your children eat all of those green vegetables before they have those Oreos cookies. We wish to try to teach you how to have the patience to teach your children how to catch a baseball, ride a bicycle, say no to drugs, and drive a car responsibly. I know it is not always easy to be the guy who has to be in all of these places at once, but you all have such an important role to your children and our society.

Finally, I want to say thank you to my father. I remember growing up in Eufala, Oklahoma when my father worked three jobs to keep food on the table. He still had the time to instill in me the values that have made me the man I am today. Thank you Daddy.

Today I urge all my colleagues to support this piece legislation, and send thanks to all of our responsible fathers across this great nation.

SENSE OF HOUSE REGARDING MONEY LAUNDERING

Mrs. ROUKEMA. Madam Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and agree to the resolution (H. Res. 495) expressing the sense of the House regarding support for the Financial Action Task Force on Money Laundering, and the timely and public identification of non-cooperative jurisdictions in the fight against international money laundering.

The Clerk read as follows:

H. R.S. 495

Whereas the International Monetary Fund has estimated the amount of international money laundering to be at least $600,000,000,000 annually representing 2 to 5 percent of the world's gross domestic product;

Whereas money laundering is a crucial adjunct to the underlying crimes that generate money, including drug trafficking, kidnapping, murder, international terrorism, and other forms of violent crime;

Whereas money laundering and foreign corruption facilitate each other, undermining the efforts of the United States to promote democratic institutions and economic development around the world;

Whereas, in today's open and global financial markets, which are characterized by a high mobility of funds and the rapid development of new payment technologies, the tools for laundering the proceeds of serious crimes have become more sophisticated and readily available;

Whereas recent years have witnessed a sharp increase in the number of jurisdictions offering financial services without appropriate regulation and supervision which are protected by strict banking secrecy legislation which facilitates the anonymous protection of illegal assets in certain countries or territories making them even more attractive for money laundering;

Whereas the proliferation of such non-cooperative countries or territories which do not, or only marginally, participate in international cooperation to combat financial crime, also exacerbates competition between these centers and so contributes to worsening existing practices and makes more difficult the maintenance of anti-money laundering standards in other countries;

Whereas, in order to ensure the stability of the international financial system and effective prevention of money laundering, all financial centers in the world should have comprehensive control, regulation, and supervision systems, and that all national intermediaries and agents be subject to strict obligations, notably as regards the prevention, detection, and punishment of money laundering;

Whereas the Financial Action Task Force on Money Laundering (FATF), of which the United States is a founding member, was established for the purpose of developing and promoting policies to combat international money laundering;

Whereas the FATF, consisting of 26 jurisdictions and including all international organizations, originally issued in 1990 and revised in 1996 40 recommendations designed for universal application that set out the basic framework for anti-money laundering efforts covering the criminal justice system and law enforcement, the financial system and its regulation, and international cooperation;

Whereas the FATF has determined the criteria for defining noncooperative countries or territories consistent with the 40 recommendations, and has agreed on a process for identifying non-cooperative jurisdictions to include all countries and territories, both inside and outside FATF membership, whose detrimental practices seriously and unjustifiably hamper the fight against international money laundering;

Whereas the FATF has reported that the list of noncooperative countries or territories should include several subcategories of noncooperative countries or territories which could be as follows: countries noncooperative with severe deficiencies in many areas, partly noncooperative with impediments in various areas, and de facto noncooperative with no significant impediments in laws and regulations but ineffective regime in practice;

Whereas the FATF is gathering and analyzing all relevant information necessary for the publication of lists of noncooperative jurisdictions.

Resolved, That it is the sense of the House that—

1. The United States should continue to actively and publicly support the objectives of the FATF with regard to combating international money laundering;
2. The FATF should identify noncooperative jurisdictions in as expeditious a manner as possible and publicly release a list identifying those jurisdictions identified;
3. The United States should support the public release of the list naming noncooperative jurisdictions identified by the FATF;
4. The United States should encourage the adoption of the necessary international action to encourage compliance by the identified noncooperative jurisdictions; and
5. The United States should take the necessary countermeasures to protect the United States economy against money of unlawful origin and encourage other nations to do the same.

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE

June 19, 2000

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE

Page 11277

Whereas the FATF, consisting of 26 jurisdictions and including all international organizations, originally issued in 1990 and revised in 1996 40 recommendations designed for universal application that set out the basic framework for anti-money laundering efforts covering the criminal justice system and law enforcement, the financial system and its regulation, and international cooperation;

Whereas the FATF has determined the criteria for defining noncooperative countries or territories consistent with the 40 recommendations, and has agreed on a process for identifying non-cooperative jurisdictions to include all countries and territories, both inside and outside FATF membership, whose detrimental practices seriously and unjustifiably hamper the fight against international money laundering;

Whereas the FATF has reported that the list of noncooperative countries or territories should include several subcategories of noncooperative countries or territories which could be as follows: countries noncooperative with severe deficiencies in many areas, partly noncooperative with impediments in various areas, and de facto noncooperative with no significant impediments in laws and regulations but ineffective regime in practice;

Whereas the FATF is gathering and analyzing all relevant information necessary for the publication of lists of noncooperative jurisdictions.

Resolved, That it is the sense of the House that—

1. The United States should continue to actively and publicly support the objectives of the FATF with regard to combating international money laundering;
2. The FATF should identify noncooperative jurisdictions in as expeditious a manner as possible and publicly release a list identifying those jurisdictions identified;
3. The United States should support the public release of the list naming noncooperative jurisdictions identified by the FATF;
4. The United States should encourage the adoption of the necessary international action to encourage compliance by the identified noncooperative jurisdictions; and
5. The United States should take the necessary countermeasures to protect the United States economy against money of unlawful origin and encourage other nations to do the same.

Whereas the FATF, consisting of 26 jurisdictions and including all international organizations, originally issued in 1990 and revised in 1996 40 recommendations designed for universal application that set out the basic framework for anti-money laundering efforts covering the criminal justice system and law enforcement, the financial system and its regulation, and international cooperation;

Whereas the FATF has determined the criteria for defining noncooperative countries or territories consistent with the 40 recommendations, and has agreed on a process for identifying non-cooperative jurisdictions to include all countries and territories, both inside and outside FATF membership, whose detrimental practices seriously and unjustifiably hamper the fight against international money laundering;

Whereas the FATF has reported that the list of noncooperative countries or territories should include several subcategories of noncooperative countries or territories which could be as follows: countries noncooperative with severe deficiencies in many areas, partly noncooperative with impediments in various areas, and de facto noncooperative with no significant impediments in laws and regulations but ineffective regime in practice;

Whereas the FATF is gathering and analyzing all relevant information necessary for the publication of lists of noncooperative jurisdictions.

Resolved, That it is the sense of the House that—

1. The United States should continue to actively and publicly support the objectives of the FATF with regard to combating international money laundering;
2. The FATF should identify noncooperative jurisdictions in as expeditious a manner as possible and publicly release a list identifying those jurisdictions identified;
3. The United States should support the public release of the list naming noncooperative jurisdictions identified by the FATF;
4. The United States should encourage the adoption of the necessary international action to encourage compliance by the identified noncooperative jurisdictions; and
5. The United States should take the necessary countermeasures to protect the United States economy against money of unlawful origin and encourage other nations to do the same.

Mr. SOUDER. Madam Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.
eliminate anonymous savings accounts. As the Journal reported, there are 100 million anonymous accounts, more than three for each man, woman and child in Austria. These accounts hold an estimated $100 billion. The FATF and money laundering experts had identified the anonymous Austria savings accounts as posing significant money laundering problems. Austria’s action, which came only after it became clear, and I went to stress that, that action and compliance only came after it became clear that the FATF would name Austria, shows that the “name and shame” project can be effective. Austria will then be in compliance with the international standards. Another benefit from the FATF announcements is that our U.S. banks and securities firms will be on notice regarding what jurisdictions should be avoided and our regulators will be focused on those jurisdictions.

Madame Chairman, this resolution represents a significant step in the direction of serious action to fight money laundering crimes.

This Congress needs to do more on the subject of money laundering. This week Mr. McCOLLUM and I will be introducing a comprehensive money laundering proposal similar to the Administration’s bill from last November. This bill will address major problems such as (1) bulk cash smuggling, (2) currency launderers, and (3) sanctions against money launderers.

These, and other, money laundering issues should be addressed this Congress.

Madam Chairman, as wonderful as this particular proposal is, and I would like to reserve time at the end here to add something more, I would say that as strongly as I support this effort, and it is an essential action that this Congress take, there is still more to be done that must be done, and I would hope that this is the first step in a concerted, focused effort for this Congress to continue down the anti-money laundering path.

Madam Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. LAFAULCE. Madam Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Madam Speaker, I rise in strong support of this resolution. Of the many public policy challenges facing lawmakers, facing the law enforcement community and facing regulators, I do not know that any represents as significant a threat to our financial system and our American system as money laundering does.

The wholesale cleansing of illegitimate profits derived from criminal activities reaches staggering proportions, by some estimates between $100 and $300 billion in the United States alone, and nearly $500 billion, that is over one-half trillion, worldwide per year.

According to the IMF, this figure represents from 2 to 5 percent of the entire world’s gross domestic product. So in this context, the resolution of the House of Representatives (Mrs. ROUKEMA) expressed the support of the House of Representatives for the actions about to be taken by what is known as the Financial Action Task Force on Money Laundering.

That task force is composed of 26 members, including the United States, the European Commission, the Gulf Cooperation Council, et cetera. It was formed by the G-7 economic summit of 1989, and the task force was set up to address the global problem of money laundering. This week, on June 22, the task force will “name and shame,” if you will, non-compliant jurisdictions, both inside and outside the task force’s membership.

The purpose of naming these jurisdictions is to highlight their lack of cooperation in the fight against money laundering.

The resolution follows the recent approval by the Committee on Banking of the Clinton administration antimonies laundering proposal which passed our committee on June 8 with very broad bipartisan support; in fact, almost unanimously. I am hopeful that the bill will soon come before our full House so that we can pass it and can provide the Treasury Secretary with well-targeted discretionary tools to address discrete problems in recognized money laundering offshore havens.

I should note that the identical language from today’s resolution was included in the administration’s legislation for which we can credit the efforts of our distinguished colleague, the gentlewoman from New Jersey (Mrs. ROUKEMA), international money laundering is at least a $1.5 trillion industry, and that represents at least 2 to 5 percent of the world’s annual gross domestic product. This Member intends to focus his remarks on H. Res. 495 in four different ways today. These I propose as follows: The history and impetus for H. Res. 495; second, the main provisions of H. Res. 495; third, the support for H. Res. 495; and, fourth, the exigent circumstances explaining why immediate passage of H. Res. 495 is needed.

First, to illustrate the history behind the resolution, in February of this year, three of the five committees of the NATO Parliamentary Assembly, including this Member and other Members from the U.S. delegation to the NATO PA, attended a NATO meeting at the headquarters of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development, OECD, and, of course, the House delegation to the NATO PA attended that meeting. A major topic of that discussion was FATF, which predominantly includes the representatives of the member States of the OECD.

As mentioned, FATF is an intergovernmental effort whose function is the development and promotion of policies to combat money laundering. The FATF currently consists of 26 countries, including the major financial center countries of Europe, North America and Asia. During the aforementioned NATO meeting, after the presentation of the subject of international money laundering conducted by the FATF and given by the OECD staff, and other private conversations with OECD staff and the parliamentary delegations from the other NATO countries, the U.S. House delegation became concerned whether the FATF actually would publicly name those countries which were identified in their draft report as noncooperative jurisdictions in the fight against international money laundering. There were indications that the FATF would not name names unless pressure was brought to bear in favor of the naming of noncompliant jurisdictions.

Second: provisions. As a result of that NATO PA meeting, the distingished chairman of the Economic Committee of the NATO PA, along with this Member and other Members of the House delegation, as original cosponsors, introduced this resolution which expresses the U.S. House's firm support for the public release of the names of noncooperative jurisdictions identified by the FATF.

Because of the possible public release of these names, according to media reports, by the chairman, Austria had already recently abolished its controversial anonymous bank accounts, and I am going to include that article from the June 16 edition of the Wall Street Journal.

Furthermore, the expression of the sense of the House in this resolution also states that the U.S. should encourage the adoption of the necessary international actions to encourage compliance by these identified jurisdictions. As it specifies that the U.S. should put in place necessary countermeasures against money laundering and encourage other nations to do the same.

Three: the support for it. In addition to the distinguished chairman from New Jersey and this Member, there are seven additional cosponsors. Moreover, very similar language, as mentioned by the gentleman from New York, was successfully added by the gentlewoman, the chairman of the subcommittee, the Committee on Banking and Financial Services mark-up of H.R. 3886. That is a more comprehensive bill, which was advanced by the Committee on Banking and Financial Services on June 8 did report.

Lastly, exigent circumstances. Due to the planned release by FATF of some type of report on this subject later this week, it is timely and essential that H. Res. 495, this sense of the House Resolution, be approved today and the resolution conveyed to the FATF and to the OECD.

Madam Speaker, I include this article from the Wall Street Journal for the RECORD:

[From the Wall Street Journal, June 16, 2000]

AUSTRIA ESCAPES CENSURE BY ENDING SECRET BANK ACCOUNTS

(By Michael Allen)

A week before a multilateral task force is scheduled to name and shame world money-laundering havens, Austria has escaped censure by agreeing to abolish its controversial offshore bank accounts. The 26-nation Financial Action Task Force, or FATF, the world's leading anti-money-laundering group, had warned Austria it could risk expulsion if it didn't abandon the anonymous passbook accounts, which date to the Austro-Hungarian Empire. The accounts had become a major concern for law enforcement authorities and a major irritant in U.S.- Austrian relations because they offer an impenetrable way to disguise the source and ownership of criminal profits.

Passbook accounts could be used by anyone who knew the coded number and possessed the book, meaning they could be opened by one client to transfer funds through the Internet to someone else, who could then use them for any number of illegal purposes in complete secrecy and even access the funds from ATMs around the world.

"Anonymous passbook savings accounts have been a major problem and a critical loophole in the international consensus to combat money-laundering," said Stuart Eizenstat, deputy U.S. Treasury secretary. "This victory represents a clear demonstration of FATF resolve and credibility.

Forcing Austria to clean up its own house or leave the FATF was viewed as an essential step before the organization releases a list next week of money-laundering havens and countries that have not in place adequate laws and financial supervision. The composition of the list has been kept secret, but observers believe it will be heavily weighted with Caribbean and South Pacific island states.

Another possible candidate is Liechtenstein, which a French parliamentary report described as Europe's most dangerous money-laundering center. The Liechtenstein government, which has already sent some identifying details to the U.S., says it is trying to clean up its act.

According to U.S. Treasury officials, Austria has 24 million anonymous passbook accounts, or three for every man, woman and child in the country, signifying that many of them are in the hands of foreigners. The accounts are believed to hold about $100 billion.

The U.S. and other nations have been trying to get Austria to eliminate the accounts for a decade, but it was only in February that the threat of FATF expulsion prompted Vienna to agree to a joint operation between the Committee on Banking and Financial Services. These and other money laundering issues, I hope and pray, will be addressed in this Congress; and if not completed in this Congress, then we will make it a top priority in the next.

However, that is for the future. For today, we are very happy to have this resolution before us, and I thank my colleagues for their cooperation and the work that we have been able to accomplish together here.

Madam Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mrs. Biggert): The question is on the motion offered by the gentlewoman from New Jersey (Mrs. Roukema) that the House suspend the rules and agree to the resolution, H. Res. 495.

The question was taken; and (two and one-third having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

RECESS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 12 of rule 1, the Chair declares the House in recess until approximately 4 p.m.

Accordingly, at 10 minutes to 4 p.m., the House stood in recess until approximately 4 p.m.