Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Speaker, a 5-minute vote.

Mr. Speaker, that I demand the yeas and nays.

The question was taken; and the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. SENSENBRENNER. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays. The result of the vote was announced as above recorded. A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Mr. TIERNEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material which to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material on the subject of H. R. 7, the bill just passed.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from California?

So the bill was passed.

At 3:10 p.m., Mr. TIERNEY was heard from the Chair, the Speaker pro tempore having announced the HOURS of the House for the Day.

Mr. TIERNEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members of the House may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material on the subject of H. R. 7, the bill just passed.

Such an extension of time is necessary to afford Members an opportunity to communicate with their constituents in regards to the most important legislation that was just passed.

Mr. Speaker, as you are aware, today we will be voting on what is essentially a continuation of the Federalism Act of 2001, H. R. 2216, which is designed primarily to push certain federal and regulatory powers back to the States.

That is significant because this is an issue that I think is particularly important to you, Mr. Speaker. It is an issue that, as you know, is dear to the hearts of many Members of the House.

I think it is likely that we will see a strong House majority voting in favor of the legislation.

So, again, I ask unanimous consent that all Members of the House may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material on the subject of H. R. 7, the bill just passed.

So ordered.

Mr. TIERNEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members of the House may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material on the subject of H. R. 7, the bill just passed.
