I drugs. Under this legislation, it would be illegal for on-line magazines and other websites to post advertisements for such illegal materials or to "link" to websites that do. We crafted this language carefully so that we restrict the sale of drug paraphernalia without restricting the first amendment. All in all, I believe that this is a comprehensive bill that attacks the methamphetamine and amphetamine problem from every angle. Today the Senate also passed the "Date Rape Drug Control Act of 1999," a very important piece of legislation which will place the most stringent controls on GHB, a drug which is being used with increasing frequency to commit rape. I commend Senator ABRAHAM for his efforts to get this bill passed and I thank him for acknowledging my efforts as well.

For nearly 5 years now, I have been working to raise awareness about date rape drugs including rohypnol and ketamine. In 1996, I first introduced legislation to schedule these drugs under the Controlled Substances Act. This was not a step I took lightly because there is a regulatory procedure in place for scheduling controlled substances. But my view was that the regulatory process would take years to do what needed to be done in months, forfeiting valuable time in the fight to stop these drugs from being used to commit heinous crimes. Federal scheduling is important for three simple reasons. First, Federal scheduling triggers increased state drug law penalties. This is because state law penalties are linked to the level at which a drug appears on the Federal controlled substance schedule. Since more than 95 percent of all drug cases are prosecuted at the state level, not by the Federal government, federal scheduling is vitally important.

Second, Federal scheduling triggers tough federal penalties. And third, scheduling has proven to work. In 1984, I worked to reschedule Quaaludes from Schedule II to Schedule I, Congress passed the law and the Quaalude epidemic was greatly reduced. Again in 1990, I worked to reclassify steroids as a Schedule III substance, Congress passed the law and again a drug epidemic that had been on the rise was reversed.

Progress on scheduling date rape drugs has been slow. This past August—4 years after I first called for stricter regulations—the Drug Enforcement Administration finally classified ketamine as a Schedule III drug. Rohypnol has yet to be classified as a Schedule I drug, though we have passed legislation that stipulates that it is subject to federal penalties. Far from perfunctory, it is a small step in the right direction.

In 1996, we passed legislation to crack down on those who commit violent crimes—including rape—by giving the victim a controlled substance without that person's knowledge. As a result of that legislation, this cowardly act is punishable by up to 20 years in prison. And today the Senate passed legislation that recognizes that GHB is a significant public safety hazard and will result in the drug being designated as a Schedule II drug. At the same time, the legislation recognizes that there is a public health interest here. GHB is currently being studied as a treatment for narcolepsy and this bill goes to great lengths to ensure that this research can continue without undue burdens.

Further, the Date Rape Drug Control Act requires the Attorney General to assist in the development of forensic tests to help law enforcement detect GHB and related substances and develop training materials on date rape drugs for police officers. The bill also calls for a national awareness campaign to warn people about the danger of these drugs and how to recognize if these date rape drugs have been used in my State of Delaware. Several women at "The Big Kahuna," the largest nightclub in Wilmington have had drugs slipped into their drinks. This is a serious problem and we must take bold steps, like passing the measure we passed today, to establish strict penalties for this cowardly crime. I am pleased that the Senate has passed both of these important pieces of legislation today, and I hope to see them enacted into law.

Mr. MOYNIHAN. Mr. President, I rise to commend the Senate for unanimously passing the Drug Addiction Treatment Act of 1999 (S. 324), as Title II, Subsection B, of the DEFEAT Meth Act of 1999 (S. 486). The Senate's action today marks a milestone in the treatment of opiate dependence. The Drug Addiction Treatment Act increases access to new medications, such as buprenorphine, to treat opiate addiction. I thank my colleagues Senator LEVIN (whose long-term vision inspired this legislation), Senator HATCH, and Senator BIDEN for their leadership and dedication in developing this Act, and I look forward to seeing the Drug Addiction Treatment Act of 1999 become law.

Determining how to deal with the problem of addiction is not a new topic. Just over a decade ago when we passed the Anti-Drug Abuse Act of 1988, I was assigned by our then-Leader ROBERT BYRD, with Sam Nunn, to co-chair a working group to develop a proposal for drug control legislation. We worked together with a similar Republican task force for far too long a time, to divide funding under our bill between demand reduction activities (60 percent) and supply reduction activities (40 percent). And we created the Director of National Drug Control Policy to chair the demand reduction task force. The bill went to the Office of National Drug Control Policy and a Deputy Director for Demand Reduction and a Deputy Director for Supply Reduction."

We put demand first. To think that you can ever end the problem by interdicting the supply of drugs, well, it's an illusion. There's no possibility. I have been intimately involved with trying to eradicate the supply of drugs into this country. It fell upon me, as a member of the Nixon Cabinet, to negotiate shutting down the heroin traffic that went from central Turkey to Mar- selles to New York—the "French Connection"—but we knew the minute that happened, another route would spring up. That was a given. The success was short-lived. What we needed was demand reduction, a focus on the user. And we still do.

Demand reduction requires science and it requires doctors. I see the science continues to develop, and The Drug Addiction Treatment Act of 1999 will allow doctors and patients to make use of it.

Congress and the public continue to fixate on supply interdiction and harsher sentences (without treatment) as the "solution" to drug problems, and adamantly refuse to acknowledge what various experts now know and are telling us: that addiction is a chronic, relapsing disease; that is, the brain undergoes molecular, cellular, and physiological changes which may not be reversible.

What we are talking about is not simply a law enforcement problem, to cut the supply; it is a public health problem, and we need to treat it as such. We need to stop filling our jails under the misguided notion that such actions will stop the problem of drug addiction. The Drug Addiction Treatment Act of 1999 is a step in the right direction.

UNANIMOUS-CONSENT REQUEST—S. RES. 237

Mr. REID. On behalf of Senator BOXER, I send a Senate resolution to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

Ms. COLLINS. On behalf of the Republican leader, I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

S. Res. 237 will lie over under the rule.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, today I am submitting a resolution on the Convention to Eliminate All Forms of Discrimination Against Women.

For those unfamiliar with this issue, the Treaty, known by its acronym CEDAW, is the most comprehensive and detailed international treaty to date that addresses the rights of women.

The United States was an active participant in drafting this treaty. It was approved by the General Assembly in 1979. President Carter signed the treaty on behalf of the United States.

To date, 165 nations have ratified or acceded to the treaty. The United States joins the likes of Afghanistan, North Korea and Iran as the few nations who have decided not to become state parties to this treaty.

The Convention requires that nations take measures to eliminate discrimination against women. Discrimination is defined as “any distinction, exclusion or restriction made on the basis of sex which has the effect of impairing or nullifying the recognition, enjoyment, or exercise by women, irrespective of their marital status.”

The treaty addresses “human rights and fundamental freedoms in the political, economic, social, cultural, civil, or any other field.”

Let me be clear, this treaty covers the most basic rights for women. For example, Article 5 recognizes the common responsibility of men and women for raising children. Article 6 requires measures to suppress all forms of trafficking in women and exploitation of prostitution of women.

Articles 7 and 8 would ensure that women have the right to vote, run for office, and represent their countries in international activities.

Article 10 calls for the elimination of discrimination in the field of education.

Article 11 gives women the right to work and free choice of employment.

Article 12 eliminates discrimination in the delivery of health care services.

This treaty covers other areas of discrimination as well, but as you can tell by the few Articles I have described, this treaty is extremely important to the rights of women throughout the world.

And, ratification of this treaty will strengthen our capability to urge other nations to promote these rights.

In 1994 the Senate Foreign Relations overwhelming supported this treaty approving the resolution of ratification by a vote of 13 to 5.

Unfortunately, time ran out in the 103rd Congress before the full Senate had the opportunity to consider the treaty.

Today, I am offering amendment stating that it is the Sense of the Senate that the Foreign Relations Committee should once again hold hearings on CEDAW.

It also states the Senate should take action on the treaty prior to March 8, 2000—International Women’s Day.

The United States needs to show that it is the world leader on promoting human rights and that includes the rights of women throughout the world.

I urge my colleagues to join us in cosponsoring this resolution.
