support rural air service to the Department of Transportation and Related Agencies Appropriations bill for fiscal year 2004.

The Wendell H. Ford Aviation and Investment Reform Act of the 21st Century (AIR-21) included in Section 203 a provision to provide grants to attract and subsidize improved air carrier service to airports currently receiving inadequate service. The provision authorizes $20 million for grants of up to $500,000 to communities or community consortia which meet certain criteria for participation in the program.

My amendment would provide discretionary authority to the Secretary of Transportation to implement this pilot program utilizing not more than $20 million in FY 2001 for this purpose.

Mr. President, I want to emphasize how important it is to my home State of New Mexico, particularly southeastern New Mexico where I have worked for years to bring rural air service to that part of the state. The communities of Roswell, Hobbs, Carlsbad, and Altamirano have a list of consortia in anticipation of applying for federal funds under this program. The consortium has raised $200,000 in local funding and $200,000 in state funds, and can demonstrate that existing air service in that part of the state is insufficient and is accompanied by unreasonably higher fares. The southeastern New Mexico consortium is precisely the sort of applicant this grant program is intended to benefit. A similar consortium is being put together in Altamirano, Ingle, Jennings, Kidd, and Eddy Counties. These are exactly the kinds of communities this program we are funding today is designed to help.

Mr. President, I am pleased the committee has found a way to fund this important program for rural communities. I want to work with the committee as the bill goes to conference to ensure that this funding is retained. I again thank Chairman SHELBY and Senator LAUTENBERG for their help.

Mr. ROCKEFELLER. Mr. President, I encourage the passage of the Domenici-Bingaman-Burns amendment to the Department of Transportation Appropriations Act, Senate Amendment 3432. This amendment appropriates $20 million for grants supporting the Small Community Air Service Development Pilot program, properly targeting necessary funding to needy small airports.

When I became Ranking Member of the Aviation Subcommittee, I was determined to make support of small airports a priority. This March, I helped craft the Wendell H. Ford Aviation and Reform Act of the 21st Century (FAIR-21), the Federal Aviation Administration and the Airport Improvement Program bill authorizing $40 billion for aviation funding, the largest increase in aviation funding ever. This included significant new funding for rural airports. In 1998, I had authored the Air Service Restoration Act, directing the Department of Transportation to make new priorities and incentives supporting the development of airports in small communities, which was incorporated into FAIR-21. The Domenici-Bingaman-Burns amendment builds on these efforts and makes the proposed funding a reality.

The Domenici-Bingaman-Burns amendment provides the funding small airports need. Small airports are an essential part of our aviation infrastructure. Without improvements to our small airports, we will stymy the economic growth of less developed areas. We know transportation is vital to economic development and that improving air transportation needs more Congressional attention. Senator DOMENICI sponsored this amendment with Senators BURNS and BINGAMAN and made it a priority and possible. But I would like to especially note the work of my good friend and respected colleague, Senator BINGAMAN, who deserves tremendous credit for his assiduous efforts to make sure this funding is available. I wholeheartedly endorse this amendment and urge its adoption as part of the Department of Transportation Appropriation Act.

Mr. SHELBY. These amendments have been cleared on both sides of the aisle.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there be no further debate, the question is on agreeing to the amendments.

The amendments (Nos. 3432, as modified; 3436, as modified; 3438, as modified; 3447, as modified; 3451, 3452, and 3453,) were agreed to, en bloc.

Mr. SHELBY. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. REID. I move to lay that motion on the table.

Mr. SHELBY. These amendments to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. SHELBY. Mr. President, this completes the amendments that the managers can clear from the list of amendments. The remaining amendments are those from the list of points of order that lie against them or the managers have been unable to clear. For all intents and purposes, we are done. I intend to urge third reading and final passage in short order.
who are blessed with a long life, we learn that existence is an intricate mosaic of tranquility and difficulty. Struggles, however with blessings, are inevitable, and instructive, part of life. A caring father prepares us for this reality. He teaches us that, in human nature, there is no perfection, there is simply the obligation to do one's best. My foster father, Titus Dalton Byrd, my aunt's husband, gave me my name and to a great extent the best aspects—and there are a few, I suppose—of my character. His was not an easy life. He struggled to support his wife and his little foster son during the depths of the Great Depression. This Nation is today blessed with the greatest economy the world has ever known. But, for those of us who remember the terrible poverty that gripped this Nation during the 1930's, prosperity, at one time in our lives, seemed a very, very long time in coming. It seemed far, far away.

The test of character, the real test of character in a nation is how that nation responds to adversity, and the same with regard to a person, how that person responds to adversity, not only in his own life but in the lives of others.

The Roman philosopher Seneca said that ‘‘fire is the test of gold; adversity, of strong men.’’ In this respect, Titus Dalton Byrd was a great teacher. He easily could have been a bitter man, a despairing man. He could have raged at his lot in life. He could have forsaken his family. He could have forsaken his faith.

I remember as clear as if it were yesterday watching for that man, that tall black-haired man with a red mustache coming down the railroad tracks. I recall when he reached down into that dinner bucket, and as I came to him, he would set the cover and reach in and get that cake and give it to me. He always saved the cake for me.

He was an unassuming man. Unlike me, he never said very much. He took no hard looks as they came. I never heard him use God's name in vain in all the years I lived with him. Never. He never complained. When he sat down to eat at the table, he never complained at the humble fare. I never heard him complain about how the day was long. When he died, he did not owe any man a penny. He always represented a triumph of the human spirit to me. He honored his responsibilities. He did his duty.

He could not be characterized as a literate man. He never read Emerson's essays or Milton's ‘‘Paradise Lost’' or Boccaccio's ‘‘Decameron,’’ or the ‘‘History of Rome.’’ He could hardly read at all. I suppose the only book he ever read was the Bible. His formal education was in the school of hard knocks, but he was a wise man. He knew right from wrong.

That sounds simple, even quaint, in these sophisticated times, but it surely is not always simple, quiet drama of the forsythias, the dogwoods, the roses, and the azaleas, to compete with a single miraculous bud.

James Russell Lowell wrote:

And what is so rare as a day in June?
Then, if ever, come perfect days;
Then Heaven tries earth if it be in tune,
And over it softly her warm ear lays:
Whether we look, or whether we listen;
We hear life murmur, or see it glisten.
As I have said, my dad was not himself a formally educated man. But, he understood and he appreciated nature, and he knew the tremendous value of an education. That is why he wanted me to go on to school. He did not want me to be a coal miner. He did not want me to earn my living in that way. He encouraged, indeed, he demanded that I study hard. He looked at that report card. He looked at that category denominated “deportment.” And he always said: If you get a whipping at school, I'll give you a whipping when you get home. And I knew that that one would be the worst of the two. But he loved me. I knew he loved me. That is why he threatened to whip me; it was because he loved me.

He encouraged me to study hard and to develop my mind. He wanted something better for me. He knew that education was the key that I would need to unlock the potential in my own life. So, Titus Dalton Byrd was a model for me, a model of how to live not only my own life but of married life as well. He and my mom, my Aunt Vlurma, were married for 53 years. I do not recall ever witnessing either of them raise a voice in anger against the other. And I heard them say from time to time: We have made it a pledge that both of us would not be angry at the same time.

I have always counted myself as truly fortunate—truly fortunate—even though my life’s ladder had the bottom rungs taken away. You ought to see where I lived, Mr. President. You ought some time to go with me down Mercer County and see where I lived—3 miles up the hollow, with no electricity, with no running water, the nearest hospital 15, 20 miles away, the nearest doctor the same. That was back in the days of the 2-cent stamp, the penny postcard. Some things were better; some things were not. But I have always counted myself as truly fortunate in having such exemplary role models.

A lot of people say today there are no role models anymore. Well, I had two role models in the good old man and woman who reared me. They were dear to me and I have not always succeeded but I have always aspired. And, on May 29, my beloved wife Erma and I celebrated our 63rd wedding anniversary. We both came from families, from mothers and fathers, who tried to bring us up right. And they inculcated into us a dedication to one’s oath.

Like, I suspect, many fathers whose jobs consume so much of their time and energy, the times away from my daughters when they were children. I am grateful for the capable and loving efforts of Erma who has shouldered so much of the responsibilities at my home. To the extent, limited though it may be, that I have been a good father, I am humbly indebted to Erma’s having been such a wonderful mother. Our journey as a family has been a more tranquil one thanks to her patience, her understanding, and her strength.

Of course, the roles of fathers—and mothers—in some ways have changed a great deal over the course of my lifetime. Parents today are confronted with far more choices at home and work than my wife and I ever encountered when we began our family. But, one thing has not changed. One thing has, in my opinion, remained constant. Parenthood is, ideally, a partnership, a collaboration. It is a vitally important, lifelong responsibility, and ought to be shared, balanced efforts of both partners.

No mortal soul is perfect or without fault. That is the reality of being human. We are all prey to losing our strength. Just think of the voice, but other than a piece of cake perhaps—that my dad gave me, as the values that he taught me. It is the treasure, if fleeting, moments together, the lessons learned, that endure. I can say now, from the perspective of a long and full and eventful life, that that is what matters. That is the greatest gift we can receive as children, and that is the greatest gift that we can bequest as parents.

A caring father is a lifelong comfort. I remember the stoic and kindly face of Titus Dalton Byrd. He encouraged me, he protected me, and his memory still guides me.

Mr. President, I have met with Kings in my lifetime, with Shahs, with Princes, with Presidents, with Princesses, with Queens, with Senators, with Governors, but I am here to say today that the greatest man that I ever knew in my long life, the really great man that I really knew in my long life, was my dad, Titus Dalton Byrd.

He taught me, in word and in deed, to work hard, to do my absolute best.

I close with this bit of verse:

THAT DAD OF MINE

He’s slowin’ down, as some folks say
With the burden of years from day to day;
His brow bears many a furrowed line;
His shoulders droop, and his step is slow;
And his hair is white, as white as snow;
But his kind eyes sparkle with a friendly light;
His smile is warm, and his heart is right.

He’s old? Oh, yes. But only in years,
For his spirit soars as the sunset nears.
And blest I’ve been, and wealth I’ve had,
In knowing a man like my old dad.

And proud I am to stand by him,
As he stood by me, when the way was dim;
I’ve found him worthy and just as fine,
A prince of men—that dad of mine.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I personally appreciate the remarks of the Senator from West Virginia. I only hope that my five children will reflect upon their dad someday as he has his.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada.

Mr. LAUTENBERG. Mr. President, the one thing we can always count on from Senator Byrd is to throw in some good, sensible reflection as we go on battering one another, at times over sometimes important things but sometimes not so important. There is a commercial about one of the brokerage firms, that when that firm speaks, everybody listens. When Senator Byrd speaks, everybody should listen. We have a collection of his papers on the Senate, but he has done so many other things in just think of the voice, but look at the message, and you capture the essence of Senator Byrd. I am going to miss him terribly when I leave here.

Mr. BYRD. I thank the Senator.
