Mrs. Graham became the first woman to head a major metropolitan newspaper in the United States. She was a pioneer in the field of journalism and a leader in the fight for equal rights. She was a strong advocate for civil and women's rights, and her leadership helped to change the face of the media.

She passed away on July 17, 2001, leaving behind a legacy of courage, determination, and a commitment to excellence. The newspaper business has lost a great leader, and the world has lost a great spirit. She will be remembered for her contributions to journalism and her dedication to making the world a better place.

So today, as we remember Katharine Graham, let us honor her legacy by continuing to fight for the same principles that she held dear. Let us remember her words, "Think no little thoughts, do no little deeds."
