARBOROUGH. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, I would like to enter into a colloquy with the gentleman from California (Mr. Cox) briefly just to clarify a few things.

The gentleman from Georgia (Mr. Barr) was asking the gentleman if a State would still be able to enforce their alcohol laws, and the gentleman said they could. If he can explain the purpose of this clarifying language regarding economic protectionism and a bill a State legislature passes for the mere purposes of economic protectionism?

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SCARBOROUGH. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. COX. Yes, the language in section 1 is now written as section 3(b) on Line 17 of the amendment, as reported, states that no State may enforce under this a law regulating the importation or transportation of any intoxicating liquor and with some additional language interpolated that constitutes mere economic protectionism, and that is the existing Supreme Court test, and that is what I wish simply to confirm our statute with that Supreme Court test.
We go to support for Internet and other interstate commerce, and it says nothing in this act may be construed to prevent State regulation or taxation of Internet services or any other related interstate telecommunications, and it is important for us to differentiate here that we are talking about the actual Internet service itself or the telecommunications service and not the goods that are sold over the Internet.

Mr. GOODLATTE. Yes, I think that that is correct.

In addition, when combined with the preceding section, we make it clear that the goods that we are talking about letting States regulate and tax are alcoholic beverages and those things covered by the 21st amendment, so that it is also true what we are not doing in this legislation today is opening up new vistas of taxation and regulation of products that move across the Internet. We are restricting ourselves only to the four corners of the power that States have under the 21st amendment.

Mr. SCARBOROUGH. And the gentleman's actual language, the language that we have all agreed to, goes again to the Internet service and not the goods, and the goods here being alcohol.

Mr. COX. Yes, and the reason we hope that this is a belt-and-suspenders operation, that this is surplusage, but perhaps not because States and localities have been very aggressive about taxation or any other interstate commerce, and it is very important that we allow E-commerce to flourish without new taxation on the Internet.

Mr. DELAHUNT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GOODLATTE. What the gentleman is saying is that if there is a law existing out there or one that may be proposed in the future that is unconstitutional, we do not want this act, whether it could or could not, we do not want it to be read as encouraging somebody to go forward. We want to make sure that unconstitutional laws are discouraged because they are unconstitutional whether we pass this amendment or not.

Mr. DELAHUNT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GOODLATTE. I yield to the gentleman from Florida.

Mr. SCARBOROUGH. And reclaiming my time, I just like to say I agree with the gentleman and the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. GOODLATTE) 100 percent, and it is very important that we allow E-commerce to flourish without new regulations or tax burdens, and I believe this language does so while still allowing the State to enforce its alcohol laws as it was given the right in the 21st amendment some 60 or 65 years ago.

Mr. DELAHUNT. As is currently written, the legislation offered by Mr. GOODLATTE to the amendment offered by Mr. CONYERS to the amendment offered by Mr. COX, yes, the purpose of the Internet Tax Freedom Act was to prevent new taxes on the Internet and discriminatory taxes that were paid upon the Internet.

Mr. DELAHUNT. And if the gentleman yield, nothing that this bill proposes in any way impacts that moratorium.

Mr. COX. Yes, the purpose of the Internet Tax Freedom Act was to prevent new taxes on the Internet and discriminatory taxes that were paid upon the Internet.

Mr. DELAHUNT. And if the gentleman yield, nothing that this bill proposes in any way impacts that moratorium.

Mr. COX. Again, Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman from Florida will yield?

Mr. SCARBOROUGH. Again, Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman from Florida will yield?

Mr. SCARBOROUGH. Yes, and the reason we hope that this is a belt-and-suspenders operation, that this is surplusage, but perhaps not because States and localities have been very aggressive about taxation or any other type of sale. It simply imposes a moratorium on new taxes on Internet services.

Is that a correct statement?

Mr. COX of California. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SCARBOROUGH. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. SCARBOROUGH. It is certainly correct as far as the gentleman has taken it. I would add to that the following:

Some State laws are unconstitutionally and impermissibly discriminatory, as for example the Hawaii tax that exempted pineapple wine. The Supreme Court properly said that that was an unconstitutional, impermissibly discriminatory taxation on the Internet; and against out-of-state producers, and all of these laws not having been tested under the commerce clause, we cannot say that we are trying to grandfather them here against that.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Florida (Mr. SCARBOROUGH) has expired.

Mr. DELAHUNT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GOODLATTE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GOODLATTE. I yield to the gentleman from Virginia.

Mr. COX. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman from Florida will yield?

Mr. SCARBOROUGH. Yes, and I think that that is correct.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. CONYERS TO THE AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. GOODLATTE

Mr. COX. Yes, the purpose of the Internet Tax Freedom Act was to prevent new taxes on the Internet and discriminatory taxes that were paid upon the Internet.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I offer a perfecting amendment to the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. CONYERS to the amendment offered by Mr. GOODLATTE.

At the end of the matter proposed to be inserted, strike the period and insert a semicolon and add the following text: “used by another person to engage in any activity that is subject to this Act.”

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I want to thank my friends who have introduced this. I had an amendment quite similar to it, and I do not think it will be necessary to offer it now. But the perfecting amendment I am offering will clarify that Internet service providers and electronic communication services will be exempted only where they are used by another person to engage in activity covered by the act.

As is currently written, the legislation offered by Mr. COX, yes, the purpose of the Internet Tax Freedom Act was to prevent new taxes on the Internet and discriminatory taxes that were paid upon the Internet.

Mr. COX. Yes, the purpose of the Internet Tax Freedom Act was to prevent new taxes on the Internet and discriminatory taxes that were paid upon the Internet.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I want to thank my friends who have introduced this. I had an amendment quite similar to it, and I do not think it will be necessary to offer it now. But the perfecting amendment I am offering will clarify that Internet service providers and electronic communication services will be exempted only where they are used by another person to engage in activity covered by the act.

Thus, for example, if Yahoo or another Internet provider goes into the business of selling or shipping liquor, they would not be exempted from liability.

Now, Mr. Chairman, Internet commerce has opened new doors of opportunity around the country as well as provided consumers with a vast array of new choices of goods and services; and with the expansion of commerce over the Internet comes the added benefit of greater competition which will lead to lower prices for consumers.

Of course, we do not want people to use Internet to violate the law, but we also do not want to create unnecessary and burdensome regulations that will hinder this emerging new marketplace.

Mr. COX. Yes, the purpose of the Internet Tax Freedom Act was to prevent new taxes on the Internet and discriminatory taxes that were paid upon the Internet.

Mr. DELAHUNT. And if the gentleman yield, nothing that this bill proposes in any way impacts that moratorium.

Mr. COX. Yes, the purpose of the Internet Tax Freedom Act was to prevent new taxes on the Internet and discriminatory taxes that were paid upon the Internet.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I want to thank my friends who have introduced this. I had an amendment quite similar to it, and I do not think it will be necessary to offer it now. But the perfecting amendment I am offering will clarify that Internet service providers and electronic communication services will be exempted only where they are used by another person to engage in activity covered by the act.

Thus, for example, if Yahoo or another Internet provider goes into the business of selling or shipping liquor, they would not be exempted from liability.

Mr. DELAHUNT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GOODLATTE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DELAHUNT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GOODLATTE. I yield to the gentleman from Virginia.

Mr. DELAHUNT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GOODLATTE. I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts.

Mr. DELAHUNT. I think it is very important because during the course of the general debate, mention was made that this proposal could lead to new taxation, how about that direction. We want to make sure that unconstitutional laws are discouraged because they are unconstitutional whether we pass this amendment or not.

Mr. DELAHUNT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. DELAHUNT. I think it is very important because during the course of the general debate, mention was made that this proposal could lead to new taxation, how about that direction. We want to make sure that unconstitutional laws are discouraged because they are unconstitutional whether we pass this amendment or not.

Mr. DELAHUNT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. GOODLATTE. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. DELAHUNT. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?
Another problem is that the bill gives and encourages the imposition of new Internet taxes by giving States another forum in which to collect those taxes from out-of-State defendants. This is a bipartisan and non-controversial improvement, and I hope that my perfecting amendment will be accepted, which remedies these problems.

What I am doing here, I believe, is clarifying that this measure cannot be used as a tool to bring actions against Internet providers and other wired telecommunications services.

It seems to me we can all agree that we do not want Internet carriers to be the targets of State attorney general actions to enforce our State alcohol laws. The amendment also clarifies that the legislation does not modify or supersede the Internet Tax Freedom Act, in which Congress placed a moratorium on new Internet taxes. We do not want to undermine Congress' prior legislation and permit selective carveouts to that important commitment.

This amendment is supported by many groups and organizations, America Online, Bell Atlantic, Bell South, the Commercial Internet Exchange Association, Prodigy and PSINet. Whether or not one ultimately supports 2031, this very important amendment deserves your vote. Although these changes do not address all of my concerns, this is an important improvement to the legislation, and I urge that the perfecting amendment be accepted and the amendment be supported.

Among other things the Cox amendment makes it clear that neither this act nor Webb Kenyon are in any way designed to supersede any other provision of the Constitution, such as the first amendment or the Commerce clause (including the so-called "dormant" Commerce clause). In setting forth the amendment reaffirms the Supreme Court's 1984 decision in Bacchus Imports v. Dias, 468 U.S. 263 (1984), which held that a state law which imposed an excise tax on sales of liquor but exempted certain locally produced alcoholic beverages violated the Commerce clause. The Court concluded that this state legislative scheme was clearly discriminatory legislation and constituted "economic protectionism." The Court noted that "one thing is certain: the central purpose of the [Twenty-First Amendment] was not to empower States to favor local liquor industries by erecting barriers to competition." The Court held that the state's law was not designed to promote temperance but was "mere economic protectionism."

The Court has adopted this line of reasoning in striking down numerous other state liquor laws. See e.g., Brown-Forman Distillers Corp. v. New York State Liquor Authority, 476 U.S. 573 (1986) (relying on Bacchus); Healy v. Beer Inst., 491 U.S. 324 (1989) (relying on Brown-Forman). See also Capital Cities Cable versus Crisp (holding that a state statute which banned the transmission of out of state alcoholic beverage commercials by cable television stations after the fact. The amendment was the Commerce Clause and was outside of the state's Twenty-First Amendment power); California Retail Liquor Dealers Ass'n v. Medical Alumnum 445 U.S. 97 (1980) (holding that a state wine pricing system violated Sherman Antitrust Act and noting that the "Federal Government retains some Commerce clause authority over liquor"); Hostetter v. Idlewild Bond Voyage, 377 U.S. 324, (1968) (holding that the Commerce clause prohibited the State of New York from interfering with the sale of alcohol to departing airline travelers at a New York airport and that the argument that the Twenty-First amendment trumps the Commerce clause where states regulate alcohol is "patently bizarre," "an absurd over-simplification," and "demonstably incorrect.")

Re amendment to H.R. 2031.

Hon. John Conyers,
Ranking member, House Judiciary Committee, Rayburn House Office Building, Washington, DC.

Hon. Bob Goodlatte,
Rayburn House Office Building, Washington, DC.

Dear Representative Conyers and Representative Goodlatte: We write to express our strong support for the amendment you intend to offer tomorrow to H.R. 2031 to clarify that injunctive relief under the bill is available against certain shippers of alcohol, and not against providers of communications services.

This important clarification will avoid confusion and needless litigation against Internet service providers and other providers of communications services who are not engaged in the sort of shipments that are the subject of the bill.

Thank you very much for your leadership on this issue.

Sincerely,

AOL.
BELLSOUTH.
COMMERCIAL INTERNET EXCHANGE ASSOCIATION. ("CIX").
PRODIGY.
PSINET.

Mr. GOODLATTE. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I support the perfecting amendment offered by the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. CONYERS), and I commend him for offering this amendment. The underlying amendment that I have offered makes it clear that Internet service providers, those who provide interactive computer service or an electronic communications service, would not be subject to injunctions under the amendment.

The gentleman from Michigan's amendment makes it clear that if that company, or an Internet service provider, is, in fact, themselves selling the alcoholic beverage, then they would be subject to the injunction, because it adds the language used by another person to engage in any activity that is subject to this act to create an exception to the exception already created for this purpose.

The gentleman's language is well taken, I support it, and I urge my colleagues to support it.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. CONYERS) to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. GOODLATTE).

The amendment to the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. BARR of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I do not see the gentleman from Virginia on the floor. Perhaps the gentleman from Virginia would engage in a colloquy.

I think, getting to the intent, the Congressional intent of the proposed amendment, as amended, needs further clarification. If I could engage the gentleman from Virginia in a brief colloquy and elicit from him if he thinks it is accurate, just a simple yes or no.

In fact, under the legislation as proposed and as amended, as proposed to be amended by the gentleman from California, if State A has a law on the books that prohibits the sale of alcoholic beverages to anyone under 21, and the attorney general of that State seeks to go into Federal court under this law simply based on that law to seek an injunction to enjoin a seller of an alcoholic beverage from State B from shipping that alcoholic beverage into State A and being directed to or received by somebody under 21 in violation of State law, this proposal would still allow the attorney general of State A to seek injunctive relief. Is that correct?

Mr. GOODLATTE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BARR of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, the one word answer is yes, and that is certainly my intention in offering this amendment to make sure that the underlying purpose of the bill is preserved, but make sure that, A, there are no efforts here to create new taxes or new regulations of Internet activities, and, B, that there is no unconstitutional discrimination.

If that is the intent of the amendment, is it then the intent of the amendment?

If State A has a law on the books that says no sales of alcoholic beverages to somebody under 21, with this amendment, or new regulations of Internet activity, the underlying purpose of the bill is preserved, but make sure that there is no discrimination.

If State A has a law on the books that says no sales of alcoholic beverages to somebody under 21, with this language, does this modify or in some way alter the underlying purpose of this... way limit the ability that the attorney general would have in the bill as proposed to stop an Internet sale of alcoholic beverages made in from another State to that person?

Mr. GOODLATTE. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman will yield further, it would not stop the attorney general of a State that wishes to seek an injunction against a company violating that State’s laws, prohibiting either the sale of alcohol in the State or the sale of alcohol to minors in that State from continuing to seek that injunction. I strongly support the gentleman and the gentleman from Florida’s efforts to allow the States to go into Federal court to achieve that injunction.

Mr. BARR of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, reclaiming my time, is it the purpose of this amendment to limit the scope of the Webb-Kenyon Act?

Mr. GOODLATTE. Mr. Chairman, it is not the purpose of this amendment to limit the scope of the Webb-Kenyon Act.

Mr. BARR of Georgia. Does this amendment create any new right of action to challenge State laws regulating alcohol?

Mr. GOODLATTE. In my opinion, it does not, and it is not my intention in offering this amendment to in any way affect the rights of the States to regulate the sale of alcohol in their State as provided by the Twenty-First Amendment to the Constitution.

Mr. BARR of Georgia. Would this language, as proposed, permit a defendant in the recipient State or in the shipping State to delay enforcement of a valid State alcohol law by claiming that the law creates a barrier to competition, that this language creates a barrier to competition?

Mr. GOODLATTE. That may be an issue in seeking an injunction, but certainly is not the intention of this amendment, to allow anybody to delay State enforcement of State laws controlling the sale of alcohol in their State borders.

Mr. BARR of Georgia. Finally, are there any State laws today that would be subject to a challenge under this proposed language?

Mr. GOODLATTE. The gentleman misheard. The question from the gentleman from Georgia was whether or not anything in my amendment would undermine the purpose of the underlying bill, which is to allow the attorney general to go into Federal Court and to seek an injunction restraining the sale of alcohol to minors. Then later in our conversation, in reference to a dry State, whether they could seek an injunction from violating the laws of the State for shipping any alcohol into the State.

If you have a dry State that prohibits the sale of alcohol, now or in the future, this amendment would not affect that one way or another. That is the assurance the gentleman from Georgia wanted, that the underlying bill would still have the effect the gentleman intends, which is that the attorney general of that State go into Federal Court and seek an injunction, but he would not be able to seek an injunction for the sale of alcohol to an adult unless that sale itself violated that State law in some way, shape, or form. This amendment does not in any way change that.

Mr. NETHERCUTT. Mr. Chairman, reclaiming my time, I appreciate the clarification.

Mr. Chairman, I want to rise in support of the Goodlatte amendment, which I believe improves significantly on H.R. 2031. The proponents have argued that this bill does not appropriately interfere with Internet commerce. It is true they worked very hard to avoid any reference to the Internet on this legislation, but the reality is quite different.

A great many of the wine sales we are discussing occur over the Internet sites of small wineries. The entrepreneurial owners of these wineries have learned, like many other small businesses and women, that the Internet levels the playing field and makes it possible for small proprietors to reach customers. These companies cannot afford sales departments or national advertising. They are forced by their size to rely on Internet sales. That is what I want to be sure that this legislation does not prohibit.

This amendment ensures that Internet sales by wineries are not treated any differently than any other product. The Internet Tax Freedom Act blocked the imposition of new Internet taxes, and this amendment ensures compliance with that act.

Proponents of this legislation have called small wineries and brewers bootleggers and smugglers, suggesting somehow their intent in selling wine is criminal. To the contrary, these small businesses play by the rules and only want an opportunity to sell their superior product in the interstate marketplace. There is no pressing problem of minors buying cases of ultra-premium wines, and the authors of the legislation have shown no evidence to the contrary, notwithstanding the few news clips that they have discussed.

I have talked with wineries in Washington State about the supposed problem of minors purchasing alcohol. They have told me that in fact they know virtually all of their customers. Their buyers have in virtually all cases bought wine in person from the winery in the first place. These are repeat customers who have taken the time to travel all the way to rural wineries in each case. When they get home, these customers enjoy the superior product that Washington State provides and that these wineries provide, and they want to order again. Many of these customers are from other States and would be unable to purchase wines with this legislation.

Small businesses are the actual target of this legislation. These small wineries will never be able to ship their product through normal distributor channels. They simply do not produce enough to be worth the large distributors’ time. These producers bottle 2,000 cases a year, an insignificant amount to a distributor, but a very significant quantity when the survival of these small businesses is on the line.

We are adding a winery in our State of Washington even as a growth industry that creates new jobs in rural areas. These are small wineries, specialty wineries. Any Member representing constituencies that

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE

August 3, 1999
CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE

Mr. DOOLEY of California. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of this particular amendment, but I remain opposed to the underlying bill. I oppose the legislation because it is clearly anti-small business, and it is also anti-American. We are moving into a new economy, an economy that is giving opportunities for small business people to participate by offering their products over the Internet. One of the greatest innovations and greatest opportunities that we are seeing in E-commerce is the fact that we are almost eliminating all barriers to entry. We are allowing almost any company to set up and develop a webpage, and they can immediately be in a worldwide business.

What we are doing with this legislation is to preclude a lot of small business people that are involved in the wine industry, that do not have the volumes to work with, with the archaic structure that is currently in place in many parts of the country to distribute their product, from having the opportunity to have the access to consumers that they need. This is clearly not a direction that we should be going, and it is clearly a direction that is inconsistent with the changes in the United States' economy and the changes in the international economy.

This legislation is a heavy-handed approach that would chill the rights of adults to purchase wine over the Internet, unfairly discourage small wineries from marketing their products nationwide through E-commerce, and create a new Federal remedy for a problem that is already addressed by State and Federal statutes.

Supporters of this legislation contend that the bill is being done at the behest of States' rights, but nothing could be further from the truth. As we saw just in the last week, the National Conference of State Legislatures overwhelmingly passed a resolution opposing this legislation.

The arguments that this is somehow going to result in more alcohol being in the hands of minors is also equally without foundation and substantiation. Nothing could be further from the truth.

I ask my colleagues to oppose this legislation. We ought to be passing policies which encourage and provide greater opportunity for more families to enter into business, for more families to live out a dream. What we are doing here, in so many ways, is impeding that opportunity.

Also speaking as a wine consumer, I almost think it is un-American because I might live in a particular part of the country, in a particular State, that I am precluded from purchasing a bottle of wine over the Internet. That is not what our Founding Fathers had in mind when they passed the interstate commerce clause. They had in mind that we would allow for free competition that would benefit consumers and benefit our wine industry.

I urge my colleagues to oppose this legislation.

Mr. KOLBE, Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, although I rise in support of the pending amendment, which I think certainly improves the bill, I do want to express my concerns about the legislation as a whole, H.R. 2031.

This is a legislation that directly impacts interstate commerce, and it drastically tips the scales of commerce in favor of large wholesale distributors at the expense of consumers and small local vineyards, which rely heavily on direct sales for their business. This legislation gives attorneys general the power to sue out-of-State wine and beer distributors in Federal court for violations of State liquor laws.

As a recent editorial in the Wall Street Journal makes clear, giving State attorneys general the power to sue out-of-State vineyards in Federal court can lead to nothing but political mischief.

What better way for a politically ambitious attorney general to build political support at home than to sue out-of-State shippers on behalf of local whoselliers to help keep the competition out?

The 21st amendment was designed to give States the power to regulate alcohol sales within their States, and to ban it altogether, if they choose. It was not designed to give States the power to displace the sales of some distributors out while allowing others in. Such a result flies directly in the face of the interstate commerce clause by establishing special interest protections for local distributors.

Any resident who seeks to buy a rare or obscure vintage of wine not offered by his local distributor with this legislation is simply out of luck. The legislation is anticompetitive, it is anti-consumer. Unfortunately, it sounds good.

This legislation would do great mischief. It injects the strong arm of the Federal courts into an area of commerce that is best left to the States. It imposes unnecessary Federal interference in the enforcement of State laws, and gives the State Attorney General a new weapon, the Federal court, to favor local over interstate commerce.

The result will not balance the scales of justice. It will, instead, tip those scales against consumers who have found in the Internet a cornucopia of goods and services heretofore unknown to them.

I urge us to defeat this legislation.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. BARR OF GEORGIA TO THE AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. GOODLATTE, AS AMENDED

Mr. BARR of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment to the amendment, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. BARR of Georgia to the amendment offered by Mr. GOODLATTE, as amended.

On page 1 of the amendment offered by Mr. GOODLATTE, at line 16, strike the words "thus" and continuing to the end of line 17, and inserting the following:

"…this simply cleans up the language, ‘erecting barriers to competition, and constituting mere economic protectionism.’"

Mr. BARR of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, this simply cleans up the language.

It struck a number of us, in trying to analyze the final language on this page of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. GOODLATTE) that the words "thus erecting barriers to competition" was unusual language to use in a statutory provision. Therefore, what we do is simply keep the same intent, but clarify it so it reads, "erecting barriers to competition and constituting mere economic protectionism."

We are just taking out and changing the grammar so that it is consistent with the earlier language in the particular provision.

Mr. Chairman, I would ask the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. GOODLATTE) if he has any problem with the clarifying language.

Mr. GOODLATTE. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BARR of Georgia. I yield to the gentleman from Virginia.

Mr. GOODLATTE. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding. This language is perfectly fine with us. We have no objection to the amendment, and urge its adoption.

Mr. DAVIS of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I rise today to urge my colleagues to support the Goodlatte/Coryeys/Davis amendment to the Twenty-First Amendment Enforcement Act because it is essential to ensuring that this legislation does not restrict the growth of Internet commerce. This amendment clarifies first that the Act does not modify or supercede the Internet Tax Freedom Act that we worked hard to enact last year under the leadership of my colleague Representative Cox. Equally important is the clarification that an injunctive relief action may not be sought against an Internet Service Provider. Indeed, enforcement approaches such as injunctions to block Internet sites can seriously disrupt lawful Internet communications, and slow the operations of a service provider’s network for all other uses.

In sponsoring this clarifying amendment today with my colleagues, I want to alleviate the concern I had that in its current form, H.R. 2031 could be misinterpreted as authorizing injunctions by the states against communications companies who are not involved in the shipping or importing of liquor, but are simply used by third parties for communications purposes. I want to ensure that in enacting this legislation, we do not implement a burdensome Federal enforcement action that would hamper the growth of the Internet. Not just when it comes to the sale of alcohol over the Internet, but we must consider the message we send to business—from the small entrepreneurs to large industry—when they make commercial decisions about how they use the Internet to do business.

While the Twenty-First Amendment Enforcement Act does not specifically mention the Internet, there is no doubt that it is the innate nature of the Internet that has spurred the call for this legislation. It is my firm belief that Federal policy must use market-driven principles as the underpinning any enacted legislation affecting the Internet. Despite the Federal Government’s initiation and financing of the Internet, its expansion and diversity has been driven mainly by the private sector. Each piece of legislation that will change people’s commercial behavior must be thoroughly examined and the consequences understood, lest we unleash a federal mandate or restriction that will harm the Internet’s success and growth as the primary tool for communication between people and business.

The Federal Government can be the leader in developing incentives to move the Internet forward as the primary tool of businesses, educators, scholars, students, and the ordinary citizen. We must ensure the no Government can hinder that development. I ask my colleagues to support the Goodlatte/Conyers/Davis/Boucher/McCollum/Dunn amendment and guarantee the continued growth of the Internet as a tool of business.

Mr. CHAMBLISS. Mr. Chairman, today, I rise in support of the Twenty-First Amendment Enforcement Act, which will provide individuals the ability to enforce state laws regulating the distribution and sale of alcoholic beverages within their border, a right guaranteed by the Twenty-First Amendment. Most states, including my home state of Georgia, employ a three-tiered system of alcohol distribution to control the distribution and sale of alcoholic beverages within their borders. Under this system alcohol producers go through state-licensed wholesalers, who must go through retailers, who alone may sell to consumers. Furthermore, Georgia is one of nineteen “express prohibition” states that expressly outlaw direct shipments of alcohol from out-of-state. Georgia’s system has proven quite effective in combating illegal alcohol sales to minors.

While Georgia’s alcohol statutes have proven successful throughout the years, the recent development of electronic commerce via the Internet has presented new challenges to preventing illegal shipments of alcohol into our state. Confronted with this new challenge, as well as the difficulty of enforcing its laws in court, Georgia in 1997 enacted statutes making the illegal shipment of alcoholic beverages, their bottling and sale, a crime. This action was necessary to ensure the state would have jurisdiction over violators of its state liquor transportation laws.

I believe if states are unable to effectively enforce their laws against illegal interstate shipment of alcoholic beverages, they may also lose some ability to police sales to underage purchasers. Illegal direct shipments also deprive the state of the excise and sales tax revenue that would otherwise be generated by a regulated state, placing regulated businesses at a distinct commercial disadvantage. Finally, if direct shippers violate state law, they exclude themselves from other state obligations such as submitting to quality control inspections, licensing requirements, and complying with other restrictions placed upon sellers of alcohol.

As an advocate of smaller government and state’s rights, I favor a resolution to this problem that does not mandate changes to any existing state laws or alter existing case law interpreting the Commerce clause of the Constitution. I believe the Twenty-First Amendment Enforcement Act is the common-sense solution to this problem as it allows Georgia the authority to seek enforcement, through a federal district court injunction, of its state laws regulating the importation or transportation of intoxicating liquors without infringing on states’ rights or creating Constitutional confusion.

For these reasons, I support the passage of H.R. 2031, the Twenty-First Amendment Enforcement Act, and urge its adoption.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. BARR) to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. GOODLATTE), as amended.

The amendment to the amendment, as amended, was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. GOODLATTE), as amended.

The amendment, as amended, was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. Are there further amendments to the bill?

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MS. LOFGREN

Ms. LOFGREN. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Ms. LOFGREN:

Page 21, after line 17, insert the following (and make such technical and conforming changes as may be appropriate):

“(2) the term ‘firearm’ shall have the meaning given such term in section 921(a) of title 18 of such title;”

Page 3, line 128, insert “or firearm” after “liquor”.

Mr. SCARBOROUGH. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order on the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. A point of order is reserved by the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. SCARBOROUGH) to the amendment offered by the gentleman from California (Ms. LOFGREN).

Ms. LOFGREN. Mr. Chairman, I offer this amendment on behalf of myself, as well as members from New York, Mrs. McCARTHY and Mrs. LOWEY.

As I mentioned earlier, Mr. Chairman, in a discussion on the Cox amendment, I do have concerns about the underlying amendment and its ability to control interstate commerce reasonably. However, if this House is insistent upon pursuing the remedies outlined in the Scarborough bill, I would suggest that we ought to provide those tools equally to the chief law enforcement officers of our States in the enforcement of gun laws.

As many of my colleagues know, the State of California has recently passed, by wide margins in the assembly and the State Senate, and these measures have been signed into law by the Governor, a whole series of gun safety measures that I believe put California on the cutting edge of gun safety measures among the 50 States.

It seems to me that as we are going to give the Attorneys General of the 50 States the ability to go into Federal court to protect their citizens from $20 bottles of cabernet, we ought to be at least as willing to give the attorney general of the State of California the ability to go into Federal court to protect his citizens against the Tech—DC9, the AK-47, and other weapons of mass destruction.

Mr. Chairman, as we know, we failed to come together across the aisle on a bipartisan basis to adopt gun safety measures earlier in this Congress, but we have an opportunity here to at least allow those States that have been more progressive and more receptive to the people of the country than has the United States Congress to have an additional tool to protect the citizens of the States who have forward-thinking State legislatures and forward-thinking Governors.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I want to commend the gentleman from California (Ms. LOFGREN), who finds it, as do many of us, ironic that this House apparently does not demonstrate the same concern for the dangers of interstate shipment of firearms as they claim to have about the interstate shipment of alcohol.

If we opened the Federal courts to State alcohol suits, we should at least do the same for firearms. I thank the gentleman for making the connection in this debate.

Ms. LOFGREN. I thank the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. CONYERS), the ranking member.

I would note, as to the issue of germinness, noting that the gentleman from Florida (Mr. SCARBOROUGH) has reserved a point of order, that it is my contention that the amendment is germinne.
As we know, the underlying bill deals with issues that are governed by the Alcohol, Tobacco, and Firearms Bureau, as is the issue of guns. It seems to me, if we are going to give a tool to States to use the Federal courts for an item that is regulated by ATF, to wit, bottles of cabernet, that we ought to provide a handy and tool to States to deal with another item which is within the jurisdiction of ATF, to wit, firearms, as defined in title 18 of the U.S. Code.

I would hope that we might move apace to adopt this resolution. I have two teenage children. They will be starting high school again this fall. They will be starting school, before this House finishes our annual recess. I would like to be able to tell them and to tell their classmates that the House of Representatives has done something, anything rational, to preserve and to enhance gun safety in America. I think we owe that to the mothers and fathers across the United States.

Although we have not been able previously to come together, although we have not been able to support the gun safety measures that have passed the United States Senate, although we have not been able to deliver that level of safety to the American people, we could act today and at least do this much.

So I am hopeful that we can approve this amendment. It is so important to me that I believe I would vote for the underlying bill, despite the reservations I have, in order to get this important new enforcement tool for State Attorneys General.

Mr. SCARBOROUGH. Mr. Chairman, I ask to speak on the point of order, the fundamental purpose of the bill is to provide the attorney general of any State with the authority to bring a civil action to the United States district court to enjoin any person or entity that the attorney general has reason to believe is engaged in any act that would constitute a violation of State law regulating the importation or transportation of any intoxicating liquor.

The fundamental purpose of the amendment is to expand the single class of merchandise covered by this bill, to wit, intoxicating liquor, by adding another class of merchandise, to wit, firearms, to the one class covered by this bill.

A distinction also exists that the distinguished ranking member of the Committee on the Judiciary did not touch on when he said we ought to be able to ship and firearms together in this sort of stew. The main difference is that none of us here support the illegal transportation of firearms across State lines.

What this amendment does is this amendment tries to bring in the gun amendments. We all agree illegal transportation of firearms across State lines should not be permissible. Unfortunately, illegal alcohol sales being transported across State lines is still being defended by many people here today.

According to House Practice Germaneness section 9: “One individual proposition is not germane to another individual proposition.” This is clearly one individual proposition being added to another. Accordingly, Mr. Chairman, the amendment is not germane, and I insist on my point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentlewoman from California (Ms. LOFGREN) desire to be heard on the point of order?

Ms. LOFGREN. Yes, Mr. Chairman. Mr. Chairman, I believe that the amendment to the point of order I would ask clearly even if there is a question as to germaneness, it does not need to be raised if all Members agree that the underlying measure should be supported by us all. I was glad to hear the comments of the gentleman from Florida (Mr. SCARBOROUGH) that none of us support the illegal transport of firearms across State laws. The question is whose laws? In California, it is now, because of what the State legislature has done, it is illegal. TEC-9s are covered. TEC DC-9s are covered.

That is not the case under Federal law. So this would allow those State's Attorneys General, the State of California, to go to Federal court to enforce California State laws vis-a-vis firearms. I hope that we might be able to come together, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. SCARBOROUGH) and I, to allow this amendment to be offered and adopted; and that the gentleman that has raised his point of order, we need not discuss the germaneness issue any further.

I would hope that he would do that since, if I understood him correctly, he agrees or says he agrees with the intention of the amendment. Therefore, I would hope, and I do not know if he wishes to respond, but I would hope that he might withdraw his objection on this point.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. BARE) desire to be heard on this point of order?

Mr. BARE of Georgia. I do, Mr. Chairman. Mr. Chairman, I am not quite sure whether the gentlewoman from California (Ms. LOFGREN) correctly characterized the earlier remarks of the gentleman from Florida (Mr. SCARBOROUGH) who has sponsored the underlying bill here and who has risen and asserted and insisted on a point of order against the amendment of the gentlewoman from California.

I think the gentleman from Florida has made very clear that he is opposed to this amendment. I think the point that the gentleman was making earlier is a very accurate one; and that is that Federal law already provides that, when one ships a firearm in interstate commerce, it has to be shipped consistent with State laws. And it has to be shipped, for example, to a licensed firearms dealer if it is shipped through the mails.

There already, in other words, are very severe limitations on the interstate shipment of firearms. And to open that Pandora's box or that can of worms now to insert into a piece of legislation that is very specific, very clear, very limited, very reasonable, a whole new issue on which there have not been hearings, I mean, the opponents of the bill of the gentleman from Florida earlier were bemoaning the fact, erroneously as it turns out, bemoaning the fact that there had not been hearings and debate and information against a person who violates a piece of legislation. In fact, as the gentleman from Florida correctly stated, there have been hearings. There has been information. There has been evidence to support his legislation.

Mr. Chairman, the gentlewoman from California is now proposing to do is to raise another whole issue which has not been debated certainly in the context of the intent of this legislation.

I believe the gentleman from Florida is very correct when he points respectfully to the Chair on section 9 of House Practice on Germaneness. The proposed amendment from the gentlewoman from California has nothing whatsoever to do with the intent or the effect of the underlying bill proposed by the gentleman from Florida.

I rise in support of the reservation on this and I join the gentleman from Florida (Mr. SCARBOROUGH) in insisting on his point of order. I respectfully urge the Chair to strike the amendment as not germane and out of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is prepared to rule on the point of order.

The bill permits a State Attorney General to bring a civil action in Federal court against a person who has violated a State law regulating the importation and transportation of intoxicating liquor.

The amendment offered by the gentlewoman from California attempts to create an additional Federal cause of action against a person who violates a State law regulating firearms.

As stated in section 798a of the House Rules and Manual, an amendment must address the same subject as the bill under consideration.

This amendment addresses a separate subject matter (regulating traffic in firearms) than that addressed by the bill (regulating traffic in intoxicating liquors).

Accordingly, the amendment is not germane and the point of order is sustained.

Ms. LOFGREN. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.
LOWEY) adequately addresses the ger-of the States and firearms. I would ment we offered.
thing to do something reasonable, to of liquor licenses for good cause includ-that the ABC Board in sipation imposing 60-day time limitation for warranted.
small thing to enhance the Nation's gun safely laws. This may be a niche, and issue reasons for revocation within five-day for home-rule municipalities may legislate in City liquor control commission's failure to the German States and firearms. I would like to do something responsible to enhance gun safety laws.

Mr. SCARBOROUGH. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Florida reserves a point of order on the amendment.

Ms. LOFGREN. Mr. Chairman, I believe that the amendment offered by myself and by the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. McCARTHY) and the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. LOWEY) adequately addresses the ger-newspapers that the ABC Board in Alabama was able to refuse the renewal of liquor licenses for good cause including the discharge of firearms in the parking lot of the facility in question.

Second, a case from Illinois, SIP and Sore Liqueurs versus Richard M. Daley, Mayor, cited at 657 N.E.2d 1, provides that the Commission may take notice of gun law violations of the State in the proceedings instituted pursuant to the Illinois liquor laws. This amendment would allow State AGs to utilize the Federal courts to en-form the State gun laws relative to li-ally would enforce the Federal laws on the violation of the winery owner re-to the violation of the State weapons laws. This may be a niche, and it is a niche I propose only because of the -menting the House of Representatives will have before our re-

But, once again, as I argued earlier, if we are able to do something any-lish the Nation’s gun safety
-ment laws, we should do it. As I men-across America before our recess has ended. This is one of the last opportupositions to testimony, and did not make motion in lime in hearing, and did not raise issue until penalty hearing.

[10] INTOXICATING LIQUORS—108.2—

Liquor retailer waiver issued that he was denied due process because shotgun which retailed was charged with possessing in license revocation proceeding was destroyed and police officer was allowed to testify to its measurement, where retailer did not object to testimony, and did not make motion in lime in hearing, and did not raise issue until penalty hearing.

[10] INTOXICATING LIQUORS—108.2—

Liquor retailer waiver issued that he was denied due process because shotgun which retailed was charged with possessing in license revocation proceeding was destroyed and police officer was allowed to testify to its measurement, where retailer did not object to testimony, and did not make motion in lime in hearing, and did not raise issue until penalty hearing.

[1] INTOXICATING LIQUORS—108(4)—223k108(4)

Presence of sawed-off shotgun on premises of liquor retailer warranted revocation of liquor license. The evidence was not improperly found guilty of failing to register gun which was not registerable, location of shotgun permitted inference that retailer had control of gun and had factors both in favor of and against revocation existed. 457–108(9) of the City of Chicago Local Liquor Control Commission. (Code) (Chicago Municipal Code) (1992), 232 Ill. App. 3d 984, 173 Ill. Dec. 676, 597 N. Boots, Inc. v. Mayor's License Commission

[2] 108.10(8)

Appellate court may reverse licensing decision of liquor control commission only if manifest weight of evidence supports opposite conclusion. 92-307 Lamendella & Daniel, Chicago, Ill. Corporation, appeals from the revocation of its retail liquor license. It argues on appeal that: (1) the City of Chicago Local Liquor Control Commission (the commission) lost jurisdiction when it did not timely issue a decision; (2) plaintiff was denied due process; and (3) revocation was an unreasonable penalty. One of the issues in this case is whether the City of Chicago Local Liquor Control Commission lost jurisdiction to impose any sanctions upon applicant to render decision, within the mandatory 15-day period prescribed by section 4-4-280 of the Chicago Municipal Code (the Code) (Chicago Municipal Code §4-4-280 (1990)) and the holding in Puss N Boots, Inc. v. Mayor's License Commission (1992), 232 Ill. App. 3d 984, 173 Ill. Dec. 676, 597 N.E. 2d 650 or whether instead the Liquor Control Act of 1971 (235 ILCS 5/1-1 et seq. (West 1992)) (the Liquor Act) of the State of Illinois was applicable.

The commission charged in a notice of hearing dated August 19, 1991, that on August 29, 1990, the Code was violated when Thomas Shubalis, plaintiff's president, possessed an unregistered Winchester .22-caliber rifle, a Harlin 20-gauge shotgun, a Ruger .357 Magnum firearm, and a .25-caliber automatic firearm. It was also charged that Shubalis violated State law by possessing firearms without possessing an Illinois firearm owner's identification card. The notice also charged that on August 29, 1990, plaintiff sold or gave alcoholic beverages on the licensed premises to a person under the age of 21 years.

The notice stated that the city would present evidence of previous acts of misconduct. Attached as exhibits were orders of dispositions of previous charges: (1) sale to a minor on November 4, 1983, resulting in a warning on July 18, 1984; (2) sale to a minor on January 19, 1985, resulting in a warning on July 17, 1985; and (3) sale to a minor on August 31, 1985, resulting in a $300 voluntary fine on April 29, 1986.

A hearing was held before the commission on January 17, February 14, and April 4, 1991. Chicago police officer Anthony Wilczak testified at the hearing that he responded to a burglary and found a .357 Magnum revolver and a .25-caliber automatic pistol below the cash register. He asked Shubalis if he owned the guns, and Shubalis said that the guns were his brother's, Shubalis also said that he did not know where the .22-caliber rifle came from. The sawed-off gun belonged to friend of his brother. He did not find a firearm owner's identification card when he searched Shubalis nor did he find a gun registration for any of the weapons.

Chicago police officer Sharon Gaynor testified at the hearing that she recovered in the search a sawed-off 20-gauge shotgun and a .357 Magnum and .25-caliber automatic firearm. She found guilty of failing to register gun which was not registerable, location of shotgun permitted inference that retailer had control of gun and had factors both in favor of and against revocation existed. Officer Seidler testified that the barrel of the sawed-off shotgun came from and that the sawed-off shotgun eight or nine years before the burglary and that he did nothing to assure that the shotgun was removed from the premises. Shubalis's testimony that the gun was hidden in the old safe and that he did not even think about it after first seeing it was not credible. The licensee had a history of prior violations of one of which resulted in a fine of $300. The weapon was an extremely dangerous type of weapon. In light of the serious nature of the offense, revocation would be appropriate.

On January 22, 1993, the trial court denied plaintiff's motion to reverse and to reinstate the license, denied defendant's motion to reverse the post-remand order of revocation, and affirmed the order of revocation. Plaintiff filed a notice of appeal on February 19, 1993.

I. JURISDICTION

Plaintiff first argues that the commission lost jurisdiction to impose any sanction when it failed to render a decision within the 15 days following the hearing as prescribed by section 4-4-280 of the Code (Chicago Municipal Code §4-4-280 (1990)), which was amended in 1992 to expand the time period to 60 days (Journal of the Proceedings of the City Council of the City of Chicago, July 29, 1992, at 20041–42). If the proceedings were initiated exclusively under the Liquor Act, then the procedural requirements of section 7-5 of the Liquor Act were not met (235 ILCS 57/5 (West 1995)). The term “shall” was mandatory and not directory.

The mayor shall have the power to * * * suspend or revoke any license issued under the provisions of this code * * *.

If the mayor shall determine after (a) hearing that the license should be revoked or suspended, the mayor shall state the reasons or reasons for such determination in a written order or revocation or suspension * * *.

According to the Journal of the Proceedings of the City Council of the City of Chicago, the ordinance was:
CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE

August 3, 1999

19210

Intended to ratify prior actions of the Mayor, the ordinance was designed “to secure order, system and dispatch in proceedings, and by a disregard of which the rights interested parties cannot be injuriously affected” are not mandatory unless the statute is directory in nature. (Village of Mundelein v. Hartnett, 117 Ill. App. 3d at 1016, 1013.Dec. 285, 454 N.E.2d 29.) If a statute is mandatory, it precludes the court from determining whether the order is within the time limits prescribed by the statute. (Alpern v. License Appeal Commission (1983), 117 Ill.App.3d 855, 858–59, 70 Ill.Dec. 666, 449 N.E.2d 1013.) Home-rule municipalities such as Chicago may legislate in the area of liquor control. Section 7–5 of the Liquor Act is mandatory rather than directory so that the order was served within the period prescribed by the statute so that the conclusion that it was the first decision that held that the Liquor Act’s five-day requirement was directory so that a revocation issued beyond that time limit would be invalid. Alpern, 38 Ill. App. 3d at 567, 348 N.E.2d 271. The five-day provision did not contain language denying the exercise of the power after the time named and no right of plaintiff would be injuriously affected by a failure to serve the revocation order timely. Alpern, 38 Ill. App. 3d at 568, 348 N.E.2d 271.

The Code’s time limit is not just different than State law; it is additionally enforced by the State. The Code’s longer time for the issuance of the penalty decision is inconsistent with the five-day time limit in the Liquor Act. Under the code enforcement provisions of the Liquor Act, violations of the inconsistent 15- and 60-day limits cannot stand. (Village of Mundelein v. Hartnett, 117 Ill. App. 3d at 1011, 1015, 73 Ill.Dec. 285, 454 N.E.2d 29 [where there is a conflict between the code enforcement provisions of the Liquor Act and the State law the statute must give way].) The State five-day limitation for issuing a revocation decision prevails over the Code.

The case of Puss N Boots, Inc. v. Mayor’s License Commission (1992), 232 Ill.App.3d 984, 173 Ill.Dec. 676, 579 N.E.2d 650, was an appeal of Chicago’s decision to revoke the liquor license of Puss N Boots, a night club operating in the city of Chicago revoking the public place of amusement license of the plaintiff. Plaintiff argues that this court should follow the decision in Puss N Boots. One of the issues in that case was whether the mayor had lost jurisdiction to revoke the public place of amusement license because of failure to act within a 15-day time period prescribed by ordinance section 4-4-280. The court pointed out that the Code section providing for “interpretation of language” expressly stated that “[t]he word shall, when used in the singular number, shall be construed as meaning ‘may’ to the extent necessary to carry out the purpose of this Code section.” (Emphasis added.) Chicago Municipal Code § 4-60-070 (1994).” *5 310 The next issue is whether sec-sion 4–4–280’s time requirement that a statement of reasons for such determination in a written order was mandatory was dictum. (See Alpern, 38 Ill. App. 3d at 567, 348 N.E.2d 271.) The next issue is whether the failure to act within the required time meant that the local liquor control commissioner deprived the commission of jurisdiction. If the order was served within the period prescribed by the statute then its terms are limited to what is required to be done. (Village of Mundelein, 117 Ill.App.3d at 1016, 1013.Dec. 285, 454 N.E.2d 29.) The failure to comply with a mandatory provision will render void the proceeding to which the provision relates, but strict observance of a directory provision is not essential to the validity of the proceeding. Village of Mundelein, 117 Ill.App.3d at 1016, 1013.Dec. 285, 454 N.E.2d 29.)

II. DUE PROCESS

Plaintiff next argues that the plaintiff was denied due process because the shotgun was... that possession of a shotgun was the issue.

[10] Plaintiff was charged with three separate offenses. The charge of possessing an unregistered firearm was stated in the notice of hearing. Therefore, that issue was waived.

[11] Plaintiff next argues that the revocation of liquor license renewal, where neighborhood residents testified that lounge patrons discharged firearms, baked in parking lot, made excessive noise, loitered, trespassed, deposited wages and narcotics in yards, parked illegally, were unbuckled, and engaged in sexual activities on residents' property, and residents' testimony was supported by testimony of ABC Board employees and city police sergeant. Code 1975, § 41–22–20.

[12] The appellate court may reverse the commission's decision only if the manifest weight of the evidence supports the opposite conclusion. (Lopez v. Illinois Liquor Control Commission (1983), 120 Ill.App.3d 756, 762–63, 76 Ill.Dec. 199, 458 N.E.2d 599.) Section 7–5 of the Liquor Act permits revocation if the licensee violated any provision of the act or any ordinance of the municipality or any rule of the local liquor control commission (235 ILCS 5–7 (West 1996)), but the violation must fairly relate to the control of liquor. Lopez, 120 Ill. App. 3d at 761, 765, 76 Ill.Dec. 199, 458 N.E.2d 599.

That shotgun was deemed to be specially dangerous because it was unregisterable. The presence of this firearm on the premises jeopardized the safety of the public because employees of the licensee would have access to it. On the other hand, the business had been operated for 17 years with only three violations, all related to parking. Although the officer in charge had knowledge of the presence of the shotgun on the premises eight or nine years earlier, Plaintiff operated the business for 17 years. In a two-year period plaintiff was charged with three separate sales of alcohol to minors, but there was no other record of wrongful conduct. Failure to display the premises to the public effectively regulated the firearms offenses and should have resulted in a more lenient sanction of either fine or suspension. There was no evidence that the shotgun was functional.

The second revocation order issued does not refer to the specific ordinance violated as plaintiff merely stated that the business had been operated for 17 years with only three violations, all related to parking. Although the officer in charge had knowledge of the presence of the shotgun on the premises eight or nine years earlier, Plaintiff operated the business for 17 years. In a two-year period plaintiff was charged with three separate sales of alcohol to minors, but there was no other record of wrongful conduct. Failure to display the premises to the public effectively regulated the firearms offenses and should have resulted in a more lenient sanction of either fine or suspension. There was no evidence that the shotgun was functional.

The second revocation order issued does not refer to the specific ordinance violated as plaintiff merely stated that the business had been operated for 17 years with only three violations, all related to parking. Although the officer in charge had knowledge of the presence of the shotgun on the premises eight or nine years earlier, Plaintiff operated the business for 17 years. In a two-year period plaintiff was charged with three separate sales of alcohol to minors, but there was no other record of wrongful conduct. Failure to display the premises to the public effectively regulated the firearms offenses and should have resulted in a more lenient sanction of either fine or suspension. There was no evidence that the shotgun was functional.

The second revocation order issued does not refer to the specific ordinance violated as plaintiff merely stated that the business had been operated for 17 years with only three violations, all related to parking. Although the officer in charge had knowledge of the presence of the shotgun on the premises eight or nine years earlier, Plaintiff operated the business for 17 years. In a two-year period plaintiff was charged with three separate sales of alcohol to minors, but there was no other record of wrongful conduct. Failure to display the premises to the public effectively regulated the firearms offenses and should have resulted in a more lenient sanction of either fine or suspension. There was no evidence that the shotgun was functional.
by the board of objections to the [renewal] signed by persons authorized to do so.'' § 28–

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from California yield to the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. CONYERS).

Ms. LOFGREN. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan, the ranking member.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I want to thank the gentlewoman from Califor-

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentlewoman from California yield to the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. CONY-

Ms. LOFGREN. I have yielded to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. SCARBOROUGH. Parliamentary inquiry, Is this for the first 5 minutes?

Ms. LOFGREN. Yes, it is.

Mr. SCARBOROUGH. Parliamentary inquiry. Is it the rule of the Chair, then, that they can yield during the first 5 minutes when a point of order has been raised?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Florida may state his parliamentary inquiry.

Ms. LOFGREN. I will yield for a parliamentary inquiry which has been stated. May I yield time to the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. CONY-

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Florida state his parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. SCARBOROUGH. Mr. Chairman, the parliamentary inquiry, earlier I had tried to yield some time on reserving a point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair controls debate on the point of order when it is raised.

Ms. LOFGREN. Mr. Chairman, reclaiming my time, that was on the germaneness issue. This is on the 5 minutes.

Mr. SCARBOROUGH. I am trying to get a ruling from the Chair.

The CHAIRMAN. Members will suspend. Earlier the gentleman tried to yield time during argument on a point of order. That cannot be done under the rules.

The gentlewoman from California
(Ms. LOFGREN) controls 5 minutes and can yield to the gentleman from Florida for a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. SCARBOROUGH. Okay.

Ms. LOFGREN. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Michigan (Mr.
CONYERS).

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentlewoman from Cali-

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I want to thank the gentlewoman from Cali-

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

Mr. SCARBOROUGH. Mr. Chairman,
I have a parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentlewoman for her in-

The need for using these regulations and looking at them from this perspective of a Federally licensed firearm dealer and wine distributor or alcohol beverage distributor are related.

I am glad that the gentlewoman has reformulated her amendment. I think it now attaches to this bill with a great rationality, and it is an amendment on its own that I support very strongly.

Ms. LOFGREN. Mr. Chairman, I thank the ranking member for his kind comments.

POINT OF ORDER

Mr. SCARBOROUGH. Mr. Chairman,
I rise to speak on the point of order that I observed.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman may state his point of order.

Mr. SCARBOROUGH. Mr. Chairman, again, the fundamental purpose of this bill is to provide the attorney general of any State with the authority to bring a civil action in the United States district court to enjoin any peron or entity that the attorney general has a reasonable cause to believe is engaged any act that would constitute a violation of State law regulating the importation or transportation of intoxicating liquor.

Now, the fundamental purpose of this amendment is again to expand the single issue of alcohol that is being ille-llegally shipped across State lines.
This bill from Michigan (Mr. CONY-ERS) controls 5 minutes and can yield to the gentleman from Michigan (Mr.
CONYERS).

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentlewoman from Califor-

I am glad the gentleman from Florida (Mr. SCARBOROUGH) realizes that this is perfectly orderly procedure.

The record of the ABC Board’s hearing reflects that the lounge is located in Mobile, at 1385 Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., Avenue, an area of mixed commercial and residen tial properties. Neighborhood residents testified that the lounge’s patrons discharged firearms; brawled in the parking lot; made excessive noise; trespassed; deposited weapons and narcotics in neighborhood yards; illegally parked their cars; and urinated, defecated, and engaged in sexual activities on the lounge’s property.

Supporting testimony was offered by George
Boan and Kenneth Kirkland, two ABC Board employees, and by Sgt. Kay Taylor of the Mobile Police Department. Boan, an ABC
Board district supervisor, testified that he had personally observed loitering, noise, and illegal parking at the lounge, and he stated that during his investigation of the lounge he had been approached by prostitutes working the area. Kirkland, an ABC Board agent, played a videotape that he had made of the parking lot and the area surrounding the

by the board of objections to the [renewal] signed by persons authorized to do so.''
of an ABC Board action is clearly erroneous, unrea sonable, arbitrary, capricious, or an abuse of discretion.

§ 41–22–20(k) provides that ''the agency order shall be taken as prima facie just and reasonable except for that of the agency as to the weight of the evidence on questions of fact, except where otherwise authorized by statute.''
The trial court’s standard of review is the same as that of the trial court. Dawson, supra.

The record of the ABC Board’s hearing
reflects that the lounge is located in Mobile,
at 1385 Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., Avenue, an area of mixed commercial and residential properties. Neighborhood residents testified that the lounge’s patrons discharged firearms; brawled in the parking lot; made excessive noise; trespassed; deposited weapons and narcotics in neighborhood
yards; illegally parked their cars; and urinated, defecated, and engaged in sexual activities on the lounge’s property.

Supporting testimony was offered by George
Boan and Kenneth Kirkland, two ABC Board employees, and by Sgt. Kay Taylor of the Mobile Police Department. Boan, an ABC
Board district supervisor, testified that he had personally observed loitering, noise, and illegal parking at the lounge, and he stated that during his investigation of the lounge he had been approached by prostitutes working
the area. Kirkland, an ABC Board agent, played a videotape that he had made of the parking lot and the area surrounding the

by the board of objections to the [renewal]
signed by persons authorized to do so.''
of an ABC Board action is clearly erroneous, unrea sonable, arbitrary, capricious, or an abuse of discretion.

§ 41–22–20(k) provides that ''the agency order shall be taken as prima facie just and reasonable except for that of the agency as to the weight of the evidence on questions of fact, except where otherwise authorized by statute.''
The trial court’s standard of review is the same as that of the trial court. Dawson, supra.

The record of the ABC Board’s hearing
reflects that the lounge is located in Mobile,
at 1385 Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., Avenue,
an area of mixed commercial and residential properties. Neighborhood residents testified that the lounge’s patrons discharged firearms; brawled in the parking lot; made excessive noise; trespassed; deposited weapons and narcotics in neighborhood
yards; illegally parked their cars; and urinated, defecated, and engaged in sexual activities on the lounge’s property.

Supporting testimony was offered by George
Boan and Kenneth Kirkland, two ABC Board employees, and by Sgt. Kay Taylor of the Mobile Police Department. Boan, an ABC
Board district supervisor, testified that he had personally observed loitering, noise, and illegal parking at the lounge, and he stated that during his investigation of the lounge he had been approached by prostitutes working
the area. Kirkland, an ABC Board agent, played a videotape that he had made of the parking lot and the area surrounding the

by the board of objections to the [renewal]
signed by persons authorized to do so.''
of an ABC Board action is clearly erroneous, unrea sonable, arbitrary, capricious, or an abuse of discretion.

§ 41–22–20(k) provides that ''the agency order shall be taken as prima facie just and reasonable except for that of the agency as to the weight of the evidence on questions of fact, except where otherwise authorized by statute.''
The trial court’s standard of review is the same as that of the trial court. Dawson, supra.
CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE

August 3, 1999

Accordingly, Mr. Chairman, I do not believe this amendment is germane and I insist on my point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentlewoman from California wish to be heard on the point of order?

Ms. LOFGREN. Yes, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentlewoman from California (Ms. LOFGREN) is recognized.

Ms. LOFGREN. Mr. Chairman, I would disagree with my colleague from Florida on the germaneness issue. In the example I gave in my 5 minutes in support of my amendment, I mentioned the issue where we had the possession of a Tech DC 9 by the owner of a winery and the holder of a Federal license of a winery. That is not a State license, that is a Federal license. And in order to affect that Federal license, recourse first of the ATF and later, and arguably necessarily, to the Federal courts, would be necessary. The State does not have jurisdiction over the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.

Further, I would note that the forum of a Federal court gives multi-State enforcement opportunities that arguably are not available to the attorneys general by recourse to a State forum. And if that is not the case, if that turns out to be incorrect, then the entire basis for this act being asserted by the proponents of the Scarborough bill evaporates. Because if the point of the gentleman from Florida (Mr. BARR) is that there is adequate remedy in State court, then there ought to be adequate remedy in State court for alcohol violations as well.

As the Chair will note, I did not ask for a vote on his prior ruling on the first amendment, because although I think an argument, and a good argument, could be made on its germaneness, I think that the arguments on germaneness on this amendment are weak indeed, and I would hope that the Chair would allow a vote to be taken on this amendment.

We have gone to great lengths to make sure it deals with the germaneness issue. Consequently, it is much smaller in scope than I think is appropriate and warranted by the violence emergency that faces us. But I offer it because at least it is something that this Congress could do as a show of good faith, to the mothers and fathers of America who, like myself, are preparing to send their children back to school in just a month or so.

So I would hope that the Chair would rule that this is germane, and that absent the two have raised the point of order might consider withdrawing that point of order. I think it is only fair that this House be given the opportunity to do something, something for gun safety for the mothers and fathers of this country.

Mr. Chairman, I submitted for the Record legal citations from the Appellate Court of Illinois on this subject matter.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Georgia desire to be heard on the point of order?

Mr. BARR of Georgia. He does.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Georgia (Mr. BARR) is recognized.

Mr. BARR of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, I am looking at this amendment. I have to conclude that Rube Goldberg is alive and well. If the Chair can figure out what this amendment means, the Chair is indeed very smart.

I think, though, that it can be stated very clearly and succinctly, Mr. Chairman, that this is simply an evidence of the gun control advocates seeking to interject gun control into any piece of legislation they can at whatever the cost. And the cost here would be at the price of clarity and germaneness.

What the gentlewoman is proposing here in bringing in the issue of State firearms laws, which have nothing whatsoever to do with a bill of a State regarding the sale of alcoholic beverages, is to try to bring in an unrelated contingency. That, Mr. Chairman, is specifically precluded by House rules, number 22, on germaneness, entitled Conditions or Qualifications, which I would respectfully quote to the Chair. It says, “A condition or qualification sought to be added by way of amendment must be germane to the provisions of the bill.”

The provisions of this bill relate solely and exclusively to State laws regarding the sale of alcoholic beverages. They have nothing whatsoever to do with firearms violations. This is not germane, it is unrelated, and I urge the Chair to sustain the point of order raised by the gentleman from Florida.

The CHAIRMAN. Does the gentleman from Michigan wish to be heard on the point of order?

Mr. CONYERS. Yes, Mr. Chairman.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Michigan (Mr. CONYERS) is recognized.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the point of order that is made, and I simply want to make it clear that this is a completely different amendment that is being brought forward.

What the gentlewoman is pointing out is that this is a subset of liquor violations, and some liquor violations do result from gun violations. She is merely setting a different effective date for those violations. This is just empowering the States to enforce their own liquor laws, which sometimes involve gun laws.

So this supports the principle purpose of the bill. It in no way is caught by germaneness. It is stopping the sale of alcohol in violation of State laws. It does this by allowing cases where firearms’ use violate State alcohol laws to be heard immediately. She merely changes the date.

So to argue the same non-germaneness arguments that were previously advanced fails to recognize that this is a substantially different amendment, and that it is clearly germane and is in accord with the precedence of the House.

This amendment does nothing whatsoever to expand the scope of the bill. It merely deals with the effective date issue, and for that reason I urge that the point of order be rejected.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair is prepared to rule on the point of order raised by the gentleman from Florida.

The gentleman from Florida raises a point of order that the amendment offered by the gentlewoman from California is not germane.

The bill amends the Webb-Kenyon Act to authorize an attorney general of a State to bring a civil action in a Federal court against a person that an attorney general has engaged in an act in violation of a State law regulating the importation or transportation of intoxicating liquor. The bill also establishes certain parameters for Federal judicial purview of an action brought under the new law.

Clause 7 of Rule XVI, the germaneness rule, provides that no proposition on a “subject different from that under consideration shall be admitted under color of amendment.” One of the central tenets of the germaneness rule is that the fundamental purpose of an amendment must be germane to the fundamental purpose of the bill.

The Chair discerns that fundamental purpose of a bill by examining the text of the bill and the report language accompanying the bill as evidenced by the ruling of the Chair on July 18, 1990, recorded in Volume 10, Chapter 28, section 5.6 of the Deschler-Brown Precedent, which indicated page 5 and 6 of the committee report, the underlying bill was “introduced in order to specifically provide States with access to Federal court to enforce their laws regulating interstate shipments of alcoholic beverages."

The fundamental purpose of the amendment appears to be to single out certain violations of liquor trafficking laws on the basis of their regard for any and all firearms issues. The Chair is of the opinion that the question illustrates the principle that an amendment may relate to the same subject matter, yet still stray from adherence to a common fundamental purpose, by singling out one constituent element of the larger subject for specific and unrelated scrutiny.

The fundamental purpose of the amendment is not the same as the fundamental purpose of the bill, nor is it a mere component of the larger purpose. Rather, the amendment pursues a purpose that, by its specialized focus, bears a corollary relationship to that pursued by the bill.

The proponent of this amendment has argued that her amendment merely addresses a subset of those State laws already addressed in the bill and is germane based on subject matter grounds. The Chair would note that the general principle found on page 618 of the House Rules and Manual that the standards by which the germaneness of an amendment may be measured are not exclusive. Thus, while the amendment may arguably address the same subject matter, or a subset thereof, as that of the underlying bill, the fundamental purpose of the amendment must still be germane under every application thereof to that of the bill.

In the opinion of the Chair, the amendment is not germane and the point of order is sustained.

Are there further amendments to the bill?

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MS. JACKSON-LEE OF Texas

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

Mr. SCARBOROUGH of Florida. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. The point of order by the gentleman from Florida is reserved.

The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk reads as follows:

Amendment offered by Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Page 6, line 19, strike the close quotation marks and the period at the end. Page 6, after line 9, insert the following [and make such technical and conforming changes as may be appropriate]:

"SEC. 3. REQUIREMENTS APPLICABLE TO CERTAIN CARRIERS IN CONNECTION WITH DELIVERY OF INTOXICATING LIQUOR TO A PLACE OF RESIDENCE.

"(a) DELIVERY OF INTOXICATING LIQUOR BY NON-GOVERNMENTAL CARRIERS FOR HERE.—It shall be unlawful for a nongovernmental carrier for hire, knowingly deliver a container of intoxicating liquor to a place of residence of any kind if such carrier fails to obtain the signature of the individual to whom such container is addressed.

"(b) PENALTY.—Whoever violates paragraph (1) shall be liable for a fine of $500.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas (dying the reading). Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be considered as read and printed in the RECORD.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore (Mr. BARRETT of Nebraska). Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Texas?

Mr. SCARBOROUGH. Objection.

Mr. CONGERS. Objection.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. Objection is heard. The Clerk will continue the reading. The Clerk continued reading the amendment.

Mr. SCARBOROUGH. Mr. Chairman, I continue to reserve a point of order.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. The gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON-LEE) is recognized.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I hope my colleague will see fit to join me in this amendment, and I would like to share with him language in H.R. 2031 in particular that specifically states, if the Attorney General in a reasonable manner believes that a person is engaged or has engaged in any fact that would constitute a violation of State law regulating the importation or transportation of any liquor," in part, this provision reads that we are dealing with the illegal importation of alcohol. And the supporting materials that my colleagues have circulated to even support this legislation all goes to the underage drinking of our young people.

We realize and have seen documentation, Mr. Chairman, that underage drinking is more devastating in our youth community than drugs. And interestingly enough, the amendment that I have just offered, and I might add that we all agree to see if the gentleman would accept a friendly amendment to my amendment or a perfecting amendment that deals with narrowing the opportunity by way of requiring the carrier, and I might amend that to be shipper, to in fact make sure that the signature of the individual to whom the container is addressed, which would, in and of itself, help to bring down the amendment of illegal alcohol being shipped and transported to youth.

In particular, materials that were sent out by the beer wholesalers, national beer wholesalers, speak to this issue, as well as some additional new faces and anecdotal stories that tell us what happens when young people use the Internet and these amounts of liquor come without any restraint whatsoever.

In Greenville, Mississippi, a teenage girl says ordering liquor or alcohol over the Internet is easier than walking into a store and buying it. February 16, 1999, in Boston, Massachusetts, indicates an 18-year-old lies about his age and uses his own debit card to order wine by the Internet. One package is left at the door without an ID check. One winery uses a deceptive return label that indicates the package was shipped from a printing company.

In addition, on May 13, 1999, again beer is sent to a 17-year-old. The UPS delivers it to an unmarked box. No ID check.

Materials that the beer wholesalers have offered to us have said several things. There is a new black market in alcohol. It says State laws are broken. Today this sensitive marketplace structure is in jeopardy, a national problem with local impact. Television stations in more than three dozen communities across the Nation have produced investigative reports that document how easy it is for teenagers to use the Internet to acquire beer.

If this is the premise upon which this legislation has been written, if we are to assist the attorney general in preventing illegal intoxicating liquors from being shipped across State lines, then we agree that in fact this is an amendment that should be accepted. Because what it asks the carrier to do is to simply get a signature of the individual on the container that is addressed. I would say to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. SCARBOROUGH) as well that we need to do what he says the legislation is attempting to do and that is to respond to underage drinking.

I can all rally around underage drinking. Mr. Chairman. For many of the carriers who are receiving alcohol from the shippers, they are in fact shipping to teenagers, leaving it, getting no ID, getting no signature, getting absolutely nothing that allows our teenagers, our youth, our college students to engage in alcohol abuse, which enhances and increases the numbers of those who are abusing alcohol.

I ask the gentleman from Florida to consider this amendment and, as well, be happy to offer a friendly amendment that should say that such requirement that requires the carriers to get the signature would be subject to the passage of a State law.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentlewoman yield?

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I want to compliment the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON-LEE).

If I understand the amendment, all she is asking is that the outside package have some identifying label that this is alcohol. Is that correct?

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Chairman, reclaiming my time, I am asking for the signature.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman would continue to yield, plus the signature when it is received to determine that it is going into the proper hands.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Chairman, that is correct.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, first of all, I am sure that is consistent with the bill. I mean, I hope we do not have a germaneness problem.

Secondly, it makes a pretty good sense. It would seem that those who support the bill might want to make this improvement merely because it makes more efficacious the whole process.

POINT OF ORDER

Mr. SCARBOROUGH. Mr. Chairman, I insist on my point of order and disagree with the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON-LEE) and also the ranking member of the Committee on the Judiciary. This is not consistent at all with the bill, and it is far outside the fundamental scope of this legislation.

Mr. Chairman, again, the fundamental purpose of this bill is to provide the attorneys general of any State with the authority to bring civil action in the United States District Court to enjoin any person or entity that the attorney general has reasonable cause to believe is engaged in any act that would constitute a violation of State law regulating the importation or transportation of an intoxicating liquor.

Now, what we have here from the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON-LEE) is actually a new set of substantive laws that would actually apply fines, penalties, and hold them accountable in Federal court for actual criminal or civil penalties. It is a substantive approach.

It is very important to remember, in this legislation the only thing we are talking about is providing States' attorneys general a procedural mechanism to go into State courts.

So by proposing this bill and if it passes, after it passes, we have not proposed any Federal laws regarding the sale of alcohol. We have not proposed any new civil penalties. We have not proposed any new criminal penalties.

The only thing that we are doing is providing States' attorneys general with a procedural mechanism to go into court and stop illegal wine sales that are transported across State lines.

So when the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON-LEE) offers this amendment, she is taking us out of this very narrowly limited procedural safeguard for States' attorneys general and instead expanding it to a point where we are going to have an entirely new class of individuals and businesses that are going to be liable under Federal law that are going to be able to be dragged into Federal court and be held accountable under civil or criminal penalties.

Despite the debate that has preceded this conversation on the floor right now, there is nothing in my legislation and in the legislation of the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. DELAHUNT) that would hold anybody accountable under any new civil or criminal penalty. Again, it only provides a simple procedural safeguard so States' attorneys general are allowed only to stop the illegal shipment of alcohol into their States.

According to House Practice Germaneness Section 9, one individual proposition is not germane to another individual proposition. This is clearly one individual proposition that is being added to another. We are clearly bringing in an entirely new group of people who will be liable under this. We are trying to add new Federal regulations, telling shippers, nongovernmental shippers, what they may or may not ship and when they ship and how they ship and what procedures they must go through so they are not dragged into Federal court and then held liable.

So accordingly, Mr. Chairman, this amendment is clearly not germane. And I will make my point of order.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore (Mr. BARRETT of Nebraska). Does the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON-LEE) wish to speak to the point of order?

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Yes, I would, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. CHAIRMAN. I am disappointed in my colleague from Florida. And I realize that he has turned the debate away from the premise of the bill.

Again I refer to H.R. 2031, which says, “if the attorney general has reasonable cause to believe a person is engaged or has engaged in any act that would violate a constitution of State law regarding the importation or transportation of an intoxicating liquor.”

That is what this amendment proposes to do. It proposes to make illegal for a nongovernmental carrier to deliver liquor to a place of residence without a signature.

I have already indicated to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. SCARBOROUGH) that I would be more than willing to make it subject to the passage of such State law. But we have a problem with underage drinking. And as the materials have indicated, sent out by the supporters of this bill, the national beer wholesalers who indicate that, if I might just cite some of their information, Mr. Chairman, State laws are broken. A national problem with local impact exists. They cited a number of instances where students were receiving large amounts of alcohol and, of course, without any identification and, therefore, engaging in alcohol abuse.

I would simply raise the specter to the gentleman that germaneness is a real problem and that we have a real problem on the crisis level. We are at a crisis level with the abuse of alcohol by our young people.

First of all, I would ask the gentleman from Florida (Mr. SCARBOROUGH) would he accept a friendly amendment to modify it to make this subject to the passage of State laws in order to get to the point that we are trying to do.

Let me say this, Mr. Chairman, in particular. We have a situation where our children are being negatively impacted. We have clear evidence that laws are being broken, that there is no enforcement. The amendment that I offer would provide enforcement. It would encourage carriers to make sure that the addressee and the individual that signs equals the same person. By that they would determine whether or not to deliver to underage drinkers.

I think, Mr. Chairman, that we can do no less. If this bill is argued on the premise of bringing down underage drinking, then I clearly believe this amendment should be ruled not only in order but should be ruled as germane.

Mr. BARR of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, I wish to be heard on the point of order.

Mr. Chairman, here again, similarly, though not exactly the same as the prior amendments, there is a germaneness issue that jumps to the fore in looking at the amendment proposed by the gentlewoman from Texas. I would note particularly in the House Practice Volume, Section 27, that what the gentlewoman is proposing to do is to amend a bill that amends existing law and going beyond the proposed amendment to the existence of civil penalties.

It says, “A germaneness rule may provide the basis for a point of order against an amendment that is offered to a bill amending existing law.”

The gentleman from Florida (Mr. SCARBOROUGH) is proposing an amendment to an existing law in a very narrow respect.

What the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON-LEE) is proposing to do by way of an amendment to the bill of the gentleman goes beyond that. It indeed would establish not an amendment to what the gentleman is proposing, and that is a change to Section 28 of the Federal Rules of Procedure relating to injunctive relief, but she is proposing a new substantive provision of the Federal Criminal Code.

We are talking about two entirely different titles of the Federal Code. We are talking here about the Civil Code. She is talking about a new substantive criminal provision.

It clearly raises germaneness questions. She is attempting to amend a bill that amends existing law in a way that is clearly improper pursuant to precedent and House Practice.

I would urge the Chair to sustain the point of order raised by the gentleman from Florida (Mr. SCARBOROUGH).

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. Does the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON-LEE) have further argument on the point of order?

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Yes, Mr. Chairman, I do.

Mr. Chairman, I am disappointed. And I hear the opponents' arguments.

As I indicated, the bill itself speaks to the attorney general being able to prohibit the illegal transfer or interstate transfer of alcohol. The underlying arguments for the bill speak to underage drinking.

My amendment in particular deals with carriers shipping interstate, in the course of interstate commerce, alcohol and the requirement thereof for a signature to the addressee.

I cannot imagine the unwillingness of the proponents of this legislation to be...
Mr. Chairman. I would ask my good friend from Florida to reconsider his point of order, because it simply asks for a study to determine the impact of the bill. That is what it asks for the Attorney General to carry out the study required by subsection A and it asks for these results to be presented back to us, this Congress, to ensure that what we are trying to do, to stop illegal bootlegging to people over 21 years of age as it is to stop illegal bootlegging for people under 21 years of age. I am hopeful that the gentlewoman from Texas will be able to support this overall bill.

Let me, first of all, respond to some things that have been said by the gentlewoman from Texas. She has been saying the same things today regarding the main purposes of this bill being to stop the illegal sales of alcohol to minors. That certainly is a very important part of it, but I believe it is just as important that we stop illegal bootlegging to people over 21 years of age as it is to stop illegal bootlegging for people under 21 years of age. I am hopeful that the gentlewoman from Texas will be able to support this overall bill.

I must say that I was a bit confused in committee after she had expressed her deep concerns about underage drinking and said that it was a national crisis and that it was extraordinarily important for us to stop the illegal bootlegging to minors. I then voted against the bill because she said that it applied also to people over the age of 21. This is a great first step. I know the gentlewoman wants to expand and wants to have carriers, non-governmental carriers sold liable, wants to put nongovernmental carriers in a position where they are actually going to be responsible for carding, and I certainly know that my friends, or perhaps my former friends, in the wine industry would not want to make Federal Express and UPS and other common carriers liable for carding at doors across the United States, because obviously their response to that would be to stop transporting wine across State lines.

So I certainly am hopeful that the gentlewoman will be supportive of the overall bill. If she believes that illegal alcohol sales to minors is a national crisis, then this is the way you stop it. The argument that you oppose stopping illegal bootlegging to minors through a bill form because you also are trying to stop illegal bootlegging to people over the age of 21 is an argument that quite bluntly I just do not understand. I certainly am hopeful that the gentlewoman is not going to oppose this bill if again she is concerned about this national crisis.

Let me also say, further, I am very pleased that she sees this as a national crisis. I mentioned 30, 35 news stations from San Francisco to Washington, DC to do this. I wish I could have had that influence in the media. I do not. I think it is helpful, though, that the gentlewoman understands that there is a national crisis out there but the national crisis is not limited to illegal alcoholic sales for people that cross the age of 21. Illegal bootlegging is occurring across the country now, people of all ages.

I do obviously withdraw the point of order that I reserved. I do understand

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas:

At the end of the bill, add the following:

(a) STUDY.—This Act shall not take effect until 90 days after the Attorney General submits to the Congress the results of a study to determine the effect the amendment made by this bill would have on reducing consumption of intoxicating liquor by individuals who by reason of age may not lawfully purchase or possess intoxicating liquor under Federal law.

(b) COMPLETION OF STUDY.—The Attorney General shall carry out the study required by subsection (a) and shall submit the results of such study not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act.

Mr. SCARBOROUGH, Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore (Mr. BARRETT of Nebraska). The gentleman from Florida reserves a point of order.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Chairman, we commit ourselves as Members of the United States Congress to not waste the taxpayers' dollars, to solve national crises, and to respond to the immediacy of the issue. As I indicated in all of the underlying arguments and supporting documentation that the proponents of this legislation have utilized, they have utilized the premises of teenagers getting alcohol, underage drinking, the abuse of alcohol. In fact, in their own documentation, there is a recounting of the tragedies of what happens when underage drinkers or how they get alcohol.

This amendment is a simple request, Mr. Chairman. I would ask my good American Community Record—House August 3, 1999

19216
the purpose of this amendment. I will not be supporting this amendment. I do not think we need to stall an additional 90 days. If it is a crisis, I do not think we should give minors or people over 21 an additional 3 months to purchase alcohol illegally over the Internet. Likewise, I do not think you need a study for 180 days from the Attorney General to the State attorneys general, telling them that illegal wine sales are occurring. They are occurring. Everybody knows they are occurring.

Again the only thing this bill does, the overall bill that she is seeking to amend, is it differentiates between illegal alcoholic sales and legal alcoholic sales.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SCARBOROUGH. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. CONYERS. I was wondering over here on our side, if we strike out the not taking effect for 90 days and make this a straight study, would that meet the objections and then the approval of the leadership on that side?

Mr. SCARBOROUGH. Again, my only concern with that is if we strike out the 90 days, I am concerned that that gives in to the argument that this measure strictly is concerned with illegal sales to people under the age of 21.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from Florida (Mr. SCARBOROUGH) has expired.

(On request of Mr. CONYERS, and by unanimous consent, Mr. SCARBOROUGH was allowed to proceed for 2 additional minutes.)

Mr. SCARBOROUGH. I continue to yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. CONYERS. Suppose we make it a study of the impact of this legislation assumed to be effective, so that there would be no taking effect and it would have no negative implications.

Mr. SCARBOROUGH. If it will have no negative effect on the effective date, I certainly will consider it. I cannot give the gentleman an answer right now, but I certainly would consider that. My main concern is that we do not delay implementation of this obviously, because if it is a national crisis, as the gentlewoman from Texas says it is, we do not want to waste 3 months.

Mr. BARR of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SCARBOROUGH. I yield to the gentleman from Georgia.

Mr. BARR of Georgia. Mr. Chairman, I am still not quite sure what the purpose of a study just to have a study is. Members on the other side have spoken very eloquently in committee as well as on the floor today recognizing that there is indeed a very serious national problem with underage drinking. That conclusion has been reached in the absence of a magical study by the Attorney General. So we all know there is a problem out there. This bill has nothing to do with Federal authorities. This bill has to do with the authorities of State attorneys general, not the United States Attorney General. I think this is a walk in the park, I do not think we need this, and I would urge my colleagues, and especially the gentleman from Florida, to oppose the amendment as unnecessary and costly. The Attorney General of the United States has far too many issues, including what I presume my colleagues on the other side would agree is inadequate enforcement of gun laws already, and now we are saying take some of those scarce resources and allocate it to a study of an issue that we are not even proposing here because what we are proposing here is the authority of State attorneys general, not the U.S. Attorney General. I would oppose the amendment.

Mr. SCARBOROUGH. Reclaiming my time, let me ask the gentleman, is he saying here that it is his position that this study would not delay the implementation of this?

Mr. CONYERS. Absolutely. I am trying to save the time actually, I am trying not to go to a vote and all of that, if we could merely have the impact of the legislation studied, which is not inconsistent with anything in the bill, nor anything that either of us on either side have debated in this matter.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. The time of the gentleman from Florida (Mr. SCARBOROUGH) has again expired.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. SCARBOROUGH. Reclaiming my time. Mr. Chairman, what we are trying to do is suggest that there be a study, an impact study on the legislation if and when it is passed. I do not think that will hurt anybody pro or con. It should be very helpful to us, particularly on the Committee on the Judiciary, who will be looking at this matter across the years. This is not some fly-by-night provision. And it expedites time. We are working under 2 hours of amendments. The gentleman from California has an amendment she would like to put forward. It would save us a vote. I think that without a not taking effect for 90 days taken out of this, we are in a position to move forward expeditiously.

Mr. SCARBOROUGH. Reclaiming my time. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CONYERS. I yield to the gentleman from Florida.

Mr. SCARBOROUGH. Reclaiming my time. We have concerns from the gentleman from Georgia regarding the cost of this. Is there any estimate, CBO estimate or any other estimate on what the cost of this study would be? Because certainly if it is a national crisis, as you say it is, is it certainly something that we need to address and we need to know the depth of that national crisis and certainly we know what kind of impact this is having.

Mr. SCARBOROUGH. Reclaiming my time. Mr. Chairman, let me comfort the gentleman by saying that I am sure that the Attorney General has one or two or three people who would conduct a study here that would be negligible in the budget of the Department of Justice. I think cost would be no immediate concern whatsoever.

Mr. SCARBOROUGH. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman would yield one more time.

Mr. CONYERS. Of course.

Mr. SCARBOROUGH. Mr. Chairman, is the gentleman also willing to get rid of the age issue and not only look at under-age, illegal alcohol sales to under age drinkers, but also illegal bootlegging for all ages? Would he be willing to do that?

Mr. CONYERS. Yes, we are looking at an impact of this entire legislation. So we have taken out the specific references.

Mr. SCARBOROUGH. So, Mr. Chairman, all aspects of this legislation, including lost revenues to States to enforce their laws.

Mr. CONYERS. Absolutely.

Mr. SCARBOROUGH. Mr. Chairman, I have got to say I have no objection to that. I would like to see the draft.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Chairman, we assure the gentleman that there is nothing but fairness exuding from this side of the aisle, no underhanded motives, and the impact study of the legislation, nothing could be more neutral than that.

Mr. SCARBOROUGH. Certainly, and if the gentleman would yield, if the gentlewoman would withdraw this amendment and then have the modified language offered at the desk, I would have no objection to that.

Mr. CONYERS. There is no other way we can do that.

I want to assure the gentleman that from my point of view there is no other way we can proceed without withdrawing this and advancing the other, and because I know the gentleman’s good faith is no less than mine, I am prepared to go that way.

Mrs. MALONEY of New York. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to this bill and in support of the amendment offered by my friend from California.

I share the concern of my friend from Florida and other supporters that we must do everything possible to reduce underage drinking, and I would be proud to vote for this bill if I thought it would achieve that goal.

But in reality, Mr. Chairman, this bill will do little to stop underage drinking while potentially crippling an industry that is very important to our nation and to my home state of New York.

New York, like many other states across the country, has a thriving wine industry dominated by small vineyards.

These vineyards have taken advantage of the Internet to sell their products across the nation.

The vast majority of these sales are to responsible adult consumers.

This legislation threatens these small wineries by permitting other states to seek action in federal court to block them from distributing their wines.
CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE

August 3, 1999

This bill is an unjustifiable intrusion by the federal government into matters that should be left to the states. It is opposed by the National Conference of State Legislatures—the very same people that this bill is supposed to be helping. Moreover, it would effectively give states the authority to regulate interstate commerce, in direct violation of the Constitution.

Mr. Chairman, the real purpose of this bill is not to prevent underage drinking. The real purpose of this bill is to protect the large beer and wine wholesalers from competition from independent producers, like many of the small wineries found in my home state of New York.

The amendment, by contrast, will target the abuse of alcohol, and to oppose this bill.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE. Is there any objection to the adoption of Amendment No. 4 offered by the gentleman from Nebraska, Mr. BARR, that the amendment to the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute, as amended, was agreed to?

Chairman. Under the rule, the Committee rises.

Accordingly, the Committee rose; and the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. CALVET) having claimed the chair, Mr. BARR of Nebraska, Chairman of the Committee of the Whole on the House of the United States, reported that the Committee, having had under consideration the bill (H.R. 2033) to provide for injunctive relief in Federal district court to enforce State laws relating to the interstate transportation of intoxicating liquor, pursuant to House Resolution 272, reported the bill back to the House with an amendment adopted by the Committee of the Whole.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the rule, the previous question is ordered.

Is a separate vote demanded on the amendment to the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute adopted by the Committee of the Whole? Mr. Chairman, the real purpose of this bill is not to prevent underage drinking. The real purpose of this bill is to protect the large beer and wine wholesalers from competition from independent producers, like many of the small wineries found in my home state of New York.

The amendment, by contrast, will target abuse of alcohol, and to oppose this bill.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE is withdrawn.

The gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON-LEE). All time authorized under the rule for consideration of amendments is now expired.

The CHAIRMAN. The request for a request to change the rule adopted under the rule for consideration of amendments is now expired.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. All time authorized under the rule for consideration of amendments is now expired.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will restate the motion that he can accept the request?

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. The Chair will restate the motion that he can accept the request?

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Can we ask unanimous consent for additional time of 10 minutes? It is always better when we can work together.

I ask unanimous consent for an additional 10 minutes to be able to respond to these concerns and work out some of the issues that we are working on.

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair continues to count for a quorum, but the gentleman from Texas is advised that the Committee of the Whole cannot entertain such a unanimous consent request to change the rule adopted by the House.

Does the gentleman withdraw her request?

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Can the Chair restate the motion that he cannot entertain for clarification?

The CHAIRMAN. The Committee of the Whole may not entertain such an unanimous consent request to change the rule adopted by the House.

The CHAIRMAN. The Committee of the Whole may not entertain such an unanimous consent request to change the rule adopted by the House.

The CHAIRMAN. Can the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON-LEE) be advised that the Committee of the Whole cannot entertain such a unanimous consent request to change the rule adopted by the House.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Can the Chair restate the motion that he cannot entertain for clarification?

The CHAIRMAN. The Chair will restate the motion that he cannot entertain for clarification?

The amendment is rejected.

The question is on the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute, as amended, was agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. Under the rule, the Committee rises.
Mr. CONYERS moves to recommit the bill H.R. 2031 to the Committee on the Judiciary with instructions to report the bill forthwith to the House with the following amendment:

SEC. 4. STUDY.

The Attorney General shall submit to the Congress the results of a study to determine the impact of this Act. The Attorney General shall carry out the study required by subsection (a) and shall submit the results of such study not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act.

The acceptance of this motion to recommit will offer an additional modest improvement to the bill. Mr. SCARBOROUGH, Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CONYERS. I yield to the gentleman from Florida.

Mr. SCARBOROUGH. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, we can make this brief. I do not intend to oppose this motion to recommit. I certainly understand the concerns of many people from California and other wine-producing regions, and understand their eagerness. I would like to thank them for working with us to make this a better bill. I would also like to thank them, in their eagerness, for allowing me the opportunity to vote on the engrossment and third reading. I have not done that before. I thank the gentleman from California that did that.

Mr. Speaker, I think this is very important for us to have this study. I understand the gentleman's concerns. I thank the gentleman from California (Mr. Cox) and others for coming together and having us produce something that works. The study, I think, of the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON-LEE) would be helpful. As she said, we have a national crisis right now regarding the sale of alcohol to alcohol to people of majority age.

I thank the gentleman for working with us on the motion to recommit, and I will be supporting it, as well as the final bill.

Mr. CONYERS. I thank the gentleman, Mr. Speaker. I urge the Members to support the motion to recommit.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. If no Member rises in opposition, the previous question is ordered on the motion to recommit.

There was no objection. The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion to recommit. The motion to recommit was agreed to.

Mr. SCARBOROUGH. Mr. Speaker, acting under the instructions of the House on behalf of the Committee on the Judiciary, I report the bill, H.R. 2031, back to the House with an amendment.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment:

At the end of the bill, add the following:

Mr. Speaker, this motion to recommit. The question is on the amendment. The amendment was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was read the third time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the passage of the bill. The question was taken; and the ayes appeared to have it.

Ms. LOFGREN. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 310, nays 112, not voting 11, as follows:

[Roll No. 364]
Mr. FOSSELLA changed his vote from "nay" to "yea." So the bill was passed. The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Stated for:
Mr. KENNEDY of Rhode Island. Mr. Speaker, the following is the text of House Joint Resolution 58:

Resolved by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That Congress does not approve the extension of the authority contained in section 402(c) of the Trade Act of 1974 recommended by the President to Congress on June 3, 1999, with respect to Vietnam.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the order of the House of Friday, July 30, 1999, the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. CRANE) and a Member in support of the joint resolution each will control 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. CRANE).

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. CRANE, Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous materials on House Joint Resolution 58.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

Mr. CRANE, Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to yield one-half of my time to the gentleman from New York (Mr. RANGEI) in opposition to the joint resolution and that he be permitted to yield further blocks of time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

There was no objection.

Mr. CRANE, Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to H.J. Res. 58 and in support of Vietnam's Jackson-Vanik waiver.

Over the past decade, the United States has taken gradual steps to normalize our bilateral regulations with Vietnam. This process has borne tangible results on the full range of issues in our bilateral agenda, including increased accounting of our missing in action, increased trade opportunities for U.S. firms and workers, and substantial progress toward resolution of the remaining emigration cases.

Last week, the administration reached a bilateral trade agreement in principle with the Vietnamese that will serve as the basis for a reciprocal extension of normal trade relations once it is finalized and approved by Congress.

The agreement in principle contains provisions on market access in goods, trade, and services, intellectual property protection, and investment, which are necessary for U.S. firms to compete in the Vietnamese market, the 12th most populous in the world.

The Vietnamese pledge to lift import quotas and bans, reduce key tariffs, protect intellectual property rights, ensure transparency in rules and regulations, and ease restrictions on financial services, telecommunications, and distribution.
August 3, 1999

Because Vietnam and the United States have not yet finalized and approved a bilateral agreement, the effects of the Jackson-Vanik waiver at this time is quite limited.

The waiver enables U.S. exporters doing business with Vietnam to have access to U.S. trade financing programs, provided that Vietnam meets the requirements of the waiver.

The significance of Vietnam’s waiver is that it permits us to stay engaged with the Vietnamese and to pursue further reforms. Vietnam is not an easy place to do business; however, our engagement enables us to influence the pace and direction of Vietnamese reform.

I will insert in the Record a letter I received for more than 150 U.S. companies and trade associations supporting Vietnam’s waiver. I believe such actions represent an important step in the ability of the U.S. business community to compete in Vietnam’s market.

Terminating Vietnam’s waiver will give Vietnam an excuse to halt further reforms.

Do not take away our ability to pressure the Vietnamese for progress on issues of importance to the United States.

I urge a “no” vote on H.J. Res. 58.

Mr. Speaker, the letter I referred to is as follows:

JULY 23, 1999

Hon. PHILIP CRANE, House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

DEAR REPRESENTATIVE CRANE: As members of the American business and agricultural community, we strongly support action to normalize trade relations with Vietnam. Renewal of the Jackson-Vanik waiver is a key step in this direction. We strongly oppose H.J. Res. 58, which would deny the waiver.

Renewal of the Jackson-Vanik waiver will ensure that U.S. companies and farmers selling to Vietnam will maintain access to critical loan guarantees and subsidies provided by the U.S. Trade and Development Agency, such as those of the U.S. Export-Import Bank, the Overseas Private Investment Corporation, and agricultural credit programs.

Furthermore, overturning the Jackson-Vanik waiver could derail current bilateral trade negotiations at a critical time. The talks, which have been ongoing for three years, could be successfully completed in a matter of a few weeks. The U.S. Trade Representative is seeking commitments from Vietnam on market access for goods, agricultural products, services and investment, and the protection of intellectual property rights. The final agreement will thus bring Vietnamese law closer to international norms, thereby helping U.S. companies and farmers to tap the long-term potential of Vietnam, the second most populous country in Southeast Asia. The American business and agricultural community will work hard for congressional approval of a trade agreement that provides meaningful access to Vietnam’s markets.

The American business and agricultural community believes that a policy of economic normalization with Vietnam is in our national interest. We urge you to support the renewal of the Jackson-Vanik waiver, an important step in this process. We also stand ready to work with Congress toward passing of a trade agreement that opens Vietnamese markets to U.S. goods, agricultural products, services and investment.

Sincerely,

ABB; Ablondi, Foster, Sobin, Davidow; ACE International; AEA International SOS; Aetna International, Inc.; AES ure; American Apparel Manufacturers Association; American Chamber of Commerce in Australia; American Chamber of Commerce in Canada; American Chamber of Commerce in Hong Kong; American Chamber of Commerce in Korea; American Chamber of Commerce in the Philippines; American Chamber of Commerce in Thailand; American Council of Life Insurance; American Electronics Association; American Express Company; American Farm Bureau Federation; American International Group, Inc.; American-Vietnamese Management Consortium, Inc.; Amstel Sanitaryware, Inc., ARCO; Arthur Anderson Vietnam; Asia-Pacific Council of American Chambers of Commerce; Associated General Contractors of America; Association for Manufacturing Technology; AT Kearney; Banker and McKenzie, Vietnam; BBDO, Advertising Agency; Black and Veatch; Bridgecreek Group; Brown & Root; California Chamber of Commerce; Caltex; Camp Dresser & McKee International, Inc.; Cargill; Caterpillar, Inc.; Centrifugal Casting Machine Co., Inc.; Chamber of Commerce of the Princeton Area; Checkpoint Systems, Asia Pacific; Chemical Corporation; Chillicothe-Ross Chamber of Commerce; Citigroup; Coalition for Employment through Exports, Inc.; Commerce Advisory Partners; Condon Group; Connec; Brokers Company, Ltd.; Conduit Brothers, Vietnam; Craft Corporation; Crown Worldwide Ltd.; Dai-ichi; Deason Graf Graham & James; Delco Chamber of Commerce; Delta Equipment and Construction Company; Direct Selling Association; Eastman Kodak Co.; East-West Trade and Investment, Inc.; Electronic Industries Alliance; Eli Lilly (Asia) Inc.; Elliscott International; Emergency Committee for American Trade; Environmental Defense; Eversheds; Exchange Bank of East Asia; Fashion Garments Ltd.; FDX Corporation; Fertilizer Institute; Firmenich Inc.; Foster Wheeler Corporation; Freehill Midius; Freeman International; Georgia Chamber of Commerce; Freshfields Vietnam; General Electric Company; Habersham County Chamber of Commerce; Halliburton Company; Hewlett-Packard Company; Hills and Co.; Humphrey International Healthcare Inc.; IAMBIC, Ltd.; IBC Corporation; IBM; Illinois State Chamber of Commerce; Indochina Asset Management Ltd.; Ingersoll-Rand Company; Interior Architects, Inc.; John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Company; Johnson & Johnson; Joseph Simon & Sons; Kansas Chamber of Commerce & Industry; KHIM Inc.; Leo Burnett/M&L Vietnam; LIG Products Ltd.; Long Beach Area Chamber of Commerce; Louis Dreyfus Corp.; Lyk, Inc.; McDonnell Douglas; Metalthanks; Ministry of Commerce; Mobil Corporation; Motion Picture Association of America; Motorola; National Association of Manufacturers; National Chamber of Commerce; National Institute for World Trade; National Oilseed Processors Association; National Retail Federation; Netrak Logistics; SOGID; Peterson Professional: Computer Careers; Phoenix Electric; Polaris Co., Ltd.; Pricewaterhousecoopers Vietnam Ltd.; Procera, Inc.; Process Control International; PSW; Raytheon; Rotex; RRC Schneider Electric; Rural Enterprises of Oklahoma, Inc.; Russin & Vecchi; S.C. Johnson & Son; Sams International Associates, Inc.; ScicClone Pharmaceuticals International; Small Business Exporters Association; S-Tec Corporation; Telecommunications Industry Association; Telecomobile Inc.; The Boeing Company; The Chamber/Southwest Louisiana; Tiele & Gibbins Consultant's Ltd.; U.S. Association of Importers of Textiles and Apparel; U.S. Chamber of Commerce; U.S. Committee Pacific Basin Economic Council-PBEC US; U.S. Council for International Business; U.S. Trading & Investment Company; U.S.-ASEAN Business Council; U.S.-Vietnam Trade Council; Unisys Corporation; United Parcel Service; United States in Vietnam; United States-Mexico Manufacturers Association; Vietnam Auditing Company; Vietnam Venture Group, Inc.; Vinifera Wine Growers Association; Warmaco Inc.; Wharton County Chamber of Commerce and Agriculture.

Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as the bill may consume to the gentleman from California (Mr. ROHRABACHER), though I disagree perhaps at times.

Mr. ROHRABACHER. Mr. Speaker, I certainly appreciate the gentleman yielding me this time, as I am the author of the bill; and I wanted to have this opportunity to speak at this time.

It has been 1 year since President Clinton issued the first Jackson-Vanik waiver for Vietnam. Unfortunately, there has been no progress concerning democracy and human rights in Vietnam. And more specifically, in violation of Jackson-Vanik, the U.S. Government reports systematic corruption in Vietnam’s refugee program.

I know a joint resolution to disapproving Jackson-Vanik waivers for the Vietnamese dictatorship does not intend to isolate Vietnam nor stop U.S. companies from doing business there. It simply prevents Communist Vietnam from enjoying a trade status that enables American businesses to invest there with loan guarantees and subsidies provided by the U.S. taxpayer. If private banks or insurance companies will not back up or insure private business ventures in Vietnam, American local and small taxpayers should not be asked to do so.

Rampant corruption and mismanagement are as valid a reason to oppose this waiver as repression in Vietnam. And during the last year, rather than open up its state-managed economy, the Vietnamese Communist regime has further tightened its grip. There has been no move whatsoever toward free elections. And yesterday’s Reuters News Agency reported that the Vietnamese government’s crackdown on opposition parties will not be tolerated.

This morning’s Washington Times reports a new campaign in Vietnam to crush Christians.
The lack of real progress to honestly resolve the MIA–POW cases and the continued persecution of America’s former POWs and MIAs is why House Joint Resolution 58 is strongly supported by the American Legion, our country’s largest veterans’ organization, as well as other veterans’ organizations and the National League of MIA–POW Families, and the National Alliance of POW–MIA Families.

Mr. CRANE. Mr. Speaker, I reclaim my time, and I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. McNULTY. Mr. Speaker, I claim the time in support of the joint resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BARRETT of Nebraska). The gentleman from New York (Mr. McNULTY) is recognized for 30 minutes.

Mr. McNULTY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that I be permitted to revise and extend his remarks, and include extraneous material.

Mr. McNULTY. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of House Joint Resolution 58 which disapproves the President’s determination to waive the Jackson-Vanik freedom of emigration requirements for Vietnam.

Others have pointed out that this debate is not about extension of normal trade relations to Vietnam, but rather about the more limited issue of whether Vietnam should be eligible to participate in U.S. credit and credit guarantee programs. Technically, Mr. McNULTY, that is correct. However, I think we all know that this debate is about something much more.

In granting this waiver, we send a message of support to the government of Vietnam. We are telling the government of Vietnam that despite their continued failure to assist us in finding lost servicemen, despite their refusal to allow Vietnamese, including Vietnamese who bravely fought alongside us, to leave Vietnam, despite their blatant disregard for human rights, that we support them. These are not the values for which 58,000 U.S. servicemen and women gave their lives.

The trade embargo with Vietnam was lifted in 1994. In the intervening years, what progress has Vietnam shown? There are still 2,063 Americans still unaccounted for in southeast Asia. While the remains of some of those Americans may not be recoverable, it strains belief that the Vietnamese have no information as to the fate or location of all of these men and women.

Mr. ROHRABACHER. Mr. Speaker, it is too little and it is coming too late. It has been 25 years since the communist takeover of the entire country, and in that time the Vietnamese have only cooperated with us when it would benefit them, and then only to the extent that they saw fit. This is not my definition of cooperation.

Mr. Speaker, I do not oppose the eventual normalization of relations with the people of Vietnam. I do, however, oppose normalization of relations with this government under these circumstances.

Now, some may claim, Mr. Speaker, that I have an emotional attachment to this issue, and they are correct. On August the 9th, 1970, HM3 William F. McNulty was killed in Vietnam. He was a medical Navy corpsman transferred to the Marines. He spent his time patching up his buddies. One day he stepped on a land mine and lost his life.

That was a tremendous loss for our family. And I can tell my colleagues from personal experience that the pain may subside, but it never goes away. But there is a difference between what the McNulty family went through and what an MIA family goes through. Because Bill’s body was returned to us, we had a wake and a funeral and a burial. What we had, Mr. Speaker, was closure. I can only imagine what the family of an MIA has gone through over these past 25 years and longer.

Mr. Speaker, until there is a more complete accounting for those missing in action, until there is progress on the immigration front, until there is respect for human rights, this waiver should not be granted.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. RANGEL. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to House Resolution 58, which disapproves of the President’s determination to waive the Jackson-Vanik Freedom of Immigration Requirements for Vietnam. This resolution, if passed, would preclude Vietnam from participating in United States trade financing programs, such as those sponsored by the Ex-Im Bank, OPIC, and agricultural credit programs under the United States Department of Agriculture.

At a broader level, passage of this resolution would seriously undermine the progress in United States-Vietnam relations made in the last 10 years. Since the late 1980s, Vietnam has shown a commitment towards reengaging with the United States, evidenced by greater cooperation with the POW–MIA accounting and on immigration issues.
Mr. ROYCE. Mr. Speaker, opponents of this resolution say they are opposed to this resolution because they support a more free and open Vietnam. Well, I also support a more free and open Vietnam. But, I support this resolution because by passing it we send a clear signal that business as usual is not acceptable.

No one is looking to take away the right of American corporations to do business in Vietnam. First, let us be clear. Since the U.S. trade embargo on Vietnam was lifted in 1994, businesses have had the ability to trade with and invest in Vietnam, and some have done so. The debate over Jackson-Vanik waiver for Vietnam is not about trade and investment. This is about government subsidies for companies operating in Vietnam.

This resolution is also about maintaining the focus on changes we would like to see in Vietnam. And I thought this was why we first normalized relations with Vietnam, with the expectation that it would bring about a genuine reform, a genuine effort at progress. It is no secret that the Vietnamese government wants this waiver, but in granting the waiver once again we are saying it is okay that religious freedom continues to be restricted, it is okay that there is minimal political freedom, it is okay to have repression and to have it intensified this past year.

If this waiver is upheld or rejected, American companies will be no more or less free to invest in Vietnam. It should be noted, however, that the investment climate in Vietnam is not good and that several American companies have pulled out and several others are considering pulling out. We should realize that one simply cannot do business, whether a foreigner or as a Vietnamese, in a place where the rule of law is disregarded.

For the U.S. to subsidize companies that do business in Vietnam through OPIC or Ex-Im would be for us to ignore this reality. As long as the Vietnamese government continues to jam Radio Free Asia, which is an attempt to deny the Vietnamese people access to objective news, and as long as it violates human rights and disrespects economic freedom, we should not waive Jackson-Vanik.

It is only through taking these steps that we can leverage and bring about the necessary changes concerning respect for individual rights, religious freedom and liberalized markets in one of the world's most politically and economically repressive countries.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Nebraska (Mr. BERREUTER).

Mr. BERREUTER. Mr. Speaker, as chairman of the Subcommittee on Asia and the Pacific, I rise in opposition to the resolution.

The Jackson-Vanik waiver does not constitute an endorsement of the communist regime in Hanoi. However, our experience has been that the isolation and disengagement does not promote progress in human rights.

New sanctions, including the symbolic disapproval of the Jackson-Vanik waiver, only strengthen the position of the Communist hard-liners at the expense of those in Vietnam's leadership who are inclined to support more openness.

Engagement with Vietnam has resulted in some improvements in Vietnam's human rights practices, although we still remain disappointed at the limit scope and nature of those reforms.

Mr. Speaker, Americans must conclusively recognize that the war with Vietnam is over. The last round of diplomatic relationships in 1995, the U.S. and Vietnam embarked on a new relationship for the future. It will not be an easy or quick process.

The emotional scars of the Vietnam war remain with many Americans. In the mid-1960s, this Member was an intelligence officer with the First Infantry Division; less than a month after the completion of my service, members of our tight-knit detachment of that division were in Vietnam taking casualties the very first night after arrival.

Like other Vietnam-era veterans, this Member has emotional baggage. A great many Americans have emotional baggage on Vietnam, but this Member would suggest it is time to get on with our bilateral relationship and not reverse course on Vietnam.

Distinguished Americans like JOHN MCCAIN, Pete Peterson, ROBERT KERREY, JOHN KERRY, GEORGE HAGEL, MAX CLELAND, CHUCK ROBB, and others support the effort to normalize our relationships with Vietnam. If they can do it, so can we.

Passing this resolution of disapproval on the Jackson-Vanik waiver would represent yet another rejection of ambiguities of the past at a time when Vietnam is finally looking ahead and making changes towards integration into the international community.

A retraction on our part by this disapproval resolution is not in America's short- and long-term national interest. Accordingly, this Member strongly urges the rejection of House Resolution 58.

By law, the underlying issue is about emigration. That is what Jackson-Vanik is all about and that is what we ought to be addressing. Since March of 1998, the United States has granted Vietnam a waiver of the Jackson-Vanik emigration provisions of the Trade Act of 1974. Last year's annual waiver, the President decided on June 3, 1999 to renew this extension because he determined that doing so would substantially promote greater freedom of emigration from that country in the future. This determination was based on Vietnam's record of progress on implementation of a political prison amnesty and on Vietnam's continuing cooperation on U.S. refugee programs over the past year. As a result, we are approaching the completion of many refugee admissions categories under the Orderly Departure Program (ODP), including the Resettlement Opportunity Program, the Special Refugee Education Camp Detainees, "McCain Amendment" sub-programs and Montagnards. The Vietnamese government has also agreed to help implement our decision to resume the ODP program for former U.S. Government employees, which was suspended in 1996. The renewal of the Jackson-Vanik waiver is an acknowledgment of that progress. Disapproval of the waiver would, undoubtedly, result in Vietnam's immediate cessation of cooperation.

The Jackson-Vanik waiver also symbolizes our interest in further developing relations with Vietnam. Having lifted the trade embargo and established diplomatic relations four years ago, the United States has tried to work with Vietnam to normalize instrumentally our bilateral political, economic and economic relationships. This policy builds on Vietnam's own policy of political and economic reunification into the world. In the judgment of this Member, this will be a lengthy and challenging process. However, he suggests that now is not the time to reverse course on Vietnam. Over the past four years, Vietnam has increasingly cooperated on a wide range of issues. The most important of these is the progress and cooperation in obtaining the fullest possible accounting of Americans missing from the Vietnam War. Those Members who attended the briefing by the distinguished Ambassador to Vietnam, a former Prisoner of War and former Member of this body, the Honorable "Pete" Peterson, learned of the significant efforts to which Vietnam is now extending to address our concerns regarding the POW/MIA issue, including their participation in remains recovery efforts which are physically very dangerous.

The Jackson-Vanik waiver does not provide Vietnam with any new trade benefits, including Normal Trade Relations (NTR) status. However, with the Jackson-Vanik waiver, the United States has been able to negotiate a new bilateral commercial trade agreement in principle with Vietnam. Achieving such an agreement is in our own short and long term national interest. Vietnam remains a very difficult place for American firms to do business. Vietnam needs to undertake additional fundamental economic reforms. A new bilateral trade agreement will require Vietnam to make these reforms and will result in increased U.S. exports. Oust was the final version of the agreement, however, with the Jackson-Vanik waiver, the United States has been able to negotiate a new bilateral commercial trade agreement in principle with Vietnam. Achieving such an agreement is in our own short and long term national interest. Vietnam remains a very difficult place for American firms to do business.

Mr. Speaker, contrary to the claims of some, renewal of the Jackson-Vanik waiver does not
Mr. LEVIN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to H.J. Res. 58 and support of the President's waiver of the Jackson-Vanik amendment with respect to Vietnam.

In considering this resolution, I ask my colleagues to bear a few matters in mind. First, today's vote is not a vote on whether to give normal trade relations, NTR, to Vietnam.

For that to happen, the United States first must enter into a bilateral commercial agreement with Vietnam and that agreement must be approved by Congress.

Second, if we reject this resolution, as we did last year, the result would be a continuation of Vietnam's eligibility to participate in financing programs, those administered by OPIC, the Export-Import Bank, and the Department of Agriculture.

Those programs support U.S. exports to and investments in Vietnam and thereby enable U.S. businesses and workers to compete in Vietnam with businesses and workers from other countries.

The programs have been available since the President first waived Jackson-Vanik for Vietnam in April of last year. To cut them off now would be to pull the rug from under U.S. producers of goods and services. It would be a setback in our effort to improve U.S. relations with Vietnam and to encourage the development of a market economy in that country.

By contrast, continuing those programs for another year represents a small but important step forward. Importantly, it should bolster our efforts to encourage the development of the bases of a free market and rule of law in Vietnam.

Third, our trade negotiators have been negotiating a trade agreement with Vietnam, which is a prerequisite to giving Vietnam NTR.

On July 25, the U.S. trade representative announced that an agreement in principle had been reached. She also stated that the administration "will now consult with Congress and others, and work toward completion of a formal Bilateral Commercial Agreement and a mutual grant of normal trade relations."

We look forward to those consultations which would give us an opportunity to review negotiations to date and other trade issues and any other additional issues relating to trade of concern to us in the Congress.

At the June 17 Subcommittee on Trade hearing on relations with Vietnam, I cited a number of important issues that have to be resolved before we can agree to full normalization. Of particular concern is the pace of economic reform in Vietnam. They are taking steps to reform the economy, including steps to root out corruption, enforcement of intellectual property rights, and improvement of the reliability of government-published data.

Another area of concern that I mentioned at that time is the potentially disturbing effects that Vietnam's labor market structure, including the exploitation of child labor, may have on competition. Labor market issues are trade issues.

Progress on each of the foregoing fronts is necessary to ensure that the benefits of U.S. businesses and workers from normalization with commercial relations with Vietnam are real.

Our ambassador to Vietnam and our former distinguished colleague, Pete Peterson, testified before the Subcommittee on Trade of the Committee on Ways and Means. He stated, based on his active work as ambassador, as follows: "I urge all to listen to the conclusions or the findings, the experiences of our ambassador: "Vietnam has eased restrictions on emigration," he said. "Over 500,000 people have left Vietnam for the U.S. under the Orderly Departure Program."

"Next: "Vietnam continues to cooperate fully with the U.S. on locating Americans missing in action."

"Last fall, the Government of Vietnam released several prisoners of conscience."

He also said: "Tolerance of religious worship," far, far from perfect, "is improving."

"In 1998," he also mentioned, "there were 60 independently organized worker strikes protesting unfair wages and working conditions.

"The Government is in the process of writing legislation to protect the freedom of association."

And lastly, that "the United States," he says, under his leadership, "continues to engage with Vietnam in a very frank dialogue on human rights."

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.
Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of House Joint Resolution 58 offered by the distinguished gentleman from California (Mr. BACHENGER) disapproving the extension of the Jackson-Vanik waiver for the Socialist Republic of Vietnam.

The issue before us is progress, progress in our commitment to the principles of freedom of religion, freedom of emigration, and obtaining the fullest possible accounting for our POW/MIA's from the war in Southeast Asia.

Simply stated, the Vietnamese Government has not demonstrated the progress on these issues to warrant an extension of the Jackson-Vanik waiver. Many of us have voiced our concerns with regard to the rapid pace of normalizing relations with Vietnam.

The President insists that extending the waiver of the Jackson-Vanik amendment and its ensuing privileges is in our best national interest and will encourage the Vietnamese Government to cooperate on many issues, including economic reforms, political liberalization, and respect for human rights.

OPIC guarantee and Export-Import Bank financing programs should be a reward for achievement and not offered as an incentive for future conduct.

Despite the opening of diplomatic relations 4 years ago, prisoners of conscience are still in prison in Vietnam. Many of our former comrades in arms are still unaccounted for in the Vietnam War.

The Vietnamese Government still arbitrarily arrests and detains its citizens, including those who peacefully express political and religious objections to government policies.

The hard-line communist government also denies its citizens the right to fair and expeditious trials and still hold a number of political prisoners.

Moreover, Radio Free Asia is continuously prevented from providing the free flow of information which Congress has worked to promote.

Vietnam continues to "severely restrict those religious activities it defined as being at variance with State laws and policies," as stated in the State Department Report on Human Rights Practices.

Along with a number of Members of Congress, I recently wrote to President Clinton expressing our concern over the persecution of the Unified Buddhist Church, the Catholic Church, Protestant Christians, and the Montagnards in Vietnam.

In conclusion, a proposed extension to the Jackson-Vanik waiver for Vietnam continues to "severely restrict those religious activities it defined as being at variance with State laws and policies." It is illogical.

Accordingly, I call upon my colleagues to vote "yes" on this resolution of disapproval of the extension of the Jackson-Vanik waiver and send a strong message that our Nation still values principle over profits.

Mr. CRANE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to our distinguished colleague, the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. KOLOEC).

Mr. KOLBE. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me the time.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to House Joint Resolution 58. As a Vietnam War veteran, I emphasize with many of the arguments that are made by opponents to this waiver. I, too, am concerned about freedom of emigration. I, too, want a full accounting for our MIA and POWs. I, too, am concerned about religious freedom. But I strongly disagree with how this solution proposes to resolve these problems.

Denying the Jackson-Vanik waiver for Vietnam will do nothing to further progress in any of these areas. In fact, it will have the opposite effect.

I hope my colleagues will take a moment to consider the changes that have occurred and that are occurring to Vietnam.

Vietnam is not the same country it was 30 years ago when I was there. Over the past 15 years, 500,000 Vietnamese have emigrated to the United States. Over 96 percent of the resettlement opportunities for Vietnamese returnees have been cleared for interview by Vietnam. On emigration issues, we are clearly headed in the right direction.

On POW/MIA accounting, we have had and continue to have substantial cooperation from the Vietnamese Government in all areas. On religious freedom, progress is also being made.

Three weeks ago, a high-level U.S. delegation traveled to Vietnam to encourage the second session of our annual human rights dialogue with Vietnamese officials.

At each of these meetings, religious freedom has been a major topic of discussion; and each time U.S. officials have been able to report that progress is being made.

In October of this year, five American Catholic bishops will be visiting Vietnam, the first visit by an American bishop since 1975. This will be a momentous event.

Let me be clear. While there is progress, the situation in Vietnam today is far from perfect. But it is important that we put this vote in its historical perspective. In 1991, President Bush proposed a road map for improving our relations with Vietnam. To follow the road map, Vietnam had to take steps to help us account for our missing servicemen. In return for this cooperation, the United States was to move incrementally toward normalized relations. We have moved in that direction.

I urge my colleagues not to abandon progress. Only with engagement can we have commerce and only with commerce can we have change.
They do not want a waiver. If you recall in 1985, I think it was, or 1993, rather, Clinton said that he would have it, but he would not have it, only hurt our efforts at a time that they are receiving the access and cooperation we need from the Vietnamese to determine the fate of our POW/MIA.

There is no more authoritative voice on this issue than our former colleague and now Ambassador to Vietnam, Pete Peterson, who supports the waiver. As a prisoner of war who underwent years of imprisonment in the notorious Hanoi Hilton, he should have every right to be skeptical and harbor bitterness against the Vietnamese. Yet he believes the best course of action is to develop better relations between our countries.

We have achieved progress on the POW/MIA issue because of our evolving relationship with the Vietnamese, not despite it. Without access to the jungles and rice paddies, to the archival information and documents, and to the witnesses of these tragic incidents, we cannot give the families of the missing the answers they deserve.

Our Nation is making progress in providing these answers. Much of this is due to the Joint Task Force-Full Accounting, our military presence in Vietnam who are looking into missing issues. I have visited these young men and women and they are among the finest and bravest and most gung ho soldiers I have ever met. Every day from the searches of battle sites in treacherous jungles or the excavation of crash sites on precarious mountain summits, they put themselves in harm’s way to perform a mission they truly believe in.

It is moving to see these men and women in action, some of whom were not even born when our missing served, perform a mission that they see as a sacred duty. They tell me time and time again one thing: “Allow us to remain here so we can do our job.” This resolution before us today puts that at risk. I urge my colleagues to please vote against this resolution.

Mr. ROHRABACHER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. SAM JOHNSON), a distinguished colleague who spent 6 years as a prisoner of war, a man who was a pilot, a man who fought for his country and a man who has a unique opinion on this issue that we are discussing today.

Mr. SAM JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate what the gentleman says, but even with the Ambassador over there, we still are not getting into some of the places that we need to get into. If you send our military to do a job, they are going to do it, regardless the risk, and they are doing that job over there.

But I ask you, who better than our Vietnamese Americans to know what should happen in Vietnam? No waiver.
Congressional Record—House

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE of Representatives.
OPEN LETTER TO CONGRESS: I am President of a small electronics manufacturing company, employing about 100 people in the Los Angeles metropolitan area. I am writing to express my opposition to the resolution of disapproval regarding Vietnam’s Jackson-Vanik’s waiver (H.J. Res. 58) because it will have a serious impact on our business and our employees who live and work here.

Telemobile, a manufacturer of wireless telecommunications equipment, competes against Canadian, French, and Japanese manufacturers of similar equipment. They all have the support of their home governments in the area of trade promotion, including their government-supported export credit agencies. We had no hope of winning any business in Vietnam until the President and Congress supported a waiver of the Jackson-Vanik amendment last year. Since then, we received a Letter of Interest from the Export-Import Bank of the United States (Ex-Im) for a project we plan to do in Vietnam worth about $6 million. We would have won this contract if we did not have the backing of the Ex-Im Bank. Even still, all of our foreign competitors tell us that their Vietnamese customers are not ready to do business with us because their governments do not go through this annual Jackson-Vanik waiver process. Fortunately, the Vietnamese government has a desire to boost economic investment, Vietnam has improved in meeting the emigration criteria in the Jackson-Vanik amendment.

I firmly believe that renewal of the Jackson-Vanik waiver is a necessary step in the process of normalizing our relations with Vietnam and would be good for the American people, as well as the business activities of American workers engaged in exports. Please oppose H.J. Res. 58.

Very truly,

W.I. Thomas,
President.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. DAVIS) who represents thousands of Vietnamese Americans who know full well what repression their family members live under in Vietnam.

Mr. DAVIS of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I yield today in support of H.J. Res. 58, disapproving the extension of emigration waiver authority to Vietnam.

As Members know, last year the President granted Vietnam a waiver of the Jackson-Vanik’s condition, but not much really I think has been cited or documented in that last year. But People SOS, an organization located in my district, has informed me that there is rampant corruption in Vietnam and the Vietnamese government and it continues to exclude thousands of former political prisoners and former U.S. Government employees from participating in the U.S. refugee programs. On average, an applicant has to pay $1,000 in bribes to gain access to these programs. In a country where the average Vietnamese’s salary is $250, how can an impoverished former political prisoner or former U.S. Government employee who the government already discriminates against afford a $1,000 bribe per person just to apply for these programs? Since last year’s waiver, the Vietnamese Government has not deemed a single case among this group of thousands to be eligible for the refugee program.

Corruption exists not only in the Vietnamese government but it also underlines U.S. exchange programs as well.

Our programs offer outstanding Vietnamese students the opportunity to participate and study in the U.S.; however, the Vietnamese Government excludes those students whose parents are not members of the Communist cadre.

I hope my colleagues will join me in supporting this resolution.

Mr. CRANE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from Illinois (Mr. MANZULLO).

Mr. MANZULLO. Mr. Speaker, a small business exporter of telecommunications equipment from Torrance, California, had never sold to Vietnam. Telemobile’s Japanese, French, and Canadian competitors all had the support of their home government’s export credit agencies. Telemobile was willing to sell to Vietnam until the President and Congress approved the Jackson-Vanik waiver last year allowing the Export-Import Bank and other Federal export promotion programs to operate in Vietnam. The $5 million contract with Vietnam to sell their product backed with the letter of interest from the Export-Import Bank.

The purpose of the vote today is to allow those types of partnerships so American companies can utilize our export credit agencies in order to have American jobs. With the already large U.S. trade deficit, we should not impose yet another sanction on our exports. We should vote against this resolution of disapproval.

Open letter to Congress from Telemobile, Inc.:

Mr. ROHRABACHER. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of H.J. Res. 58, disapproving the extension of emigration waiver authority to Vietnam.

I rise in opposition to this resolution and urge my colleagues to uphold the current waiver from the Jackson-Vanik provision.

Mr. Speaker, the Jackson-Vanik provision of the 1974 Trade Act was intended to encourage communist countries to relax their restrictive emigration policies.

At that time, the Soviet Union was prohibiting Soviet Jewry from emigrating to the U.S. and Israel.

It specifically granted the President the power to waive restrictions on U.S. government credits or investment guarantees to communist countries if the waiver would help promote significant progress toward relaxing emigration controls.

The co-author of this provision, Senator Scoop Jackson was a staunch anti-communist.

Yet, he was willing to consider incentives to encourage the Soviet Union to relax its emigration policy.

Vietnam is experiencing a new era, driven by a population where 65% of its citizens were born after the war. Vietnam today is thirsty for U.S. trade and economic investment.

Last year, Charles Vanik, former Member and co-author of the Jackson-Vanik provision, sent me a letter expressing his strong opposition to the motion to disapprove trade credits for Vietnam.

Ironically, the economic incentives provided in Jackson-Vanik are all one sided favoring U.S. firms doing business in Vietnam.

A waiver of Jackson-Vanik does not establish normal trading relations with Vietnam.

The Vietnamese Government has made tremendous progress in meeting the emigration criteria in the Jackson-Vanik amendment.

Despite problems of corruption and government repression, there is reason to believe that the government can improve the situation and encourage its government to become less isolated and to follow the rule of law.

Through a policy of engagement and U.S. business investment, Vietnam has improved its emigration policies.

As of June 1 of this year, the Vietnamese Government had cleared nearly 20,000 individuals, or 96% of applicants, for interviews under the Resettlement Opportunity for Vietnamese Returnees (ROVR).

The Immigration and Naturalization Service has approved 15,833 ROVR applicants for admission to the United States as refugees—14,715 of which have left Vietnam for the U.S. According to the State Department, we are also obtaining “the fullest possible accounting” of missing in action from the Vietnam War.

Just last week, the U.S. and Vietnam finalized the terms of a bilateral trade agreement to address issues ranging from import quotas, import bans, and high tariffs to financial services, telecommunications, and other issues that are critical to opening Vietnam to U.S. products and services.

U.S. Ambassador to Vietnam, Pete Peterson, our esteemed former colleague and former POW, has been one of our nation’s strongest advocates for expanding trade with Vietnam. Reopening the Jackson-Vanik waiver will increase market access for U.S. products and services in the 12th most populous country in the world.

Disapproval of this waiver will have several negative outcomes. It will discourage U.S. businesses from operating in Vietnam, arm Soviet-style hardliners with the pretext to clamp down on what economic and social freedoms the Vietnamese people now experience, and eliminate what opportunity we have to influence Vietnam in the future.

I can see nothing gained by overturning the waiver and urge my colleagues to defeat this resolution.

Mr. ROHRBACHER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute, and I understand that the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. CRANE) will also yield 1 minute to the gentleman from California (Mr. CUNNINGHAM).

Mr. CRANE. Yes, Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute as well to our good colleague and friend from San Diego, California (Mr. CUNNINGHAM).

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BURR of North Carolina). The Chair recognizes the gentleman from California (Mr. CUNNINGHAM) for 2 minutes.

Mr. CUNNINGHAM. Mr. Speaker, for some of us this issue is very, very difficult, when heart, economics, pain are all tied up into one. I understand the gentleman’s, and what I would do is point out a couple things on each side because I still do not know how I am going to vote on this issue.

When one lives through Private Ryan, it is very difficult for something like this, and one side we see economies, like the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. McNULTY) of this, and I understand the gentleman’s, and what I would do is point out a couple things on each side because I still do not know how I am going to vote on this issue.

I saw American children there, Eurasians, that can not be helped by this on one side, but yet I saw very strong Communism. As a matter of fact, the Communist premier told me, he said, Duke, we don’t engage in free trade. I can’t do this quickly. He is very open, he said, because it will put us out of a job, which meant Communism.

To me on one side that says, Hey, American involvement is good because it hammers away at Communism; but yet on the other side I see where not even Pete Peterson can be there when an American citizen is tried in their courts, and it is difficult, Mr. Speaker.

I had a young lady in my district named Foo Lee, had to work a year. Her whole family escaped in a boat, lives in my district, and the mom had to stay behind because they knew that if they were caught, they would be put into a reeducation camp, and not many people survive; and to go a year to get her from Vietnam into the United States and rejoined with the family.

And on that side it is very hard for this. I look at that we cannot go in with intellectual property rights, but on the other side we have the same problem with China, and I voted for trade with China, so why not for this? And it is one of the more difficult. For most of my colleagues it is not, but for us, and Sam, and I understand both sides of this issue. I see my friend Pete Peterson spent 6 years as a POW there, and it is very difficult to look at heart, to look at logic, to look at economics.

Mr. Speaker, I will not chastise anybody for either side of this vote.

Mr. CRANE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to our distinguished colleague, the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. GILCHREST).

Mr. GILCHREST. Mr. Speaker, for the first time in 25 years.

Mr. Speaker, for me, it is very hard to look at logic, to look at economics. And it is one of the more difficult. For most of my colleagues it is not, but for us, and Sam, and I understand both sides of this issue. I see my friend Pete Peterson spent 6 years as a POW there, and it is very difficult to look at heart, to look at logic, to look at economics.

As a young soldier in Vietnam, I like to speak to my colleagues through the eyes of many young soldiers in Vietnam where we would every once in a while help corps men deliver babies, some alive and some dead. We as very young men saw leprosy for the first time. We saw the eyes of the dying Viet Cong. We saw the eyes and looked into the eyes of dying young Americans and said good bye. We laughed and cried with the Vietnamese people, the very old and the very young.

One incident, we moved into a small village, pulled an old man out of a grass hut with one leg, and the old woman in the grass hut began to cry because we thought he was shooting at us and we were going to take him away. And a little girl about 10 screamed and cried and grabbed at our clothes as we were walking this old man away from the village, and then suddenly we young soldiers just stopped. We looked into the eyes of the old man. The old woman froze in fear as to what might happen next, and the little girl just stopped crying, and then the old man looked at us, and we looked back at him, and we suddenly realized something. We were just all people together caught in a horrible struggle, none of which we created.

There was an Israeli soldier in 1967 that said, We need to learn to love our children more than we hate our enemies. We can never forget the pain of the past. But in this vote I think it is time that we consider the future for us, for the Vietnamese children.

We remember the quote from President Kennedy at the Berlin Wall where he said:

“We all cherish our children’s future, we all breathe the same air, and we are all mortal.” Let’s vote for America and Vietnam.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from Indiana (Mr. ROEMER).

Mr. ROEMER, for the distinguished gentleman from Indiana (Mr. ROEMER). Mr. Speaker, on August 3 in 1492 Christopher Columbus set sail on a new journey across the Atlantic, and he set sail with new maritime instruments, a quadrant, an astrolabe, a cross staff, that helped him find the shores of the Bahamas. Today the new instruments to help us navigate to help our workers, to help our businesses, navigate the complicated world of international trade are access to OPIC, agricultural loans and Ex-Im Bank loans. That is why we should reject this resolution and allow us the opportunity for Boeing to compete against Airbus and sell our planes to Vietnam.

Now Pete Peterson, a good friend of mine, has been mentioned as our ambassador who spent 6 years as a POW. Pete Peterson will never forget, nor will Congress forget the MIAs, and we are ripping up highways and searching in mountains for every clue to find those MIAs, and we will never forget the 58,000 soldiers that were lost in that war.

But it is also time for us to move in a positive way to bring Vietnam into the community of nations.

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. SMITH) one of the most distinguished and ferocious champions of human rights in this body.

As a young soldier in Vietnam, I like to speak to my colleagues through the eyes of many young soldiers in Vietnam where we would every once in a while help corps men deliver babies, some alive and some dead. We as very young men saw leprosy for the first time. We saw the eyes of the dying Viet Cong. We saw the eyes and looked into the eyes of dying young Americans and said good bye. We laughed and cried with the Vietnamese people, the very old and the very young.

One incident, we moved into a small village, pulled an old man out of a grass hut with one leg, and the old woman in the grass hut began to cry because we thought he was shooting at us and we were going to take him away. And a little girl about 10 screamed and cried and grabbed at our clothes as we were walking this old man away from the village, and then suddenly we young soldiers just stopped. We looked into the eyes of the old man. The old woman froze in fear as to what might happen next, and the little girl just stopped crying, and then the old man looked at us, and we looked back at him, and we suddenly realized something. We were just all people together caught in a horrible struggle, none of which we created.

There was an Israeli soldier in 1967 that said, We need to learn to love our children more than we hate our enemies. We can never forget the pain of the past. But in this vote I think it is time that we consider the future for us, for the Vietnamese children.

We remember the quote from President Kennedy at the Berlin Wall where he said:
to get the waiver was to finally begin letting us interview people under the waiver program. Now, I happen to be a very enthusiastic supporter of this program, and for the Record Members will recall that I was the prime sponsor of the amendment on this floor that stopped us from doing what I think would have been very, very cruel, and that would be to end the CPA, the Comprehensive Plan of Action, to just send the people back without giving them any opportunity to get re-reviewed after some bogus reviews were done, or interviews.

The refugee program, the rover program, works when there was a real push, and the ambassador, Pete Peterson, did do a good job in pushing when he had the effort of ourselves holding up the waiver. 13,000 people were cleared. But as soon as the waiver was granted, the clearances slowed back to a trickle.

Mr. Speaker, let us not forget the prisoners of conscience; let us not forget the Catholic priests and the Buddhist monks. The religious persecution situation has gotten worse since last April when additional restrictions on exercise of religion was put on those people.

Mr. Speaker, I urge support for the gentleman from California’s (Mr. ROHRABACHER) resolution.

Mr. Speaker, a few weeks ago the United States sent a representative to Vietnam to conduct a “human rights dialogue” with the government there. At the conclusion of the dialogue, the Vietnamese Government issued a statement essentially denying that the United States had any right at all to concern itself with human rights outside its own borders. Less than two weeks later with the obligatory dialogue out of the way, the United States sent a representative to Vietnam to interview people under the “ROVER” program (Resettlement Opportunities for Vietnamese Refugees). Now I happen to be an enthusiastic supporter of this program was prime sponsor of the amendment to ensure that the Boat People refugees weren’t sent back. ROVR was the compromise, it provide a new interview for people who managed to escape Vietnam but were forced back—although many were refugees. They were promised that as soon as they got back, the U.S. would interview them and resettle them if they were eligible for our protection. But of course the Vietnamese government broke its promise. For over a year and a half they hardly let us interview nobody. Finally, when we really held their feet to the fire, they cleared 13,000 people. As soon as the waiver was granted, the clearances slowed back to a trickle.

In fact, the emigration situation has become worse since the waiver. In the last year, communist officials have demanded that the Boat People refugees weren’t sent back. They need to be persuaded. We must send the message that economic benefits from the United States absolutely depend on decent treatment of Vietnam’s own people. We may not be able to insist on perfection, but we must insist on minimal decency.

Mr. McNULTY. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2½ minutes to the gentlewoman from California (Ms. SANCHEZ) who represents the largest number of Vietnamese Americans in the country.

Ms. SANCHEZ. Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask my colleagues to explain to Dr. Giang why the Communist government of Vietnam should be rewarded and granted the Jackson-Vanik waiver.

On March 4 of this year, Dr. Giang was a respected geophysicist and writer and was arrested in Hanoi for allegedly possessing anti-communist documents. Unfortunately, this was not the first time that he had been harassed by the authorities for peacefully expressing his viewpoints.

In January of 1997, he wrote an essay and argued the universality of human rights and concluded that the world needs to unite its actions for human rights.

Mr. Giang was also summoned to appear before the Communist Party for a session of public accusation. After a storm of international protest of governments and human rights organizations, Dr. Giang was finally released. In fact, I went to Vietnam in April to try and find him. Officials in communist-ruled Vietnam never explained to Giang why he was arrested on March 4 or formally charged.

In my hand, I have a copy of a letter that he sent to my office detailing his current situation. I would like to share his thoughts with you today.
Mr. LEVIN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from Virginia, Mr. BOUCHER.

Mr. BOUCHER. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of the President’s decision to extend the Jackson-Vanik waiver for Vietnam and in strong opposition to the resolution of disapproval. The Jackson-Vanik waiver process is designed to promote immigration from countries that do not have market economies. In the case of Vietnam, the waiver is working as intended.

Since the waiver was granted, Vietnam has made steady progress under both the ROVVR and the orderly departure programs. If the waiver is rescinded through the passage of this resolution, that progress, which depends entirely upon the cooperation of the Vietnamese government, will almost certainly be reversed.

We have now negotiated a bilateral trade agreement with Vietnam and progress is being made on human rights and on religious freedom matters.

I urge the Members to reject this resolution and, in doing so, to give a vote of confidence to the very fine work of our former colleague, the Ambassador to Vietnam, Pete Peterson, and his excellent staff, under whose guidance this outstanding progress is being made.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the distinguished gentleman from California (Mr. GEORGE MILLER).

Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California. Mr. Speaker, earlier this year I had an opportunity to travel to Vietnam and to talk to members of the business community, to the international environmental community, to workers, to representatives of labor organizations, and to U.S. manufacturers and had an opportunity to travel throughout the country. I think that my conclusion is that the waiver can continue to be justified because of the progress that is being made.

It is also clear that the waiver helps to empower our ambassador, Pete Peterson, who may be the greatest catalyst for change inside this country, so that he can continue his work to get Vietnam to improve its human rights conditions, to improve its labor conditions, to improve its environmental condition, to handle many of the other issues that are of concern to all of us here.

This is not about not being concerned about human rights, labor conditions, or any of the rest of it. It is about whether or not we can have a process where we can continue to make progress. Unlike the vote last week on China, where I voted against extending the relationship with China because, in fact, there we have gone backwards, here we have an opportunity to continue the progress forward.

We will have much debate on the trade agreement and whether or not that can be justified or not be justified, but the fact of the matter is, in this particular case, it was a continued waiver for another year so that we can continue to monitor, continue to work with the government of Vietnam on all of these issues, is a positive step that we should and can take today.

Mr. Speaker, I had the opportunity to travel to Vietnam earlier this year on official business to attend an international environmental conference, to inspect labor conditions at factories that subcontract for United States manufacturers, and to meet with our Embassy officials on a broad range of United States-Vietnam issues.

Vietnam today is a country struggling to become a player in the global economic market. It is once again a major agricultural power and is the world’s second largest exporter of rice. Hundreds of foreign companies are investing in this nation of 80 million people, the 12th largest population in the world, because of its size, its location and its and its educational and diligent workforce. Most of the representatives of American businesses with whom I spoke in Vietnam praise the local business opportunities and actively promote the liberalization of economic relations so that trade between the United States and Vietnam, now less than $30 million a year, can expand and investment can flourish.

The conditions for waiving Jackson-Vanik are quite specific, and in my view, Vietnam has met those tests and should again be granted the waiver for another year by nearly a 100 vote margin in the House. Jackson-Vanik was developed to use our economic leverage to force political and immigration reforms, and it has had the desired effect in Vietnam where we have seen significant and steady movement towards expanded emigration.

Our Ambassador, who is our former colleague and a distinguished Vietnam veteran, Pete Peterson, has documented broad cooperation by the Vietnamese government with the emigration program and has even noted that in some cases, it has been impossible to fill the slots allocated for some categories of applicants. Ambassador Peterson has also noted expanding religious activity and I was able to observe the expanded construction of churches in northern Vietnam. Lastly, the Vietnamese and United States governments now operate a Joint Task Force that conducts interviews, archaeological digs, genetic testing, and other efforts to locate the remains of United States soldiers and pilots. Nearly 400 remains have been repatriated since the end of the war, several just this year.

Vietnam has a considerable way to go to fully open its economy and bring it into conformity with international standards on transparency. Moreover, I remain concerned by the continued denial of labor rights by the government, including the fundamental right to join an independent labor union. Some of these issues will be addressed when we have the opportunity later this year to debate the United States-Vietnam Trade Agreement.

Last week, this House voted on granting normal trade relations to China and many members took the floor to denounce, rightly I believe, that nation’s continued repressive government and its unacceptable human rights record. It is terribly important that, during this current debate, we distinguish what is different in Vietnam from the Chinese example. For Vietnam has made and continues to make major steps forward on economic reform, is cooperating on emigration and MIA issues, and is showing promising signs of political liberalization. If we redux the current debate in Hanoi, then I believe many of those who today are prepared to vote for this waiver and for expanded trade between our countries will reconsider their decision.

We vote to waive Jackson-Vanik in recognition of Vietnam’s changing political system and to encourage further liberalization. But understand that the Congress and the American people are serious about assuring that open trade is also fair trade: that working men and women in America are assured that their counterparts in Vietnam labor under reasonable conditions and with the enjoyment of basic human and labor rights recognized by international law.

The continued waiver of the Jackson-Vanik restrictions should be voted by the House tonight to recognize Vietnam’s steady steps towards reform. Similarly, the Congress should expect that the waiver of Jackson-Vanik will promote a continuation of democracy in Vietnam, unlike the China case where despite expanded trade relations, political reform has worsened.

Mr. ROHRABACHER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, Jackson-Vanik, this waiver we are talking about, is not about immigration. For the record, I have a statement issued by the United States embassy in Bangkok on July 14 of this year stating that the orderly departure program has some severe problems. So much for all the progress we have made for Jackson-Vanik just in terms of the immigration issue.

We are also told that there has been so much progress in other areas, especially in the area of democratization, which is not directly to Jackson-Vanik. But the fact is today all of us understand that we are sending a message to Vietnam, and that by moving forward in the area of Jackson-Vanik, we are giving them the idea that they can get away with the type of repression that they have been getting away with and start having better trading relations and make more money off their relations with the United States.
CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE
August 3, 1999

I have something here, a report just yesterday, August 2, talking about in Hanoi where the government in Hanoi has declared they will not tolerate any other political parties except the Communist Party of Vietnam. I will submit both of those for the record.

Let us get right down to brass tacks. Over this last year since we came here and went along with the Jackson-Vanik waiver that this administration has decided to give to the communist government of Vietnam, there has been no human rights progress. There has been no political parties that have been able to be formed. There has been no more free speech. There has been no examples whatsoever of more freedom of the press. There have been many examples also of repression of religious individuals. So we have no progress on that front whatsoever.

I would hope that my colleagues, maybe they can enlighten me to the parties that are springing up in opposition to the Communist Party or these other examples of freedom of speech or freedom of press or freedom of religion that are nonexistent. Please, tell us about that.

No, that does not exist in Vietnam. That is why we will not hear about that and have not heard about it in this debate.

A constituent of mine, Mr. Ku Noc Dong, went back to Vietnam. He is an American of Vietnamese descent. He went back and I do not know if it was in Hanoi or not, but he was thrown in jail. For what? For passing out leaflets talking about liberty and justice. He is imprisoned as we speak. Do not tell me there has been human rights progress in Vietnam. There has been none, and by moving on this legislation, we are giving the stamp of approval of this Congress on that type of behavior by this regime.

Let me just suggest something else. We have heard about the progress in MIA/POWs. I totally reject that contention. I am afraid that some of our other Members, including our former distinguished Member, Mr. Peterson, are sadly misinformed about what is going on in this effort.

I have two pictures that were taken that I would submit for the record of MIA/POWs who were incarcerated in Vietnam. Their remains were never returned. Plus, none of the records of the prisons that held our POWs has ever been made available to us after requests for those records of 5 years.

Mr. Speaker, I would suggest that this body vote against the Jackson-Vanik waiver, and send the Vietnamese communists a message that we stand for freedom.

VIETNAM COMMUNISTS SAY TO KEEP SINGLE-PARTY SYSTEM

HANOI, Aug. 2, 1999 (Reuters).—A top ideologue from Vietnam’s ruling Communist Party said on Monday that Hanoi would not tolerate a multi-party system.

“The Communist Party of Vietnam is the leader of Vietnam’s entire society, we will not accept any party or a multi-party system,” said Dao Duy Quat, deputy head of the party’s powerful Ideology and Culture Commission. He was speaking at a rare news conference held for foreign media and diplomats that discussed party-building and a two-year criticism and self-criticism campaign.

But one veteran diplomat in Hanoi was unconvinced, questioning how legitimacy could be gauged when Vietnam’s vast internal security machine went on such a spree to isolate or silence contradictory voices. “They want power, on that there is no compromise,” he said. “They stamped out all opposition in the past—even those groups that supported the same aims—and see absolutely no reason to liberalise.”

Some governments and international human rights groups say Vietnam imprisons people for the peaceful expression of political or religious beliefs—a charge that Hanoi denies. Quat said the party would not repress minority views unless people violated the law. Anti-socialist activities in Vietnam are treated as a crime.

MEMORANDUM

JOINT VOLUNTARY AGENCY ORDERLY DEPARTURE PROGRAM, AMERICAN EMBASSY, BANGKOK, JULY 9

Re request for refugee statistics and assessment of ODP cases.

ODP Cases: The Socialist Republic of Vietnam has frequently determined applicants did not meet ODP criteria, despite our confirmation that they did; many applicants are still awaiting interview authorization. … As of July 9th, there are 3,432 ODP refugees applicants and 747 ROVR applicants awaiting Vietnamese Government authorization for interview. … ODP has continually received requests from ODP applicants and ROVR applicants dealing with local officials; many applicants originally applied to ODP as long ago as 1988 but have yet to be given authorization by the Vietnamese Government to attend an interview.

Impact of Jackson-Vanik Waiver: It would not appear that Jackson-Vanik had a telling impact on ODP activities. … Staff are of the opinion that there has been little, if any, indication of improvement in the Vietnamese Government’s efforts to deal with remaining ODP cases.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 seconds to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. DEUTSCH).

Mr. DEUTSCH. Mr. Speaker, I, along with I think probably 30 of my colleagues, had an interesting dinner meeting with Bob McNamara. If there is any lesson that he has learned in looking back on Vietnam, it is really hearing and receiving, giving the wrong messages and not talking to each other. We really have an opportunity right other parties of some of the lessons that he talked about.

Vietnam is making progress, contrary to the previous speaker. There is a great deal of evidence which our former colleague, the Ambassador, has articulated to us, and it’s as well. It is a relationship that can continue to be good for the United States as we are moving a young nation towards moving into the community of nations, of living within international standards. It is a region in the world that for 4,000 years has faced uncertainty and conflict.

What we are talking about is normal trading relationships. That is really what this issue is about. Fortunately people can see it differently, but I urge the defeat of the resolution.

Mr. McNULTY. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself the balance of my time.

Mr. Speaker, as I grow older, I try to keep my priorities in proper order. I am not always successful at that, but I work at it. That is why when I get up every morning, the first two things that I do are to thank God for my life and for Americans for my country. Because cause had it not been for my brother Bill and all those who gave their lives in service to this country through the years, had it not been for people like SAM JOHNSON and Pete Peterson and JOHN MCCAIN, who endured torture as prisoners of war, had it not been for people like Pete Dalessandro, a World War II Congressional Medal of Honor winner from my district who was just laid to rest last week in our new Veterans National Cemetery in Saratoga, if it had not been for them and all of the men and women who wore the uniform of the United States military through the years, I would not have the privilege of going around bragging about how I live in the freest and most open democracy on the face of the Earth. Freedom is not free. We paid a tremendous price for it.

Today, Mr. Speaker, based upon the comments that I made earlier and on behalf of all 2,063 Americans who are still missing in Southeast Asia, I ask my colleagues to join me, the American Legion, the National League of POW/MIA Families, the National Alliance of POW/MIA Families, the National Vietnam Veterans Coalition, the Veterans of the Vietnam War and the Disabled American Veterans in supporting this resolution of disapproval.

Mr. CRANE. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself the balance of my time.

Mr. Speaker, there have been arguments raised here, ones that I think are worth listening to by all of us, regardless of our position on the issues, and I respect the disagreements that I have with some of my colleagues, but I think personally that if you examine the evidence, you will realize that the boys of mankind is in moving down this path of expanding our relationships with one another and especially expanding our economic relationships.
morning, 65 percent of the population over there has been born since the end of the Vietnam War. The overwhelming majority of these people know nothing about it except what they have heard from those who preceded them.

In that regard, I think it is important to note, too, that we have a recent report that just came out from the U.S. Ambassador for International Religious Freedom, this was in July, last month, mentioning that three-fourths of the population are nominally Buddhist now, an estimated 6 to 7 million are Roman Catholics, and there are a variety of other religious affiliations, including Mormons in Vietnam. In addition to that, they are growing in population.

I think further that it is important for us to recognize that in the last national election there, and that was four years, this was not an absolute Communist dictatorship in place. There were almost two candidates running in every race for their national assembly, 800, and 450 seats. The result was the electoral Assembly members who are not members of the Communist party, and as indicated earlier, one of those 61 was a major in the South Vietnamese army, a former major.

We have also something else, I think, to keep in mind. That is a point that the gentleman from California (Mr. CUNNINGHAM) brought up, the response he got from a Communist he spoke to while he was there who said that they cannot advance free trade because that would put him out of a job. Think about that for a moment, Mr. Chairman, a Communist cannot participate in the advancement of free trade because that will put him, a Communist, out of a job; to which I say, amen. That is a free benefit to the American taxpayer.

The immediate benefit is the material benefits to the people of Vietnam, and the material benefits here as we advance down that path creating expanded free trade worldwide.

I would remind Members also, this is not a vote on normal trade relations. This simply provides an expanded opportunity for increased business contact in Vietnam. I would urge all of my colleagues to vote no on H.R. 58. I think it is in the best interests of the people of Vietnam.

Mr. WOLF. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of H.J. Res. 58. I do so because I am deeply concerned about the human rights situation in Vietnam which has not improved despite normalization of relations between the U.S. and Vietnam.

Religious persecution has continued to intensify. I submit for the RECORD a recent Reuters story about The Venerable Thich Quang Do, head of the Unified Buddhist Church of Vietnam (UBCV). This 80-year-old Buddhist leader has been in prison for over twenty years. Before we rush down the path of providing U.S. taxpayer dollars to businesses wanting to get into Vietnam, we must consider people like Thich Quang Do.

Earlier this year, the Religious Liberty Commission of the World Evangelical Fellowship issued a report describing the intense persecution of Christians in the Hmong minority group in Vietnam’s Northwest province and as well as members of the Hie and Bahnar minorities, which includes pages and pages of testimony from persecuted believers and experiences from the Vietnamese government regarding its anti-religion policies.

The U.S. should be keeping the pressure on Vietnam to improve its human rights record, not rewarding them.

Monk Urges Hanoi to Free Buddhist Leader (By Andy Soloman)

Ho Chi Minh City, Vietnam, Aug. 3 (Reuters)—A dissident Buddhist monk in Vietnam has demanded the country’s communist rulers immediately release from detention the aged patriarch of the banned Unified Buddhist Church of Vietnam (UBCV).

Thich Quang Do, head of the UBCV’s Institute for Propagation of the Dharma and a former long-term political prisoner, said 80-year-old Thich Huyen Quang should either be tried or unconditionally released.

The patriarch is detained at Quang Phuoc pagoda in central Quang Ngai province. The United Nations and international human rights groups say he has been held without trial since 1981.

Hanoi rarely makes mention of Quang, but routinely denies it detains or jails people for the peaceful expression of religious or political views.

“If on what grounds have they detained him for nearly 20 years?” Do said in a recent interview at the Buddhist monastery where he lives in the former Saigon.

“If he is guilty of a crime he should be put on trial, but they can find no (legitimate) reasons.”

Quang and Do were prominent Buddhists who led protests in the former South Vietnam against the U.S.-backed Saigon regime during the Vietnam War.

“During the night there is nobody, he is alone. We are very worried about his health during the night. If anything happened to him there would be nobody to help,” Do said. He added that Quang has no official documents or identity papers and is therefore unable to travel.

“All his visitors are checked and questioned. We ask for international help to put pressure and use influence to press the government to release him as soon as possible,” Do said.

Following World War Two, Quang led Buddhists against French colonial forces, but he also opposed the communist Viet Minh, who jailed him for ten years.

In the years following the end of the Vietnam War in 1975, the victorious communists banned the UBCV and replaced it with the state-sponsored Vietnam Buddhist Church.

Quang, Do and other UBCV activists remained a constant thorn in the side of the state-sponsored Vietnam Buddhist Church.

In March, 72-year-old Do secretly travelled to Vietnam last October, said he was for hours before being escorted back to Ho Chi Minh City.

Abdelfattah Amor, the U.N. Special Rapporteur for Religious Intolerance, in a visit to Vietnam last October, said he was travelling to meet the patri-arch and was physically barred by security personnel from meeting Do.

In a report, Amor slammed Vietnam for failing to allow the religious freedom—a charge Hanoi rejected.

Do, who has spent much of the last 20 years under detention or in prison, was freed under an amnesty last September after serving three-and-a-half years of a five-year sentence for offenses connected with attempts to send relief supplies to flood victims in 1994.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BURT of North Carolina). All time for debate has expired.

Pursuant to the order of the House of Friday, July 30, 1999, the joint resolution is considered as read for amendment, and the previous question is ordered.

The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the joint resolution.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was read the third time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the passage of the joint resolution.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the noes appeared to have it.

Mr. McNULTY. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 130, nays 297, not voting 6, as follows:

[Roll No. 365]

YEAS—130

Aderholt  …… eoelbg  …… Norwood  …… Paul

Adrian  …… Green (TX)  …… Polosi

Baker  …… Green (WI)  …… Pombo

Barcena  …… Hucks  …… Porter

Bartlett  …… Hall (TX)  …… Radanovich

Barten  …… Hansen  …… Regula

Bilkikisz  …… Harris  …… Riley

Bonilla  …… Hayworth  …… Rivers

Bono  …… Hill (MT)  …… Rogan

Brown (OH)  …… Hilleary  …… Rohracher

Bryant  …… Hoekstra  …… Rothman

Canady  …… Hunter  …… Sanchez

Carter  …… Hitchensson  …… Sanders

Chabot  …… Hyde  …… Sasser

Chenoweth  …… Jackson-Lee  …… Schaffer

Coble  …… Jenkins  …… Serrano

Collins  …… Johnson, Sam  …… Sheedy

Cook  …… Jones (NC)  …… Shuster

Costello  …… Kastch  …… Slaughter

Cook  …… Kelly  …… Smith (NJ)

Cunningham  …… Kennedy  …… Smith (TX)

Davis (VA)  …… King (NY)  …… Souder

Deal  …… Kingston  …… Spence

Diaz-Balart  …… LaHood  …… Stearns

DeLitttle  …… Lazio  …… Strickland

Duncan  …… Lofbrooke  …… Stupak

Ehrlich  …… Lorenzen  …… Sweeney

Emerson  …… Martinez  …… Traficant

English  …… McCollum  …… Talent

Everett  …… McIntyre  …… Taylor (NC)

Farakish  …… McKinney  …… Thornberry

Fleischhauer  …… McNulty  …… Trent

Ribbons  …… Menendez  …… Towns

Roe  …… Miller  …… Trent

Gilman  …… Miller (FL)  …… Turner

Goode  …… Miller, Gary  …… Velazquez
The amendment of the gentleman from District of Columbia (Chairman ISTOOK) to revisit provisions restricting the District from using one of its own funds to pursue legal redress in Federal court on its voting rights claim.

APPONTMENT OF CONFERENCE ON H.R. 2587, DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 2000

Mr. ISTOOK. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H.R. 2587), making appropriations for the government of the District of Columbia and other activities chargeable in whole or in part in revenues of said District for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2000, and for other purposes, with a Senate amendment thereto, disapproved by the Speaker by a recorded vote of the House of Representatives with a higher margin of approval than the Senate's approval of the conference report. The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. STRICKLAND of Ohio) appointed the following members to the conference committee: Representatives: Messrs. HAYWORTH, KINGSTON, STRICKLAND, GIBBONS, ROTHMAN, BUYER, SMITH of Texas, and WELDON of Florida; Senators: Messrs. HATCH, TIERNEY, TOOMEY, and WITTMER.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. STRICKLAND of Ohio) appointed the following members to the conference committee: Representatives: Messrs. HAYWORTH, KINGSTON, STRICKLAND, GIBBONS, ROTHMAN, BUYER, SMITH of Texas, and WELDON of Florida; Senators: Messrs. HATCH, TIERNEY, TOOMEY, and WITTMER.

Mr. STRICKLAND of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I offer the following amendments, the first two of which would alter the conference report.

The amendment of the gentleman from Ohio (Chairman ISTOOK) to revisit provisions restricting the District from using one of its own funds to pursue legal redress in Federal court on its voting rights claim.

The amendment of the gentleman from District of Columbia (Ms. NORTON) to allow local funds to be used on this lawsuit lost on a tie vote, and the Chairman of the Appropriations subcommittee has given us a commitment that he will try to fix that because it was so close in the House.

The second issue is the needle exchange program. As my colleagues know, the amendment offered by the gentleman from Kansas (Mr. TAUZIT) prohibits the use of Federal or local funds for any needle exchange program in the District. The amendment goes even further to prevent any private organization or individual from offering a needle exchange program if they are in receipt of other Federal funds.

This amendment ties the hands of the District to respond to a public health crisis. D.C. has the highest rate of HIV infection in the United States, and intravenous drug use is the second leading cause. It is the most likely cause that we can reduce with action that we might take, or at least enabling the District to take such action.

It is wrong that the District suffers from the most restrictive language of any other city in the country, hampering its ability to stem the spread of AIDS. No such ban would ever be considered in any other jurisdiction where the other 113 needle exchange programs are operated throughout the country.

Since the Senate is silent on restricting the District's needle exchange program, many are confident that this language will be modified in conference. I hope this will be the case so that the final conference report will be a document we can all support and, thus, as you say, the President.

Mr. Speaker, I thank the chairman for letting us express our views on this again. We are not going to try to instruct the conferences. We had an overwhelmingly positive vote. I hope we can continue that spirit in conference, and I hope we can bring back a bill to this floor that will get the same type of overwhelming vote in support of it and get a bill signed by the President.

Mr. ISTOOK. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. MORAN of Virginia. I yield to the gentleman from Oklahoma.

Mr. ISTOOK. Mr. Speaker, I very much appreciate the gentleman’s very positive comments, and like him, I am committed to accenting the positive on this bill.

As we know, I certainly made a commitment, and I intend to honor that regarding working something out on the local funding of the litigation that the gentleman described.

We are both aware of the issues surrounding the needle program, and there is a privately funded needle program operated. We certainly do not intend anything that would go beyond the language the President signed into law last year.

I do not think we are in a position where he would take the extreme action of vetoing something, but I look forward to working with the gentleman on this and all other issues in this conference.

Mr. ISTOOK. Mr. Speaker, reclaiming my time, I will just conclude that the President has indicated that if we could get that language that said no Federal funds could be used for such a program, that would certainly be acceptable to him, and I believe in the body of this House, in the conference report.

But again let me conclude where I started. I thank the chairman for his cooperation and his leadership on this bill.

Mr. Speaker, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. Buxton of North Carolina). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oklahoma?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, the Chair appoints the following conference: Messrs. ISTOOK, CUNNINGHAM, TIAHRT, ADERHOLT, Mrs. EMERSON, and Messrs. SUNUNU, YOUNG of Florida, MORAN of Virginia, DIXON, MOLLOHAN and OBSEY.

There was no objection.

ANNOUNCEMENT OF PASSING OF ROBERT H. MOLLOHAN, FORMER MEMBER OF THE HOUSE FROM WEST VIRGINIA

(Mr. RAHALL asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, it is with a great deal of sorrow that I rise to announce the passing of a former Member of the House of Representatives from West Virginia, Robert H. Mollohan.

Bob Mollohan served the United States Senate early in his career as Clerk of the Senate Committee on the District of Columbia from 1949 to 1952. He was elected to this body in 1953, where he served until 1957, at which time he ran for governor of West Virginia.

He returned to the House in the 91st Congress, serving from 1963 to 1993 when he retired, and returned to the family insurance business in Fairmont, West Virginia.

Bob Mollohan is the father of our distinguished colleague and dear friend, Alan B. Mollohan, who succeeded his father when he was first elected to fill his seat in 1982.

Robert Mollohan served with distinction during his time in the House, working for the people of his Congressional District for 17 years. He was a compassionate and caring representative of his people, and a pillar of his community throughout his lifetime.

Indeed, Mr. Speaker, it was not until he retired from this body that this corner back here became known as the Pennsylvania Corner. Prior to that, it was known only as the West Virginia Corner.

He will be sorely missed by West Virginians who will remember his dedication, his compassion, and his thoughtful, caring nature. Robert Mollohan was greatly beloved by his people for his tireless efforts to bring quality and dignity to the lives of West Virginians, and for his deep personal commitment to making sure that their government served them well.

But more, he will be missed by his family. Our thoughts and prayers go out to Mrs. Robert, Helen, Mollohan, who survives her husband, and to his son, Representative Alan B. Mollohan, his wife, Barbara, and children, and to other family members as they mourn the great loss of a husband, father, and grandfather, Robert H. Mollohan.

CONGRESSMAN RECORD—HOUSE August 3, 1999

REPORT ON RESOLUTION PROVIDING FOR CONSIDERATION OF H.R. 2670, DEPARTMENTS OF COMMERCE, AEROSPACE, AND STATE, THE JUDICIARY AND RELATED AGENCIES APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 2000

Mr. REYNOLDS, from the Committee on Rules, submitted a privileged report (Rept. No. 106-284) on the resolution (H.Res. 271) providing for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 2670) making appropriations for the Departments of Commerce, Justice, and State, the Judiciary and related agencies for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2000, and for other purposes, which was referred to the House Calendar and ordered to be printed.

WORKPLACE PRESERVATION ACT

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 271 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. Res. 271

Resolved. That at any time after the adoption of this resolution the Speaker may pursuant to clause 2(b) of rule XVIII, declare the House resolved into the Committee of the Whole on the state of the Union for consideration of the bill (H.R. 987) to require the Secretary of Labor to wait for completion of a National Academy of Sciences study before promulgating a standard or guideline on ergonomics, that purpose of the bill shall be dispensed with. General debate shall be confined to the bill and shall not exceed one hour equally divided and controlled by the chairman of the minority member of the Committee on Education and the Workforce. After general debate the bill shall be considered for amendment under the five-minute rule for no more to exceed two hours. The bill shall be considered as read. During consideration of the bill for amendment, the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole may accept amendments in recognition on the basis of whether the Member offering an amendment has caused it to be printed in the portion of the Congressional Record designated for that purpose in clause 8 of rule XVIII. Amendments so printed shall be considered as read. The Chairman of the Committee of the Whole may: (1) postpone until a time during further consideration in the Committee of the Whole a request for a recorded vote on any amendment; and (2) reduce to five minutes the minimum time for electronic voting on any postponed question that follows another electronic vote without intervening business, provided that the minimum time for electronic voting on the first in a series of question be one minute. At the conclusion of consideration of the bill for amendment the Committee shall rise and report the bill to the House with such amendments as may be adopted. The previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments hereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit with or without instructions.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from New York (Mr. REYNOLDS) is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, for purposes of debate only, I yield the customary 30 minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. FROST), pending which I yield myself such time as I may consume. During consideration of this resolution, all time yielded is for purposes of debate only.

House Resolution 271 is a modified open rule, providing for the consideration of H.R. 987, the Workplace Preservation Act.

The purpose of this legislation is to ensure that the National Academy of Sciences completes and submits to Congress its study of a cause-and-effect relationship between repetitive tasks
Mr. Speaker, the Republican majority spends a lot of time opining about how they want to help working men and women in this country. Yet, Mr. Speaker, at a time when the Occupational Health and Safety Administration is poised to issue a rule which seeks to protect American workers from workplace hazards which can lead to serious injury, the Republican majority wants to call a time-out.

H.R. 987 does nothing to help working men and women, and the Republican majority should not waste the time of this House by saying that it does. This bill is nothing more than another attack by the majority on establishing workplace protections that might very well save American businesses money in lost productivity, worker compensation claims, and disability insurance. If the House is going to call time-out, Mr. Speaker, it ought to be on the consideration of this bill and not on the health and safety of the American workforce.

Mr. Speaker, work-related musculoskeletal disorders cost employers between $15 and $20 billion a year in workers compensation costs. Ergonomic injuries and illnesses are the single largest cause of injury-related lost workdays, with nearly 650,000 lost-time injuries each year. These injuries are found in every sector of our economy and cause real pain and suffering. Women workers are particularly victimized by ergonomic injuries and illness. They represent 69 percent of those who suffer repetitive motion injuries, and 61 percent who lose work time to tendinitis.

In fact, Mr. Speaker, nearly half of all injuries and illnesses to women workers are due to ergonomic hazards. Mr. Speaker, H.R. 987 proposes for at least another year and a half the promulgation of a rule that will provide needed health and safety standards for American workers. There is sound scientific evidence that shows that workplace factors cause musculoskeletal injuries, and that these injuries can be prevented.

Many employers have seen the benefit in improving workplace conditions to prevent these injuries and have, as a result, seen injuries fall and productivity rise.

If the Republican majority really wanted to do something for working men and women in this country, they would drop their opposition to these workplace protections and withdraw this bill.

I urge a "no" vote on the rule providing for consideration of H.R. 987 and a "no" vote on the bill.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, the Republican majority is poised to issue a rule which might very well save American businesses money in lost productivity, worker compensation claims, and disability insurance. If the House is going to call time-out, Mr. Speaker, it ought to be on the consideration of this bill and not on the health and safety of the American workforce.

Mr. Speaker, work-related musculoskeletal disorders cost employers between $15 and $20 billion a year in workers compensation costs. Ergonomic injuries and illnesses are the single largest cause of injury-related lost workdays, with nearly 650,000 lost-time injuries each year. These injuries are found in every sector of our economy and cause real pain and suffering. Women workers are particularly victimized by ergonomic injuries and illness. They represent 69 percent of those who suffer repetitive motion injuries, and 61 percent who lose work time to tendinitis.

In fact, Mr. Speaker, nearly half of all injuries and illnesses to women workers are due to ergonomic hazards. Mr. Speaker, H.R. 987 proposes for at least another year and a half the promulgation of a rule that will provide needed health and safety standards for American workers. There is sound scientific evidence that shows that workplace factors cause musculoskeletal injuries and that these injuries can be prevented.

Many employers have seen the benefit in improving workplace conditions to prevent these injuries and have, as a result, seen injuries fall and productivity rise.

If the Republican majority really wanted to do something for working men and women in this country, they would drop their opposition to these workplace protections and withdraw this bill.

I urge a "no" vote on the rule providing for consideration of H.R. 987 and a "no" vote on the bill.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. BALLINGER.)

Mr. BALLINGER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me the time.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this open rule.

Mr. Speaker, I also rise in strong support of H.R. 982. It is a very simple bill. It simply says that the National Academy of Sciences must complete its study on ergonomics and report to Congress before the House of Representatives could consider H.R. 987 or similar legislation. That study should precede regulation, not the other way around.

Let me just summarize the following points in support of the bill: first, ergonomics regulation would be a substantially mandated cost on the American companies and the American economy. OSHA's own estimates show that draft regulation could cost an additional $3.5 billion annually. I believe that cost is greatly underestimated.

Second, there is no question that there is a great deal of scientific and medical uncertainty and debate about ergonomics. If OSHA regulates before the causes are understood, OSHA may very well regulate the wrong thing and impose a lot of unnecessary costs without benefiting workers.

Third, Congress and the President agree that we need a comprehensive study of ergonomics by NAS. The purpose of the study is to inform Congress, the Department of Labor, employers and employees about the state of scientific information on ergonomics. Only then can we determine whether a broad ergonomics regulation is appropriate. To issue a regulation before NAS completes its study is an outrage and a gross waste of taxpayers' funds.

Fourth, an appropriations letter does not take precedence over the will of Congress in calling for an NAS study.

Finally, the fact that OSHA has worked on ergonomics for over a decade is irrelevant since Congress decided the issue needed further study.

Moreover, the fact that there has been substantial study with no conclusions about ergonomics suggests that more study is needed before imposing a nationwide standard at a great cost.
In conclusion, I urge the Members to vote for the rule and H.R. 987.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. CLAY).

Mr. CLAY. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me the time.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the rule. H.R. 987 is a measure of how antagonistic the majority of the Republican majority is to the interest of working people.

Despite 7 years of unprecedented prosperity under the Clinton administration, there remains much that this House can do to improve the well-being of workers. We should be considering legislation to make a job pay a decent salary and increase the minimum wage. We should be ensuring that all workers have access to OSHA regulations and that employers and employees with workplace interventions.

We should expand expanding pension coverage. We should be ensuring better family leave coverage.

Instead, Mr. Speaker, this rule makes in order a bill that will result in hundreds of thousands of workers suffering serious injuries and illnesses.

Imagine suffering from a workplace injury that prevents one from lifting anything over a half a pound. Imagine being disabled, so disabled that one cannot hold a book to read to their child. Imagine being unable to care for their newborn or to give him or her a shower or a bath.

Mr. Speaker, there is no excuse for further delaying OSHA's ergonomic standard.

The National Academy of Sciences conducted a detailed review of existing scientific literature. It is not intended and will not produce new information. Two previous studies of the existing scientific literature, one by NIOSH and one by NAS, have already confirmed that ergonomic injuries and illnesses are work related and that they cannot be prevented by workplace interventions.

More importantly, Mr. Speaker, practical experience by thousands of companies has proven that ergonomic injuries and illnesses can be significantly reduced. Passage of H.R. 987 only ensures that some employers will continue to ignore the working welfare of the workers for that much longer.

So, Mr. Speaker, I urge a "no" vote on this rule.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. HAYES).

Mr. HAYES. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to support this rule and in support of the Workplace Preservation Act.

During the Easter recess, I embarked on an industry tour in my district in North Carolina. The industries of the 8th district are primarily agriculture and textile related.

I visited eight small- and medium-sized manufacturers, including Cuddy Farms in Monroe and Clayson Knitting Mill in Star. These companies and many others like them represent the backbone of our district's economy.

The number one concern on their minds was the new ergonomics regulations being considered by OSHA. They were truly fearful of the burdensome regulation that would not only create more paperwork and costly, unneeded changes but would also hinder communications between employer and employee.

All too often it appears as if the government is slightly behind the times. The current unemployment rate is so low that in many parts of the country employers do and in fact must offer the most attractive work environment in order to recruit and retain employees.

As one employer from the district wrote to me, "My company is begging employers to develop programs to attract employees." Plant managers, human resources managers, and office managers are more than willing to work with their own employees on grievances and workplace conditions rather than plow through layers of government bureaucracy.

The number of manufacturing jobs is on the decline. We are seeing more and more jobs going to Central America and overseas because, frankly, our government is making the cost of doing business in the United States too high for too many companies.

Rural areas in our Nation are being hit hard by the decline in manufacturing jobs. Keeping workers away from substantial government regulation on these industries will only encourage them to continue to flee.

Mr. Speaker, there is no question that politically powerful forces are at work here. Why else would OSHA hastily recognize a casual relationship between repetitive stress injuries and repetitive motion injuries.
for those workers. We need action and we need it now. No delays. No foot dragging. No excuses. We need action and we need it now.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. ISAKSON).

Mr. ISAKSON. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the gentleman yield me the time. I appreciate the opportunity.

Mr. Speaker, I want to address myself to the rule first because that is what we are debating. I have heard it said here today that we should not wait any longer for the scientific evidence to be evaluated by the National Academy of Science, what we should immediately do is proceed to pass rules and regulations.

That is a little bit like going into a waiting room of a sick patient and saying, let us just not do any diagnostic testing, let us go ahead and operate. It is risky business.

Secondly, I want to agree completely that this is about the cost to American business and the safety of American workers. In a period of unprecedented prosperity, in a period of full employment, the last thing an employer wants for a moment is to have workers getting hurt on the job, because there are not good replacements, because we are fully employed. They want workplace safety. But the last thing they want, also, is conflicting scientific data dictating to a bureaucracy to go ahead and establish rules and regulations preceding a final determination.

In committee on this bill, whether my colleagues agree with the bill or not, no one can argue that professionals and physicians from both sides of the musculoskeletal disorder syndrome agree that there were conflicting data and it was time to have a decision.

Mr. Speaker, I believe we should move forward with what will be a very contested debate. To vote against this rule makes no sense. When the debate on the rule is over and the rule passes, I think the evidence will come forward that we are doing what is right for workers and what is right for the employer and what is right for America, to depend on conclusive evidence and not conflict opinions.

Mr. BONILLA. Mr. Speaker, the American worker makes up the life-blood of our economy and we can all agree in this Chamber that our utmost concern is their safety and well-being in the workplace. Every employer in America understands that it is to their advantage and the employee's advantage to keep workers healthy and happy on the job. In fact, we should all be celebrating today here that because of OSHA workplace safety measures have been taken in the private sector. Working with so many workers, we have dropped employee injuries by 17 percent. The number of injuries dropped by 17 percent since 1985 because of the changes that employers have made in the workplace. There is no crisis at hand. Let us be honest about what we are debating here. We are debating a power grab by a government agency and by America's big labor unions who are trying to get a stranglehold on America's businesses both small and large. The debate we have here today is about the rush to promulgate and to write a rule dealing with repetitive stress injuries, with ergonomics, something that would be far more dangerous to the American worker if it is written too fast versus waiting for sound science to guide them versus having political science guide them.

Imagine for a second if OSHA rushes to write a rule without sound scientific, a one-size-fits-all rule that would apply to florists as it would to people who work in manufacturing plants, to people who work in auto parts stores, at restaurants and on farms and ranches.
throughout this country. What a nightmare this would be for the American workers. They would suddenly have their jobs on the line to spend gobs of money, money that could go to raises and better benefits and instead trying to comply with a one-size-fits-all regulation.

Let us all remember that the first draft that OSHA had of this rule was 600 pages long. Imagine if you are working in a bakery out in the heartland in America, you are working in a dentist’s office, in a lab, in an auto parts store or a restaurant and you suddenly saw this regulation show up on your doorstep. That is why the calculation of what this would cost the American workers in this country is at about $4 billion, because this is the kind of penalty we pay in our American workplaces when workers try and implement the use of ergonomics hastily written and showing up at the doorstep of America’s workplaces.

All we are asking in this bill and in this rule is to allow us to stop the rush. There is no need to rush. We can wait for the sound science to take over and have the political science take a back seat so that we can do this the right way. There is no guarantee. When this National Academy of Science study is ultimately completed, it could in fact recommend that an ergonomics regulation move forward. We understand that. But let us let the scientists decide, let us let the researchers decide. Let us not turn this process over to a power-hungry Federal agency and labor unions that are also behind it.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. VENTO).

Mr. VENTO. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to this rule and in opposition to this measure which is not letting the scientists decide, it is not letting the experts at OSHA decide. It is putting it here on the floor in a political way and letting all the experts here, the political experts, decide. This is not something being pushed by labor. If labor is interested in it, they are only interested because they are trying to protect the safety and health of workers. This is not some arcane problem that exists with regards to workers who have the injuries that occur on the part of workers that are related to repetitive stress type of injuries.

If we wait another year, another year and a half, we are going to have another million people that are injured in this way. For those of you that love science, it sounds like you like it just to study. You do not want to apply the science. It is time we take the knowledge and information we have and put it in a way that we can protect the workers that are intended to be protected by the Occupational Safety and Health Administration that has been working on this for a decade, that depended upon 600 studies to base their decision upon. Over 2,000 articles and reviews were written of those studies and the fairness to accord workers the OSHA rule and the appropriateness as to the appropriateness of such rule.

This bill is just an effort to study this into infinity, to frustrate the implementation of a legitimate law and rule. What is the cost? The cost in the end is a very high cost, because it means that individuals that are on the job, that are trying to work, will have to lay down their bodies, they will cripple their bodies simply to earn a living. That is really what this is about.

We have to open our eyes up and begin to see what is happening. This is like some bad film. ‘Eyes Wide Shut’ on the other side, disregarding reality is what we really have here with regards to this repetitive stress issue. Open case of a couple people you shake hands with when you are out campaigning and they draw their hand back because of the injuries that they have sustained in the world of work. We can change it. We can make it better because of the injuries that they have sustained in the world of work.

This measure, H.R. 987, seeks to study to infinity worker injuries and yet again delay Occupational Safety and Health Act (OSHA) action on rules that would govern and prevent such injuries. This is no less than a frontal attack—on all of OSHA to frustrate, dismantle and renege on worker safety embodied in the Occupational Safety and Health Act. Repetitive work related motion trauma is not some arcane, isolated occurrence—nearly half of all workplace illnesses documented are caused by such repetitive motion injuries.

Each year injuries which result from such work-related musculoskeletal disorders harm nearly 650,000 workers and are estimated to cost businesses $60 billion dollars in worker compensation payments and other costs. More than 100 different injuries can result from repetitive motions causing painful wear and tear to the bodies of working men and women. Women are especially affected by this problem, comprising 60 to 70 percent of those injured in many categories.

This repetitive injury OSHA rule is an all too common occurrence. Bad news, bad news. The good news is that for almost every job that results in such injuries, there are alternative methods of performing work which can decrease the risk of harm. The bad news is that there isn’t a focus on such prevention, and in fact some want to frustrate implementation. In February 1999, OSHA released a discussion draft for an ergonomics standard which would implement the use of ergonomics in the workplace. This draft proposal is an important step toward protecting workers from musculoskeletal disorders in a way which allows employers the flexibility to adopt solutions that fit their workplaces.

The legislation we are debating today, H.R. 987, is euphemistically titled the “Workplace Preservation Act.” This bill is an unnecessary tactic which could ultimately result in thousands more workers being needlessly injured over the next 50,000 years. Proponents of H.R. 987, playing a game of delay, mock and question the soundness and effectiveness of a well researched ergonomics standard, all the time wrapping themselves in “sound science”. However, both a 1998 National Academy of Science study and a 1997 National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health study provides scientific evidence linking musculoskeletal disorders to the job. A document based on 600 research studies of such injuries and 2000 scientific articles build a solid foundation upon which to act. Even beyond official studies, there is practical proof that ergonomics programs work. The draft standard that OSHA is developing is actually based on programs which have been implemented and proven successful in various work sites across the country. OSHA would be irresponsible and derelict in its duties to not act upon such a clear record which pinpoints the cause of one half of workplace illnesses.

We have waited long enough to address this problem, any opposition by Congress now will ensure to needlessly delay the process even further. For every day that we waste on redundant research, life-altering impairment which could have been avoided will occur. It is truly a travesty that our workforce continues to suffer serious disabling injuries while Congress debates whether or not a known solution should be set in place. Clearly, this is exactly the kind of issue that OSHA was created to address, and attempts to block this organization from implementing solution to improve harmful work environments are disingenuous, misdirected and counterproductive.

This Congressional measure to delay sound OSHA action should be identified for what it is; “The Right to Risk Worker’s Health Act.” Enough is enough—too many bodies and limbs have been needlessly worn to numbness and a life of pain and permanent injury. It is time to elevate and demonstrate the fairness to accord workers the OSHA rule and safeguard, to prevent working conditions which force them to sacrifice their health and cripple their bodies to earn a living.

Mr. Speaker, I will oppose this harmful legislation and encourage my colleagues to do the same.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. SAM JOHNSON).

Mr. SAM JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I cannot believe the rhetoric I am hearing today. I listened to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. BONILLA). He is absolutely on track. All that is happening is a takeover by big government trying to interfere in individuals’ lives.

Last year, the Congress and the President agreed to spend nearly $1 million on a study, and it is going to be completed in 2001. Why can we not wait until then? OSHA instead wants to rush a bill and spend $200,000 on a study in thousands of jobs and cost us billions of dollars while failing to assure the prevention of one single injury. Some single industry estimates go as high as $18 to $30 billion of cost. It is going to cost our businesses money. That means you, the consumer, the taxpayer, you are only going to pay higher costs on everything you do.

Let me just tell my colleagues something. When I was down at Homestead Air Force Base as commander, we had a little platform out on every level in a three-story barracks that our men lived in. OSHA came in and said you have to put a rail around there so when the guys get out there to clean the windows, they will not fall off. And furthermore, they have to have a hook to hang on that rail to make sure that if they do fall off, they will not fall and hurt themselves.

Now, that is your government at work. Let me tell you what happened. A hurricane came through and destroyed that base totally. It does not anymore exist. So we got rid of the OSHA requirement in that way.

Mr. Speaker, we need water here pretty bad. I hope we get a hurricane and just push OSHA out to sea.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. KLINK).

Mr. KLINK. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time. It is very plain to me that this rule should not be on the floor and this bill should not be on the floor. This is probably the biggest health and safety vote that we will see this year if not this Congress. The impact that ergonomic injuries have had on workers will touch every part of the family of labor. If this is such a big organized labor deal as some of the speakers have talked about, then that tool of organized labor, Elizabeth Dole, back in 1990 when she was Secretary of Labor.

I do not think anyone has ever accused her of being that closely aligned with organized labor, but her comment was that these injuries, and this is a direct quote, “one of the Nation’s most debilitating across-the-board worker safety and health illnesses of the 1990s.” Ms. Dole was right then and she is right today.

Business has to recognize the need to incorporate a new philosophy. We have to be able to adjust the way we manufacture to adjust our equipment rather than asking workers to adjust their bodies to the way we manufacture. If we do that, the workers will be healthier and they will miss fewer days of work; workers’ comp costs are going to go down, productivity would be higher, jobs would be secure and, yes, profit margins for our companies would go up.

Let us look at the figures in 1997. There were 620,459 lost workdays due to workplace ergonomic injuries. These injuries were overexertion, repetitive motion, carpal tunnel syndrome, back injuries. This represents 34 percent, over one-third, of all the workdays that were lost by injured workers were due to ergonomic injuries.

There has been some discussion on the other side about what this might cost the employers of this Nation. Someone threw out the figure of $4 billion. I do not know if that is true, I do not know if it is an exaggerated figure, but these ergonomic injuries each year cost businesses and workers between 15 and $20 billion.

We ought to take a look at what Red Wing Shoes did. Here is an example of a company that modified its work stations. This was not an inexpensive thing for them to do. It cost them money. But at Red Wing, they reduced their workers’ comp costs by 75 percent over a 4-year period.

There was also some discussion on the other side about the fact that studies have not been done yet. The fact is the studies have been done. If you take a look at the NIOSH report it says, and I am quoting here, NIOSH director Dr. Linda Rosenstock, it found strong evidence of its association between musculoskeletal injuries and work factors such as heavy lifting.

Then we go to this bill, H.R. 987, in the “Findings” section, you quoted exactly the opposite. You say that there is insufficient evidence to assess the level of risk that workers have from repetitive motion.

When the finding section of their own bill is exactly opposite of the finding that is actually in the study, no wonder they brought a cockeyed bill to the floor, because they do not know how to read the findings. Whoops, I am sorry.

What was it Gilda Radner said? Excuse me.

My colleagues have got to read the finding section. NIOSH has found that in fact repetitive motion does cause injuries. We have seen it; we have heard, if nothing else, a lot of inconclusive evidence, a lot of people who are not positively sure what the cause is and are not positively sure how to solve the problem. That is why we are asking the National Academy of Sciences to help us, help us determine what the problem is, help us determine what the direction is that we should be going.

We had one of the finest back surgeons, one of the most prominent back surgeons in the country who said after years of his study and years of his dealing with the issue he found that in many instances it is not physical factors like how often you lift or how often you bend. In fact, he said that it is in many instances nonphysical factors, just stress in life, not enjoying one’s job, and I think we can all relate to that. Get down low enough, boy, people can have aches and pains. We all go through that process.

And so here is a back surgeon, a prominent back surgeon who made that statement. So again, all the hearings that we have had, there is so much indecision as to what is the proper way to go, what do we specifically know and how do we handle the issue? And so all we say is, wait, get the study. We are paying almost a million bucks for it, and then see whether you can promulgate regulations that will truly help the men and women that we are trying to help.

So we are here trying to prevent forever ergonomic regulations. We are here saying let us do it right, let us get the scientific evidence first, and then proceed.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from California (Ms. PELOSI).

Ms. PELOSI. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding this time to me.

Mr. Speaker, today we vote on legislation to block OSHA from protecting America’s working men and women from workplace injuries and illnesses caused by ergonomic-related issues. My colleagues have the figures, but they bear repeating. Each year more than 2 million workers suffer these injuries, more than half of them lose time at work, and each year this costs the economy $15 to $20 billion in worker compensation, an overall $60 billion, all things considered.

I oppose this legislation and support workplace protection for American workers.

What is ergonomics? What is that word? What does it mean? Ergonomics and what are ergonomic-related injuries? Ergonomics is the science of adapting the workplace to the physical needs of the workers such as giving telephone headsets to telephone operators to avoid cradling the phone to reduce neck and shoulder pain, a workplace that is poorly adapted to workers’ causes, ergonomics injuries.

One type of injury, repetitive motion injuries frequently mentioned here, is caused when a worker repeats a specific motion hundreds or thousands of times. For example, secretaries and office workers who type all day at their computer keyboards often suffer wrist and arm injuries.

Similarly, America’s poultry workers who cut up and sliced up the chicken parts for our meals repeat the same cutting and slicing motion hundreds of time an hour each day as they cut up thousands of chickens for our meals. The cumulative stress of these repetitive motions cause secretaries, poultry workers, and other workers to suffer health problems.

But I want to get personal about this, Mr. Speaker. I want to talk about one particular poultry worker.

Betty Yvonne Green. Betty worked as a chicken fillet puller for seven years. Her job required her to use her thumbs to separate the fillet from the bone, cut the tips off the fillet with scissors and then place the product in a tub. Betty performed this task 16 to 17 times a minute for 2½ hours straight without a break.

In 1984, Betty began to feel pain in her right arm and reported it to her supervisor, the directors of personnel and the plant manager. They all told her there was nothing wrong and she would have to live with this problem. Management felt her pain did not warrant medical assistance, and nothing was to be done until Betty went to her personal physician.

Betty’s doctor found that both her rotator cuffs had been torn and required surgery. She went back to work after both surgeries, but was unable to continue to do her fillet job. She worked some light duty, but to no avail. Betty was terminated by the company for what they said was excessive absenteeism. She was denied unemployment and only received workers compensation after retaining an attorney.

On behalf of Betty Yvonne Green and many, many workers throughout this country who deserve our respect, in fact deserve our protection, I urge our colleagues to vote ‘no’ to this so-called Workplace Preservation Act. Indeed it should be called the Workplace Persecution Act because that is exactly what it does to the American worker.

We can study this thing to death. Of course we know more science, but we have to also know when we have enough science to proceed and learn many more ways that we can do better in the workplace, but not to deny, not to deny what has been fully documented by NIOSH, which has been fully documented by the National Academy of Sciences as a relationship between repetitive motion and ergonomic disease.

I urge my colleagues to vote ‘no.’

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from California (Mr. CUNNINGHAM).

Mr. CUNNINGHAM. Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Frost) says that the Democrats are for working people, for working men and women, but yet every piece of legislation that they have had out of here in support are against 90 percent of the working people. But if it is for the union bosses, they will support it. In 1993, they put the highest tax on the American people possible and increased the tax on middle-income workers, and this year they are trying to stop tax relief for those same workers. Salting for the unions where the unions go in and just destroy a small business, not even looking at the locals. That is wrong, but yet our union brothers over here support it.

Davis-Bacon, that increases inflation 15 to 35 percent of construction for school buildings, but yet will they waive for the children? No, they will support the unions. Now we are asking for a scientific study, and I would say that even Republicans, we need to go one step further because when colleagues say based on science you need to look at who pays for the science. Is it the Republican groups or the Democrat groups, and people need an individual peer review to be fair, a non-partisan independent review. Some times that does not exist, and I will give into that and we need that.

Many colleagues know in the office the people that work with computers all the times, they have carpal tunnel. There is good scientific basis that we need to help those people and provide the pads and make sure there is rotation and lights, and we have some pretty good science on it. But the problem is our colleagues want to go in without a study or agenda instead of science, and we are saying, no, let us back it up with the science to show so there will not be a big input on it, and I brought up yesterday www.dsa/usa.

Democrat Socialists of America, progressive caucus, has a 12 point agenda: government control of health care, government control of education, government control of private property, and guess what? Union over small business and cut military by half, by 50 percent, and it is to support the union. That is their working men and women, but not the 90 percent of the people that have all of the other jobs.

My colleagues should put their mouth and money where their rhetoric is. Support the people, the working men and women.

Who is for this? The union bosses. Who is against it? Chamber, NFIB, every small business group out there because they know that the only thing that my colleagues are focusing on is the union bosses who give them their campaign finance money. Admit it. Why do they fight against 90 percent of the small businesses and workers every single bill that we have? They do not support the networking men and women in this country; they only support the union members.

As my colleagues know, I take a look at the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. GEPHARDT) who gets up here and says, Oh, the poor lady in the red dress, not again and he talks about the working men and women and the class warfare, only the rich versus the poor.

Well, cut out the rhetoric. Do things based on science; the environmentalists, the same thing. We want environmental changes. Do my colleagues think we want bad environment, the Republicans over the Democrats? We just want it based on good science, and then we want a peer review. The same thing with ergonomics. We want a good science and peer review, they do not destroy the 90 percent of the jobs that are out there in favor of their union bosses.

And that is what we are asking, Mr. Speaker. We are tired of the rhetoric, tried and tired of the Democrats’ rhetoric trying to make points for the year 2000 where they get their campaign money, and that is what they support.

If colleagues really support the working men and women, support the Republican position on the Davis-Bacon. Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. PETTERSON).
Mr. PETERSON of Minnesota. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in opposition to this rule and this bill, and I would hope that we can cut back a little bit on the rhetoric.

First of all, people need to understand this talk about this study. There is no study that is going on. All that is happening is it is going to be a compilation of a bunch of studies that have already been done. So we need to get that clear.

Second thing I think that people need to understand is that it would help if somebody would have talked to the people in the department that are actually working on this.

I have met with Secretary Jeffers more than once and talked to him about this proposed rule that they are looking at. They have been working on it for a long time. There is a lot of science that has gone into this. I do not think a lot of people that are talking on this floor have actually looked into what this is about.

This only applies to manufacturing and manual lifting businesses, where 60 percent of these injuries take place. If you do not have an injury, this is not going to apply to you. It only applies when you have an injury where there is an ergonomics involved, and at that point, you have to come up with a way to deal with it.

If you have got a situation where it is only one injury and you are a small employer, they have something called a quick fix where you can go in and work on this without having to put a plan together. So they have listened to small business, they have tried to make this workable, and if anybody sat down and read this, they would understand that.

The other thing is that businesses that have gone out and actually worked on this have found it to be cost effective. It saves money for their company, and it is good for their employees. This afternoon I talked to 3M. They have an ergonomist on their staff. That person has saved them money. It is better for the company and better for the workers. This is something that clearly works. So I urge that people will focus on what is really going on here.

Back in October of 1998, then appropriations Chairman Livingston and the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. OBEY) priations Chairman Livingston and the really going on here.

I hope that people will focus on what is happening. It is very effective. It saves money for their company. They have an ergonomist on their staff. That person has saved them money. It is better for the company and better for the workers. This is something that clearly works. So I urge that people will focus on what is really going on here.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from California (Mr. DREIER) the Chairman of the Committee on Rules.

Mr. DREIER. Mr. Speaker, I thank my friend for yielding me time, and I assure him I will reserve time for my friends from Louisiana and will not fill out the entire hour here.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of the rule and congratulate my friend from Buffalo for his super management.

We have an expression that we have been trying our doggedest to successfully implement around here in the 106th Congress, and we call it regular order. We try to, as much as possible, follow regular order.

Frankly, that is exactly what the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Chairman GOODLING) is trying to do with this legislation. We authorized $1 million for the National Academy of Sciences to come up with some sort of finding before the Occupational Safety and Health Administration proceeds with implementation of its regulations on ergonomics.

The fact of the matter is, nothing, as has been said by several of my colleagues, nothing prevents them from moving ahead. But what we are saying is get every bit of information you possibly can so that you come up with good public policy.

Now, that will be unique for OSHA in the eyes of many, because a number of us have been very critical of the fact that regulations that they over the years have imposed have been extraordinarily costly to the private sector, and, in turn, to the consumers of this country.

But, obviously we are all wanting to deal with the problems of stress-related repetitive actions and repetitive strain injuries, also called RSIs.

So let us be very clear about this, that this is an open rule in form only. Every other consideration in worker safety is not in order. That is why the rule should be defeated.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from New York, Mr. CROWLEY.

Mr. CROWLEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong opposition to my good friend from Buffalo, New York, a fellow New Yorker, to this rule and to, even more importantly, to H.R. 987, the Workforce Preservation Act.

Injuries resulting from workplace stress and strain have long been studied. We cannot continue to needlessly suffer off the vagaries of the Occupational Safety and Health Administration. There is overwhelming scientific evidence supporting the belief that ergonomically unsafe conditions result in repetitive strain injuries, also called RSIs.

Approximately 700,000 serious workplace injuries result from ergonomically unsafe working conditions. This accounts for 31 percent of all injuries and illnesses involving lost workdays. The cost of these lost workdays has been estimated to be between $15 and 20 billion.

Now, these are not made-up injuries, they are not fantasies in workers'
Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. LOWEY).

Mrs. LOWEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong opposition to the rule and to the bill. Like many of my colleagues, I feel as if I am in a time warp. Last year when the latest NAS scientific review was funded, there was an agreement that this study should not and would not block or delay a proposed rule on ergonomics. Yet here we are again.

The bill is not about the need for more research. Both NAS and NIOSH have conducted exhaustive reviews of the scientific literature and concluded that this is a compelling workplace safety and health issue.

This is about delaying the implementation of the regulations that OSHA has been developing after consulting with and taking advice from employers around the country on the actions those employers have taken to prevent workplace injuries.

There is simply no need to further delay or to issue a standard or guideline. In fact, there is an urgent need to let them move ahead to prevent these workplace problems.

Each year more than three-quarters of a million serious and chronic disorders related to repetitive motion tasks, heavy lifting, or awkward postures occur in our workplaces. These ergonomic injuries cost billions annually.

Let me remind colleagues this is a women’s health issue. Women are five times more likely to develop carpal tunnel syndrome than men, one of the most painful ergonomic problems. Women are disproportionately represented in the jobs and workplaces where ergonomic hazards are the most common.

We know that many ergonomic problems are preventable. OSHA’s draft proposal provides clear guidance to employers and employees on how to prevent ergonomic injuries, relieve the suffering, and save billions in healthcare and workers’ compensation costs. Vote to stop delaying. Let us give OSHA the authority they need to work with employers to prevent these serious health problems. I urge a “no” vote.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Louisiana (Mr. TAUGIN).

Mr. TAUSIN. Mr. Speaker, I am often asked when I am at home, when is the government going to live by the same rules and by the same procedures that it asks other Americans to live by? For example, if I wanted to get a permit from the government in an area that might be considered a wetland, I have got to go through all of the procedures of finding out whether or not an EPA assessment is required, and we have to file all those reports before we can get a permit.

If I have a drug I want to sell in this country, I cannot say to the FDA, let me sell it first; we will do the scientific work later on, whether or not it works or whether or not it is going to hurt anybody.

Americans are subjected to a simple rule when it comes to many of those agencies; get the science done, and then we will tell you whether you can do something or not.

What the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Chairman GOODLING) is doing, what this rule proposes, is a simple proposition, that this agency, OSHA, ought to get its good science done before it issues a regulation. It ought to have in front of it the best science possible to make the best rule that is the most efficient in our society. Not that it should not regulate, not that this is not a problem in the workplace, we know it is, but it ought to do it right, it ought to do it efficiently, and, most importantly, it ought to do it according to the best science.

Now, this Congress funded that good science. I believe it cost nearly $900,000 to get that work done. All the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GOODLING) is asking is that that work be completed so that we can have the best rule, the most efficient rule, one that works, without causing undue cost or burden on the rest of the citizens of this country who pay their taxes and go to work every day and expect to be treated decently in our society.

They are asking, is this government agency going to live by the rules we have to live by? Is this government agency going to do the good science first before it imposes a regulation on us, that same agency required to do the good science first before we can get a permit from this government? It is that simple.

Please support this rule, and please support the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GOODLING) in the bill.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I urge the rule be defeated, and I yield back the balance of my time.
Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, H.R. 987 is a very simple bill. It ensures that the National Academy of Sciences completes the congressionally mandated study of ergonomics and reports its findings to Congress before OSHA promulgates a proposed or final standard.

As I said during the debate on the rule, everyone knows that eventually there probably will be standards and regulations, but certainly we should make sure that science precedes regulation, not the other way around. We get in real trouble when we reverse that.

There is a great deal of scientific and medical uncertainty in this debate about ergonomics. Our Subcommittee on WorkForce Protections, as I indicated also during the discussion of the rule, has had many hearings during the last 2 years. The only thing that was certain was that there was a great deal of uncertainty. I indicated that even a very well known back surgeon indicated that, with all of the work that he has done, he realizes that in many instances, it is distress in life and job dissatisfaction.

Well, I sure hope that OSHA does not start writing regulations in relationship to distress in life and job dissatisfaction, or we will be in real trouble. So we really need to wait, because that is what the Congress said.

Who said that in the Congress? Three hundred thirty-three Members, 333 Members said that there should be an in-depth scientific study, and we will put up almost $1 million for that purpose, agreed to by the President, agreed to by the Congress. Three hundred thirty-three Members agreed for that legislation that was contained that.

Now all of a sudden we hear, oh, but two people said that they do not have to pay any attention to what the Congress said and what the law said. That is a pretty interesting turn of events. Two people said? That probably was the best kept secret. Probably 331 others who voted for it did not know that. They thought that as a matter of fact, they were saying let us get the facts, the scientific facts, so that we can write regulations that as a matter of fact will help, not hurt. One-size-fits-all could really do great damage to the very people we are trying to help.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. CLAY. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 5 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to this bill. Mr. Chairman, there is such a thing as political speech, and courts have sanctioned it under the first amendment. In reality, it allows politicians to exaggerate incidents, to embellish facts, and still maintain protection under that first amendment.

What we just heard is a perfect example of political speech. Members will probably hear it over and over from that side today. President Clinton never agreed to delaying the issuance of ergonomic rules while the study is being conducted.

Of course, they are entitled to political speech, according to the Federal courts. Mr. Chairman, H.R. 987 prohibits the Secretary of Labor from promulgating any standard or guidelines on ergonomics until the National Academy of Sciences completes a study. This bill is simply one more attempt to delay and ultimately block the issuance of critical ergonomic workplace guidelines which are needed to reduce an epidemic of work-related stress and strain injuries.

Ergonomic injuries and illnesses remain the most serious health risk to workers face, and ergonomic injuries and illnesses remain the single largest cause of injury-related lost work days. In 1997, there were more than 600,000 lost workday injuries and illnesses due to overexertion, repetitive motion, and other bodily reactions related to ergonomic hazards. This represents 34 percent of all lost workday illnesses and injuries.

Work-related musculoskeletal disorders cost employers between $15 and $20 billion in workers compensation costs each year. Women workers are particularly victimized by ergonomic injuries and illnesses. For example, women are 69 percent of those who lose work time due to carpal tunnel syndrome.

The contention that we do not know enough to regulate in this area is disputed by the overwhelming majority of scientific opinion, and has been disproved by the real world experiences of thousands of employers who have taken steps to address ergonomic hazards and have substantially reduced injuries as a result.

This bill is opposed by the AFL-CIO and all the major labor organizations that represent working people. It is contrary to the recommendations of the major occupational associations, the National Institute of Occupational Safety and Health, and the clear conclusions of the National Academy of Sciences.

Additionally, President Clinton will veto this bill if it reaches his desk.

Mr. Chairman, how odd, how unfortunate, that the first significant labor bill, to the lead of this Congress attempts to strip working people of their rights, instead of enhancing them. We should be taking action on behalf of working families to pass a comprehensive Patients' Bill of Rights, to pass an increase in the minimum wage, and to address inadequate family leave and retirement savings of workers.

This bill says a good deal about the misguided priorities of the majority and the failure of this Congress to take action on behalf of working families.

Mr. Chairman, I urge Members to oppose this anti-worker legislation, and I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2½ minutes to the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. BLUNT), the author of the legislation.

Mr. BLUNT. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Chairman, where I am from, and where my friend, the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. CLAY) is from, the State of Missouri, $1 million is still a lot of money. It may not be a lot of money here in Washington, but it is a lot of money where I am from.

I keep asking myself as I hear this debate, as I have looked at this issue over the last several months, why are we spending this money? Why did the administration agree to this study? Why did the Congress appropriate the money? Why are we spending the money?

We are spending the money because the one weekend study that NAS has already done is not adequate. We are spending the money because there is a tremendous lack of clarity and agreement in these issues. The Members read the draft standard, I think it is clear why we are spending the money. The draft standard is not clear.

The draft standard is ambiguous.

The reviews on the draft standard, from the SBREFA panel, the Small Business Review Panel, to all kinds of journals that have reviewed this, have talked about the problems the draft standard would create. We need to be sure, when we talk about people's jobs, that we are talking about specific and individual cases.

One of the facts we hear here tonight is the groups that are disproportionately affected by these kinds of injuries. I am sure later we will eventually hear what the source for that is, but I would tell the Members that the whole work force is ill affected by standards that are not based on sound science.

My concern is that as we look at these standards, as we look at the liability, as we look at the vagueness if those did become the standards, that people who are in the business of creating jobs, people who are in the business of sustaining jobs, would have to look at these standards, and their push would be not to hire more people but their push would be to make a greater capital investment instead of a people investment. It is not the way the standards are written.

In our country, a person’s job has a degree of sanctity to it that I think we have to be careful about here in Washington if we get into that mentality. If we decide that, based on the instincts of some bureaucrat over at OSHA who had not lifted anything that day heavier than a pencil, that that is the person who is going to decide what is hard to do at the workplace and somebody’s job winds up eliminated because of that, I think that is a serious concern. I think that is a serious problem.

I think there is much evidence as to why we need this standard. The SBREF A group said that the draft standard was a problem. One of the reasons was the vagueness. One of the reasons was the vagueness of the terms. Well, this study will solve problems like that. This study will create the sound science. This study will create an atmosphere where people are encouraged to show up at a safe workplace every day, but that their jobs are still there.

This is about people’s jobs. This is not about some political play here in Washington, this is about people’s jobs. It is about a $1 million study, and it is about seeing that study before the final regulation is drafted.

Mr. Chairman, I urge support of the bill.

Mr. CLAY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from California (Ms. WOOLSEY).

Ms. WOOLSEY. Mr. Chairman, back in the seventies, I was the human resources manager at an electronic manufacturing company. At one point we started to see a large number of repeated stress injuries. It was not hard for us to figure out why the problems were occurring, because our printed circuit board assemblers were using the circuit board assemblers were using the same motions repeatedly to insert electronic components into their printed circuit boards. But it was difficult to figure out why it was happening and what was the solution.

So I did something that most of those who speak so negatively about OSHA on the other side probably would think very odd. I asked CAL OSHA to come to our company and help us work through our problems. With their help, we changed some of our assembly processes and the symptoms stopped.

Mr. Chairman, we knew that it was important to protect our workers from injuries because if we did not, our company was not going to be able to become a Fortune 300 company, which, by the way, it did.

But it would not have without a healthy workforce.

Mr. Chairman, all businesses and all employers and all employees will benefit from ergonomic standards. We already have sound science regarding the problems caused by repetitive motion. The problem appears that, when the Republican majority disagrees with science, they insist on more studies. They hope that science will eventually support what they want it to say. H.R. 987 is an inexcusable delay tactic that benefits no one but, certainly not business, and certainly not workers. I urge my colleagues to oppose it. A vote against H.R. 987 is a vote for workers.

Mr. GOOL ding. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. BOEchner), chairman of the Subcommittee on Employer-Employee Relations.

Mr. BOEchner. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Goodling), the chairman of the Committee on Education and the Workforce, for yielding me this time, and I appreciate his efforts and my colleagues’ efforts for bringing this bill before us.

Mr. Chairman, I rise tonight, in favor of H.R. 987, the Workplace Preservation Act. I am sure that if we went out and explained this bill to most Americans, they would wonder why we are even here tonight having to debate this.

First, let us be very clear about this. We are not prohibiting OSHA from regulating ergonomics. We are simply saying that before OSHA issues a set of sweeping new regulations that impact millions of employees and employers, we ought to at least look at the science that we paid for just a year ago and what the American people paid for when Congress appropriated $800,000 to the National Academy of Sciences to take a comprehensive look at this issue. It is simply saying let us let the good science inform regulation, not the other way around.

If OSHA meets its current timetable, the final ergonomics regulations will be in place before the National Academy of Science’s studies are even finished. Not only will the efforts of the National Academy be wasted, but the money that the taxpayers put up last year for the study will be wasted as well.

Mr. Chairman, that is just not acceptable. That is why we are here to pass H.R. 987 tonight. OSHA’s decision to disregard the need for sound science, to not mention the will of this Congress, is an example of the kind of bureaucratic arrogance that is making Americans cynical about their government today.

Many questions remain about the nature of the relationship between workplace activities and these types of injuries. But OSHA has concluded that it does not have enough time and resources to test the scientific communities to answer these questions. OSHA has decided it already has the answers, and it is going ahead with its new regulation as it sees fit.

I think we can all agree that this kind of bureaucratic free-wheeling is wrong. Mr. Chairman, the debate today is not about ensuring the safety in the workplace for the American workers. There can be no debate about that. The debate today is about whether we expect regulatory agencies to base their rules on medical evidence and sound science. I do not think there can be any debate about that either, Mr. Chairman.

So I urge my colleagues on both sides of the aisle to support the bill of the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. BLUNT), H.R. 987, and allow the taxpayers to get their money’s worth for the science and the study that we paid for last year before proceeding down this very dangerous path.

Mr. CLAY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. BONIOR), the distinguished minority whip.

Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Chairman, recently I traveled to the Eastern Shore of Maryland and the district of the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. Goodling) to learn about the poultry industry and to talk with some of the people who have been suffering injuries in the Nation’s chicken processing plants.

Chickens are processed on something akin to an assembly line. Most of the actual cutting up is done hand by hand, chicken by chicken, day after day, hour after hour.

One of the cutters that we talked to was a woman named Sharon Mitchell. She made her living as a cutter on the line, standing on a wet concrete floor, in a factory as cold as a refrigerator, with a knife in her hand, deboning breasts and thighs.

Earlier today, as I was in my office, I heard the sound off. I had it on mute, and I was watching the screen and this debate, and the gentleman from Louisiana (Mr. Tauzin) was making this motion.

Sharon Mitchell makes that motion. She told us that she was watching the screen as cold as a refrigerator, with a knife in her hand, deboning breasts and thighs.

Earlier today, as I was in my office, I heard the sound off. I had it on mute, and I was watching the screen and this debate, and the gentleman from Louisiana (Mr. Tauzin) was making this motion.

Sharon Mitchell makes that motion. She told us that she was watching the screen as cold as a refrigerator, with a knife in her hand, deboning breasts and thighs.

Earlier today, as I was in my office, I heard the sound off. I had it on mute, and I was watching the screen and this debate, and the gentleman from Louisiana (Mr. Tauzin) was making this motion.

Sharon Mitchell makes that motion. She told us that she was watching the screen as cold as a refrigerator, with a knife in her hand, deboning breasts and thighs.

Earlier today, as I was in my office, I heard the sound off. I had it on mute, and I was watching the screen and this debate, and the gentleman from Louisiana (Mr. Tauzin) was making this motion.

Sharon Mitchell makes that motion. She told us that she was watching the screen as cold as a refrigerator, with a knife in her hand, deboning breasts and thighs.

Earlier today, as I was in my office, I heard the sound off. I had it on mute, and I was watching the screen and this debate, and the gentleman from Louisiana (Mr. Tauzin) was making this motion.

Sharon Mitchell makes that motion. She told us that she was watching the screen as cold as a refrigerator, with a knife in her hand, deboning breasts and thighs.

Earlier today, as I was in my office, I heard the sound off. I had it on mute, and I was watching the screen and this debate, and the gentleman from Louisiana (Mr. Tauzin) was making this motion.

Sharon Mitchell makes that motion. She told us that she was watching the screen as cold as a refrigerator, with a knife in her hand, deboning breasts and thighs.

Earlier today, as I was in my office, I heard the sound off. I had it on mute, and I was watching the screen and this debate, and the gentleman from Louisiana (Mr. Tauzin) was making this motion.

Sharon Mitchell makes that motion. She told us that she was watching the screen as cold as a refrigerator, with a knife in her hand, deboning breasts and thighs.

Earlier today, as I was in my office, I heard the sound off. I had it on mute, and I was watching the screen and this debate, and the gentleman from Louisiana (Mr. Tauzin) was making this motion.

Sharon Mitchell makes that motion. She told us that she was watching the screen as cold as a refrigerator, with a knife in her hand, deboning breasts and thighs.

Earlier today, as I was in my office, I heard the sound off. I had it on mute, and I was watching the screen and this debate, and the gentleman from Louisiana (Mr. Tauzin) was making this motion.

Sharon Mitchell makes that motion. She told us that she was watching the screen as cold as a refrigerator, with a knife in her hand, deboning breasts and thighs.

Earlier today, as I was in my office, I heard the sound off. I had it on mute, and I was watching the screen and this debate, and the gentleman from Louisiana (Mr. Tauzin) was making this motion.

Sharon Mitchell makes that motion. She told us that she was watching the screen as cold as a refrigerator, with a knife in her hand, deboning breasts and thighs.

Earlier today, as I was in my office, I heard the sound off. I had it on mute, and I was watching the screen and this debate, and the gentleman from Louisiana (Mr. Tauzin) was making this motion.

Sharon Mitchell makes that motion. She told us that she was watching the screen as cold as a refrigerator, with a knife in her hand, deboning breasts and thighs.

Earlier today, as I was in my office, I heard the sound off. I had it on mute, and I was watching the screen and this debate, and the gentleman from Louisiana (Mr. Tauzin) was making this motion.

Sharon Mitchell makes that motion. She told us that she was watching the screen as cold as a refrigerator, with a knife in her hand, deboning breasts and thighs.

Earlier today, as I was in my office, I heard the sound off. I had it on mute, and I was watching the screen and this debate, and the gentleman from Louisiana (Mr. Tauzin) was making this motion.
operators, construction workers, meat cutters, assembly line workers, 600,000 Americans are hurt every year from these injuries.

Workers compensation costs related to these injuries top $20 billion a year. Study after study have documented the problems, beginning with studies under the Bush administration a decade ago. So ignoring Sharon Mitchell’s concern and that of the literally thousands of people that work with her will not make this go away.

Now, several companies like Ford and 3M and AT&T, for example, have adopted a low-cost measure to prevent these injuries from happening. It is time that we follow their lead.

I will never forget that woman standing there with tears in her eyes doing this and suggesting to us that we can do better. That is the mark, that actually are useful for the workplace. One hundred percent of the workers in some of these tasks turn over every year because of these injuries.

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3½ minutes to the gentleman from Colorado (Mr. SCHAFFER).

Mr. SCHAFFER. Mr. Chairman, I appreciate the gentleman from Pennsylvania for yielding me this time.

Mr. Chairman, my first job out of college was in a salmon cannery in Alaska. The opportunities for injury associated with repetitive motions were ones our employers new an awful lot about and upon which they spent a lot of time ensuring safety came first. They understood it to be an economic issue, as well as one that, in the context of humane treatment of employees and compassion of workers, was an integral part of business.

I have often said that standing boot deep in fish heads, gut, and entrails was part of the best training that I ever received for serving in Congress. But I also point out that OSHA’s decision to move forward on regulations without benefit of thorough study is a classic example of the phrase often used in business “ready, fire, aim.”

Our goal here in proposing this bill’s passage is to arrive at a set of goals, rules, and regulations that actually hit the mark, that actually are useful goals and regulations that actually can, with some confidence, be attributed to the safety of the workplace.

Now, it is rare for the current President and the current Congress to agree so completely on such a topic, but in October of 1998 both the executive branch and the Congress did agree that a comprehensive study by the National Academy of Sciences of the medical and scientific evidence regarding musculoskeletal disorders be initiated. That study was and is to become the basis for future OSHA regulations. That study is not yet completed. This is the one fact that we need to keep in mind.

It is often argued that the fact Congress requested and funded the study by the National Academy of Sciences does not matter because there was some kind of letter signed by the chair of the Committee Appropriations and the ranking member telling OSHA it was not barred from going forward with its intended regulations. But the fact of the matter is, while everyone knew about the study, no one, with the exception of a few Members of Congress, was aware of the letter. It certainly would not stand up in any court as the basis for expression of legislative intent.

Second, the opponents argue that OSHA has worked on ergonomics for almost a decade and that fact somehow makes the NAS study irrelevant. Well, again, Congress and the President agreed to fund the comprehensive study by the National Academy of Sciences just in October, not 10 years ago. We, Congress, decided the issue needed more study, and we were willing to spend nearly a million taxpayer dollars to finally get the comprehensive and impartial look at the scientific and medical evidence before OSHA should regulate.

Looking back, 10 years is instructive in one regard. Ten years ago, the Department of Labor claimed that ergonomics-related injuries accounted for about 3 percent of all workplace injuries and illnesses. OSHA now claims that ergonomic-related injuries account for 34 percent of workplace injuries.

Now, that huge difference is not just because of an increase in injuries. In fact, workplace injuries have been declining in recent years. The difference between the 3 percent in 1990 and the 34 percent that OSHA refers to today is simply due to the Department of Labor’s changing definition.

There has not even been a consistent, uniform definition of what injuries would be addressed by an ergonomics regulation. Now that in itself is a good indication of the scientific and medical uncertainty itself surrounding this issue and why we need the NAS study that OSHA wants to ignore.

A vote in favor of H.R. 987 is an exercise in prudent judgment and a responsible step towards sound workplace safety regulation. To reject this bill is to advance the misguided philosophy of “ready, fire, aim.”

Mr. CLAY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from New York (Mr. OWENS).

Mr. OWENS. Mr. Chairman, it would be good to have a few facts on the record. I think it is important to take another section from the President’s veto message where he states that the administration agreed to the inclusion of funding for this study based on a clean understanding that the study would not be used as a reason to delay OSHA’s proposed ergonomic standards. H.R. 987 would reverse this agreement by forcing OSHA to wait up to 2 years before issuing a standard in expectation that the conclusions of a new NAS study were different from those already reached by NAS just in 1997.

Both of these studies concluded that musculoskeletal disorders are caused by physical forces in the workplace and that ergonomic solutions can reduce those forces and the incidence of MSDs. These two studies do exist. They keep saying they do not exist. This NAS study was completed in 1998, published in 1999.

The conclusion reached here in the study is that: “better understanding of the course of these disorders would provide information that would assist in formulating strategies for tertiary intervention.”

So the new studies, the continuing studies will seek ways to intervene. This is certainly a complex area for studies for a long time to come. I hope that we do not stop after we complete 2 more years of study. But there will be an ongoing set of gathering of evidence and development of intervention strategies that will make it safer for the people in the workplace. That is no reason to delay.

What we really hear today is a clear statement of the Republican platform on the workplace. The workplace is not a place that they want to make safe for the workers. They are indicating their great contempt for workers, as they have indicated repeatedly. OSHA, of course, is a major target.

They have several bills which attack OSHA, and they always give them strange names or names that camouflage the real intent. There is the “Science Integrity Act,” which is actually a bill to allow businesses with financial interest in particular regulations to place their own experts on the peer review panels. That is a majority Republican bill for OSHA.

There is a “Safety Advancement For Employees Act” and that is a bill to exempt penalties to employers who violate the OSHA standards.

There is the “OSHA Reform Act of 1999” which would totally eliminate OSHA’s enforcement of standards in its protection of whistle blowers. Then there is the “Fair Access to Indemnity” which would chill OSHA enforcement by awarding attorney fees to businesses whenever OSHA lost a case.

They are consistent. They have been plugging away at OSHA for a long time. They are consistently hostile to working families. That is what we are hearing today. It is good that we are having this debate to have the destructive Republican platform for working families clearly stated on this floor.
Mr. GOODLING. What is the division of time at the present time, Mr. Chairman?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GOODLING) has 17 minutes remaining, and the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. CLAY) has 18% minutes remaining.

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from California (Mr. McKEON), our erstwhile subcommittee chair.

Mr. McKEON. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time, and I rise in strong support of H.R. 987, the Workplace Preservation Act.

For years, the issue of ergonomics has been fiercely debated. Unfortunately, many would like to make this a partisan debate, when, in fact, we all want what is best for the American worker. Therefore, in order to best address the issue, last year Congress and the President agreed to fund a comprehensive 2-year study to look at the scientific evidence surrounding repetitive tasks and workplace injuries.

I supported this provision when it was included in last year’s omnibus bill because it provided a commonsense solution to a very difficult issue. As such, I was alarmed when I heard that OSHA was moving forward earlier this year on a proposed ergonomics standard barely before the study had begun. Consequently, I cosponsored H.R. 987 and voted for it when it was considered by the Committee on Education and the Workforce.

To me, this bill is very basic. It simply says that the Labor Department must wait to move forward until the fundamental medical and scientific questions surrounding ergonomics are answered.

I support this approach, not because we are trying to delay the issue or somehow wish to avoid it, but because it is important to wait until the National Academy study is finished simply because we should have the result of the National Academy study before any final decisions are made on precisely what we should do, and what the best approach is regarding ergonomics.

I support the bill. I think it is very important that we do take the time to deal with the complexities of the issue, make certain that whatever we decide in this body or through the regulatory agencies is the appropriate approach, the right way to deal with the problem, so that we actually come up with good solutions rather than just have individuals sitting at desks saying, well, this might work, let us do this, let us try this.

We have to make certain we do it right. So I urge you to vote for this bill, demonstrate our ability to be patient and study the complexities of the issue before taking action. Let us do this, let us try this.

Mr. CLAY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from Connecticut (Ms. DELAURO).

Ms. DELAURO. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the Workplace Preservation Act, which bars OSHA from issuing vital ergonomics standards until the National Academy of Sciences has completed its study on this issue.

This legislation is unnecessary. The NAS study duplicates work that has already been completed by the National Association for Occupational Safety and Health. OSHA could have published the San Antonio Institute study before any final decision was made. The San Antonio Institute study showed dangers inherent in the workplace that could be alleviated by ergonomic design.

Let me just mention that, in fact, ergonomic guidelines are good for employees and are good for business. Let me give my colleagues two examples from the State of Connecticut. In New Haven, at the Ives Company, which is a hardware manufacturer, they reduced employee injuries by 90 percent by cutting out manual lifting. Aetna Life redesigned its workstations and productivity increased by 24 percent. Businesses can win. Ives cut its injury costs from $88,000 to $8,700. Aetna calculated its productivity increase and brought it to $621,000 annually.

But I do not ask my colleagues to accept a statement that my colleagues have heard too much from this side of the aisle, but I am sympathetic for reason relating to the ailments I have encountered, and I will amplify on that during debate later on.

At the same time, I still support this bill, because I have learned that the issues revolving around some of the things I have had, including a herniated disk in my back, and surgery for that; carpal tunnel syndrome, with surgery on both hands for that; and chronic asthma, I have learned that all of these issues are so complex as related to the workplace.

These issues are so complex that it is important that we do the National Academy study. I want to make certain that we do it not because we are trying to delay the issue or somehow wish to avoid it, but because it is important to wait until the National Academy study is finished simply because we should have the result of the National Academy study before any final decisions are made on precisely what we should do, and what the best approach is regarding ergonomics.

So I support the bill. I think it is very important that we do take the time to deal with the complexities of the issue, make certain that whatever we decide in this body or through the regulatory agencies is the appropriate approach, the right way to deal with the problem, so that we actually come up with good solutions rather than just have individuals sitting at desks saying, well, this might work, let us do this, let us try this.

We have to make certain we do it right. So I urge you to vote for this bill, demonstrate our ability to be patient and study the complexities of the issue before taking action. Let us do this, let us try this.

Mr. EHLERS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman for her statement. I want to make clear pointing out dangers in the workplace for American workers. They showed the exploitation of the worker. They showed the end of the century, much enlightened, much improved, but not completely.

And ironically, the new information technology age has presented new and additional challenges. As more people work on keyboards and look at screens, it presents more possibilities for ergonomic disease. So let us not ignore the history of it. We look with great embarrassment at what happened at the beginning of the century. We know so much more now. We owe it to the American worker to do better.

But I do not ask my colleagues to take my word for it. In saying this, I am joining the major national occupational and safety health groups who believe that existing science supports the need for an ergonomics standard and oppose H.R. 987. The American Public Health Association, the American Nurses Association, the American Association of Occupational Health Nurses, the American College of Occupational and Environmental Medicine, representing over 2.7 million safety and health professionals, have documented the need for and support an ergonomics safety standard to protect workers from workplace injuries.

The American College of Occupational and Environmental Medicine is America’s largest occupational medicine society concerned with workforce health, and they have said and I quote, “There is adequate scientific foundation for OSHA to proceed with a proposal, and, therefore, no reason for OSHA to delay the rulemaking process.”

The American Public Health Association’s national women’s groups, according to Women Work, the Network for Women’s Employment, all urge a “no” vote on this resolution. I urge my colleagues to join them.

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. EHLERS) from the committee.

Mr. EHLERS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time. I am very sympathetic to the problems of ergonomics. That may not be a statement that my colleagues have heard too much from this side of the aisle, but I am sympathetic for reasons relating to the ailments I have encountered, and I will amplify on that during debate later on.

At the same time, I still support this bill, because I have learned that the issues revolving around some of the things I have had, including a herniated disk in my back, and surgery for that; carpal tunnel syndrome, with surgery on both hands for that; and chronic asthma, I have learned that all of these issues are so complex as related to the workplace.

These issues are so complex that it is important that we do the National Academy study. I want to make certain that we do it not because we are trying to delay the issue or somehow wish to avoid it, but because it is important to wait until the National Academy study is finished simply because we should have the result of the National Academy study before any final decisions are made on precisely what we should do, and what the best approach is regarding ergonomics.
Ergonomic guidelines are good for hard-working men and women. They are good for businesses, large and small. We need to end this delay and we need to support progress. We need to support and protect hard-working men and women and save money in health care costs and lost wages.

I urge my colleagues to oppose this bill.

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Chairman, may I have the division of time again?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GOODLING) has 19% minutes remaining, and the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. CLAY) has 14% minutes remaining.

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. ISAKSON), a member of the committee.

Mr. ISAKSON. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time, and I rise in support of H.R. 987, as introduced by the distinguished gentleman from Missouri.

I rise to make really two points. The first is my personal experience. In the State of Georgia, for years, where I worked in the legislature on workers compensation legislation, without question, the preponderance of the cases that went to final court were cases over musculoskeletal disorders. I believe if we were to check the other 50 States in the United States of America, we would find also the preponderance of those cases that had to go to court were over musculoskeletal disorders. And we would also find that in every case a physician of renown, a physician with experience, testified on behalf of the injured party and on behalf of the business. And decisions fell on both sides. And why? For a very simple reason. It is too hard to determine exactly what the cause was.

To wait for scientific data to be conclusive is important, and to wait for this study that has been funded to come back before those regulations is also very important.

But I also want to address what the gentleman from New York (Mr. OWENS) said. This is not a battle of us against workers and someone else for them. This is not a battle against the lady that the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. BOXTON) mentioned, who over and over repeated those motions. But it is a battle over looking at all the interest of the cause was.

I yield myself such time as I may continue to remind everyone that the NAS study in 1998, Mr. Chairman, as introduced by the distinguished gentleman from Nebraska (Mr. TIERNEY), Mr. CLAY.

Mr. TIERNEY. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Earlier, one of our colleagues said this was ready, fire, aim. I think what we really have here is ready, aim, delay, delay some more, delay forever. But if we can.

They talked about this being an effort not to prohibit, but it is in fact an effort to delay this for up to 2 years.

They talked about wanting to make sure 'they have all the studies before there are some sweeping regulations.' The irony is that their proposed study would merely review existing information in literature.

This is the same group standing up saying delay, we want to await the National Academy of Sciences report that rejected the National Academy of Sciences report saying that there should be statistical sampling in the census. They threw that out. But now, because it is to their benefit to wait and delay, they want to wait for the National Academy of Sciences report.

There are reports out there, Mr. Chairman. Let me say that the National Institute of Safety and Health has already had the most comprehensive review done on this issue to date and the relationship between those types of injuries and the exposure to the workplace risk factors was shown. They have identified over 2,000 studies of work-related injuries and hazards, two thousand.

They selected 600 of the studies for detailed review based on well-accepted criteria, that included strength of association, consistency, temporality, and coherence of evidence. Twenty-seven peer reviewers examined that document including epidemiologists and other scientists, physicians, ergonomists, engineers, industrial hygienists, employers and employee representatives. Based on that review of the scientific evidence, they had a substantial body of credible research that showed strong evidence of association between those types of injuries and work-related physical factors.

The NAS study in 1998, Mr. Chairman, reviewed the same body of evidence, but it supplemented that evidence by including reviews of biomechanical and other control intervention studies. They then had scientists review it and had panel discussions.

None of us would argue that was not the appropriate response, but they went what it will do, and that is take care of the best interest of its workers.

Mr. CLAY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. TIERNEY).

Mr. TIERNEY. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Chairman, I support H.R. 987; and I urge my colleagues to join me in voting for it.

Mr. CLAY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. KUCINICH).

Mr. KUCINICH. Mr. Chairman, I thank the distinguished gentleman for yielding me the time.

Mr. Chairman, I urge my colleagues to vote against H.R. 987, the so-called ‘Workplace Preservation Act.’ Perhaps, it ought to be called ‘Workman Out of the Workplace Act.’ Because this legislation is against working women.

This bill is about our aunts. It is about our mothers, our sisters. It is... about women who have many responsibilities not only in the workplace but at home that when they have a repetitive motion problem it compounds their life.

H.R. 987 would stop the writing of regulations that protects workers, primarily women, who suffer the crippling and painful injuries caused by repetitive motion.

Each year, according to the AFL-CIO, 400,000 women workers suffer injuries from ergonomic hazards. Sixty-nine percent of all workers who suffer from carpal tunnel syndrome are women.

Now, everyone has their personal stories. A dear aunt of mine who worked as a secretary required surgery in both wrists to deal with carpal tunnel. I have a sister who worked as a meat cutter; however, they seemed to repetitive motion injury could not do her job anymore; and then when she tried to file a workers comp claim, the company fought her.

That is typical, also. It is not just the people get injured; it is that they often cannot get help, so they are victimized further.

Besides the physical and emotional costs caused by these workplace injuries, there is a huge economic cost. Workers compensation costs of repetitive motion injuries is $20 billion each year. So this, of course, hurts families, but it also hurts businesses in reduced productivity. It cuts business profits. It increases claims. It increases litigation.

This is time for new thinking. We are entering a new millennium. Let us have new thinking and let us start by voting “no” on H.R. 987.

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Tennessee (Mr. HILLEARY), another member of the committee.

Mr. HILLEARY. Mr. Chairman, I am proud to stand before this House today as a cosponsor and strong supporter of H.R. 987, the Workplace Preservation Act.

Do not let some of the opponents of this legislation fool us. They say that if this legislation passes, workers will be subject to an endless amount of illnesses and workplace injuries.

However, to forget that passage of this bill maintains the status quo and simply allows the National Academy of Sciences to complete a study on ergonomics to ensure the safety of American workers.

In last year’s omnibus appropriations bill, Congress gave the Clinton administration almost $1 million to complete this study. That is the law. The President signed the bill. He agreed to do this study as a pruden first step.

What I do not understand is why we should not wait until the National Academy of Sciences study comes back with that study paid for by Mr. and Mrs. American taxpayer before we make a decision on the issue. It is silly to throw the American taxpayers’ money away in order to prematurely enact a regulation that has been referred to as counterproductive.

While the administration continues to threaten to enact a regulation on ergonomics before a study is completed, I find their actions akin to a doctor delivering a treatment before diagnosis. There is no scientific certainty in the causes, the diagnosis, prevention, and correction of workplace injuries, and we should not hastily make rules without having proper scientific evidence.

Meanwhile, the potential impact of the administration’s regulatory scheme could reach into the billions of dollars. OSHA estimated the compliance cost within the trucking industry alone at $257 million and $3.5 billion for all industries. Private studies have estimated that it might cost as much as $6.5 billion.

Now, who is going to pay for this additional cost? Consumers? Businesses, of course, will pass on this new cost to those who purchase products. So not only are we throwing away the $1 million the taxpayers give us, but we are also telling them that they would have to pay more in order to provide food and other items for their families.

Another claim my colleagues may hear is that the ergonomics regulations will help the American worker. Yet, these regulations also alarm many of the people that they are designed to help. Several workers who would be covered under an ergonomics standard make their money based on the number of items they deliver. If we restrict the amount they can officially deliver, the workers themselves lose money.

So let us see, where does this leave us?

The American taxpayers. They lose under any new regulation because we are throwing $1 million of their money away and forcing them to pay higher prices.

American businesses? They lose because it will likely cost billions for them to comply with these prospective regulations.

Does the American worker win? No. Many of them will lose because they will receive less in salary and commissions thanks to the new regulations. And some of them will lose their jobs altogether to off-shore labor.

Let us protect hard-working Americans and not establish uncertain ergonomic standards.

I urge a “yes” vote on H.R. 987.

Mr. CLAY. Mr. Chairman, may I inquire as to how much time remains on both sides?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Missouri (Mr. CLAY) has 10 1/2 minutes remaining. The gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GOODLING) has 7 minutes remaining.

Mr. CLAY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. KIND).

Mr. KIND. Mr. Chairman, I thank the ranking member for yielding to me the time.

There has been a lot of reference this evening in regards to the money appropriated last fall in the omnibus appropriations bill for the 2-year NAS study. While that may be true, the legislative history behind that money is perfectly clear. At least it was on this side, and it was with the chairman and ranking member of the Committee on Appropriations when they wrote to Secretary Herman a letter in which they stated, “We are writing to urge Congress to fund the NAS study, it is no way our intent to block or delay issuance by OSHA of a proposed rule on ergonomics.”

Mr. Chairman, as a member of the Committee on Education and the Workforce, I rise in opposition to H.R. 987. And let us also be clear that if H.R. 987 does pass tonight, it will be the fourth time in 5 years in which Congress was able to effectively block and amend progress on issuing ergonomics rules from the Department of Labor and OSHA.

Proponents of the legislation claim that there is not enough science to justify moving forward. This, however, is an issue that has been studied to death, over 2,000 studies exist examining ergonomics.

As my friend from Massachusetts (Mr. TIERNEY) already indicated, in 1997 the National Institute of Occupational Safety and Health evaluated over 600 of those 2,000 studies; and they concluded that there is a substantial body of credible evidence showing the cause and effects of repetitive motion and injuries in the workplace.

I am concerned that Members are using the 2-year NAS study as an excuse to go into a four-corner offense and just delay, delay, and delay and hope that no rule is ever promulgated.

Quite frankly, I do not understand why. There are a lot of companies in western Wisconsin that are already implementing their only ergonomic standards in the workplace, one of which is 3M, one of the largest manufacturing companies in the Nation, three fairly large significant plants are located in my district. And they are doing it for two reasons: first, because they recognize the need for it and, second, because it makes good business sense.

In fact, the chief ergonomics officer for 3M, Tom Alban stated, “Our experience has shown that incorporating good ergonomics into our manufacturing and administrative process can be effective in reducing the number of and the severity of work-related MSDS, which not only benefits our employees but also makes good business sense.”

3M’s evolving ergonomics process has been effective at reducing the impacts of these disorders on their employees and their business.
From 1993 to 1997, 3M has experienced a 50-percent reduction in ergonomics-related OSHA recordables and a 70-percent reduction in ergonomics-related lost time. I think that is another good reason to vote against this legislation tonight.

I would encourage my colleagues tonight to stand up for working families. Do we want to see good businesses and good people lose the good lives they are trying to live by doing the same repetitive motion all day. They frankly are doing a pretty good job. Why is OSHA wanting to regulate? They are trying their best to give themselves something else to do. We all know agencies up here spend a lot of the taxpayers’ money getting studies to say exactly what they want to say. What the doctors and scientists tell us is that they do not know for sure. There is not a direct correlation. OSHA cops are incomprehensible why an industry that is suffering from $20 billion of losses because of these injuries is still seeking to block the issuance of standards which could save these injuries and in fact keep the workers at the workplace producing the goods, producing the values that these industries fully need.

I hope that this bill will be defeated and that the workers’ safety will come first.

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the distinguished gentleman from Georgia (Mr. NORWOOD), a member of the committee.

Mr. NORWOOD. I thank the gentlewoman very much for yielding me this time.
Mr. Chairman, we should absolutely wait until this study is complete. Use good science.

Mr. CLAY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1% minutes to the gentlewoman from California (Ms. SANCHEZ).

Ms. SANCHEZ. Mr. Chairman, I want to thank the ranking member for yielding me this time.

American workers should not have to wait for OSHA to proceed with its ergonomic standards. In fact, 16 years ago while an MBA student, we as future employees and employers were studying ergonomic standards and what to do in the workplace. This is not new.

Scientists and researchers have documented over and over again that musculoskeletal disorders, or MSDs, are related to workplace risk factors. These disorders affect people of all types of occupations, laborers, nurses, accountants, and many of us here know about the injuries personally.

For example, my first job in high school was scooping ice cream 20 hours a week, 6 years. That job involved the same motion over and over and over again 20 hours a week. I still have problems with one of my wrists today.

It is estimated that every year, over 600,000 workers suffer from work-related MSDs. For many workers, these injuries are debilitating, causing constant and intense pain. It is estimated that these work-related injuries cost employers between $15 and $20 billion a year in workers’ compensation.

We need to allow OSHA to proceed with its ergonomic standards. I ask that my colleagues vote “no” on this bill.

Mr. CLAY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2% minutes to the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. ANDREWS).

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time. I rise in strong opposition to this bill.

There is something attractive about the argument that we should just wait and listen for more science. But that was the argument that was made prior to 1990 when Secretary of Labor Elizabeth Dole said, “It’s time to do this.” And that was the argument that was made prior to 1992 and Secretary of Labor Lynn Martin said, “No, it’s time to do this.”

Mr. Chairman, this is not about more science or when we do this because, I assure you, another attempt later on to stop this regulation.

This debate is about the merits of this regulation. I would ask my Republican friends, Mr. Chairman, to think about doing what comes naturally to them and, that is, trusting the marketplace.

This regulation reminds me of the furor that took place in the late 1960s and early 1970s about unleaded gasoline. There was a proposal to have a Federal law eventually bar the use of leaded gasoline by making us make cars that could not use it. We were told at that time it would be the end of the auto industry, the end of the gasoline industry, it would cripple domestic producers of automobiles. It would raise costs. It would be a disaster.

But we went forward and did it, anyway.

What happened? The marketplace responded. People throughout American industry built a better mousetrap. The amount of ambient lead in our air dropped dramatically and so did the price of gasoline, in real terms.

I believe here as well, if we set a clear standard that says you shall protect workers from these hazards not only in the red meat industry but all U.S. industries.” Secretary Reich? No. Secretary Herman? No. That is dated August 30, 1990. That is Secretary Elizabeth Dole. Secretary Elizabeth Dole.

Now, we also support this on science that we need to act and act now? Well, the list goes on and on. The American College of Occupational and Environmental Medicine, a pretty reputable organization. The National Advisory Committee on Occupational Safety and Health. I would go with them. The National Academy of Sciences. Those are pretty good organizations, Mr. Chairman.

When you have businesses like Intel and Chrysler and 3M and Ford Motor Company out there doing this in the workplace, we need to act now.

Mr. CLAY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2% minutes to the gentleman from New and, that is, trusting the marketplace.

Mr. ROEMER. Mr. Chairman, we all know in Congress and throughout the country that smoking is bad for you and that cigarettes can do great harm to your health and possibly kill you. We also know that repetitive stress disorders and ergonomics hurt, harm, put people out of work to the number of 600,000 people a year.

Now, we did not wait with cigarettes. We waited for OSHA to proceed with its ergonomic standards. I ask that my colleagues vote “no” on this bill.
our workforce with safe working conditions and we therefore owe it to every American worker to vote against this bill, H.R. 987.

Mr. HOLT. Mr. Chairman, I oppose H.R. 987, the Workplace Preservation Act.

The human body is a complicated machine. There is a lot we are still learning about the body, how it works, and how to protect it. Far better be it for us as a scientist to say that we should avoid studies to get the facts. I expect, in fact, that we will learn a lot about the human body and how to take care of it in the workplace for decades to come.

But several of my colleagues here have talked about the unpredictability of workplace injuries. They may not be sure why they have back problems or other injuries. Well, in fact that is the point. Because the human body is so complicated, in many cases, it is difficult to determine the cause of an individual musculoskeletal disorder.

If we cannot identify the cause of injury in each case, we could rely on the employer’s altruism or self-interest or worker’s comp findings or even the threat of a lawsuit to see that each individual threatening situation was taken care of. But it is in just such circumstances where we have statistical evidence about this complicated machine that we need the kind of general regulations and protections that OSHA provides. We want to continue the effort to obtain the best evidence, but that is not a reason to delay providing guidelines.

There is now concrete evidence. There are clear relationships between occupational assignments and musculoskeletal injuries. See the National Research Council, National Academy report and the NIOSH report. There are clear techniques and equipment for reducing injury or, as the National Academy says, specific interventions.

Ergonomic guidelines are not antibusiness. There are hundreds of outstanding businesses around the country that are working on ergonomic solutions and applying ergonomic remédies. They are putting industry total of something like $20 billion a year lost due to ergonomic injuries. And we have to remember there are hundreds of thousands of people who are not able to pick up and hug their children due to ergonomic injuries.

So what we need, of course, are good studies and, Mr. Chairman, I hope we will continue to get them. But we have now enough knowledge about specific interventions in the workplace that will help reduce this cost to our economy and, more important, will reduce this harm and pain and suffering to individuals. We don’t need political delay.

Congress should vote against H.R. 987.

Mrs. MINK of Hawaii. Mr. Chairman, I rise to express my opposition to the passage of H.R. 987, the Workplace Preservation Act.

H.R. 987 requires the Secretary of Labor to wait for completion of a National Academy of Sciences study before issuing regulations creating standards or guidelines for ergonomics in the workplace.

This delay is unnecessary. Scientific literature supported by safety and health experts already documented that workplace factors cause musculoskeletal disorders. The National Academy of Sciences and National Institute for Occupational Safety and Environmental Medicine have clearly demonstrated a relationship between ergonomic problems and the onset of musculoskeletal disorders.

The American College of Occupational and Environmental Medicine has confirmed that “there is an adequate scientific foundation for OSHA to proceed . . . and no reason for OSHA to delay the rulemaking process while the National Academy of Science panel conducts its review.”

Duplicative studies are doing nothing to prevent injuries already suffering by millions of workers in all sectors of society: nurses, meatpackers, cashiers, computer users, and construction workers. Since 1995 the implementation of ergonomic guidelines have been repeatedly blocked, and this opposition has resulted in over 6 million workers suffering preventable injuries. Workers’ compensation costs have totaled $20 billion annually.

Further delay will be even more costly to industries as well as to workers. Clearly, we cannot afford to wait any longer for issuance of workplace standards on ergonomics.

For the health and safety of America’s workers, I urge my colleagues to vote against the passage of H.R. 987.

Mr. PAUL. Mr. Chairman, I would like to express my support for H.R. 987. The Workplace Preservation Act. This legislation will block proposed OSHA rules regarding ergonomic injuries until a scientific study comparing workplace conditions and repetitive stress injuries is complete.

It is estimated that if the OSHA rules are put into effect, it could cost American businesses an extra $3.5 billion per year. H.R. 987 simply allows for the completion of the study by the National Academy of Sciences, which is expected in the next year, to discover if in fact there is a link between repetitive stress injuries and work conditions. Completing this study before implementing this costly regulation is simply common sense.

The fact is, these regulations could cost our country billions of dollars without guaranteeing the prevention of a single injury. Small businesses is the engine which drives our economy. We owe more to small business owners than to blindly allow implementation of these potentially devastating regulations. We must correct this proposed federal rule.

Mr. Chairman, I and American workers should have the best working conditions. However, I do not believe we are moving forward to prevent workplace injuries by initiating rules that may not even address the problem. I urge my colleagues to support the further examination of these regulations by voting in favor of H.R. 987.

Mr. STARK. Mr. Chairman, I oppose H.R. 987, the Workplace Preservation Act.

This legislation would prevent the Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) from promulgating a desperately needed rule on ergonomics. H.R. 987 will needlessly subject hundreds of thousands of workers to occupational injuries while yet another study is completed.

Repetitive injuries are one of the leading causes of work-related illness. More than 647,000 Americans suffer serious injuries and illnesses due to musculoskeletal disorders, costing businesses $15 to $20 billion annually in workers’ compensation costs. Total costs of these injuries are estimated at $60 billion a year.

Ergonomics is the science of fitting the job physically to a worker—for example, by altering chairs, adjusting the speed of an assembly line, or using special braces to ease back strain from lifting heavy loads. A federal ergonomics standard is needed to protect American workers from employers who refuse to protect their employees. Unfortunately, the majority leadership would rather kowtow to industry and delay promulgation of an inevitable standard.

For the past several years, OSHA has been working toward the implementation of a regulation designed to reduce workplace injuries attributable to ergonomic factors in the workplace. OSHA has advanced a draft proposal that would provide an urgently needed health and safety standard for working Americans. The proposal draws from the businesses that have successfully prevented ergonomic injuries or reduced their severity in the workplace.

The issue of ergonomics and its impact on workplace injuries has been studied. It has been documented that ergonomics prevent workplace injuries. For example, in 1997, the National Institute of Occupational Safety and Health produced a study demonstrating the validity of the science underlying an ergonomics standard. A 1998 review by the National Academy of Sciences also found that musculoskeletal disorders in workers are caused by ergonomic hazards in the workplace.

A nursing home in Maine implemented ergonomics changes in the workplace. The nursing home cut their number of lost workdays from 573 in 1991 to 12 in 1996 by investing $60,000 on patient lifting devices and instituting a policy banning the lifting of patients unless there was more than one worker present to assist. This saved the employer more than $730,000 annually in workers’ compensation premiums as a result of this policy.

This nursing home provides a clear example of the potential benefits of a uniform ergonomics standard.

Despite the multiple studies already completed, the FY 1999 Labor, Health and Human Services Appropriations Act provided $880,000 for the National Academy of Sciences (NAS) to review the scientific literature on the issue of work-related musculoskeletal disorders. The study was expected to take at least 24 months to complete. However, on October 19, 19998, Appropriations Chairman BOB LIVINGSNon and Ranking Democrat DAVID OBEY assured Labor Secretary Alexis Herman in a letter that “by funding the NAS study, it is in no way our intent to block or delay issuance by OSHA of a proposed rule on ergonomics.”

Unfortunately, nine months later, the Republicans have broken their promise. This bill requires OSHA to delay its work until an unnecessary government study is completed. The facts are clear—providing guidance to employers and employees on ergonomics will prevent tens of thousands of injuries, alleviate considerable human suffering, and save billions of dollars.

We should not have to wait for completion of yet another study to tell us what we already know. We must defeat H.R. 987. I urge my colleagues to join me in opposing H.R. 987.
The CHAIRMAN. All time for general debate has expired.

Pursuant to the rule, the bill shall be considered for amendment under the 5-minute rule for 2 hours and is considered read.

The text of H.R. 987 is as follows:

H.R. 987

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the “Workplace Preservation Act”.

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

(a) Congress finds the following:

(1) The Department of Labor, Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) has announced that it plans to propose regulations during 1999 to regulate “ergonomics” in the workplace. A draft of OSHA’s ergonomics regulation became available in January 1999.

(2) A July, 1997, report by the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health (NIOSH) reviewing epidemiological studies that have been conducted of “work related musculoskeletal disorders of the neck, upper extremity, and low back” showed that there is insufficient evidence to assess the level of risk to workers from repetitive motions. Such characterization would be necessary to write an effective regulation.

(3) An August 1998, workshop on “work related musculoskeletal injuries” held by the National Academy of Sciences also reviewed existing research on musculoskeletal disorders. It also showed that there is insufficient evidence to assess the level of risk to workers from repetitive motions.

(4) OSHA imposing a “solution” to ailments and disorders that are grouped as “repetitive stress injuries” and “musculoskeletal disorders” before sufficient scientific information about the diagnosis, causes, and prevention of such injuries and disorders is shown by the fact that such disorders have often increased in workplaces and industries in which OSHA has focused on ergonomic injury prevention.

(5) In October, 1998, Congress and the President agreed upon a comprehensive study by the National Academy of Science of the medical and scientific evidence regarding musculoskeletal disorders. The study is intended to evaluate the basic questions about diagnosis, causes, and prevention of such injuries and disorders as shown by the fact that such disorders have often increased in workplaces and industries in which OSHA has focused on ergonomic injury prevention. The National Academy of Sciences was the right thing to do.

(b) The estimates of OSHA’s proposed ergonomics regulation range from OSHA’s low national estimate of $20,000,000,000 to the highest national estimate of $30,000,000,000. Any regulation with this range of costs of OSHA’s ergonomics regulation is likely to result in costs of $18,000,000,000 to $20,000,000,000 to some single industry costs of $18,000,000,000 to $20,000,000,000 to low national estimate of $20,000,000,000 to high national estimate of $18,000,000,000.

(c) The estimated costs of OSHA’s proposed ergonomics regulation range from OSHA’s low national estimate of $20,000,000,000 to the highest national estimate of $30,000,000,000. Any regulation with this potential impact on the Nation’s economy merits a sound scientific and medical foundation.

SEC. 3. DELAY OF STANDARD OR GUIDELINE.

The Secretary of Labor, acting through the Occupational Safety and Health Administration, may not promulgate or issue any standard or guideline on ergonomics until the National Academy of Sciences—

(1) completes a peer-reviewed scientific study of the adverse health effects caused by repetitive tasks in the workplace and musculoskeletal disorders or repetitive stress injuries; and

(2) submits to Congress a report setting forth the findings resulting from such study.

The CHAIRMAN. During consideration of the bill for amendment, the Chair may accord priority in recognition of the Member offering an amendment that he has printed in the designated place in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD. Those amendments will be considered read.

The Chairman of the Committee of the Whole may postpone a request for a recorded vote on any amendment and may reduce to a minimum of 5 minutes the time for voting on any postponed question that immediately follows another vote, provided that the time for voting on any postponed question shall be a minimum of 15 minutes.

Are there any amendments to the bill?

Mrs. CLAYTON. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I rise to speak in strong opposition against the Workplace Preservation Act. I do that with recognition that what we did in the appropriation bill last time when we indeed funded $500,000 for a study to be completed by the National Academy of Sciences was the right thing to do.

Mr. Chairman, I think the question is, why is this bill needed? Why is this act needed? Assuming the very best intention, the sponsors of this bill say this act is needed because we have a study that is in progress, a study that indeed would give us additional scientific information as to how best to protect the workers who are suffering caused by repetitive motion. I support that study. I think we ought to go forward and complete that study.

But that reason is so faulty on its premise. Why is the case of high risk workers having high standard before you get that? You do not do not that with cancer, you do not do not that with AIDS, you do not do that with any other illness. You work with the scientific knowledge you have, because you want to alleviate the illness there may be.

In fact, if this study is completed, and I hope it is, and I think it will give us valuable information, it would supplement what is already there.

By the way, in 1998 I think the gentleman from New York (Mr. OWENS) put it poignantly. In 1996 there was a study. Again in 1997, the year we passed this bill, there was a study that showed a direct relationship, a cause factor, between the illness suffered and the repetitive motion.

So there is not any question that indeed there is evidence, scientific evidence.

Now do we need more studies? Of course we do. Even after the next study is completed, if we are true to trying to relieve this illness, we will always have to do diligent, frugal, and always doing the kind of research that will allow us to gain the best scientific method.

I say we should really be about protecting our workers with the current science we have now as we seek additional science. They are not in contradiction with each other. This is only a stalling tactic, to use it as a reason to do nothing. We should not see this as a reason to stall; we should see this as a reason to look forward for additional information that gives us additional ways in which we can respond to the workers.

So I urge my colleagues to understand that this study completion does not deny and should not prevent us from having enough scientific data to go into the workplace and say we need to raise these standards, and if we get additional information, as I hope we will, we will have the courage again to say that we need to refine that.

Consider also there are already companies not waiting for these studies. They are doing it on their own. Why? Because they want to protect their workers. They also want to have a more productive workforce.

In my district alone, I know many of the workers compensation claims I get from workers are related to repetitive motion, and those people are suffering severely. They are not producing for their workers, and they are certainly not producing for themselves.

This bill needs to be defeated. It is flawed in its logic, and it is only a stalling tactic that should be recognized for what it is. We should be protecting the workers with the clear, scientific data we have in hand, and there is sufficient scientific data to know that fact. I heard one of my colleagues say that there have been thousands of studies, and this is not something new. This is something that will be evolving as we go forward, and to use this as a tactic to not do anything clearly is seen by the workers as a way of not respecting their rights, and I think we do a disfavor.

We indeed support this. I urge a defeat of the Workplace Preservation Act.

Mrs. NORTHTUP. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. Chairman, tonight, as we consider this bill, I think it is important that we consider the consequences that the bill will have. I think it is interesting that the bill is called the Workplace Protection Act, and I would just like to point out that maybe what we are really doing by passing this bill is protecting the jobs that we have in the workplace today.

The truth is that we all know that we are in an international competition in that we are working hard to make sure that our jobs stay here in the United States, and so every time we consider the costs that are involved in jobs, we have to consider that what government does may create such high costs that we drive additional good jobs overseas, jobs for working men and women, overseas. As we look at workers compensation, it is a very delicate balance that we have designed the workers compensation program for. We are trying to balance the very important aspect of protecting workers who are injured on the job, to provide for their medical expenses, to pay them a portion of their missed wages and to help them get back to work as quickly as they possibly can.

At the same time we are eager not to just write a blank check because the Congress does not write the blank check; the workplace writes the check for paying for these workers' costs, and so if we act and miss a day because costs higher and higher, if we begin to incur a super amount of costs that have not been paid for in the past, what we really do is encourage our companies to finally realize that, if they are going to compete internationally, that they are going to have to move these workplaces overseas in order to avoid an absolutely unassumable cost.

Mr. Chairman, we know that the human body wears out. All of us that have moms and dads know today that they are getting hip replacements; they are getting knee replacement operations. As my colleagues know, I myself after fixing dinner for years for a family of 6 children find that slicing up food has caused my thumb joint to wear out. The fact is who can say whether it is that or the fact that I sit at a desk now and write that has wear out. The fact is who can say that is lost.

So, Mr. Chairman, before we enact huge new costs from the workplace, a workplace that might steal away our best jobs, we ought to have the science to figure out whether or not these are work induced, what we can do to prevent them and make sure that we do not create an enormous cost that take away our good jobs.

As my colleagues know, the truth is today that Congress could pass workers compensation laws that would cover everything. We could cover employees that get sick and miss a day because they caught a cold or caught a virus or the flu at work. We could cover everything for our workers, and all of us who care about workers would like to do that. But if in doing that we caused some of our best jobs to leave this country so that they could continue to be competitive, we would create the worst for our workers.

Secondly, the effect we have is that we supersede all State laws here. What we do today say this. And standard, not only do we say this has to be prevented, but we say all workers who have an injury and suffer an injury get super benefits over and above any other benefits that are established in State laws today.

We would say they get a hundred percent of their weekly pay; we say that this has to continue for 6 months, and that all the State programs right now that are designed in a way to help the worker and the employer have the incentive to get the worker back to work so that they can have the best resolution of this and they can have the opportunity to get back to work, all of that is lost.

It creates an incentive for every worker, no matter what the particular cause is, to see to it that their injury would fall under the repetitive motion scheme so that they would get more than anybody else in their workplace that would have an injury under any other scheme. We take away all of the workers who have been designed to fairly meet workers' needs and workers' compensations for injuries and instead drive everybody into this new super-sized scheme for paying for injuries.

I am sorry tonight that this debate has been framed as a debate about pro workers or against workers because I believe that everybody here in this Congress wants workers to have the best. They want our American workers to have their good jobs, and they want them to stay in this country, and they want the workers compensation to be affordable.

Let us vote yes on this bill and continue this.

Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California.

Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

I rise in opposition to this legislation. I appreciate the speech just given by the gentlewoman, except this is a little different than what she outlined. This is about preventing the injuries to those workers. This is about the fact that if we do this right, those workers will not have to go on workers comp, their employers will not have to pay their compensation costs, and people can stay on the job, and they can feed their families and provide the wherewithal for their children.

That is what this legislation is about. So, Mr. Chairman, before we enact huge new costs from the workplace, a workplace that might steal away our best jobs, we ought to have the science to figure out whether or not these are work induced, what we can do to prevent them and make sure that we do not create an enormous cost that take away our good jobs.

As my colleagues know, the truth is today that Congress could pass workers compensation laws that would cover everything. We could cover employees that get sick and miss a day because they caught a cold or caught a virus or the flu at work. We could cover everything for our workers, and all of us who care about workers would like to do that. But if in doing that we caused some of our best jobs to leave this country so that they could continue to be competitive, we would create the worst for our workers.

Secondly, the effect we have is that we supersede all State laws here. What we do today say this. And standard, not only do we say this has to be prevented, but we say all workers who have an injury and suffer an injury get super benefits over and above any other benefits that are established in State laws today.

We would say they get a hundred percent of their weekly pay; we say that this has to continue for 6 months, and that all the State programs right now that are designed in a way to help the worker and the employer have the incentive to get the worker back to work so that they can have the best resolution of this and they can have the opportunity to get back to work, all of that is lost.

It creates an incentive for every worker, no matter what the particular cause is, to see to it that their injury would fall under the repetitive motion scheme so that they would get more than anybody else in their workplace that would have an injury under any other scheme. We take away all of the workers who have been designed to fairly meet workers' needs and workers' compensations for injuries and instead drive everybody into this new super-sized scheme for paying for injuries.

I am sorry tonight that this debate has been framed as a debate about pro workers or against workers because I believe that everybody here in this Congress wants workers to have the best. They want our American workers to have their good jobs, and they want them to stay in this country, and they want the workers compensation to be affordable.

Let us vote yes on this bill and continue this.

Mr. Chairman, that is what this legislation is really about. It is about the recognition of the reality of the workplace and what we can do now, what we have the ability to do, and what we know from a medical/scientific standpoint will help prevent these kinds of injuries. Injuries that plague hundreds of thousands of workers a year who are disabled and lose income, employers who lose the productivity of those workers, who have to train and retrain new people, who have to go out and find replacements for those individuals. That is what this legislation is about.

We have peer reviewed the evidence here until we are blue in the face. We have provided the studies, and it has been going on and on.

As somebody mentioned earlier, it was originally Elizabeth Dole who said the time has come now to deal with this problem because of the injuries that were occurring in the workplace. We see this being responded to where we redesign keyboards or structuring for the keyboard that will not induce the kind of pain for people who have to work at it all the time at the checkout counters in the supermarket. We are redesigning the checkout counter so that people, the clerks there, will not suffer these kinds of injuries to their arms and to their elbows as they do their job.

So, that is the kind of recognition that we are looking for; that is the kind of remedial activities that can be dealt with that can reduce the cost to the employer, can reduce the cost in the workplace and reduce health care costs.

That is why it is so urgent that we not pass this legislation which is an attempt to obstruct the imposition of this rule, because this is a rule that workers deserve. This is a rule that workers need, that their families need if they are going to be able to continue to be gainfully employed.

The evidence is clear, the science is clear, the health is clear on this measure, and the time has come, the time has come to implement this rule.

We have had statements before from the Committee on Appropriations, as I was saying, that the effort was not to delay this. We now see that this is an effort to delay this because the Republicans believe somehow that if they win the election, they can cut a better deal 18 months from now. Well, the better deal is not for the American workers. It may be for the Republican Party, but it is not for the workers.

This rule ought to be implemented, it ought to be done. We ought to start protecting men and women in this country who exhibit to us every day in the crafts and the trades and in the occupations in which they are employed at, the need for this rule because the damage that is done to them. This damage is evident on its face, and that is why we ought to deal with this rule.

Mr. DeLAY. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of this bill. I think OSHA should not be trying to tie down American businesses and the American worker with regulations based on potentially unsound science.

The gentleman from California said we should be doing what is right. Well, Mr. Chairman, how does he know what is right? What he is going to do is to make what we are wanting once again a study, a pure scientific study, not some conjecture, not something that has been cooked up by some politico sitting over in OSHA or the Department of Labor, real science.

The gentleman listed all kinds of wonderful things that are happening for the workers out there. Most of what is happening, in order to work with repetitive action, is happening within the marketplace without regulations.

I am not saying we should not regulate, but we should know what we are doing and have a study and rely on these studies in order to know what we are doing, because if we do not, we end up costing these same workers their jobs.

Last fall, President Clinton agreed with this Congress to authorize a study by the National Academy of Sciences to determine whether there is a need for some ergonomic regulation. I guess to the President and his OSHA, that agreement with this Congress is no good anymore, that his word is no good anymore.

This study will be done in a year or so. Despite this sincere effort to guarantee that regulations are at least based on sound science, OSHA has decided that it does not want to wait for the scientific findings. Why, do you ask, do they not want to wait? It is amazing to me that the workers or the unions would be against this bill because it is to the benefit of the workers to do what is right and that science dictates.

No, this is a political move by Washington union bosses in order to control the marketplace. That is all this is about. It has nothing to do with protecting the workers, because if they truly wanted to protect the workers, they would want to do it based on sound science.

OSHA wants to regulate as much as it can as soon as possible, and they are planning to do so, in direct contradiction to the theories of the moment.

Mr. Chairman, burdensome regulations already hinder American businesses and American workers. Too many of these regulations are outdated, they have been unnecessarily oppressively based on just jump on based on trendy but unproven scientific theories of the moment.

It is amazing, when the bureaucrats have taken this approach, and many times are proven to be embarrassed by the approach that they take because in actual practice, the regulations are undermined and proven to be onerous and unproductive.

Irresponsible regulation of this kind hurts American companies and the workers that they employ. Despite the excessive regulatory zeal of OSHA, it should be the policy of the United States to research before we regulate, and this is all that this legislation does, it mandates that OSHA must conduct research with writers before it serious begins. They observed the workers carrying out their task. We worked with them as partners and came up with the appropriate solution for our workers, and their symptoms disappeared.

You see, it was important for us, because we were a company that was growing rapidly. And we knew that our workers’ injuries would definitely inhibit our growth and we probably would not become what had been our goal, to become a Fortune 300 company, which we did, but it would not have happened without a healthy workforce.

The point is that business knew about repetitive stress injuries years and years and years ago. Many employers have stepped up to the challenge to prevent repetitive stress injuries. They worked with OSHA, they worked with their workers’ comp carriers, because they know that their workers comp costs go up when they have injured workers. So we do not need further.
My own exploration of this issue has left me convinced that such a broad regulatory approach cannot be justified at this time in light of the state of science, and should not be advanced without further study.

In 1996, after OSHA had already moved forward with stakeholder discussions on a draft ergonomic standard, I asked Dr. Katz, the director of the National Institute of Arthritis and Musculoskeletal and Skin Diseases at the National Institutes of Health if we knew enough scientifically for the Federal Government to be promulgating ergonomic standards.

His response was not yet. He went on to explain that despite extensive study, we are a long way from knowing the best medical management of repetitive motion disorders. I do not believe the science has moved enough in the intervening years, that is, 2 years, to justify OSHA's draft proposed regulation. I note that the Academy of Orthopedic Surgeons supports this conclusion as well.

At a minimum, the burden of proof should be upon the proponents of broad ergonomics regulation to show that there has been such a dramatic change in the state of science in the past 2 years that a sweeping regulation can be justified. It seems to me that the NAS study provides such a needed check.

Mr. Chairman, this is a major regulatory change and one that should not be undertaken lightly. I think the gentleman from Missouri's legislation adopts a wise approach to the issue, and I urge all Members to support passage of this bill.

Mrs. MALONEY: New York, Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of this legislation. First, I want to commend the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. BLUNT) and the Committee on Education and Workforce, the appropriate committee of jurisdiction on this issue, for advancing through the normal process this legislation to address ergonomics.

This is an issue that we have examined in Appropriations Committee hearings in recent years, and it is an issue that is of concern to both employers and employees. Indeed, through fiscal year 1998, we carried a provision in appropriations law to bar any ergonomics regulation before agreeing in that year that such a bar was better left to consideration by the authorizers.

Mr. Chairman, there are situations where poor workplace ergonomics cause serious injuries that can and should be avoided. Clearly, in modern times, injuries demand risk management of employers, and employers are concerned not only with the health and safety of their workers, but also with the minimizing of the cost burden of injuries and illnesses of their employees on the bottom line. As Director Jeffries of OSHA has testified before our subcommittee on other occasions, such cases are already actionable in many circumstances under the general duty clause.

The issue today is whether the present state of science justifies imposing a prophylactic regulation of broad scope. I think that it does not. And make no mistake about it, the draft proposed regulation is a very broad one. It would apply to any general industry whose employees engage in manufacture or manual handling, and such workplaces would be required to implement a full ergonomics program upon the reporting of a work-related musculoskeletal disorder, notwithstanding the difficulties in determining whether such disorders are in fact work-related.

I would also like to point out that it is very much of a woman's issue. Sixty percent of the claims are women that I have gotten some relief through treatment at the hospital for carpal tunnel syndrome, Banker's Trust recognized a potential problem early on and decided to implement an ergonomics program. In 1996, the company received more... than 100 workers’ compensation claims tied to ergonomic issues.

THE SOLUTION

Banker’s Trust initiated an ergonomics program in 1993. The company’s program focuses on two main issues: acquiring the right equipment and making sure it is used properly. A committee, composed of representatives from all departments, was formed to design new work stations, and a video was created to train staff on proper postures and the correct way to set up one’s workstation. Banker’s Trust also distributes a workstation safety handout to employees.

THE IMPACT

In one year, Banker’s Trust significantly reduced repetitive motion injury claims. In 1995, the bank faced more than 100 claims tied to ergonomic issues, while in 1996 there were only 60 claims. Employee morale has increased, and the company has seen an improvement in its lost workday injury rate.

ERGONOMICS IS A WOMAN’S ISSUE

Women are Affected Disproportionately. In 1997 women made up 46% of the American workforce and accounted for 33% of all workplace injuries. Yet, in certain jobs like typing or key entry, they suffered 91% of all repetitive motion injuries. Overall, women experienced 70% of all lost-time cases caused by carpal tunnel syndrome and close to two-thirds of all lost work-time cases caused by tendinitis. A study from Washington State reported that women workers submit less than 1/2 of all workers compensation claims in the state. 61% of all claims for Carpal Tunnel Syndrome are submitted by women.

Many Occupations with a Majority of Women Employees are Affected Disproportionately. For example, women in the health care profession are hard hit by musculoskeletal disorders. Just one profession—Registered nurses, Licensed Practical Nurses, Nurses Aides, and Healthcare Aides—accounted for 12% of all cases reported in 1997 according to BLS. A significant number of textile sewing machine operators, data key operators, and secretaries suffer numerous cases of MSDs.

Carpal Tunnel Syndrome is More Prevalent in Female-Dominated Industries. Ninety-one percent of packagers who experience carpal tunnel syndrome are women. Women make up 85% of packagers who experience carpal tunnel syndrome. Female assemblers experience 70% of all cases. Virtually all cases of carpal tunnel syndrome among data-entry keyers, textile sewing machine operators, general office clerks, telephone operators, bank tellers, and typists are experienced by women.

Top Jobs in which women are at risk for MSDs. (1) Nursing Aides and Orderlies; (2) Registered nurses; (3) Assemblers; (4) Cashiers; (5) Miscellaneous Machine Operators; (6) Maids.

Top Jobs in which women are at risk for Carpal Tunnel Syndrome. (1) Secretaries; (2) Assemblers; (3) Miscellaneous machine operators; (4) Data-Entry Keyers; (5) Textile Sewing Machine Operators; (6) Cashiers.

Ergonomic-Related Injuries are Crippling. According to BLS, workers with Carpal Tunnel Syndrome average more days away from work than workers who suffer amputations, falls, and fractures. Carpal Tunnel Syndrome cases average 25 days away from work; amputations average 18 days. Workers who suffer MSDs may be able to handle the job or may never be able to handle simple, everyday tasks such as combing their hair or picking up a baby.

Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. TIERNY).

Mr. TIERNY. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentlewoman from New York for Yielding to me.

Mr. Chairman, what we are talking about here is whether or not OSHA should be allowed to go forward with the rules they have established. Proponents of this bill say no, kill it, delay it, do whatever you can, but do not implement it. They use the same excuse or tactic that they have used before, simply to propose yet another study.

The irony here is that the delay would be for 24 months, 2 years. The irony in particular is that the proposed study would merely review existing literature. Even more ironic is the study that they seek to be done, they seek it by the National Academy of Sciences, a group whose studies they rejected when it came time for the Census, because this particular group said the Census should be done with statistical sampling.

Our friends on the other side did not like it then, but now, because they want a delay, they do not want to see the standards go into effect, they cannot wait to put this off and have the National Academy of Sciences do yet another study.

The harm is not just to working men and women, although that harm is severe. The harm is also to businesses. We do not hear that from the other side, but $15 billion to $20 billion a year is going to be spent on workers compensation costs because of workers’ injuries.

My small businesses want to know that they can rely on reasonable regulations to help them stop that kind of expenditures. Up to $60 billion is spent every year on these kinds of injuries. The harm to workers, Mr. Chairman, each year more than 600,000 American workers suffer work-related musculoskeletal disorders.

No one champions excessive regulation, but no one can seriously argue that there should be a total absence of oversight, or that that is appropriate. If it is the government’s appropriate function to strike a balance for business, for workers, and for consumers, it is especially so, Mr. Chairman, in this particular instance, when good regulation can save business money, can enhance efficiency, as well as save individuals from painful and debilitating injuries.

Mr. Chairman, the standards in this particular instance are limited in scope. They are based on science. There have been, in fact, some 2,000 studies done, and they have been reviewed and reviewed again by peer groups and scientists from all walks. These proposals provide flexibility for each employer to tailor the program to their particular workplace. It covers manufacturing and manual handling operations, which account for about 60 percent of these types of injuries.

Mr. Chairman, the science shows that this is warranted. There is no need to delay it again for yet another study when that in fact has been done. Workers say they need it, and businesses clearly say they see the merits and need these standards.

Mr. Chairman, we have to just listen to what some of these businesses say. 3M said they estimate that because of these efforts since 1993, over 1,000 employees did not develop work-related musculoskeletal disorders, and it resulted in approximately 16,000 fewer lost work days. 3M’s experience is that implementing an ergonomics program is effective for reducing the number of work-related musculoskeletal disorders, and additionally, is good business. Mr. Chairman.

Peter Meyer, the human resources director for Sequins International Quality in New York, Mr. Chairman, agrees, as does the General Accounting Office, this is good for business, as well as good for workers.

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that all debate on the bill and amendments thereto be limited to 20 minutes, divided equally between myself and the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. CLAY).

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

Mr. CLAY. Reserving the right to object, Mr. Chairman, the gentleman said 20 minutes, 10 on each side.

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. CLAY. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. GOODLING. Yes, Mr. Chairman.

Mr. CLAY. I have no objection, Mr. Chairman, and I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. EHLERS).

Mr. EHLERS. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me. Mr. Chairman, as I mentioned earlier, I am somewhat sympathetic to this because of my experience with a serious back problem, a lumbar laminectomy and carpal tunnel surgery.

At the same time, when I asked where these came from, did they come from the workplace, I am not engaged in heavy lifting, unless I am dealing with heavy issues on the floor; or did it come from my history of driving a 30-foot semi trailer truck when I was younger? Again, the answers are not clear.

My carpal tunnel injury, did it come from repetitive motion? No. I rarely engage in repetitive motion with my hands.

My point simply is that these are very complex issues. That is why Congress asked for and provided funding for the National Academy of Sciences study, because of the continuing controversy of the medical and scientific questions relating to ergonomics.

There are other issues here, other than separating out what happens at home, such as what are the effective treatments? For example, I wore wrist splints for my carpal tunnel surgery. Did it help? It turned out to be more treatments? For example, I wore wrist splints for my carpal tunnel surgery. Did it help? It turned out to be more

I think one of the key factors that we need is education on this issue. As my wife commented to me after I had back surgery, and I studied the problems involved with backs, if we had known all this beforehand, we could have prevented it, and that is exactly true. Preventative medicine is the answer, in many cases. That involves education, it involves accommodation to the problems that individuals have.

Something else I have heard commonly during this debate is the need for sound science. As a scientist, I find this amusing. Sometimes people saying that really means they want science that supports their opinion, rather than really what people mean by sound science.

Nevertheless, we do need that in this case, but also we need a good dose of plain, every common sense in designing regulations and meeting the needs of the workplace, and particularly ensuring that our workers do not suffer.

I support the bill, but I also want to make clear, I support efforts to provide proper ergonomic controls in the workplace.

Mr. CLAY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Washington (Mr. BAIRD).

Mr. BAIRD. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong opposition to this irresponsible legislation, which threatens the health and safety of our Nation’s work force.

Each year, Mr. Chairman, more than 650,000 American workers suffer from work-related musculoskeletal disorders, 650,000. That is not just a number. That is working people, our constituents throughout our districts. It is nurses injured while they try to transfer patients from a bed to a wheelchair. It is machinists injured on the job. It is workers throughout our districts.

I believe that these are hardly minor aches and pains, these are serious disabling conditions that have extensive impacts on workers’ lives, and are estimated to cost the American public something in the realm of $20 billion a year.

Mr. Chairman, these costs are not just economic. When a mother has carpal tunnel syndrome and cannot lift her child as a result, when a father injures his back on the workplace and cannot play ball with his daughter or son, those are also real impacts. We need to stop those impacts. This legislation would limit our ability to stop those impacts.

People do not just lose time with their families, they lose their jobs. They sometimes become permanently unemployed or are forced to take severe pay cuts. I want to emphasize that as a scientist myself, as a teacher of the scientific method and as a practicing clinician, I am dogged in demanding a strong peer reviewed science in making important public health decisions.

But my colleagues should know by now that the American Public Health Association, the National Academy of Sciences, the National Institute for Occupational Safety and Health, and the American College of Occupational and Environmental Medicine, have all indicated the strong need for a standard. We have that draft standard. We need to implement it.

This bill is not really about requiring science, because if it were, the people who have introduced it would have supported funding for scientific studies in the past, but in fact they have opposed it.

It is not about science, because common sense tells us if we do the same repetitive motion for 8 hours a day, we are going to injure ourselves. We do not need more science, we need to implement the regulations we have put forward.

There was a time, Mr. Chairman, when in our country workers were considered expendable. If they injured themselves on the job, tough luck, they were dismissed with no compensation, their family lost a breadwinner, they lost mobility, and they simply replaced them with whoever else was willing to work for the cheapest wage in the most dangerous conditions imaginable.

That time was past, but this legislation would like to see us move back. This legislation is wrong.

A very interesting thing just happened on the floor of this House. We saw a negotiation between the two parties, which was good. We said, folks, we are all tired. It has been a long day. It is going to be a long week. We have worked hard. Let us cut this debate a little short so we can go home to our families. I favor that negotiation. I am glad we supported it.

But here is the problem. Working people, men and women in this country, who work in unsafe conditions, or where they risk ergonomic injuries, do not always have that opportunity. They cannot go to their boss or their supervisor and say, I am getting injured on this job.

We need to change the conditions. They do not have that right to negotiate, the very negotiation we just conducted here. They are forced to work in situations that injure them. We have an obligation to create standards that protect them from those injuries, to protect the mothers, fathers, and the working people throughout this country.

I urge my colleagues to vote no on this anti-worker, anti-safety, anti-family legislation.

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. BALLINGER).

Mr. BALLINGER. Mr. Chairman, my subcommittee had several hearings with specialists in these fields. This is what the experts said.

For example, Dr. Morton Kasden, a clinical professor of surgery at the University of Louisville, testified that “There is a lack of scientific evidence that using our hands repetitively causes so-called cumulative trauma…”

A quote on the chart from Dr. Stanley Bigos, professor of orthopedics at the University of Washington:

We cannot provide a universal mandate without knowing specific dimensions that might work. How high should the bench be? How tall is too tall and too short? What about differences in age?

Who will all of a sudden determine, without data, what is right or wrong, legal or illegal, borderline or punishable? From whose pockets will the costs come? As usual, they will probably come from the employees take-home pay. Do not be confused by those who want to oversimplify the model of the human body. Usually the human body does not mean you wear it out. Discomfort from spring gardening and spring training is not caused by damage but deconditioning of the winter rest.

Dr. Howard Sandler, a former medical officer with NIOSH and a consultant to OSHA, said:

Considerable interest and concern has been focused on the relationship between work and musculoskeletal disorders. At the present time, the risk factors, their interactions and their thresholds for causing effects have not been sufficiently identified. Once this information is established, risk can be effectively predicted and appropriate preventive actions can be instituted across a wide range of business and industry. Research presently underway should help to establish the scientific data which is currently lacking.

Finally, on the chart, Dr. Morton Hadler, who is from the University of North Carolina:

Any attempt to construct an ergonomic standard as a remedy for regional musculoskeletal injuries in the workplace is not just premature, it is likely to be counterproductive in its application and enforcement.

Finally, Dr. Michael Vender, who is with the American Society of Surgery of the Hand: “With our present level of understanding, we cannot distinguish between natural and ‘off-the-job’ activities because the quantitative relationships’” are bad. This proves that we need a complete study.

Mr. CLAY. Mr. Chairman, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from New York (Mr. OWENS).

Mr. OWENS. Mr. Chairman, the following informational items can contribute greatly to the lifting of the veil of confusion being promulgated by the Republican majority. I am also submitting examples of victims of ergonomic disorders and examples of business owners in establishing their own ergonomic standards.

Truth is on the side of the American working families.

The material referred to is as follows:

MISLEADING MYTHS ON ERGONOMICS

Fact: All workplace injuries and illnesses—whether from awkward postures, repetitive motion, heavy lifting and forceful exertions, or combinations of these factors—are declining—that's great news. Repetitive motion injuries, as they are reported on the OSHA 200 Log, constitute a small portion of these injuries—just 4 percent. However, when these injuries are combined with back injuries due to repetitive motions or overexertion, they account for over one-third of lost workday injuries and illnesses. An OSHA standard would help protect the more than 500,000 industry. She has worked at FEDCO for ten years. For the past five years, Nadine has worked lifting heater cores that weigh at least 2–4 pounds onto an assembly line. Each day, Nadine lifts between 4,000 and 6,000 heater cores. She gets 2 fifteen minute breaks a day, plus a half hour for lunch. Last August Nadine underwent surgery to relieve the pain in her hand caused by carpal tunnel syndrome.

Myth: There is no proof that ergonomic programs reduce injuries.

Fact: There are many examples of companies that have established ergonomic programs, reduced injuries, cut costs and increased productivity and employee morale. Hundreds of stakeholders have shared their successes with OSHA in stakeholder meetings and best practices ergonomic conferences.

Myth: An OSHA ergonomics standard will be extremely costly for businesses.

Fact: Today, U.S. businesses are spending $5 to $20 billion each year in workers' compensation costs alone for work-related musculoskeletal disorders. As employers fix ergonomic problems in line with their ergonomic programs, injuries—and costs—will decline. Ergonomics programs ultimately save money—for everyone. Good ergonomics is good economics.

SUCCESS WITH ERGONOMICS

State: New York, 8th; Company: King Kullen Grocery, New York; Industry: Retail grocery; Employees: 4,500; Success Brief: Over four years, reduced workers' compensation claims from 21 to 5.

In 1992, King Kullen faced a rising rate of carpal tunnel syndrome (CTS) among its cashiers. The company attributed the increase in CTS cases to the checkout scanners introduced in the late 1980s.

THE SOLUTION

The company implemented a comprehensive ergonomics program. King Kullen modified its checkout stations and scanners to reduce lifting and twisting motions. The company's medical management program ensured immediate care and treatment to employees who were experiencing problems on the job. Employees also received training on the causes and symptoms of work-related musculoskeletal disorders (MSDs) and on good work practices.

THE IMPACT

Angel Diaz (ILGWU), New York, NY; Ladies Garment Workers.

Angel Diaz has been a seamstress for 25 years.

Now 48, Diaz has suffered with a severe case of carpal tunnel syndrome for seven years.

With help from the ILGWU, she finally has gotten some relief through treatment at the union’s Occupational Health Clinic and surgery. The ILGWU also guided Diaz through the maze of applying for workers' compensation: a two-year wait is normal for victims of carpal tunnel syndrome. During that period, most workers lost their health benefits and some had to dip into welfare benefits to support their families.

Diaz says her life has been turned upside down. She cannot do the work that is necessary to maintain her home and family, much less the activities she once enjoyed.

Nadine Brown (USWA), Local 1753, Buffalo, NY; FEDCO Automotive.

Nadine works for FEDCO Automotive Components Company, Inc. of Buffalo, a manufacturer of heat exchangers for the automotive industry. She has worked at FEDCO for ten years. For the past five years, Nadine has worked lifting heater cores that weigh at least 2–4 pounds onto an assembly line. Each day, Nadine lifts between 4,000 and 6,000 heater cores. She gets 2 fifteen minute breaks a day, plus a half hour for lunch. Last August Nadine underwent surgery to relieve the pain in her hand caused by carpal tunnel syndrome.

The pain in her hand started several years ago. It made it difficult to grip things, to dress and to fix her children’s hair. She went to the company doctor, who referred her to a specialist. He told her she needed surgery. Nadine spent about four months recovering from the surgery and returned back to work in the same job. No adjustments have been made, so she is doing the exact same work now that caused her injury. Several other people in the company have had surgery for similar injuries.

Lorraine Baker (USWA), Solvay, NY; Landis Plastics.

Lorraine was injured on the job and was diagnosed with bilateral carpal tunnel in 1996. She found out she was fired when she tried to use her insurance for her daughter and was told that it had been canceled even though she continued to make her weekly co-payments to her employer.

She was forced to file a lawsuit in Federal Court before her employer would reinstate her and her insurance. In 1997 the company's doctors agreed that she did in fact have bilateral carpal tunnel but they said that it didn’t happen at work. Her compensation was reduced by 50 percent and would not appear on her surgery the surgeons recommended. Her attorney was seeking an expedited hearing with the Workers' Compensation Board.

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. MILLER).

Mr. MILLER of Florida. Mr. Chairman, let me first of all commend the chairman of the Committee on Education and the Workforce for bringing the commonsense of the floor today. This really is common sense.

One thing we can all agree on in this Chamber, all 435 of us, is we do not want to have workplace injuries. We want to eliminate them. We want to minimize them. We all agree on that. The debate is where we want power and the influence to control that.

My friends on the other side believe Washington knows the answer. The more power we can bring to Washington, the better it is for the Washington bureaucracy, and also for the benefit of organized labor. Those of us on this side of the aisle believe it belongs to business and State and local regulations. It does not belong in Washington. Washington does not know all the answers.

I am a former small business man. Before I entered Congress, I served for 19 years in family businesses back in Florida. We were highly motivated in our business to keep workplace injuries to a minimum. First of all, it is the right thing to do. You do not want to see your friends and employees hurt.
But workmen's compensation insurance was so expensive you were highly motivated to keep injuries to a minimum, because of the economic sense, because it affected your bottom line by not having people injured. So you were motivated to have people trained to avoid injuries, lifting injuries or hand injuries and such.

The other reason you are motivated is that you do not want to have your employees lose work. You have a trained employee and that is a valuable asset. The last thing you want to do is have that person hurt and miss work. So employers are motivated to minimize those injuries, just like the government thinks they can decide it up here in Washington. This regulation is common sense. This says, let science address the issue.

The other question that is unanswered, besides science, is cost. I know OSHA says, Oh, it is only $3.5 billion a year on business. That is costing jobs, $3.5 billion, and that is a ball park estimate. Other estimates are in the tens of billions of dollars a year. That is like a tax on small business.

This makes common sense. Let us wait for science to give us some answers.

Mr. CLAY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from Florida (Ms. Brown).

Ms. BROWN of Florida. Mr. Chairman, I have been an elected official for 17 years, and never in those 17 years have I voted against the working people of the country. I rise today in opposition to this bill. This is another attempt by the Republicans to trample upon the rights of the American workers.

Working men and women are the backbone of this country. As usual, this Republican bill ignores the problems of worker safety.

It is the working men and women who have built up this country, and the Republicans would rather conduct a study than take real action to protect these men and women. Work-related injuries are a critical problem that affect more than 600,000 workers each year.

OSHA is finally moving forward to develop a standard to prevent unnecessary injuries, and this bill would only cause those workers more pain.

I urge my colleagues to stand up for the working men and women and vote "no" on this bill.

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Kentucky (Mr. FLETCHER), a member of the committee.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. Chairman, I rise to speak in support of the bill, and I certainly thank the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. BLUNT) and the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. GOODLING), the committee chairman, for their work to ensure that we make sure that we evaluate fully what we are doing before we begin to promulgate regulations that can have extensive effects upon the workers, the workplace, and job availability.

I think we all agree on both sides of the aisle that paramount in our concern is worker safety, making sure that we have the kind of jobs that are needed, that are safe jobs, that folks do have the kind of protections that they need so that they do not have injury, permanent injury and problems that will affect their livelihood and their families.

But when we look at past history of OSHA, sometimes they promulgated regulations that really do not make a whole lot of sense. Let me give my colleagues just one simple illustration of what they are trying to do. Cast the labor side. H.R. 987 does not address the question of the commitment of working men and women to their positions. It is a bad bill. It should be defeated.

Mr. CLAY. Mr. Chairman, I yield 4½ minutes to the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. WATT).

Mr. WATT of North Carolina. Mr. Chairman, I am observing this debate in somewhat disbelief about 25, 30 years ago, when I was a young lawyer just starting to practice law in North Carolina, I tried the first carpal tunnel syndrome case under the North Carolina workers compensation law. Ever since that time, in North Carolina, carpal tunnel has been recognized as a compensable workers compensation injury in North Carolina.

It comes as a substantial surprise to me that my colleagues who say that they are using the States as laboratories on many issues are now back here 25 or 30 years later questioning whether carpal tunnel and other ergonomic injuries are even workplace injuries.

It strikes me that, if a number of people were getting sick in a plant, and we did not know exactly the best way to solve the problem of keeping them from getting sick, maybe we should write some regulations and not pass any kind of safety rules to address the situation in the interim. That is what my Republican colleagues seem to be judging here.

I am not opposed to the study that is being done. But what I do wonder is what happens between now and the time the study is completed. Why should the American workers not be protected when we know that they are walking into these workplace situations, developing carpal tunnel syndrome and other kinds of ergonomic injuries; and we should just turn around and walk away and pretend that this is not happening.

This is an unyielding, unreal debate that we are having here on this bill. It is like we want the perfect to be the enemy of the good. Because the department had not written the perfect set of regulations to deal with this issue, we want to delay any kind of regulation when we know full well that those injuries are caused by repetitive motion and workplace conditions. This is an unreal debate that can only be engaged in in a Congress that has no acknowledgment of the rights of working people. Over 650,000 workers were injured last year by repetitive motion and ergonomic-related injuries. The bulk of those were women who sit at a desk or do some repetitive motion kind of activity, and they do it over and over and again. We are going to penalize those people trying to say that study, revising the regulations to allow the study to be completed, and then, if necessary, in response to the problem with putting some regulations in the Federal Government. So what is the perfect be the enemy of the deal. We revise regulations all the time point in the process. It is not a big adjustment in the regulation. Work in the Federal Government is, Look, we said to the agencies of the gentleman for yielding me this thing about the process? Does that not tell us some- years, 9 years, 12 years. We do not account costs like that because they people while accomplishing nothing. So do not want you to hurt small business the throats of small business people a thing that the Congress passed of the Committee on Small Business. Mr. SHIMKUS, Chairman of the Committee, having under consider- ing the bill by a factor of 4 to 10 OSHA has underestimated the costs of this regulation by a factor of 4 to 10 to America's small businesses; and they are not taking it, and that is why this is taking so long. In March, the Small Business Advo- cacy Review Panel met and said that OSHA has underestimated the costs of this regulation by a factor of 4 to 10 times on America's small business people. A dentist, a lady came and said, Look, it is going to cost me $5,000 just to determine the extent to which I am covered by this regulation.

OSHA says, Well, we do not take into account costs like that because they are indirect. We do not figure out the costs that people are going to have to incur to determine whether or not they are covered by this, and not going to change the regulation to accommodate people like you.

That is why we are here year after year after year. That is what this bill is trying to address. Mr. Chairman, look, it is time to stop treating America's small business people like they were the enemies of their workers, like they were the enemies of the public interest. They want worker safety. Let us work in partnership with them. Develop a regulation based on good science; that is what this bill is about.

The CHAIRMAN. All time for debate has expired. If there are no further amendments, under the rule, the Com- mittee rises.

Accordingly, the Committee rose; and the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. MIL- LER of Florida) having assumed the Chair, Mr. SHIMKUS, Chairman of the Committee, reported from the House on the State of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consider- ation the bill (H.R. 987) to require the Secretary of Labor to wait for comple- tion the bill to the House. The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill. The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time and was read the third time. The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the passage of the bill.
Mr. BALDACCI changed his vote from "yea" to "nay." So the bill was passed. The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. GOODLING. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks on H.R. 967, the Workplace Preservation Act.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Pennsylvania?

There was no objection.
Louisiana Avenue, Northwest. This property is adjacent to the Capitol Grounds.

The Union plans to demolish its existing headquarters and construct a new larger facility. In order to do this, a small section of parking spots and a sidewalk on Louisiana Avenue will be closed for about 2 years.

Let me be clear about the affected area along Constitution Avenue and Louisiana Avenue. It is the curbside lane between 1st and 2nd Street, Northwest only. This authority in no way extends beyond those two streets insofar as the Capitol Grounds are concerned.

This activity will not interfere with the needs of Congress and will not cost the government. The building owners will restore all affected areas of the Capitol Grounds to its original condition once construction is completed.

I support this resolution wholeheartedly and urge my colleagues to join in support.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

First, Mr. Speaker, may I thank the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. SHUSTER) for the way in which he has shepherded this matter through committee and to the floor. I am very grateful for the attention he has given it. May I also thank the distinguished ranking member of the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. OBERSTAR) for his invaluable assistance in getting this matter to the floor this evening. I very much appreciate the work of my own chairman the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. FRANKS) who in committee today shepherded this matter carefully and was expeditiously handled in the subcommittee itself. This straightforward resolution will allow the Architect of the Capitol to permit temporary construction and necessary other work on the Capitol grounds. The site is along Constitution Avenue in my district between Second Street and Louisiana Avenue Northwest and along Louisiana to First Street Northwest. The construction project will create a high end building with class A office space right here at the foot of Capitol Hill. The new building will be 10 stories high and will contain 500,000 square feet. The Architect has requested a resolution to permit the temporary closing of the curb lane along Louisiana Avenue and Constitution Avenue.

Again I want to thank the gentleman from New Jersey for the very expeditious way in which he has handled this matter and for his continued support for activities that positively affect the economic health of the Nation's capital, the District of Columbia.

Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. OBERSTAR), the ranking member of the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure.

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time. I rise to support the resolution and to express my great appreciation to the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. SHUSTER) for moving so expeditiously on this matter which is very timely for the carpenters union for the replacement and construction of this facility so near to the Capitol. I appreciate the support of the chairman of the subcommittee also for acting so quickly. I want to compliment the gentlewoman from the District of Columbia on her steadfast persistence and leadership on this matter. She is a true advocate and champion for the District and a great voice.

This facility has one of the prime locations in all of Washington. It shall be very interesting to see the facility removed and reconstructed. I understand that there is a splendid plan to replace that facility. It is very important to all who are concerned, not only those building the structure but those who are going to rent, the various associations that would be a part of this.

I just wanted to rise and express my great appreciation to the majority for moving so quickly on a matter of such timely importance to those involved and again to compliment the gentlewoman for her leadership and express my great appreciation to the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. SHUSTER) for his cooperation.

Ms. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume. I very much appreciate the remarks of the ranking member of the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. OBERSTAR). I do want to say that I know that the carpenters union is as grateful for the way in which this has been handled this evening as I am. I want to assure the House that the matter under construction has received already the approval of the appropriate Federal and local authorities and will continue to go through those approvals. We needed only now the approval of the House to make sure the construction could indeed proceed.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. FRANKS of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the current resolution was agreed to.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

Mr. FRANKS of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material on House Concurrent Resolution 167, the measure just considered by the House.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New Jersey?

There was no objection.

American Inventors Protection Act of 1999

Mr. COBLE. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 1907) to amend title 35, United States Code, to provide enhanced protection for inventors and innovators, protect patent terms, reduce patent litigation, and for other purposes, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 1907

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the “American Inventors Protection Act of 1999”.

SEC. 2. TABLE OF CONTENTS.

The table of contents is as follows:

Sec. 1. Short title.
Sec. 2. Table of contents.

TITLE I—INVENTORS’ RIGHTS

Sec. 101. Short title.
Sec. 102. Invention promotion services.
Sec. 103. Effective date.

TITLE II—FIRST INVENTOR DEFENSE

Sec. 201. Short title.
Sec. 202. Defense to patent infringement based on earlier inventor.
Sec. 203. Effective date and applicability.

TITLE III—PATENT TERM GUARANTEE

Sec. 301. Short title.
Sec. 302. Patent term guarantee authority.
Sec. 303. Continued examination of patent applications.
Sec. 304. Technical clarification.
Sec. 305. Effective date.

TITLE IV—UNITED STATES PUBLICATION OF PATENT APPLICATIONS PUBLISHED ABROAD

Sec. 401. Short title.
Sec. 402. Publication.
Sec. 403. Time for claiming benefit of earlier filing date.
Sec. 404. Provisional rights.
Sec. 405. Prior art effect of published applications.
Sec. 406. Cost recovery for publication.
Sec. 407. Conforming amendments.
Sec. 408. Effective date.

TITLE V—OPTIONAL INTER PARTES REEXAMINATION PROCEDURE

Sec. 501. Short title.
Sec. 502. Ex parte reexamination of patents.
Sec. 503. Definitions.
Sec. 504. Optional inter partes reexamination procedures.
Sec. 505. Conforming amendments.
Sec. 506. Report to Congress.
Sec. 507. Estoppel effect of reexamination.
Sec. 508. Effective date.
an invention promoter undertakes invention promotion services;“(2) the term ‘customer’ means any person, firm, partnership, corporation, or other entity who enters into a financial relationship or a contract with an invention promoter for invention promotion services;“(3) the term ‘invention promoter’ means any person, firm, partnership, corporation, or other entity who offers to perform or performs for, or on behalf of, a customer any act described under paragraph (4), but does not include—“(A) any department or agency of the Federal Government or of a State or local government;“(B) any nonprofit, charitable, scientific, or educational organization, qualified under applicable State law or described under section 170(b)(1)(A) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986;“(C) any person duly registered with, and in good standing before, the United States Patent and Trademark Office, except when that person performs any act described in subparagraph (B) or (C) of paragraph (4); or“(D) any person or entity involved in the evaluation to determine commercial potential of, or offering to license or sell, a utility patent or a previously filed nonprovisional utility patent;“(4) the term ‘invention promotion services’ means, with respect to an invention by a customer, any act involved in—“(A) evaluating the invention to determine its protectability as some form of intellectual property, other than evaluation by a person licensed by a State to practice law who is acting solely within the scope of that person’s professional license;“(B) evaluating the invention to determine its commercial potential by any person for purposes other than providing venture capital; or“(C) marketing, brokering, offering to license or sell, or promoting the invention or inventions of, or offering to license or sell, the invention or services involving the invention, or a company who enters into a financial relationship or a contract with an invention promoter for invention promotion services for a customer;“(5) the usual business terms of contracts;“(6) records of complaints;“(7) records of communications;“(8) the aggregate amount of money paid by the customer to the invention promoter for invention promotion services; and“(9) the number of inventions brought to the attention of others by the invention promoter for commercial potential in the last five years.”

§ 53. Standard provisions for cover notice

(a) Contents.—Every contract for invention promotion services shall have a conspicuous and legible cover sheet attached to the following notice imprinted in boldface type of not less than 12-point size:

"YOU HAVE THE RIGHT TO TERMINATE THIS CONTRACT. TO TERMINATE THIS CONTRACT, YOU MUST SEND A WRITTEN LETTER TO THE COMPANY STATING YOUR INTENT TO CANCEL THIS CONTRACT. THE LETTER OF TERMINATION MUST BE DEPOSITED WITH THE UNITED STATES POSTAL SERVICE ON OR BEFORE FIVE (5) BUSINESS DAYS AFTER THE DATE ON WHICH YOU OR THE COMPANY EXECUTE THE CONTRACT, WHICH EVER IS LATER."

(b) Right of Customer To Cancel Contract.—(1) Notwithstanding any contractual provision to the contrary, a customer shall have the right to terminate a contract for invention promotion services by sending a written notice to the invention promoter stating the customer’s intent to cancel the contract. The letter of termination must be deposited with the United States Postal Service on or before 5 business days after the date upon which the customer or the invention promoter executes the contract, whichever is later.

(2) Delivery of a promissory note, check, bill of exchange, or negotiable instrument of any kind to the invention promoter or to a third party for the benefit of the invention promoter, without regard to the date or dates appearing on such instrument, shall be deemed payment received by the invention promoter on the date received for purposes of this section.

§ 54. Amendments

(1) the term ‘contract for invention promotion services’ means a contract by which

A customer may have rights to use, sell or dispose of the invention without your consent and may not have to share the profits with you.

"The total number of customers who have contracted with the invention promoter in the past five (5) years is XXXXX. The total number of customers known by this invention promoter who have received license agreements for their inventions.

The officers of this invention promoter have collectively or individually been affiliated in the last ten (10) years with the following invention promotion companies:

The names and addresses of all previous invention promotion companies with which the PRINCIPAL OFFICERS HAVE BEEN AF-PILLARIZED AGENTS, OR EMPployees). YOU ARE ENCOURAGED TO ITHE WITH THE UNITED STATES PAT-AND TRADEMARK OFFICE, THE FED-ERAL TRADE COMMISSION, YOUR STATE OFFICE GENERAL'S OFFICE, AND
THE BETTER BUSINESS BUREAU FOR ANY COMPLAINTS FILED AGAINST ANY OF THESE COMPANIES WHICH RESULTED IN REGULATORY SANCTIONS OR OTHER CORRECTIVE ACTIONS.

YOU ARE ENCOURAGED TO CONSULT WITH THE SECRETARY OF YOUR STATE OFFICE ADDRESS OF THE INVENTION PROMOTER, AND NAME, PRIMARY OFFICE ADDRESS, AND LOCAL OFFICE ADDRESS OF THE INVENTION PROMOTER, AND MAY CONTAIN NO OTHER MATTER.

OTHER REQUIREMENTS FOR COVER NOTICE.—The cover notice shall include the items required under subsection (a) and the name, primary office address, and local office address of the invention promoter, and may contain no other matter.

(a) DISCLOSURE OF CERTAIN CUSTOMERS NOT REQUIRED.—The notice set forth in subsection (a) to include THE TOTAL NUMBER OF CUSTOMERS WHO HAVE CONTRACTED WITH THE INVENTION PROMOTER SHALL NOT BE REQUIRED TO DISCLOSE ANY CUSTOMERS 19 YEARS' NEED NOT INCLUDE INFORMATION CONCERNING CUSTOMERS WHO HAVE PURCHASED TRADE SHOW SERVICES, RESEARCH, ADVERTISING, OR OTHER NON-MARKETING SERVICES FROM THE INVENTION PROMOTER, NOR WITH RESPECT TO CUSTOMERS WHO HAVE DEFAULTED IN THEIR PAYMENT TO THE INVENTION PROMOTER.

§ 4. Reports to customer required

With respect to every contract for invention promotion services, the invention promoter shall deliver to the customer at the address specified in the contract, at least once every 3 months throughout the term of the contract, a written report that identifies the contract and includes—

(1) A full, clear, and concise description of the specific acts or services that the invention promoter undertakes to perform under the contract;

(2) A statement of the nature of the disclosure, and complete and accurate summaries of all responses received as a result of those disclosures.

§ 55. Mandatory contract terms

(1) The term and conditions of payment and compensation, and termination rights required under section 52;

(2) A statement that the customer may avoid entering into the contract by not making the initial payment to the invention promoter;

(3) A full, clear, and concise description of the specific acts or services that the invention promoter undertakes to perform for the customer;

(4) A statement as to whether the invention promoter undertakes to construct, sell, or distribute one or more prototypes, models, or devices embodying the invention of the customer;

(5) The full name and principal place of business of the invention promoter and the name and principal place of business of any parent, subsidiary, agent, independent contractor, and any affiliated company or person who is known will perform any of the services or acts that the invention promoter undertakes to perform for the customer;

(b) INVENTION PROMOTER AS FIDUCIARY.—(1) The description and analysis of the invention and the time line projection and a description of the data upon which such representation is based;

(2) The name and address of the custodian of all records and correspondence relating to the contract for invention promotion services, and a statement that the invention promoter is required to maintain all records and correspondence relating to performance of the invention promotion services for such customer for a period of not less than 2 years after expiration of the term of such contract;

(3) A statement setting forth a time schedule for performance of the invention promotion services, including an estimated date by which such performance is expected to be completed;

(b) INVENTION PROMOTER AS FIDUCIARY.—(1) The description and analysis of the invention and the time line projection and a description of the data upon which such representation is based;

(2) The name and address of the custodian of all records and correspondence relating to the contract for invention promotion services, and a statement that the invention promoter is required to maintain all records and correspondence relating to performance of the invention promotion services for such customer for a period of not less than 2 years after expiration of the term of such contract;

(3) A statement setting forth a time schedule for performance of the invention promotion services, including an estimated date by which such performance is expected to be completed;

(c) AVAILABILITY OF INFORMATION.—Records and correspondence described under subsection (a)(7) shall be made available after 7 days with respect to the customer or the representative of the customer to review and copy at a reasonable cost on the invention promoter's premises during normal business hours.

§ 56. Remedies

(a) IN GENERAL.—(1) Any contract for invention promotion services that does not comply with the applicable provisions of this chapter shall be void at the option of the customer.

(2) Any contract for invention promotion services entered into in reliance upon any material false, fraudulent, or misleading information, representation, notice, or advertisement of the invention promoter (or any agent, employee, officer, director, partner, or independent contractor of such invention promoter) shall be void at the option of the customer.

(3) Any waiver by the customer of any provision of this chapter shall be deemed contrary to public policy and shall be void and unenforceable.

(4) Any contract for invention promotion services which provides for filing for and obtaining utility, design, or plant patent protection shall be voidable at the option of the customer unless the invention promoter offers to perform or performs such act through aperson duly registered to practice before, and in good standing with, the Patent and Trademark Office.

(b) CIVIL ACTION.—(1) Any customer who is injured by a violation of this chapter by an invention promoter or by any material false, fraudulent, or misleading representation, or any omission of material fact, by an invention promoter (or any agent, employee, director, officer, partner, or independent contractor of such invention promoter) or by failure of an invention promoter to make all the disclosures required under this chapter, may recover in a civil action against the invention promoter (or directors, or partners of such invention promoter) in addition to reasonable costs and attorneys’ fees, the greater of—

(A) $5,000; or

(b) The amount of actual damages sustained by the customer.

(2) Notwithstanding paragraph (1), the court may increase damages to not more than 3 times the amount awarded, taking into account past complaints made against the invention promoter that resulted in regulatory sanctions or other corrective actions based on those record compiled by the Director under section 57.

(c) REPUTABLE PRESUMPTION OF INJURY.—For purposes of this section, substantial violation of any provision of this chapter by an invention promoter or execution by the customer of a contract for invention promotion services in reliance on any material false or fraudulent statements or representations or omissions of material fact shall establish a rebuttable presumption of injury.

§ 57. Records of complaints

(a) RELEASE OF COMPLAINTS.—The Director shall make all complaints received by the United States Patent and Trademark Office involving invention promoters publicly available, together with any response of the invention promoter.

(b) REQUEST FOR COMPLAINTS.—The Director may request complaints relating to invention promotion services from any Federal or State agency and include such complaints in the records maintained under subsection (a), together with any response of the invention promoters.

§ 58. Fraudulent representation by an invention promoter

Whoever, in providing invention promotion services, knowingly provides any false or misleading statement, representation, or omission of material fact to a customer or fails to make all the disclosures required under this chapter, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and fined not more than $10,000 for each offense.

§ 59. Rule of construction

Except as expressly provided in this chapter, no provision of this chapter shall be construed to affect any obligation, right, or remedy provided under any other Federal or State law.
known to the public, except that the subject matter of which commercial marketing or use is subject to a premarketing regulatory review period during which the safety or efficacy of the subject matter is established, including 1 section 156(g), shall be deemed ‘commercially used’ and in ‘commercial use’ during such regulatory review period.

(10) The case of activities performed by a nonprofit research laboratory, or nonprofit entity such as a university, research center, or hospital, a use for which the public is the intended beneficiary shall be considered to be a use described in paragraph (1), except that the use—

(A) may be asserted as a defense under this section only for continued use by and in the laboratory or nonprofit entity; and

(B) may not be asserted as a defense with respect to any subsequent commercialization or use outside such laboratory or nonprofit entity;

(11) The term ‘method’ means a method of doing or conducting business; and

(12) The ‘effective filing date’ of a patent is the earlier of the actual filing date of the application for the patent or the filing date of any earlier United States, foreign, or international application to which the subject matter at issue is entitled under section 119, 120, or 365 of this title.

(13) RESERVATION.—(A) In general.—It shall be a defense to an action for infringement under section 271 of this title with respect to any subject matter that would otherwise infringe one or more claims asserting a method in the patent being asserted against a person, if such person shows by clear and convincing evidence that the defense relates, may only be asserted for uses at sites where the subject matter that would otherwise infringe one or more of the claims is in use before the later of the effective filing date of the patent or the date of the assignment or transfer of such enterprise or line of business.

(B) Subject to section 113(a) of this title, a person asserting a defense under this section shall have the burden of proving that the defense relates, may only be asserted for uses at sites where the subject matter that would otherwise infringe one or more of the claims asserted by the patentee or persons in privity with the patentee are in use before the later of the effective filing date of the patent or the date of the assignment or transfer of such enterprise or line of business.

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE

SEC. 203. EFFECTIVE DATE AND APPLICABILITY.

This title and the amendments made by this title shall take effect on the date of the enactment of this Act, but shall not apply to any action to which a decision in the review by the Board of Patent Appeals and Interferences or by a Federal court is presently pending, over such date of enactment or with respect to any subject matter for which an adjudication of infringement, including a consent judgment, has been made before such date of enactment.

TITLE III—PATENT TERM GUARANTEED

SEC. 301. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the ‘Patent Term Guarantee Act.’

SEC. 302. PATENT TERM GUARANTEED AUTHORITY.

(a) Adjustment of Patent Term.—Section 154(b) of title 35, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:—

(b) Adjustment of Patent Term.—

(C) PATENT TERM GUARANTEE.—

(A) GUARANTEE OF PROMPT PATENT AND TRADEMARK OFFICE RESPONSES.—Subject to the limitations under paragraph (2), if the issue of an original patent is delayed due to—

(i) a decision in the review by the Board of Patent Appeals and Interferences or by a Federal court; or

(ii) the imposition of an order pursuant to section 181, or any time consumed by appellate review by the Board of Patent Appeals and Interferences or by a Federal court; or

(iii) any delay in the processing of the application by the Patent and Trademark Office requested by the applicant except as permitted by paragraph (3)(C), the term of the patent shall be extended 1 day for each day after the end of that 3-year period until the patent is issued.

(C) GUARANTEE OR ADJUSTMENTS FOR DELAYS DUE TO INTERFERENCES, SECRECY ORDERS, AND APPEALS.—Subject to the limitations under paragraph (2), if the issue of an original patent is delayed due to—

(i) a proceeding under section 133(a);

(ii) the imposition of an order pursuant to section 181; or

(iii) appellate review by the Board of Patent Appeals and Interferences or by a Federal court in a case in which the patent was issued or any time consumed by appellate review by the Board of Patent Appeals and Interferences or by a Federal court in a case in which the patent was issued, the term of the patent shall be extended 1 day for each day of the proceeding, order, or review, as the case may be.

(2) LIMITATIONS.—

(A) In general.—To the extent that periods of delay attributable to grounds specified in paragraph (1) overlap, the period of any adjustment granted under this subsection shall not exceed the actual number of days the issuance of the patent was delayed.

(B) DISCLAIMED TERM.—No patent the term of which has been disclaimer beyond a specified date may be adjusted under this section beyond the expiration date specified in the disclaimer.

(C) REDUCTION OF PERIOD OF ADJUSTMENT.—

(i) The period of adjustment of the term of a patent under paragraph (1) shall be reduced by a period equal to the period of time during which the applicant failed to engage in reasonable efforts to conclude prosecution of the application.

(ii) With respect to adjustments to patent term made under the authority of paragraph (1), an applicant shall be deemed to have failed to engage in reasonable efforts to conclude processing or examination of an application for the cumulative total of any periods of time in excess of 3 months that are taken to respond to a notice from the Office making any rejection, objection, argument, or other request, measuring such 3-month period from the date of filing of the application or from such other request, as the case may be. The Director shall not have the duty to determine the patent term adjustment unless such adjustment has been applied for by the applicant. The determination of a patent term adjustment shall be made in writing, specifying the patent term adjustment, and be served on the Director. The Director shall thereafter alter the patent term by the amount of the adjustment determined by the Director.

SECTION 302. EFFECTIVE DATE.

(a) Sections 302 and 304.—The amendments made by section 302 and 304 shall take effect on the date of the enactment of this Act and, except for a design patent application filed under chapter 16 of title 35, United States Code, shall apply to any application filed on or after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(b) Section 303.—The amendments made by section 303 shall take effect 6 months after the date of the enactment of this Act.

TITLE IV—UNITED STATES PUBLICATION OF PATENT APPLICATIONS Published Abroad

SECTION 401. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be referred to as the "Publication of Foreign Filed Applications Act".

SECTION 402. PUBLICATION.

(a) Publication.—Section 122 of title 35, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"§ 122. Confidential status of applications; publication of patent applications

(a) Confidentiality.—Except as provided in subsection (b), applications for patents shall be kept in confidence by the Patent and Trademark Office unless the applicant, or the applicant's representative, requests in writing that such applications be published. Any final judgment resulting in the revocation of a patent shall be made available to the public except as the Director determines.

(b) United States Publication of Applications Published Abroad

(1) IN GENERAL.—(A) Subject to paragraph (2), each application for patent, except applications for design patents filed under chapter 16 and provisional applications filed under section 111(b), shall be published, in accordance with procedures determined by the Director, promptly upon the expiration of a period of 18 months after the earliest filing date for which a benefit is sought under section 119 or 366(b), as applicable, unless the application is published earlier than the end of such 18-month period.

(2) No information concerning published patent applications shall be made available to the public except as the Director determines.

(c) Pursuant to this title and notwithstanding any other provision of law, a determination by the Director to release or not to release information concerning a published patent application shall be final and nonreviewable.

"(2) EXCEPTIONS.—(A) An application that is no longer pending shall not be published.

(B) An application that is subject to a secrecy order under section 181 shall not be published.

"(C)(i) If an applicant, upon filing, makes a request that an application not be published pursuant to paragraph (1)(A), and the Director determines that the request that the invention disclosed in the application has not been the subject of an application filed in another country, or under a multilateral international agreement, that requires publication of applications 18 months after filing, the application shall not be published as provided in paragraph (1)(A).

(ii) An applicant may rescind a request made under clause (i) at any time.

"(iii) An applicant who has made a request under clause (i)(B) or (i)(C)(i) for a foreign country or under a multilateral international agreement specified in clause (i), an application directed to the invention disclosed in the application filed in the Patent and Trademark Office, shall notify the Director of such filing not later than 45 days after the date of the filing of such foreign or international application. A failure of the applicant to provide such notice within the prescribed period shall result in the application being regarded as abandoned, unless it is shown to the satisfaction of the Director that the delay in submitting the notice was unintentional.

(iv) If a notice is made pursuant to clause (iii), or the applicant rescinds a request pursuant to clause (ii), the Director shall publish the application on or as soon as is practical after the date that is specified in clause (i).

"(v) If an applicant has filed applications in one or more foreign countries, directly or through a multilateral international agreement or in such foreign filed applications corresponding to an application filed in the Patent and Trademark Office or the description of the invention in such foreign filed application is less extensive than the publication or description of the invention in the application filed in the Patent and Trademark Office, the applicant may submit a request to the Director to publish the application or an abstract of the application on or after the earliest effective filing date for which a benefit is sought under this title. The provisions of section 154(d) shall not apply to a claim if the description of the invention published in the redacted copy of the application filed under this clause with respect to the claim does not enable a person skilled in the art to make and use the subject matter of the claim.

"(g) PROTEST AND PRE-ISSUANCE OPPOSITION.—The Director shall establish appropriate procedures to permit a protest or other form of pre-issuance opposition to the grant of a patent on an application may be initiated after publication of the application without the express written consent of the applicant.

"(h) STUDY BY GAO.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Comptroller General of the United States shall conduct a study of applicants for patents who file only in the United States during the 3-year period beginning on the effective date of this title.

(2) CONTENTS.—The study conducted under paragraph (1) shall—

(A) consider the number of such applicants for patent in relation to the number of applicants who file in the United States and outside the United States;

(B) examine how many domestic-only filers request at the time of filing not to be published in a foreign country or under a multilateral international agreement;

(C) examine how many such filers rescind that request or later choose to file abroad;

and

(D) examine the manner of entity seeking an application and any correlation that may exist between such manner and publication of patent applications.

"(i) SEC. 230. CONCLUSION.

The Comptroller General shall submit to the Committees on the Judiciary of the House of Representatives and the Senate the results of the study conducted under this subsection.

SEC. 403. TIME FOR CLAIMING BENEFIT OF EARLIER FILING DATE. (a) IN A FOREIGN COUNTRY.—Section 119(b) of title 35, United States Code, is amended to read as follows: (b)(1) No application for patent shall be entitled to this right of priority unless a claim, identifying the foreign application by specifying its application number, country, and the day, month, and year of its filing, is filed in the Patent and Trademark Office at such time during the pendency of the application as required by the Director.

(2) The Director may consider the failure of the applicant to file a timely claim for a priority as a waiver of any such claim. The Director may establish procedures, including the payment of a surcharge, to accept an unintentionally delayed claim under this section.

(3) The Director may require a certified copy of the original foreign application, specified in paragraph (2), and a translation, if not in the English language, and such other information as the Director considers necessary. Any such certification and translation shall constitute domestic property in which the foreign applicant is entitled to an interest under section 109 of this title.

(b) IN THE UNITED STATES.—Section 120 of title 35, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following: ‘‘The Director may determine the time period during the pendency of the application within which an amendment containing the specific reference to the earlier filed application is submitted. The Director may consider the failure to submit such an amendment within that time period as a waiver of any benefit under this section. The Director may establish procedures, including the payment of a surcharge, to accept unintentionally delayed submissions of amendments under this section.”

SEC. 404. PROVISIONAL RIGHTS. Section 154 of title 35, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in the section caption by inserting ‘‘provisional patent”;

(2) by adding at the end the following new subsection:

‘‘(d) PROVISIONAL RIGHTS.—In addition to other rights provided by this section, a patent shall include the right to obtain a reasonable royalty from any person who, during the period beginning on the date of publication of the application for such patent pursuant to section 122(b), or in the case of an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) designating the United States under Article 21(a) of such treaty, the date of publication of the application, and ending on the date the patent is issued—

‘‘(A) makes, uses, offers for sale, or sells in the United States the invention as claimed in the published patent application or imports such an invention into the United States;

‘‘(B) by inserting ‘‘and published applications for patents” after ‘‘patents”;

(3) Section 13 is amended—

(A) in the section caption by inserting ‘‘and applications” after ‘‘patents”;

(B) by inserting ‘‘and published applications for patents” after ‘‘patents”.

(4) The item relating to section 122 in the table of sections for chapter 11 is amended by striking ‘‘‘‘patents”’ and inserting ‘‘‘‘patents”, ‘‘applications”’.

(5) The item relating to section 154 in the table of sections for chapter 14 is amended by striking ‘‘‘‘patents”’ and inserting ‘‘‘‘patents”, ‘‘applications”’.

(6) Section 181 is amended—

(A) in the first undesignated paragraph—

(i) by inserting ‘‘by the publication of an application or” after ‘‘disclosure”;

(ii) by inserting ‘‘the publication of the application” after ‘‘withhold”;

(B) in the second undesignated paragraph by inserting ‘‘by the publication of an application or” after ‘‘withhold”;

(7) Section 252 is amended by inserting, at the end of the second undesignated paragraph following the following: ‘‘Increased damages under this paragraph shall not be available only in an action brought not by the publication of an application or” after ‘‘withhold”;

(8) Section 294 is amended by adding at the end of the second undesignated paragraph following the following: ‘‘The right under paragraph (1) to obtain a reasonable royalty shall be available only in an action brought not later than 6 years after the patent is issued.

(9) Section 374 is amended to read as follows:

‘‘§ 374. Publication of international applications; effect

The publication under the treaty defined in section 351(a) of this title of an international application designating the United States shall confer the same rights and shall have the same effect under this title as an application for patent published under section 122(b), except as provided in sections 102(e) and 154(d).”

SEC. 408. EFFECTIVE DATE.

This title and the amendments made by this title, shall take effect on the date that is 1 year after the date of the enactment of this Act and shall apply to all applications filed under section 111 of title 35, United States Code, on or after that date, and all applications applying with section 371 of title 35, United States Code, that resulted from international applications filed on or after that date. The amendments made by section 404 and 405 shall apply to any such application voluntarily published by the applicant under procedures established under this title that is pending on the date that is 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act. The amendments made by section 404 shall apply to international applications designating the United States that are filed on or after that date.

TITLe V—OPTIONAL INTER PARTES REEXAMINATION PROCEDURE

SEC. 501. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the ‘‘Optional Inter Partes Reexamination Procedure Act’’. August 3, 1999
§ 314. Conduct of inter partes reexamination proceedings

(a) In General.—Subject to subsection (b), reexamination shall be conducted according to the procedures established for initial examination under the provisions of section 311, as provided for under this section. In any inter partes reexamination proceeding under this chapter, the patent owner shall be permitted to propose any amendment to the patent and a new claim or claims, except that no proposed amended or new claim enlarging the scope of the claims of the patent shall be permitted.

(b) The request shall apply to any inter partes reexamination proceeding in which the order for inter partes reexamination is based upon a request by a third-party requester.

(2) With the exception of the inter partes reexamination request, any document filed by either the patent owner or the third-party requester shall have one opportunity to file written comments addressing issues raised by the action of the Office or the patent owner’s response thereto, if those written comments are received by the Office within 30 days after the date of service of the patent owner’s response.

(c) SPECIAL DISPATCH.—Unless otherwise provided by the Director for good cause, all inter partes reexamination proceedings under this section, including any appeal to the Board of Patent Appeals and Interferences, shall be conducted with special dispatch within the Office.

§ 315. Appeal

(a) Patent Owner.—The patent owner involved in an inter partes reexamination proceeding under this chapter—

(1) may appeal under the provisions of section 134, and may appeal under the provisions of sections 141 through 144, with respect to any decision adverse to the patentability of any patent claim in suit or if a final decision has been sustained its burden of proving the invalidity of any patent claim in suit or if a final decision in an inter partes reexamination proceeding initiated by any party requester is favorable to the patentability of any original or proposed amended or new claim of the patent or its privies or therefrom.

(2) may be a party to any appeal taken by a third-party requester under subsection (b).

(b) Third-Party Requester.—A third-party requester may appeal:

(1) appeal under the provisions of section 134 with respect to any final decision favorable to the patentability of any original or proposed amended or new claim of the patent; or

(2) a party to any appeal taken by the patent owner under the provisions of section 134, subject to subsection (c).

(c) Civil Action.—A third-party requester whose request for an inter partes reexamination results in an order under section 313 is estopped from asserting at a later time, in any civil action arising in whole or in part under section 1338 of title 28, the invalidity of any claim finally determined to be valid and patentable on any ground which the third-party requester raised or had raised during the inter partes reexamination proceedings. This subsection does not prevent the assertion of invalidity based on newly discovered prior art unavailable to the third-party requester. The Patent and Trademark Office at the time of the inter partes reexamination proceedings.

§ 316. Certificate of patentability, unpatentability, and claim cancellation

(a) In General.—In an inter partes reexamination proceeding under this chapter, when the time for appeal has expired or any appeal proceeding has terminated, the Director shall issue and publish a certificate canceling any claim of the patent finally determined to be unpatentable, confirming any or new claim determined to be patentable.

(b) Stay of litigation.—Any proposed amended or new claim determined to be patentable and incorporated into a patent following an inter partes reexamination proceeding shall have the same effect as that specified in section 252 of this title for issued patents on the right of any person who made, purchased, or used within the United States, or imported into the United States, anything patented by such proposed amended or new claim, or who made substantial preparation for the same, prior to issuance of a certificate cancelling any claim of the patent under this section.

§ 317. Inter partes reexamination prohibited

(a) ORDER FOR REEXAMINATION.—Notwithstanding any provision of this chapter, once an order for inter partes reexamination of a patent has been issued under section 313, neither the patent owner nor the third-party requester, if any, nor its privies or therefrom, may file a subsequent request for inter partes reexamination of the patent until an inter partes reexamination certificate is issued and published under section 316, unless authorized by the Director.

(b) Final decision.—Once a final decision has been entered against a party in a civil action arising in whole or in part under section 1338 of title 28, the invalidity of any patent claim in suit or if a final decision in an inter partes reexamination proceeding initiated by any party requester is favorable to the patentability of any original or proposed amended or new claim of the patent and therefrom, the invalidity of any claim finally determined to be valid and patentable on any ground which the third-party requester raised or had raised during the inter partes reexamination proceedings. This subsection does not prevent the assertion of invalidity based on newly discovered prior art unavailable to the third-party requester and the Patent and Trademark Office at the time of the inter partes reexamination proceedings.

§ 318. Stay of litigation

(a) In General.—Once an order for inter partes reexamination of a patent has been issued under section 313, the patent owner may obtain a stay of any pending litigation which involves an issue of patentability of the patent which are the subject of the inter partes reexamination order, unless the court... before which such litigation is pending determines that it may not serve the interests of justice.

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—The table of chapters for part III of title 35, United States Code, is amended by striking the item relating to chapter 30 and inserting the following:

"30. Prior Art Citations to Office and Ex Parte Reexamination of Patents" 301

"31. Optional Inter Parties Reexamination of Patents" 311 *

SEC. 505. CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.

(a) PATENT FEES; PATENT SEARCH SYSTEM.—Section 41(a) of title 35, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"(a) Patent Fees.—In general.—The United States Patent and Trademark Office, subject to the policy direction of the Secretary of Commerce—

"(1) shall be responsible for the granting and issuing of patents and the registration of trademarks, and

"(2) shall be responsible for disseminating to the public information with respect to patents and trademarks.

(b) APPEAL TO THE BOARD OF PATENT APPEALS AND INTERFERENCES.—Section 134 of title 35, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"(a)'' after ''section 134''.

(c) APPEAL TO THE COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE FEDERAL CIRCUIT.—Section 141 of title 35, United States Code, is amended by adding the following after the second sentence: "Section 421 provides that the fee for such appeal.

(d) PROCEEDINGS ON APPEAL.—Section 143 of title 35, United States Code, is amended by adding the following after the final sentence: "The United States Patent and Trademark Office shall be responsible for carrying out its functions. The United States Patent and Trademark Office shall maintain its principal office in the metropolitan Washington, DC, area, for the service of process, to make service of process, and for carrying out its functions. The United States Patent and Trademark Office shall be deemed, for purposes of venue in civil actions, to be a resident of the district in which its principal office is located, except where jurisdiction is otherwise provided by law. The United States Patent and Trademark Office may establish satellite offices in such other places in the United States as it considers necessary and appropriate in the conduct of its business.

"(c) Reference.—For purposes of this title, the United States Patent and Trademark Office shall also be referred to as the "Office" and the "Patent and Trademark Office (P TO)".

SEC. 507. ESTOPPEL EFFECT OF REEXAMINATION DECISION.

Any party who requests an inter partes reexamination under section 311 of title 35, United States Code, is estopped from challenging at a later time, in any civil action, any fact determined during the process of such reexamination, except with respect to a fact determination later proved to be erroneous based on information submitted at the time of the inter partes reexamination decision. If this section is held to be unenforceable, the enforceability of the rest of this title or of this Act shall not be denied as a result.

SEC. 508. EFFECTIVE DATE.

This title and the amendments made by this title shall take effect on the date that is 1 year after the date of the enactment of this Act and shall apply to inter partes reexamination requests filed on or after such date.

TITLE VI—PATENT AND TRADEMARK OFFICE

SEC. 601. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Patent and Trademark Office Efficiency Act".

Subtitle A—United States Patent and Trademark Office

SEC. 611. ESTABLISHMENT OF PATENT AND TRADEMARK OFFICE.

Section 1 of title 35, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"§ 1. Establishment.

"(a) Establishment.—The United States Patent and Trademark Office is established as an agency of the United States, within the Department of Commerce, in carrying out the functions of the Office; and

"(b) Offices.—The United States Patent and Trademark Office shall maintain its principal office in the metropolitan Washington, DC, area, for the service of process, to make service of process, and for carrying out its functions. The United States Patent and Trademark Office shall be deemed, for purposes of venue in civil actions, to be a resident of the district in which its principal office is located, except where jurisdiction is otherwise provided by law. The United States Patent and Trademark Office may establish satellite offices in such other places in the United States as it considers necessary and appropriate in the conduct of its business.

"(c) Reference.—For purposes of this title, the United States Patent and Trademark Office shall also be referred to as the "Office" and the "Patent and Trademark Office (P TO)".

SEC. 612. POWERS AND DUTIES.

Section 2 of title 35, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"§ 2. Powers and duties.

"(a) In General.—The United States Patent and Trademark Office, subject to the policy direction of the Secretary of Commerce—

"(1) shall be responsible for the granting and issuing of patents and the registration of trademarks, and

"(2) shall be responsible for disseminating to the public information with respect to patents and trademarks.

(b) APPEAL TO THE COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE FEDERAL CIRCUIT.—Section 421 provides that the fee for such appeal.

(c) APPEAL TO THE COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE FEDERAL CIRCUIT.—Section 141 of title 35, United States Code, is amended by adding the following after the second sentence: "The United States Patent and Trademark Office shall be responsible for carrying out its functions. The United States Patent and Trademark Office shall maintain its principal office in the metropolitan Washington, DC, area, for the service of process, to make service of process, and for carrying out its functions. The United States Patent and Trademark Office shall be deemed, for purposes of venue in civil actions, to be a resident of the district in which its principal office is located, except where jurisdiction is otherwise provided by law. The United States Patent and Trademark Office may establish satellite offices in such other places in the United States as it considers necessary and appropriate in the conduct of its business.

"(c) Reference.—For purposes of this title, the United States Patent and Trademark Office shall also be referred to as the "Office" and the "Patent and Trademark Office (P TO)".

SEC. 608. PATENT FEES AND EXPENSES.

The terms and expenses of patent fees shall be prescribed by the Commissioner for the examination, advertising, printing, and other expenses incident thereto, and the Secretary of Commerce is authorized to prescribe by regulation fees, and the United States Patent and Trademark Office may establish satellite offices in such other places in the United States as it considers necessary and appropriate in the conduct of its business.

"(c) Reference.—For purposes of this title, the United States Patent and Trademark Office shall also be referred to as the "Office" and the "Patent and Trademark Office (P TO)".
(6) may, when the Director determines that it is in the public interest, and cost-effective to do so, use, with the consent of the United States and the agency, instrumentality, patent and trademark office, or international organization concerned, the serdices, programs, studies, facilities, or personnel of any State or local government agency or instru-mentality or foreign patent and trademark office or international organization to perform functions on its behalf;

(7) may retain and use all of its revenues and receipts, including revenues from the sale, lease, or disposal of any real, personal, or mixed property, or any interest therein, of the Office;

(8) shall advise the President, through the Secretary of Commerce, on international and certain international intellectual property policy issues;

(9) shall advise Federal departments and agencies on matters of intellectual property policy;

(10) shall provide guidance, as appropriate, on the use of budgetary proposals by agencies to assist foreign governments and international intergovernmental organizations on matters of intellectual property protection;

(11) may conduct programs and studies of changes of items or services regarding domestic and international intellectual property law and the effectiveness of intellectual property protection, domestically and throughout the world;

(12) (A) shall advise the Secretary of Commerce on programs and studies relating to intellectual property policy that are conducted, or authorized to be conducted, cooperatively with foreign intellectual property offices and international intergovernmental organizations; and

(B) may conduct programs and studies described in subparagraph (A); and

(13) (A) in coordination with the Department of State, may conduct programs and studies cooperatively with foreign intellectual property offices and international intergovernmental organizations; and

(B) may conduct programs and studies described in subparagraph (A); and

(c) Clarification of Specific Powers.—

(1) The special payments under subsection

(b)(13)(B) shall be in addition to any other payments or contributions to international organizations described in subsection

(b)(13)(B) and shall not be subject to any limitations imposed by law on the amounts of such other payments or contributions by the United States Government.

(2) Nothing in subsection (b) shall deroga-te from the duties of the Secretary of State or from the duties of the United States Trade Representative as set forth in section 141 of the Trade Act of 1974 (19 U.S.C. 2171).

(3) Nothing in subsection (b) shall deroga-te from the duties of the Register of Copyrights or otherwise alter current authorities relating to copyright matters.

(d) Exception.—Nothing in this section shall be construed to nullify, void, cancel, or interrupt any pending request-for-proposal let or contract issued by the General Services Administration for the specific purpose of relocating or leasing space to the United States Patent and Trademark Office."

§ 433. ORGANIZATION AND MANAGEMENT.

Section 3 of title 35, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

‘‘§ 3. Officers and employees.

‘‘(a) Under Secretary and Director.

‘‘(1) In general.—The United States Patent and Trademark Office shall be vested in an Under Secretary of Commerce for Intellectual Property and Director of the United States Patent and Trademark Office (in this title referred to as the ‘Director’), who shall be a citizen of the United States and who shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate. The Director shall be a person who has a professional background and experience in patent or trademark law.

‘‘(2) Duties.

‘‘(A) In general.—The Director shall be responsible for providing policy direction and management supervision for the Office and shall be the principal official of the registration of trademarks. The Director shall perform these duties in a fair, impartial, and equitable manner.

‘‘(B) Consulting with the Public Advisory Committees.—The Director shall consult with the Patent Public Advisory Committee established in section 5 on a regular basis on matters relating to the trademark operations of the Office, and shall consult with the respective Public Advisory Committee before submitting budgetary proposals to the Office of Management and Budget or changing or proposing to change patent or trademark user fees or patent or trademark regulations which are subject to the requirement to provide notice and opportunity for public comment pursuant to section 553 of title 5, as the case may be.

‘‘(3) Officer. The Director shall, before taking office, take an oath to discharge faithfully the duties of the Office.

‘‘(4) Removal.—The Director may be removed by the President, with the consent of the Senate, for cause. The President shall provide notification of any such removal to both Houses of Congress.

‘‘(b) Officers and Employees of the Office.

‘‘(1) Deputy Under Secretary and Deputy Director. The Secretary of Commerce, upon nomination by the Director, shall appoint a Deputy Under Secretary of Commerce for Intellectual Property and Deputy Director of the United States Patent and Trademark Office who shall be vested with the authority to act in the capacity of the Director in the event of the absence or incapacity of the Director. The Deputy Director shall be a citizen of the United States who has a professional background and experience in patent or trademark law.

‘‘(2) Commissioners.

‘‘(A) Appointment and Duties. The Secretary of Commerce may appoint a Commissioner for Patents and a Commissioner for Trademarks, without regard to chapter 33,

31, or 33 of title 5. The Commissioner for Patents shall be a citizen of the United States with demonstrated management ability and professional background and experience in trademark law and serve for 5 years. The Commissioner for Trademarks shall serve as the chief operating officers for the operations of the Office relating to patents and trademark operations, respectively. The Secretary may reappoint a Commissioner to subsequent terms of 5 years as long as the total term of the Commissioner set forth in the performance agreement in sub-paragraph (B) is satisfactory.

‘‘(B) Salary and Performance Agreements.—The Commissioners shall be paid an annual rate of basic pay not to exceed the maximum rate of basic pay for the Senior Executive Service established under section 5302 of title 5, including any applicable locality-based comparability payment that may be authorized under section 5304h(2)(C) of title 5. The compensation of the Commissioners shall be consistent with the provisions of section 207(c)(2)(A) of title 18, to be the equivalent of that described under clause (i) of section 207(c)(2)(A) of title 18. In addition, the Commissioners may receive an annual bonus under this subparagraph may be made to the Commissioners only to the extent that such payment does not cause the Commis sioners’ total aggregate compensation in a calendar year to equal or exceed the amount of the salary of the Vice President under section 5 on a regular basis on matters relating to the trademark operations of the Office, and shall consult with the respective Public Advisory Committee before submitting budgetary proposals to the Office of Management and Budget or changing or proposing to change patent or trademark user fees or patent or trademark regulations which are subject to the requirement to provide notice and opportunity for public comment pursuant to section 553 of title 5, as the case may be.

‘‘(5) Removal.—The President shall provide notification of any such removal to both Houses of Congress.

‘‘(3) Other Officers and Employees.—The Director shall—

(A) appoint such officers, employees (including attorneys), and agents of the Office as the Director considers necessary to carry out the functions of the Office; and

(B) define the title, authority, and duties of such officers and employees and delegate to them such of the powers vested in the Office as the Director may determine.

The Office shall not be subject to any administratively or statutorily imposed limitation on positions or personnel, and no positions or personnel of the Office shall be taken into account for purposes of applying any such limitation.

‘‘(4) Training of Examiners.—The Office shall submit to the Congress a proposal to provide an incentive program to retain as and train patent and trademark examiners.

(c) Continued Applicability of Title 5.—

The provisions of titles 5. Officers and employees of the Office shall be subject to the provisions of title 5 relating to Federal employees, from such member and the regular place of business such member shall be allowed travel expenses, including per diem in lieu of subsistence, as authorized by section 575 of title 5.

August 3, 1999

"(f) Access to Information.—Members of each Advisory Committee shall be provided access to records and information in the possession of the Patent and Trademark Office, except for personnel or other privileged information and information concerning patent applications required to be kept in confidence.

"(g) Application of Certain Ethics Laws.—Members of each Advisory Committee shall be special Government employees within the meaning of section 202 of title 18.

"(h) Inapplicability of Federal Advisory Committee Act.—The Federal Advisory Committee Act (5 U.S.C. App.) shall not apply to each Advisory Committee.

"(1) Open Meetings.—The meetings of each Advisory Committee shall be open to the public, except that each Advisory Committee may by majority vote meet in executive session when considering personnel or other confidential information.

SEC. 615. PATENT AND TRADEMARK OFFICE FUNDING.

Section 42(c) of title 35, United States Code, is amended by striking ‘‘42(c)’’ and inserting ‘‘42(c)’’.
Commissioner for Patents, the Commissioner for Trademarks, and the administrative patent judges shall constitute the Board. The administrative patent judges shall be persons of competent legal knowledge and scientific ability who are appointed by the Director.

"(b) DUTIES.—The Board of Patent Appeals and Interferences shall, on written appeal of an applicant or review adverse decisions of examiners upon applications for patents and shall determine priority and patentability of invention in controversies declared under section 135(a). Each appeal and interference shall be heard by at least 3 members of the Board, who shall be designated by the Director. Only the Board of Patent Appeals and Interferences may grant rehearings."

SEC. 619. ANNUAL REPORT OF DIRECTOR.

Section 13 of title 35, United States Code, as redesignated by section 619 of this Act, is amended to read as follows:

"13. Annual report to Congress."

"The Director shall report to the Congress, not later than 180 days after the end of each fiscal year, the moneys received and expended by the Office, the purposes for which the moneys were spent, the quality and quantity of the work of the Office, the nature of training provided to examiners, the evaluation of the Commissioner of Patents and Trademarks by the Secretary of Commerce, the compensation of the Commissioners, and other information relating to the Office."

SEC. 620. SUSPENSION OR EXCLUSION FROM PRACTICE.

Section 32 of title 35, United States Code, is amended by inserting before the last sentence "The Director shall have the discretion to designate any attorney who is an officer or employee of the United States Patent and Trademark Office to conduct the hearing required by this section.".

SEC. 621. PAY OF DIRECTOR AND DEPUTY DIRECTOR.

(a) PAY OF DIRECTOR.—Section 5314 of title 5, United States Code, is amended by striking 22 "Assistant Secretary of Commerce and Commissioner of Patents and Trademarks" and inserting "Under Secretary for Intellectual Property and Deputy Director of the United States Patent and Trademark Office;"

(b) PAY OF DEPUTY DIRECTOR.—Section 5315 of title 5, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"Dependent.—"Under Secretary for Intellectual Property and Deputy Director of the United States Patent and Trademark Office;".

SEC. 622. STUDY ON ALTERNATIVE FEE STRUCTURES.

The Under Secretary of Commerce for Intellectual Property and Director of the United States Patent and Trademark Office shall conduct a study of alternative fee structures that could be adopted by the United States Patent and Trademark Office to encourage maximum participation by the inventor community in the United States. The Director shall submit to the Committees on the Judiciary of the House of Representatives and the Senate a report on the results of the study not later than 1 year after the date of the enactment of this Act.

Subtitle B—Effective Date; Technical Amendments

SEC. 630. EFFECTIVE DATE; TECHNICAL AMENDMENTS.

This title and the amendments made by this title shall take effect 4 months after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 632. TECHNICAL AND CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.

(a) AMENDMENTS TO TITLE 35.—

(1) The item relating to part I of the title of chapter 35, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"PART I—UNITED STATES PATENT AND TRADEMARK OFFICE."

(2) The table of parts for title 35, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"1. Establishment, Officers and Employees, Functions."

(3) The table of chapters for part I of title 35, United States Code, is amended by inserting the item relating to chapter 1 to read as follows:

"1. Establishment, Officers and Employees, Functions."

(4) The table of sections for chapter 1 of title 35, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"1. Interferences."

"CHAPTER 2—PATENT OFFICE."

"Sec. 7. Inventors."

"Sec. 8. Classification of patents."

"Sec. 9. Certified copies of records."

"Sec. 10. Publications."

"Sec. 11. Exchange of copies of patents and applications with foreign countries."

"Sec. 12. Copies of patents and applications for public libraries."

"Sec. 13. Annual report to Congress."

(b) PAY OF DEPUTY DIRECTOR.—Section 5315 of title 5, United States Code, is amended by striking "22 "Assistant Secretary of Commerce and Commissioner of Patents and Trademarks" and inserting "Under Secretary for Intellectual Property and Deputy Director of the United States Patent and Trademark Office;".

(c) PAY OF DIRECTOR.—Section 5314 of title 5, United States Code, is amended by striking 22 "Assistant Secretary of Commerce and Commissioner of Patents and Trademarks" and inserting "Under Secretary for Intellectual Property and Deputy Director of the United States Patent and Trademark Office;".

(d) DUTIES.—The Board of Patent Appeals and Interferences shall, on written appeal of an applicant or review adverse decisions of examiners upon applications for patents and shall determine priority and patentability of invention in controversies declared under section 135(a). Each appeal and interference shall be heard by at least 3 members of the Board, who shall be designated by the Director. Only the Board of Patent Appeals and Interferences may grant rehearings."

"The term 'Commissioner' means the Director of the United States Patent and Trademark Office."

"The Act of July 5, 1946 (commonly referred to as the 'Trademark Act of 1946'; 15 U.S.C. 2051 and following), except for section 17, as amended by section 617 of this Act, is amended by striking 'Commissioner' each place it appears and inserting "Director'."

(14) Section 129(a)(4) of title 28, United States Code, is amended—

(A) in subparagraph (A) by inserting "United States Patent and Trademark Office" after "Patent and Trademark"; and

(B) in subparagraph (B) by striking "Commissioner of Patents and Trademarks" and inserting "Director of the United States Patent and Trademark Office".

(15) Chapter 115 of title 28, United States Code, is amended—

(A) in items relating to section 174 in the table of sections by striking "Patent Office" and inserting "United States Patent and Trademark Office";

(B) in section 174—

(1) by striking "Patent Office" each place it appears in the text and section heading and inserting "United States Patent and Trademark Office";

(ii) by striking "Commissioner of Patents" and inserting "Director of the United States Patent and Trademark Office"; and

(C) by striking "Commissioner" and inserting "Director".

(17) Section 1928 of title 28, United States Code, is amended by striking "Patent Office" and inserting "United States Patent and Trademark Office".

(18) Section 2 of the Atomic Energy Act of 1954 (42 U.S.C. 2181) is amended in subsections c. and d. by striking "Commissioner of Patents" and inserting "Director of the United States Patent and Trademark Office".

(19) Section 152 of the Atomic Energy Act of 1954 (42 U.S.C. 2182) is amended by striking "Commissioner of Patents" and inserting "Director of the United States Patent and Trademark Office".

(20) Section 303 of the National Aeronautics and Space Act of 1958 (42 U.S.C. 2457) is amended—

(A) in subsection (c) by striking "Commissioner of Patents" and inserting "Director of the United States Patent and Trademark Office"; and

(B) by striking "Commissioner" each subsequent place it appears and inserting "Director".

(21) Section 12(a) of the Solar Heating and Cooling Demonstration Act of 1974 (42 U.S.C. 5510(a)) is amended by striking "Commissioner of Patents" and inserting "Director of the United States Patent and Trademark Office".

(22) Section 1111 of title 44, United States Code, is amended by striking "the Commissioner of Patents" and inserting "the Director of the United States Patent and Trademark Office".

(23) Section 1111 of title 44, United States Code, is amended by striking "the Commissioner of Patents".

(24) Section 1123 of title 44, United States Code, is amended by striking "the Patent Office".

(25) Sections 1337 and 1338 of title 44, United States Code, and the items relating to those sections in the table of contents for chapter 13 of such title, are repealed.

(26) Section 18(i) of the Trading with the enemy Act (50 U.S.C. App. 18(i)) is amended by striking "Commissioner of Patents" and inserting "Director of the United States Patent and Trademark Office".

Subtitle C—Miscellaneous Provisions

SEC. 641. REFERENCES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Any reference in any other Federal law, Executive order, rule, regulation, or delegation of authority, or any document of or pertaining to a department or office to which a function is transferred by this title—

(1) to the head of such department or office is deemed to refer to the head of the department or office to which such function is transferred; or

(2) to such department or office is deemed to refer to the department or office to which such function is transferred by this title, shall be abated by reason of the enactment of this title.

(b) SPECIFIC REFERENCES.—Any reference in any other Federal law, Executive order, rule, regulation, or delegation of authority, or any document of or pertaining to the Patent and Trademark Office—

(1) to the Commissioner of Patents and Trademarks is deemed to refer to the Under Secretary of Commerce for Intellectual Property and Director of the United States Patent and Trademark Office;

(2) to the Assistant Commissioner for Patents is deemed to refer to the Commissioner for Patents; or

(3) to the Assistant Commissioner for Trademarks is deemed to refer to the Commissioner for Trademarks.

SEC. 642. EXERCISE OF AUTHORITIES.

Except as otherwise provided by law, a Federal official to whom a function is transferred by this title may, for purposes of performing the function, exercise all authorities under any other provision of law that were available with respect to the performance of that function to the official responsible for the performance of the function immediately before the effective date of the transfer of the function.

SEC. 643. SAVINGS PROVISIONS.

(a) LEGAL DOCUMENTS.—All orders, determinations, rules, regulations, permits, grants, loans, contracts, agreements, certificates, licenses, and privileges—

(1) that have been issued, made, granted, or allowed to become effective by the President, the Secretary of Commerce, or by or against any officer or employee of any office transferred by this title, or any other Government official, by a court of competent jurisdiction, in the performance of any function is transferred by this title, and

(2) that are in effect on the effective date of such transfer (or become effective after such date pursuant to their terms as in effect on such effective date), shall continue in effect according to their terms until modified, terminated, superseded, set aside, or revoked in accordance with law by the President, any other authorized official, a court of competent jurisdiction, or operation of law.

(b) PROCEEDINGS.—This title shall not affect any proceeding or application for any benefits, service, license, permit, certificate, or financial assistance pending on the effective date of this title before an office transferred by this title, but such proceedings and applications shall be continued.

Orders shall be issued in such proceedings, appeals shall be taken therefrom, and payments shall be made in accordance with the terms of such orders, as if this title had not been enacted, and orders issued in any such proceeding shall continue in effect until modified, terminated, superseded, or revoked by a duly authorized official or a court of competent jurisdiction, or by operation of law. Nothing in this subsection shall be considered to prohibit the performance of any such proceeding under the same terms and conditions and to the same extent that such proceeding could have been discontinued or suspended if this title had not been enacted.

(c) SUITS.—This title shall not affect suits commenced before the effective date of this title, and in all such suits, proceedings shall be had, and judgments rendered in the same manner and with the same effect as if this title had not been enacted.

(d) NONABATEMENT OF ACTIONS.—No suit, action, or other proceeding commenced by or against the Department of Commerce or the Secretary of Commerce, by or against any individual in the official capacity of such individual, is an officer of or office transferred by this title, shall be abated by reason of the enactment of this title.

(e) CONTINUANCE OF SUITS.—If any Government official in the official capacity of such officer is party to a suit with respect to a function of the officer, and under this title such function is transferred to any other officer or office, then such suit shall be continued with the other officer or the head of such other office, as applicable, substituted or added as a party.

(f) ADMINISTRATIVE PROCEDURE AND JUDICIAL REVIEW.—Except as otherwise provided by law, any complaint or other proceeding relating to notice, hearings, action upon the record, or administrative or judicial review that apply to any function transferred by this title shall apply to such function by the head of the Federal agency, and other officers of the agency, to which such function is transferred by this title.

SEC. 644. TRANSFER OF OFFICE.

Except as otherwise provided in this title, so much of the personnel, property, records, and unexpended balances of appropriations, allocations, and other funds employed, used, held, available, or to be made available in connection with a function transferred to an official or agency by this title shall be available to the official or the head of that agency, respectively, at such time or times as the Director of the Office of Management and Budget directs for use in connection with the functions transferred.

SEC. 645. DELEGATION AND ASSIGNMENT.

Except as otherwise expressly prohibited by law or otherwise provided in this title, an official to whom any functions are transferred under this title (including the head of any office to which functions are transferred under this title) may delegate any of the functions so transferred to such official or any other official or employee of any office transferred by this title, or any other Government official, or by a court of competent jurisdiction, in the performance of any function that is transferred by this title, and

(1) in every other case, shall be continued in effect as if this title had not been enacted. Nothing in this section shall be considered to prohibit the performance of any such proceeding under the same terms and conditions and to the same extent that such proceedings were performed prior to the effective date of this title.

(2) to the Assistant Commissioner for Patents.

(3) to the Assistant Commissioner for Trademarks.

SEC. 646. AUTHORITY OF DIRECTOR OF THE OFFICE OF MANAGEMENT AND BUDGET WITH RESPECT TO FUNCTIONS TRANSFERRED.

(a) DETERMINATIONS.—If necessary, the Director of the Office of Management and Budget shall make any determination that is transferred under this title.

(b) INCIDENTAL TRANSFERS.—The Director of the Office of Management and Budget, at such time or times as the Director shall provide, may make such determinations as may be necessary with regard to the functions transferred by this title, and to make such additional incidental dispositions of personnel, assets, liabilities, grants, contracts, programs, records, procedures, and other balances of appropriations, authorizations, allocations, and other funds held, used, arising from, available to, or to be made available in connection with such functions, as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this title. The Director shall provide for the termination of the affairs of all entities terminated pursuant to this title and for such further measures and dispositions as may be necessary to effectuate the purposes of this title.

SEC. 647. CERTAIN VESTING OF FUNCTIONS CONCERNING PROVISIONAL APPLICATIONS.

For purposes of this title, the vesting of a function in a department or office pursuant to section 5015 of title 35, United States Code, shall be considered to be the transfer of the function.

SEC. 648. AVAILABLE OF EXISTING FUNDS.

Existing appropriations and funds available for the performance of functions, programs, and activities terminated pursuant to this title shall remain available, for the duration of their period of availability, for necessary expenses in connection with the termination and resolution of such functions, programs, and activities, subject to the submission of a plan to the Committees on Appropriations of the House and Senate in accordance with the procedures set forth in section 605 of the Departments of Commerce, Justice, State, Judiciary, and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 1999, as contained in Public Law 105-277.

SEC. 649. DEFINITIONS.

For purposes of this title—

(1) the term "function" includes any duty, obligation, power, authority, responsibility, right, privilege, activity, or program; and

(2) the term "office" includes any office, administration, agency, bureau, institute, council, unit, organizational entity, or component thereof.

TITLE VII—MISCELLANEOUS PATENT PROVISIONS

SEC. 701. PROVISIONAL APPLICATIONS.

(a) ABANDONMENT.—Section 111(b)(5) of title 35, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"(5) ABANDONMENT.—Notwithstanding the absence of a claim, upon timely request and as prescribed by the Commissioner, a provisional application may be treated as an application filed under subsection (a).

(b) PUBLICATION.—Section 11(a) of title 35, United States Code, is amended by striking "one or more of subsections (e), (f), and (g)" and inserting "one or more of subsections (e), (f), and (g)."

(c) ADMISSION TO PUBLIC USE.—Section 102(f) of title 35, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by striking "the general requirements of" and inserting "the requirements of"; and

(2) by adding at the end the following:

"(3) in the case of an invention to which section 102 applies, the date of filing under subsection (a) shall be the date of filing of such invention for which section 102 applies.

SEC. 702. PRIOR ART EXCLUSION FOR CERTAIN COMMONLY ASSIGNED PATENTS.

(a) PRIOR ART EXCLUSION.—Section 102(c) of title 35, United States Code, is amended by striking "subsection (f) or (g)" and inserting "one or more of subsections (e), (f), and (g)."

(b) PROVISION OF INFORMATION.—Section 223(c) of title 35, United States Code, is amended by striking "The Commissioner may supply printed copies of specifications and drawings of patents" and inserting "The Director may supply printed copies of specifications and drawings of patents for public libraries or for the United States Patent and Trademark Office to the extent permitted in section 104, and shall maintain, for use by the public, paper, microform, or electronic."
Ms. LOFGREN. Mr. Speaker, the gentlewoman from Ohio is not a member of the committee of jurisdiction and is not, therefore, eligible to manage our time. I would ask for a ruling.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentlewoman from Ohio is eligible if the gentlewoman from California is not opposed.

Ms. LOFGREN. Then I will claim opposition.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentlewoman from California is opposed?

Ms. LOFGREN. I will claim opposition and the time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Then the gentlewoman from California qualifies since the gentlewoman is opposed to the bill.

The gentlewoman from California will then be recognized for 20 minutes.

POINT OF ORDER

Mr. ROHRABACHER. Point of order, Mr. Speaker. With all fairness here, claiming opposition is not what the question is. If the gentlewoman from Ohio is indeed opposed to the bill, she deserves time as compared to someone who is unwilling to say that they are opposed to the bill.

Ms. LOFGREN. Mr. Speaker, if I may, I have reservations about the changes made today. I hope that I can be convinced that they are adequately made by the time the debate is over.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. At this point, the Chair does not question the motives of the Member. The Member has stated she is in opposition to the bill.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. COBLE).

Mr. ROHRABACHER. Continuing my point of order, Mr. Speaker, does the Member not just claiming opposition, does she oppose the bill?

Ms. LOFGREN. I believe the Chair has ruled.

Mr. ROHRABACHER. If not, if she cannot state this, I would state as a point of order, the gentlewoman from Ohio (Ms. KAPTUR), who does say she is opposed to the bill, this is not in my interest to do this, this is in the interest of fairness, we should make sure the time is allotted to someone who opposes the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentlewoman from California has stated that she is in opposition to the bill; is that correct?

Is the gentlewoman from California in opposition to the bill?

Ms. LOFGREN. Until convinced about the changes made, yes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. At this point the gentlewoman from California is in opposition to the bill. The gentlewoman qualifies.

POINT OF ORDER

Ms. KAPTUR. Point of order, Mr. Speaker.

Mr. Speaker, do I take it, then, that under your ruling, I, as someone who is opposed to this measure, will not be allowed my own time during debate this evening?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a motion to suspend the rules, only two Members may control the time. The gentlewoman from California has qualified to claim the time in opposition. She will, of course, be able to yield time if she is so inclined.

Ms. LOFGREN. Mr. Chairman, if I may, I plan to expansively yield time to the gentlewoman from Ohio.

Ms. KAPTUR. I wanted to ask, Mr. Speaker, how much time would that be of the total time allotted, then?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Each side has 20 minutes. The gentlewoman from California will control 20 minutes.

PARLIAMENTARY INQUIRY

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Speaker, I have a parliamentary inquiry. The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentlewoman will state it.

Mr. HOYER. Am I correct that under the rules as they now exist, that if in fact the gentlewoman from Ohio (Ms. KAPTUR) were recognized in opposition, she would receive half of the time allotted to the minority side of 20 minutes? Is that correct?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Only one Member may control time in opposition. The gentlewoman from California, a member of the committee, controls the time because she is opposed.

Mr. HOYER. So if she were in opposition, she would receive the entire 20 minutes?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. If the gentlewoman from California were not in opposition, someone else could seek that time.

Mr. HOYER. Further parliamentary inquiry. If that in fact occurred, could the gentlewoman from Ohio (Ms. KAPTUR) yield to the gentlewoman from California (Ms. LOFGREN) 10 minutes?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Any Member in control of time can yield time to anyone else.

Mr. HOYER. In other words, there would be nothing to preclude her from doing so?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Repeat your question, please.

Mr. HOYER. The Speaker’s response was, as I take it, if the gentlewoman from Ohio (Ms. KAPTUR) were recognized as an opponent to the legislation, she could yield such time as she desired to the gentlewoman from California (Ms. LOFGREN) who obviously has been asked by the committee to represent the minority side of the committee in this action.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. That would be possible. But the gentlewoman from California, a member of the committee, has claimed the time because in opposition and will have the 20 minutes and will be able to yield that time as she so desires.

Mr. HOYER. I understand.

Ms. KAPTUR. Mr. Speaker, could I ask unanimous consent to control my time?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from Ohio?

Ms. LOFGREN. Mr. Speaker, I object. The SPEAKER pro tempore. Objection is heard.

The gentlewoman from California (Ms. LOFGREN) controls the time.

POINT OF ORDER

Mr. ROHRABACHER. Mr. Speaker, I have a point of order.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentlewoman will state his point of order.

Mr. ROHRABACHER. Mr. Speaker, the point of order is such that it seems to me that by being a little heavy-handed here, we are undermining this process.

Ms. LOFGREN. Will the gentleman yield?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state his point of order first.

Mr. ROHRABACHER. I withdraw my point of order.

Ms. LOFGREN. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to make a 10-second statement that will save us all a lot of time.

After I make my opening statement, it is my intention to yield 10 minutes to the gentlewoman from Ohio.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentlewoman may take 10 seconds of her time and solve the problem.

Ms. LOFGREN. I think we just solved it, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Very well.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. COBLE).

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. COBLE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material on the bill under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina?

There was no objection.

Mr. COBLE. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I want to say to my friend from California and to my friend from Ohio, the gentlewoman from California’s comments, I think, make it clear that no one is trying to roll anyone. I think that has been made clear by the gentlewoman from California’s comment subsequent to the beginning of the debate.

I rise tonight, Mr. Speaker, in support of H.R. 1907, the American Inventors Protection Act, and urge the House to adopt the measure.

Mr. Speaker, a coalition of Members, staff, administration officials, and other contributors have negotiated in good faith into the early evening to clarify what few outstanding issues remain in this 100-plus-page bill. I now anticipate overwhelming support for this complex, important and often misunderstood amendment, which will bring our patent and trademark system into the 21st century to the benefit of American inventors and American consumers.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 1907 is a product of compromise and negotiation. It is comprised of several provisions that have been suggested by the gentleman from California (Mr. ROHRABACHER), the gentleman from California (Mr. CAMP-} bell), each of whom opposed this the last session, the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. MANZULLO) and the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. BURTON), in addition to other administration and industry officials.

The gentlewoman from California (Ms. LOFGREN), the gentleman from California (Mr. BEHMAN), the ranking member of the subcommittee, among others, have been very helpful in this process. I want to thank all the participants and others too numerous to name for their patience and insight as we have worked to bring this bill finally to the floor.

Mr. Speaker, with a bill this complex and lengthy, no one who participates in its construction can get everything he or she wants. I think we have all done a good job, however, of addressing those legitimate concerns registered by independent inventors while retaining the core protections of the legislation. There is no doubt in my mind that H.R. 1907 will make our patent and trademark system, already the world’s best, even better in the new millennium.

Mr. Speaker, I place an exchange of letters in the RECORD concerning committee jurisdiction on the bill H.R. 1907 between Chairman BURTON and CHRYSTEAD.

U.S. HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES, COMMITTEE ON GOVERNMENT REFORM,
Chairman.

Hon. Henry J. Hyde,
Chairman, Committee on the Judiciary,
Washington, DC.

Dear Mr. Chairman: I am writing with regard to H.R. 1907, the American Inventors Protection Act of 1999.

As you know, under House Rule X of the Committee on Government Reform and Oversight has jurisdiction over the federal civil service and the overall economy, efficiency, and management of government operations and activities. Sections 612, 613, 614, and 621 of the amended bill address matters that are within the jurisdiction of this Committee.

In the interest of expediting floor consideration for this measure, the Committee on Government Reform will agree not to exercise its jurisdiction over those sections on the understanding that you have agreed to amend the bill as follows:

1. Section 612 will be revised to provide that the total compensation of the Commissioner for Patents and the Commissioner for Trademarks may not exceed the salary of the Vice President. (It is our understanding that the Under Secretary of Commerce for Intellectual Property and Director of the United States Patent and Trademark Office, and the Deputy Under Secretary of Commerce for Intellectual Property and Deputy Director of the United States Patent and Trademark Office will not be eligible for bonuses under any future consideration of related matters.)

2. Section 614 will be further revised to requize the Patent and Trademark Office to submit to Congress a legislative proposal to retain patent and trademark examiners for the purpose of training other patent and trademark examiners rather than allow the Office to develop and implement such a program without congressional intervention.

Our decision not to exercise our jurisdiction over this measure is not intended or design to waive or limit our jurisdiction over any future consideration of related matters.

Sincerely,

Chairman.

H. R. KOYNE.
Chairman.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. LOFGREN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I would like to inquire of the chairman of the committee rising in opposition to the bill, I need to explore the changes that have been made to this bill understanding why it is worthy of my support.

Mr. COBLE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentlewoman yield?

Ms. LOFGREN. I yield to the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. COBLE. This deletion was done at the request of the request of the Trademark Office, and the reason given by PTO was that it considered it a constitution of an additional administrati-

On title IV there is a provision per-moving to make changes in the bill that would be some good reason that I am not aware of for the change that is proposed.

Can the gentleman convince me as to why this should be supported?

Mr. COBLE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentlewoman yield?

Ms. LOFGREN. I yield to the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. COBLE. This deletion was done at the request of the request of the Trademark Office, and the reason given by PTO was that it considered it a constitution of an additional administrati-

On title IV there is a provision per-moving to make changes in the bill that would be some good reason that I am not aware of for the change that is proposed.

Can the gentleman convince me as to why this should be supported?

Mr. COBLE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentlewoman yield?

Ms. LOFGREN. I yield to the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. COBLE. This deletion was done at the request of the request of the Trademark Office, and the reason given by PTO was that it considered it a constitution of an additional administrati-

On title IV there is a provision per-moving to make changes in the bill that would be some good reason that I am not aware of for the change that is proposed.

Can the gentleman convince me as to why this should be supported?

Mr. COBLE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentlewoman yield?

Ms. LOFGREN. I yield to the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. COBLE. This deletion was done at the request of the request of the Trademark Office, and the reason given by PTO was that it considered it a constitution of an additional administrati-

On title IV there is a provision per-moving to make changes in the bill that would be some good reason that I am not aware of for the change that is proposed.

Can the gentleman convince me as to why this should be supported?

Mr. COBLE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentlewoman yield?

Ms. LOFGREN. I yield to the gentleman from North Carolina.
August 3, 1999

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE

provisions that that my Committee on the Judiciary colleagues will not mind that I am stating for the Record that I believe H.R. 1907 represents a major victory for the independent inventor whose interests I have vigorously deferred these past 5 years.
I ask my colleagues to give H.R. 1907 their overwhelming support and to join me in urging the other body to take up this compromise as is and send it to the President for his signature without change.
Mr. Speaker, I have some more detailed comments, and I will be inserting them at this point in the Record, but I would not want to let this moment go by without thanking the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr.
COBLE) who has, as my colleagues know, stepped forward in a spirit of goodwill and the negotiations we have had have resulted in a superior bill that is going to do great things for America and to keep us technologically ahead.
I also thank the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. MANZULLO). In his late-breaking contributions to this fight he has greatly improved this legislation, and he can be justly proud he has done a good job for America in doing so. Finally, I would like to thank the gentleman from California (Mr. CAMPBELL) and the gentlewoman from Ohio (Ms.
KAPTUR), so I will leave that out for a later answer.

Mr. COBLE. We will get to that sub-estantively.
Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from California (Mr. ROHR-RABACHER).
Mr. ROHRABACHER. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of H.R. 1907, as amended. This bill is the culmination of a long process of negotiations that followed floor battles in the last Congress between the leadership of the Committee on the Judiciary and a group of Members led by myself. It was far more than sausage making because we have people with honest beliefs on both sides, and I certainly can see where people can have honest diffences on something as complicated as patent law.
I began this fight in 1994 when I fought against provisions that were inserted into the GATT trade agreement implementation bill to eliminate our Nation’s traditional guarantee of a 17-year patent term in an attempt to harmonize our patent law with those of other nations with a 20-year-from-filing limit that was imposed through that legislation, thus taking away a guaranteed patent term that had been the right of every American inventor.
This change, by the way, would have resulted in the patent term of every application held in the Patent Office for more than 3 years, which is a common occurrence with breakthrough technologies.
I was further energized in this fight when additional changes in our patent system were proposed, including the publishing of all patent applications 18 months after filing, even when no patent had been issued, and establishing prior user rights for all inventions, opening up new opportunities to challenge already-granted patents through reexamination and the turning of the Patent Office into a government corporation. These things caused me great pain and concern.
We want to have had ultimately resulted in a standoff in the Senate in which no patent legislation was adopted, and I am pleased to note that the negotiations I referred to earlier have resulted in a bill that is very much different from the one that went through the Committee on the Judiciary last year and the fights we have had in the last 4 years.
Instead of making minor, tenuous extensions in the patent term, H.R. 1907 goes most of the way in reversing the 1994 patent term reduction by extending patent term completely to compensate for delays in the processing of the Patent and Trademark Office or any other delay resulting from actions taken by anyone other than the patent applicant. Instead of publishing all patent applications after 18 months, 1907 publishes only, the pending applications that have been published abroad, and thus they are already published and already known to the people and only to the extent that they are published abroad.
Instead of a prior user defense that applies to all inventions which we just heard a question about a moment ago, H.R. 1907 contains a very limited prior user defense that applies only to those business methods which have only been considered patentable in the last few years, and this, of course, flows from an adverse case before the court that changed patent law.
We want to have our say in what is going on here, and we are correcting it in this legislation; and instead of corporatizing the Patent Office and removing civil service protection from patent examiners, H.R. 1907 leaves the PTO as an agency within the Department of Commerce while including valuable provisions keeping patent revue within the Patent Office and providing for enhanced training and professional development for patent examiners and retaining their civil service status.
Mr. Speaker, although as in all compromises both sides have to give up something, maybe a little, I would say that my Committee on the Judiciary would yield?
Ms. LOFGREN. I yield to the gentleman from California (Mr. ROHR-ABACHER).
Mr. ROHRABACHER. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of H.R. 1907, as amended. This bill is the culmination of a long process of negotiations that followed floor battles in the last Congress between the leadership of the Committee on the Judiciary and a group of Members led by myself. It was far more than sausage making because we have people with honest beliefs on both sides, and I certainly can see where people can have honest diffences on something as complicated as patent law.
I began this fight in 1994 when I fought against provisions that were inserted into the GATT trade agreement
implementation bill to eliminate our Nation’s traditional guarantee of a 17-year patent term in an attempt to harmonize our patent law with those of other nations with a 20-year-from-filing limit that was imposed through that legislation, thus taking away a fought diligently to strengthen our patent system and to prevent changes in the name of harmonization. Now, after the continued competition and negotiation of the past, this was finally a time for cooperation. Chairman Coble and I have both spent many hours of individual effort pursuing our respective goals for patent reform the past several years, and indeed the time was ripe to work together toward a unified effort. It was time to have an open-ended process in which everyone had an opportunity to come to the table.

With that, I am proud to say that after a long and successful negotiation period with my friend from North Carolina, Chairman Coble, and with the invaluable help of my fellow colleague from California, Mr. Campbell, and with late-breaking help from my friend from Illinois, Mr. Manzullo, we were finally able to reach agreement on the issues. As was always the case, the devil has been in the details. Therefore, this has been a carefully crafted effort, and I am proud to say that it is my most significant success in this Congress.

As everyone is aware, the current law governs patent term of 17 years from the date a patent is granted. Failing that, I have insisted on a guaranteed patent term of 20 years from the date of original filing, the patent term will be compensated day-for-day during the pre-issuance period. Furthermore, if the PTO does not issue a patent within 3 years from the date of original file, the patent term will be compensated day-for-day until the patent issues, minus any time the applicant has delayed prosecution by engaging in dilatory behavior.

This approach effectively eliminates the claimed submarine patent dilemma while providing a specific framework from which the Patent and Trademark Office must monitor and compensate the loss of any patent term due to delay for which the applicant has no responsibility.

This approach essentially gives back to the non-dilatory patent holder what I have fought so hard for—a guaranteed 17 year patent term. The patentee once again will have the right to enforce his patents using his invention for a limited time—a time that is guaranteed and clearly defined. This Title essentially regains what GATT gave away. It has been my core initiative and now I am proud to say that it is my most significant success in this Congress.

As I supported last year, this bill includes a provision similar in spirit to the amendment successfully offered last year to H.R. 400 by my friend from Ohio, Marcy Kaptur. Essentially, this year's effort only permits early publication of U.S. patent applications that are filed abroad in a country that also publishes early. Additionally, the U.S. application will not be published before the foreign application, and in no greater content.

Currently, there has generated an abundance of controversy, although its provisions are of a positive nature. There are over 170 patent systems that currently exist globally. Our nation cannot control foreign policies on early publication. A majority of foreign nations choose to publish patent applications prior to granting a patent. The published patent application is also normally printed in the home language of each respective foreign patent system.

Generally, this title will affect large corporations, because they are more likely to file abroad than the independent inventors community. Since American patent applications filed abroad are indeed published early and are in a foreign language, foreign nations have a chance to view them at their leisure. This is the reality and the argument from the other side in the last Congress that was the hardest to counter.

Thus we have agreed to permit the PTO to publish after 18 months only those applications that are filed internationally. If an applicant files an application only domestically, he will have the right to delay the content of early domestic publication to that content which the foreign entity has published. In no event will America publish prior to the actual publication date in a foreign patent system. It's that simple.

Also included, for those applications published early, is a provisional right which allows the patent holder to recover royalties for infringement activity during the pre-issuance period. There will also be no pre-issuance 3rd party opposition to the patent application permitted. Finally, the costs derived from early publication will be applied only to those applicants who are actually subjected to publication.

Essentially, this title is reactive to circumstances beyond our control already present in many foreign patent systems, while going to lengths to protect the American inventor community.

This title was an attempt to provide an alternative to existing law and to further encourage potential litigants to use the PTO as a avenue to resolve patentability issues without expanding the process into one resembling courtroom proceedings. Fundamentally, in addition to the reexam process in law today, this title creates an additional reexam option that permits a third party requestor to file additional written briefs. The price paid by those who would challenge a patent, however, is that the 3rd party requestor is barred from any appeals outside of the PTO and from subsequently litigating the same issues in a district court or making a second reexam request. This estoppel is the insulation that effectively protects patent holders.

Ultimately, the expanded reexam option does not subject the patent to any greater challenge in scope than currently exists today. It merely allows a reexam requestor the option to further explain why a particular patent should not have been granted.
Ms. LOFGREN. Mr. Speaker, I yield 10 minutes to the gentlewoman from Ohio (Ms. KAPTR), and I ask unanimous consent that she be permitted to further yield time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MILLER of Florida). Is there objection to the request of the gentlewoman from California?

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentlewoman from Ohio (Ms. KAPTR) will now control 10 minutes of time.

Ms. KAPTR. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I must say I find it very interesting here close to 10 p.m. Washington time that we have had walked to the floor less than a half an hour ago the bill that we are going to be asked to vote on tomorrow. This is likely to be the last item of business tonight. This bill is 105 pages long, and I must say I am extremely disappointed that I could not even get 20 minutes to talk about a measure that has been worked on in this Congress for several years, and now under the unusual, unusual procedure of bringing up a major bill like this with constitutional implications it is brought up under suspension, and I, as the only person in opposition here with perhaps the exception of one other are allowed 10 minutes. Mr. Speaker, I will not yield time at this point, having so few minutes myself.

Mr. Speaker, any reasonable person would ask why the silence. Why are we being silenced and not allowed to explore some of the questions that have troubled us over several years?

I listened very carefully to those that have been involved in these negotiations: the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. BURTON), the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. MANZULLO), the gentleman from California (Mr. ROHRABACHER), the gentleman from California (Mr. CAMPBELL).

Frankly I was not involved in the negotiations that have been occurring here over the last several weeks. There were two meetings I think in my office where we tried to gain clarification of language that never came back, and I would like to ask the chairman of the full committee, if I might, my good friend, the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. COBLE), if this bill before us, H.R. 1907, is the same bill that was voted out of the Judiciary on May 24 of this year, 1999.

Is this the same bill?

Mr. COBLE. Mr. Speaker, will the gentlewoman yield?

Ms. KAPTR. I yield to the gentleman from North Carolina.

Mr. COBLE. It has been amended many times for the benefit of independent inventors, many of the people the gentlewoman from Ohio (Ms. KAPTR) and I have been associated with over the years. I am happy to do this. I am happy to be here.

CONCLUSION

Certainly, last year's bill was an exercise in harmonization brought about by the interests of large corporations. In contrast, this year's bill, H.R. 1907, is designed to protect the products of our nation's inventors and to help sustain our unprecedented technological leadership. I saw to that through many intense negotiations with my colleagues. Unfortunately, there are still those who cannot recognize victory even when it staves them in the face.

I assure you, Mr. Speaker, that if H.R. 1907 was similar to either H.R. 400 or S. 507 last Congress, my views would not have changed this Congress. But that is not the case. H.R. 1907 is a brand new effort reached through an open-ended and fair debate, and it is a bill I am unequivocally supporting today. It is also a bill that I will stand firmly behind as it moves through the Senate.

I know it is up to Congress to carry on the tradition of Thomas Jefferson, Benjamin Franklin, and the will of our Founding Fathers. It was they who provided our newly formed nation with a foundation for freedom and the power to protect the achievements of our inventors.

I have been intimately involved in these issues because I want to ensure that our patent system continues to respect the fundamentals of our Founding Fathers while at the same time enhancing its operability in modern society. We have a chance this Congress to enhance a system that better provides a stronger protection for our nation's inventors.

Our patent system always has—and always will—stimulate the creation of jobs, advance our technological leadership, and help sustain our standard of living. It has helped to fortify our economic success, strengthen our national defense, and reinforce our global leadership.

I look forward to passing this bill with the resounding support of my colleagues on the House side and I look forward to the unshakeable support for its text when it is reported in the Senate.

I want to make sure that we will firmly stand behind the text of this bill in the event of contrary action by the Senate. But I am confident that the other noble body of this Congress will accept the House's efforts in patent reform and will move our version of the bill forward without delay.

Mr. Speaker, I applaud my colleagues who have endured a labor-intensive process to reach the final accord we have today. I know it was not an easy thing to do and that it was a long time coming, but it is the American people who will ultimately benefit.

This body can rest assured knowing we faithfully served American technology. Mr. Speaker, there is no question that this bill has been a labor-intensive process to reach the final accord we have today. I know it was not an easy thing to do by way of vigilance and continued involvement, I am pleased looking back and realizing all the good work that has been accomplished so far.
friends from California, some of whom are on the floor tonight, I understand a little bit about industry differences, and I know that there are some industries that will benefit more than others from the publication in foreign locales of some of these patents.

I would say, and I have only marked one paragraph that I will read here, because the public will know nothing of this bill before it is voted on tomorrow, but on page 33 there is this section that is called “United States publications of applications published abroad.” It says, “Subject to paragraph (2), each application for patent except applications for design patents filed under chapter 16 and provisional applications filed under section 111(b) shall be filed in accordance with procedures determined by the Director, promptly upon the expiration of a period of 18 months after the earliest filing date for which a benefit is sought under this title.”

Now, that is an interesting set of words there, but I guess I would want to take sections like that and let the sun shine in, let those back home whose livelihoods and futures, and, frankly, the future of this country depend on, have an opportunity to think and comment before this particular vote.

I agree with the chairman: this is complex, it is very important, and it is often misunderstood. I would have to say as a Member, I take some offense that some professor from MIT, and I attended MIT, had more influence with the committee and more ability to review these sections than Members like myself. You must understand this frustration.

So I do really feel that we are being closed out. That means that some interests are being looped in, and it means not to be given the chance to review this extremely important measure with constitutional consequences before we are asked to vote on it tomorrow.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to my good friend, the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. HOYER), who has fought so hard trying to get reform that is fair to all concerned.

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman for yielding, and I want to express my concern about the process.

The gentleman from California, myself, and others as well as the gentlewoman from Ohio (Ms. KAPTUR) throughout the process of consideration of legislation, the history of which Mr. ROHRABACHER gave a little earlier, have raised very significant concerns. Those concerns were raised not for those who can lobby this House very effectively, but for those small inventors, who file their patents here because of the first invention defense, and without a first invention defense, and to say thanks to our colleagues who have also labored on this bill.

There is regular order here. We should have regular order, especially on a bill of constitutional magnitude.

We all recognize it is.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to vote for H.R. 2654. The Alliance for American Innovation, a group known to the gentlewoman for yielding me time tonight on this subject.

But I am very concerned that we are not going to vote until tomorrow. I understand that, without having the opportunity to fully review, debate, the provisions of this bill.

The gentlewoman from California made a very good statement, I thought, going through various provisions in the bill about which we had concerns. I regret I do not have more time to speak.

Ms. KAPTUR. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I regret the gentleman does not have more time as well. I wish to say to the gentleman, thank you very much for being here this evening, and to say thanks to our colleagues who have also labored on this bill.

There is regular order here. We should have regular order, especially on a bill of constitutional magnitude.

All we recognize it is.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to vote for H.R. 2654. The Alliance for American Innovation, a group known to the gentlewoman for yielding me time tonight on this subject.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from California (Ms. SANCHEZ).

Ms. SANCHEZ. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from California (Mr. ROHRABACHER) for his remarks, and I want to join him in his appreciation of the gentle woman for yielding me time tonight on this subject.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of H.R. 2654, the American Inventors Protection Act. The bill improves current patent law and it is in our national interests. The United States is currently the only industrial nation without a first invention defense, and this bill will close that gap.

The first invention defense allows a company who is using a manufacturing process, if someone patents that process after the company has been using it, to continue to use it. This is in the best interests of competitive growth and our industrial technology. The bill also makes the Patent Trademark Office better equipped to deal with the flood of patent applications that come in every day.

Clearly this is a bill that is good for American business, and it therefore will also be good for the American consumer. I urge my colleagues to vote for H.R. 2654.

Mr. COBLE. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, the gentleman from Ohio said she was offended. Well, I am becoming offended too, when I think of all the time that we have put in listening to every person who wanted to be heard. The gentlewoman from Ohio (Ms. KAPTUR) submitted a PTO fees for study for small businesses. It is in the bill. Her own study is in the bill, section 622.

The Alliance for American Innovation, a group known to the gentlewoman for yielding me time tonight on this subject, is adamantly opposed to our bill. I invited them not once, but twice to send a witness to a public hearing. On each occasion, Mr. Speaker, my invitation was declined. So, yes, I am becoming a little bit impatient as well, because I think we have indeed turned the other cheek, and I am proud of it.

My friend the gentlewoman from Ohio (Ms. KAPTUR), when she was reading earlier the provision that she read, of paragraph 2, it is subject to paragraph 2, exceptions for independent inventors who file only in the United States. That is covered.

I apologize, Mr. Speaker, if I am becoming a little bit impatient, but I am a little dog, and I have an easy volunteer to which to hunt. But when I think about all we have done, and then I see the gentleman from California.

Mr. ROHRABACHER. Mr. Speaker, will the gentlewoman yield?

Ms. COLE. Mr. Speaker, let me just note that the section of bill that the gentlewoman from Ohio (Ms. KAPTUR) read and said, my gosh, we need to look at this more, and why justiola i, the gentlewoman from Ohio (Ms. KAPTUR), that portion of the bill has not been changed and has been available for 3 or 4 months now.

This is not something that somebody is moving through, trying to slide through the system. The gentlewoman is complaining about the section of the bill dealing with the 18-month publication. That has not changed. The gentlewoman has had that in her possession ever since it went through committee a couple months ago.

Let me make one or two more points. We have in the last few days, most of what has been talked about, the gentlewoman did not get this 100-something page bill this July, but I accept the chance to read it. Most of that bill is exactly the same, and the changes that have taken place are small changes that were done in order, as the gentlewoman from North Carolina (Chairman COBLE) said, to accommodate the very people that we have been trying to protect. These changes are not so dramatic that it takes very long to digest them. It is not a 118 page bill that is shoved in your lap that is totally new. Almost all of that has been in your possession all of this time.

Mr. COBLE. Mr. Speaker, reclaiming my time, I want to address a question that the gentlewoman from California (Ms. LOFGREN) asked earlier, and I want to do it before I forget it. When the gentlewoman talked about the PTO authorizing the publishing of documents electronically, it was done to ensure that the users of the Patent and Trademark Office may have a more expeditious and thorough access to patent-related information. I think I know from where the gentlewoman from California (Ms. LOFGREN) is coming from, and I will be happy to discuss the security aspect with her at a subsequent time.

Ms. LOFGREN. Mr. Speaker, will the gentlewoman yield?

Mr. COBLE. I yield to the gentlewoman from California.

Ms. LOFGREN. Mr. Speaker, I do not believe we need to specify the security issues in the bill. I am sure the chairman's commitment to work with me, and I am sure with the gentlewoman from Virginia (Mr. GOODLATTE), to ensure the encrypted security of these documents.

Mr. COBLE. I thank the gentlewoman.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentlewoman from Illinois (Mr. MANZULLO).

Mr. MANZULLO. Mr. Speaker, these past 2 days have been perhaps the most challenging in my life as a United States Congressman. I, first of all, want to thank the gentlewoman from North Carolina (Chairman COBLE) for his patience, his understanding, his wisdom, and his knowledge of this subject. I come to this gentleman's defense of the scholar-ship and the reputation he has for honesty in this country, but also for the fact that many people have attacked the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. COBLE) personally because of this bill. I believe that if there is any attack, it should be to the legislative language, and not to an individual's integrity.

These have been challenging days. In addition to the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. COBLE), I want to thank the gentlewoman from California (Mr. ROHRABACHER), the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. BURTON) and the gentlewoman from Illinois (Mr. HYDE), the chairman of the Committee on the Judiciary.

We have labored endlessly in these past 2 days to come up with a bill that protects the integrity of the patent system of this country, while giving fair and open access to it by large corporations and by individual inventors.

The bill is not a compromise in that parties give up or gain any rights. Rather, it is a coming together of all interests in forging a bill that represents openly and fairly the interests of everybody, especially and including the American people.

I worked in two areas of the bill, first, with regard to title II of the first inventor defense. Before the State Street Bank and Trust case as to which in 1998 the U.S. Supreme Court upheld the Court of Appeals for the Federal court, it was universally thought that methods of doing or conducting business were not patentable items.

Before that case, everybody would keep that secret and never tried to patent it. In recognition of this, the American Bar Association, in a clarification in the law by that case, we felt that those who kept their business practices secret had an equitable cause not to be stopped by someone who subsequently reinvented the method of doing or conducting the business or obtaining a patent. We, therefore, limited the first inventor defense solely to that class of rights dealing with methods of doing or conducting business.

It is succinctly to be understood that we do not intend to create by legislative fiat the first inventor defense or any prior user rights for any other process, method, or product or other patentably recognized class of patentable rights.

Second, with regard to title V, Optional Inter Partes Reexamination Procedure, what we did in that was, in addition to keeping the present law of ex parte reexamination, that if there is any litigation that gave certain rights to the inventor and to the challenger, we came up with an additional section, the inter partes reexamination which, if selected by the third party requester, would entitle that person to participate further by filing written documents within the Patent Office.

In exchange for that, there would be a complete estoppel or prohibition to contest the decision. The purposes of our making those changes was to stop any additional litigation that may come as a result of this law.

This means fairness for everybody. For the inventor who has a request for reexamination filed against him, in the present ex parte reexamination process, he still has the same rights he does under the present law; that is, the third party has to rely on his initial written documents. The third party has no right to appeal in the event that he loses a challenge. If the inventor loses, he still may obtain his right to Appeals to the Court.

To the third party, he may proceed under the present law or the option to file the inter partes reexamination.

So it is a matter of fairness to everybody in maintaining the integrity of the Patent Office. Sure, we have had a lot of people help us on this in addition to the Members and Bob Rines who founded the Franklin Pierce Law Center at MIT, founder of the Academy of Applied Science, an induee of the Inventors' Hall of Fame, an induee of the Army Signal Corps Wall of Fame, a Lecturer at the MIT since 1933, a former lecturer of patent law at Harvard, the inventor of the sonogram, a person who has practiced patent law for 55 years and has no interest other than to maintain the rule of law and the integrity of the patent system. He came and helped everybody out.

But, Mr. Speaker, this bill is a good bill because it protects everybody. But more, it protects the integrity of the patent system. I would ask that when the Senate takes it up that the bill would be unchanged in its present form.

Mr. Speaker, these past two days have been two of the most challenging I have had as a Member of Congress. I have had the opportunity to work with my good friends and colleagues, Congressmen HENRY HYDE, chairman of the Judiciary Committee, HOWARD COBLE, chairman of the Judiciary Subcommittee on Intellectual Property, and DANA ROHRABACHER. We have labored endlessly these past 2 days to come up with a bill that protects the integrity of the patent system in the country, while giving fair and open access to it by large corporations and individual inventors. The bill is not a compromise in that parties “give up” or “gain” any rights; rather, it is a coming together of all interests in forging a bill that represents openly and fairly the interests of everybody—including and especially the American people.

I have had a hand in working in the formation of the bill. First, with regard to title II—First Inventor Defense: Before the State Street Bank and Trust case, as to which in 1998 the U.S. Supreme Court denied certiorari and thereby upheld the Court of Appeals for the Federal Circuit, it was universally thought that methods of doing business and conducting business were not among the statutory items that could be patented. Before that case, everybody would keep their methods of doing or conducting business as secret as they could and never tried to patent them. In recognition of this pioneer clarification in the law, we felt that those who kept their methods as secret as they could and never tried to patent them. We, therefore, limited the first inventor defense solely to that class of rights dealing with “methods of doing or conducting business.” It is distinctly to be understood that we do not intend to create first inventor defense or prior user rights for any other process, method, product, or other statutory recognized class of patentable rights, which in fact had been included in the original legislation, but which had been stricken upon agreement of all the parties on this legislation.

Second, with regard to title V—Optional Inter Partes Reexamination Procedure: We clearly retain the present existing ex parte reexamination rules without change, Chapter 30 of title 35, United States Code. In addition we added an optional inter partes reexamination procedure, which, if selected by a third party requestor, would entitle that requestor to participate by filing written documents within the Patent Office only, and would bar the requestor from appealing to the Federal Court of Appeals of the Federal Circuit if the Patent Office decided the patent reexamination in favor of the inventor. In selecting this optional inter partes procedure, however, the requestor would be bound by the decision of the Patent Office and estopped (or prohibited) to contest the decision in any other civil action outside the Patent Office.

This means fairness for everybody. For the inventor who has a request for reexamination filed against him in the present ex parte reexamination process, he still has the same rights as he does under the present law: (a) the third party has to rely on his initial written documents and cannot participate in the discussion between the inventor and the patent office; (b) the third party has no right to appeal in the event he loses his challenge; and (c) if the inventor loses, he still maintains his right to appeal to the Court of Appeals.

For the third party, he may either proceed under the present law, as outlined above, or have the option to file under the inter partes reexamination procedure, and file further documents (as opposed to just the initial document) and thus participate in the proceedings in the patent office, but with no right to a court appeal if the Patent Office decides against him, and with an estoppel (prohibition) against his challenging the Patent Office decision in any forum.

With regard to title VI—Patent and Trademark Office, we are proud to say that the sole mission of the Patent Office is to protect intellectual property of the inventor and to that end, the title lets the Patent Office retain and use for its purposes all the revenues and receipts. This means the Patent Office will have additional funds to retain professional staff, provide increase training and facilities, and make the patent system as affordable as possible to receive.

Ms. LOFGREN. Mr. Speaker, how much time is remaining?

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MILLER of Florida). The gentleman from California (Ms. LOFGREN) has 4 minutes remaining. The gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. COBLE) has 3 minutes remaining.

Ms. LOFGREN. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, the American Inventors Protection Act of 1999 revamps our patent system so it is ready to meet the challenge of our Nation’s high-tech industry and the global economy.

We had a spirited debate in the last Congress on our predecessor bill, H.R. 400. While H.R. 400 did pass the House, it died in the Senate. This year I believe we made the changes that meet the concerns raised during the floor debate in committee.

The bill was first published as a committee print so everyone could make known their objections and so final details could be carefully considered before the bill’s formal introduction.

Now that the Subcommittee on Courts and Intellectual Property has favorably reported the result of that effort, as has the full committee, I encourage support of the bill.

It requires early publication of our foreign competitors’ technology, it protects American investors from unscrupulous invention promoters, it protects domestic manufacturers and jobs from late-filed and issuing patents, half of which are foreign owned, it provides an inexpensive and efficient system for challenging improvidently granted patents, and it gives the Patent and Trademark Office operational flexibility that it needs.

Under this bill, no U.S. inventor who seeks patent protection only in the United States will have to publish their patent application, that is, if they wish to maintain their invention’s secrecy.

But a U.S. inventor will get to see what foreign competitors are seeking to patent here more than a full year earlier than is the case under current law.

While the administrative procedure for testing patents in the PTO by expert examiners will be made fairer, thus enhancing its utility, a number of safeguards have been added to ensure that patentees, especially those of limited financial means, will not be harassed or otherwise subject to predatory tactics.

In addition to the PTO’s being reorganized into a performance-based organization, the creation of the statutory advisory committee will be of value both to the Congress, the President, and the public.

This Act will strengthen our Nation’s technological leadership, protect American workers, and reduce the cost of obtaining and enforcing patents in the United States.

When I stood earlier this evening, I expressed reservations about the changes that were made in the bill between reporting, I would say unanimously by the full committee, and report of the bill today.

As I mentioned, legislating is like making sausage. There are many aspects that are not delightful, but I would note that the changes that have been made as explained by the chairman are really discrete ones.

As the gentleman from California (Mr. ROHRABACHER) pointed out, the bulk of this bill is exactly what was reported by the committee. It has been available changes, support the bill. I urge that my colleagues would support the bill. I hope that the Senate will act swiftly to get this long overdue measure enacted into law.

Mr. COBLE. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I say to the gentlewoman from Ohio (Ms. KAPTUR) I did not yield to her earlier because I did not have the time; and the gentlewoman from California (Ms. LOFGREN) did yield 10 minutes, so I do not think anybody was cutting anybody off.

Much has been said about coming home tonight. Last night, this bill was on the calendar. But in an effort to make yet more changes for the independent inventors, we are here tonight, almost at the bewitching hour. Fifty-five cosponsors, Mr. Speaker, nine hearings have been conducted, 90 witnesses have been before three sessions of Congress.

No, this is not a Johnny-come-lately. This is not a guy who came to the party at midnight. We know this visitor. This visitor is well known to all of us.

Let me tell my colleagues, Mr. Speaker, who sponsors it, who supports the bill: Inventors Digest and independent inventor Robert Rines, I mentioned the gentleman from California.
The gentleman from Ohio (Ms. KAPTUR) said, well, there is only four or five. Well, this is representative government. We cannot have 435 out here. This is representative. If we get a sampling of a dozen people, we have gotten a good input.

The gentleman from Missouri (Mr. GEPHARDT), the majority leader. Both parties, Republican and Democrat, have high-tech agendas, and this matter is on both those agendas. Patent Coalition, major associations involved in intellectual property. Bipartisan and unanimous support of members of the Subcommittee on Intellectual Property and the Committee on the Judiciary.

I think the significant feature here, Mr. Speaker, is that intellectual property is so obviously important to the well-being of our economy, and it is in here, so I would be amazed if she did not be smiling as if he is in our corner.

I want to thank the gentlewoman from California (Ms. LOFGREN) for her effort tonight. I want to thank the gentleman from Illinois (Chairman HYDE), the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. COX), the ranking member, the Democrats and Republicans alike who sat on our subcommittee.

I am proud of what we have done. I am happy to have our converts over from last year who opposed us. We embrace another one now. I think we are on our way. Even the Whip appears to be smiling as if he is in our corner.

I want to echo what the gentlewoman from California (Ms. LOFGREN) said. Let us pass this to the Senate. Let the Senate, the other body, act with dispatch, and let us get this into law for the benefit of America generally and the inventing community specifically.

Mr. ROHRABACHER, Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. COBLE. Mr. Speaker, I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. ROHRABACHER. Mr. Speaker, I think we should pay tribute also to the gentlewoman from Ohio (Ms. KAPTUR) who has put a lot work in on this. When she reads all of this, she is going to be so happy with this bill.

The gentleman from North Carolina (Chairman COBLE) has done a good job, and the gentlewoman from Ohio (Ms. KAPTUR) is going to be happy with it.

Mr. COBLE. Mr. Speaker, I say to the gentleman, I hope she will be happy because her study report is in the bill. Most of what the gentlewoman wanted is in here, so I would be amazed if she was not happy.

Mrs. KAPTUR. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of H.R. 1907, the American Inventors Protection Act, legislation which might be more aptly titled the "Keep America Competi-suffer from delays at PTO that are not their fault. In view of the strong support of a wide range of associations and interests, including a very large number of Fortune 500 companies, the Biotechnology Industry Association, the Computer and Communications Industry Association, the Pharmaceutical Research and Manufacturers Association, the Business Software Alliance, the National Association of Manufacturers—why even the Indiana Manufacturers Association—the obstacles that have been thrown up to our efforts to get this bill scheduled for consideration are very hard to understand. While I supported earlier versions of this legislation, including H.R. 400 as approved by our Committee last year, I am always loathe to make the best enemy of the good. Today's legislation has won broader support than previous versions of this legislation, and I salute my colleagues from North Carolina and his staff for their patience and persistence in bringing us a giant step closer today to our mutual goal of patent reform.

I strongly support this bill, and urge my colleagues to do so as well. Mr. DOOLEY of California. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of H.R. 1907, the American Inventors Protection Act. The bill, introduced by Representatives COBLE and Berman, and now cosponsored by a bipartisan coalition, will provide much needed patent protection to American inventors. This bill also makes the Patent and Trademark Office (PTO) more accountable to its customers, and allows customers to recoup patent term lost during the patent process at the PTO. Without a doubt, H.R. 1907 is a pro-growth bill that would foster technological advancements without leaving the small businessperson behind. The United States is by far the world's largest producer of intellectual property. Many other nations have learned from our success, and have enacted laws targeted at protecting intellectual property developed by small businesses and industries. Major changes are needed in U.S. patent law to ensure that American inventors and businesses that are largely dependent on the development of intellectual property have the opportunity to compete and win in the global marketplace.

Enactment of this legislation is crucial to promoting growth in the New Economy and to ensuring that the competitiveness of the U.S. high-tech sector, including biotechnology will be enhanced by this bill.

The bill would require the publication of patent applications at eighteen months—a requirement that would make U.S. patent law consistent with the laws of our leading foreign competitors. Under the current two-tiered system almost 80 percent of all patent applications pending in the United States are also filed and published in other countries and printed in the language of the host country. This publication requirement means that foreign competitors may review the U.S. patent applications at eighteen months—a requirement that would make U.S. patent law consistent with the laws of our leading foreign competitors. Under the current two-tiered system almost 80 percent of all patent applications are also filed and published in other countries and printed in the language of the host country. This publication requirement means that foreign competitors may review the U.S. patent applications at eighteen months—a requirement that would make U.S. patent law consistent with the laws of our leading foreign competitors.

While the bill would provide the publication of patent applications at eighteen months—a requirement that would make U.S. patent law consistent with the laws of our leading foreign competitors. Under the current two-tiered system almost 80 percent of all patent applications are also filed and published in other countries and printed in the language of the host country. This publication requirement means that foreign competitors may review the U.S. patent applications at eighteen months—a requirement that would make U.S. patent law consistent with the laws of our leading foreign competitors.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. Cobble) that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 1907, as amended.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. COBLE. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 8 of rule XX and the Chair's prior announcement, further proceeding on this motion will be postponed.

ANNOUNCEMENT OF INTENTION TO OFFER MOTION TO INSTRUCT ON H.R. 1905, LEGISLATIVE BRANCH APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 2000

Mr. TOOMEY. Mr. Speaker, pursuant to section 7(c) of House rule XX, I hereby notify the House of my intention tomorrow to offer the following motion to instruct House conferences on H.R. 1905, making appropriations for the Legislative Branch for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2000, and for other purposes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Clerk will report the motion.

The Clerk read as follows:

Mr. TOOMEY moves that the managers on the part of the House at the conference on the disagreement votes of the two Houses on the Senate amendments to the bill H.R. 1905 be instructed to insist upon—

(1) the House provisions for the funding of the House of Representatives under title I of the bill;

(2) the Senate amendment for the funding of the Senate under title I of the bill, including funding provided under the heading "JOINT ITEMS—ARCHITECT OF THE CAPITOL—Capitol Buildings and Grounds—senate office buildings";

(3) the House provisions for the funding of Joint Items under title I of the bill, other than the funding provided under the heading "JOINT ITEMS—ARCHITECT OF THE CAPITOL—Capitol Buildings and Grounds—senate office buildings"; and

(4) the House version of title II of the bill.

SPECIAL ORDERS

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Ms. Northup). Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 6, 1999, and under a previous order of the House, the following Members will be recognized for 5 minutes each.

VACATION AND GRANTING OF SPECIAL ORDER

Mr. DELAY. Madam Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to vacate the time allotted to the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. Burton) and take it myself. The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Texas?

There was no objection.

PRESIDENT IS REWRITING HISTORY

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Delay) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. DELAY. Madam Speaker, I rise today to set the record straight. The President of the United States was in Chicago today taking all kinds of credit for the successes of the Welfare Reform Act that was passed by this Congress and signed by the President.

This President has taken a lot of credit for a lot of things over the last few years, particularly over the years that the Republicans had maintained a majority of this Congress. Frankly, Madam Speaker, I have had just enough.

This President, Madam Speaker, has not initiated one thing, one piece of legislation that he takes credit for.

2230

I will grant him that he finally signed many of the pieces of the legislation, but he has not lifted one finger to pass any of this legislation that he takes credit for through this Congress. There should be no mistake about it, the well-documented success of welfare reform is the work of the Republican majority in this Congress. Back in 1994, Republicans campaigned on a plan that included comprehensive welfare reform. The Contract With America put Republicans in control of Congress, and we delivered on our agenda. History should not be rewritten. The President and the Democrats in Congress fought Republicans tooth and nail on welfare reform. And, frankly, Madam Speaker, the debate was not very civil. My colleagues on the other side of the aisle charged that Republicans wanted to kick desperate people out on the street to fend for themselves. Our opponents on welfare reform screamed that the Republicans would be responsible for countless starving people in this country. Our opponents maintained that reforming welfare would create an unmitigated social disaster.

Well, it is time to set the record straight. Americans are not starving due to the Republican insistence for welfare reform. Americans are not sleeping on park benches due to Republican insistence on welfare reform. And without question, there have been no social upheavals of any kind as a result of the Republicans’ insistence to reform welfare.

In fact, quite the opposite is true. The results of Republican welfare reform have been so incredible that President Clinton has typically been taking credit for the success, despite the fact that he vetoed welfare reform twice before reluctantly signing it into law. That is right, President Clinton vetoed welfare reform not once but twice, and now he is trumpeting the success on his own and traveling around the country claiming all this success as being his success, his idea, his initiative.

Well, this tactic is nothing new. We are used to it. We have been used to it for 45 years now. Republicans are accustomed to working hard to initiate commonsense reforms that the Democrats oppose only to watch Democrats adopt these ideas after they succeed. Democrats even tried to take credit for the budget surplus, even though everyone knows that it was the Republican Congress who rammed the balanced budget agreement through 2 years ago.

But the American people know better. The American people understand what separates the Republican philosophy from the Democrat philosophy. The Republican philosophy wants the government to do more with less. The Republican philosophy seeks to empower communities with more local control by freeing them from the restraints of big government spending in Washington. And the Republican philosophy places ultimate trust in the individual, who, in most cases, will succeed if he is cut free from the chain of dependence.

This stands in stark contrast to the big government philosophy of the liberal Democrats. They do not trust the strength and dedication of the average American. The Democrats do not think that individuals can succeed without the government holding their hands all throughout their lives.

Well, the record speaks for itself, Madam Speaker. In the 3 years since welfare reform was passed, over 12 million Americans have moved from welfare to work. That is 12 million Americans who have moved from dependency to independence and dignity.

By December of last year, welfare rolls had dropped by 45 percent. And that is a national average. Many of the States have much higher success rates. For example, caseloads are down by 81 percent in Idaho and over 70 percent in Wisconsin. And this is very important. Child poverty rates and overall poverty rates have declined every year since welfare was reformed. Beyond any doubt, these facts show that hope for those on welfare is found in more personal responsibility not more government bureaucracy.

So, Madam Speaker, the spirit of the American people is based on the free-market, self-reliance, and combating the odds. From the beginning of this Nation, Americans of all walks of life have fought uphill battles and won. The Republicans in Congress believe in the American spirit, and that spirit, we fought so hard to reform welfare reform and we should have the credit.

The President has no right to take credit. When the going gets tough, the tough get going, and the Republican Congress is responsible for welfare reform, not the President of the United States.

REVISING HISTORY

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mrs. NORTHUP). Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. HOYER) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. HOYER. Madam Speaker, I was constrained to rise and respond to my friend, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. DELAY). The gentleman revises history. On a normal night, perhaps no one would rise to say that it was revisionist history at best, or at worst, depending upon one’s perspective.

In 1992, Bill Clinton ran for President of the United States, and he put forward a document called The New Covenant. Not a contract on America, a new covenant, a new promise, a new commitment, a new cooperation, a new working arrangement with America. And in that new covenant he said that, yes, we expect government to do good things for people.

Government, in my perspective, is our community at large trying to work together trying to make lives better. But in that new covenant, that my Republican friends so quickly forget, I am sure, Bill Clinton said that we need to expect of each American personal responsibility; that they will commit the desires to use their best talents to enhance their own lives because that, in turn, would enhance the lives of our community, if each and every one of us carried our share of the load.

It was the President, in 1992, who said that personal responsibility ought to be a key word for America’s revival. America heard that, and America elected him. And in that new covenant as well, when he talked about personal responsibility, he said we need welfare reform. I guess the Republicans forget that.

They chuckle, Madam Speaker, but I will remind my colleagues of some history, for those who were not here, when every Democrat voted for a welfare reform bill sponsored by NATHAN DEAL. Does that name ring a bell? He was a Democrat at that time, but he had a bill that we worked on that demanded personal responsibility; the expectation that if we could, we would be expected to work, because the work ethic is critical to the success of a family, of the economy, and of a society. That bill did not become law, but we had other bills.

Now, my colleagues, how many times have we all heard it complained, oh, if the President would only let us do this, if he had not been president, they could have done great things? They know that they could not possibly have overridden the veto of the President of the United States. If he had not been committed, and if he had not led the fight for welfare reform, the Republicans could not have done it. And they know that.

My friend, the majority whip, likes to say we did it, we get the credit. Very frankly, everybody in this House deserves the credit, and Americans deserve the credit, and governors deserve the credit, and State legislators deserve the credit. Why? Because we all perceived that there was a system that existed which did not encourage and have the expectation of work. But for the fact that Bill Clinton was president and that effort, it could not have happened because he could have vetoed it. And all of my colleagues know that his veto would have been sustained because there were more than 146 Democrats in this House and more than 40 Democrats in the United States Senate.

Now, let me go on to balancing the budget. Frankly, my colleagues, what the Republican Party has been responsible for since I have been in Congress, is the gargantuan deficits and debt that confronts our country. Period. Why? Because Ronald Reagan and George Bush proposed in their budgets those deficits.

Now, my Republican colleagues may say it is absurd that the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. HOYER) would say that. Well, look at the budgets. Presidents Reagan and Bush asked for more spending in those 12 years than the Congress appropriated. Now, if they did not seriously they planned for those deficits.

Now, were the priorities slightly different? They were. But the fact of the matter is Ronald Reagan never vetoed... a bill for spending too much that was not sustained by the Congress. In other words, not a nickel could have been spent in this country that Ronald Reagan did not put his signature on. Not a nickel.

So the budget balancing came at the hands of Bill Clinton, when for 7 years in a row now the budget deficit has decreased, for the first time in this century.

ALL THE ARROWS ARE DOWN

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Kansas (Mr. MORAN) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. MORAN of Kansas. Madam Speaker, I keep a board in my office that lists the cash and futures price of the major commodities grown in my home State of Kansas. An arrow next to the price indicates whether the price is up or down, and for too long now, and for more days than not, all the arrows are down.

Prices for all our major commodities grown in the State of Kansas are at historic lows. The wheat crop in Kansas is worth $500 million less this year than last, and prices for corn, soybeans, and milo paint a similar picture for the fall crops. The prices for beef and pork are depressed as well. And behind these numbers are real people. Every day, farmers and ranchers are being forced out of business and off the farm and ranch never to return.

Madam Speaker, I appreciate the statements made on Friday about the crisis in agriculture and the call upon President Clinton to work with Congress to provide relief soon. I could not agree more. We need to do something and we need to do something now.

On July 21, I introduced H.R. 2568, the Market Loss Assistance Act. H.R. 2568 would provide supplemental farm income program payments equal to 75 percent of a producer's 1999 payment under the Agricultural Market Transition Act. This is the same mechanism that Congress used last year to provide emergency relief to farm country. Today, the need is greater and more urgent than it was a year ago.

I hope the House will honor my request to consider H.R. 2568 or other disaster relief before Congress goes home for the August recess. Our farm and ranch constituents are counting on us to do the right thing and to do it sooner rather than later. Farmers need assurance that Congress and this administration will respond to the crisis. Otherwise we will lose another generation of family farmers and rural America will continue its difficult struggle.

Over the long haul there are many things that Congress can and must do to get the price arrows up on the chart and pointed in the right direction. We need to open new markets and expand trade opportunities for U.S. producers.

We need a farm policy that preserves flexibility and provides price protection. We need adequate risk management tools that enhance our competitiveness. But these are all long-term solutions to a near-term crisis.

H.R. 2568 can get assistance to farm country immediately. I ask my colleagues to join me in supporting this legislation. The time to respond is now, not later.

RESTORING THE HONOR OF JOSEPH JEFFERSON "SHOELESS JOE" JACKSON

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from South Carolina (Mr. DeMINT) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. DeMINT. Madam Speaker, this is a true story. In 1908, a textile mill worker from Greenville, South Carolina, who learned to play baseball on mill teams, made his minor league baseball debut for the Greenville Spinners. He could read or write, but he could not sure play the game. His name was Joseph Jefferson Jackson. And in my town and in my State and in baseball circles around the world, he is a legend.

During a game in his first year in the minor leagues, Joseph Jackson's feet began to hurt because of his shoes, so he took them off. He then proceeded to hit a triple, sliding into third. One of the fans in the crowd heckled him, saying he was a shoeless son of a gun. The nickname "Shoeless" stuck.

Shoeless Joe Jackson had one of the most mythical careers in baseball history.

He is mentioned among the greats: Babe Ruth, Ted Williams, Hank Aaron, Lou Gehrig. His .356 lifetime batting average achieved over a 13-year career is third only behind Ty Cobb and Rogers Hornsby.

In 1911, in his first major league season with Cleveland, Shoeless Joe batted .408, the highest batting average ever by a rookie. Traded to the Chicago White Sox in 1915, he led the team to victory in the 1917 World Series against the New York Giants.

Yet, while his name is mentioned among the greats, Joe Jackson is not with them in the baseball Hall of Fame. After the infamous 1919 Black Sox scandal, Jackson was suspended for life from the league by the commissioner of baseball.

Madam Speaker, this was a bad call. In 1919, a New York gambler allegedly bribed eight players of the Chicago White Sox, including Shoeless Joe, to throw the first and second game of the 1919 World Series. When the news came out the following year, the case was brought to criminal court.

A number of individuals, including local sportswriters and White Sox owner Charles Comisky, all testified to Jackson's innocence. After the trial he was acquitted. However, the new commissioner of baseball, Judge Kenesaw Landis, decided to ban all the players who were allegedly involved without even conducting an investigation.

If Commissioner Landis had taken some time to review the evidence, I believe he would have found that Shoeless Joe played no part in throwing the Series. It was obvious by the way he played.

In the 1919 World Series, Shoeless Joe Jackson batted .375, the highest of any player on either team. He set a World Series record with 12 hits. His fielding was flawless. He had six of the White Sox's 17 RBIs, and he hit the only homerun of the series.

A number of people from Senator Tom Harkin of Iowa to the great Ted Williams have called for Commissioner Bud Selig to review the judgment made in haste 80 years ago. I would like to add the names of every Member of this House to that list.

Shoeless Joe was undoubtedly one of the greatest to play America's favorite pastime. He worked his way up through the textile mills of South Carolina and lived the American dream. He loved the game of baseball. The time has come for the commissioner to review this record and give Joe Jackson his rightful place of honor.

When the heroes of today, McGuire, Sosa, Ripken, Griffey, and when the heroes of tomorrow who are still dreaming their dreams on little league fields and school playgrounds, when they all come to Cooperstown to be enshrined with the other greats in the baseball Hall of Fame, they deserve to be alongside one of the greatest players who ever played the game.

I think they would all want Shoeless Joe there with them. The people from my district and people from all over the country have been working for years to have Jackson's good name cleared and his honor restored.

I want to do whatever I can to give him the honor that he is due and to honor the people who have been inspired by his memory to rebuild and revitalize his hometown, West Greenville, to honor his name.

On behalf of the people of my district who have worked so hard to uphold the memory and the honor of Shoeless Joe Jackson and along with the entire South Carolina Congressional Delegation, last Friday I introduced a resolution calling for Shoeless Joe to be appropriately honored. I feel this resolution is an opportunity to pay respect to one of the all-time great players of America's great national pastime.

I urge my colleagues to support this resolution to restore the name of Shoeless Joe.
The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mrs. NORTHUP). Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from California (Mr. SHERMAN) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. SHERMAN. Madam Speaker, after 20 years as a CPA, 6 years as a tax judge, I learned when I see it. The tax bill passed by the Republican majority is truly tax fraud.

It is a giant shift of our national income to the wealthiest one percent, cleverly disguised as a grand expedition to the furthest reaches of fiscal irresponsibility.

Many speakers have come to this floor and explained how this country cannot afford to lock itself into an $800-billion tax cut exploding in its second 10 years. So a $3-trillion cut, that we should not take steps today which Alan Greenspan has cautioned us against, that we should not risk the greatest economic expansion of our lifetimes.

But after all the conversation about this $800-billion to $3-trillion tax cut and what it means in its fiscal effect, there has been precious little discussion about what is actually in the bill. Well, I will tell my colleagues what is not in it. A repeal of the marriage penalty is not in this bill. They could not find a way to do it, limited as they were to $800 billion. In fact, there is far less marriage penalty relief in this bill than there was in the Democratic alternative that cost only $250 billion.

What also is not in this bill is any real help for school construction. The Democratic alternative said we as a Federal Government would pay the interest on school bonds so that if school districts have more classrooms for smaller class sizes, the Federal Government would help.

All this bill does is relax the arbitrage rules, inviting local school boards to invest their money in debentures and derivatives and other things that caused Orange County to go bankrupt. It does nothing more for schools than give the school boards a free ticket to Las Vegas with the bond money.

So what is in this bill? How have they managed to allocate 45 percent of the benefits to the top one percent in our society? Well, for example, they have got the interest allocation rules, costing over $43 billion over 10 years that turn to major multinationals and say, if you close down your factories in the United States and invest abroad, we will cut your taxes.

But there is more. There is the modification of treatment of worthless securities, certain financial institutions. There is a whole lot of stuff in here for the oil companies. My favorite and their favorite is the repeal of special foreign tax rules.

This means that if Texaco gives a ton of money to Saudi Arabia or Kuwait in return for the oil that they remove from their desert sands, Uncle Sam reimburses them penny for penny for what they pay, that they then charge you and me for.

But there is more for the oil companies. That is the repeal of the NOL carry-forwards under a special rule; suspending the 65-percent tax limit on the percentage depletion allowance; allowing geological and geophysical costs to be deducted currently; allowing delay rental payments to be deducted currently, while modifying the section 639(d)(4) rules so that integrated oil producers can get the same benefits as independent wildcatters.

Then there is the stuff for the big oil companies like Texaco, also allowing a 5-year carry-back of NOL carry-forwards under a special rule; suspending the 65-percent tax limit on the percentage depletion allowance; allowing geological and geophysical costs to be deducted currently; allowing delay rental payments to be deducted currently, while modifying the section 639(d)(4) rules so that integrated oil producers can get the same benefits as independent wildcatters.

There is the liberalization of the tax treatment of certain construction allowances and contributions received by retail operators.

What does that mean? It means the big chains can get a big payment to put a big store as the anchor tenant in a big mall, and do they not have to pay taxes on that big payment. But of course, people have to pay taxes on salaries and small business has to pay taxes on their profit.

There is the repeal of the 5-year limitations relating to life insurance companies filing consolidated tax returns with the affiliated group including non-life-insurance companies. There is a host of others that I have no time to get into.

But then finally there is the phase-in repeal of the estate gift and generation skipping tax. What does that mean? That means that Bill Gates saves $50 billion. But what is in it for working families? For the 50 million Americans, 8 cents a day.

CHINA TRADE

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. VITTER). Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. MANZULLO) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. MANZULLO. Mr. Speaker, our relationship with China will always be extremely difficult and complex. We must continue the hard engagement process with China. But we do not need to sacrifice national security for trade. This has been and always will be a false choice.

The Cox report was a good sturdy point for us to more realistically evaluate our relationship with China. We have already begun to implement many of the Cox committee recommendations, such as requiring Defense Department monitors at satellite launch sites. Let us also be vigilant by enforcing existing laws.

If further restraints needed to enhance national security, then Congress should not shy away from changing the law. But as we go through this process, we must not fool ourselves into thinking that more restrictions on our exports to China will protect us.

When we think about trade sanctions and export controls, we should not go down this road alone. We only put our heads in the sand if we think we can enhance our national security by ignoring our foreign competitors. The world has changed and the U.S. is no longer the only manufacturer of high-technology products.

Congress overreacted 2 years ago in placing unrealistic limits on computer sales abroad. Now China has a home-grown computer industry. Soon one penny and a chip the size of your fingernail will exceed the supercomputer definition. And European machine tool manufacturers have virtually captured the high-end market in China because of our Government's export control policy. This at the same time domestic consumption of U.S. machine tools has dropped 45 percent.

Europe sells the same machines to China that we could do the same things, but we are barred by selling them because of our export policy. We only hurt ourselves.

We are now learning the same lesson on commercial satellite exports. Last week, a major satellite manufacturer reported a loss of nearly $100 million because of delays in development and delivery of new satellites. This is an industry that has made a dramatic shift away from relying on Government procurement to commercial sales.

They also compete against German, French, and Japanese satellite manufacturers of similar equipment. These foreign firms would eagerly seize export opportunities from U.S. satellite makers if they are denied permission to launch by our Government. We can protect our national security and our national economic interests by engaging China at the same time. But we should not put up walls that will block our high-technology industry and hurt our overall national interests.

We must solve the same problems highlighted in the Cox report but keep our export options open in China.

ILLEGAL NARCOTIC TRAFFICKING IN AMERICA

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. MICA) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. MICA. Mr. Speaker, I come to the floor again tonight to talk about the problem of illegal narcotics. Tonight I would like to help set the record straight.

For years and months of nearly deadly silence by the President of the United States on one of the most pressing issues facing our Nation, that is the problem of illegal narcotics use and abuse, the President spoke out yester-
He said, "When we were out there running for office in 1992, the Vice President had this hilarious rap about everything that should be down was down and everything that should be down was up, and everything was all mixed up. And it is true." And then the President said, and again let me quote him, "And one of the sad things that was up was drug use." This is what the President of the United States said yesterday.

Mr. Speaker, this does not give with the facts. In fact, we did a little bit of research and we found, and this chart states quite clearly, that long-term trends in lifetime prevalence of drug use, from 1980 when President Reagan took office, and this is the Reagan administration, through 1988, with President Bush during that period, we found that the trend in prevalence of drug use actually went down. These are the facts.

Now, again the President said, "And one of the sad things that was up was drug use." That is what the President said. These in fact, Mr. Speaker, are the statistics. These are not tainted or misconstrued in any way or partisanly presented. Those are the facts.

Then if we looked at individual narcotics, the trends in cocaine use, the President said, "And one of the sad things that was up was drug use." So we can look at drugs individually. We see that during President Reagan and Bush's era, that the point at which President Clinton took office that there was a downward spiral in cocaine use. In fact, when President Clinton took office, we see the resurgence of that in fact returning and going up. This does not show the dramatic increase in drug use. Because of the Clinton policy, we in fact had a shift of more people going not only to cocaine but also to heroin in unprecedented amounts and also to methamphetamine which did not appear on any of these charts. So what the President said, "And one of the sad things that was up was drug use" is not in any way correct or does it relate to facts.

Then if we look at heroin, in the Reagan administration and Bush administration, we see downward trends. He said, "And one of the sad things was that drug use was up." We see in fact during President Clinton's term, it dramatically shot up, and heroin, deadly heroin, in incredible quantities. I do not have a chart on methamphetamine, but meth was not even on this chart and now is staggering up. The only reason we see any change here in a downward spiral in the last several years is because of the Republicans taking over the Congress and restarting the war on drugs.

Finally, the President also said, "We tried to do more to keep drugs from coming into the United States." This is the quote of the President. I do not have all the charts with me, but under legislation by the Democrat-controlled Congress, the White House and the Senate of this other controlled legislative body, 1992 to 1993 dramatically decreased the source country programs, they cut them by over 50 percent, dramatically cut the military. He said, "We tried to do more to keep drugs from coming into the United States." Dramatically cut the military and interdiction programs. Nearly cut in half the Coast Guard drug programs, stopped antidrug resources from getting to Colombia which is now the major source of heroin and cocaine coming into the United States. And certified Mexico, which is the greatest source of illegal narcotics and now methamphetamines of anywhere coming into the United States. And our President said yesterday, "We tried to do more to keep drugs from coming into the United States."

Mr. Speaker, the President says one thing. The facts prove something totally different. It is sad that after years and years of deadly silence, we finally have the President come out in one of the rare occasions he ever mentions illegal narcotics and says two things that do not give in any fashion with the facts as to what actually took place.

It is very sad that I report this to the House, but I think that the facts relating to this important problem that is facing our Nation that has condemned so many families tragically to losing loved ones, 14,000 people died last year alone because of direct results of illegal narcotics. It is very sad, indeed, that the President of the United States paints a picture that does not give with the facts.

MANAGED CARE REFORM

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. VITTER). Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 6, 1999, the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. PALLONE) is recognized for 27 minutes as the designee of the minority leader.

Mr. PALLONE. Mr. Speaker, in just 3 days, this House will adjourn without having brought to the floor the Patients' Bill of Rights, the Democrats' legislation for comprehensive HMO reform.

I bemoan the fact that that is the case. I think that this legislation and the need to address the issue of HMO reform is really the preeminent issue that needs to be addressed in this House, in this Congress, in this session of Congress.

I have to say that the Republican leadership since the beginning of the year has made many promises with repect to the Health Care Reform and the whole issue of HMO reform. First, the Speaker said that we would follow the normal committee process and an HMO reform bill would have hearings in the relevant committees and have a markup in committee and come to the floor in the normal way, but that has not happened.

Then, as Members know, in the other body basically the Democrats forced the issue, forced the other body to bring up HMO reform. Unfortunately, this bill that was finally passed was not real reform, was ineffective, was a sham, but the impetus, if you will, that at least some sort of HMO reform would be brought up in the Senate caused the Speaker and the Republican leadership just a few weeks ago after the Senate took action and had a hearing and had a markup on the floor, basically forced the Speaker to say that a bill would come to the floor, an HMO reform bill would come to the floor in the House of Representatives sometime before the August recess.

Well, Mr. Speaker, the August recess begins probably this Friday and Democrats have basically been pushing to achieve action here on the floor for the Patients' Bill of Rights, our Democratic HMO reform. We actually had Members come to the floor over here in the well and sign a discharge petition that would force the Republican leadership to bring up our Patients' Bill of Rights. One hundred eighty-three Members signed that discharge petition. But now ultimately to no avail. The Speaker, the Republican Speaker, just announced that no action will be taken on the bill before the August recess.

I ask why? The answer, I think, is very simple. That is, because the Republican leadership here in the House as well as in the Senate is a captive of the insurance industry. The insurance industry does not want a true HMO reform, a comprehensive HMO reform, to come to the floor of the House because, unlike the other body, they realize that if it does, it will pass. Some of my colleagues, a handful of my colleagues on the other side who are health care professionals, doctors, dentists, have made the point that they will vote for a strong HMO reform bill, something akin to the Democrats' Patients' Bill of Rights. When they made that statement and basically indicated to the Republican leadership that they would join with the Democrats in passing a bill, well, all of a sudden this week we find that the Speaker and the Republican leadership say, "No, no, we're not going to bring a bill to the floor. We can wait until the fall. We'll have further discussions. No action will be taken now."

I just want to commend the Republicans on the other side of the aisle, those few, all of whom, I think, who have been most outspoken are health care professionals, doctors, because they have stood up and said that we need a strong HMO reform bill and they refuse to say that the action taken by the other body meets that need. In fact, it does not meet that need.
August 3, 1999

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE 19289

Mr. Speaker, if I could, I hope that during the August break and when we come back in September that we will see a bipartisan coalition of the Democrats, all of whom support the Patients' Bill of Rights, and enough Republicans on the other side that will come together in a bipartisan way to demand action on something like the Patients' Bill of Rights so we can have true comprehensive HMO reform come to the floor when we return in September.

Mr. Speaker, if the House leadership is not willing to bring it up, I think we will simply have to get every Democrat to sign the discharge petition and join with some of the Republicans who are willing to sign it to force the issue to make sure that the Patients' Bill of Rights or some strong comprehensive reform like it comes to the floor.

As now, Mr. Speaker, I just wanted to point out that increasingly we are seeing every comprehensive report, every study that is being done around the country about what the American people want, what the health professionals want, what people see basically as common sense reform with regard to HMOs, that we need some kind of action taken.

There were two reports that came out just in the last week that I wanted to mention tonight. One of them was basically a report, if you will, where various doctors and health care professionals were interviewed. It was a survey that found nearly nine in 10 doctors and more than one in four consumers are having trouble receiving the medical care and services they need within the context of HMOs managed care, and as a result between one-third and two-thirds of the doctors said the service denial resulted in adverse health consequences for the patient.

The types of problems that we are seeing that myself and others have documented on the floor about people who have had abusive situations with managed care and with HMOs, this is becoming commonplace, and both consumers, patients as well as doctors, are decrying the situation, and I say to my colleagues and, I guess, to the American people as well, why is it that the Republican leadership will not allow us to take action when the majority of us in a bipartisan way would like to see comprehensive HMO reform? And it always comes back to the same thing, and that is the money spent by the insurance industry against this type of comprehensive HMO reform.

The second survey that came out in the last week or so basically said that last year 1.4 to $2 billion was paid to lobbyists to influence politicians and policy, a 13 percent increase from 1997; and for the second year in a row the insurance industry topped the list in lobbying costs, nearly $203 million last year.

The Republicans basically on the leadership or amongst the Republican leadership are bowing to the insurance industry which is spending millions of dollars once again trying to defeat true HMO reform.

Mr. Speaker, I just wanted to, if I could, make reference to a New York Times editorial that was in the New York Times on July 16 of this year, and it just kind of sums up what is happening out there and why we cannot see action on the House floor, and I quote. It says:

"There is no mystery here. Campaign money is dictating medical policy in the Senate. The political system and especially the Republican party is in deep disharmony with the health care industry. As President Clinton said yesterday, and this was back on July 16, GOP senators could not support the Patients’ Bill of Rights because the health insurers will not let them do so. That is the bottom line, Mr. Speaker."

Mr. Speaker, if I could just use a couple minutes of my time to talk about some of the comparisons between the Patients’ Bill of Rights, the bill that the Democrats and some of the Republicans want to bring to the floor versus the bill that passed the Senate and the one that would have been considered, I believe, on the floor pursuant to the Republican leadership if they thought that they could get the votes to pass it. There is a real contrast, if you will, between that Republican Senate bill and the Democratic Patients' Bill of Rights, and let me just go through a few highlights of it, if I could this evening.

I just wanted to mention a couple other things that I think that are really crucial in terms of the differences between the Democratic bill and what the Republicans passed in the Senate, and one of those most important differences is on the issue of medical necessity. The issue of medical necessity is basically whether or not a particular type of care, operation, equipment, length of stay in the hospital will be provided in a given circumstance if you get sick, and basically the Republican Senate bill allows HMOs to define what is medically necessary. No matter how narrow or unfair to patients, the HMO's definition is their definition controls in any coverage situation including decisions by an independent third-party reviewer.

The Democratic bill by contrast codifies a traditional definition of medically necessary or appropriate means of service or benefit consistent with generally accepted principles of professional medical practice. In other words, what we are saying in the Patients’ Bill of Rights is that the doctor and the patient have to decide based on standards that are used for most physicians in a given circumstance. It is an independent standard, you will not defined by the HMO.

Most important also, the distinction on the issue of external appeals. The Republican Senate bill allows the HMO to choose and pay the appeal entity that decides the case. It also allows the HMO to be insured to define medical necessity, and if a specialist is denied, no appeal is allowed.

The Democratic Patients’ Bill of Rights by contrast ensures the State or Federal agency controls the process for choosing the independent appeal entity, not the insurer.

It ensures a de novo review, a fresh look at the facts. It ensures the reviewer’s decision is based on a statutory definition of medical necessity, not the insurer’s plan’s definition, and the review of best available medical evidence, and all denials of care are appealable.

Finally, the most important distinction between the Democratic Patients’ Bill of Rights and the Republican Senate bill is the ability to hold HMOs accountable. Under the Republican bill, it maintains existing Federal law that basically preempts state remedies, and the only remedy under ERISA, which is the federally covered plans, is recovery of the cost of the denied benefit.

For example, if a patient is denied a mammogram and dies of breast cancer as a result, the only remedy under the Republican bill available to the family is the recovery of the costs of the mammogram, not the damages that result, including the death of the patient.

Under the Democratic bill, by contrast, ERISA preemption is repealed, and you can go to State court and you can seek damages and you can recover for the damages that the HMO has inflicted, just like you would in any normal tort action.

Mr. Speaker, I think that there are crucial differences here, and I think that ultimately what it comes down to is money. It is a very sad day, but what we are seeing is the insurers increasingly spending a lot of money on TV trying to get the word out that somehow what we are trying to do with the Patients’ Bill of Rights is not going to work, that it is going to cost more money, that it is not going to achieve the desired result.

The fact of the matter is that the American people are crying out for comprehensive HMO reform. They want to see something like the Patients’ Bill of Rights passed. Again, I want to commend some of my Republican colleagues, particularly the physicians on the other side of the aisle who are saying, you know, we are practicing doctors. We see what happens. We know that there are abuses, and we want strong HMO reform passed, something like the Democratic bill, and we will work together with the Democrats to achieve a bipartisan proposal.

If I could conclude tonight, I always like to talk when I come to the floor about local people in my part of New Jersey who have had problems with HMOs, because that is really what it is all about. We are talking a little bit in the abstract here about what needs to be done, but the bottom line is it is our own constituents coming to us and saying we need HMO reform, we need something done because of what is happening to them.

If I could conclude tonight with a letter that was in the Asbury Park press, which is the largest circulation daily in my district in Monmouth County, New Jersey, and this was in the Asbury Park Press, a letter to the editor on Thursday, July 15, from Jack Moriart of Point Pleasant, I am going to read part of it because I think it is so telling.

He says, “Each time I must deal with my health maintenance organization on any matter other than the routine and the basic, problems continue. This is a system designed and managed to restrict our access to medical care and to place roadblocks in our way as we attempt to circumvent that design feature.”

On July 6th I sustained an eye injury while swimming when a thumb with sharpened fingernail found its way into my eye. I stopped the bleeding, applied ice and went to bed. This morning there was blood on the pillow, the pain was intensified, and my vision was blurred. I reasoned this required an objective medical evaluation to ensure there was no permanent damage. Thus began my hassle for the day.

What followed was more than a dozen telephone calls to various medical professionals and administrators to get an appointment to go to the doctor and secure the required referral for them to be paid. I knew what had to be done, but what is the justification for wasting my time and causing me anxiety and aggravation? As a professional, if I am not working, I am not being paid. Consequently, the very real financial loss I endure by sitting in a waiting room makes me choose the medical visit option only as a last resort.

That day I wasted additional time and resources playing phone tag all around the country trying to get some paperworkpushing clerk to give me permission to do what I knew to be right. And, by the way, we pay for this, which is what truly amazes me.

What should we do? I suggest we all write to our State and Federal elected officials demanding that they return the right of self-determination to us by passing the Patients’ Bill of Rights and similar state statutes. It is no wonder the doctors are unionizing. Perhaps the patients should too.

He was talking about an eye injury, but we just know that with the case of eye injury or so many other serious problems that people face the same reality.

All I am really saying tonight, Mr. Speaker, because this may be the last opportunity we get to talk about this before the August break is to bring up the Patients’ Bill of Rights. Let us bring up HMO reform. Let those Democrats and those Republicans, and I see my colleague is going to come after me, the gentleman from Iowa (Mr. GANSKE), let us put together a bill I think that is very close to the Patients’ Bill of Rights that really provides comprehensive HMO reform. This is what the public wants, this is what we keep hearing every day from our constituents, and I know that I am going to use the time during this August break to go out and explain to the public why we need to bring this up on the floor of the House when we come back in September.

If I could conclude when I see people like my colleague, the gentleman from Iowa (Mr. GANSKE) and others on the Republican side that are demanding that we take action, that when we come back in September, either through the means of a discharge petition or because the Republican leadership finally sees they have to do something, that we will see comprehensive HMO reform. But I am not going to rest, and I know the gentleman from Iowa (Mr. GANSKE) and a lot of us are not going to rest until that happens.

MANAGED CARE REFORM

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. VITTER). Under the Speaker’s announced policy of January 6, 1999, the gentleman from Iowa (Mr. GANSKE) is recognized for 34 minutes as the desigee of the majority leader.

Mr. GANSKE. Mr. Speaker, here it is, about 10 o’clock in the evening. People like to talk when I come to the floor about local people in my part of New Jersey who have problems with managed care. I am going to try to explain why we need to bring this up on the floor tonight.

Several years ago, a joke started going around the country about the three doctors who died and went to heaven. The first doctor was a neurosurgeon. St. Peter asked him, “What did you do for a living?” He said, “I took care of victims of automobile crashes who had injured their heads before I got them back to a normal life.” St. Peter said, “Enter, my son, and enjoy heaven.”

The next doctor who came up to the pearly gates was asked by St. Peter...
August 3, 1999

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE

what he did. She said, “I was a heart surgeon and I took care of people who were having heart attacks and managed to keep them alive so that they could spend time with their families.” St. Peter said, “Enter, my daughter, and enjoy heaven.”

The third doctor who came up to the Pearly Gates was asked by St. Peter, “What is your name?” He said, “I was an HMO manager.” St. Peter kind of stroked his beard and he said, “Son, you may enter, but only for 3 days.”

Now, everyone has heard that joke. Why is that funny? Well, number one, because there is a kernel of truth in it and there is a twist. All of us who have had to deal with managed care, and as a physician I certainly have in advocating for my patients, knows that managed care has put severe time limits on whether patients can stay in the hospital. We will talk about some of those examples.

Now it is sort of funny that this HMO manager is going to get his comeuppance. I think that is part of the humor.

The humor of HMOs, in order for something to be humorous, people have to understand the underlying point. So let us just look, for example, at some of the cartoons that we have seen around the country.

Here is one. We see a doctor sitting at a desk. He is reading a paper. Behind him is an eye chart that says “enough is enough.” and the doctor is saying, “Your best option is cremation, $359 fully covered.” The patient, sort of around the country.

So what happened? Well, I and the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. MARKEY) in a bipartisan fashion introduced a bill called the Patient Right To Know Act. This was about 3 years ago now, 285 bipartisan co-sponsors.

We discussed some suspension bills here tonight. Just with the cosponsors alone, we could have brought that to the floor and passed it under suspension. Not to be. I could not get my leadership to allow that limited bill with such widespread bipartisan support there that the problem that HMOs were limiting communications between the doctors and their patients. I could not get the leadership to allow that to be voted on and debated on the floor.

Well, let us go back to some of the humor that has gone on about HMOs. Remember the movie “As Good As It Gets”? I went with my wife to this movie in Des Moines, Iowa, and something happened I had never seen before. When Helen Hunt was describing the care that her HMO gave in the movie, and that is what we have with HMOs? Well, it is not funny anymore. Let us go to the case of a lady whose story was written in an article in a couple years ago, well documented.

This lady is no longer alive. Her HMO made a medical decision to try to limit her and her family, her husband, from knowing all of her treatment options. They put a lot of pressure on the medical center to prevent and actually change their opinion on what kind of treatment this patient should have.

This lady could be alive today as a mother to her children and a wife to her husband had not that HMO made a medical decision that limited the information that she got. Not so funny anymore.

So what happened? Well, I and the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. MARKEY) in a bipartisan fashion reached across the aisle, and we got about 285 co-sponsors to sign a bill called the Patient Right To Know Act. This was about 3 years ago now, 285 bipartisan co-sponsors.

Now, there certainly is such a thing as black humor, and this cartoon has some of the blackest humor I have seen. What we have here is a medical reviewer at an HMO, and I am going to read this for my colleagues. She is speaking on the telephone.

“St. Peter said, ‘Cuddly Care HMO. My name is Bambi. How may I help you?’”

She continues speaking on the phone. “Oh, you are at the emergency room and your husband needs approval for treatment. He is gasping? Whishing? Eyed roiled back in his head? It does not sound all that serious to me.,” she says.

Far side. She says, “Clutching his throat? Turning purple? Uh-huh. Have you tried an inhaler? Oh, he is dead? Well, then he certainly does not need treatment, does he?”

Her last comment is, “People are always trying to rip us off.” Pretty black humor.

But let us talk about a real case. Let us talk about this young woman who, about a year and a half ago was hiking in the Appalachian Mountains. She fell off a 40-foot cliff. She was lying at the bottom of that cliff with a broken skull, a broken arm, a broken pelvis, semi-comatose, almost drowning in a pool of water.

Fortunately, her boyfriend was able to get an air ambulance in. They took her to the hospital. Here she is all bundled up on the stretcher going to airlift her to the hospital.

She makes it to the hospital emergency room. She is stabilized. She is treated. She is in the hospital for a month or so, in the ICU for a couple of weeks. She is on a morphine drip. Those are pretty painful problems that she had. Plus she has broken her head. She has got a fractured skull.

What happens to this young woman? Her HMO refuses to pay the bill. Now, why is that? Well, the HMO said that she did not call ahead for prior authorization. I mean, think of that. She was supposed to know that she was going to fall off this cliff. Maybe when she is lying at the bottom of the cliff with the broken skull, a broken arm, and a broken pelvis, she is supposed to reach into her coat pocket with her non-folded phone, dial a 1–800 number and say, "Bambi at 2340, dials up on the stretcher going to airlift into her telephone, "No, we don't authorize that specialist." Then she goes on, "No, we don't cover that operation." Then she says, "No, we don't pay for that medication." Then, apparently the person on the other end of the line says something where she kind of jorks, and she says, "No, we don't authorize that for that medication." Then she says, "Are you saying I'm paranoid?" The HMO employee says, "Yes, but we can treat it in three visits."

Now, my colleagues may think that this is kind of funny, but as a plastic and reconstructive surgeon, I took care of patients with this type of defect. This is a little child born with a cleft lip and a cleft palate. Now, the standard treatment for correction of this child's cleft palate is a surgical repair. That gets the roof of the mouth together so that this child can learn to speak normally. It also keeps food and liquids from going out his nose. That is standard treatment.

Do my colleagues know what some HMOs are doing now? They are writing into their contract language a definition of medical necessity that says we will only authorize payment for the cheapest, least expensive care. Under Federal law they can do that and nobody has complained. Considering how Congress passed a law about 25 years ago called ERISA, and what it did for employers, it is still holding true. It was supposed to provide proper oversight for health plans.

And so we have this law that Congress created that basically left a vacuum. State insurance commissioners and State legislatures, they do not have much to say about plans that are offered by employers. We talk a lot as Republicans about devolving power back to the States, but I have not seen my leadership too much interested in making sure that the States can provide proper oversight for health plans.

And so we have this law that Congress passed a law about 25 years ago called ERISA, and what it did for employers plans was it took them out of State oversight.

State insurance commissioners and State legislatures, they do not have much to say about plans that are offered by employers. We talk a lot as Republicans about devolving power back to the States, but I have not seen my leadership too much interested in making sure that the States can provide proper oversight for health plans.

So, why did the HMO make that decision? I mean that is the type of thing that we do not need to see; that we need to fix. And we need to fix it because Congress passed a law about 25 years ago called ERISA, and what it did for employers plans was it took them out of State oversight.

State insurance commissioners and State legislatures, they do not have much to say about plans that are offered by employers. We talk a lot as Republicans about devolving power back to the States, but I have not seen my leadership too much interested in making sure that the States can provide proper oversight for health plans.

And so we have this law that Congress passed a law about 25 years ago called ERISA, and what it did for employers plans was it took them out of State oversight.
Once again we are getting into a little bit more black humor. Because here we have a case, the operating room. We have the doctors here and the doctor is speaking, "scalpel," and the HMO bean counter says, "pocket knife." And then the doctor says, "suture," and the HMO bean counter says, "Band-Aid." And the doctor says, "Let us get him into intensive care." And the HMO ben- tonite says, "Call a cab."

But here is a real story, front page headlines, New York Post: "HMO's Cruel Rules Leave Her Dying for the Doc She Needs." All of a sudden it is not so funny anymore. Because now we have a picture of a person who has probably lost her life because of an HMO medical decision, which, by the way, under Federal law, an employer plan is not liable for the consequences of the medical decision, providing the cost of care not delivered. And if the patient happens to die early, then they are not responsible for anything.

Well, Mr. Speaker, it is getting kind of late. I want to talk about two more patients. I want to talk about a conversation I had about a year ago with a pediatrician who worked in the Washington, D.C. area. She is now doing research at one of the national labs.

I asked her why she left the practice of medicine. She was a pediatric specialist in a pediatric ICU. And she said, well, I just got past the point of being able to deal with those HMOs anymore. But the straw that really broke my back was one day we had come into the intensive care unit a 5- or 6-year-old boy who had been drowning. He was still alive but just barely. We had him hooked up to the ventilator. We had him plugged into the IV. We were giving him all the medicines that we could to try to save his life. We were standing around the bedside. It was not looking good. But we were expending every effort to try to save this child's life. And the phone rings in the ICU and it is some HMO reviewer a thousand miles away wanting to know about the case, probably looking at a computer screen and an algorithm, and the questioning went sort of like this: Well, tell me about this young patient. Oh, what is his name? Well, he is on the ventilator. Well, what is his prognosis? The doctor says, well, it is not too good. We are trying to do everything to save his life. He has only been here an hour or so.

This HMO reviewer from a thousand miles away, never having seen this patient, then says this incredible thing, probably looking at that computer screen, on the ventilator, poor prognosis. Next suggestion from the HMO, one of these HMO guidelines: Well, if his prognosis is so bad, why do you not just send him home on a home ventilation? And if this little boy will never play basketball, I will tell the Speaker of the House that that little boy will never wrestle. When this little boy grows up and marries the woman that he loves, he will never be able to caress her cheek with his hand.

Do my colleagues know what the opponents of this patient protection legislation say? They say this is just an anecdote; we should not legislate on the basis of anecdotes.

I would say to them, this little anecdote, if he had a finger and you pricked it, it would bleed. And do my colleagues know that, under Federal law, that HMO which made that medical decision is liable for nothing.

Is that justice? Is that fair? We need to change that law to encourage HMOs not to cut corners like this so that we do not end up having to cut off hands and feet.

A judge reviewed this case and the HMO's decision and came to the determination that that HMO's margin of safety was "razor thin." I would add to that, as razor thin as the scalpel that had to amputate little Jimmy's hands and feet.

My colleagues, as my colleague from New Jersey pointed out, for years now we have been trying to get this to the floor for a fair debate. We had a rigged debate last year with a fig leaf bill.

I am telling my friends on both sides of the aisle that there are Republicans and there are Democrats that have come together and we are working on a bipartisan bill. We will introduce that soon, and we will do everything we can with more than a majority of the Members of this House to bring this to the floor and to correct these types of anecdotes.

I would encourage my friends on the Republican side of the aisle to contact myself or the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. Norwood), the Georgia bulldog, who has done as much as anyone to advance this, or my friends on the Democratic side of the aisle, to contact the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. Pallone) or the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. Dingell) and get on board this bipartisan effort.

The only way we are going to solve this is to work together, both Republicans and Democrats, put aside partisan differences, and fix this for the people in our country.

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE

REQUEST FOR CONSIDERATION OF S. 1467, EXTENSION OF AIRPORT IMPROVEMENT PROGRAM

Mr. SHUSTER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the
CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE
August 3, 1999

S. 880. An act to amend the Clean Air Act to remove air toxics and fuels from the list of substances with respect to which reporting and other activities are required under the risk management plan program, and for other purposes.

ADJOURNMENT
Mr. GANSKE. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 11 o'clock and 59 minutes p.m.), the House adjourned until tomorrow, Wednesday, August 4, 1999, at 10 a.m.

EXECUTIVE COMMUNICATIONS, ETC.

Under clause 8 of rule XII, executive communications were taken from the Speaker's table and referred as follows:

3381. A letter from the Secretary of Agriculture, transmitting the annual Animal Welfare Enforcement Report for fiscal year 1998, pursuant to 7 U.S.C. 2155; to the Committee on Agriculture.

3382. A letter from the Acting Administrator, Agricultural Marketing Service, Department of Agriculture, transmitting the Department's final rule—Tart Cherries Grown in a Designated Area of Southeastern California and Import Requirements (RIN: 2070–AB78) received July 14, 1999, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Agriculture.

3383. A letter from the Administrator, Agricultural Marketing Service, Department of Agriculture, transmitting the Department's final rule—Licensing Requirements for Dogs and Cats (Docket No. 97–014–1) (RIN: 0579–AB96) received July 16, 1999, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Agriculture.

3385. A letter from the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development, transmitting the Final Rule—Risk Management Plan Program, and for other purposes. (The following Members (at the request of Mr. HOYER) to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material:

S. 358. A letter from the Assistant Secretary for Community Development (CDBG) Program; Clarification of the Nature of Required
CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE

August 3, 1999

3398. A letter from the President and Chairman, Export-Import Bank, transmitting a report involving U.S. exports to China, pursuant to 12 U.S.C. 635(b)(3)(i); to the Committee on Banking and Financial Services.

3399. A letter from the President and Chairman, Export-Import Bank, transmitting a report involving U.S. exports to Taiwan, pursuant to 12 U.S.C. 635(b)(3)(i); to the Committee on Banking and Financial Services.

3403. A letter from the Chairman, Federal Reserve System, transmitting the Board’s mid-year Monetary Policy Report, pursuant to 12 U.S.C. 225a; to the Committee on Banking and Financial Services.

3404. A letter from the Director, Office of Management and Budget, transmitting a report to Congress on appropriations legislation within seven days of enactment; to the Committee on the Budget.

3405. A letter from the Assistant Attorney General, Office of Justice Programs, Violence Against Women Office, Department of Justice, transmitting the Department’s final rule—Grant Violent Crime Victims Assistance Program—Violence Against Women on Campuses (RIN: 1121–AA49) received July 20, 1999, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Education and the Workforce.

3407. A letter from the General Counsel, Consumer Product Safety Commission, transmitting the Commission’s final rule—Requirements for Child Resistant Packaging; Households Products Containing Methacrylic Acid—received July 26, 1999, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Commerce.

3408. A letter from the Assistant General Counsel for Regulatory Law, Department of Energy, transmitting the Occupational ALARA Program Guide; to the Committee on Commerce.

3409. A letter from the Acting Assistant General Counsel for Regulatory Law, Department of Energy, transmitting the Management and Administration of Radiation Protection Programs Guide; to the Committee on Commerce.

3411. A letter from the Acting Assistant General Counsel for Regulatory Law, Department of Energy, transmitting the Management and Administration of Radiation Protection Programs Guide; to the Committee on Commerce.

3412. A letter from the Assistant General Counsel for Regulatory Law, Department of Energy, transmitting an Acquisition Letter for Consolidum Buying; to the Committee on Commerce.

3413. A letter from the Acting Assistant General Counsel for Regulatory Law, Department of Energy, transmitting an Assessment; to the Committee on Commerce.

3415. A letter from the Senior Attorney, NHTSA, Department of Transportation, transmitting the Department’s final rule—Civil Penalties [Docket No. NHTSA-99–5448; Notice 2] (RIN: 2127–AH48) received July 9, 1999, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Commerce.

3416. A letter from the Director, Office of Regulatory Management and Information, Environmental Protection Agency, transmitting the Agency’s final rule—Approval and Promulgation of Implementation Plans; California State Implementation Plan Revision, Kern County Air Pollution Control District; Mojave Desert Air Quality Management District; Ventura County Air Pollution Control District (CA 155–153a; FRL–6378–7) received July 14, 1999, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Commerce.

3419. A letter from the Director, Office of Regulatory Management and Information, Environmental Protection Agency, transmitting the Agency’s final rule—Approval and Promulgation of Air Quality Implementation Plans; West Virginia—Approval of Revisions to Air Pollution Control Plans and Coal Handling Operations [WV016–6010a; FRL–6372–3] received July 9, 1999, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Commerce.

3420. A letter from the Secretary, Federal Trade Commission, transmitting the Commission’s Final Rule—Cigarette Sales and Advertising and Promotional Expenditures for Calendar Years 1996 and 1997; to the Committee on Commerce.

3421. A letter from the Acting Director, Regulations Policy and Management Staff, Food and Drug Administration, transmitting the Administration’s final rule— Secondary Disaster or Event Refunds for Human Consumption [Docket No. 98P–0984] received July 26, 1999, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Commerce.

3422. A letter from the Acting Director, Civilian Nuclear Security Programs, Nuclear Regulatory Commission, transmitting the 1997 annual report as required by the Energy Reorganization Act of 1974; to the Committee on Commerce.

3423. A letter from the Secretary of Health and Human Services, transmitting the sixteenth annual report to Congress of the Orphan Drug Board (ODB), pursuant to 42 U.S.C. 236(e); to the Committee on Commerce.

3425. A letter from the Director, Defense Security Cooperation Agency, transmitting notification concerning the Department of the Army’s Proposed Letter(s) of Offer and Acceptance (LOA) to Egypt for defense articles and services (Transmittal No. 99–20), pursuant to 22 U.S.C. 2776(b); to the Committee on International Relations.

3426. A letter from the Acting Director, Defense Security Cooperation Agency, transmitting notification concerning the Department of the Army’s Proposed Letter(s) of Offer and Acceptance (LOA) to Egypt for defense articles and services (Transmittal No. 99–25), pursuant to 22 U.S.C. 2776(b); to the Committee on International Relations.

3427. A letter from the Assistant Secretary for Legislative Affairs, Department of State, transmitting certification of a proposed license for the export of defense articles or defense services to French Guinea (Transmittal No. DTC 74–99), pursuant to 22 U.S.C. 2776(c); to the Committee on International Relations.

3428. A letter from the Assistant Secretary for Legislative Affairs, Department of State, transmitting certification of a proposed license for the export of defense articles or defense services sold under a contract to Turkey (Transmittal No. DTC 80–99), pursuant to 22 U.S.C. 2776(c); to the Committee on International Relations.

3429. A letter from the Assistant Secretary for Legislative Affairs, Department of State, transmitting certification of a proposed license for the export of defense articles or defense services under a contract to Spain (Transmittal No. DTC 2–99), pursuant to 22 U.S.C. 2776(d); to the Committee on International Relations.

3430. A letter from the Assistant Secretary for Legislative Affairs, Department of State, transmitting certification of a proposed license for the export of defense articles or defense services under a contract to Japan (Transmittal No. DTC 78–99), pursuant to 22 U.S.C. 2776(c); to the Committee on International Relations.

3431. A letter from the Assistant Secretary for Legislative Affairs, Department of State, transmitting notification of a proposed license for the export of defense articles or defense services under a contract to Japan (Transmittal No. DTC 80–99), pursuant to 22 U.S.C. 2776(c); to the Committee on International Relations.

3432. A letter from the Acting Deputy Secretary for Legislative Affairs, Department of State, transmitting certification of a proposed license for the export of defense articles or defense services to the Government of the People’s Republic of China (Transmittal No. DTC 0–99), pursuant to 22 U.S.C. 2776(c); to the Committee on International Relations.

3433. A letter from the Acting Deputy Secretary for Legislative Affairs, Department of State, transmitting notification of a proposed license for the export of defense articles or defense services to the Government of the People’s Republic of China (Transmittal No. DTC 0–99), pursuant to 22 U.S.C. 2776(c); to the Committee on International Relations.

3434. A letter from the Acting Deputy Secretary for Legislative Affairs, Department of State, transmitting notification of a proposed license for the export of defense articles or defense services to the Government of the People’s Republic of China (Transmittal No. DTC 0–99), pursuant to 22 U.S.C. 2776(c); to the Committee on International Relations.

3434. A letter from the Comptroller General, transmitting a list of GAO reports from the previous month; to the Committee on Government Reform.

3435. A letter from the Associate Administrator for Human Resources and Education, General Services Administration, transmitting a list of vacancies; to the Committee on Government Reform.

3436. A letter from the Director, Office of Management and Budget, transmitting the Office's report entitled the “1999 Federal Financial Management Status Report and Five-Year Plan,” pursuant to Public Law 101—576, section 301(a) (104 Stat. 2689); to the Committee on Government Reform.

3437. A letter from the Director, Office of Management and Budget, transmitting Amendments to Gas Valuation Regulations for In-Market Gas Bonuses; to the Committee on Government Reform.

3438. A letter from the Acting Deputy Director, Office of Management and Budget, transmitting the report entitled, “Electronic Purchasing and Payment in the Federal Government”; to the Committee on Government Reform.

3439. A letter from the Director, Office of Personnel Management, transmitting notification of the approval of the final plan for a human resource management demonstration project at the Naval Research Laboratory; to the Committee on Government Reform.

3440. A letter from the Office of Special Counsel, transmitting the Annual Report of the Office of the Special Counsel (OSC) for Fiscal Year (FY) 1998, pursuant to Public Law 101—12, section 3(a)(11) (103 Stat. 29); to the Committee on Government Reform.

3441. A letter from the Secretary of Education, transmitting notification that the Secretary has suspended use of the National Center for Education Statistics redefined; to the Committee on Government Reform.

3443. A letter from the Secretary of the Interior, transmitting the 1998 Annual Report for the Office of Surface Mining (OSM), pursuant to 30 U.S.C. 1211(f), 1267(g), and 1295; to the Committee on Resources.

3444. A letter from the Assistant Secretary, Lands and Minerals Management, Department of the Interior, transmitting the Department’s final rule—Leasing of Sulphur or Oil and Gas in the Outer Continental Shelf—Bonus Payments with Bids (RIN: 1010–AC49) received July 26, 1999, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Resources.

3445. A letter from the Acting Assistant Secretary, Lands and Minerals Management, Department of the Interior, transmitting the Department’s final rule—Amendments to Gas Valuation Regulations for In-Market Gas Bonuses; to the Committee on Resources.

3446. A letter from the Manager, Yakima River Basin Project, Department of the Interior, transmitting a report on Biologically Based Flows for the Yakima River Basin; to the Committee on Resources.

3447. A letter from the Acting Director, Office of Sustainable Fisheries National Marine Fisheries Service, Department of Commerce, transmitting the Department’s final rule—Fisheries of the Exclusive Economic Zone Off Alaska; Deep-Water Species Fishery by Vessels Using Trawl Gear in the Gulf of Alaska (Docket No. 990304062–9063–01; I.D. 0712199A) received July 27, 1999, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Resources.

3448. A letter from the Assistant Administrator for Fisheries, National Marine Fisheries Service, Department of Commerce, transmitting the Department’s final rule—Financial Assistance for Research and Development Projects to Strengthen and Develop the U.S. Fishing Industry (Docket No. 982231946–9151–04; I.D. 050799EB) (RIN: 0648–ZA9B) received July 21, 1999, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Resources.

3449. A letter from the Assistant Administrator for Fisheries, National Marine Fisheries Service, Department of Commerce, transmitting the Department’s final rule—Fisheries of the Exclusive Economic Zone Off Alaska; Pacific Ocean Perch in the West Yakutat District of the Exclusive Economic Zone Off Alaska; Steller Sea Lion Protection Measures for the Pollock Fishery off Alaska; Extension of an Expiration Date [Docket No. 990113011–0111–01; I.D. 010699AA] received July 26, 1999, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Resources.

3450. A letter from the Director, Fish and Wildlife Service, transmitting the Service’s final rule—Safe Harbor Agreements and Candidate Conservation Agreements With Assurances (RIN: 1018–AD5S) received July 2, 1999, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Resources.

3451. A letter from the Deputy Assistant Administrator for Fisheries, National Marine Fisheries Service, National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, transmitting the Administration’s final rule—Fisheries of the Caribbean, Gulf of Mexico, and South Atlantic Ocean; Final Determination of Noncommercial Fishery on the Gulf of Mexico; Certification Bycatch [Docket No. 990300883–9166–02; I.D. 031999BB] (RIN: 0648–AK32) received July 28, 1999, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Resources.

3452. A letter from the Assistant Administrator for Fisheries, National Marine Fisheries Service, National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, transmitting the Administration’s final rule—Atlantic Highly Migratory Species (HMS) Fisheries; Fishery Management Plan (FMP), Plan Amendment, and Consolidation of Regulations (Docket No. 981216308–9124–02; I.D. 071698BB) (RIN: 0648–AJ67) received July 19, 1999, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Resources.

3453. A letter from the Acting Director, Office of Sustainable Fisheries, National Marine Fisheries Service, National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, transmitting the Administration’s final rule—Fisheries of the Exclusive Economic Zone Off Alaska; Pacific Ocean Perch in the West Yakutat District of the Exclusive Economic Zone Off Alaska; Steller Sea Lion Protection Measures for the Pollock Fishery off Alaska; Extension of an Expiration Date [Docket No. 990113011–0111–01; I.D. 010699AC] received July 26, 1999, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Resources.

3454. A letter from the Deputy Assistant Administrator For Fisheries National Marine Fisheries Service, National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, transmitting the Administration’s final rule—Fisheries of the Exclusive Economic Zone Off Alaska; Pacific Ocean Perch in the Western Regulatory Area of the Gulf of Alaska [Docket No. 990306262–9062–01; I.D. 071699EC] received July 5, 1999, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Resources.

3455. A letter from the Secretary of the Interior, transmitting notification that the Secretary has purchased lands and interests in lands in Katmai National Park and Preserve, Alaska, and has conveyed other lands into private ownership under the unit of the National Park System; to the Committee on Resources.

3456. A letter from the Assistant Secretary for Employment and Training, Department of Labor, transmitting the Department’s final rule—Labor Certification Process for the Temporary Employment of Nonimmigrant Aliens in Agriculture in the United States, Administrator Measure To Improve Program Performance (RIN: 1205–AB19) received July 2, 1999, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on the Judiciary.

3457. A letter from the Secretary of Transportation, transmitting the Department’s annual report entitled “Report to Congress Semiannual Report to Congress prepared by the Department of Transportation, pursuant to 49 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure.

3459. A letter from the Secretary of Transportation, transmitting the Department’s annual report entitled “Report to Congress Semiannual Report to Congress prepared by the Department of Transportation, pursuant to 49 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure.

3460. A letter from the Program Analyst, Office of the Chief Counsel, FAA, Department of Transportation, transmitting the Department’s final rule—Airworthiness Directives: Pratt & Whitney JT9D Series Turbofan Engines [Docket No. 98–ANE–21–AD; Amendment 39–11223; AD 98–23–07 R1] received July 29, 1999, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure.

3461. A letter from the Program Analyst, Office of the Chief Counsel, FAA, Department of Transportation, transmitting the Department’s final rule—Airworthiness Directives: Boeing Model 737–600 Series Airplanes [Docket No. 98–NM–62–AD; Amendment 39–11236; AD 99–16–01 (RIN: 2120–AA4) received July 29, 1999, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure.

3462. A letter from the Program Analyst, Office of the Chief Counsel, FAA, Department of Transportation, transmitting the Department’s final rule—Airworthiness Directives: Boeing Model 737–600 Series Airplanes [Docket No. 98–NM–62–AD; Amendment 39–11236; AD 99–16–01 (RIN: 2120–AA4) received July 29, 1999, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure.
A letter from the Program Analyst, Office of the Chief Counsel, FAA, Department of Transportation, transmitting the Department’s final rule—Establishment of Class E Airspace; Taylor, AZ [Airspace Docket No. 99–ACP–17] received June 29, 1999, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure.

3461. A letter from the Program Analyst, Office of the Chief Counsel, FAA, Department of Transportation, transmitting the Department’s final rule— Corrrection of Class E Airspace; Santa Catalina, CA [Airspace Docket No. 99–ACE–20] received June 21, 1999, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure.

3462. A letter from the Program Analyst, Office of the Chief Counsel, FAA, Department of Transportation, transmitting the Department’s final rule— Amendment to Class E Airspace; York, NE [Airspace Docket No. 99–ACE–5] received June 21, 1999, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure.

3463. A letter from the Program Analyst, Office of the Chief Counsel, FAA, Department of Transportation, transmitting the Department’s final rule— Amendment to Class E Airspace; Macon, MO [Airspace Docket No. 99–ACE–22] received June 21, 1999, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure.

3478. A letter from the Chief, Regulations Unit, Internal Revenue Service, transmitting the Service’s final rule—BLS-LIFPO Department Store Indexes—June 1999—received July 29, 1999, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Ways and Means.

3464. A letter from the Program Analyst, Office of the Chief Counsel, Department of Transportation, transmitting the Department’s final rule— National Standards for Traffic Control Devices; Metric Conversion [FHWA Docket No. FHWA–97–2363; 96–23] (RIN: 2125–AD5) received July 9, 1999, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure.

3465. A letter from the Chief, Office of Regulations and Administrative Law, USCG, Department of Transportation, transmitting the Department’s final rule—Management and Administrative Law, USCG, Department of Transportation and Infrastructure.

3466. A letter from the Regulations Officer, Federal Highway Administration, Department of Transportation, transmitting the Department’s final rule—National Standards for Traffic Control Devices; Metric Conversion [FHWA Docket No. FHWA–97–2363; 96–23] (RIN: 2125–AD5) received July 9, 1999, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure.

3467. A letter from the Program Analyst, Office of the Chief Counsel, FAA, Department of Transportation, transmitting the Department’s final rule—Revision of Class E Airspace; Santa Catalina, CA [Airspace Docket No. 99–ACE–20] received June 21, 1999, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure.

3468. A letter from the Program Analyst, Office of the Chief Counsel, Department of Transportation, transmitting the Department’s final rule— Establishment of Class E Airspace; Taylor, AZ [Airspace Docket No. 99–ACP–17] received June 29, 1999, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure.

3479. A letter from the Secretary of Health and Human Services, transmitting notification that the Department is allotting emergency supplemental funds to the District of Columbia; jointly to the Committees on Commerce and Education and the Workforce.

3471. A letter from the Program Analyst, Office of the Chief Counsel, Department of Transportation, transmitting the Department’s final rule— Establishment of Class E Airspace; Emporia, KS [Airspace Docket No. 099–ACE–24] received June 21, 1999, pursuant to 5 U.S.C. 801(a)(1)(A); to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure.

3473. A letter from the Associate Administrator for Procurement, National Aeronautics and Space Administration, transmitting the Administration’s final rule—Miscellaneous Regulations and Administrative Law, USCG, Department of Transportation and Infrastructure.

3472. A letter from the Associate Administrator for Procurement, National Aeronautics and Space Administration, transmitting the Administration’s final rule—NASA for the Fiscal Year Ending September 30, 2000, and for other purposes (Rept. 106–284). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union.

3474. A letter from the Associate Administrator for Procurement, National Aeronautics and Space Administration, transmitting the Administration’s final rule—NASA for the Fiscal Year Ending September 30, 2000, and for other purposes (Rept. 106–286). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union.

4. The report, under clause 2 of rule XX, of the Committee on Government Reform discharging the Committee on House Oversight and Government Reform of its duties under sections 2309(b)(1) and 2313(b) of title 2 U.S.C., is in order; and the Committee on Government Reform shall be discharged.

3. Under clause 2 of rule XII, public bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred, as follows:

H.R. 2676. A bill to amend title 39, United States Code, to provide for the establishment of a notification system under which individuals may elect not to receive mailings related to credit card transactions and for other purposes; to the Committee on Government Reform.

Mr. SHUSTER (for himself, Mr. OBERSTAR, Mr. PETRI, and Mr. RAHALL): H.R. 2679. A bill to amend title 49, United States Code, to establish the National Motor Carrier Administration in the Department of Transportation, to improve the safety of commercial motor vehicle operators and carriers, to strengthen commercial driver’s licenses, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure.

By Ms. JACKSON–LEE of Texas (for herself, Mr. CONYERS, Mr. BERNAM, Mr. GUTIERREZ, and Mr. MEEHAN): H.R. 2680. A bill to replace the Immigration and Naturalization Service with the National Immigration Bureau, to separate the immigration enforcement and adjudication functions performed by officers and employees of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, and for other purposes (Rept. 106–285). Referred to the House Calendar.

Mr. Young of Alaska: Committee on Reconciliation. H.R. 940. A bill to establish the Lackawanna Heritage Valley American Heritage Area; with amendments (Rept. 106–285).

Mr. Walsh: Committee on Appropriations. H.R. 2684. A bill making appropriations for the Department of Veterans Affairs and Housing and Urban Development, and for sundry independent agencies, boards, commissions, corporations, and offices for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2000, and for other purposes (Rept. 106–286). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union.

Mr. Coble: Committee on the Judiciary. H.R. 1907. A bill to amend title 35, United States Code, to provide enhanced protection for inventors and innovators, protect patent terms, reduce patent litigation, and for other purposes, with an amendment; referred to the Committee on Government Reform for a period ending not later than August 3, 1999, for consideration of such provisions of the bill and amendment as fall within the jurisdiction of that committee pursuant to clause (1) of rule X (Rept. 106–267, Pt. 1). Ordered to be printed.

PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XII, public bills and resolutions were introduced and severally referred, as follows:

Mr. McCollum: H.R. 2676. A bill to amend title 39, United States Code, to provide for the establishment of a notification system under which individuals may elect not to receive mailings related to credit card transactions and for other purposes; to the Committee on Government Reform.

Mr. Stucker (for himself, Mr. Oberstar, Mr. Petri, and Mr. Rahall): H.R. 2679. A bill to amend title 49, United States Code, to establish the National Motor Carrier Administration in the Department of Transportation, to improve the safety of commercial motor vehicle operators and carriers, to strengthen commercial driver’s licenses, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure.

By Mr. Jackson–Lee of Texas (for herself, Mr. Conyers, Mr. Berman, Mr. Gutierrez, and Mr. Meehan): H.R. 2680. A bill to replace the Immigration and Naturalization Service with the National Immigration Bureau, to separate the immigration enforcement and adjudication functions performed by officers and employees of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Government Reform.

By Mr. Shuster (for himself, Mr. Oberstar, Mr. Petri, and Mr. Rahall):
MEMORIALS

Under clause 3 of rule XII, memorials were presented and referred as follows:

179. The SPEAKER presented a memorial of the House of Representatives of the State of Illinois, relative to House Joint Resolution No. 12 memorializing Congress to enact legislation requiring labels that disclose the country of origin on meats, poultry, and fresh produce; to the Committee on Agriculture.

180. Also, a memorial of the House of Representatives of the State of Alabama, relative to House Joint Resolution No. 1 memorializing Congress to enact legislation amending the Social Security Act to prohibit recoupment by the federal government of state tobacco settlement funds; to the Committee on Commerce.

181. Also, a memorial of the House of Representatives of the State of Oregon, relative to House Joint Resolution No. 7 memorializing Congress to provide federal funds for the purchase and current management of the White Mountain National Forest; to the Committee on Agriculture.

182. Also, a memorial of the House of Representatives of the State of Alabama, relative to House Joint Resolution No. 49 memorializing Congress to provide federal funds for the purchase and current management of the Sequoia National Forest; to the Committee on Agriculture.

183. Also, a memorial of the House of Representatives of the State of Utah, relative to House Joint Resolution No. 5 memorializing Congress to provide federal funds for the purchase and current management of the Hurricane National Forest; to the Committee on Agriculture.

184. Also, a memorial of the House of Representatives of the State of Oregon, relative to House Joint Resolution No. 12 memorializing Congress to prohibit recoupment by the federal government of state tobacco settlement funds; to the Committee on Commerce.

185. Also, a memorial of the House of Representatives of the State of Nevada, relative to House Concurrent Resolution No. 16 memorializing Congress to extend federal funding for fire assistance to private and forestland owners; to the Committee on Agriculture.

186. Also, a memorial of the House of Representatives of the State of Colorado, relative to House Joint Resolution No. 9 memorializing Congress to preserve the Clean Air Act without imposing any new federal requirements to reduce air pollution; to the Committee on Commerce.

187. Also, a memorial of the House of Representatives of the State of New Hampshire, relative to House Concurrent Resolution No. 3 memorializing Congress to prohibit federal funding for the purchase or current management of the White Mountain National Forest; to the Committee on Agriculture.

188. Also, a memorial of the House of Representatives of the State of New Hampshire, relative to House Concurrent Resolution No. 9 memorializing Congress to require the implementation of the Clean Air Act without imposing any new federal requirements to reduce air pollution; to the Committee on Commerce.

189. Also, a memorial of the House of Representatives of the State of New Hampshire, relative to House Concurrent Resolution No. 9 memorializing Congress to require the implementation of the Clean Air Act without imposing any new federal requirements to reduce air pollution; to the Committee on Commerce.
to Joint Resolution 99–8 1063 memorializing the Provisional Government of the United Nations convention on the Rights of the Child; to the Committee on International Relations.

193. Also, a memorial of the House of Representatives of the State of Hawaii, relative to House Resolution No. 219 HD1 memorializing Guam’s Delegate to the U.S. Congress introduce legislation that would further amend the Organic Act of Guam to allow for the first election of the Attorney General of Guam to be held in the General Election in the year 2000; to the Committee on Resources.

194. Also, a memorial of the Legislature of the Commonwealth of Guam, relative to Resolution No. 125 memorializing Guam’s Delegate to the U.S. Congress to adopt certain amendments to the Organic Act of Guam to allow for the first election of the Attorney General of Guam to be held in the General Election in the year 2000; to the Committee on Resources.

195. Also, a memorial of the House of Representatives of the State of Colorado, relative to House Joint Resolution No. 99–2023 memorializing the Department of the Interior and the Bureau of Land Management to withdraw the federal proposal to amend the federal regulations, 43 C.F.R. subpart 3809 and published at 64 F.R. 6422 on February 9, 1999, governing hardrock mining activity; to the Committee on Resources.

196. Also, a memorial of the House of Representatives of the State of Colorado, relative to House Joint Resolution No. 99–1020 memorializing opposition towards H.R. 829, the “Colorado Wilderness Act of 1999”; to the Committee on Resources.

197. Also, a memorial of the House of Representatives of the State of Colorado, relative to House Joint Resolution No. 99–1051 memorializing Congress to adopt certain amendments to the federal Endangered Species Act of 1973; to the Committee on Resources.

198. Also, a memorial of the House of Representatives of the State of Colorado, relative to House Resolution No. 99–1049 memorializing support for the most integrated setting mandate in regulations adopted by the United States Attorney General pursuant to the P.L. 101–635, the “Americans With Disabilities Act of 1990”; to the Committee on the Judiciary.

199. Also, a memorial of the House of Representatives of the State of New Hampshire, relative to House Concurrent Resolution No. 4 memorializing the Secretary of Transportation to expediously authorize the inclusion of U.S. Route 2 through the states of Maine, New Hampshire, and Vermont as a designated border corridor highway under the auspices of Section 1118 and 1119 of the Transportation Equity Act of the 21st Century; to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure.

200. Also, a memorial of the House of Representatives of the State of New Hampshire, relative to House Concurrent Resolution No. 11 memorializing Congress and the Internal Revenue Service to make changes to the Internal Revenue Code and federal tax regulations necessary to broaden the ability of taxpayers to make tax-deductible contributions to Nuclear Decommissioning Reserve Funds and to the health and welfare contributions towards decommissioning expenses to receive beneficial tax treatment; to the Committee on Ways and Means.

201. Also, a memorial of the Senate of the State of Nevada, relative to Senate Joint Resolution No. 22 memorializing Congress to ensure that the provisions of H.R. 10, S. 900 and S. 1001, and H.R. 1023, to the Committee on International Relations.

PRIVATE BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 3 of rule XII,

Mr. FRANK of Massachusetts introduced A bill (H.R. 2695) to provide for the relief of Kathy Barrett, which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

ADDITIONAL SPONSORS

Under clause 7 of rule XII, sponsors were added to public bills and resolutions as follows:

H.R. 44: Mr. Cook, Ms. Eshoo, Mr. McGovern, Mr. Gary Miller of California, and Mr. Watts of Oklahoma.
H.R. 269: Mrs. Thurman, Mr. Stark, and Mr. Hilliard.
H.R. 274: Mr. English and Mr. Smith of Washington.
H.R. 303: Ms. Stabenow, Mr. Ryan of Wisconsin, and Ms. Lutz.
H.R. 382: Mr. Doyle and Mr. Wexler.
H.R. 406: Mr. Kolbe and Mr. Murtha.
H.R. 416: Mr. JV.
H.R. 488: Mr. Stark.
H.R. 489: Mr. Blumenauer.
H.R. 531: Mr. Oxley.
H.R. 532: Mr. Packard.
H.R. 566: Mr. Gallegly.
H.R. 583: Mr. Kucinich and Mr. Cunningham.
H.R. 585: Mr. Reyes.
H.R. 601: Mr. Watts of Oklahoma.
H.R. 600: Mr. Bass.
H.R. 635: Mr. Smith of Washington.
H.R. 671: Mr. Snyder.
H.R. 776: Mr. Latham.
H.R. 783: Mr. LaHood.
H.R. 784: Mr. Ackerman and Mrs. Morella.
H.R. 889: Mr. Watts of Oklahoma.
H.R. 852: Mrs. Emerson.
H.R. 854: Mr. Weygand.
H.R. 2670: Offered by: Mr. Peters of Pennsylvania and Mr. Wolf.
H.R. 2120: Mr. Hastings of Florida and Mr. Edwards.
H.R. 2221: Mr. Vitter.
H.R. 2241: Mr. Cole, Mr. Delahunt, Mr. Murray, Mr. Goldenson, and Mr. Gekas.
H.R. 2245: Mr. Whitfield.
H.R. 2558: Mr. Davis of Illinois.
H.R. 2246: Mr. Ryan of Wisconsin, Mr. Quinn, Mr. Billey, and Mr. Garey.
H.R. 2306: Mr. Cole.
H.R. 2292: Mr. Nethercutt.
H.R. 2303: Mrs. Tauscher, Mr. Portman, Mr. Hayes, Mr. Hastings of Washington, Mrs. Cubin, Mr. Doyle, Mr. Rogula, Mr. Sunic, Mr. Hall of Ohio, and Mr. Nadler.
H.R. 2308: Mr. Udall of New Mexico.
H.R. 2354: Mrs. Meek of Florida.
H.R. 2357: Mrs. Jones of Ohio, Mr. Hall of Ohio, Mr. Oxley, Mr. Steckel, Mr. Horse, Ms. Kaptur, Mr. Kucinich, Mr. Brown of Ohio, Mr. Sawyer, Mr. Ney, Mr. LaTourette, Mr. Portman, Mr. Feingold, Mr. Frank of Massa, Chutters, Mr. Jackson of Illinois, Ms. McKinney, Mr. Clay, Mrs. Chrystensen, Mrs. Thirman, Mr. Skeleton, Mr. Meek of Florida, Mr. Hilliard, Mr. Chabot, and Mr. Gillmor.
H.R. 2372: Mr. McHugh, Ms. Pryce of Ohio, Mr. Watkins, Mr. Shimkus, Mr. Boyd, Mr. Deal of Georgia, Mr. Thornberry, Mr. Turner, Mr. Foley, Mr. Hutchinson, Mr. Horska, Mr. Steve, Mr. Hillery, Mrs. Emerson, Mr. Holden, Mr. Horse, Mr. Hoyle, and Mr. Pombo.
H.R. 2395: Mr. Brruter and Mr. Simpson.
H.R. 2419: Mr. Hilliard, Mr. Rodriguez, Mr. Ratcliffe, and Mr. Rogers.
H.R. 2420: Mr. Jones of North Carolina, Mr. Boyd, and Mr. Isakson.
H.R. 2424: Mr. Davis of Illinois.
H.R. 2434: Mr. Barrett of Nebraska, Mr. Bliley, Mr. Lewis of Kentucky, and Mr. Nethercutt.
H.R. 2441: Mr. Upton, Mr. Cox, Mr. Owens, and Mr. Barrett of Wisconsin.
H.R. 2476: Mr. Lipinski.
H.R. 2494: Mr. Largent.
H.R. 2498: Mr. Ramstad, Mrs. Capps, and Mr. Smith of Washington.
H.R. 2512: Ms. McCarthy of Missouri, Mr. Ford, and Mr. Sawyer.
H.R. 2515: Ms. Lowen.
H.R. 2525: Mr. Lowen and Mr. Moore.
H.R. 2543: Mr. Strahns and Mr. Gilman.
H.R. 2548: Mr. Burton of Indiana, Mr. Jones of North Carolina, Mr. Traficant, and Ms. Kilpatrick.
H.R. 2558: Mr. Frost.
H.R. 2569: Mr. Hill of Montana, Mr. Gillman, Mr. Smith of Michigan, and Mr. Cooksey.
H.R. 2574: Mrs. Napolitano, Mr. Udall of Colorado, and Mrs. McCarthy of New York.
H.R. 2589: Mr. Broun.
H.R. 2631: Mr. Underwood and Mr. Dicks.
H.R. 2662: Mr. Houghton.
H.J. Res. 2: Mr. Forbes.
H.Con. Res. 111: Mr. Weiner and Ms. Sanchez.
H. Con. Res. 129: Mr. Porter.
H.R. 2982: Mr. Pasco, Mr. Hoyer, Mr. Hunter, Mrs. Lowery, and Mr. Stark.
H. Res. 286: Mr. Baker.

PETITIONS, ETC.

Under clause 3 of rule XII, petitions and papers were laid on the clerk's desk and referred as follows:

43. The SPEAKER presented a petition of the Unincorporated Borough of Isabela, relative to Resolution No. 87 petitioning the President of the United States to withdraw the Navy from Vieques, Puerto Rico; to the Committee on Armed Services.
44. Also, a petition of the City of Strongsville, relative to Resolution No. 1999-141 petitioning support for the ratification, by the United States, of the United Nations Convention on the elimination of all forms of discrimination against women; to the Committee on International Relations.
45. Also, a petition of the Legislature of Rockland County, relative to Resolution No. 199 of 1999 petitioning Congress to return to state side Land and Water Conservation Fund funding in the 1999-2000 Federal Budget; to the Committee on Resources.
46. Also, a petition of the City of Miami Commission, relative to Resolution No. 99-359 petitioning support for Stillsville, and recommending that it not be demolished as presently intended, and supporting efforts to have Stillsville reconsidered as a designated historical site by Biscayne National Park, the U.S. Department of the Interior, and further directing the City Clerk to transmit a copy of this resolution to the officials designated herein; to the Committee on Resources.
47. Also, a petition of the Common Council of the City of Albany, relative to Resolution No. 764 petitioning support for the adoption of pending federal and state hate crimes legislation and urging speedy action by colleagues in the Congress and State Legislature; to the Committee on the Judiciary.
48. Also, a petition of the Legislature of Rockland County, relative to Resolution No. 204 of 1999 petitioning Congress to adopt the Immunosuppressive Drug Extension Coverage Act of 1999; jointly to the Committees on Ways and Means and Commerce.

AMENDMENTS

Under clause 8 of rule XVIII, proposed amendments were submitted as follows:

H.R. 2670: Offered by: Mr. Blagoevich of Illinois

AMENDMENT NO. 4: At the end of title I, insert the following:

TITLE VIII—ADDITIONAL GENERAL PROVISIONS

SEC. 801. None of the funds made available in this Act may be used for joint training programs between the Royal Ulster Constabulary and any Federal law enforcement agency.

H.R. 2670: Offered by: Mr. Hall of Ohio

AMENDMENT NO. 8: In title IV, under DEPARTMENT OF STATE, ARMAMENT PAYMENTS, strike the first proviso.

H.R. 2670: Offered by: Ms. Jackson-Lee of Texas

AMENDMENT NO. 10: Page 19, line 24, after the dollar amount, insert the following: "(increased by $15,600,000)".

H.R. 2670: Offered by: Mr. Crowley

AMENDMENT NO. 7: At the end of the bill, insert after the last section (preceding the short title) the following:

H.R. 2670: Offered by: Mr. Maloney of Connecticut

AMENDMENT NO. 11: In title I, in the item relating to "DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE—OFFICE OF JUSTICE PROGRAMS—COMMUNITY OBLIGATIONS," before the second proviso:
(1) after the third dollar amount, insert "(increased by $500,000)"; and
(2) after the fourth and eighth dollar amounts, insert "(reduced by $500,000)."

H.R. 2670: Offered by: Mrs. Meek of Florida

AMENDMENT NO. 12: Page 47, line 19, strike "activities" and insert "activities (of which for damages for failure to so provide such a notice or such information)".

H.R. 2670: Offered by: Mr. Campbell

AMENDMENT NO. 5: At the end of the bill, insert after the last section (preceding the short title) the following:

AMENDMENT NO. 9: Page 29, line 5, after the dollar amount, insert the following: "(increased by $2,500,000)".

Page 32, line 23, after the dollar amount, insert the following: "(increased by $2,500,000)".

Page 32, line 25, after the dollar amount, insert the following: "(increased by $2,500,000)".

Page 43, line 1, after the dollar amount, insert the following: "(reduced by $11,972,000)".

Page 43, line 5, after the dollar amount, insert the following: "(reduced by $11,972,000)".

Page 43, line 6, after the dollar amount, insert the following: "(reduced by $11,972,000)".

Page 43, line 12, after the dollar amount, insert the following: "(reduced by $11,972,000)".

H.R. 2670: Offered by: Ms. Jackson-Lee of Texas

AMENDMENT NO. 9: Page 18, line 18, after the dollar amount, insert the following: "(increased by $3,700,000)".

Page 27, line 17, after the dollar amount, insert the following: "(reduced by $3,700,000)".

SEC. 801. None of the funds made available in this Act may be used for joint training programs between the Royal Ulster Constabulary and any Federal law enforcement agency.

H.R. 2670: Offered by: Mr. Hall of Ohio

AMENDMENT NO. 8: In title IV, under DEPARTMENT OF STATE, ARMAMENT PAYMENTS, strike the first proviso.

H.R. 2670: Offered by: Mr. Maloney of Connecticut

AMENDMENT NO. 11: In title I, in the item relating to "DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE—OFFICE OF JUSTICE PROGRAMS—COMMUNITY OBLIGATIONS," before the second proviso:
(1) after the third dollar amount, insert "(increased by $500,000)"; and
(2) after the fourth and eighth dollar amounts, insert "(reduced by $500,000)."

H.R. 2670: Offered by: Mrs. Meek of Florida

AMENDMENT NO. 12: Page 47, line 19, strike "activities" and insert "activities (of which $25,000,000 is for community-based organizations for community outreach in census tracts undercounted in the 1990 census;”.

H.R. 2670
OFFERED BY: MR. GEORGE MILLER OF CALIFORNIA
AMENDMENT No. 13: At the end of the bill (preceding the short title), add the following:

TITLE —LIMITATION
SEC. . Of the amounts made available by this Act, not more than $2,350,000 may be obligated or expended for the Inter-American Tropical Tuna Commission.

H.R. 2670
OFFERED BY: MR. OBEY
AMENDMENT No. 14: In title II, in the item relating to “BUREAU OF THE CENSUS—PERIODIC CENSUSES AND PROGRAMS”, strike “the entire amount” the first and third places it appears and insert “of this amount, $1,723,000,000”.

H.R. 2670
OFFERED BY: MR. SANFORD
AMENDMENT No. 15: Page 110, after line 6, insert the following new title:

TITLE VIII—OTHER GENERAL PROVISIONS
SEC. 801. None of the funds appropriated in this Act shall be available for a United States assessed contribution for membership in the following international organizations:
(1) Bureau of International Expositions.
(2) International Copper Study Group.
(3) International Cotton Advisory Committee.
(5) International Institute for the Unification of Private Law.
(6) International Lead and Zinc Study Group.
(7) International Natural Rubber Organizations.
(8) International Vine and Wine.
(9) International Union for the Conservation of Nature and Natural Resources.

H.R. 2670
OFFERED BY: MR. STEARNS
AMENDMENT No. 16: Page 110, after line 6, insert the following new title:

TITLE VIII—LIMITATION PROVISIONS
SEC. 801. None of the funds appropriated in this Act shall be available for the official entertainment expenses of the Secretary of State until Linda Shenwick, a former senior executive service level employee of the Department of State, (1) is reinstated to her former position as Minister Counselor for Resources Management at the United States Mission to the United Nations, (2) is fully reimbursed for all lost wages and expenses incurred in defending herself from the Department of State’s retaliation against her, and (3) has her employment files expunged of the unprecedented and punitive “Unsatisfactory” evaluation and the documentation used to support such evaluation.

H.R. 2670
OFFERED BY: MR. STEARNS
AMENDMENT No. 17: At the end of the bill, insert after the last section (preceding the short title) the following:

TITLE VIII—ADDITIONAL GENERAL PROVISIONS
SEC. 801. (a) None of the funds provided under this Act to combat violence in schools in the item relating to “DEPARTMENT OF JUSTICE—Community Oriented Policing Services” may be used to provide funds to a State that has not enacted a law requiring local educational agencies to expel from school for a period of not less than 1 year a student who is determined—
(1) to be in possession of an illegal drug, or illegal drug paraphernalia, on school property under the jurisdiction of, or on a vehicle operated by an employee or agent of, a local educational agency in that State; or
(2) to have brought a firearm to a school under the jurisdiction of a local educational agency in that State;
except that the State law shall allow the chief administrative officer of the local educational agency to modify the expulsion requirement for a student on a case-by-case basis.
(b) Nothing in subsection (a) shall be construed to prevent a State from allowing a local educational agency that has expelled a student from the student’s regular school setting from providing educational services to the student in an alternative setting and the provisions of subsection (a) shall be construed in a manner consistent with the individuals with Disabilities Education Act (20 U.S.C. 1400 et seq.).

H.R. 2670
OFFERED BY: MR. TERRY
AMENDMENT No. 18: Page 53, line 26, after the dollar amount insert “(reduced by $14,000,000)”.

H.R. 2670
OFFERED BY: MR. TRAFICANT
AMENDMENT No. 19: At the end of the bill, insert after the last section (preceding the short title) the following:

TITLE VIII—ADDITIONAL GENERAL PROVISIONS
SEC. 801. None of the funds made available to the Department of Justice in this Act may be used for the purpose of transporting an individual who is a prisoner pursuant to conviction for crime under State or Federal law and is classified as a maximum security prisoner, other than to a prison or other facility classified as a maximum security prison or facility.

H.R. 2670
OFFERED BY: MR. VISCLOSKY
AMENDMENT No. 20: At the end of the bill, insert after the last section (preceding the short title) the following:

TITLE VIII—ADDITIONAL GENERAL PROVISIONS
SEC. 801. None of the funds appropriated in this Act may be used to negotiate or otherwise enter into any suspension agreement under section 734 of the Tariff Act of 1930, with respect to any of the following categories of steel products: semifinished, plates, sheets and strips, wire rods, wire and wire products, rail type products, bars, structural shapes and units, pipes and tubes, iron ore, and coke products.

H.R. 2670
OFFERED BY: MR. WU
AMENDMENT No. 21: Page 52, line 19, after the dollar amount insert “(increased by $194,996,950 for the Advanced Technology Program)’’.

At the end of the bill, insert after the last section (preceding the short title) the following:

TITLE VIII—ADDITIONAL GENERAL PROVISIONS
SEC. 801. Total appropriations made in this Act for “DEPARTMENT OF STATE—Administration of Foreign Affairs” are hereby reduced by 5 percent.
ADDRESS OF JOHN BRADEMAS TO LAUNCH A DEMOCRACY FOUNDATION IN SPAIN

HON. TIM ROEMER
OF INDIANA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, August 3, 1999

Mr. ROEMER. Mr. Speaker, because Congress is now debating legislation to continue funding the National Endowment for Democracy (NED), I wish to draw to the attention of my colleagues a most compelling address delivered on July 7, 1999 in Ibiza, Spain, by the chairman of the board of NED. He is one of my most distinguished predecessors as the U.S. Representative in Congress of the Third Congressional District of Indiana that I am now privileged to represent, the Honorable John Brademas.

As those of you who served with John Brademas know, he was for 22 years (1959–1981), an active and productive Member of the Committee on Education and Labor. In his last four years as a Member of Congress, John Brademas was, by appointment of Speaker Thomas P. (“Tip”) O’Neill, Jr., the House Majority Whip.

On leaving Congress, Dr. Brademas became president of New York University, the nation’s largest private university, a position in which he served for 11 years (1981–1992). Now president-emeritus, Dr. Brademas is also chairman, by appointment from President Clinton, of the President’s Committee on the Arts and the Humanities.

Dr. Brademas, a graduate of Harvard University, wrote his doctoral dissertation at Oxford University, where he was a Rhodes Scholar. His subject was the anarcho-syndicalist movement in Spain from the 1920s through the first year of the Spanish Civil War. In 1997, in the presence of Their Majesties King Juan Carlos and Queen Sofia of Spain, and the First Lady of the United States, Dr. Brademas dedicated the King Juan Carlos I of Spain Center at New York University. This Center is devoted to the study of modern Spain and the Spanish-speaking world.

On July 7, 1999, Dr. Brademas delivered an address at a forum in Ibiza, Spain, where representatives of the two major Spanish political parties, including Abel Matutes, Spanish Minister of Foreign Affairs, announced the establishment of the “Spanish Commission to Support Democracy,” a Spanish counterpart of our National Endowment for Democracy.

Speaking in Spanish, Dr. Brademas said, “The fact of a common language and cultural heritage, in combined with the Spanish experience of transition from authoritarianism to democracy, afford the new Spanish Commission unique ways to champion the democratic cause in Spanish-speaking America. Although every country in Latin America is at least semi-democratic, democratic institutions are fragile or even weakening.”

In fact, one of my major commitments as NYU’s president was to strengthen our capability for teaching and research about other countries and cultures. During my tenure, New York University established a Center on Japan-U.S. Business and Economic Studies, an Onassis Center for Hellenic Studies, a Casa Italiana and a Department and Hebrew and Judaic Studies.

Finally, given my own interest in Spain and that Spanish is now the second language of the United States—indeed, 25 percent of the people in New York City speak Spanish—I decided to move on the fronte espanol! In 1983 I awarded his first honorary degree to His Majesty, King Juan Carlos I of Spain, and established a cátedra in his name under which there have come to NYU, as visiting professors, some of the world’s leading authorities on modern Spain, including Francisco Ayala, José Ferrater Mora, John Elliott, José María Maravall, Hugh Thomas, Eduardo Subirats, Jon Juariart, Estrella de Diego and my own Oxford dissertation advisor, Raymond Carr.

In 1997, in the presence of Their Majesties, King Juan Carlos and Queen Sofia, and of the First Lady of the United States, Hillary Rodham Clinton, we dedicated the King Juan Carlos I of Spain Center, devoted to the study of modern Spain and the Spanish-speaking world.

In the relatively brief life of the Center, we have developed an intensive program of activities. We have been honored by visits of the former Prime Minister of Spain, Felipe González, and his successor, José María Aznar. Last year, under the leadership of the distinguished former Mayor of Barcelona, Pasqual Maragall, we conducted a forum on the future of the cities. Among those participating were the Mayors of Barcelona, Joan Clos; Sevilla, Soledad Becerril; Santiago de Compostela, Xerardo Estevez; and of Santiago de Chile; Cuahtemoc Cárdenas of Mexico City; Rio de Janeiro; New York City; Indianapolis and San Juan, Puerto Rico.

In September the King Juan Carlos Center conducted a symposium on “Twenty Years of Spanish Democracy”, with eminent intellectuals from Spain joining American scholars. The conference included such persons as Javier Tussell, Charles Powell, Juan Linz, Víctor Pérez-Díaz and José Pedro Pérez-Llorca and featured addresses by the new United States Ambassador, Eduardo Romero, and the distinguished Foreign Minister of Spain, Abel Matutes, whose consistency, I am well aware, is Ibiza.

In November I was in Buenos Aires, speaking at the National Academy of Education in Argentina and the University of Buenos Aires while in December I was here in Spain, to speak at the University of Alcalá, in Alcalá de Henares, birthplace of Cervantes.

In April I was in Cádiz, birthplace of the Constitution of 1812, for nearly two centuries

[This “bullet” symbol identifies statements or insertions which are not spoken by a Member of the Senate on the floor. Matter set in this typeface indicates words inserted or appended, rather than spoken, by a Member of the House on the floor.]
an inspiration to peoples throughout the world who cherish the principles of democracy, freedom and the protections of constitutional government.

In all these places, I took note of the rising importance in the United States of Spanish speakers, now some 28 million—and urged that even as we have been forging, with increased investment in Latin America by Spanish business firms and continuing U.S. investment there, a "triangular" economic relationship, so, too, we should develop what I would call "triangular" relationships among universities in the United States, Latin America and Spain.

So from what I've said, you will understand why I rejoice at the opportunity to be back in Spain.

But there is another reason I'm pleased to participate in this conference. For over two decades, as I have said, I was a working politician—and required not months but years to the Congress of the United States, winning eleven and losing three campaigns.

So I am deeply devoted to the processes of democracy and that my late father was born in Greece—I was the first native-born American of Greek origin elected to Congress—enhanced that commitment.

NATIONAL ENDOWMENT FOR DEMOCRACY

For the last several years, however, I've had a direct involvement with an entity dedicated to encouraging democracy in countries that do not enjoy it. The National Endowment for Democracy, established in 1983 by a Republican President, Ronald Reagan, and a Democratic Congress, NED, as we call it, is a non-governmental organization, albeit financed with government funds, that makes grants to private organizations in other countries, organizations struggling to develop free and fair elections, independent media, independent judiciary and the other components of a democratic society.

I am pleased that the able President of NED, Carl Gershman, will take part in our discussions this week.

In light of developments in Kosovo, I must note that last March I joined a colleague in the United States and several in Europe to create what we are calling a Center for Democracy and Reconciliation in Southeast Europe, the Balkans.

Based in Salonika, the Center is governed by persons, the majority of whom are from the region itself.

We know that the task of building democracy in that troubled part of Europe will be daunting and require not months but years. Yet we want at least to plant the seeds of freedom and that my late father was born in Greece—I was the first native-born American of Greek origin elected to Congress—enhanced that commitment.

The thesis of my remarks today is simple and straightforward. It is that democratic Spain has a democratic vocation, a calling, a responsibility—use whatever word you like—to join the National Endowment for Democracy, and other democracy-promoting organizations in contributing to that cause.

I am especially impressed that representatives of the major Spanish political parties are cooperating to that end even as, in the United States, the National Endowment for Democracy was the product of collaboration between a Republican President, Ronald Reagan, and a Democratic Congress in both chambers by the Democratic Party.

Now having been coming to Spain since before some of you here were born, I have observed at first hand the transition that Spaniards have made from an authoritarian regime to democracy.

I hasten to add that we in the United States have challenges to our own political system. For example, far too few eligible citizens even bother to vote, and the scramble for huge sums of money to finance electoral campaigns is an ongoing threat to the integrity of the American democracy.

In any event, I believe that Spain, and Spanish political parties in particular, can offer lessons of immense value to other parts of the world where democracy is under siege.

I have already noted Spanish leadership in Southeast Europe. You here will much better know than I the opportunities for Spain in promoting democracy in North Africa, in Algeria and Morocco.

The region to which, it seems to me, in the century soon to begin, democratic Spain has now an opportunity—indeed, a particular responsibility—to assist democracy, is Latin America.

THE DEMOCRATIC CAUSE IN LATIN AMERICA

First, I think it obvious that the fact of a common language and cultural roots combines with Spain's experience of democratic transition to offer Spain, unique placement to champion the democratic cause in Latin America.

Here let me take as a point of reference a series of articles on "Latin America's Imperiled Progress" in the latest issue of the Journal of Democracy, the quarterly published by the National Endowment for Democracy. For the thread that runs through most of these essays is that although "fifty years on, democracy in Cuba is now at least a semideocracy... in many countries democratic institutions are fragile or even weakening."1 The Journal of Democracy offers several analyses characterized by such comments as these: "...[In] Brazil...in spite of President Fernando Henrique Cardoso's valiant efforts to prevent an economic meltdown, political reform appears imperative if Brazil is to avoid a renewed descent into crisis and ungovernability."2

Of Venezuela and of the recent presidential election, "the future of democracy now seems in doubt..."3 Again, in the wake of President Alberto Fujimori's 1992 autogolpe, Peru's traditional political parties have been decimated, and the democratic opposition remains weak and narrowly based..."4

Another comment: "A more heartening story comes from Paraguay, where the murder of the vice-president galvanized an outpouring of popular indignation that ultimately forced the resignation of President Raul Cubas..."5

PRESIDENT CARTER'S FORUM

Here I note that last May I was in Atlanta, Georgia, to take part in a forum convened by former President Jimmy Carter who brought together former presidents and prime ministers from Latin America to discuss issues of transparency, corruption and political reform in the region.

In Argentina and Mexico, as we are all aware, corruption scandals at the highest levels of government have commanded the attention of observers all over the world. Indeed, I think you will agree that the issue of corruption today is far more visible than it has ever been.

I myself am active in the organization, Transparency International, founded several years ago for the express purpose of combating corruption in international business transactions.

Obstacles to genuine democracy in Latin America include, in too many countries—Peru is a blatant example—of a rubber-stamp Congress and a judiciary controlled by the executive.

In many Latin American countries, on the other hand, we have seen the development of lively and vigorous non-governmental organizations, essential to a flourishing civil society which, in turn, is indispensable to an effective democracy.

I must note another Journal of Democracy article whose author, Professor Scott Mainwaring of the University of Notre Dame (in the district I once represented in Congress) reminds us that although "In 1978, the outlook for democracy in Latin America was bleak..."6 the situation has now changed profoundly in the last two decades. By 1990, virtually every government in the region was either democratic or semidemocratic. 7

Mainwaring observes that since 1978, "The number of democracies in Latin America has been dramatic, and the demise of authoritarianism even more so;" but... lists two countries “where democracy has lost ground: Venezuela and arguably, Colombia.”

Mainwaring adds that despite often dismal economic performance and continued presidentialism, a number of Latin American countries with elected governments have survived.

CHALLENGES TO DEMOCRACY IN LATIN AMERICA

What then are the challenges to effective democracy in Latin America, democracy that goes beyond the characteristic, essential but not sufficient, of “elected government”?

I can do no better in listing these challenges than by referring to the testimony, on June 16, 1999, before the Committee on International Relations of the United States House of Representatives, of the Senior Program Officer for Latin America and the Caribbean of the National Endowment for Democracy, Christopher Sabatini.

All the areas cited by Dr. Sabatini are ones to which the United States, other countries, international organizations and, I am asserting, especially Spain, can make a significant, and positive contribution.

Strengthening the rule of law and enhancing citizen access to the judicial system. The administration of justice is weak in most countries of Latin America.

Fighting corruption. This means finding ways in which civil society can press elected officials for public access to information and can work to increase the transparency and effectiveness of election and campaign finance laws.

Building democratic political parties. Establishing viable and representative political parties is essential to democratic participation, governance and stability in Latin America.

 Battling crime. The democratic solution to rising crime requires improving the criminal justice system, bolstering the police and involving civil society groups both to combat crime and check state encroachment on civil liberties.

Improving civil-military relations. Both civilians and military leaders need to understand their respective responsibilities. The armed forces should be educated on their roles and duties in a democracy.

Defending freedom of the press. Liberty of expression is fundamental to a transparent, democratic system but such freedom is under attack in Latin America. Each country must develop a national network to defend a freedom indispensable to genuine democracy.

Pressing economic growth and reducing inequality of incomes. The wide gap between rich and poor in Latin America is a continuing threat to democratic development there.

Modernizing local governments. Decentralization of resources and responsibilities can better serve citizens but only if accompanied by measures to ensure local levels of accountability.

I add, by way of generalization, that it seems to me imperative, if democratic institutions are to take root and flourish in Latin America, legislative bodies and judicial systems must, like the media, be independent of control by the executive branch of government.

ROLE OF UNIVERSITIES IN STRENGTHENING DEMOCRACY

In all these respects, I take the further liberty of suggesting, I believe there are potential contributions to the development of democracy to be made by universities. Institutions of higher learning can play a valuable role in strengthening democracy. As two respected scholars, Jorge Balan of the Ford Foundation and Daniel C. Levy of the State University of New York at Albany, have insisted, in shaping an agenda for research on higher education policy in Latin America, it is not enough to focus on modernization. Although, they argue, political economics, public policy-making, management and leadership are all legitimate subjects for university courses, they do not suffice. Universities must also look to the study of democracy, of civil society, freedom, of transitions from authoritarianism, of the consolidation of democratic regimes.

FOOTNOTES

2 Ibid.
3 Ibid.
4 Ibid.
5 Ibid.
7 Ibid., p. 103.
8 Ibid., p. 106.

EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

August 3, 1999

Mr. Shimkus. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this time to thank Vandalia resident Shirley Locke who has selflessly volunteered at the Fayette County Hospital’s long-term care unit for the last 23 years. As a volunteer, 64-year-old Shirley Locke works seven days a week for five to nine hours a day calling bingo, serving coffee, and going on outings with the patients. “She’s here more often than any other volunteer”, Shelly Rosenkoetter, activities director for long-term care, said. “We don’t know what we’d do without her.” Shirley wouldn’t trade her volunteer work for anything. “I just wanted something to do,” she said. “It’s like a second home to me. I’m going to do it as long as I can.” I think it is great to see people like Shirley who are willing to volunteer long hours to lend a hand to the people of her community.

IN HONOR OF OFFICER JOAN HONEBEIN AND HER 25 YEARS OF SERVICE TO THE RESIDENTS OF UNION CITY, CA

HON. FORTNEY PETE STARK
OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, August 3, 1999

Mr. STARK. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to honor and congratulate Patrol Officer Joan Honebein on her retirement from twenty-five years of service to the residents of the 13th Congressional District.

Officer Honebein began her career with the Union City Police Department in 1974 when she was assigned to the patrol division. She was one of the first female patrol officers in South County. Joan, like every other officer, was responsible for handling a beat within Union City.

In 1977, Joan was selected to be the director of the Youth Services Bureau. She supervised two youth and family counselors at Y.S.B. and served as the Union City Police Department’s Juvenile Officer until 1984.

In 1984, Officer Honebein returned to the patrol division to resume the duties of patrol officer and the responsibility of a beat. Joan remained a patrol officer until 1992 when she was selected to be the Court Liaison and Juvenile Detective. As a Court Liaison it was Joan’s responsibility to take all pending court cases to the District Attorney’s office for review by the District Attorney. As the Juvenile Detective, she handled all juvenile cases referred to her by the patrol division. In 1997, Joan returned to the patrol division once again as a patrol officer responsible for a beat.

Joan has been a member of several Union City Police Officers Association Executive Boards, rising to the rank of Vice-President. She was also a member of the Union City Lions Club for many years and is a past President. She has volunteered for many of the projects sponsored by the Lions Club in Union City.

In 1998, Joan was voted Officer of the Year by the members of the Union City Police Officers Association in recognition of her willingness to go the extra mile when providing service to the citizens of the community. It was a fitting tribute to an excellent career.

On August 20, 1999 the Union City Police Officer’s Association will honor Officer Honebein at a recognition dinner. I would like to join them in expressing my appreciation for her hard work and dedication. I wish her success in all her future endeavors.
RETIREMENT OF ROGER W. PUTNAM, PRESIDENT OF THE NON COMMISSIONED OFFICERS ASSOCIATION

HON. BOB STUMP OF ARIZONA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, August 3, 1999

Mr. STUMP. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to an outstanding American, a true patriot, and veteran of the Armed Forces of the United States. On August 31, 1999, Roger W. Putnam will retire from his position as president and chief executive officer of the Non Commissioned Officers Association. On that date, Roger Putnam will bring to a close more than 40 years of service to the Nation and military members and veterans.

A retired U.S. Army Command Sergeant Major, Roger Putnam’s military service was indeed distinguished and varied. He originally entered the Air Force in 1949 and served until his discharge in 1952. He continued his public service as a Detroit police officer before returning to the Army in September 1961. During the ensuing 24 years, he rose through the enlisted ranks to Command Sergeant Major in various assignments overseas, including Japan, Ethiopia and Germany, and within the United States. He is a combat veteran of both the Korean and Vietnam Wars. Among numerous campaign and service awards, Roger earned the Silver Star for gallantry in action, Legion of Merit with Oak Leaf Cluster, Bronze Star Medal with 1st Oak Leaf Cluster and Air Medal (5th Award). Roger also earned and is entitled to wear the Master Aircraft Crewman Badge.

Rooger is the Past President of the Enterprise Alabama Rotary Club and has been recognized by the Rotary International as a Paul Harris Fellow. He has served as a Past Chairman of the Commanding General’s Retiree Council, Fort Rucker, Alabama, and has served on the Board of Directors of the Enterprise Chamber of Commerce and the Army Aviation Museum Foundation. Roger also served as vice president of the Community Bank and Trust at Fort Rucker and Enterprise, Alabama.

In March 1998, the NCOA International Board of Directors elected Roger to his current office as President and Chief Executive Officer of the Association. This position was preceded by membership on the International Board of Directors since 1983, including service as its Chairman, and as NCOA’s Vice President for Field Membership Development.

Mr. Speaker, veterans of all eras, indeed all Americans, have benefited from the magnificent service that Roger Putnam has so selflessly given to the Nation. I know that his leadership will be missed within the Non Commissioned Officers Association and veterans’ organizations as well. Mr. Speaker, I am honored to stand before the people’s House and salute Roger for a job exceedingly well done. Thanks for your service, Roger, and may your days ahead be filled with happiness, prosperity and health.

A TRIBUTE TO CAPTAIN BRYAN L. ROLLINS

HON. RANDY “DUKE” CUNNINGHAM
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, August 3, 1999

Mr. CUNNINGHAM. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to express my gratitude for the exceptional services which Captain Bryan L. Rollins, U.S. Navy, has performed for the United States and for the county of San Diego. Captain Rollins’ selfless devotion and patriotic performance make him a truly admirable American and one deserved of recognition by this body. It is for his outstanding service to our Nation and its citizens that I wish to congratulate and thank Captain Rollins.

Captain Rollins has had an impressive Naval career with each assignment more demanding and more impressive than the last. He served aboard the U.S.S. Constellation as the chief staff officer of Carrier Air Wing 14 with deployments to both the Western Pacific and Indian Ocean through 1987. In November of 1990 Captain Rollins assumed duties as commanding officer of the Sun Downers and was deployed once again to the Indian Ocean and to the Western Pacific. He amassed over 3,000 hours and more than 800 carrier landings aboard the U.S.S. Carl Vinson and the U.S.S. Kitty Hawk. While serving as navigator, and later as the executive officer, aboard the U.S.C. Kitty Hawk, Captain Rollins performed honorably in Somalia, the Persian Gulf, and Korea. He was awarded the Legion of Merit, four Meritorious Service Medals, the Navy Commendation Medal, and the Navy Achievement medal.

In April of 1996, while serving as the commanding officer of Naval Air Station Miramar, home of the famed Top Gun aviation aggressor school, he was selected as the Chief of Staff for Commander, Navy Region Southwest. It was there that he was instrumental in the formulation and implementation of a regionalization plan which involved over 65,000 personnel and four full-scale Naval bases. In addition to consolidating and incorporating commands throughout San Diego, he established the Navy’s first regional business office and developed business strategies which have become standard throughout the Navy-wide regionalization plan. His effective and efficient tactics have saved the Navy countless millions of dollars as it undergoes drastic changes nationwide. His management skills, foresight, and exceptional communication skills allowed him to gain widespread support for Navy operations throughout the community.

Captain Rollins’ remarkable contributions to San Diego County, the United States Navy, and our country speak to his intellect, his professional drive and his relentless pursuit of excellence. I wish him the very best success as he starts a new chapter in his life. Congratulations and, as always, “fair winds and following seas.”

RECOGNIZING THE ORDER OF THE NOBLE COMPANIONS OF THE SWAN

HON. BOB FRANKS
OF NEW JERSEY
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, August 3, 1999

Mr. FRANKS of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, in these troubled times of misguided values, when good is often called evil and evil called good, our nation cries out for examples of genuine virtue from which our citizens may take inspiration. That is why I am proud that my home State of New Jersey is the headquarters of the Order of the Noble Companions of the Swan; an international order of Christian chivalry dedicated to perpetuating traditional virtues in the modern world in memory of those Soldiers of the Cross who embarked upon the First Crusade with Godfrey de Bouillon to free the Holy Sepulcher.

Under the leadership of their Grand master, William Anthony Maszer of North Brunswick, New Jersey, who is a hereditary prince of Alabama-Ostrogojis and Garama, the Order of the Noble Companions of the Swan has been raised to the high and noble estate of knighthood amongst Christian chivalry. The members of the Order have sworn solemn knightly vows to bring chivalric virtues into the modern world by preferring honor to worldly wealth, by being just and faithful in words and deeds and by serving as guardians of the weak and humble through their private acts of mercy and charity.

The exemplary efforts of the Order of the Noble Companions of the Swan have brought them international recognition from the Russian College of Heraldry as well as the Diccionario de Ordens de Caballeria y Corporaciones Nobilares in the Kingdom of Spain. Closer to home they have been honored and formally recognized by a Resolution of the New Jersey State Senate and count our Governor, Christine Todd Whitman, among them.

The exemplary efforts of the Order of the Noble Companions of the Swan have brought them international recognition from the Russian College of Heraldry as well as the Diccionario de Ordens de Caballeria y Corporaciones Nobilares in the Kingdom of Spain. Closer to home they have been honored and formally recognized by a Resolution of the New Jersey State Senate and count our Governor, Christine Todd Whitman, among them.

Mr. Speaker, in the fervent desire that the knightly works of the Order of the Noble Companions of the Swan shall continue to serve as an example of virtue in a modern world desperately in need of a moral compass, I would call upon all of our citizens to aspire toward the traditional virtues embodied in this noble Order.

Mr. Speaker, I join with Governor Whitman in the fervent desire that the knightly works of the Order of the Noble Companions of the Swan shall continue to serve as an example of virtue in a modern world desperately in need of a moral compass. I would call upon all of our citizens to aspire toward the traditional virtues embodied in this noble Order.

RECOGNIZING FORMER U.S. SPEAKER OF THE HOUSE THE LATE HENRY T. RAINNEY

HON. JOHN SHIMKUS
OF ILLINOIS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, August 3, 1999

Mr. SHIMKUS. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this time to recognize the extraordinary work of Carrollton’s home town hero, former Speaker of the House Henry T. Rainey. A memorial to the famous resident was hung in the new visitors center in Alton. “Rainey put the Alton area into the world trade and transportation market by pushing an appropriation through the U.S. House to build Locks and Dam 26 in Alton in 1938,” Greene County historian Phil Alfred said. Rainey worked closely with President Roosevelt during the depression until his sudden death in 1934.

Although Rainey served in Congress for thirty years and became one of the most powerful speakers in the history of the U.S. House, he never forgot his roots in Carrollton. He always came back to his town to visit the people of his home town. My colleague Congressman Jerry Costello and I are extremely proud of the residents of the Alton area for taking pride in their community and honoring a great man."

EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

 augmented by his dedication. He has a fine record of accomplishments and is an inspiring example of citizenship. I wish Sergeant Suk the best in all his future endeavors.

OLD JICARILLA ADMINISTRATIVE SITE

SPEECH OF HON. TOM UDALL OF NEW MEXICO IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Mr. UDALL of New Mexico. Mr. Speaker, H.R. 695 would direct the Secretary of the Interior to convey approximately twenty acres of real property and improvements at an abandoned and surplus ranger station administrative site in San Juan County, New Mexico to San Juan College in Farmington, New Mexico. The Forest Service has determined that the "Old Jicarilla Site," as the site is known, is of no further use because the Forest Service moved its operations to a new administrative facility in Bloomfield, New Mexico several years ago. In fact, the site has been unoccupied for several years.

The College would pay for all lands to be conveyed in accordance with the Recreation and Public Purposes Act and would use the site for educational and recreational purposes. In the event that the land ceases to be used for such purposes, they would revert to the United States.

According to Dr. James C. Henderson, President of San Juan College, "San Juan College has grown to be the fourth largest college in New Mexico. The college serves the people of the Northwest quadrant of the state in numerous ways [by] providing business and industrial training, life-long learning opportunities, and various academic and technical degree programs." The transfer of the "Old Jicarilla Site" to San Juan College to better serve the surrounding community by offering new programs that meet the needs of that community. In addition, the facilities would be available to other civic organizations such as the Scouts and the Boys and Girls Club.

This legislation creates a situation in which the federal government, the State of New Mexico, the people of San Juan County, and most importantly, the students and faculty of San Juan College all benefit. I would like to thank Dr. Henderson, Ms. Marjorie Black, Executive Assistant to the President, and the Staff of San Juan College, the Forest Service and the Bureau of Land Management for their hard work directed towards making this transfer a reality. In addition, I would like to thank Representative Wilson for her support as well as my New Mexico colleagues in the Senate; Senator Bingaman, and in particular, Senator Domenici for beginning this effort in the last Congress and for continuing his efforts again this Congress.

HON. JERRY COSTELLO AND I ARE EXTREMELY PROUD OF THE RESIDENTS OF THE ALTON AREA FOR TAKING PRIDE IN THEIR COMMUNITY AND HONORING A GREAT MAN.

HON. FORTNEY PETE STARK OF CALIFORNIA IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES Tuesday, August 3, 1999

Mr. STARK. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to honor Sergeant James Suk, a dedicated member of the Union City Police Department. Sergeant Suk recently retired from service after twenty-eight years of service, and will be honored by the Union City Police Department at a dinner on August 20, 1999.

Sergeant Suk began his law enforcement career in Union City as a Patrol Officer in 1968, just two years after the Union City Police Department was formed. For the first six years of his career, Jim worked as a regular beat officer, handling calls for service. During this time, he also worked in the Traffic Section and as a detective in the Investigations Section.

In 1974, Jim was promoted to the rank of Police Sergeant and was assigned to the Patrol Division as a Watch Commander. He was the first director of the Youth Services Bureau. He also supervised the Investigations and Juvenile Sections. Jim's many assignments have included supervision of the Reserve Police Officer Program, the Prisoner Transportation Section, and the Crime Scene Technicians.

During his long tenure at the Union City Police Department, Jim worked for every Chief of Police the department has had, and is one of the first Police Officers to retire.

Each year, members of the Union City Police Officer's Association vote one outstanding officer as Officer of the Year. In 1996, the honor was awarded to Sergeant James Suk. It was an appropriate recognition for a career of exemplary performance.

James genuinely cares about the people with whom he works. He has taken many new officers under his wing and help guide them in their careers. He is well respected by both his peers and the officers he supervises.

The city will be honoring Sergeant Suk at a retirement dinner on August 20, 1999. I would like to join them in applauding his hard work and dedication. He has a fine record of accomplishments and is an inspiring example of citizenship. I wish Sergeant Suk the best in all his future endeavors.

August 3, 1999

HON. MARK GREEN OF WISCONSIN IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES Monday, August 2, 1999

Mr. GREEN of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to encourage my colleagues to join me in supporting the passage of S. 606. Among other matters already discussed, S. 606 authorizes the U.S. government to finally make good on a $32 million court settlement with the Menominee Indian Tribe in my district. The history of this settlement can be traced to 1954, when the federal government terminated the tribe's federal trust status and the Bureau of Indian Affairs grossly mismanaged many of the tribe's assets.

In 1967, the tribe filed a lawsuit in federal court challenging this termination and seeking damages. After decades of litigation, in 1993 Congress passed a congressional reference directing the U.S. Claims Court to determine what damages, if any, were owed to the tribe. In August of last year, more than three decades after the initial suit was filed, the tribe finally settled its claim against the federal government for $32 million.

As the members of this House are aware, Congress must authorize the payment of this court settlement before any U.S. funds can be released. The court has done its job and the tribe has waited long enough. Now it is time for Congress to do its job and agree to this settlement.

S. 606 passed the Senate by unanimous consent and I am not aware of any opposition to this measure in this House. I would like to thank Mr. McCollum for his help and leadership on moving this legislation forward.

I also applaud Senator Kohl for his many years of work on this issue. I have enjoyed the opportunity to partner with him to bring this matter to a close.

Finally, I would also like to thank Menominee Chairman Apeesnahkwat for his willingness to work with me to ensure these funds won't be used to take any land off the tax rolls. These dollars will only be used to improve education, health care and economic opportunities for the tribe and the areas surrounding the reservation.

Again, I encourage all of my colleagues to help me bring to an end a decades-long legal struggle and also provide much-needed financial assistance to one of the most impoverished areas of my Congressional District.

HONORING NEW BELGIUM BREWERY

HON. BOB SCHAFFER OF COLORADO IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES Tuesday, August 3, 1999

Mr. SCHAFFER. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor a unique entrepreneurial enterprise in... the Fourth Congressional District of Colorado, The New Belgium Brewing Company of Fort Collins. Recently I visited the brewery and saw firsthand the innovative approach that is the key to this successful company. Employees participate, manage, and run the business providing a stimulating and diversified job experience, and a competitive, first-rate product.

Mr. Speaker, the New Belgium Brewery recently received the distinguished honor of the 1999 Ernst & Young Rock Mountain Entrepreneur of the Year Award in the manufacturing category, and also won the “emerging entrepreneur” category in the past. Their output increased 31 percent in 1998, maintaining their prominence within the competitive market of micro brewers.

I hereby commend the success of this outstanding Colorado entrepreneurial company, New Belgium Brewing Company of Fort Collins, Colorado.

RECOGNIZING KEVIN ANDERSON OF GODFREY, ILLINOIS

HON. JOHN SHIMKUS
OF ILLINOIS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, August 3, 1999

Mr. SHIMKUS. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this time to recognize the artistic talent possessed by Kevin Anderson of Godfrey, Illinois. Kevin’s painting of a red woodpecker has been chosen as one of the ten pieces to be featured in the Illinois Audubon Society’s Wildlife Art Challenge exhibit which will be on display at shopping centers, libraries, and other locations throughout the state this year.

Kevin, the son of Sam and Myra Anderson, is a second grade student at Lewis and Clark School. Kevin is the youngest of the 10 pupils whose artwork is included in the Audubon Society display. When Kevin was asked about his painting he responded, “The woodpecker is one of my favorites. I like its bright red head.” It is great to see our youth take interest in our local wildlife. It is very important to educate our young people to appreciate wildlife so that it can be enjoyed for future generations.

THE RYDER ELEMENTARY CHARTER SCHOOL

HON. ILEANA ROS-LEHTINEN OF FLORIDA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, August 3, 1999

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. Mr. Speaker, Thursday, August 19, will mark the opening of the Ryder Elementary Charter School in my district in Miami, Florida where Ryder System, Inc. will ensure quality education for children of their valued and respected employees. The Ryder Elementary Charter School will be the nation’s first “charter school-in-the-workplace.”

Children of Ryder employees will be educated at no cost with a unique curriculum designed specifically to ensure success for its students. Providing child care in the mornings before school and in the early evening while parents are still at work, the Ryder Elementary Charter School will enable parents to continue working in order to better provide for their children, all the while knowing that they are safe and among friends with other 43 parents. By providing these invaluable services to employees and families of the South Florida community, Ryder has set a grand precedent that I hope other American companies and businesses will follow.

This year, the Ryder Elementary Charter School will educate 300 kindergarten through third graders, and will expand to 500 students in kindergarten through fifth grade within the next two years. By initiating this remarkable first of a kind charter school, Ryder has demonstrated a clear commitment to work hard to care for their employees and for their families. In light of their selfless dedication to the future of America, I ask my colleagues to join me in congratulating, and thanking Ryder for their fine work.

INTRODUCTION OF THE METROPOLITAN WASHINGTON REGIONAL TRANSPORTATION ACT

HON. JAMES P. MORAN OF VIRGINIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, August 3, 1999

Mr. MORAN of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to join my House colleague Delegate ELEANOR HOLMES NORTON and Senator CHARLES ROBB today in introducing the “Metropolitan Washington Regional Transportation Act.” This legislation will help jump start relief and ease congestion within the metropolitan Washington, DC region.

For more than four years running, we have the second longest average commuting time in the nation. According to the Greater Washington Board of Trade, this increased commuting time and congestion costs each man, woman, and child in the region more than $1,050 per year in lost time, wasted fuel, and environmental damage. Long commutes and traffic congestion have also become quality of life issues to area residents, robbing many families of the one commodity Washingtonians never seem to have enough of—time.

Some drivers facing a longer commute have even become a safety hazard as they race recklessly to cut a precious few minutes from their daily commute. For those who lack cars, the distance between employment opportunities and affordable housing has grown more and more difficult to traverse. Our economic prosperity and quality of life hinge on improving our congestion problem.

Unfortunately, as we look to the future the traffic situation only grows worse. Even with the increase in federal funds Virginia, Maryland and DC will receive under legislation reauthorizing federal surface transportation programs, “TEA–21,” this region will still fall seriously short of meeting the growing demand for transportation improvements.

For the period of 1990 through 2020, this region has been identified as one of the nation’s most congested areas. Washington, DC will receive under legislation reauthorizing federal surface transportation programs, “TEA–21,” this region will still fall seriously short of meeting the growing demand for transportation improvements.

For the period of 1990 through 2020, this region will continue to increase in population and 43 percent increase in employment. This growth and increased dependency on the automobile is expected to increase, by 79 percent, the number of vehicle miles traveled in the region by 2020. The Board of Trade estimates that transportation spending is expected to fall short of the region’s long-term transportation needs by more than $500 million annually.

Any solution to current and future congestion demands strategic investment in both our road and mass transit system. It demands better land use and planning decisions and better interjurisdictional cooperation. And it also demands that this region come together and raise additional revenue to finance priority transportation projects that will provide immediate congestion relief. It may not be a popular idea, but we have to do more, and we need to do it ourselves. It seems to me, that the only way to ensure that we get 100 percent of the funds we need for our transportation projects is to raise more ourselves and spend it locally.

It is also a process that ensures that the money spent is where it is needed most. I think the key to public support is identifying a list of priority projects that could be completed on a fast track providing the public with the assurances that their additional tax dollars will buy specific congestion relief. A large number of urban communities have already established a dedicated funding source for their transit systems.

In the past, leaders from this region have shared a vision and worked together successfully to address important transportation needs, through such institutions as the Metropolitan Washington Airports Authority, the Metropolitan Washington Airports Authority, and the National Capital Region Transportation Planning Board at the Metropolitan Washington Council of Governments. We need a similar vision to carry us forward another 30 years. The Metropolitan Washington Regional Transportation Act will help us craft this vision.

The legislation we are introducing today has five key elements.

(1) It provides a new option to help the metropolitan Washington region more effectively address its transportation needs;

(2) It empowers the National Capital Region Transportation Planning Board to consult with the metropolitan Washington region jurisdictions and the public to achieve consensus on a list of critical transportation projects and a funding mechanism that is needed to address the growing congestion crisis in the region but cannot be funded within the current and forecasted federal, state and local funding levels for such projects.

(3) It establishes a corporation with the power to accept revenue and issue debt to provide short-term funding for projects that have been agreed to by the region;

(4) It grants consent to the metropolitan Washington region jurisdictions to enter into an interstate compact or agreement that would help meet the region’s long-term transportation needs; and

(5) It provides $60 million in matching federal grants as an incentive to encourage the creation of the federal corporation.
Mr. BOSWELL. Mr. Speaker, I take this opportunity to give special recognition to Mr. Leonard A. Hadley, for his 40 years of service to Maytag Corporation. He is a worldwide leader in the appliance industry. Mr. Hadley’s contributions as Chairman and Chief Executive Officer, since 1992, contributed greatly to that success. The continued emphasis on developing unique, innovative products while maintaining its reputation for quality and traditional Iowa values makes Leonard A. Hadley a valuable asset to the community of Newton, Iowa. He is a worldwide leader in the appliance industry. Mr. Hadley’s contributions as Chairman and Chief Executive Officer, since 1992, contributed greatly to that success. The continued emphasis on developing unique, innovative products while maintaining its reputation for quality and traditional Iowa values makes Leonard A. Hadley a valuable asset to the community of Newton, Iowa.

Mr. Hadley has also distinguished himself through his service on the boards of other leading businesses, indicating his strong commitment to building and maintaining a vibrant business climate in Iowa and the nation. He was recognized within the business community for his dedication and commitment to excellence by being inducted into the Iowa Business Hall of Fame in 1997.

I am confident we will continue to hear of many future contributions made by Mr. Hadley in his retirement which will greatly enhance our community, state and nation. I ask my colleagues to join me in offering a hearty congratulations and special recognition to Leonard A. Hadley as he prepares to retire after 40 successful years at Maytag Corporation.

Mr. BOSWELL. Mr. Speaker, I take this opportunity to give special recognition to Mr. Leonard A. Hadley, for his 40 years of service to Maytag Corporation. He is a worldwide leader in the appliance industry. Mr. Hadley’s contributions as Chairman and Chief Executive Officer, since 1992, contributed greatly to that success. The continued emphasis on developing unique, innovative products while maintaining its reputation for quality and traditional Iowa values makes Leonard A. Hadley a valuable asset to the community of Newton, Iowa. He is a worldwide leader in the appliance industry. Mr. Hadley’s contributions as Chairman and Chief Executive Officer, since 1992, contributed greatly to that success. The continued emphasis on developing unique, innovative products while maintaining its reputation for quality and traditional Iowa values makes Leonard A. Hadley a valuable asset to the community of Newton, Iowa.

Mr. Hadley has also distinguished himself through his service on the boards of other leading businesses, indicating his strong commitment to building and maintaining a vibrant business climate in Iowa and the nation. He was recognized within the business community for his dedication and commitment to excellence by being inducted into the Iowa Business Hall of Fame in 1997.

I am confident we will continue to hear of many future contributions made by Mr. Hadley in his retirement which will greatly enhance our community, state and nation. I ask my colleagues to join me in offering a hearty congratulations and special recognition to Leonard A. Hadley as he prepares to retire after 40 successful years at Maytag Corporation.

Congressional District, wish to recognize the many valuable contributions made by Mr. Hadley as he enters retirement.

Mr. BOSWELL. Mr. Speaker, I take this opportunity to give special recognition to Mr. Leonard A. Hadley, for his 40 years of service to Maytag Corporation. He is a worldwide leader in the appliance industry. Mr. Hadley’s contributions as Chairman and Chief Executive Officer, since 1992, contributed greatly to that success. The continued emphasis on developing unique, innovative products while maintaining its reputation for quality and traditional Iowa values makes Leonard A. Hadley a valuable asset to the community of Newton, Iowa. He is a worldwide leader in the appliance industry. Mr. Hadley’s contributions as Chairman and Chief Executive Officer, since 1992, contributed greatly to that success. The continued emphasis on developing unique, innovative products while maintaining its reputation for quality and traditional Iowa values makes Leonard A. Hadley a valuable asset to the community of Newton, Iowa.

Mr. Hadley has also distinguished himself through his service on the boards of other leading businesses, indicating his strong commitment to building and maintaining a vibrant business climate in Iowa and the nation. He was recognized within the business community for his dedication and commitment to excellence by being inducted into the Iowa Business Hall of Fame in 1997.

I am confident we will continue to hear of many future contributions made by Mr. Hadley in his retirement which will greatly enhance our community, state and nation. I ask my colleagues to join me in offering a hearty congratulations and special recognition to Leonard A. Hadley as he prepares to retire after 40 successful years at Maytag Corporation.

CONGRATULATIONS DAVID BAILEY

HON. SCOTT McINNIS
OF COLORADO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, August 3, 1999

Mr. McINNIS. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take a moment to recognize the career and contributions to small businesses of one of Colorado’s esteemed citizens, president and chief operating officer of Norwest Bank Colorado, David E. Bailey. In doing so, I would like to honor this man who, for many years, has exhibited dedication and experience to the banking industry.

Mr. Bailey has recently been honored for his achievements for small businesses. He began his career in 1969 by holding several management positions, at Norwest Bank in Denver. He went on to undertake the responsibilities of chairman, president, and CEO of Norwest Banks in Boulder, Greeley, and Fort Collins. At this time he also took responsibility for eight banks in northern Colorado. From there Mr. Bailey was elected chairman of the board and was in charge when the merger of Norwest Colorado, N.A. went into effect. He was then named president of Norwest, Colorado, N.A.

David Bailey has more than proven himself a valuable asset to the business and banking system of Colorado. As a trustee of the Colorado State University Research Foundation, a member of the Denver Rotary and Colorado Concern he has also proven himself as an asset to the community of Colorado in general.

It is with this, Mr. Speaker, that I say thank you to David E. Bailey on his truly exceptional career in the Norwest banking system and for his dedication to small businesses and our community at large. Due to Mr. Bailey’s dedicated service, it is clear that Colorado is a better place

SPECIAL RECOGNITION TO LEONARD A. HADLEY FOR 40 YEARS OF SERVICE TO MAYTAG

HON. LEO NARD L. BOSWELL OF IOWA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, August 3, 1999

Mr. BOSWELL. Mr. Speaker, I take this opportunity to give special recognition to Mr. Leonard A. Hadley, for his 40 years of service to Maytag Corporation of Newton, Iowa. I am privileged to represent Iowa’s 3rd Congressional District, which is home to Maytag Corporation. I, along with the residents of the 3rd Congressional District, wish to recognize the many valuable contributions made by Mr. Hadley as he enters retirement.

We, in Iowa, are particularly proud of the Maytag Corporation. It is recognized as a worldwide leader in the appliance industry. Mr. Hadley’s contributions as Chairman and Chief Executive Officer, since 1992, contributed greatly to that success. The continued emphasis on developing unique, innovative products while maintaining its reputation for quality and traditional Iowa values makes Leonard A. Hadley’s tenure at Maytag Corporation particularly noteworthy.

Mr. Hadley has also distinguished himself through his service on the boards of other leading businesses, indicating his strong commitment to building and maintaining a vibrant business climate in Iowa and the nation. He was recognized within the business community for his dedication and commitment to excellence by being inducted into the Iowa Business Hall of Fame in 1997.

I am confident we will continue to hear of many future contributions made by Mr. Hadley in his retirement which will greatly enhance our community, state and nation. I ask my colleagues to join me in offering a hearty congratulations and special recognition to Leonard A. Hadley as he prepares to retire after 40 successful years at Maytag Corporation.

CONGRATULATIONS DAVID BAILEY

HON. SCOTT McINNIS
OF COLORADO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, August 3, 1999

Mr. McINNIS. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take a moment to recognize the career and contributions to small businesses of one of Colorado’s esteemed citizens, president and chief operating officer of Norwest Bank Colorado, David E. Bailey. In doing so, I would like to honor this man who, for many years, has exhibited dedication and experience to the banking industry.

Mr. Bailey has recently been honored for his achievements for small businesses. He began his career in 1969 by holding several management positions, at Norwest Bank in Denver. He went on to undertake the responsibilities of chairman, president, and CEO of Norwest Banks in Boulder, Greeley, and Fort Collins. At this time he also took responsibility for eight banks in northern Colorado. From there Mr. Bailey was elected chairman of the board and was in charge when the merger of Norwest Colorado, N.A. went into effect. He was then named president of Norwest, Colorado, N.A.

David Bailey has more than proven himself a valuable asset to the business and banking system of Colorado. As a trustee of the Colorado State University Research Foundation, a member of the Denver Rotary and Colorado Concern he has also proven himself as an asset to the community of Colorado in general.

It is with this, Mr. Speaker, that I say thank you to David E. Bailey on his truly exceptional career in the Norwest banking system and for his dedication to small businesses and our community at large. Due to Mr. Bailey’s dedicated service, it is clear that Colorado is a better place important educational benefits for the visitors but also provides important economic benefits to Colorado.

So, ending this program would be bad for Colorado, and something that I can’t support. I urge the defeat of the amendment.

FOREIGN OPERATIONS, EXPORT, FINANCING, AND RELATED PROGRAMS APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 2000

SPEECH OF
HON. PATSY T. MINK OF HAWAII
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, July 29, 1999

The House in Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union had under consideration the bill (H.R. 2606) making appropriations for foreign operations, export financing, and related programs for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2000, and for other purposes:

Mrs. MINK of Hawaii. Mr. Chairman, I rise to express my support for the Moakley amendment to H.R. 2606, Foreign Operations Appropriations for FY2000.

The Moakley amendment would prohibit funding for the United States Army School of the Americas (SOA) located in Fort Benning, GA—a school which has produced some of the most notorious human rights violators in Latin America. Currently $20 million of the U.S. taxpayers money goes to train approximately 2,000 Latin American soldiers in military techniques, ostensibly to advance respect for civil authority and human rights.

Supporters of the SOA claim this school is a key foreign policy tool for the U.S. in Latin America and the Caribbean, helping to shape the region’s leadership in ways favorable to American interests. They assert that the school has played a constructive role in promoting democracy in Latin America over the last decade; in reducing the flow of illicit drugs to the United States; and in emphasizing respect for human rights and civilian control of the military through their academic curriculum.

In fact, the SOA has repeatedly proven its disregard for human rights and democratic values.

In a school professing to advance democratic values and human rights, only 15 percent of the courses offered relate to these subjects. Less than 10 percent of the student body enroll in these courses. Only 8 percent of students enroll in the counter-narcotics course in any given year. Dozens of those who have taken this course have been tied to drug trafficking.

With the titles of courses such as “Methods of Torture” and “Murder 101,” the SOA has produced apt pupils. When six Jesuit priests, their housekeeper, and her daughter were murdered on November 16, 1989 in El Salvador, 19 of the 26 implicated in the murders were graduates of the SOA. Two of the three officers responsible for the assassination of pacifist Archbishop Romero went to the SOA. The officer who commanded the massacre of 30 defenseless peasants in the Colombian village of Mapiiran graduated from the SOA.

Panamanian dictator and drug kingpin Manuel Noriega is one of the SOA’s distinguished alumni.

These atrocious examples of terror and violence exhibit the extent to which the SOA has violated human rights and undermined democratic values throughout the Western hemisphere. Clearly, officers who attended SOA are not spreading American values of peace and democracy throughout Latin America.

It is not in American interests to continue support for the U.S. Army School of the Americas. For the sake of human rights and democracy, I urge my colleagues to support the Moakley amendment to end funding for the SOA.

FOREIGN OPERATIONS, EXPORT FINANCING, AND RELATED PROGRAMS APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 2000

SPEECH OF
HON. LUCILLE ROYBAL-ALLARD
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, July 29, 1999

The House in Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union had under consideration the bill (H.R. 2606) making appropriations for foreign operations, export financing, and related programs for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2000, and for other purposes;

Ms. ROYBAL-ALLARD. Mr. Chairman, the Foreign Operations Appropriations bill for fiscal year 2000 that was reported by the appropriations subcommittee, was a fair and bipartisan bill, given the tight funding restrictions.

Although the subcommittee’s allocation of $12.8 million was $2.7 million below the FY 1999 funding level, I am pleased that the panel included increases in critical programs such as, the Child Survival Account and the Assistance for Displaced and Orphaned and Children Account within U.S.A.I.D. These programs provide critically needed assistance to sick, needy, and orphaned children in developing countries.

I would like thank Chairman SONNY CALAHAN and Ranking Member NANCY PELOSI for including $34 million, for the U.S. Agency for International Development’s Collaborative Research Support Programs—a 100% increase over last year’s funding. This program utilizes our leading universities, including the University of California, to help developing countries make improvements in agriculture. Supporting agricultural research is critical because we know that political stability is largely dependent on a developing country’s ability to maintain a stable food supply. The Collaborative Research Support Program helps developing countries achieve this goal, thereby furthering our own interests as well as theirs.

However, despite the increases in these valuable programs, I must strongly object to the $200 million that was cut from the World Bank’s International Development Association at the direction of the Republican leadership. Cutting funds from this multilateral development program sends a message to other member-countries that the U.S. believes it is O.K. to shirk one’s responsibility to developing countries. We should not send this message. Bank’s International Development Association not only the substance of this cut, but also to the manner in which this cut was made. As I previously stated, the bill reported out of subcommittee was a fair, bi-partisan bill. Unfortunately, the continuing insistence of the Republican leadership to make last minute cuts to our appropriations bills during full committee and House floor consideration has sorely undermined what should be a bi-partisan process.

Not providing responsible levels of funding for our government programs not only hurts our country, but results in increased emergency spending in the long run. While I will vote in favor of the bill in order to move the process along, it is my hope that the Republican leadership will recognize the short-sightedness of this strategy and restore this bill and others to their original funding levels.

FOREIGN OPERATIONS, EXPORT FINANCING, AND RELATED PROGRAMS APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 2000

SPEECH OF
HON. NORMAN D. DICKS OF WASHINGTON
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, August 2, 1999

The House in Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union had under consideration the bill (H.R. 2606) making appropriations for foreign operations, export financing, and related programs for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2000, and for other purposes:

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Chairman, the United States is the world’s largest trader. Our exports directly support almost 12 million U.S. jobs and have accounted for 30 percent of the U.S. economic growth over the past decade. With 94 percent of the world’s population and the fastest-growing markets all located overseas, there is no question that U.S. exports are key to our nation’s economic success and future.

Competition for these growing markets is fierce, and competitive financing is often the critical element to winning sales for U.S. goods and services. It is therefore crucial to our nation’s interest to preserve and strengthen U.S. export finance and the Export-Import Bank to provide the foundation and means for expanding overseas trade.

In FY 1998, the Bank supported $13 billion in exports that otherwise may not have been sold. These sales have sustained tens of thousands of well-paying jobs here in the United States. Furthermore, the Bank is working to help U.S. exporters maintain a foothold in countries like South Korea and Brazil, which are suffering difficulties yet still offer important opportunities for exporters.

The Ex-Im Bank is also an important source of assistance to small businesses to sell their products overseas. Each year, the Bank services about 2,000 new small business transactions, and is involved in more than 10,000 small business transactions.

Although the overall funding for the Bank was reduced by $1 million, the Committee did approve a crucial $5 million increase in the Bank’s Administrative budget that will enable the Bank to modernize its computer systems and to invest its commitment to have Hekets to help American businesses sell overseas. This modernization is absolutely necessary at this time to ensure that the Bank is Y2K compliant.

New systems and personnel will also help the bank reduce turn-around time on decisions for both small and large U.S. exporters.

The gentleman’s amendment would prohibit the Bank, as well and the Overseas Private Investment Corporation and the Trade Development Agency, from entering into any new obligations. This extremely dangerous amendment plays right into the hands of our European and Asian competitors, who will not cease to subsidize and finance the deals that their companies make simply because we will have chosen to do so; rather, this amendment will make it even more difficult for American exporters to compete in the combative world-wide marketplace, cutting U.S. jobs in the process.

This amendment may save a few dollars, but I assure my colleagues that the costs in lost exports and lost jobs far outweigh any savings we may incur. I urge my colleagues to fight to preserve American jobs and votes against this amendment.

IN SUPPORT FOR THE PATIENTS’ BILL OF RIGHTS

HON. EARL POMEROY OF NORTH DAKOTA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, August 3, 1999

Mr. POMEROY. Mr. Speaker, today I am signing the discharge petition for the purpose of forcing floor consideration of the Patient’s Bill of Rights. I have held back from this action before this time out of my expectation the House Speaker would have brought this issue—if not this bill—forward before the August recess.

I am disappointed the majority leadership has broken its practice to have House action on this matter this week. The Senate has acted. The American people want Congress to act. Because the indefinite House delay is irresponsible and very unfortunate I am signing the discharge petition. I hope all minority members who have yet to sign will in this action. I further hope that we will be joined by a sufficient number of Republicans who understand that it is time to act, in order to finally force House action on this issue.

EXPLANATION OF OMNIBUS LONG-TERM HEALTH CARE ACT OF 1999

HON. FORNEY PETE STARK
OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, August 3, 1999

Mr. STARK. Mr. Speaker, I am introducing the Omnibus Long-Term Health Care Act of 1999. We are joined by Representatives McGovern, McDermott, Moakley, Oliver, Capuano, and Gordon.

The following is a detailed outline of the provisions of this legislation. We invite members of the House to join us in considering this legislation. We invite the public to suggest refinements and additions to the legislation to make it more comprehensive, workable, and effective legislation to help the millions of Americans facing the problems of obtaining quality long-term health care.

TITLE I: LONG-TERM CARE CUMULATIVE TAX CREDIT

Title I of the bill provides a $1000 tax credit similar to the one described by the President in his State of the Union address. Our proposal has several notable differences. First, our tax credit is completely refundable, and there is no distinction between care for an adult or a child. If the credit is not refundable, it will fail to help those families in greatest need of help.

To be honest, $1000 is not that much money for long-term care, but it does provide a family with modest relief that they can use as they see fit. That is why we have structured the bill to ensure those who most need the support will receive the refund.

Another important distinction between our proposal and the President’s is the treatment of children with long term care needs. The President’s proposal would limit the tax credit to $500 for children with long term care needs. We do not agree with this policy. The long-term care needs of a disabled child are just as expensive and emotionally and troubling as they are for an adult.

Our legislation also has a broader definition of individuals with long-term care needs. The President’s proposal includes individuals who require assistance in performing activities of daily living (bathing, dressing, eating, continence, toiletine, and transferring in and out of a bed or chair). This is a good start but does not include people with severe mental health disabilities or developmental disabilities who cannot live independently.

Finally, our legislation limits the amount of the refund for the wealthy, not the poor. In our bill, reductions in the refund begin at the upper income levels, not the lower income levels. The full refund is available up to income of $110,000 for a joint return, $75,000 for an individual return, and $55,000 for a married individual filing a separate return. Above these levels, the refund is decreased by $50 by every $1,000 over the threshold level.

TITLE II: LONG-TERM CARE MEDICARE IMPROVEMENTS

Title II of the legislation addresses a range of reforms and improvements to Medicare benefits. The goal of this title is to provide adequate long-term coverage to patients with chronic health care needs. We believe that we can adjust Medicare benefits so that people can continue to live in their homes and communities, and enjoy the contact with their families and friends. These proposals are cost effective as they rely on services in facilities other than hospitals and skilled nursing facilities, and allow people to continue to live in familiar surroundings with their family.

2. ADULT DAY CARE

The second section of this title’s reforms is a provision for Medicare Substitute Adult Day Care Services. This provision would incorporate the setting care into the current Medicare home health benefit. The provision allows beneficiaries to substitute any portion of their Medicare home health services for care in an adult day care center (ADC). Adult day care centers provide effective alternatives to complete confinement at home. Many States have used Medicaid funding to take advantage of ADCs for their patients.

For many, the ADC setting is superior to traditional home health care. The ADC can provide skilled therapy like the home health provider. In addition, the ADC also provides rehabilitation activities and means for the patients. Similarly, the ADCs provide a social setting within a therapeutic environment to serve patients with a variety of needs.

To achieve cost savings, the ADC would be paid a flat rate of 95% of the rate that would have been paid for the service had it been delivered in the patient’s home. The care would include the home health benefit and transportation, meals and supervised activities. As an added budget neutrality measure, the title allows the Secretary of Health and Human Services to lower the payment rate for ADC services if growth in those services is greater than current projections under the traditional home health program.

This program is not an expansion of the home health benefit. It would not make any new people eligible for the Medicare home health benefit. Nor would it expand the definition of what qualifies for reimbursement by Medicare for home health services. This legislation recognizes that ADCs can provide the same services, at lower costs, than traditional home health care. Furthermore, the legislation recognizes the benefits of social interaction, activities, meals, and a therapeutic environment in which trained professionals can treat, monitor, and support patients.

The legislation also includes important quality and anti-fraud protections. In order to participate in the Medicare home care program, ADCs must meet the same standards set for home health agencies. The only exception is that the ADCs would not be required to be “primarily” involved in the provision of skilled nursing services and therapy services. The exception recognizes that ADCs provide services to an array of patients and that skilled nursing services and therapy services are not their primary activity.
EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

Here is an example of how the system would work. A physician prescribes home care for the patient. Next, the patient and his or her family agree to arrange for the services. They could choose to receive all services through home care, or choose a mix of adult day care and home care services. Therefore, if the patient required three physical therapy visits and two home health aide visits, the patient could receive the physical therapy at the ADC while retaining the home health aide visits. When the patient goes to the ADC, he or she will receive the physical therapy and other benefits the ADC provides. All of these services would be incorporated into the payment rate of 95% of the home setting rate for the physical therapy service. This plan offers a savings for Medicare and an improved benefit to the patient.

3. HOME HEALTH CASE MANAGERS

The third section of this title makes a number of improvements in the quality of services provided through home care. First it establishes a case manager who will oversee the provision of home health care. This section of the legislation will ensure that those in need of long-term health care will receive necessary and cost effective care.

The Balanced Budget Act of 1997 (BBA) implemented a number of policies designed to slow the growth of a health benefit that was doubling in cost every three or four years. Prior to the BBA, the incentive to home health agencies was to over-use services to boost profits. In the BBA’s prospective payment system (PPS), the incentive will be the opposite and there are real concerns about potential under-utilization of services.

The Medicare Home Health Case Manager legislation would ensure that an independent case manager evaluates the patient’s needs and service level. The case manager will be financially independent of the home health agency and would be paid through a Medicare fee-schedule, independent of the amount or type of care the patients receive. The legislation would also provide the Health Care Financing Administration (HCFA) with the flexibility to develop incentives to encourage home health care case managers on a competitively bid basis.

This type of case manager program is endorsed by the Medicare Payment Advisory Commission (MedPAC), a Commission appointed by Congress to provide expert advice on Medicare and Medicaid policy. In their March 1998 report to Congress they recommended that such a case manager be adopted for the home health benefit. Their report states:

Such an assessment would help to minimize the provision of services of marginal clinical value, while ensuring that patients receive appropriate care. Requiring case management of long-term home health users could improve outcomes for individuals with long-term home health needs and at the same time slow the growth of Medicare home health expenditures. (Emphasis added).

In addition, there are real-life examples of case management that have significant savings and improving care. For example, Maryland’s Medicaid program has a high cost user initiative which in FY 96 saved the state $3.30 for each $1 spent—a savings of 230%. The Health Insurance Association of America also commissioned a study of its member plans and found that rehabilitation/case management programs return an investment of $30 for every $1 spent.

Therefore, this section would achieve two important goals. First, it saves money. Second, the program ensures that patient’s needs are met. Patient’s care should be determined based on an objective and independent evaluation of the patient’s condition, not the bottom line of a health care corporation.

4. COORDINATED CARE

Another section recognizes that there are many medical conditions, such as congestive heart failure, that create severe long-term care needs that need coordinated, comprehensive care. Many people suffer an acute condition that leaves them weakened and in need of health care long after the acute phase of the condition passes. Currently, Medicare does not adequately cover an expensive recuperation that can last for months. This section directs the Secretary to identify 10 medical conditions, clustered by diagnostic related groups (DRGs) that consistently require intense follow-up care. Along with the 10 DRGs, the Secretary would determine reasonable costs to cover comprehensive case management, caregiver education and training, and other general assistance. Our proposal requires the Secretary of Health and Human Services to identify those medical conditions, clustered into logical DRGs that represent the most expensive home health services, most consistently require home health services, and require the longest period of convalescence. Using these DRGs, the Secretary will be able to develop a better system of coordinating care and helping families.

5. OTHER HOME HEALTH SERVICE IMPROVEMENT

Adopting a provision from Rep. Jim McGovern’s bill, we propose an outlier policy. In brief, this provision requires that HCFA develop a home health agency outlier program, so that agencies do not avoid the money-losing, harder to care for cases. We also propose to strengthen the provisions in the BBA that require hospitals to give more objective information to patients about the full range of post-hospital services, and not just direct patients to their hospital-owned services. Finally, we give more flexibility to the “homebound” rule.

Another section provides broad revisions and improvements to the hospice care benefit. Hospice care includes interdisciplinary professional services for patients whose health condition will not benefit from cure-based treatments. Hospice care is offered to the person’s residence or a skilled facility, provides palliative care to reduce pain and enhance the patient’s quality of life. For those patients in the terminal phase of their life, hospice care offers final comfort for the patient and the patient’s family. The current rules governing hospice care are not effective. We strongly recommend new incentives to recommend this alternative for their patients.

In a 1999 report to Congress, MedPAC commented that, “Another vulnerable population is the nearly 2 million Medicare beneficiaries who die each year. Too many of their physical, emotional, and other needs go unmet, although good care could minimize or eliminate this unnecessary suffering. Even hospices—which pioneered care for the dying—help only a fraction of patients and are often used far later than they should be. Ensuring that beneficiaries receive human, appropriate care at the end of their lives should be a priority for the Medicare program.

The consequence of our current medical practice is that patients remain in more expensive treatment facilities and do not receive the palliative care they require. This section of the bill offers three specific measures to address this problem.

First, the legislation would direct the Secretary to designate DRGs that indicate a chronic and terminal condition that are most likely to lead to death, and for which hospice care may provide assistance. These DRGs would then be used as a part of the patient’s discharge planning. The intent of this section is to ensure that patients receive a complete review of their treatment and care options, including hospice options in the patient’s community.

A second solution is to ensure that information regarding hospice care becomes a part of physician training. This section does not require that physicians become proficient in the medical practice of hospice care, only that they become more aware of its services as an option for terminally ill patients.

The legislation would also include hospice care within the federal employees health benefits program (FEHBP). We hope that by including this benefit for our nation’s federal employees, we will set a standard for other insurance providers. The net result would be that patients will obtain necessary hospice care during the final days of their lives.

7. HELP FOR LOW-INCOME SENIORS AND DISABLED

Another section of this title will help all lower-income Medicare beneficiaries—and the chronically ill, the disabled, and the frail ‘old-old’ who tend to be those with the least income. This amendment is a repeat of a bill introduced by Rep. McDermott and Stark (HR 1455) which coordinates SSA and IRS data to presume that individuals who show income below the poverty level are eligible for the QMBs and SLMBs programs and presupposes them in the QMBs. Today about 40% to 50% of those who are eligible for these programs which pay Medicare’s premiums, deductibles, and copays, fail to enroll. Presumptive enrollment will provide hundreds, even thousands of dollars of help per year to our nation’s poorest, most vulnerable citizens.

Title III: Nursing Home Improvements

Title three of the legislation provides a number of reforms to laws and regulations governing skilled nursing facilities. Earlier this year, the General Accounting Office released a report that several members of Congress and Rep. Stark requested. That report, "Nursing Homes: Additional Steps Needed to Strengthen Enforcement of Federal Quality Standards (GAO/HEHS–99–46)" indicated that more than 40 percent of the skilled nursing facilities did not comply with fundamental quality standards. In many cases, these deviations from acceptable standards resulted in a serious threat to the health of patients living in nursing homes. At least 25 percent of the homes reviewed violated standards that eventually created actual harm to the residents.
Currently, 1.6 million elderly live in skilled nursing facilities. These people are among the sickest and most vulnerable segments of the population. A major portion of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1987 (OBRA '87) brought sweeping reforms to the nursing home industry. That legislation did much to improve and ensure the quality of health care provided in skilled nursing facilities. Fortunately, the majority of skilled nursing facilities responded well to these changes and continue to offer quality care for their patients. Unfortunately, a sizable minority of skilled nursing facilities continues to place profits ahead of quality care. Because of the continued failure of these providers, we must give the states and health care regulators the legal tools to bring these providers into line or remove them from the system.

This title provides several important modifications and additions to the OBRA-87 legislation. First, all skilled nursing facilities will be required to conspicuously post in each ward of the facility a list of the names and credentials of the on-staff employees directly responsible for resident care and the current ratios of residents to staff. This simple requirement will allow families and the nursing home ombudsman program to determine whether the facility provides adequate staff to attend to the residents' needs. In addition, the legislation would direct the Secretary of Health and Human Services to issue guidelines for adequate staffing for skilled nursing facilities.

The second provision of this title gives states alternative punitive measures to use with repeatedly noncompliant nursing facilities. One of the distressing trends identified in the GAO report is a phenomenon they describe as a "yo-yo" effect. A nursing facility will correct the problem and avoid the fines or penalties. Once found to be in compliance, the facility will slip back and provide substandard services until cited again by regulators.

Our proposed legislation offers two fixes. First, the legislation would allow states to require the expunction of resurveying and reinspection of the skilled nursing facility where there has been a substantial violation of the regulations. Second, the legislation would prohibit the facility from including the costs of the resurveying and reinspection in its reasonable costs figures. In other words, they cannot pass the bill of rectification onto Medicare or Medicaid. This proposal is a clear financial disincentive for homes to practice a yo-yo management and adds an important regulatory tool for the states.

The third major initiative in our legislation is the requirement of criminal background checks. Skilled nursing facilities would be required to conduct a criminal background check of all employees and would be prohibited from hiring any person who has been convicted of patient or residence abuse. This portion of the legislation makes clear that we do not want felons who have a history of abusing others working with one of the most vulnerable groups of people in the nation.

Finally, the legislation requires skilled nursing facilities to report cases when an employee has harmed a patient or resident. The legislation calls for revising the current Nursing Employee Registry and will list any nursing facility employee who has been convicted or had a finding of abuse or neglect of a patient.

Title four of the legislation addresses long-term care insurance. The first chapter encourages long-term health care policies for federal and nongovernmental employees. The second chapter extends the consumer protection standards contained within the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act to all long-term care policies.

First, it directs the Office of Personnel Management to provide for the sale to the general public of group long-term care insurance policies that are offered to federal employees. The legislation keeps separate the premiums and costs of nongovernmental employment policies. This will provide a tool for the states.

This important portion of the bill would provide an incentive for homes to practice a yo-yo management to provide for the sale to the general public of group long-term care insurance policies that are offered to federal employees.

The next section extends the consumer protection standards contained within the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act to all long-term care policies. Currently, these standards apply to only tax-qualified policies. Without these protections, some insurance providers may be tempted to provide long-term care policies that do not provide the level of financial protection that consumers need. Because of the expense of these policies, the consequences of purchasing inadequate insurance, and the difficulty of understanding these policies, we need to ensure that reasonable quality standards protect consumers from buying inadequate and inappropriate long-term care policies.

Title five of the legislation is an extension of the Older Americans Act of 1965. Title five of the legislation is the extension of the Older Americans Act of 1965, as proposed by the President to include grants for care giver assistance.

Title six of the legislation would provide caregivers an early option to join Medicare. This provision is important because it would provide increased access to health coverage for Americans who are the primary caregivers for family member with long-term care needs.

Many Americans must quit job or retire early to care for a family member who has long care needs. In addition, they tend to range in age from 55 to 64. Consequently, health insurance companies refuse to insure them or charge huge premiums. Our proposal would cover nearly five million early caregivers who face the prospect of being uninsured and who are helping all of us by keeping other individuals out of taxpayer-subsidized institutions. This provision allows qualifying individuals to receive Medicare coverage when they leave their employment to provide long-term care for a spouse or relative.

Title seven also protects the future retirement income of caregivers who leave their employment to offer long-term care. This title does two things. First, it ensures that caregivers will continue to receive their Social Security credits while they are caregivers. Second, while the caregiver is unemployed he or she will be credited with the arithmetic average of his or her previous three years of employment as a contribution to income.

FOREIGN OPERATIONS, EXPORT FINANCING, AND RELATED PROGRAMS APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 2000

The House in Committee of the Whole on the State of the Union had under consideration the bill (H.R. 2606) making appropriations for foreign operations, export financing, and related programs for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2000, and for other purposes:

Ms. SANCHEZ. Mr. Chairman, today the House considered the Foreign Operations Appropriations Bill for fiscal year 2000. One issue of great concern to me was the absence of funding for the Community Adjustment and Investment Program (CAIP) in this appropriations bill. The CAIP is a way of helping communities that are negatively impacted by NAFTA.

With NAFTA came hard times for many areas around the country. Businesses moved operations to Mexico, leaving thousands of Americans without jobs and many communities in economic distress.

The CAIP program allows NAFTA affected communities to receive funding for job training and investment capital for job creation. Providing workers with the skills to acquire new jobs, and providing the communities with the funding to establish new enterprises, will help to bolster the economies of many NAFTA impacted areas. President Clinton understood this when he requested that the CAIP receive $17 million in his fiscal year 2000 budget.

NAFTA was supposed to increase economic prosperity for everyone involved in this agreement. The least we can do in Congress is to make sure that those American workers who were negatively impacted by NAFTA have a chance to succeed as well. The CAIP is a program which helps to achieve that goal.

I am hopeful that my colleagues will realize the importance of CAIP and ensure that it will receive funding when this bill goes to conference.
August 3, 1999

A TRIBUTE TO MANUEL A. ESQUIBEL

HON. CALVIN M. DOOLEY
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, August 3, 1999

Mr. DOOLEY of California. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to Manuel A. Esquibel, who is retiring this month from his position as City Manager of Selma, California. He has dedicated his life to improving the quality of life for Selma residents.

Mr. Esquibel was born and raised in Colorado, and earned a degree from the University of Southern Colorado. He has served in local government for over 25 years, holding the positions of Assistant City Manager of Pueblo, Colorado, and later City Manager of Lindsborg, Kansas.

In 1995, Mr. Esquibel began his current position as City Manager of Selma, California. During his tenure in Selma, he has developed an effective community team approach and a motivational management style, generating excellence among city staff members.

Mr. Esquibel has been a leader in promoting economic development in Selma, participating in the “Team Selma” program, which led to the creation of over 3,500 new jobs. During his term as City Manager, Selma has received regional, state, and national recognition in the promotion of economic development.

Mr. Esquibel played a critical role in planning President Clinton’s successful visit to Selma in 1995.

Mr. Esquibel’s tremendous dedication to Selma is surpassed only by his dedication to his family. He and his wife, Beverly, have two children—Renée and Tony—and four grandchildren.

Mr. Speaker, I ask my colleagues to join me today in congratulating Manuel Esquibel for his tireless service and countless contributions to the City of Selma. We wish him nothing but the best as he retires from a long and successful career in public service.

A TRIBUTE TO THE LATE STANTON CRAIG HOEFLER

HON. GARY G. MILLER
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, August 3, 1999

Mr. GARY MILLER of California. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor the late Mr. Stanton Craig Hoefler, who passed away on February 17, 1999 of natural causes. Born in San Francisco on February 18, 1924, Mr. Hoefler attended Lowell High School and joined the Army Air Corps in 1942 where he flew with the “Mighty 8th” as pilot in command of a B-17 bomber over Germany. He completed his tour and later flew photo-reccon aboard P-51’s.

In 1976, Mr. Hoefler became the curator of the Yanks Air Museum where he was responsible for the restoration of many Golden Years airplanes and World War II airplanes. Among these are the Curtiss Jenny, Ryan B–1, Stearman 4–D, and World War II airplanes. Among these are the Dauntless SBD to name just a few. He became an expert in the aircraft restoration field and his accomplishments have been featured in aviation periodicals around the world.

Stanton Craig Hoefler is survived by his wife Phyllis of Phillips Ranch, five children, and nine grandchildren. Memorial services were held on February 25, 1999 at the Yanks Air Museum in Chino Hills, CA.

Mr. Speaker, he will be sorely missed.

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, August 3, 1999

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, on July 23, His Majesty King Hassan II of Morocco passed away and his son, Sidi Mohammad ben Al Hassan assumed the throne of Morocco.

I would like to call the attention of my colleagues to a particularly thoughtful and insightful essay on the passing of the Hassan II and his positive impact upon Morocco. The essay—“The Passing of Morocco’s King Hassan II”—was written by Dr. John Duke Anthony, the president of the National Council on U.S.-Arab Relations, secretary-treasurer of the U.S.-Gulf Cooperation Council Corporate Cooperation Committees, and a distinguished American scholar of Middle Eastern affairs.

Mr. Speaker, I ask that Dr. Anthony’s essay be placed in the RECORD, and I urge my colleagues to reflect upon his discerning appreciation of the role and significance of the reign of King Hassan II.

The Passing of Morocco’s King Hassan II
(By Dr. John Duke Anthony)

In the history of America’s foreign affairs, a long-running chapter with Morocco, one of our country’s oldest and most important allies, closed and a new one opened this past week.

The King of Morocco, the first country to recognize the fledgling U.S. republic during the Administration of President George Washington, was laid to rest.

As anticipated, accession to the kingship of King Hassan II’s eldest son and heir apparent, the 36-year old Moulay, now King, Mohammad VI, proceeded smoothly and effectively. Also as expected, no significant changes in Morocco’s domestic and foreign policies are likely to continue as before.

What, if anything, are the implications for American leaders to have become eyewitnesses to the ongoing implementation of a range of economic and political reforms launched during the era of Hassan II?

Together with Tunisia, Morocco has been a pace-setter in embracing the economic precepts of globalization and in forging a multifaceted trade and investment relationship with the member-states of the European Union.

In heightening their awareness of the opportunities for American businesses in the “new Morocco,” U.S. Congressional Representatives and staff have not been far behind. In March 1999, 110 Members of Congress signed a “Congressional Friends of Morocco” letter to President Clinton. Shortly afterwards, First Lady Hillary Clinton visited Morocco, Egypt, and Tunisia.
In keeping with this momentum, Under-Secretary of Economic Affairs Stuart Eisenstadt visited the region and articulated a vision of enhanced foreign investment, liberalized trade arrangements, and regional economic cooperation between the U.S. and the three convivial Arab, Moroccan, and Tunisian nations—Algeria, Morocco, and Tunisia.

It is too soon to gauge the full measure of the legacy that Hassan II bequeathed to his son and the Moroccan people. However, beyond the fact that the baton of national leadership has been passed to the new king, Mohammad VI, with it the task of governing one of the developing world’s most fascinating and important countries, there is much else of interest and value for Americans and others to ponder.

Consider for a moment the following. Morocco is a country that is at once African, Arab, Maghrebian, Mediterranean, Middle Eastern, and Islamic. Its international strategic importance is underscored by its coastal frontage and twenty ports on two of the world’s largest and most fabled seas.

Morocco’s geography and natural resource base—with its mountains, valleys, rivers, trees, and verdant fields—are as varied as any in the developing world. Its people are of an extraordinary culture and heritage that, long before we became an independent nation, had links to our own.

With Morocco’s archives, and continuing to this day in the country’s international relations, is abundant and ongoing evidence of a record of friendship with the United States and the American people that, among the world’s politics, is second to none.

The implications of the change in Morocco’s leadership for American interests are clear. The U.S. needs to change any of its policies toward this oldest among contemporary Arab kingdoms.

They are to underscore the value of Morocco’s having stood by the U.S.—and the U.S. having stood by Morocco—throughout the Cold War and after, and our joint commitment to remain each other’s ally in the future.

They are to take heart in the realization that, if anything, the new King, who is no stranger to the United States and American values, won’t change any of its policies toward this oldest among contemporary Arab kingdoms.

They are to be heartened by the fact that the baton of national leadership has been passed to the new king, Mohammad VI, with it the task of governing one of the developing world’s most fascinating and important countries, there is much else of interest and value for Americans and others to ponder.

Mr. CRAMER. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to recognize Mrs. Marilyn Morrow of Huntsville, Alabama, for her many years of outstanding service to our community.

In the Huntsville community, Mrs. Morrow is an emblem of education. She has lovingly devoted 25 years of her life to the service of imparting wisdom and a love of learning to the children of our community. In her many years of teaching both in public and private schools, Mrs. Morrow taught every subject from first grade to twelfth grade, produced musicals for the school and initiated an organized a bus tour to Washington, D.C.

In her modest and selfless manner, Mrs. Morrow has touched the lives of so many families in my district. To me, she symbolizes the model educator, dedicated, intelligent, caring and leading by example. Her reflections on her long career in education exemplify the simple joy she finds in children, teaching and life: “. . . by teaching others I learned about my own self, my community, and about other people. I made life-long friends and have watched with wonder on the lives and achievements of the young people I taught.”

This is a fitting honor for one who has instilled in several generations of Huntsville citizens a respect and understanding for history and government. In 1982, her school honored her by establishing the Marilyn J. Morning History and Alabama Government Award.

Mrs. Morning’s volunteer work has been essential in building the quality of life the people of Huntsville enjoy today. Described as the “glue” that holds it all together, Mrs. Morrow has given of herself in countless capacities including the Huntsville Symphony Orchestra, the Huntsville Museum of Art, the Huntsville Public Library, Burritt Museum, the Leukemia Society and the Arts Council. In 1996, she won the prestigious Virginia Hammill Sims award. Her nominators said it best, “For over 46 years she has been a part of the beginning, growth and development of the cultural ‘best’ in this city, working tirelessly behind the scenes to make her home town a better place in which to live.”

I want to offer my best wishes to Mrs. Morrow and her family. She has indeed inspired me and countless others students old and new to seek knowledge and to use that knowledge to serve others.
the elderly. The simple fact is that old age and the need for long-term care is a modern phe omenon. In the 1930s, the life expectancy of most people was around 65 years. Con sequently, previous generations did not have to confront the prospect of tens of millions of citizens needing long-term care.

Current estimates greatly expand the life ex pectancy of Americans. A man born in 1957, the height of the baby boom, can expect to to live to 85, an additional 7 years. Improve ments in general public health and medical practice, and changes in life style will continue to extend the average age that people can ex pect to live. The practice of medicine has wit tnessed monumental changes during recent decades. What was once considered medi cally impossible is now common place. Life/styles have changed as well. Our constituents are learning to ignore the lies spread by ciga rette manufacturers and are turning away from this deadly habit. Similarly, more Americans now understand how diet and exercise can im prove their health and extend their lives.

A common urban legend we must avoid is the belief that families gladly dump their par ents into nursing homes as a ready conven tience. The truth is that families want to look after each other and use nursing homes only as a last resort when the burden of care is be yond their control. The majority of the persons with long term health care needs continue to live in their home. Of the extreme elderly, those 85 and older, only 21 percent live in ursing homes. Most of those residents are not there by choice, but because they require skilled nursing services.

We need to focus on the facts and plan for the future. The end of World War II was the beginning of the baby boom. By 2010, those children born in 1945 will begin to retire. Ac

According to a recent CBO report, in the year 2010 there will be 40.6 million people over the age of 65—a 14 percent increase from the year 2000. The number will continue to 2040, there will be 77.9 million people over the age of 65, 118 percent more than in 2000. Indeed, the 85 and older age group is the fastest growing segment of the population. As the av erage age of Americans increases, the propor tion of citizens with disabilities will also in crease. According to the CBO, by 2040 over 12% of the elderly will be disabled by a phys ical or mental condition. The growth in the number of persons with Alzheimer’s disease il lustrates the need to develop a comprehen sive long-term care program.

As many as 4 million of the nation’s elderly currently suffer Alzheimer’s disease. Unless someone finds a cure for this condition, the numbers are sure to grow. Within the next 20 to 30 years there may well be over 14 million persons with this terrible disease that slowly destroys the brain. According to recent sur veys, over 50 percent of persons with Alz heimer’s disease continue to live with a rel ative or spouse who sees to their day-to-day care. This personal care may last for many years and represents the equivalent of a full time job.

Most Americans neither understand nor have prepared for their long-term care needs. Many of our constituents do not understand the difference between Medicare and Med icaid. They also have many misperceptions of the benefits available from Medicare. The gen eral public does not understand that Medicare does not cover long-term care. This error is compounded by the fact that most people mistakenly believe that their health care will cover their long-term care needs. For these reasons, and many others, Americans do not have sufficient financial resources to pay for long-term care.

Women are especially hard hit by the lack of planning for long-term care. In general, women live longer, earn less money, and are often required to be the primary care giver. The consequence is that they do not have suf ficient resources to meet their own health care needs. Take as an example a young woman who decides to take time from her career, stay at home, and raise a family. The time out of the job market means that she is not earning an income and contributing to a retirement plan. In addition, she is not contributing to so cial security. Finally, she is not keeping pace with her career and her salary will be less than those who remained in the work force. When this women retires, her Social Security benefits will be far less than a man the same age who worked uninterrupted his adult life. Moreover, this women will not have com parable financial assets including pensions and health care insurance. All too often, women then deplete their retirement savings and assets paying for the ailing husband’s long-term care needs. Anyone who believes that women now enjoy equal opportunity is woefully ill-informed.

These facts and trends lead to a clear con clusion: We must plan for the future and act decisively now. If we do not, millions of our fellow citizens will face catastrophic health care problems without ample financial and so cial support.

We cannot depend on single simple-minded solutions. Neither private insurance nor Med icaid can cover long-term care to any mean ingful extent. Long-term care insurance is a shelf game of dollar trading. Those who can afford these policies are usually better off in vesting their money in other ventures that produce better financial yields. Those who need long-term care typically cannot afford the insurance. Those who are young enough to afford the policies typically have other press ing financial obligations including raising a family, mortgages, and college tuition. Any mandate to require folks to buy long-term in surance is a regressive tax hidden behind a fancy name.

We can count on Medicaid as it is the re source of last resort. Patients cannot use this benefit until they have exhausted all their per sonal resources. Do we really intend to de mand that people face financial ruin to main tain health care? Suffering a severe physical or mental health problem is stressful enough, we should not further burden patients with the anxiety surrounding financial disaster.

Mr. Speaker, my colleagues, we have the opportunity to create the golden era for long term care, but we must start now. The legisla tion that is introduced today sets the stage for bet ter long-term care.

Our legislation recognizes that there is no single quick fix for long-term care. For this reason, we propose a range of legislative ini tiatives that, when combined, offer a com prehensive package. We describe the details of the Comprehensive Long Term Health Care Act elsewhere in today’s RECORD. We hope that our colleagues and advocacy groups will join in support and in recommending refine ments and improvements.

SILK ROAD STRATEGY ACT OF 1999

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, August 2, 1999

Mr. BURTON of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, the House, today, considered H.R. 1152, which seeks to promote free market policies in the new republics of Central Asia and the Caucasus and to encourage foreign invest ment, increased trade and other forms of com mercial ties between the countries of these re gions and the rest of the world.

These are praiseworthy objectives, and leg islation expressing U.S. support for the fledg ing democracies of the Silk Road region de serves priority attention. Consequently, I sup port the goals of H.R. 1152, the Silk Road Strategy Act of 1999.

At the same time, however, many compa nies from OECD countries, including the United States, have substantial direct invest ments in several of the Silk Road countries and are not being accorded fair treatment. In vestment contracts are not being honored, ex port permits are not being issued and de facto nationalizations of foreign investment have oc curred. In several instances, formal complaints have been lodged by investors through U.S. and other embassies in the region.

In an effort to discourage this kind of mis treatment, the International Relations Com mittee amended the bill to include language conditioning U.S. assistance on the fair treat ment of foreign investors. Specifically, the amendment requires recipient governments to demonstrate “significant progress” in resolving investment and other trade disputes that have been registered with the U.S. Embassy and raised by the U.S. Embassy with the host gov ernment.

I was pleased to sponsor this amendment, because without it the Silk Road bill could have caused the beneficiary governments to con clude that they had a green light to renge on commitments to foreign investors, jeopard izing hundreds of millions of dollars of invest ments. In this regard, a number of pension plans have investments in companies doing business in countries such as Kazakhstan. The average worker participating in a pension is adversely affected as well, and this must stop.

As amended, this bill should send a strong signal that countries should not expect to re ceive U.S. assistance if they mistreat com panies that provide critical investment capital and employment opportunities.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to sup port H.R. 1152.
Yesterday, Willie Morris died. Willie lived in my district down in Jackson. Willie will always live, Mr. Speaker, in the hearts of thousands around our planet who have read his words discovering a world of penetrating wit, warm memories, and prose that can bring the angels to earth and soothe our longings to connect with our broader world.

Willie Morris grew up in Yazoo City. We know about small town America in the 1950’s because Willie told us about it. He told us about childhood friends like Bubba and Henjie. And he let us remember the loving wags and pants of childhood pets like his beloved dog Skip. We remember an America that only children can recall; an America of simple dreams poised to enter the turbulent period we call the sixties. Willie’s memories were our memories—Christmas with Uncle Percy in Jackson, the smell of turkey and talk of baseball, high school football on cool autumn nights, and those first dates with sweatsy palms and nervy laughs. How can we thank Willie Morris enough for putting our memories on paper?

Willie gave us the sixties as a student at the University of Tennessee and as a Rhodes Scholar in England. We came of age with Willie as he re-called campus ramblings and long road trips. Willie Morris told us about the reality of America and being a young person finding his place in the greater American family. We see ourselves seeking to understand and find our places in the words of Willie.

When Willie Morris became editor of Harper’s Magazine, he was the youngest to do so in their history. He led Harper’s through the late 1960’s and early 1970’s with courage and honesty. He addressed the tough issues of the day and refused to cave in to conventionality for the sake of getting along. We met Truman Capote, Bill Styrorn, and so many others through Willie’s essays. In broadening his world, ours was enlarged as well.

Following his years in New York, Willie became Writer-in-Residence at Ole Miss and finished his years in Jackson. His commitment in encouraging arts and a sense of the best of Mississippi’s collective nature was impactful and profound. He mentored and gave us new Southern writers like Donna Tartt. Willie made us laugh at ourselves. He brought us together as one.

I think Willie Morris let us embrace our Southernness in the context of being a member of the entire American family. In his prose, Willie was honest about himself and his culture. Yet while embracing the truth, Willie made us proud of our accomplishments, our potential and ourselves. He was a visionary who could make the past alive and relevant while caring for the people and events of the present.

We will always remember and have Willie Morris at our side. We will read the pages of North Toward Home, The Courtship of Marcus Dupree, My Dog Skip, and his many other books and essays with a reverence and realization of our place in the world. Willie Morris was our bridge between past and present, and our voice for the better angels in us all. He always will be.
that my colleagues in the House will join me and other Central New Jerseyans in extending our gratitude and condolences to Mr. Karcher’s friends and family.

HONORING DR. JOE TARON

HON. WES WATKINS OF OKLAHOMA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, August 3, 1999

Mr. WATKINS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor Dr. Joe Taron, a faithful servant of the people of Pottawatomie County, in the Third Congressional District of the Great State of Oklahoma. Dr. Joe has committed his life to improving the quality of life of the people around him, and his accomplishments over the years are legendary.

For 23 years Dr. Joe’s vision, hard work, perseverance and leadership have been the inspiration of the effort to build the Wes Watkins Reservoir near McLoud, Oklahoma, to provide a permanent new water source to the citizens of Pottawatomie County. On Monday, August 9, the lake will be officially dedicated, providing not only a valuable new source of drinking water to the cities of Shawnee and Tecumseh, but also providing the citizens of Pottawatomie County and the people of central Oklahoma with a great recreational resource for swimming, boating and fishing.

I am proud to call Dr. Joe my friend. He is a wonderful “role model” for our children and grandchildren, and our country is a better place because of his work to help those around him. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor Dr. Joe Taron for his outstanding commitment to his community, state and country. I urge my colleagues to join me in wishing Dr. Joe many more years of continued joy and happiness.

THE ANTHRAX ISSUE IN THE DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE

HON. WALTER B. JONES OF NORTH CAROLINA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, August 3, 1999

Mr. JONES of North Carolina. Mr. Speaker, earlier today, a number of my colleagues joined me in a press conference to discuss an issue that I believe may jeopardize the readiness of our military—the Department of Defense Anthrax Vaccination Immunization Program.

Mr. GILMAN, Mr. BURTON, Mr. FILNER, Mr. METCALF, and Mr. HAYES all joined me to express our shared concerns over the mandatory anthrax vaccination program.

I wanted to take a few moments to share some of my thoughts on the press conference and the anthrax issue as a whole.

In March of this year, I met with a number of reservists from Seymour Johnson Air Force Base in the Third District of North Carolina, which I am proud to represent, to hear their concerns about the mandatory anthrax vaccination program.

After listening to their concerns, I contacted Secretary Cohen and requested the program be halted until the questions surrounding the program could be answered.

The Department denied my request. It also failed to address my concerns.

Mr. Speaker, all branches of the military are currently experiencing great difficulty in recruiting and retaining quality military personnel.

Since the announcement of the mandatory vaccination program in 1997, growing numbers of military personnel—particularly Guard and Reservists—are choosing to resign rather than take what may be an unsafe anthrax vaccine.

Now, military personnel across the country are struggling with their options: take the vaccine or leave the service.

Unfortunately, too many are choosing the latter.

At Travis Air Force Base alone, 32 pilots in the 301st Airflit Squadron have resigned or are planning to do so because of the anthrax vaccine.

That is more than a fifty percent attrition rate.

The Air Force estimates it costs $6 million to train each pilot.

If this figure holds true, the United States is losing over $190 million dollars worth of training and over 450 years worth of combined experience in the cockpit!

These statistics are not isolated to one unit or one base.

A recent Baltimore Sun article reported that as many as 25 F–16 pilots of 35 pilots in the 122nd Fighter Wing of the Indiana National Guard might refuse the vaccination. This could effectively ground the squadron.

At least one-third of the F–16 pilots in the Wisconsin National Guard’s 115th Fighter Wing is expected to refuse the vaccinations.

Another Air National Guard unit in Connecticut reportedly lost one-third of their pilots for the same reason.

The active duty force is also plagued by this problem.

Fourteen Marines in Hawaii and at least a dozen in California have refused the vaccine and are awaiting likely court-martials and dishonorable discharges.

Other reports indicate that even the Department of Defense estimates several hundred active personnel have refused the vaccine and are awaiting disciplinary action.

In a time when all branches of our military are faced with severe challenges in recruiting and retaining quality military personnel, we should be looking for ways to recruit and retain these men and women, not drive them away.

For this reason, Mr. GILMAN and I each introduced separate pieces of legislation to address the problem.

My legislation, H.R. 2543, the American Military Health Protection Act, would make the current Department of Defense Anthrax Vaccination Immunization Program voluntary for all members of the Uniformed Services until either: (1) The Food and Drug Administration has approved a new anthrax vaccination for humans; or (2) The Food and Drug Administration has approved a new, reduced shot course for the anthrax vaccination for humans.

Mr. GILMAN’s legislation, H.R. 2548, stops the vaccination program until the National Institutes of Health has completed additional studies.

EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

However, today’s press conference was not about pushing a single bill. Instead, we were here today because despite our respective differences, there is solidarity in our goals.

Each of the men and women at the press conference represented differing views on how to best deal with the anthrax vaccination program.

Yet, we all agreed on one point: The mandatory anthrax program must be changed!

For that reason, today Mr. GILMAN and I were able to announce our joint efforts to secure a hearing in the Armed Services Committee on our respective legislative proposals. If too many American men and women are willing to risk their lives to defend this great nation, the least we can do is ensure their questions of safety have been adequately answered before requiring them to take it.

It is important to respond to this issue before a small readiness problem affects the entire force.

I am hopeful that all of our colleagues will join us in working to achieve that goal.

TOBACCO AND U.S. INTELLIGENCE ISSUES

HON. BERNARD SANDERS OF VERMONT

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, August 3, 1999

Mr. SANDERS. Mr. Speaker, I submit for printing in the RECORD statements by high school students from my home State of Vermont, who were speaking at my recent town meeting on issues facing young people today. I believe that the views of these young persons will benefit my colleagues.

TOBACCO

(On behalf of Sara Sinclair)

Sara Sinclair: Hi. My name is Sara Sinclair.

I’m here to talk about an issue that in many ways relates to nationwide health care, and in many ways would make it more affordable, and that is tobacco control.

Right now in the state of Vermont, 36 percent of our peers are addicted to nicotine, which is the active drug in tobacco. 2,000 of us became addicted to tobacco last year, and roughly 12,000 of us, alive and in high school now, will die because of tobacco use. And personally, that scare me a whole bunch.

I remember when I was in elementary school—I will be graduating next year. I am a junior this year—and we were the Smoke Free Class of 2000. In elementary school, we had all these wonderful programs, and everyone said, “Okay, I’m not going to smoke, I’m not going to smoke.” And as time wore on, we got into high school, and the program sort of fell away. And now I look at my peers, and I see a huge number of them addicted to tobacco. Their skin is becoming wrinkled. They get shaky when they don’t have their cigarette. They have this strong need for it.

It’s very frightening for me to see my peers addicted to that so early, and to know that they will probably suffer long-term effects from their tobacco use now. I have a ten-year-old sister right now who says, “I’m not going to smoke.” And I hope she will be able to hold true to that. But I fear that, even if she does, that many of her peers won’t.

19317
EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

August 3, 1999

HON. EDWARD J. MARKEY OF MASSACHUSETTS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, August 3, 1999

Mr. MARKEY. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to join my good friend PETE STARK today as we introduce a comprehensive long-term care bill. PETE and I have been concerned about the long-term care needs of seniors, near-seniors, and the disabled for quite some time—and PETE has been a real leader on this issue in the Congress. In the remarks Rep. STARK has made for the RECORD, he gives an excellent summary of our bill. We hope that our bill begins to get Congress and the American people focused on the issue of long-term care because doing something about people’s long-term care needs will be one of our Nation’s biggest challenges in the next century.

This bill contains a number of important provisions. It’s got a $1,000 refundable tax credit for family caregiver expenses. The legislation makes some changes to Medicare which will result in the program being more useful to beneficiaries with chronic care needs that are best met in the home or in adult day care and other community-based settings. We clarify the law so that Federal employees to buy long-term care insurance at group rates through the Office of Personnel Management and require that a plan be developed to allow all Americans to buy these types of policies—all the while paying special attention to the highest consumer protection standards. We have adopted the President’s proposal to create a family caregiver support program through grants to the States. Our bill will extend Medicare eligibility to family caregivers who are qualified to receive the tax credit. And finally, we protect family caregivers who must leave the workforce to care for a loved one by making them eligible for Social Security credits to protect their retirement income.

This legislation is not perfect. We will need to iron out some kinks along the way. But it is a beginning. It will be expensive and we don’t specify from where the money will come. Earlier this year, I proposed the 2 Percent Solution. Out of a possible $1 trillion budget surplus to fund a long-term care program for in-home and community-based chronic care and respite care. I offered the proposal as an amendment in the Budget Committee and every Republican voted against it—a party line vote. The Republicans needed every penny they could find to pay for $800 billion in tax cuts. Surely, we can do better. This problem is not going to go away.

One of the greatest American achievements of the 20th century has been our ability to increase the life expectancy. From the days of time when the average life expectancy in the United States was 47 years. Over the last 99 years, we have nearly doubled the life expectancy of Americans. We have done so with a massive infusion of Federal research dollars, and through thoughtful and compassionate programs that provide health care for millions of Americans—Medicare and MediCare.

What of the quality of that longer life however? I believe we have a moral obligation to ensure that people who are living longer are not living sicker and poorer.

Today, Alzheimer’s Disease is on track to wreak havoc on our nation’s health care system and leave millions of American families in emotional and financial ruin. The disease affects over 4 million people nationwide and will affect as many as 14 million people by 2050. Alzheimer's patients will symptomatically lose ability to perform routine tasks, and suffer impaired judgment, personality change and loss of language and communication skills. More than 7 out of 10 people with this disease live at home. Their caregivers are not wealthy, yet they spend on average $12,500 per year to support the person with Alzheimer's they are caring for. They work hard, but often must leave, reduce, or change employment to care for their loved ones. Ninety percent of Alzheimer's caregivers are giving care to a relative, and an overwhelming majority, 75 percent, of caregivers are women. Studies have shown that the typical family caregiver is in her 70's and has two chronic health problems. Of course, the real tragedy of Alzheimer's is the human cost associated with the disease—it ravages not just caregivers—looking at millions, being an Alzheimer caregiver means giving up more hours for more years and more money. It means less time, less energy, and fewer resources for other family members, for dear friends, and for the caregivers themselves.

Alzheimer's is now the third most expensive disease in our country after heart disease and cancer, and yet the federal commitment to Alzheimer's research is three to five times less than the commitment the government has made to research on those other diseases. Last year I led the effort to have Congress increase Alzheimer's funding at NIH by $100 million—we got $50 million. This year I'm working to increase that funding by $100 million again.

Alzheimer's Disease is only part of the problem, however. We have a chronic care crisis in our country today. Without a coherent and comprehensive approach to care for people with disabling chronic conditions, this situation will only worsen. People with chronic diseases and disabilities will continue to suffer the consequences of poor health if a strategy is not implemented to meet their long-term care needs. As part of that strategy, we must recognize that there are thousands of spouses and other family members struggling to provide care for their loved ones in their homes each year. A new study in the latest issue of Health Affairs estimates the current market value of unpaid caregiving to adults who are disabled or chronically ill to be nearly $200 billion a year. These family caregivers are heroes—they fill a virtual, "Caretakers' Niche" that could no longer require chronic care coverage but still have chronic care needs that require monitoring, oversight, and assistance.

The cuts passed as part of the Balanced Budget Act have had a devastating impact on real people's lives. In my district, one hospital has closed and two have been radically altered—one of them became a "hospital without beds" performing only outpatient day surgeries and closing its emergency room and maternity ward. Home health agencies and community health centers are closing. And the community hospital system serving my hometown of Malden and the surrounding communities has slashed its home health visits from 470,000 in 1997 to 332,000 in 1998 and they estimate only 260,000 for 1999. 1,400 patients have been cut from the system's home health care program.

The Congressional Budget Office is having a hard time explaining the remarkably slow rate of growth in Medicare. At the same time, the CBO has drastically miscalculated the level of Medicare cuts attributable to the Balanced Budget Act. The CBO now predicts that the BBA will result in $207 billion in "Medicare savings" over the 1997–2002 period, nearly double its August 1997 estimate of $112 billion. The collapse of Medicare growth will result, in budget terms, in over $63 billion in unanticipated savings in the next three years. These unanticipated savings should be redicted to their unintended victims.

Our plan will help to alleviate some of the pain caused by the BBA and ease the burdens of patients and families affected by conditions like Alzheimer's, Parkinson's, Congestive Heart Failure, Cerebral Palsy, Spinal Cord Injury, Muscular Dystrophy, and Stroke to name a few.

Our bill will help these caregivers in many different ways—through refundable tax credits, and a change in Medicare to better meet the chronic care needs at home or in adult day care and other community-based settings to name just a few.

This legislation is not perfect. But it is a beginning. It will be expensive—but I think there is a compelling argument to be made that long-term care needs to be at the top of our priority list. In 1995, Republicans were prepared to let Medicare "wither on the vine." In 1997, in the mad rush to pass the BBA the Republicans said Medicare is too expensive, and by the way, we need to cut it to pay for a tax cut. So in 1997 they chose Millionaires over Medicare. Earlier this year, I proposed the 2 percent Solution—using 2 percent of the projected future budget surplus to fund a long-term care program for in-home and community-based chronic care and respite care. I offered the proposal as an amendment in the Budget Act. But every Republican voted against it—they said covering long-term care through Medicare is too expensive, and by the way, we need every penny to pay for $800 billion in tax cuts. So, despite a soaring economy that's filling the pockets of the wealthy, and despite the fact that the Republicans gave them a Balanced Budget Bonus in 1997, the 1999 atrocity is their choice of Billionaires over Beneficiaries.

What's worse, in 10 years, just as the first wave of baby boomers is set to retire—the precise era for the second 10 years of this year's Republican tax cut will explode to nearly $3 trillion. Surely, we can do better.

We have entered a new era in Washington—an era with surplus as far as the eye can see—an era when the stock market is soaring, unemployment is at record lows, and American prosperity is unparalleled in the world. We can afford to give America's caretaker heroes help—PETE STARK and I have a plan which will send the message to these heroes that help is on the way.

I am pleased to join in introducing this bill today. Rep. STARK and I will be devoting a lot of time and energy recruiting members who care deeply about the long-term care crisis in our country—together we will be working on solutions for patients, for caregivers, and for families managing the impact of chronic and disabling conditions on their everyday lives. We look forward to working with our colleagues in the weeks and months to come building the coalition and passing legislation to bridge the gap between need and coverage for people suffering from chronic illness and disability in our country.

OPPOSING THE BURTON AMENDMENT

HON. RUSH D. HOLT OF NEW JERSEY

EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

Tuesday, August 3, 1999

Mr. HOLT. Mr. Speaker, for the last few years, my distinguished colleague from Indiana, DAN BURTON, has been introducing legislation to either eliminate or greatly reduce development assistance to India and unless certain conditions with regards to human rights are met. These initiatives have never won the approval of the House.

Yesterday, we were slated to vote on amendments to the foreign operations appropriations bill that threatened to reduce development assistance to India under the Agency for International Development by 25 percent. I rose in opposition to this amendment. As in the past, my colleague cited human rights abuses in India as the reason for his legislative initiative. While human rights abuses have been uncovered in India, it is important to note the significant progress India has made in resolving human rights problems, as noted in the State Department's human rights report on India.

In Punjab the serious abuses of the early 1980's were acknowledged and condemned by the Supreme Court. The Supreme Court delegated responsibility for investigation of these abuses in the Punjab to the National Human Rights Commission (NHRC), whose investigation continues. Prison visits by the International Committee of the Red Cross in Jammu and Kashmir are another example of government transparency.

India is addressing its human rights problems because it is a democracy—the world's largest. Although the country has confronted many challenges since gaining independence in 1947, it has stayed true to its founding principles. India is a model for other nations that are still striving to build civil societies, institutionalize democratic values of free expression and religion, and find strength in the diversity of their land and their people.

This amendment to the foreign operations appropriations bill caused concern because it would jeopardize the development assistance provided by the Agency for International Development. This development assistance is essentially humanitarian aid. Withholding this aid would have punished the same people his ill-conceived amendment sought to protect. Access to adequate nutrition, shelter, and education—the objective of our aid to India—is a human right as well.
It is for these reasons that I spoke in opposition to the Burton amendment last night. I am glad that my colleague withdrew his amendment in light of the overwhelming opposition he faced.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

HON. CHARLES W. "CHIP" PICKERING OF MISSISSIPPI
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, August 3, 1999

Mr. PICKERING. Mr. Speaker, on rollcall votes Nos. 360, 361, and 362, I was unavoidably detained. Had I been present, I would have voted “aye” on No. 360; “no” on No. 361; and “aye” on No. 362.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

HON. MAJOR R. OWENS
OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, August 3, 1999

Mr. OWENS. Mr. Speaker, I was unavoidably absent on a matter of critical importance and missed the following rollcall votes: On the amendment to H.R. 2606 by the gentleman from Colorado, Mr. TANCREDO, regarding the reduction of funding for international organizations, specifically UNESCO, I would have voted “nay.”

On the amendment to H.R. 2606 by the gentleman from Texas, Mr. PAUL, to prohibit the use of funds in the bill for international population control or family planning activities, I would have voted “nay.”

On the amendment to H.R. 2606 also by the gentleman from Texas, Mr. PAUL, to prohibit the export-import bank, the overseas private investment corporation or the trade and development agency from entering into new obligations, I would have voted “nay.”

Finally, Mr. Speaker on final passage of H.R. 2606, the foreign operations appropriations, I would have voted “yea.”