No State preemption: Its provisions sunset when a State enacts UETA.

Exclusion of family law: It specifically excludes agreements relating to marriage, adoption, premarital agreements, divorce, residential landlord-tenant matters because these are not commercial transactions. Reports of statutory barriers to electronic transactions: It requires OMB to report to Congress 18 months after enactment identifying statutory barriers to electronic transactions and recommending legislation to remove such barriers.

In conclusion, Mr. President, I wish to acknowledge the leadership of Senator ABRAHAM in moving this legislation forward. He and I have teamed up successfully on other legislation, and it was a pleasure to work with him and his staff to craft this bill. I also want to recognize the contribution of Senator LEAHY, particularly with regard to the consumer protection provisions, as well as the effort of Senator HOLLINGS. It took a bipartisan team to get this legislation through the Senate today, and I look forward to continuing to work with this team as we go to conference with the House on S. 761.

I ask unanimous consent that my statement be printed in the record following Senator ABRAHAM’s statement on the passage of S. 761.

Mr. LIEBERMAN. Mr. President, I rise today to express my support for the Millennium Digital Commerce Act of 1999. I thank Senators ABRAHAM, LEAHY, and WYDEN for their leadership on this important issue. As a cosponsor of this legislation, I am proud of the steps it takes to support an important and still emerging technology and industry. The Millennium Digital Commerce Act will stimulate the continued growth of the Internet and of electronic commerce. With this legislation, the Senate recognizes the significant transformations taking place in our economy and how we do business today and in the future.

I think we all recognize that we are witnessing an electronic revolution. There is no shortage of statistics to prove what we are seeing all around us. According to a recent U.S. Department of Commerce report, approximately one third of the U.S. economy grew in the past few years has come from information technologies (over $1 trillion). Just this year, venture capitalists have invested more than $8 billion in Internet companies—twice the rate of last year.

According to a University of Texas report, e-commerce is growing at a much faster rate than many had expected. The digital economy generated more than $300 billion in revenue in 1998 and was responsible for 1.4 million jobs. Many e-commerce companies in my State of Connecticut, like Micro-Warehouse in Norwalk, Coastal Tool & Supply in West Hartford, and Sagemaker Inc. of Fairfield, are leading the way in the digital economy.

In the Senate, I have worked to support the growth of e-commerce by co-sponsoring the Internet Tax Freedom Act which places a three year moratorium on new state and local taxes on the Internet in order to give the digital economy some breathing room to evolve.

This legislation takes further steps to continue the growth of e-commerce and is a powerful follow-on to the Internet Tax Freedom Act. With this legislation we will eliminate a major barrier to e-commerce by providing for the legal recognition of electronic signatures in contracting and by creating a consistent, but temporary, national electronic signatures law to preempt a multitude of sometimes inconsistent state laws. It is technology neutral, allowing contracting parties to determine the appropriate electronic signature technology for their transaction. Importantly, this legislation is the result of thoughtful compromise. It gives electronic signatures more legal certainty but also provides for consumer protection. It deals with electronic signatures only in creating contracts. It preempts state law only until the states enact their own statutes and standards as provided for by the Uniform Electronic Transactions Act (UETA).

Mr. President, I thank those who have worked so diligently to create this Act. Through the considerate and collaborative approach of several of my colleagues, including Senators ABRAHAM, LEAHY, and WYDEN, we now have legislation with language that achieves a broad public purpose. We are now able to continue supporting the growth and evolution of electronic commerce and technologies that will effectively bring us into the next century.
