Let me also thank the distinguished Senator from Oregon, Mr. Smith, and the Senator from Alaska, Mr. Murkowski, for their very helpful and efforts in getting us to this point.

It would not have happened without them as well.

This is a great day for my State. It is a great day for those in other States. I again congratulate especially Senator Johnson for his leadership and his effort in getting us to this point.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The distinguished Senator from West Virginia.

SENATOR HOLLINGS

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, on occasion I have noted the birthdays of some of my colleagues by sharing a few observations about them. But, like those poor schoolchildren whose birthdays fall in the middle of the summer vacation, thus denying them the pleasure of a day of special recognition at school, one of my colleague’s birthday falls on a day when the Senate can be virtually guaranteed not to be in session. I do not wish to let the whim of the calendar prevent me from honoring a man whose many sterling qualities compare to his more nataliacous brethren.

Senator Ernest F. “Fritz” Hollings was born on January 1, 1922, denying by just a few hours an extra year’s tax deduction to his hardworking parents. That may have been the only disappointment caused by their overachieving son, however. Young Ernest went on to do his parents proud by graduating as a member of the highest honor society at The Citadel in 1942, then serving proudly for thirty-three months in World War II, attaining the rank of captain. Upon returning home, he again took up the scholar’s mantle, earning his law degree at the University of South Carolina in 1947, followed by his doctorate of law from The Citadel in 1959. He excelled as a lawyer, being admitted to practice before the South Carolina Supreme Court, the U.S. District Court, the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, U.S. Tax Court, U.S. Customs Court, and the U.S. Supreme Court. He was first elected to public office at the tender age of 26. In 1948, to the South Carolina General Assembly, and subsequently served with distinction as lieutenant governor, South Carolina’s youngest Governor in this century, and as Senator. I feel sure his parents must have been proud of him. I know that I am proud to have served with him in the United States Senate for the last thirty-two, almost thirty-three, years.

The rolling, sonorous cadences of this rich Carolina accent so often soften the edges of Senator Hollings’s sometimes acerbic observations and acid analysis of bills and treaties. I know of few Members who can so decisively carve up sloppy legislation with so few trenchant observations, so mellifluous delivered, that one still feels that the afternoon is flowing smoothly and pleasantly. With his background in tax and customs law, Senator Hollings has long been a force on the Commerce Committee, and his energy is felt on the Senate Floor any time trade legislation or treaties are under discussion. As a member of the Appropriations and Budget Committees, he is well versed in the intricacies of fiscal policy-making. And on telecommunications matters few would dare tangle with him without first arming themselves with unassailable arguments at one’s trigger finger, for fear of being completely done in by his quick-draw ripostes.

We have been on opposite ends of main street legislative shoot-outs over concerns end and legislation, Budget Amendment and the nefarious Line Item Veto, but never has courtesy or friendship fallen victim to our philosophical disagreements. To the contrary, we have found common ground in our opposition to unfair trade practices and unequal trade agreements that hurt Americans. On the whole, I must admit I prefer to have Senator Hollings on my side, rather than against, as he is such a formidable foe.

I have highlighted his many distinguished colleague’s many honors, but there is one that still eludes him. For though he continues to make his parents proud in heaven, and his family and constituents proud here on Earth, he remains the most senior junior Senator in our nation’s history. At 32 years and 10 months, Senator Hollings has surpassed even the legendary Senator John C. Stennis, who served 31 years and 2 months of his impressive 42 years of service as a Senator from Mississippi. But Senator Hollings is the equal in the equally legendary Senator James O. Eastland. This record is a testament to both the performance and the endurance of Senator Hollings and his distinguished senior Senator, Strom Thurmond. I know that Senator Hollings wears his title with pride and good humor, and his home state of South Carolina is all the better for it.

As these last weeks of this congressional session come to a clattering and confusing cap of legislation, floor debates, and appropriations conferences, I am proud to keep a resolution I made last New Year’s day to remember and pay tribute to a good friend and a remarkable, well talented Senator. I hope during his next birthday, come January 1, the year 2000, hidden among the hoopla and hyperbole surrounding the year 2000, that Senator Hollings and his lovely wife, Peatsy, can celebrate his birthday knowing that it is not passed unnoticed or unacknowledged by his friends here in the Senate.

So, on behalf of my wife Erma, I say to Senator Hollings these words:

Count your garden by the flowers, not by the leaves that fall.
Count your days by the sunny hours, not remembering clouds at all.
Count your nights by stars, not shadows.
Count your life by smiles, not tears.
And on that beautiful January day, Count your age by friends, not years.

SENATE FAMILY APPRECIATION

Mr. BYRD. Mr. President, I also want to thank the members of staffs of Senators, and the Members, the Senate family who sit here before us every day, who work so assiduously and in such a dedicated fashion. They make our lives easier than they would otherwise be, and they make it possible, whereas it would be otherwise impossible, for us to do the work of serving our constituents. I hope that they will all have a very happy Thanksgiving and very pleasant Christmas.

Let me also thank my colleagues on both sides of the aisle. The lovely lady from Maine sits in the majority leader’s chair at this moment; she does the work of the Senate in such a beautiful manner, and who does so with such skill and dignity as rare as the day in June.

I want to thank everyone. I want to thank my own colleague, Jay Rockefeller, for being my colleague, and I want to thank the official reporters for doing their difficult work and doing it so well and so promptly and always so courteously.

So I thank, in closing, the two leaders who make it possible for all of us to get our work done. They are courteous; they are very helpful. I particularly thank the distinguished majority leader for his assistance in regard to the amendment I offered yesterday and which was cosponsored by my senior colleague and by the senior Senator from Kentucky and the Junior Senator from Kentucky, Mitch McConnell, and Mr. Bunning, and all the Senators on both sides of the aisle who worked with me on behalf of that amendment. I thank my own leader for also helping to pave the way for us to have a vote, have the Senate vote on that amendment.

When Thanksgiving Day comes and the turkey is being carved and my dear wife of 62, almost 62½ years, and my lovely daughter, their husbands, our grandchildren, and our great grandchildren are all around me, we will think of the blessings of the good Lord, and one of those blessings is that of being in the company of and associated with so many wonderful people who are part of the Senate family every day.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY, SENATOR BYRD

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, first I thank the distinguished Senator from West Virginia for his very kind comments. I also want to bring to my colleagues’ attention the fact that the
