INDIAN RACISM EXPOSED AT RACISM CONFERENCE—PRESENTATION MOVES CONFERENCE TO TEARS

HON. EDOLPHUS TOWNS OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 6, 2001

Mr. TOWNS. Mr. Speaker, at the World Conference on Racism in Durban, Dalit and Kashmiri activists showed up to exert pressure against India’s racist caste system. The caste system, which discriminates against people merely because of the group into which they are born, is one of the most racist systems in the world.

The demonstrators handed out literature, buttons, and headbands demanding equal rights for all peoples. They have been chanting and drumming to force the caste system onto the agenda for the conference.

India argued for keeping casteism off the agenda in Durban, saying that there are laws against caste discrimination on the books. This is true, but unlike our civil rights laws, the anti-caste laws are never enforced and are routinely violated. Dalits are forced to use separate facilities, such as tea shops. Dalits are routinely violated. Dalits are forced to use separate living areas, separate burial grounds and restrictions on their movements. They cannot enter the temple. A group of men surrounded the road and told everyone “except Dalits” to leave. Then they grabbed Mr. Manimegalai and stabbed him in the stomach. Despite his pleas not to kill the other Dalits, they chopped up the six other Dalits in front of him. Then they murdered Mr. Manimegalai, chopped off his head, and threw it in a well. Unfortunately, incidents like this are all too common in India.

I would like to take this opportunity to salute the protestors for their success in bringing India’s racism to the world’s attention. That is the first step towards ending it.

Mr. Speaker, India must learn that a democracy respects all of its people, not just those in a position of power and privilege. It must transcend its Brahminocracy and bring real democracy to all the people. How can people continue to live in the facade of Indian democracy when they cannot enjoy even the most basic rights?

America can help this process along. We must maintain our current sanctions on India. We should stop all aid to India until the full range of human rights can be enjoyed by all the people there, not just the Brahmins. We should declare our overt support for the 17 freedom movements currently operating within India’s borders. We can do so by supporting a free and fair plebiscite, under international supervision, on the question of independence for Khalistan, Kashmir, Nagaland, and the other minority nations living under the boot of Indian oppression. We should encourage President Carter might be a good person to head an international monitoring team.

The Council of Khalistan has issued a press release praising the demonstrators who are bringing the issue of Indian racism to the forefront of international perspectives. America can help this process along. We would like to place them both into the RECORD at this time for the information of my colleagues. In addition, I would like to insert the National Post article into the RECORD:

UN RACISM CONFERENCE MOVED TO TEARS, NOT ACTION—RAPE VICTIMS TELL STORIES

By Corinna Schuler

DURBAN, SOUTH AFRICA.—In an oft-ignored chamber of the cavernous convention centre, the real victims of racism struggle to have their stories of suffering heard.

This is not one of the dozens of rooms where international negotiators spend days behind closed doors, locked in debate about where to place commas or whether words like “deport” or “Holocaust” with a capital “H.”

Here, persecuted people from every corner of the globe take their turn on stage between 1:30 p.m. and 3 p.m. every day to tell simple stories about real suffering—the only forum at this massive United Nations gathering where the personal pain of discrimination is laid bare.

One day, the speaker was an escaped slave from Niger. The next, an aboriginal woman from Australia. Then, a migrant worker from Brazil.

Yesterday it was Mruguesan Manimegalai’s turn. The 29-year-old mother of four, a member of India’s lowest caste, so impoverished she had never left the confines of her squall settlement before boarding a plane this week for Durban. “I was very happy that it might fall,” she continued with a shy smile. But she pushed her fear aside yesterday, took a deep breath and told the story of her husband’s horrifying murder to a crowd of 200 human rights activists and a few journalists. By the time she was done, even the moderator was blinking back tears. “We are Dalits”—untouchables—began Ms. Manimegalai.

As one of India’s 1.4 million lowest-caste people, she grew up in a segregated village— forbidden to draw water from the communal well or to attend the same temple as upper-caste people.

Her husband had only a Grade 10 education but became an activist after he was elected president of a village council. Members of the upper caste warned he would not last six months. “We will see how the functions proceed without a head,” said one written death threat.

After six months in office, when Mr. Manimegalai took a trip into town, upper-caste people followed him home in a bus. A crowd of men blocked off the road, screaming wildly for everyone to run away—“except Dalits.”

“They grabbed my husband by the shirt and stabbed him in the stomach. Even then, my husband pleaded with the dominant caste people not to kill the rest of the Dalits. They ignored him, and chopped the six others in front of his eyes.” Ms. Manimegalai did not stop for a breath as the next words tumbled out. “Even after my husband’s death, the anger, the bitterness, the caste-fanatic feeling did not subside.”

“They cut off his head and threw it in a well nearby.” Witnesses were too terrified to come forward and it was only after three years of protest that some of the attackers were finally jailed. “We strongly demand,” Ms. Manimegalai concluded, “that the caste system in our country be abolished. We demand education for our children, job opportunities and dignity.”

Without a hug or shake her hand. Tears streamed down her face as she stood in the glare of the TV lights. It was not the first time the Voices Forum has borne witness to such raw emotion. But many of the 1,100 journalists in Durban to cover the UN’s World Conference Against Racism have been too preoccupied by arguments for fighting racism and intolerance were not present to hear Ms. Manimegalai’s demands.

Many were in a room down the hall, arguing about whether words like “cultural” and “ethnic origin” should be included in the list of grounds for discrimination.

At the end of her speech, a moderator thanked Ms. Manimegalai and other presenters for having the courage to speak out.
You should never doubt raising your voice in this chamber,” she said reassuringly. “Never doubt the importance of doing that.”

The sorry truth is that the powerful testi monies heard in the Voices Forum have lit tle chance of being incorporated into the UN’s final declaration on racism, or its pro gram of action. “Cast out Caste” posters have been plastered all across Durban and activists have handed out thousands of information bro chures in an effort to highlight the injustice of the caste system in Hindu society. But India has fought all attempts to include any mention of caste, and neither the UN nor any government is pushing the point. The strongest language in the draft declaration comes in a single paragraph that refers to discrimi nation based on work or descent—and even those watered-down words seem set to be withdrawn. Likewise, Eastern European countries refuse to acknowledge the discrim ination endured by the Roma, or gyps ys, no matter how many emotional stories they have told in Durban this week.

The African slave girl who told her story moved an audience to tears, too. Inside confinement, however, African government delegates are so engrossed in de bate about the slave trade of centuries past there has been almost no talk of how people like 15-year-old Mariama Oumou and 20,000 others in Niger could be spared the horror of slavery today.

Will this conference change Ms. Manimegalai’s life? Are the documents under such hot debate not an international treaty or a UN resolution. In fact, it’s not a legal document of any kind and—if agreement is reached here by tomorrow—countries are free to ignore it.

But, Ms. Manimegalai lives with the hope her presence here will help the suffering Dalits of India break free from their oppression. “I am destitute,” she said. “My house has been set-backs of every conceivable variety during these years of construction but now at long last, comes the fulfillment of the dream—a community hospital completely equipped with every facility that modern medicine and modern science have developed, ready to take its place along with the best in the country in caring for those who are ill.

In August of 1951, the first patient walked through the doors of the Valley Hospital. That first year, over 4,000 patients entered those doors. In the following fifty years, the Valley Hospital expanded to meet the constantly changing needs of the growing community and implemented cutting-edge technology. Last year, the hospital administered to 42,540 patients and welcomed 3,221 babies. Thirty-five physicians of the Valley Hospital were named in the “Best Doctors in New York” list of the New York Magazine this year; a list compiled by their peers throughout regions of New Jersey, New York, and Connecticut. This month the Valley Health System, the hospital’s umbrella organization, will be the nation’s first health provider to feature Mayo Clinic health information on their website. As one can tell, this is a phenomenal group of people involved with the hospital.

The Valley Hospital has risen to pre eminence on the national level in health care and medical technology for its patients. Under Mike Azzara’s guidance as Chairman of Valley Health Systems, and Audrey Meyer’s leadership as President and CEO of the Valley Hospital, the hospital has entered the 21st century as a premier provider of health care in not only New Jersey but the entire Northeast United States.

Mr. Speaker, I ask my colleagues in the House of Representatives to join me in commending the Valley Hospital for its service to the community in the past fifty years, and recognizing those committed to continuing its tradition of excellence in the future.

A TRIBUTE TO THE BLIND AND VISUALLY IMPAIRED CENTER OF MONTEREY COUNTY, INC.

Mr. FARR of California. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to the Blind and Visually Impaired Center of Monterey County, whose thirtieth anniversary was celebrated on August 12, 2001. The center has been assisting visually impaired individuals to transcend the loss of sight as independent contributors to their communities.

Mr. Speaker, I hereby ask you and our colleagues to join with me in thanking payroll employees who are indeed, “Working for America” and proclaim September 3–7, 2001, National Payroll Week.

Ms. ROUKEMA. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to congratulate the Valley Hospital in Ridgewood, New Jersey, on the momentous occasion of their golden anniversary, the Valley Hospital has become a pre emier example of quality and commitment to medical excellence. This weekend, in celebration of their golden anniversary, the Valley Hospital “Old Fashioned Fair” will be held in the town of Ridgewood.

This remarkable hospital was once only a dream for the northwest New Jersey community. However, due to the perseverance of a small group of concerned community mem bers, this vision of a hospital was transformed into a reality. Plans began nearly forty years before ground was even broken. In 1910, community groups gathered to raise money for a hospital, however the stock market crash and the Great Depression stalled their attempts. With the leadership of the Women’s Auxiliary in 1944, local residents rallied again to donate almost $1,000,000 to break ground in 1949. Today we are able to congratulate the Valley Hospital on fifty years of outstanding service to northwest New Jersey. A passage from The Sunday News, dated June 19, 1951, illuminates the struggle and success of the hospital:

There has been discouragement and heartache, delay and disappointment. There have been set-backs of every conceivable variety during these years of construction but now at long last, comes the fulfillment of the dream—a community hospital completely equipped with every facility that modern medicine and modern science have developed, ready to take its place along with the best in the country in caring for those who are ill.
