Whenever the number of officers serving in any component, as shown in the table.

Proportion as is reflected in the nearest limit to the maximum number specified for the grade in any particular fiscal year.

The number of members that may be on full-time reserve component duty for a reserve component in a grade referred to in a table in subsection (a) by a number that does not exceed the number equal to 5 percent of the maximum number specified for the grade in that table.

Whenever the Secretary exercises the authority provided in paragraph (1), the Secretary shall submit to the Committee on Armed Services of the Senate and the Committee on Armed Services of the House of Representatives notice in writing of the adjustment made.

"(2) Of the total number of members of the Naval Reserve who are serving on full-time reserve component duty at the end of any fiscal year, the number of those members who may be serving in each of the grades of lieutenant commander, commander, and captain may not, as of the end of that fiscal year, exceed the number determined in accordance with the following table:

"(2) Of the total number of members of the Naval Reserve who are serving on full-time reserve component duty at the end of any fiscal year, the number of those members who may be serving in each of the grades of lieutenant commander, commander, and captain may not, as of the end of that fiscal year, exceed the number determined in accordance with the following table:

"(a) LIMITATIONS.—Of the total number of members of a reserve component serving on full-time reserve component duty is between any two consecutive numbers in the first column of the appropriate table in paragraph (1) or (2) of subsection (a), the corresponding authorized strengths for each of the grades shown in that table for that component are determined by mathematical interpolation between the respective numbers of the two strengths. If the total number of members of a reserve component serving on full-time reserve component duty for a reserve component in a grade referred to in a table in subsection (a) by a number that does not exceed the number equal to 5 percent of the maximum number specified for the grade in that table.

Whenever the number of officers serving in any grade for duty described in subsection (a) is less than the number authorized for that grade under this section, the difference between the two numbers may be applied to increase the number authorized under this section for any lower grade.

Whenever the Secretary exercises the authority provided in paragraph (1), the Secretary shall submit to the Committee on Armed Services of the Senate and the Committee on Armed Services of the House of Representatives notice in writing of the adjustment made.

"(b) DETERMINATIONS BY INTERPOLATION.—If the total number of members of a reserve component serving on full-time reserve component duty is between any two consecutive numbers in the first column of the appropriate table in paragraph (1) or (2) of subsection (a), the corresponding authorized strengths for each of the grades shown in that table for that component are determined by mathematical interpolation between the respective numbers of the two strengths. If the total number of members of a reserve component serving on full-time reserve component duty for a reserve component in a grade referred to in a table in subsection (a) by a number that does not exceed the number equal to 5 percent of the maximum number specified for the grade in that table.

Whenever the Secretary exercises the authority provided in paragraph (1), the Secretary shall submit to the Committee on Armed Services of the Senate and the Committee on Armed Services of the House of Representatives notice in writing of the adjustment made.

"(c) FULL-TIME RESERVE COMPONENT DUTY DEFINED.—In this section, the term ‘full-time reserve component duty’ means the following duty:

"(1) Active duty described in sections 10211, 10241, 10302, 10303, 10304, 10305, 12310, or 12402 of this title.

"(2) Full-time National Guard duty (other than for training) under section 502(f) of title 32.

"(3) Active duty described in section 708 of title 32.

"(d) SECRETARIAL WAIVER.—(1) Upon determining that it is in the national interest to do so, the Secretary of Defense may increase for a particular fiscal year the number of reserve officers that may be on full-time reserve component duty for a reserve component in a grade referred to in a table in subsection (a) by a number that does not exceed the number equal to 5 percent of the maximum number specified for the grade in that table.

Whenever the Secretary exercises the authority provided in paragraph (1), the Secretary shall submit to the Committee on Armed Services of the Senate and the Committee on Armed Services of the House of Representatives notice in writing of the adjustment made.

"(2) Whenever the Secretary exercises the authority provided in paragraph (1), the Secretary shall submit to the Committee on Armed Services of the Senate and the Committee on Armed Services of the House of Representatives notice in writing of the adjustment made.

"(e) FULL-TIME RESERVE COMPONENT DUTY DEFINED.—In this section, the term ‘full-time reserve component duty’ means the following duty:

"(1) Active duty described in sections 10211, 10241, 10302, 10303, 10304, 10305, 12310, or 12402 of this title.

"(2) Full-time National Guard duty (other than for training) under section 502(f) of title 32.

"(3) Active duty described in section 708 of title 32.

"(b) SENIOR ENLISTED MEMBERS.—The text of section 12012 of title 10, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

(a) LIMITATIONS.—Of the total number of members of a reserve component who are serving on full-time reserve component duty at the end of any fiscal year, the number of those members in each of pay grades of E-8 and E-9 who may be serving on active duty under section 10211 or 12310, or on full-time National Guard duty under the authority of section 502(f) of title 32 (other than for training) in connection with organizing, administering, recruiting, instructing, or training the reserve components or the National Guard may not, as of the end of that fiscal year, exceed the number determined in accordance with the following

(b) DETERMINATIONS BY INTERPOLATION.—If the total number of members of a reserve component serving on full-time reserve component duty is between any two consecutive numbers in the first column of the table shown in subsection (a), the corresponding authorized number for each of the grades shown in the table for that component are determined by mathematical interpolation between the respective numbers of the two strengths. If the total number of members of a reserve component serving on full-time reserve component duty is more or less than the highest or lowest number, respectively, set forth in the first column of the table in subsection (a), the Secretary concerned shall fix the corresponding strengths for the grades shown in the table at the same proportion as is reflected in the nearest limit shown in the table.

(c) REALLOCATIONS TO LOWER GRADE.—Whenever the number of officers serving in pay grade E-9 for duty described in subsection (a) is less than the number authorized for that grade under this section, the difference between the two numbers may be applied to increase the number authorized under this section for pay grade E-8.

(d) SECRETARIAL WAIVER.—(1) Upon determining that it is in the national interest to do so, the Secretary of Defense may increase for a particular fiscal year the number of reserve enlisted members that may be on active duty or full-time National Guard duty as described in subsection (a) for a reserve component in a pay grade referred to in a table in subsection (a) by a number that does not exceed the number equal to 3 percent of the maximum number specified for that grade and reserve component in the table.

(2) Whenever the Secretary exercises the authority provided in paragraph (1), the Secretary shall submit to the Committee on Armed Services of the House and the Committee on Armed Services of the Senate and the Committee on Armed Services of the House of Representatives notice in writing of the adjustment made.

“may waive paragraph (1) or paragraph (2) of subsection (a), or both paragraphs (1) and (2) of subsection (a), in the following circumstances (except that paragraph (2) of subsection (a) may not be waived by reason of paragraph (4)).”

(c) PROPOSED LEGISLATIVE CHANGES.—Not later than December 1, 2002, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to Congress a draft proposal for such legislative changes as the Secretary considers needed to implement the amendment made by subsections (a) and (b).

SEC. 525. INDEPENDENT STUDY OF JOINT OFFICER MANAGEMENT AND JOINT PROFESSIONAL MILITARY EDUCATION PROGRAMS.

(a) STUDY.—The Secretary of Defense shall provide for an independent study of the joint officer management system and the joint professional military education system. The Secretary shall ensure that the entity conducting the study is provided such information and support as required. The Secretary shall include in the cover letter for the study a requirement that the entity conducting the study submit a report to Congress on the study not later than June 30, 2007.

(b) MATTERS TO BE INCLUDED WITH RESPECT TO JOINT OFFICER MANAGEMENT.—With respect—to the joint officer management system, the entity conducting the independent study shall provide for joint duty assignment.

(1) Assessment of implications for joint officer education, development, and management that would result from proposed joint organizational operational elements (such as standing joint task forces) and from emerging officer management and personnel reforms (such as longer careers and more stabilization), that are under consideration by the Secretary of Defense.

(2) Assessment of the effectiveness of the current joint officer management system to develop and use joint specialty qualified officers in meeting both current and future requirements for joint specialty officers.

(3) Recommendations, based on empirical and other data, to improve the effectiveness of the joint officer management system, especially with regard to the following:

(A) The proper mix and sequencing of education assignments and experience assignments (to include, with respect to both types of assignments, consideration of the type and quality, and the length, of such assignments) to qualify an officer as a joint specialty officer, as well as the implications of adopting a variable joint duty tour length and the advisability and implications of a system of qualifying officers as joint specialty officers that uses multiple shorter qualification elections as a joint specialty officer than are now codified.

(B) The system of using joint specialty officers, including the continued utility of such measures as—

(i) the required fill of positions on the joint duty assignment list, as specified in paragraphs (1) and (4) of section 661(d) of title 10, United States Code;

(ii) the fill by such officers of a required number of critical billets, as prescribed by section 661(d)(2) of such title;

(iii) the mandated fill by general and flag officers of a minimum number of critical billets, as prescribed by section 661(d)(3) of such title; and

(iv) current promotion policy objectives for officers with the joint specialty, officers serving on the Joint Staff, and officers serving in joint duty assignment list positions, as prescribed by section 662 of such title.

(C) Any new policy and law required to provide officers the required joint specialty qualification before promotion to general or flag officer grade.

(D) A determination of the number of reserve component officers who would be qualified for designation as a joint specialty officer by reason of experience or education if the standards of existing law, including waiver authorities, were applied to them, and recommendations for a process for qualifying and employing future reserve component officers as joint specialty officers.

(C) MATTERS TO BE INCLUDED WITH RESPECT TO JOINT PROFESSIONAL MILITARY EDUCATION.—With respect to the joint professional military education entity conducting the independent study shall provide for the following:

(1) The number of officers who under the current system (A) qualified as joint specialty officers by attending joint professional military education programs before their first joint duty assignment, (B) qualified as joint specialty officers before completing that assignment but before completing that assignment, and (C) qualified as joint specialty officers without any joint professional military education.

(2) Recommended initiatives (include changes in officer personnel management law, if necessary) to provide incentives and otherwise facilitate attendance at joint professional military education programs before an officer’s first joint duty assignment.

(3) Recommended goals for attendance at the Joint Forces Staff College on route to a first joint duty assignment but before completing that assignment.

(4) An assessment of the continuing utility of statutory requirements for use of officers following joint professional military education, as prescribed by section 662(d) of title 10, United States Code.

(5) Determination of whether joint professional military education programs should remain principally an in-resident, multi-service experience and what role non-resident or distributive learning can or should play in future joint professional military education programs.

(6) Examination of options for the length of and increased capacity at Joint Forces Staff College, and whether other in-resident joint professional military education sources should be opened, and overseen to provide instruction at the level of the program designated as “joint professional military education”.

(7) CHAIRMAN OF JOINT CHIEFS OF STAFF.—With respect to the roles of the Secretary of Defense and the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, the entity conducting the independent study shall—

(A) provide for an evaluation of the current roles of the Secretary of Defense, the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and joint staff in law, policy, and implementation with regard to establishing and maintaining oversight of joint officer management, career guidelines, and joint professional military education; and

(B) make recommendations to improve and strengthen those roles.

(8) REQUIREMENTS FOR STUDY ENTITY.—In providing for the independent study required by subsection (a), the Secretary of Defense shall ensure that the entity conducting the study—

(I) is not a Department of Defense organization; and

(II) shall, at a minimum, involve in the study, in an integral way, the following persons:

(A) The Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and available former Chairmen of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

(B) Members and former members of the Joint Staff, the Armed Forces, and the Congress, and con- gressional staff who are or who have been significantly involved in the development, implementa- tion, or modification of joint officer management and joint professional military educa- tion.

(C) Experts in joint officer management and education from civilian academic and research centers.

SEC. 527. PROFESSIONAL DEVELOPMENT EDUCATION.

(a) EXECUTIVE AGENT FOR FUNDING.—(I) Ef- fective beginning with fiscal year 2003, the Secre- tary of Defense shall be the executive agent for funding professional development education programs of all components of the National De- fense University, to include the Joint Forces Staff College. The Secretary may not delegate the Secretary's functions and responsibilities under this section to any other entity.

(II) Nothing in subsection (a) affects policies in effect on the date of the enactment of this Act with respect to—

(A) the reporting of the President of the Na- tional Defense University to the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff; or

(B) providing logistical and base operations support for components of the National Defense University by the military departments.

(a) IN GENERAL.—(1) Chapter 108 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

(1) AUTHORITY FOR ADMISSION.—The Secre- tary of Defense may permit eligible private sector employees who work in organizations relevant to national security to receive instruction at the National Defense University in accord- ance with this section. The time period for equivalent private sector employees may be en- rolled at any one time. Upon successful comple- tion of the course of instruction in which en- rolled, such private sector employee may be awarded an appropriate diploma or degree under section 2165 of this title.

(b) ELIGIBLE PRIVATE SECTOR EMPLOYEES.—For purposes of this section, a private sector employee is an individual employed by a private firm that is engaged in providing to the Department of Defense or other Government depart- ments or agencies significant and substan- tial defense-related systems, products, or serv- ices whose work product is relevant to na- tional security policy or strategy. A private sec- tor employee admitted for instruction at the National Defense University remains eligible for such instruction only so long as that person re- mains employed by the same firm.

(c) ANNUAL CERTIFICATION BY SECRETARY OF DEFENSE.—Private sector employees may receive instruction at the National Defense University during any academic year only if, before the start of that academic year, the Secretary of De- fense determines, and certifies to the Committee on Armed Services of the Senate and the Com- mittee on Armed Services of the House of Rep- resentatives, that providing instruction to pri- vate sector employees under this section during that year will further national security interests of the United States.

(d) PROGRAM REQUIREMENTS.—The Secretary of Defense shall ensure that—

(1) the curriculum for the professional mili- tary education program in which private sector employees may be enrolled under this section is not readily available through other schools and..."
concentrates on national security relevant issues; and
(2) Subcourse offerings at the National Defense University continue to be determined solely by the needs of the Department of Defense.

"(e) TUITION.—The President of the National Defense University shall annually charge students enrolled under this section a rate—
"(1) that is at least the rate charged for employees of the United States outside the Department of Defense, less infrastructure costs, and
"(2) that considers the value to the school and course of the private sector student.

(f) STANDARDS OF CONDUCT.—While receiving instruction at the National Defense University, students enrolled under this section, to the extent practicable, are subject to the same regulations governing academic performance, attendance, norms of behavior, and enrollment as apply to Government civilian employees receiving instruction at the university.

(g) USE OF FUNDS.—Amounts received by the National Defense University for instruction of students enrolled under this section shall be retained by the university to defray the costs of such instruction. The source, and the disposition, of any funds received shall be specifically identified in records of the university.

Sec. 547. Cold War service medal.

(a) AUTHORITY.—Chapter 57 of title 10, United States Code, as amended by section 543(d)(1), is further amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"§1134. Cold War service medal.

"(a) MEDAL AUTHORIZED.—The Secretary concerned shall, upon application, issue the Cold War Service Medal to a person eligible to receive that medal. The Cold War service medal shall be of an appropriate design approved by the Secretary of Defense, with ribbons, lapel pins, and other appurtenances appropriate for terminating eligibility for the Cold War Service Medal. Those requirements shall not be more stringent than the service requirements for award of the Cold War Service Medal to a person eligible to receive that medal.

(b) ELIGIBILITY.—(1) A person is eligible to receive the Cold War Service Medal if the person—

"(A) served on active duty during the Cold War;
"(B) has not been released from active duty with a characterization of service less favorable than honorable discharge, unless the discharge was charge less favorable than an honorable discharge; and

"(C) except as provided under paragraph (3), meets the service requirements of paragraph (2).

"(2) The service requirements of this paragraph are—

"(A) in the case of a person who served on active duty during the Cold War as an enlisted member, that the person have completed that person's initial term of enlistment and after the end of that initial term of enlistment have reenlisted for an additional term of enlistment or have been appointed as an officer; and

"(B) in the case of a person who served on active duty during the Cold War as an officer, that the person have completed that person's initial service obligation as an officer and have served in the armed forces after completing that initial service obligation as an officer.

"(3) The Secretary concerned, under regulations prescribed under this section, may waive the service requirements of paragraph (2)—

"(A) in the case of any person discharged or released from active duty for a disability incurred or aggravated in line of duty;

"(B) in the case of any person discharged for hardship or for other reasons prescribed by the Secretaries of the military departments, if the Secretary concerned determines that such a waiver is warranted; or

"(C) ONE AUTHORIZED.—Not more than one Cold War service medal may be issued to any person.

"(d) ISSUANCE TO REPRESENTATIVE OF DECEASED.—If a person who is eligible for the Cold War service medal dies before being issued that medal, the medal may, upon application, be issued to the legal representative, as designated by the Secretary concerned.

"(e) REPLACEMENT.—Under regulations prescribed by the Secretary concerned, a Cold War service medal that is lost, destroyed, or rendered unfit for use without fault or neglect on the part of the person to whom it was issued may be replaced without charge.

"(f) UNIFORM REGULATIONS.—The Secretary of Defense shall ensure that regulations prescribed by the Secretaries of the military departments under this section are uniform so far as is practicable.

"(g) COLD WAR DEFINED.—In this section, the term 'Cold War' means the period beginning on September 20, 2001 and, if so, the length of time that such materials are awaiting shipment at any such location; related mail is collected for shipment to overseas port facilities in the United States and all port facilities in the United States and all port facilities in the United States and all port facilities in the United States; and

"(2) The Secretary shall examine existing Department of Defense programs regarding the provision of direct financial assistance to military spouses and their dependents; and

Skilled nursing care facility care for each spell of illness shall continue to be provided for as long as medically necessary and appropriate.

(2) In this section—

(A) ‘‘The term ‘skilled nursing facility’ has the meaning given such term in section 1819(a) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395d(a) and (b)).’’;

(B) ‘‘The term ‘spell of illness’ has the meaning given such term in section 1861(a) of such Act (42 U.S.C. 1395w(a)).’’;

(C) ‘‘The program shall include a comprehensive, intermittent home health care benefit that shall be provided in the manner and under the conditions described in section 1861(m) of the Social Security Act (42 U.S.C. 1395x(a)).’’

(3) The Secretary shall promulgate regulations to carry out the provisions of this section.

(b) Report.—Not later than March 1, 2002, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the Congress a report on the Secretary’s plans for implementing such section.

SEC. 703. IMPROVEMENTS IN ADMINISTRATION OF THE TRICARE PROGRAM.

(a) Expansion of TRICARE Program.—Section 1072(7) of title 10, United States Code, is amended by striking ‘‘the competitive selection of contractors to financially underwrite’’.

(b) Reduction of Contract Start-Up Time.—Section 106(b) of such title is amended—

(1) in paragraph (1)—

(A) by striking ‘‘The’’ and inserting ‘‘Except as provided in paragraph (3),’’

(B) by striking ‘‘contract,’’ and all that follows through ‘‘as soon as practicable after the award of’’; and

(2) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

‘‘(3) The Secretary may reduce the nine-month start-up period required under paragraph (1) if—

(A) the Secretary—

(i) determines that a shorter period is sufficient to ensure the implementation of all contract requirements; and

(ii) submits notification to the Committees on Armed Services of the House of Representatives and the Senate of the Secretary’s intent to reduce the nine-month start-up period; and

(B) 60 days have elapsed since the date of such notification.’’

(3) In this subsection:

(A) The term ‘‘eligible dependent’’ means a dependent of a member of the forces on active duty who is—

(i) a surviving spouse;

(ii) a child;

(iii) a disabled child;

(iv) a member of the family of a deceased member of the forces who was on active duty;

(v) a nonveteran parent or grandparent; or

(vi) a dependent of a member of the forces in an individual case management program by the Secretary of Defense in consultation with the administering Secretaries.

(B) The term ‘‘qualifying condition’’ means the condition of a dependent who is moderately or severely mentally retarded, has a serious physical disability, has extraordinary physical or psychological condition.

(c) Extended benefits for eligible dependents under subsection (a) may include comprehensive health care services with respect to the qualifying condition of such a dependent, and include, to the extent such benefits are not provided under provisions of this chapter other than this section, the following:

(1) Diagnostics.

(2) Inpatient, outpatient, and comprehensive home health care supplies and services.

(3) Training, rehabilitation, and special education.

(d) Institutional care in private nonprofit, public, and State institutions and facilities, and, if appropriate, transportation to and from such institutions and facilities.

(e) Custodial care, notwithstanding the prohibition in section 1077(b)(1) of this title.

(f) Members shall be required to share in the cost of any benefits provided to their dependents under subsection (a) as follows:

(1) Members in the lowest enlisted pay grade shall be required to pay the first $25 incurred each month, and members in the highest commissioned pay grade shall be required to pay the first $250 incurred each month. The amounts to be paid by members in all other pay grades shall be determined under regulations to be prescribed by the Secretary of Defense in consultation with the Congress.

(2) A member who has more than one dependent incurring expenses in a given month under a plan covered by subsection (a) shall not be required to pay an amount greater than would be required if the member had only one such dependent.

(g) Definitions of Custodial Care and Domiciliary Care—Section 1072 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraphs:

(1) The term ‘‘custodial care’’ means treatment or services, regardless of who recommends such treatment or services where such treatment or services are provided, that—

(A) can be rendered safely and reasonably by a person who is not medically skilled; or

(B) is or are designed mainly to help the patient with the activities of daily living.

(2) The term ‘‘domiciliary care’’ means care provided to a patient in an institution or home-like environment because—

(A) providing support for the activities of daily living in the home is not available or is unavailable; or

(B) members of the patient’s family are unwilling to provide the care.

(3) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 1079 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by inserting in subsection (a) by striking paragraph (17).

(4) Continuation of Individual Case Management Service for Certain Eligible Beneficiaries.—Section 1072(a), United States Code, is amended by adding to the definition of the Individual Case Management Program by subsection (d), the Secretary of Defense shall, in any case in which the Secretary makes the determination described in paragraph (2), continue to provide payment as if such program were in effect for home health care or custodial care services provided to an eligible beneficiary that would otherwise be excluded from coverage under regulations implementing chapter 55 of title 10, United States Code.

(2) The determination referred to in paragraph (1) is a determination that discontinuation of payment for services not otherwise provided under such chapter would result in the provision of services inadequate to meet the needs of the eligible beneficiary and would be unjust to such beneficiary.

(3) For purposes of this subsection, ‘eligible beneficiary’ means a covered beneficiary (as defined in section 1072 of title 10, United States Code) who, before the effective date of this section, was provided custodial care services under the Individual Case Management Program for which the Secretary provided payment.

(f) Report on Initiatives Regarding Long-Term Care.—The Secretary of Defense shall, not later than April 1, 2002, submit to Congress a report on the feasibility and desirability of establishing new initiatives, taking into account chapter 90 of title 5, United States Code, to improve the availability of long-term care for members and retired members of the uniformed services and their families.

(p) Reference to Title 10—Long-Term Care Programs.—(1) Chapter 55 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by inserting after section 1074 (as added by subsection (a)) the following new section:

§1074k. Long-term care insurance

‘‘Long-term care insurance’ means a provision regarding long-term care insurance for members and certain former members of the uniformed services and their families that are set forth in chapter 90 of title 5.’’.

(2) The first subsection of the section beginning at the heading of this section is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 1074 (as added by subsection (a)) the following new item:

‘‘1074k. Long-term care insurance.’’.

(h) EFFECTIVE DATE.—This section, and the amendment made by this section, shall take effect on October 1, 2001.

SEC. 705. REIMBURSEMENT OF TRAVEL EXPENSES OF A PARENT, GUARDIAN OR RESPONSIBLE FAMILY MEMBER OF A MINOR COVERED BENEFICIARY.

Section 1074 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new text: ‘‘In any case in which reimbursement of travel expenses of a covered beneficiary who is a minor and dependent is required under this section, the Secretary also shall provide reimbursement for reasonable travel expenses of the parent or guardian of, or the family member responsible for, such covered beneficiary.’’.

Subtitle B—Other Matters

SEC. 711. PROHIBITION AGAINST REQUIRING MILITARY RETIREES TO RECEIVE HEALTH CARE SOLELY THROUGH THE DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE.

No provision of law (whether enacted before or after this Act) may be construed as authorizing the Secretary of Defense to take any action that would require, or have the effect of requiring, a member or former member of the Armed Forces who is entitled to retired or retiree pay to enroll to receive health care from the Federal Government only through the Department of Defense. This section may not be superseded by a subsequent Act unless that Act:

(1) specifically refers to this section; and

(2) specifically states that such provision of law supersedes the provisions of this section.

SEC. 712. TRAUMA AND MEDICAL CARE PILOT PROGRAM.

(a) REQUIREMENT TO CONDUCT PILOT PROGRAM.—The Secretary of Defense shall conduct a pilot program under which the Brooke Army Medical Center and the Wilford Hall Air Force Medical Center may use the amounts collected under the pilot program for—

(A) trauma consortium activities;

(B) administrative, operating, and equipment costs;

(C) readiness training.

(2) The operating budgets of those medical centers shall not be reduced as a result of fees collected under the pilot program.

(c) EFFICIENT PRACTICES.—Under the pilot program, the commander of the Brooke Army Medical Center or the Wilford Hall Air Force Medical Center may authorize the use of funds appropriated to the Department of Defense for medical care for trauma and other medical care provided at such center to civilians described in this subsection for—

(d) LENGTH OF PILOT PROGRAM.—The pilot program under this section shall commence on October 1, 2001, and be conducted for a period of three years.

(e) REPORTS.—The Secretary of Defense shall submit to Congress not later than October 1st of each year from 2002 through 2004 a report describing the progress and effectiveness of the pilot program carried out under this section.

SEC. 713. ENHANCEMENT OF MEDICAL PRODUCT DEVELOPMENT.

Section 908 of title 10, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by inserting ‘‘(a)’’ before ‘‘Funds’’; and

(2) by adding at the end the following new subsection:

‘‘(b) The Secretary of Defense may waive the prohibition in this section with respect to a specific research project to advance the development and conduct necessary to the armed forces if the research project is carried out in accordance with all other applicable laws.’’.

SEC. 714. REPEAL OF ORSOBLITE REPORT REQUIREMENT.

SEC. 715. CLARIFICATIONS AND IMPROVEMENTS REGARDING THE DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE MEDICAL-ELIGIBLE RETIREE HEALTH CARE FUND.

(a) CLARIFICATION REGARDING COVERAGE.—Subsection (b) of section 1111 of title 10, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

‘‘(1) The term ‘Department of Defense retiree health care programs’ means the provisions of this title concerning any program the Department of Defense enter into or created, certain medical care programs, or a continuing medical care program the Department of Defense or any member of a participating uniformed service who is entitled to and retainer pay, and an eligible dependent under such program.

‘‘(3) The term ‘designated Department of Defense health care program’ means a program described in paragraph (1) of this subsection that is designated under section 1113(c).

‘‘(d) The term ‘medical-eligible’ means a dependent under the jurisdiction of that Secretary comparable to the contributions to the Fund made by the Secretary of Defense under section 1116.’’.

(2) Section 1112 of such title is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

‘‘(4) Amounts paid into the Fund pursuant to subsection (1111(c)).’’

(3) Section 1115 of such title is amended—

(A) in subsection (a), by inserting ‘‘participating’’ before ‘‘uniformed services’’; and

(B) in subparagraph (B) of subsection (b), by inserting ‘‘under the jurisdiction of the Secretary of Defense’’ after ‘‘uniformed services’’.

(4) Section 1116(a) of such title is amended in paragraphs (1) and (2) by inserting ‘‘under the jurisdiction of the Secretary of Defense’’ after ‘‘uniformed services’’.

(c) CLARIFICATION OF PAYMENTS FROM THE FUND.—(1) The second sentence of subsection (a) of section 1111 of such title is amended by inserting ‘‘designated’’ before ‘‘Department of Defense retirement health care programs for medicare-eligible beneficiaries’’.

(2) Subsection (a) of section 1113 of such title is amended to read as follows:

‘‘(a) There shall be paid from the Fund amounts payable for the costs of designated Department of Defense retirement health care programs for the benefit of members or former members of a participating uniformed service who are entitled to and retiree pay and are medicare-eligible, and eligible dependents described in section 1111(b)(3) who are medicare-eligible.’’

(3) Such section is further amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

‘‘(c) For purposes of the Fund under subsection (a), the Secretary of Defense shall designate the program authorized by section 1086 of this title.’’.

(d) TECHNICAL AMENDMENTS.—(1) The heading for section 1111 of such title is amended to read as follows:

‘‘$1111. Establishment and purpose of Fund; definitions; authority to enter into agreements’’.

(2) The item relating to section 1111 in the table of sections at the beginning of chapter 56 of title 10, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

‘‘1111. Establishment and purpose of Fund; definitions; authority to enter into agreements.’’

(f) EFFECTIVE DATE.—The amendments made by this section shall take effect on October 1, 2001.

(B) by striking “Milestone II” and inserting “Milestone C”;

(C) by striking “Milestone III” and inserting “full rate production”.

SEC. 802. ACQUISITION WORKFORCE QUALIFICATIONS.

(a) QUALIFICATIONS.—Section 1724 of title 10, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subsection (a)—

(A) by striking the matter preceding paragraph (3) and inserting the following:

“(a) CONTRACTING OFFICERS.—The Secretary of Defense shall require that, in order to qualify to serve in an acquisition position as a contracting officer with authority to award or administer contracts for amounts above the simplified acquisition threshold referred to in section 2304(g) of this title, an employee of the Department of Defense or member of the armed forces (other than the Coast Guard) must, except as provided in subsections (c) and (d)—

(i) by striking “mandatory”; and

(ii) by striking “at the grade level” and all that follows and inserting “(A) in the case of an employee, serving in the position within the grade of GS–1102 in the General Schedule in which the employee is serving, and (B) in the case of a member of the armed forces, in the member’s grade”;

and

(C) in paragraph (3)(A), by inserting a comma after “business”;

(2) by striking subsection (b) and inserting the following subsection:

“(b) GS–1102 SERIES POSITIONS AND SIMILAR MILITARY POSITIONS.—(1) The Secretary of Defense shall require that in order to qualify to serve in a position in the Department of Defense that is in the GS–1102 occupational series an employee or potential employee of the Department of Defense meet the requirements set forth in paragraph (3) of subsection (a). The Secretary may require that in order to serve in such a position an employee or potential employee meet any of the requirements of paragraphs (1) and (2) of that subsection.

(2) The Secretary of Defense shall require that in order for a member of the armed forces to be selected for an occupational specialty within the armed forces that (as determined by the Secretary) is similar to the GS–1102 occupational series a member of the armed forces meet the requirements set forth in paragraph (3) of subsection (a). The Secretary may not require that in order to be selected for such an occupational specialty a member meet any of the requirements of paragraphs (1) and (2) of that subsection.”; and

(3) by striking subsections (c) and (d) and inserting the following new subsections:

“(c) EXCEPTIONS.—The qualification requirements imposed by the Secretary of Defense pursuant to subsections (a) and (b) shall not apply to an employee of the Department of Defense or member of the armed forces who—

(1) served as a contracting officer with authority to award or administer contracts in excess of the simplified acquisition threshold on or before September 30, 2000;

(2) served, on or before September 30, 2000, in a position as a contracting officer in the GS–1102 series or as a member of the armed forces in similar occupational specialty;

(3) is in the contingency contracting force; or

(4) is described in subsection (e)(1)(B).

(d) WAIVER.—The acquisition career program board concerned may waive any or all of the requirements of subsections (a) and (b) with respect to an employee of the Department of Defense or member of the armed forces if the board determines that in order to meet the requirements of such program for the purpose of recruiting, selecting, appointing, educating, qualifying, and developing the careers of individuals to meet the requirements in subparagraphs (A) and (B) of subsection (a).

(1) The Secretary may not require that in order to serve in such a position an employee of the Department of Defense meet the requirements set forth in paragraph (3) of subsection (a). The Secretary may not require that in order to serve in such a position an employee of the Department of Defense meet the requirements set forth in subparagraph (A) or (B) of subsection (a). The Secretary may not require that an individual who has completed at least 24 semester credit hours or the equivalent of study in any of the disciplines defor cartridge cloth, synthetic fabric or coated synthetic fabric (including all textile fibers and yarns or contained in fabrics, materials, or manufactured articles); or

(ii) Geographical Coverage.—In this section, the term ‘United States’ includes the commonwealths, territories, and possessions of the United States.

(iii) Exception for Commissaries, Exchanges, and Other Nonappropriated Fund Instrumentalities.—Subsection (a) does not apply to items purchased for resale purposes in commissaries, military exchanges, or nonappropriated fund instrumentalities operated by the military departments or the Department of Defense.

(b) Repeal of Source Provisions.—The following provisions of law are repealed:

Subtitle B—Erroneous Payments Recovery

SEC. 811. SHORT TITLE.

This subtitle may be cited as the “Erroneous Payments Recovery Act of 2001”.

SEC. 812. IDENTIFICATION OF ERRORS MADE BY EXECUTIVE AGENCIES IN PAYMENTS TO CONTRACTORS AND RECOVERY OF AMOUNTS ERRONEOUSLY PAID.

(a) Programs Established.—The head of each executive agency that enters into contracts with a total value in excess of $500,000,000 in a fiscal year shall carry out a cost-effective program for identifying any errors made in paying the contractors and for recovering any amounts erroneously paid to the contractors.

(b) Recovery Audits and Activities.—A program of an executive agency under subsection (a) shall include recovery audits and recovery activities. The head of the executive agency shall, in accordance with guidance provided under subsection (c), the classes of contracts to which recovery audits and recovery activities are appropriately applied.

(c) OMB Guidance.—The Director of the Office of Management and Budget shall issue guidance for the conduct of programs under subsection (a). The guidance shall include the following:

(1) Definitions of the terms “recovery audit” and “recovery activity” for the purposes of the programs.

(2) The classes of contracts to which recovery audits and recovery activities are appropriately applied under the programs.

(3) Protections for the confidentiality of—

(A) Sensitive financial information that has not been released for use by the general public; and

(B) Information that could be used to identify a person,

(4) Policies and procedures for ensuring that the implementation of the programs does not result in duplicative audits of contractor records.

(5) The procedures if any that executive agencies may use for the procurement of recovery services, including guidance for use, in appropriate circumstances, of a contingency contract pursuant to which the head of an executive agency may pay a contractor an amount equal to a percentage of the total amount collected for the United States pursuant to which the head of an executive agency may pay a contractor an amount equal to a percentage of the total amount collected for the United States pursuant to that contract.

(6) Protections for a contractor’s records and facilities through restrictions on the authority of a contractor under a contract for the procurement of recovery services for an executive agency—

(A) To require the production of any record or information by any person other than an officer, employee, or agent of the executive agency;

(B) To establish, or otherwise have, a physical presence on the property or premises of any person; or

(C) To act as agents for the Government in the recovery of funds erroneously paid to contractors.

(d) Funds Not Used for Program.—Any amounts erroneously paid by an executive agency that are recovered under such a program of an executive agency and are not used to reimburse expenses or pay contractors under subsection (a)—

(1) shall be credited to the appropriations from which the erroneous payments were made that are determined to be recoverable; and

(2) if no such appropriation remains available for obligation at that time, shall be deposited in the Treasury for use in support of combat operations.

Subsection (a) does not apply to the following:

(1) Procurements outside the United States in support of combat operations.

(2) Procurements by vessels in foreign waters.

(3) Emergency procurements or procurements of perishable foods by an establishment located outside the United States for the personnel attached to such establishment.

for cartridge cloth, synthetic fabric or coated synthetic fabric (including all textile fibers and yarns or contained in fabrics, materials, or manufactured articles); or

(2) Specialty metals, including stainless steel flatware.

(3) Hand or measuring tools.

(4) Specialty metals, including stainless steel flatware.

(5) Hand or measuring tools.

(6) Specialty metals, including stainless steel flatware.

(7) Policies for the appropriate types of management improvement programs authorized by section 815 that executive agencies may carry out to address overpayment problems and the recovery of overpayments.

SEC. 813. DISPOSITION OF RECOVERED FUNDS.

(a) Availability of Funds for Recovery Audits and Activities Program.—Funds collected under a program carried out by an executive agency under section 812 shall be available to the executive agency, in such amounts as are provided in advance in appropriations Acts, for the following purposes:

(1) To reimburse the actual expenses incurred by the executive agency in the administration of the program.

(2) To pay contractors for services under the program in accordance with the guidance issued under section 812(c)(5).

(b) Funds Not Used for Program.—Any amounts erroneously paid by an executive agency that are recovered under such a program of an executive agency and are not used to reimburse expenses or pay contractors under subsection (a)—

(1) shall be credited to the appropriations from which the erroneous payments were made that are determined to be recoverable; and

(2) if no such appropriation remains available for obligation at that time, shall be deposited in the Treasury for use in support of combat operations.

(2) The remainder of that total amount, inclusive of amounts not expended under paragraph (1), shall be deposited in the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts.

(d) Priority of Other Authorized Dispositions.—Notwithstanding subsections (b) and (c), the authority under such subsections may not be exercised to use, credit, or deposit funds collected under such a program as provided in those subsections to the extent that any other provision of law requires or authorizes the crediting of such funds to a nonappropriated fund instrumentality, revolving fund, working-capital trust fund, or other fund or account.

SEC. 814. SOURCES OF RECOVERY SERVICES.

(a) Consideration of Available Recovery Resources.—(1) In carrying out a program under section 812, the head of an executive agency shall consider all resources available to that official to carry out the program.

(2) The resources considered include the resources available to an executive agency for such purpose from the following sources:

(A) The executive agency.

(B) Other departments and agencies of the United States.
TITLE IX—DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE ORGANIZATION AND MANAGEMENT

SEC. 901. FURTHER REDUCTIONS IN DEFENSE ACQUISITION AND SUPPORT WORKFORCE

(a) REDUCTION OF DEFENSE ACQUISITION AND SUPPORT WORKFORCE.—The Secretary of Defense shall accomplish reductions in defense acquisition and support personnel during fiscal year 2002 so that the total number of such personnel as of October 1, 2002, is less than the total number of such personnel as of October 1, 2001, by at least 13,000.

(b) DEFENSE ACQUISITION WORKFORCE DEFINED.—For purposes of this section, the term “defense acquisition and support personnel” means the personnel specified in section 931 of the Strom Thurmond National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1999 (Public Law 105–261; 112 Stat. 2106).

SEC. 902. SENSE OF CONGRESS ON ESTABLISHMENT OF OFFICE OF TRANSFORMATION IN THE DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE.

(a) FINDINGS.—It finds the following:—

(1) The Armed Forces should give careful consideration to implementing transformation to meet operational challenges and exploit opportunities resulting from the current environment and the emergence of new technologies.

(2) A 1999 Defense Science Board report on transformation concluded that there was no overall Department of Defense vision for transformation, no road map, no metrics to measure progress, and little sense of urgency.

(3) Historic case studies have shown that within the military, as well as commercial enterprises, successful transformation must be directed from the highest levels of an organization.

(b) SENSE OF CONGRESS ON ESTABLISHMENT OF OFFICE OF TRANSFORMATION.—It is the sense of Congress that the Secretary of Defense should consider the establishment of an Office of Transformation within the Office of the Secretary of Defense to advise the Secretary on—

(1) development of force transformation strategies to ensure that the military of the future is prepared to dissuade potential military competitors, and, if that fails, to fight and win decisively across the spectrum of future conflict;

(2) ensuring a continuous and broadly focused transformation process;

(3) service and joint acquisition and experimentation efforts, funding for experimentation efforts, promising operational concepts and technologies, and other transformation activities, as appropriate; and

(4) development of service and joint operational concepts, transformation implementation strategies, and risk management strategies.

(c) SENSE OF CONGRESS ON FUNDING.—It is the sense of Congress that the Secretary of Defense should consider providing funding adequate for sponsoring selective, prototyping efforts, wargames, and studies and analyses and for appropriate staffing, as recommended by the director of an Office of Transformation as described in subsection (b).

SEC. 903. REVISED JOINT REPORT ON ESTABLISHMENT OF NATIONAL COLLABORATIVE INTELLIGENCE INFORMATION ANALYSIS CAPABILITY.

(a) REVISED REPORT.—At the same time as the submission of the budget for fiscal year 2003 pursuant to section 302(a) of the United States Code, the Secretary of Defense and the Director of Central Intelligence shall submit to the congressional defense committees and the congressional intelligence committees a revised report assessing alternatives for the establishment of a national collaborative information analysis capability.

(b) MATTERS INCLUDED.—The revised report shall cover the same matters required to be included in the DOD/CIA report, except that the alternative architectures assessed in the revised report shall be limited to architectures that include the participation of all Federal agencies involved in the collection of intelligence. The revised report shall also include a draft of legislation sufficient to establish the preferred architecture identified in the revised report.

(c) OFFICIALS TO BE CONSULTED.—The revised report shall be prepared after consultation with all appropriate Federal officials, including the following:

(1) The Secretary of the Treasury.

(2) The Secretary of Commerce.

(3) The Attorney General.

(4) The Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

(5) The Director of the Drug Enforcement Administration.

(6) The Director of the Defense Threat Reduction Agency.

(7) The Director of the Defense Information Systems Agency.

(d) DOD/CIA REPORT DEFINED.—In this section, the term “DOD/CIA report” means the joint report required by section 923 of the Floyd D. Spence National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2001 (as enacted into law by Public Law 106–398; 114 Stat. 1654A–237).

SEC. 904. ELIMINATION OF TRIENNIAL REPORT BY CHAIRMAN OF THE JOINT CHIEFS OF STAFF ON ROLES AND MISSIONS OF THE ARMED FORCES.

(a) REPEAL OF REQUIREMENT FOR SEPARATE REPORT BY CHAIRMAN OF THE JOINT CHIEFS OF STAFF.—Section 153 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by striking subsection (b).

(b) ROLES AND MISSIONS CONSIDERED AS PART OF DEFENSE QUADRENNIAL REVIEW.—Subsection 118(e) of such title is amended—

(1) by inserting “(1)” before “Upon the completion”;

(2) by designating the second and third sentences as paragraphs (3); and

(3) by inserting after paragraph (1), as designated by paragraph (1) of this subsection, the following new paragraph:

“(2) As part of his assessment under paragraph (1), the Chairman shall provide his assessment of the assignment of functions (or roles and missions) to the armed forces and such recommendations for changes thereto as the Chairman considers necessary to achieve maximum efficiency of the armed forces. In preparing such assessment, the Chairman shall consider (among other matters) the following:

(A) Unnecessary duplication of effort among the armed forces.

(B) Changes in technology that can be applied effectively to warfare.”.

SEC. 905. REPEAL OF REQUIREMENT FOR SEMIANNUAL REPORTS THROUGH MARCH 2003 ON ACTIVITIES OF JOINT REQUIREMENTS OVERSIGHT COUNCIL.

SEC. 906. CORRECTION OF REFERENCES TO AIR MOBILITY COMMAND.

(a) REFERENCES IN TITLE 10, UNITED STATES CODE.—Sections 2554(d) and 2555(a) of title 10, United States Code, are each amended by striking “Air Mobility Command” and inserting “Air Mobility Command”.

(b) REPEAL OF OBSOLETE PROVISION.—Section 8074A of such title is amended by striking subsection (c).

(c) REFERENCES IN TITLE 37, UNITED STATES CODE.—Sections 430(c) and 432(b) of title 37, United States Code, are each amended by striking “Military Airlift Command” and inserting “Air Mobility Command”.

SEC. 907. PRIVATE SECTOR SOURCES.

(a) COMPLIANCE WITH APPLICABLE LAW AND REGULATIONS.—Before entering into a contract with a private sector source for the performance of services under a program of the executive agency carried out under section 812, the head of an executive agency shall comply with—

(1) applicable provisions of Office of Management and Budget Circular A–76; and

(2) any other applicable provision of law or regulation with respect to the selection between employees of the United States and private sector sources for the performance of services.

SEC. 915. OFFICE OF MANAGEMENT AND BUDGET CIRCULAR A–76.

In accordance with guidance provided by the Director of the Office of Management and Budget under section 812, the head of an executive agency required to carry out a program under section 812 may carry out a program for improving management processes within the executive agency—

(1) to address problems that contribute directly to the occurrence of errors in the paying of contractors of the executive agency; or

(2) to improve the recovery of overpayments due to the agency.

SEC. 816. REPORTS.

(a) REQUIREMENT FOR REPORTS.—Not later than 30 months after the date of the enactment of this Act and annually for each of the first two years following the year of the first report, the Director of the Office of Management and Budget shall submit to the Committee on Government Reform of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Governmental Affairs of the Senate, a report on the implementation of this subtitle.

(b) CONTENT.—Each report shall include—

(1) a general description and evaluation of the steps taken by the heads of executive agencies to carry out the programs under this subtitle, including any management improvement programs carried out under Office of Management and Budget Circular A–76;

(2) the costs incurred by executive agencies to carry out the programs under this subtitle; and

(3) the amounts recovered under the programs under this subtitle.

SEC. 817. RELATIONSHIP TO AUTHORITY OF INSPECTORS GENERAL.

Nothing in this subtitle shall be construed as impairing the authority of an Inspector General under the Inspector General Act of 1979 or any other provision of law.

SEC. 818. PRIVACY PROTECTIONS.

(a) PROHIBITION.—No nongovernmental entity that, in the course of recovery auditing or recovery activity under this subtitle, obtains information that identifies an individual or with respect to which there is a reasonable basis to believe that the information can be used to identify an individual, may not disclose the information for any purpose other than such recovery auditing or recovery activity and governmental oversight of such activity, unless disclosure for that other purpose is authorized by the individual to the executive agency that contracted for the performance of the recovery auditing or recovery activity.

(b) LIABILITY.—Any person that violates subsection (a) shall be liable for any damages (including nonpecuniary damages), costs, and attorneys fees incurred by the individual as a result of the violation.

SEC. 819. DEFINITION.

In this subtitle, the term “executive agency” has the meaning given that term in section 4(a) of the Office of Federal Procurement Policy Act (41 U.S.C. 403(a)).
Section 503(a) of title 10, United States Code, is amended by striking "Office of the Deputy Chief of Naval Operations for Resources, Warfare Requirements, and Assessments" and inserting "office of the Deputy Chief of Naval Operations with responsibility for warfare requirements and programs."

SEC. 1042. TERMINATION OF DEFENSE REQUIREMENT REGARDING CONTINUATION OF MILITARY TRAINING ON ISLAND OF VIQUEES, PUERTO RICO, AND IMPOSITION OF ADDITIONAL CONDITIONS ON CLOSURE OF LIVE-FIRE TRAINING AREA ON VIQUEES.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Title XV of the Floyd D. Spence National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2001 (as enacted by Public Law 106–298, 16 U.S.C. 1674 et seq.) is amended by striking sections 1503, 1504, and 1505 and inserting the following new sections:

SEC. 1503. CONDITIONS ON CLOSURE OF VIQUEES NAVAL TRAINING RANGE.

(1) The Chief of Naval Operations, and the Commandant of the Marine Corps jointly certify that there is an alternative training facility that provides an equivalent or superior level of training for units of the Navy and the Marine Corps stationed or deployed in the eastern United States; and

(2) the new facility is available and fully capable of supporting such training immediately upon cessation of live-fire training on Vieques.

(b) EQUIVALENT OR SUPERIOR LEVEL OF TRAINING DEFINED.—In this section, the term 'equal or superior level of training' refers to an ability by the Armed Forces to conduct at a single location coordinated live-fire training, including simultaneous large-scale tactical air strikes, naval surface fire support and artillery, and amphibious landing operations, as was conducted at Vieques Naval Training Range before April 19, 1999.

SEC. 1504. NAVY RETENTION OF CLOSED VIQUEES NAVAL TRAINING RANGE.

(a) RETENTION.—If the conditions specified in section 1503(a) are satisfied and the Secretary of the Navy terminates all Navy and Marine Corps training operations on the island of Vieques, the Secretary of the Navy shall retain administrative jurisdiction over the Live Impact Area and all other Department of Defense real properties on the eastern side of the island for possible reactivation for training use, including live-fire training, in the event a national emergency.

(b) ADMINISTRATION.—The Secretary of the Navy may enter into a cooperative agreement with the Secretary of the Interior to provide for management of the property described in subsection (a), pending reactivation for training use, by appropriate agencies of the Department of the Interior as follows:

(1) Management of the Live Impact Area as a wilderness area under the Wilderness Act (16 U.S.C. 1131 et seq.), including a prohibition on public access to the Area.

(2) Management of the remaining property as wildlife refuges under the National Wildlife Refuge System Administration Act of 1966 (16 U.S.C. 666dd et seq.).

(c) LIVE IMPACT AREA DEFINED.—In this section, the term 'Live Impact Area' means the parcel of real property, consisting of approximately 900 acres (more or less), of real property in Vieques that is designated by the Secretary of the Navy for targeting by live ordnance in the training of naval and Marine Corps personnel.

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 1507(c) of such Act is amended by striking "the issuance of a proclamation described in section 1504(a) or (b)

(b) PLANNING AND DESIGN.—Using amounts appropriated pursuant to the authorization of appropriations in section 2204(a)(5)(A), the Secretary of the Navy may construct or acquire family housing units in an amount not to exceed $4,699,000.

SEC. 2203. IMPROVEMENTS TO MILITARY FAMILY HOUSING UNITS.

Subject to section 2825 of title 10, United States Code, and using amounts appropriated pursuant to the authorization of appropriations in section 2204(a)(5)(A), the Secretary of the Navy may improve existing military family housing units in an amount not to exceed $201,834,000.

SEC. 2204. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS: NAVY.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Funds are hereby authorized to be appropriated for fiscal years beginning after September 30, 2001, for military construction, land acquisition, and military family housing functions of the Department of the Navy in the total amount of $2,389,605,000, as follows:

(1) For military construction projects inside the United States authorized by section 2201(a), $989,019,000.

(2) For military construction projects outside the United States authorized by section 2201(b), $47,570,000.

(3) For unspecified minor construction projects authorized by section 2805 of title 10, United States Code, $10,546,000.

(4) For architectural and engineering services and construction design under section 2807 of title 10, United States Code, $35,392,000.

(5) For military family housing functions:

(A) For construction and acquisition, planning and design, and improvement of military family housing and facilities, $332,352,000.

(B) For support of military housing (including functions described in section 2833 of title 10, United States Code), $913,823,000.

(6) For construction of phase 6 of a large anechoic chamber facility at the Patuxent River Naval Air Warfare Center, Maryland, authorized by section 2201(a) of the Military Construction Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2001 (division B of Public Law 106–440; 106 Stat. 2590), $10,770,000.

(8) For repair of a pier at Naval Station, San Diego, California, authorized by section 2201(a) of the Military Construction Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2001 (division B of the Spence Act; 114 Stat. 1654–396), $17,500,000.

(b) LIMITATION ON TOTAL COST OF CONSTRUCTION PROJECTS.—Notwithstanding the cost variations authorized by section 2825 of title 10, United States Code, and any other cost variation authorized by law, the total cost of all projects carried out under section 2201 of this Act may not exceed:

(1) the total amount authorized to be appropriated under paragraphs (1) and (2) of subsection (a);

(2) $33,392,000 (the balance of the amount authorized under section 2201(a) for replacement of a pier, increment I, at Naval Station, Norfolk, Virginia; and $32,600,000 (the balance of the amount authorized under section 2201(a) for a combined propulsion and explosives lab at Naval Air Warfare Center, China Lake, California).

(c) ADJUSTMENT.—The total amount authorized to be appropriated pursuant to paragraphs (1) through (9) of subsection (a) is the sum of the amounts authorized to be appropriated in such paragraphs, reduced by—

(1) $6,854,000, which represents the combination of savings resulting from adjustments to foreign currency exchange rates for military construction outside the United States; and

(2) $13,652,000, which represents the combination of savings resulting from adjustments to foreign currency exchange rates for military family housing construction and military family housing support outside the United States.

SEC. 2205. MODIFICATION OF AUTHORITY TO CARRY OUT CERTAIN FISCAL YEAR 2000 PROJECT.

(a) MODIFICATION.—The table in section 2201(a) of the Military Construction Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2000 (division B of Public Law 106–65; 113 Stat. 828) is amended—

SEC. 2704. EFFECTIVE DATE.
Titles XXI, XXII, XXIII, XXIV, XXV, and XXVI shall take effect on the later of—
(1) October 1, 2001; or
(2) the date of the enactment of this Act.

TITLE XXVIII—GENERAL PROVISIONS

Subtitle A—Military Construction Program and Military Family Housing Changes

SEC. 2801. INCREASE IN CERTAIN UNSPECIFIED MINOR MILITARY CONSTRUCTION PROJECT THRESHOLDS.

Section 2803 of title 10, United States Code, is amended—
(1) in subsection (b)(1), by striking "$500,000" and inserting "$750,000";
(2) in subsection (c)(1)(A), by striking "$1,000,000" and inserting "$1,500,000"; and
(3) in subsection (c)(1)(B), by striking "$500,000" and inserting "$750,000".

SEC. 2802. EXCLUSION OF UNFORESEEN ENVIRONMENTAL HAZARD REMEDIATION FROM LIMITATION ON AUTHORIZED COST VARIATIONS.

Subsection (d) of section 2853 of title 10, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

“(1) to the settlement of a contractor claim under a contract; or
“(2) to the costs associated with the required remediation of an environmental hazard in connection with a military construction project or military family housing project, such as asbestos removal, radon abatement, lead-based paint removal or abatement, or any other legally required environmental hazard remediation, if the required remediation could not have reasonably been anticipated at the time the project was approved originally by Congress.”

SEC. 2803. REPEAL OF ANNUAL REPORTING REQUIREMENT ON MILITARY CONSTRUCTION AND MILITARY FAMILY HOUSING ACTIVITIES.

(a) REPEAL.—Section 2861 of title 10, United States Code, is repealed.

(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of sections at the beginning of subchapter III of chapter 169 of such title is amended by striking the item relating to section 2861.

SEC. 2804. PERMANENT AUTHORIZATION FOR ALTERNATIVE AUTHORITY FOR ACQUISITION AND IMPROVEMENT OF MILITARY HOUSING.

(a) REPEAL OF TERMINATION PROVISION.—Section 2885 of title 10, United States Code, is repealed.

(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of sections at the beginning of subchapter IV of chapter 169 of such title is amended by striking the item relating to section 2885.

Subtitle B—Real Property and Facilities Administration

SEC. 2811. USE OF MILITARY INSTALLATIONS FOR CERTAIN RECREATIONAL ACTIVITIES.

(b) Subsection (a) shall not apply with respect to all or certain specified hunting, fishing, or trapping at a military installation or facility if the Secretary of Defense determines that the application of the State or Territory fish and game laws to such hunting, fishing, or trapping without modification could result in undesirable consequences for public safety or adverse effects on morale, welfare, or recreation activities at the installation or facility. The Secretary may waive or modify the requirements under subsection (a)(2) regarding a license for such hunting, fishing, or trapping or any fee imposed by a State or Territory to obtain such a license.”

SEC. 2812. BASE EFFICIENCY PROJECT AT BROOKS AIR FORCE BASE, TEXAS.

(a) INDEMNIFICATION OF TRANSFEREES.—Section 136 of the Military Construction Appropriations Act, 2001 (division A of Public Law 106–246; 114 Stat. 520), is amended—
(1) by striking subsection (n); and
(2) by redesignating subsection (m) as subsection (n); and
(3) by inserting after subsection (l) the following new subsection:

“(m) INDEMNIFICATION OF TRANSFEREES.—(1) With respect to the disposal of real property under subsection (e) at the Base as part of the Project, the Secretary shall hold harmless, defend, and indemnify in full the Community and other persons and entities described in paragraph (2) from and against any suit, claim, demand or action, liability, judgment, cost or other fee arising out of any claim for personal injury or property damage (including death, ill- ness, or loss of or damage to property or economic loss) that results from, or is in any manner predicated upon, the release or threatened release of any hazardous substance, pollutant or contaminant, or petroleum or petroleum derivative as a result of Department of Defense activities at the Base.

“(2) The persons and entities referred to in paragraph (1) are the following:

“(A) The Community (including any officer, agent, or employee of the Community) that acquires ownership or control of any real property at the Base as described in paragraph (1).
“(B) The State of Texas or any political subdivision of the State (including any officer, agent, or employee of the State or political subdivision) that acquires such ownership or control.
“(C) Any other person or entity that acquires such ownership or control.
“(D) Any successor, assignee, transferee, lender, or lessee of a person or entity described in subparagraphs (A) through (C).

“(3) To the extent the persons and entities described in paragraph (2) contributed to any such release or threatened release, paragraph (1) shall not apply.
“(4) No indemnification may be afforded under this subsection unless the person or entity making a claim for indemnification—
“(A) notifies the Department of Defense in writing within two years after such claim accrues or begins action within six months after the date of mailing, by certified or registered mail, of notice of final denial of the claim by the Department of Defense;
“(B) furnishes to the Department of Defense copies of pertinent papers the entity receives;
“(C) furnishes evidence or proof of any claim, loss, or damage covered by this subsection; and “(D) provides, upon request by the Department of Defense, access to the records and personnel of the entity for purposes of defending or settling the claim or action.
“(5) In any case in which the Secretary determines that the Department of Defense may be required to make indemnification payments to a person under this subsection for any suit, claim, demand or action, liability, judgment, cost or other fee arising out of any claim for personal injury or property damage referred to in paragraph (1), the Secretary may settle or defend, on behalf of any party for whose claim the Secretary is liable, any claim for injury or property damage. If the person to whom the Department of Defense may be required to make indemnification payments does not allow the Secretary to settle or defend the claim, the person may not be afforded indemnification with respect to that claim under this subsection.

(6) For purposes of paragraph (4)(A), the date on which a claim accrues is the date on which the plaintiff knew (or reasonably should have known) that the personal injury or property damage referred to in paragraph (1) was caused or contributed to by the release or threatened release of a hazardous substance, pollutant or contaminant, or petroleum or petroleum derivative as a result of Department of Defense activities at the Base.

(7) Nothing in this subsection shall be construed as affecting or modifying in any way section 120(h) of the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act of 1980 (42 U.S.C. 9620(h)).

(a) 1988 LAW.—Section 204(b)(4) of the Defense Authorization Amendments and Base Closure and Realignment Act (Public Law 100–526; 10 U.S.C. 2687 note) is amended—

(1) by redesigning subparagraphs (E), (F), (G), (H), and (I) as subparagraphs (F), (G), (H), (I), and (J), respectively; and

(2) by striking subparagraph (D) the following new subparagraph (E):

"(E)(i) The Secretary may transfer real property at an installation approved for closure or realignment under this title (including property at an installation approved for realignment which will be retained by the Department of Defense or an agency after realignment) to the redevelopment authority for the installation if the redevelopment authority agrees to lease, directly upon transfer, one or more portions of the property transferred under this subparagraph to the Secretary or to the head of any other department or agency of the Federal Government. Subparagraph (B) shall apply to a transfer under this subparagraph.

(ii) A lease under clause (i) shall be for a term of not to exceed 50 years, but may provide for options for renewal or extension of the term by the department or agency concerned.

(iii) A lease under clause (i) may not require rental payments by the United States.

(iv) A lease under clause (i) shall include a provision specifying that if the department or agency concerned ceases requiring the use of the leased property before the expiration of the term of the lease, the remainder of the lease term may be satisfied by the payment for the use of another department or agency of the Federal Government using the property for a use similar to the use under the lease. Exercise of the authority provided by this clause shall be in consultation with the redevelopment authority concerned."

(1) by inserting "(1)" before "The Secretary may transfer.

(2) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(2) The Secretary may convey to the City all right, title, and interest of the United States in and to an additional parcel of real property, including improvements thereon, at the Rock Island Arsenal consisting of approximately .153 acres."

(b) Consideration.—Subsection (b) of such section is amended—

(1) by inserting "(1)" before "As consideration:

(2) by striking "subsection (a)" both places it appears and inserting "subsection (a)(1)"; and

(3) by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(2) As consideration for the conveyance, the City shall convey to the Secretary all right, title, and interest of the United States in and to a parcel of real property consisting of approximately .063 acres and construct on the parcel, at the City's expense, a new access road to tribe facilities.

(c) Additional Terms and Conditions.—The Secretary may require such additional terms and conditions in connection with the conveyance under this subsection (c) as the Secretary considers appropriate to protect the interests of the United States.

4. Land Conveyance, Whittier-Anchorage Pipeline Tank Farm, Anchorage, Alaska.

(a) Conveyance Authorized.—The Secretary of the Army may convey, without consideration, to the Port of Anchorage, an entity of the Municipality of Anchorage, Alaska, all right, title, and interest of the United States in and to two adjoining parcels of real property, consisting of approximately 48 acres in Anchorage, Alaska, which are known as the Whittier-Anchorage Pipeline Tank Farm, for the purpose of permitting the Port of Anchorage to use the parcels for economic development.
PART II—NAVY CONVEYANCES

SEC. 2841. TRANSFER OF JURISDICTION, CENTERVILLE BEACH NAVAL STATION, HUMBOLDT COUNTY, CALIFORNIA.

(a) TRANSFER AUTHORIZED.—The Secretary of the Navy may transfer, without reimbursement, to the administrative jurisdiction of the Secretary of the Interior the real property, including any improvements thereon, of the closed Centerville Beach Naval Station in Humboldt County, California, for purposes, including the creation or preservation of jobs and employment opportunities, or such other public purposes as the Port Authority determines appropriate.

(2) The Port Authority may at any time convey, lease, or sublease, as the case may be, the parcel, and any improvements, facilities, equipment, fixtures, and other personal property located thereon, to a public or private entity for purposes described in paragraph (1)(B).

(d) INSPECTION.—The Secretary may permit the Port Authority to inspect, at any time after subsection (a) is executed, the improvements, facilities, equipment, fixtures, and other personal property located on the parcel described in subsection (a)(1) for purposes of the conveyance authorized by that subsection and the lease authorized by subsection (b).

(e) DESCRIPTION OF PROPERTY.—The exact acreage and legal description of the real property to be conveyed under subsection (a)(1), and of any facilities, equipment fixtures, or other personal property to be conveyed under subsection (a)(2), shall be determined by a survey and other means satisfactory to the Secretary. The cost of any activities under the preceding sentence shall be borne by the Port Authority.

(f) ADDITIONAL TERMS AND CONDITIONS.—The Secretary may require such additional terms and conditions in connection with the conveyance under subsection (a)(1) and any lease authorized by subsection (b) as the Secretary considers appropriate to protect the interests of the United States.

SEC. 2842. LAND CONVEYANCE, NAVAL WEAPONS INDUSTRIAL RESERVE PLANT, TOLEDO, OHIO.

(a) CONVEYANCE AUTHORIZED.—(1) The Secretary of the Navy may convey, without reimbursement, to the Toledo-Lucas County Port Authority, Ohio (in this section referred to as the “Port Authority’), all right, title, and interest of the United States in and to a parcel of real property consisting of approximately 26 acres, including any improvements thereon, and comprising Naval Weapons Industrial Reserve Plant, Toledo, Ohio.

(2) The Secretary may include in the conveyance under paragraph (1) such facilities, equipment, personal property, and any parcel of real property located or based on the parcel conveyed under that paragraph, or used in connection with the parcel, as the Secretary determines to be required by the Navy for other purposes.

(b) LEASE AUTHORITY.—Until such time as the real property described in subsection (a)(1) is conveyed by deed, the Secretary may lease the real property, together with any improvements, facilities, equipment, fixtures, and other personal property thereon, to the Port Authority in exchange for security services, fire protection services, and other services provided by the Port Authority for the real property.

(c) CONDITIONS OF CONVEYANCE.—(1) The conveyance under subsection (a), and any lease under subsection (b), shall be subject to the conditions that the Port Authority—

(A) accept the parcel, and any improvements, facilities, equipment, fixtures, and other personal property thereon, whether directly or through an agreement with a public or private entity, for economic development, redevelopment, or retention purposes, including the creation or preservation of the former facilities of the Naval Security Group Activity, Winter Harbor, Maine, located in Hancock County, Maine, except for the real property described in subsection (a)(1).

(b) TRANSFER OF PERSONAL PROPERTY.—The Secretary of the Navy shall transfer, without reimbursement, to the Secretary of the Interior in the case of the real property transferred under subsection (a), or to any recipient of such real property in the case of real property conveyed under subsection (b), any personal property associated with such real property so transferred or conveyed, including—

(1) the ambulances and any fire trucks or other firefighting equipment; and

(2) any personal property required to continue the maintenance of the infrastructure of such real property, including the generators and an uninterrupted power supply in building 154 at the Cora site.

(d) MAINTENANCE OF PROPERTY PENDING CONVEYANCE.—The Secretary of the Navy shall maintain any real property, including any improvements thereon, appurtenances thereto, and support infrastructure, to be conveyed under subsection (b) until the earlier of—

(1) the date of the conveyance of such real property under subsection (b); or

(e) TURN LEASE.—Until such time as any parcel of real property to be conveyed under subsection (b) is conveyed by deed under that subsection, the Secretary of the Navy may lease such parcel to any person or entity determined by the Secretary to be an appropriate lessee of such parcel.

(f) THE AMOUNT OF RENT FOR A LEASE UNDER PARAGRAPH (1) SHALL BE THE AMOUNT DETERMINED BY THE SECRETARY TO BE APPROPRIATE, AND MAY BE AN AMOUNT LESS THAN THE FAIR MARKET VALUE OF THE LEASE.

(g) REIMBURSEMENT FOR ENVIRONMENTAL AND OTHER ASSESSMENTS.—(1) The Secretary of the Navy may require each recipient of real property conveyed under subsection (b) to reimburse the Secretary for the costs incurred by the Secretary for any environmental assessment, study, or analysis carried out by the Secretary with respect to such property before completing the conveyance under this section.

(2) The amount of any reimbursement required under paragraph (1) shall be determined by the Secretary, but may not exceed the cost of the assessment, study, or analysis for which reimbursement is required.

(h) SEC. 2853. MODIFICATION OF AUTHORITY FOR CONVEYANCE OF SCHOODIC POINT PROPERTY AUTHORIZED.—(1) The Secretary of the Interior may transfer, without reimbursement, to the Secretary of the Navy, including any improvements thereon and appurtenances thereto, of approximately 26 acres as generally depicted as Tract 15–116 on the map entitled “Acadia National Park Schoodic Point Area”, numbered 123/30,418 and dated May 2001. The map shall be on file and available for inspection in the appropriate offices of the National Park Service.

(2) The transfer authorized by this subsection shall occur in conjunction with the reversion of administrative jurisdiction of a parcel of real property consisting of approximately 71 acres, as depicted as Tract 15–115 on the map referred to in paragraph (1), from the Secretary of the Navy to the Secretary of the Interior as authorized by Public Law 80–260 (61 Stat. 519) and to be executed on or about June 30, 2002.

(i) CONVEYANCE OF WINTER HARBOR PROPERTIES AUTHORIZED.—The Secretary of the Navy may convey, without consideration, to the State of Maine, any political subdivision of the State of Maine, or to any recipient of such real property, any parcel of real property, including any improvements thereon and appurtenances thereon, consisting of approximately 485 acres and comprising the former facilities of the Naval Security Group Activity, Winter Harbor, Maine, located in Hancock County, Maine, except for the real property described in subsection (a)(1).
Congressional Record

September 20, 2001

Air Force may convey all right, title, and interest of the United States, or such lesser estate as the Secretary may determine, in the water rights related to the following Air Force properties located on Guam:

(1) Andersen South, also known as the Andersen Administrative Annex.
(2) Marianas Borins Base Command.
(3) Andersen Water Supply Annex, also known as the Tumon Water Well or the Tumon Maui Well.

(b) ADDITIONAL REQUIREMENTS.—The Secretary may exercise the authority contained in subsection (a) only if—

(1) the Secretary determines that adequate supplies of portable groundwater exist under the main base and northwest field portions of Andersen Air Force Base to meet the current and long-term requirements of the installation for water;
(2) the Secretary determines that such supplies of groundwater are economically obtainable; and
(3) the Secretary requires the conveyee of the water rights under subsection (a) to provide a water supply that will meet the current and future requirements of the main base and northwest field portions of Andersen Air Force Base, as determined by the Secretary.

(c) USE OF WATER SUPPLIES.—If the Secretary determines that it is in the best interests of the United States to transfer title to the water rights and utility systems at Andy South and Andersen Water Supply Annex before placing into service a replacement water system and well field on Andersen Air Force Base, the Secretary may require that the United States have the prior right to all water produced from Andy South and Andersen Water Supply Annex until the replacement water system and well field is placed into service and operates to the satisfaction of the Secretary. In exercising the authority provided by this subsection, the Secretary may retain a reversionary interest in the water rights and utility systems at Andy South and Andersen Water Supply Annex until such time as the new replacement water system and well field is placed into service and operates to the satisfaction of the Secretary.

(d) TRANSFER AUTHORIZED.—(1) As part of the conveyance of water rights under subsection (a), the Secretary may authorize the conveyee of the water system to sell to public or private entities such water from Andersen Air Force Base as the Secretary determines to be excess to the needs of the United States. In the event the Secretary authorizes the conveyee to resell water, the Secretary shall negotiate a reasonable return to the United States of the value of such excess water sold by the conveyee, which return the Secretary may receive in the form of reduced charges for utility services provided by the conveyee.

(2) If the Secretary cannot meet the requirements of subsection (b), and the Secretary determines that it is in the best interests of the United States to convey a water utility system, the conveyance under section 2686 of title 10, United States Code, without the conveyance of water rights, the Secretary may provide in any such conveyance, that the conveyee of the water system may sell to public or private entities such water from Andy South and Andersen Water Supply Annex as the Secretary determines to be excess to the needs of the United States. The Secretary shall negotiate a reasonable return to the United States of the value of such excess water sold by the conveyee, which return the Secretary may receive in the form of reduced charges for utility services provided by the conveyee.

(e) TREATMENT OF WATER RIGHTS.—For purposes of section 2686 of title 10, United States Code, the water rights referred to in subsection (a) shall be considered as part of a utility system (as that term is defined in subsection (h)(2) of such section).

SEC. 2582. REEXAMINATION OF LAND CONVEYANCE, LOWRY AIR FORCE BASE, COLORADO.

The Secretary of the Air Force shall reexamine the terms and conditions of the pending negotiated sale agreement with the Lowry Redevelopment Authority for certain real property at Lowry Air Force Base, in light of changed circumstances regarding the property, including changes in the flood plain designations affecting some of the property, to determine whether the changed circumstances warrant a reduction in the amount of consideration otherwise required under the agreement or other modifications to the agreement.

Subtitle E—Other Matters

SEC. 2581. TRANSFER OF JURISDICTION FOR DEVELOPMENT OF ARMED FORCES RECREATION FACILITY, PARK CITY, UTAH.

(a) TRANSFER REQUIRED.—(1) The Secretary of the Interior shall transfer, without reimbursement, to the administrative jurisdiction of the Secretary of Defense, certain real property in Park City, Utah, including any improvements thereon, that consists of approximately 35 acres, is located in township 2 south, range 4 east, Section 14, and is designated as parcel 3 by the Bureau of Land Management.

(2) The transfer shall be subject to existing rights, except that the Secretary of the Interior shall terminate any lease with respect to the parcel issued under the Act of June 14, 1926 (commonly known as the Recreation and Public Purposes Act; 43 U.S.C. 689 et seq.), and still in effect as of the date of the enactment of this Act.

(3) The transfer required by this subsection shall be completed not later than one year after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(b) USE OF TRANSFERRED LAND.—(1) The Secretary of the Air Force may use the real property transferred under subsection (a) as the location for an armed forces recreation facility to be developed using nonappropriated funds.

(2) The Secretary of the Air Force may return the transferred property (or property acquired pursuant to subsection (c)) to the administrative jurisdiction of the Secretary of the Interior at any time upon certifying that development of the armed forces recreation facility to be developed using nonappropriated funds has not been the best interest of the Government.

(c) SUBSEQUENT CONVEYANCE AUTHORITY.—(1) In lieu of developing the armed forces recreation facility on the real property transferred under subsection (a), the Secretary of the Air Force may convey or lease the property to the State of Utah, a local government, or a private entity in exchange for other property to be used as the site of the facility.

(2) The values of the properties exchanged by the Secretary under this subsection shall be equalized by the payment of money to the grantor or to the Secretary as the circumstances require. The conveyance or lease shall be on such terms that the Secretary of the Air Force considers to be advantageous to the development of the facility.

(d) ALTERNATIVE DEVELOPMENT AUTHORITY.—The Secretary of the Air Force may lease the real property transferred under subsection (a), or any property acquired pursuant to subsection (c), to another party and may enter into a contract with such party to develop the real property transferred under subsection (a), and operation of the armed forces recreation facility. The Secretary of the Air Force may authorize the contractor to operate the facility as both a military and a commercial operation if the Secretary determines that such an authorization is a necessary incentive for the contractor to agree to design, construct, and operate the facility.

(e) LEGAL DESCRIPTION.—The exact acreage and legal description of the real property to be transferred under subsection (a) shall be determined by a survey. The cost of the survey shall be borne by the Secretary of the Air Force.

SEC. 2582. SELECTION OF SITE FOR UNITED STATES AIR FORCE MILITARY AND RELATED LAND TRANSFERS FOR THE IMPROVEMENT OF ARLINGTON NATIONAL CEMETERY, VIRGINIA.

(a) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

(1) The term ‘‘Arlington Naval Annex’’ means the parcel of Federal land located in Arlington County, Virginia, that is subject to transfer to the Secretary of the Army under section 2881 of the Military Construction Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2000 (division B of Public Law 106–65; 113 Stat. 137).

(2) The term ‘‘Foundation’’ means the United States Air Force Memorial Foundation, which was authorized in Public Law 102–163 (107 Stat. 1973; 40 U.S.C. 2350 et seq.) to establish the Air Force Memorial Fund in the District of Columbia or its environs to honor the men and women who have served in the United States Air Force and its predecessors.

(3) The term ‘‘Air Force Memorial’’ means the United States Air Force Memorial to be established by the Foundation.

(b) OFFER OF PORTION OF ARLINGTON NAVAL ANNEX AS SITE FOR AIR FORCE MEMORIAL.—Within 90 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of the Interior shall transfer to the Foundation an option to use, without reimbursement, up to three acres of the Arlington Naval Annex as the site within which the Foundation will construct the Air Force Memorial. The offered acreage shall include the prominent adjacent to, and the land underlying, Wing 8 of Federal Office Building #2 in the northeast quadrant of the Arlington Naval Annex.

(c) ACCEPTANCE OR REJECTION OF OFFER.—(1) DEADLINE.—Within 90 days after the date on which the Secretary of Defense makes the offer required by subsection (b), the Foundation shall provide written notice to the Secretary of the decision of the Foundation to accept or decline the offer.

(2) EFFECT OF ACCEPTANCE.—Subject to subsection (d), if the Foundation accepts the offer of the Secretary of Defense, the Foundation shall relinquish all claims to the previously approved location for the Air Force Memorial. No other commemorative work may thereafter be established on the Arlington Naval Annex property.

(3) EFFECT OF REJECTION.—If the Foundation declines the offer the Secretary of Defense makes the offer required by subsection (b), the offer shall be returned and the Secretary of the Navy shall have the right to acquire title to the previously approved location for the Air Force Memorial.
Public Law 103-163 (40 U.S.C. 1003 note), shall be preserved, and all deadlines tolled, while the Federal Government continues to make the offer of use of the memorial within the Arlington Naval Annex. (d) PREPARATION FOR CONSTRUCTION.—Not later than two years after the date on which the Foundation accepts the offer made under subsection (b) and has available sufficient funds to construct the Air Force Memorial, the Secretary of Defense, in coordination with the Foundation, shall remove all structures and prepare the Arlington Naval Annex site for use as may be necessary to permit construction of the memorial and appropriate access. (2) CONSTRUCTION OF MEMORIAL.—Upon the removal of structures and preparation of the property for use as required by paragraph (1), the Secretary of Defense shall permit the Foundation to commence construction of the Air Force Memorial on the Arlington Naval Annex site. (3) RELATION TO OTHER TRANSFER AUTHORITY.—Nothing in this section alters the deadline for transfer of the Arlington Naval Annex to the Secretary of the Army and the Secretary of the Interior shall enter into a cooperative agreement to continue National Park Service management of that portion of Section 29 that is not transferred under this subsection to provide a natural setting and visual buffer for Arlington House, the Robert E. Lee Memorial, and the Marine Corps Memorial and to guarantee public access to these locations. (h) REMOVAL OF ARLINGTON NAVAL ANNEX AS POSSIBLE NATIONAL MILITARY MUSEUM.— (1) EXISTING NAVY ANNEX TRANSFER.—Section 2801 of the Military Construction Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2000 (division B of Public Law 106–65; 113 Stat. 879) is amended— (A) in subsection (b)(1), by striking “subject to paragraph (2)” and inserting “The”; and (B) by striking paragraph (2); (2) USE OF LAND.—The Secretary of the Army shall incorporate the Arlington Ridge tract into the Arlington Naval Annex site to provide a substitute housing unit of equal size and appropriate access.  SEC. 2863. MANAGEMENT OF THE PRESIDIO OF SAN FRANCISCO.— (a) AUTHORITY TO LEASE CERTAIN HOUSING UNITS FOR USE AS ARMY HOUSING.—Title I of division I of the Omnibus Parks and Public Lands Management Act of 1996 (Public Law 104–333; 16 U.S.C. 460bb note) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection: “(d) LIEGE TOWARDS.—The Trust shall make available for lease, to those persons designated by the Secretary of the Army, housing units specified in subsection (b).” (b) HOUSING UNITS.—The housing units referred to in this section are identified as follows: “(1) Liggett 715 A&B, 716 A&B, 717 A&B, 718 A&B, 719 A&B, and 720 A&B; “(2) West Washington 1401 A&B, 1403 A&B, and 1405 B; “(3) Infantry Terrace 340, 341, 342, and 343; “(4) Wright Loop 1332.” (c) REPLACEMENT OF DAMAGED OR DESTROYED HOUSING UNITS.—In the event of significant damage to or destruction of a housing unit specified in subsection (b), the Trust shall provide a substitute housing unit of equal size and accommodation. (d) LEASE AMOUNT.—The monthly amount charged by the Trust for the lease of a housing unit, including utilities and municipal services, under this section shall not exceed the monthly rate of the basic allowance for housing that the Secretary of the Army has determined that the occupant of the housing unit is entitled to receive under section 403 of title 37, United States Code. (e) RELATIONS TO TRUST FUNDING LIMITATIONS.—The Trust shall comply with this section without regard to the requirement of section 105(b) that the Trust achieve financial self-sufficiency. (f) INCREASED BORROWING AUTHORITY.—Section 104(d)(1) of title I of division I of the Omnibus Parks and Public Lands Management Act of 1996, as redesignated by section 101(3)(G) of the Omnibus Parks Technical Corrections Act of 2000 (Public Law 106–176; 114 Stat. 25), is amended— (1) by striking “$50,000,000” and inserting “$150,000,000”; and (2) by striking “paragraph (3) of”. SEC. 2864. EFFECT OF LIMITATION ON CONSTRUCTION OF ROADS OR HIGHWAYS, MARINE CORPS BASE, CAMP PENDLETON, CALIFORNIA.—Section 2881 of the Military Construction Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1999 (division B of Public Law 105–261; 112 Stat. 2219), as amended by section 2881 of the Spence Act (114 Stat. 1654A–438), is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection: “(g) LIMITATION ON CONSTRUCTION OF ROADS OR HIGHWAYS.—If a State law enacted after January 1, 2001, directly or indirectly prohibits or restricts the construction or approval of a road or highway within the easement granted under this section, the State law shall not be effective with respect to such construction or approval.”. SEC. 2865. ESTABLISHMENT OF WORLD WAR II MEMORIAL AT ADDITIONAL LOCATION ON GUAM.—Section 2886 of the Military Construction Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2001 (division B of the Spence Act; 114 Stat. 1654A–441) is amended— (1) in subsection (a), by inserting “, and on Federal lands near Yigo,” after “Pena Caves”; (2) in the heading of subsection (b), by striking “MEMORIAL” and inserting “MEMORIALS”; and (3) in subsections (b) and (c), by striking “memorial” each place it appears and inserting “memorials”. TITLE XXIX—FORT IRWIN MILITARY LAND WITHDRAWAL SEC. 2901. SHORT TITLE. This title may be cited as the “Fort Irwin Military Land Withdrawal Act of 2001”. SEC. 2902. WITHDRAWAL AND RESERVATION OF LANDS FOR NATIONAL TRAINING CENTER. (a) WITHDRAWAL.—Subject to valid existing rights and except as otherwise provided in this title, all public lands and interests in lands described in subsection (c) are hereby withdrawn from all forms of disposal under the general land laws, including the mining laws and mineral and geothermal leasing laws, and jurisdiction over such lands and interests in lands withdrawn and reserved by this title is hereby transferred to the Secretary of the Army. (b) RESERVATION.—The lands withdrawn under subsection (a) are reserved for use by the Secretary of the Army for the following purposes: (1) The conduct of combined arms military training at the National Training Center. (2) The development and testing of military equipment at the National Training Center. (3) Other defense-related purposes consistent with the purposes specified in paragraphs (1) and (2). (4) Conservation and related research purposes. (c) LAND DESCRIPTION.—The public lands and interests in lands withdrawn and reserved by this section comprise approximately 110,000 acres in San Bernardino County, California, as generally depicted as "Proposed Withdrawal Land" on a map entitled "National Training Center—Proposed Withdrawal of Public Lands for Training Purposes," dated September 21, 2000, and filed in accordance with section 2903.

(4) INDIAN TRIBES.—Nothing in this title shall be construed as altering any rights reserved for tribal use by treaty or Federal law. The Secretary of the Army shall consult with federally recognized Indian tribes in the vicinity of the lands withdrawn under subsection (a) before taking action affecting rights or cultural resources protected by treaty or Federal law.

SEC. 2903. MAP AND LEGAL DESCRIPTION.

(a) PREPARATION OF MAP AND LEGAL DESCRIPTION.—As soon as practicable after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of the Interior shall:

(1) publish in the Federal Register a notice containing the legal description of the lands withdrawn by this title;

(2) file a map and legal description of the lands withdrawn and reserved by this title with the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources of the Senate and the Committee on Resources of the House of Representatives;

(b) LEGAL EFFECT.—The map and legal description shall have the same force and effect as the written description of the lands withdrawn and reserved by this title.

(c) AUTHORIZATION OF USE.—The Secretary of the Interior may correct clerical and typographical errors in the map and legal description.

(d) AVAILABILITY.—Copies of the map and the legal description shall be available for public inspection in the following offices:

(1) The offices of the California State Director, California Desert District Office, and Barstow Field Offices of the Bureau of Land Management.

(2) The Office of the Commander, National Training Center and Fort Irwin.

(3) The West Mojave Coordinated Management Plan implementation offices of the Army.

(e) REVIEW.—Nothing in this subsection shall affect any water right on the lands withdrawn and reserved by this title.

SEC. 2904. MANAGEMENT OF WITHDRAWN AND RESERVED LANDS.

(a) GENERAL MANAGEMENT AUTHORITY.—During the period of withdrawal and reserved by this title, the Secretary of the Army shall manage the lands withdrawn and reserved by this title for purposes specified in section 2901.

(b) TEMPORARY PROHIBITION ON CERTAIN USE.—Military use of the lands withdrawn and reserved by this title that result in ground disturbance, as determined by the Secretary of the Army and the Secretary of the Interior, are prohibited until the Secretary of the Army and the Secretary of the Interior certify to Congress that there has been full compliance with respect to the military use of the lands withdrawn and reserved by this title. The Secretary of the Army may modify this prohibition as the Secretary determines necessary or desirable to effect and maintain such closure.

(c) EXCEPTIONS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—If the Secretary of the Army determines that adequate separation or special procedures, public safety, or national security require the closure to the public of any road, trail, or other portion of the lands withdrawn and reserved by this title, the Secretary shall take such action as the Secretary determines necessary or desirable to effect and maintain such closure.

(2) LIMITATION.—Any closure under paragraph (1) shall be limited to the minimum areas and periods that the Secretary of the Army determines are required for the purposes specified in such paragraph.

(3) NOTIFICATIONS.—As soon as practicable following any closure under paragraph (1), the Secretary of the Army shall post appropriate notices of such closure to the public of the closure.

(4) INTEGRATED NATURAL RESOURCES MANAGEMENT PLAN.—The Secretary of the Army shall prepare and implement, in accordance with section 2911(b), an integrated natural resources management plan for the lands withdrawn and reserved by this title. In addition to the elements required under section 2911(b), the integrated natural resources management plan shall include the following:

(1) a requirement that any hunting, fishing, and trapping on the lands withdrawn and reserved by this title be conducted in accordance with section 2671 of title 10, United States Code;

(2) a requirement that the Secretary of the Army take necessary actions to prevent, supress, and manage brush and range fires occurring within the boundaries of Fort Irwin and other Federal or State areas outside the boundaries of Fort Irwin that result from military activities at Fort Irwin;

(3) FIREPROOFING.—Notwithstanding section 2465 of title 10, United States Code, the Secretary of the Army may obligate funds appropriated or otherwise available to the Secretary of the Army to enter into a memorandum of understanding, cooperative agreement, or contract for fire fighting services to carry out the requirements of subsection (d)(2). The Secretary of the Army shall reimburse the Secretary of the Interior for costs incurred by the Secretary of the Interior to assist in carrying out the requirements of such subsection.

(5) CONSULTATION WITH NATIONAL AERONAUTICS AND SPACE ADMINISTRATION.—In preparing and implementing any plan, report, assessment, survey, opinion, or impact statement regarding the lands withdrawn and reserved by this title, the Secretary of the Army shall consult with the Administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration whenever proposed Army actions have the potential to affect the operations or the environmental management of the Goldstone Deep Space Communications Complex. The requirement for consultation shall apply, at a minimum, to the following:

(1) Plans for military training, military equipment testing, or related activities that have the potential to affect the operations of the Goldstone Deep Space Communications Complex and space flight missions or other transmission of receipt of signals from outer space by the Goldstone Deep Space Communications Complex.

(2) The integrated natural resources management plan for the lands withdrawn and reserved by this title.

(3) The West Mojave Coordinated Management Plan referred to in section 2907.

(4) Any document prepared in compliance with the requirement of section 2907, the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969, and other laws applicable to the lands withdrawn and reserved by this title.

(5) USE OF MINERAL MATERIALS.—Notwithstanding any other provision of this title or the Act of July 31, 1947 (commonly known as the Aeronautics Act of 1947, 42 U.S.C. 4321 et seq.), the Secretary of the Army may use sand, gravel, or similar mineral material resources of the type subject to disposition under such Act from the lands withdrawn and reserved by this title if the use of such resources is required for construction needs of the National Training Center.

SEC. 2905. WATER RIGHTS.

(1) to establish a reservation in favor of the United States with respect to any water or water right on the lands withdrawn and reserved by this title; or

(2) to authorize the appropriation of water on such lands by the United States after the date of the enactment of this Act, except in accordance with applicable State law.

(b) EFFECT ON PREVIOUSLY ACQUIRED OR RESERVED WATER RIGHTS.—This section shall not be construed to affect any water rights acquired or reserved by the United States before the date of the enactment of this Act, and the Secretary of the Army may exercise any such previously acquired or reserved water rights.

SEC. 2906. ENVIRONMENTAL COMPLIANCE AND ENVIRONMENTAL RESPONSE REQUIREMENTS.

(a) AGREEMENT CONCERNING ENVIRONMENT AND PUBLIC HEALTH.—The Secretary of the Army and the Secretary of the Interior may enter into a memorandum of understanding, cooperative agreement, or contract for fire fighting services to carry out the requirements of subsection (d)(2). The Secretary of the Army shall reimburse the Secretary of the Interior for costs incurred by the Secretary of the Interior to assist in carrying out the requirements of such subsection.

(b) EFFECT ON PREVIOUSLY ACQUIRED OR RESERVED WATER RIGHTS.—Nothing in this title shall be construed to affect the rights, responsibilities, and obligations of the Secretary of the Army or the Secretary of the Interior under the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation and Liability Act of 1980 (42 U.S.C. 9601 et seq.) or other environmental laws applicable to the lands withdrawn and reserved by this title.

SEC. 2907. WEST MOJAVE COORDINATED MANAGEMENT PLAN.

(a) COMPLETION.—The Secretary of the Interior shall make every effort to complete the West Mojave Coordinated Management Plan not later than two years after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(b) CONSIDERATION OF WITHDRAWAL AND RESERVATION IMPACTS.—The Secretary of the Interior shall ensure that the West Mojave Coordinated Management Plan considers the impacts of the availability or nonavailability of the lands withdrawn and reserved by this title on the plan as a whole.

(c) CONSULTATION.—The Secretary of the Interior shall consult with the Secretary of the Army and the Administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration in the development of the West Mojave Coordinated Management Plan.

SEC. 2908. RELEASE OF WILDERNESS STUDY AREAS.

Congress hereby finds and directs that lands withdrawn and reserved by this title have been adequately studied for wilderness designation pursuant to section 603(c) of the Federal Land Policy and Management Act of 1976 (43 U.S.C. 1782(c)), and are no longer subject to the requirement of such section pertaining to the management of wilderness study areas in a manner that does not impair the suitability of such areas for preservation as wilderness.

SEC. 2909. TRAINING ACTIVITY SEPARATION FROM THE UTILITIES.

(a) REQUIRED SEPARATION.—All military ground activity training on the lands withdrawn and reserved by this title shall remain at least 500 meters from any utility system, in existence as of the date of the enactment of this Act, in Utility Planning Corridor D, as described in the California Desert Conservation Area Plan, unless it is determined by the Secretary that such training is necessary for national defense.

(b) EXCEPTION.—Subsection (a) does not modify the use of any lands used, as of the date of the enactment of this Act, by the National Training Center for training right of access granted by interagency agreement.

SEC. 2910. DURATION OF WITHDRAWAL AND RESERVATION.

(a) TERMINATION DATE.—Unless extended pursuant to section 2911, unless relinquishment is... postponed by the Secretary of the Interior pursuant to section 2912(b), and except as provided in section 2913. The notice given by the Secretary of the Interior containing the date upon which jurisdiction made by this title shall terminate 25 years after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(b) LIMITATION ON SUBSEQUENT AVAILABILITY FOR ADMINISTRATION.—The termination date, for all or any portion of the lands covered under the provisions of this title, shall not be earlier than three years before the termination date for any of the lands withdrawn and reserved by this title, the previously withdrawn lands shall not be open to any forms of appropriation under the general land laws, including the mining laws and the mineral and geothermal leasing laws, until the Secretary of the Interior publishes a Federal Register notice containing the date upon which such lands shall be restored to the public domain and opened.

SEC. 2911. EXTENSION OF INITIAL WITHDRAWAL AND RESERVATION.

(a) NOTIFICATION REQUIREMENT.—Not later than three years before the termination date specified in section 2910(a), the Secretary of the Army shall notify Congress and the Secretary of the Interior concerning whether the Army will have a continuing military need, beyond the termination date, for any or all portion of the lands withdrawn and reserved by this title.

(b) PROCESS FOR EXTENSION OF WITHDRAWAL AND RESERVATION.—

(1) CONSULTATION AND APPLICATION.—Before acceptance of jurisdiction over lands covered by a notice under subsection (a) before the termination date of the withdrawal and reservation, the Secretary shall publish in the Federal Register an appropriate order that shall state that the Secretary of the Army proposes to extend the withdrawal and reservation of such needed lands.

(b) ACCEPTANCE OF JURISDICTION.—Before acceptance of jurisdiction over lands covered by a notice under subsection (a) before the termination date of the withdrawal and reservation, the Secretary shall publish in the Federal Register an appropriate order that shall—

(1) terminate the withdrawal and reservation of such needed lands under this title.

(2) state the date upon which such lands shall be opened to the operation of the general land laws, including the mining laws and the mineral and geothermal leasing laws, if appropriate.

(3) EVALUATION OF EXTENSIONS.—Before acceptance of jurisdiction over lands covered by a notice under subsection (a) before the termination date of the withdrawal and reservation, the Secretary shall publish in the Federal Register an appropriate order that shall—

(1) terminate the withdrawal and reservation of such needed lands under this title.

(2) make a determination concerning the use or development of mineral, timber, or grazing resources unless, and only to the extent, the Secretary of the Army proposes to use or develop such resources during the period of extension.

(c) SUBMISSION OF PROPOSED EXTENSION TO CONGRESS.—Before acceptance of jurisdiction over lands covered by a notice under subsection (a) before the termination date of the withdrawal and reservation, the Secretary shall submit to the Secretary of the Interior a notice of intent to relinquish jurisdiction over such lands. The Secretary shall specify the proposed date of relinquishment.

SEC. 2912. TERMINATION AND RELINQUISHMENT.

(a) NOTICE OF TERMINATION.—During the first 22 years of the withdrawal and reservation made by this title, if the Secretary of the Army determines that there is no continuing military need for the lands withdrawn and reserved by this title, or any portion of such lands, the Secretary of the Army shall submit to the Secretary of the Interior a notice of intent to relinquish jurisdiction over such lands. The notice shall specify the proposed date of relinquishment.

(b) ACCEPTANCE OF JURISDICTION.—The Secretary of the Interior may accept jurisdiction over any lands covered by a notice under subsection (a) if the Secretary of the Interior determines that the Secretary of the Army has taken all appropriate action to ensure that the land withdrawal and reservation activities required under applicable laws and regulations.

(c) NOTICE OF ACCEPTANCE.—If the Secretary of the Army determines that the land withdrawal and reservation activities required under applicable laws and regulations.

(d) ACCEPTANCE OF JURISDICTION.—The Secretary of the Interior may accept jurisdiction over lands covered by a notice under subsection (a) before the termination date of the withdrawal and reservation, the Secretary shall publish in the Federal Register an appropriate order that shall—

(i) terminate the withdrawal and reservation of such lands under this title.

(ii) state the date upon which such lands shall be opened to the operation of the general land laws, including the mining laws and the mineral and geothermal leasing laws, if appropriate.

(e) EVALUATION OF EXTENSIONS.—Before acceptance of jurisdiction over lands covered by a notice under subsection (a) before the termination date of the withdrawal and reservation, the Secretary shall publish in the Federal Register an appropriate order that shall—

(i) terminate the withdrawal and reservation of such needed lands under this title.

(ii) state the date upon which such lands shall be opened to the operation of the general land laws, including the mining laws and the mineral and geothermal leasing laws, if appropriate.

(f) EVALUATION OF EXTENSIONS.—Before acceptance of jurisdiction over lands covered by a notice under subsection (a) before the termination date of the withdrawal and reservation, the Secretary shall publish in the Federal Register an appropriate order that shall—

(i) terminate the withdrawal and reservation of such needed lands under this title.

(ii) state the date upon which such lands shall be opened to the operation of the general land laws, including the mining laws and the mineral and geothermal leasing laws, if appropriate.

(g) EVALUATION OF EXTENSIONS.—Before acceptance of jurisdiction over lands covered by a notice under subsection (a) before the termination date of the withdrawal and reservation, the Secretary shall publish in the Federal Register an appropriate order that shall—

(i) terminate the withdrawal and reservation of such needed lands under this title.

(ii) state the date upon which such lands shall be opened to the operation of the general land laws, including the mining laws and the mineral and geothermal leasing laws, if appropriate.

SEC. 3104. DEFENSE ENVIRONMENTAL MANAGEMENT PRIVATIZATION.

Funds are hereby authorized to be appropriated to the Department of Energy for fiscal year 2002 for privatization initiatives in carrying out environmental restoration and waste management activities necessary for national security programs in the amount of $126,208,000, to be allocated as follows:

(A) For worker and community transition, $19,000,000.

(B) For program direction, $2,900,000.

(C) For program direction (including architectural and engineering services) in connection with any proposed construction project if the total estimated cost for construction design (including architectural and engineering services) in connection with any proposed construction project if the total estimated cost for construction design exceeds $600,000, funds for that design may not be started or additional obligations incurred in connection with the project above the total estimated cost, whenever the current estimated cost of the construction project, authorized by 3101, 3102, or 3103, or which is in support of national security programs of the Department of Energy and was authorized by any previous Act, exceeds by more than 25 percent the higher of—

(A) the amount authorized for the project; or

(B) the amount of the total estimated cost for the project as shown in the most recent budget justification data submitted to Congress.

(2) An action described in paragraph (1) may be taken if—

(A) the Secretary of Energy has submitted to the congressional defense committees a report on the actions and the circumstances making such action necessary; and

(B) a period of 30 days has elapsed after the date on which the report is received by the committees.

(3) In the computation of the 30-day period under paragraph (2), there shall be excluded any day on which either House of Congress is not in session because of an adjournment of more than 3 days to a day certain.

(4) The requirement of paragraph (1) does not apply to a request for funds—

(A) for a construction project the total estimated cost of which is less than $5,000,000; or

(B) for emergency planning, design, and construction activities under section 3126.

SEC. 3126. AUTHORITY FOR EMERGENCY PLANNING, DESIGN, AND CONSTRUCTION ACTIVITIES.

(a) AUTHORITY.—The Secretary of Energy may use any funds available to the Department of Energy pursuant to an authorization in this title, including funds authorized to be appropriated for advance planning and construction design under sections 3101, 3102, and 3103, to perform planning, design, and construction activities for any Department of Energy national security program construction project that, as determined by the Secretary, must proceed expeditiously in order to protect public health and safety, to meet the needs of national defense, or to protect property.

(b) LIMITATION.—The Secretary may not exercise the authority under the provisions of this section in the case of any construction project until the Secretary has submitted to the congressional defense committees a report on the activities that the Secretary intends to conduct pursuant to the provision of this section and the circumstances making those activities necessary.

(c) SPECIFIC AUTHORITY.—The requirement of section 3125(b)(2) does not apply to emergency planning, design, and construction activities conducted under this section.

SEC. 3127. FUNDS AVAILABLE FOR ALL NATIONAL SECURITY PROGRAMS OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY.

Subject to the provisions of appropriation Acts and section 3121, amounts appropriated pursuant to this title and emergency planning and support activities and for general plant projects are available for use, when necessary, in connection with all national security programs of the Department of Energy.

SEC. 3128. AVAILABILITY OF FUNDS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Except as provided in subsection (b), when specified in an appropriations Act, amounts appropriated for operation and maintenance of any nuclear facilities under this title shall remain available until expended.

(b) EXCEPTION FOR PROGRAM DIRECTION FUNDS.—Amounts appropriated for program direction pursuant to an authorization of appropriations in subtitle A shall remain available to Armored Services of the Senate and House of Representatives of any transfer of funds to or from national security programs of the Armed Services or to or from any national security programs of the Armed Services in the event of a declaration of war, national emergency, or other declaration of the President.
be expended only until the end of fiscal year 2003.

SEC. 3129. TRANSFERS OF DEFENSE ENVIRONMENTAL MANAGEMENT FUNDS AT FIELD OFFICES OF THE DEPARTMENT OF ENERGY.

(a) TRANSFER AUTHORITY FOR DEFENSE ENVIRONMENTAL MANAGEMENT FUNDS.—The Secretary of Energy shall provide the manager of each field office of the Department of Energy with the authority to transfer defense environmental management funds from a program or project under the jurisdiction of the office to another such program or project, under subsection (a) of the field offices of the Department may exercise the authority provided under subsection (a).

(b) LIMITATIONS.—(1) Only one transfer may be made to or from any program or project under subsection (a) in a fiscal year.

(2) The amount transferred to or from a program or project under subsection (a) may not exceed $5,000,000 in a fiscal year.

(3) A transfer pursuant to subsection (a) may not be carried out under subsection (a) unless the manager determines that the transfer is necessary to address a risk to health, safety, or the environment or to assure the most efficient use of defense environmental management funds at the field office.

(4) Funds transferred pursuant to subsection (a) may not be used for an item for which Congress has specifically denied funds or for a new program or project that has not been authorized by Congress.

(c) EXEMPTION FROM REPROGRAMMING REQUIREMENTS.—The requirements of section 3121 shall not apply to transfers of funds pursuant to subsection (a).

(d) NOTIFICATION.—The Secretary, acting through the Assistant Secretary of Energy for Environmental Management, shall notify Congress of any transfer of funds pursuant to subsection (a).

(e) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

(A) A program referred to or listed in paragraph (1) of section 3101.

(B) A program or project not described in subparagraph (A) that is for weapons production or weapons component production of the National Nuclear Security Administration that is being carried out by such field office and for which weapons activities funds have been appropriated before the date of the enactment of this Act.

(2) The term "activities funds" means funds appropriated to the Department of Energy pursuant to an authorization for weapons activities of the National Nuclear Security Administration for programs necessary for national security.

(3) The terms "national security laboratory" and "nuclear weapons production facility" have the meanings given such terms in section 3281 of the National Nuclear Security Administration Act (title XXXII of Public Law 106–65; 112 Stat. 368; 50 U.S.C. 2471).

(f) DURATION OF AUTHORITY.—The heads of the national security laboratories and nuclear weapons production facilities may exercise the authority provided under subsection (a) during fiscal year 2002.

Subsection C—Program Authorizations, Restrictions, and Limitations

SEC. 3131. TERMINATION DATE OF OFFICE OF RIVER PROTECTION, RICHLAND, WASHINGTON.

"(f) TERMINATION.—(1) The Office shall terminate on the later of the following dates:

(2) The date on which the Assistant Secretary of Energy for Environmental Management determines, in consultation with the head of the Office, that continuation of the Office is no longer necessary to carry out the responsibilities of the Department of Energy under the Tri-Party Agreement.

(3) The Assistant Secretary shall notify, in writing, the committee referred to in subsection (d) of a determination under paragraph (1).

(4) (A) The term "Tri-Party Agreement" means the Hanford Federal Facility Agreement and Consent Order entered into among the Department of Energy, the Environmental Protection Agency, and the State of Washington Department of Ecology.".

SEC. 3132. ORGANIZATIONAL MODIFICATIONS FOR NATIONAL NUCLEAR SECURITY ADMINISTRATION.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT OF PRINCIPAL DEPUTY ADMINISTRATOR.—(1) Subtitle A of the National Nuclear Security Administration Act is amended by inserting after section 3211 (50 U.S.C. 2403) the following new section:

"SEC. 3211A. PRINCIPAL DEPUTY ADMINISTRATOR FOR NUCLEAR SECURITY.

"(a) IN GENERAL.—(1) There is in the Administration a Principal Deputy Administrator, who is appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate.

(2) The Principal Deputy Administrator shall be appointed from among persons who—

(A) have extensive background in national security, organizational management, and appropriate technical fields; and

(B) are well qualified to manage the national security, nonproliferation, and materials disposition programs of the Administration in a manner that advances and protects the national security of the United States.

(b) DUTIES.—Subject to the authority, direction, and control of the Administrator, the Principal Deputy Administrator shall perform such duties and exercise such powers as the Administrator may prescribe, including the coordination of activities among the elements of the Administration. The Principal Deputy Administrator shall act for, and exercise the powers of, the Administrator when the Administrator is disabled or the position of Administrator is vacant.

The table of contents preceding section 3201 of such Act is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 3213 the following new item:

"Sec. 3213A. Principal Deputy Administrator."

(3) Section 3315 of title 5, United States Code, is amended—

(A) by inserting before the item relating to Deputy Administrators of the National Nuclear Security Administration the following new item: "Principal Deputy Administrator, National Nuclear Security Administration;" and

(B) by inserting "Additional" before "Deputy Administrators of the National Nuclear Security Administration.";

(c) ELIMINATION OF REQUIREMENT THAT NATIONAL SECURITY LABORATORIES AND NUCLEAR WEAPONS PRODUCTION FACILITIES REPORT TO DEPUTY ADMINISTRATOR FOR NUCLEAR SECURITY PROGRAMS.—Section 3214 of the National Nuclear Security Administration Act (50 U.S.C. 2404) is amended by striking subsection (c).

(d) REPEAL OF DUPLICATIVE PROVISION.—Section 2245 of the National Nuclear Security Administration Act (50 U.S.C. 2443) is repealed.

SEC. 3133. CONSOLIDATION OF NUCLEAR CITIES INITIATIVE PROGRAM WITH INITIATIVES FOR PROLIFERATION PREVENTION PROGRAM.

The Administrator of the Nuclear Security shall consolidate the Nuclear Cities Initiative program with the Initiatives for Proliferation Prevention program under a single management line. The consolidation shall be completely accomplished not later than July 1, 2002.

SEC. 3134. DISPOSITION OF SURPLUS DEFENSE PLUTONIUM AT SAVANNAH RIVER SITE, Aiken, South Carolina.

(a) CONSULTATION REQUIRED.—The Secretary of Energy shall consult with the Governor of the State of South Carolina regarding any decisions by the Secretary and the Savannah River Site's Agreement and Consent Order to dispose of surplus defense plutonium located at the Savannah River Site, Aiken, South Carolina, including the plan required by subsection (b).

(b) PLANS FOR DISPOSITION.—Not later than February 1, 2002, the Secretary shall submit to Congress a plan for disposal of the surplus defense plutonium currently located at the Savannah River Site and for disposal of defense plutonium and defense plutonium materials to be shipped to the Savannah River Site in the future. The plan shall review each option considered for such disposal, identify the preferred option, and state the cost of construction and operation of the facilities required by the Department of Energy's Record of Decision for the Storage and Disposition of Weapons-Usable Fissile Materials Final Programmatic Environmental Impact Statement dated January 14, 1997. The plan shall also specify a schedule for the completion of the building of such facilities, including milestones, and a firm schedule for funding the cost of such facilities. The plan shall specify, in addition, the means by which all such plutonium will be removed in a timely manner from the Savannah River Site for storage or disposal elsewhere.

(c) REQUIREMENT FOR ALTERNATIVE DISPOSAL.—If the Secretary determines that proceeding with construction of the Plutonium Immobilization Plant at the Savannah River Site is not feasible, the Department shall modify the design of the Mixed Oxide Fuel Fabrication Facility at the Savannah River Site so that it includes an immobilization capability. If the Secretary determines that proceeding with the Mixed Oxide Fuel Fabrication Facility is feasible, the Department shall proceed with construction of the Plutonium Immobilization Plant.

(d) LIMITATION ON PLUTONIUM SHIPMENTS.—If the plan required in subsection (b) is not submitted to Congress by February 1, 2002, the Secretary shall be prohibited from shipping defense plutonium to the Savannah River Site during the period beginning on February 1, 2002, and ending on the date on which such plan is submitted to Congress.

SEC. 3115. SUPPORT FOR PUBLIC EDUCATION IN THE VICINITY OF LOS ALAMOS NATIONAL LABORATORY, NEW MEXICO.

(a) SUPPORT FOR FISCAL 2002.—From amounts appropriated or otherwise made available to the Secretary of Energy by this title—

(1) $5,000,000 shall be available for payment by the Secretary for fiscal year 2002 to the nonprofit Los Alamos National Laboratory Foundation, as chartered in accordance with section 3107(a) of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1998 (Public Law 105–85; 111 Stat. 252); and

(2) $8,600,000 shall be available for extension of the contract between the Department of Energy and the Los Alamos Public Schools through fiscal year 2002.

(b) SUPPORT FOR FISCAL 2003.—Subject to the availability of appropriations, the Secretary is authorized to—

(1) make payment for fiscal year 2003 similar to the payment referred to in subsection (a)(1); and

(2) provide for a contract extension through fiscal 2002 similar to the contract extension referred to in subsection (a)(2).

(c) USE OF FUNDS.—The foundation referred to in subsection (a)(1) shall—

(1) utilize funds provided under this section as a contribution to the endowment fund for the foundation; and

(2) use the income generated from investments in the endowment fund that are attributable to payments made under this section to fund programs to support the educational needs of children in public schools in the vicinity of Los Alamos.

(d) REPORT.—Not later than March 1, 2002, the Secretary shall submit to the congressional defense committees a report setting forth the following:

(1) An evaluation of the requirements for continued payments beyond fiscal year 2003 into the endowment fund of the foundation referred to in subsection (a) to enable the foundation to meet the goals of the Department to support the recruitment and retention of staff at the Los Alamos National Laboratory.

(2) The Secretary's recommendations for any further support beyond fiscal year 2002 directly to the Los Alamos Public Schools.

TITLE XXXV—MARITIME ADMINISTRATION

SEC. 3301. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS FOR FISCAL YEAR 2002.

Funds are hereby authorized to be appropriated for fiscal year 2002, to be available without fiscal year limitation if so provided in appropriations Acts, for the use of the Department of Transportation for the Maritime Administration as follows:

(1) For expenses necessary for operations and training activities, $89,654,000.

(2) For expenses under the loan guarantee program authorized by title XI of the Merchant Marine Act, 1936 (46 App. U.S.C. 1271 et seq.), $103,978,000, of which—

(A) $100,000,000 is for the cost (as defined in section 502(5) of the Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990 (2 U.S.C. 641a(5))) of loan guarantees under the program; and

(B) $3,978,000 is for administrative expenses related to loan guarantee commitments under the program.

(3) For expenses to dispose of obsolete vessels in the National Defense Reserve Fleet, $10,000,000.

SEC. 3302. DEFINE "WAR RISKS" TO VESSELS TO INCLUDE COSTS OF DESTRUCTION, NATIONA LBILIZATION, AND DEPRIVATION OF THE VESSELS.

Section 1201(c) of the Merchant Marine Act, 1936 (46 App. U.S.C. 1281(c)) is amended to read as follows:

"(c) The term ‘war risks’ includes to such extent as the Secretary may determine—

(1) all or any part of any loss that is excluded from marine insurance coverage under a ‘free of capture or seizure’ clause, or under analogous clauses; and

(2) losses from hostile acts, including confiscation, expropriation, nationalization, or deprivation.”.

SEC. 3303. HOLDING OBLIGOR’S CASH AS COLLATERAL UNDER TITLE XI OF MERCHANT MARINE ACT, 1936.

Title XI of the Merchant Marine Act, 1936 (46 App. U.S.C. 1271 et seq.) is amended by inserting after section 1108 the following:

"SEC. 1109. DEPOSIT FUND.

“(a) ESTABLISHMENT OF DEPOSIT FUND.—There is established in the Treasury a deposit fund for the purposes of this section. The Secretary may, in accordance with an agreement under subsection (b), deposit into and hold in the deposit fund cash belonging to an obligor to serve as collateral for a guarantee under this title made with respect to the obligor.

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary and an obligor shall enter into a deposit fund established by subsection (a) to govern the deposit, withdrawal, retention, use, and reinvestment of cash of the obligor held in the deposit fund established by subsection (a).

(2) TERMS.—The agreement shall contain such terms and conditions as are required under this section and such additional terms as are considered necessary by the Secretary to be necessary to protect fully the interests of the United States.

(3) SECURITY INTEREST OF UNITED STATES.—The agreement shall include terms that grant to the United States a security interest in all amounts deposited into the deposit fund.

(4) INVESTMENT.—The Secretary may invest and reinvest any part of the amounts in the deposit fund in accordance with the terms of the agreement.

(5) CASH BALANCES.—Cash balances of the deposit fund in excess of current requirements shall be maintained in a form of uninvested funds and the Secretary of the Treasury shall pay interest on these funds.

“(d) WITHDRAWALS.—

"(1) IN GENERAL.—The cash deposited into the deposit fund established by subsection (a) may not be withdrawn without the consent of the Secretary.

“(2) USE OF INCOME.—Subject to paragraph (3), the Secretary may pay any income earned on cash of an obligor deposited into the deposit fund in accordance with the terms of the agreement with the obligor under subsection (b).

“(3) RETENTION AGAINST DEFAULT.—The Secretary may retain and offset any or all of the cash of an obligor in the deposit fund, and any income realized thereon, as part of the Secretary’s recovery against the obligor in case of a default by the obligor on an obligation.”.

Amend the title so as to read: “A bill to authorize appropriations for fiscal year 2002 for military activities of the Department of Defense, for military construction, and for defense activities of the Department of Energy, to prescribe personnel strengths for such fiscal year for the Armed Forces, and for other purposes.”

The CHAIRMAN. No amendment to the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute is in order except those specified in the previous order of the House.

Except as specified in that order, each amendment in the report shall be considered only in the order placed at the desk, may be offered only by a Member designated on the amendment or a designee, shall be considered read, and shall not be subject to a demand for a division of the question.

Each amendment shall be debateable for 10 minutes, equally divided and controlled by the proponent and an opponent of the amendment, and shall not be subject to amendment, except that the chairman and ranking minority member each may offer one pro forma amendment for the purpose of further debate on any pending amendment.

It shall be in order at any time for the chairman of the Committee on Armed Services or his designee to offer amendments not earlier disposed of or germane modifications of any such amendment.

The amendments en bloc shall be considered read, except that modifications shall be reported, shall be debateable for 10 minutes, equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member, or their designees.

The original proponent of an amendment included in the amendments en bloc may insert a statement in the report of the bill shall be in order except pursuant to a subsequent order of the House.

AMENDMENTS EN BLOC OFFERED BY MR. STUMP

Mr. STUMP. Madam Chairman, I offer the amendments en bloc made in order by order of the House of September 19, 2001, the Chairman. The Clerk will designate the amendments en bloc.

The text of the amendments en bloc is as follows:

Amendments En Bloc offered by Mr. STUMP: consisting of the amendments originaly proposed by the following Members and made in order by the order of the House of September 19, 2001:

Mr. Hall of Ohio,

Amendment Offered by Mr. HALL OF OHIO:

At the end of title II (page 43, after line 9), insert the following new subtitle:

Subtitle E—Air Force Science and Technology for the 21st Century

SEC. 251. SHORT TITLE.

This subtitle may be cited as the “Air Force Science and Technology for the 21st Century Act”.

SEC. 252. SCIENCE AND TECHNOLOGY INVESTMENT AND DEVELOPMENT PLAN.

(a) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that the Secretary of the Air Force should carry out each of the following:

(1) Continue and improve efforts to ensure that—

(A) The Air Force science and technology community is represented, and the recommendations of the community are considered, at all levels of program planning and budgetary decisionmaking within the Air Force;

(B) Advocacy for science and technology development is institutionalized across all levels of Air Force management in a manner that is not dependent on individuals; and

(C) The value of Air Force science and technology development is made increasingly apparent to the warfighters, by linking the needs of those warfighters with decisions on science and technology development;

(2) Complete and adopt a policy directive that provides for changes in how the Air Force makes budgetary and nonbudgetary decisions with respect to its science and technology development programs and how it carries out those programs.

(3) At least once every five years, conduct a review of the long-term challenges and short-term objectives of the Air Force science and technology programs that is consistent with the review specified in section 252 of the Floyd D. Dwyer National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2001 (as enacted into law by Public Law 106–398; 114 Stat. 1654A–46).

(b) The Secretary may—

(b) Ensure that development and science and technology planning and investment activities are carried out for future space warfighting systems and for future non-space warfighting systems in an integrated manner.
lows:
(A) Coordinating the needs of Air Force warfighters with decisions on science and technology development.
(B) Giving input into the establishment of priorities among science and technology programs.
(C) Analyzing Air Force capability options for the allocation of Air Force resources.
(D) Developing concepts for technology, warfighting systems, and operations with which the Air Force can achieve its critical future goals.
(E) Evaluating concepts for systems and operations that leverage technology across Air Force organizational boundaries.
(F) Ensuring that a “system-of-systems” approach is being carried out across the lines on which the Air Force is structured.
(G) Utilizing existing analysis capabilities within the Air Force product centers in a collaborative manner.

(2) Not later than one year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary of the Air Force shall submit to Congress a report on the implementation of the planning process required by paragraph (1). The report shall include the annual amount that the Secretary considers necessary to carry out paragraph (1).

SEC. 253. STUDY AND REPORT ON EFFECTIVE-NESS OF AIR FORCE SCIENCE AND TECHNOLOGY PROGRAM CHANGES.

(a) REQUIREMENT.—The Secretary of the Air Force, in cooperation with the National Research Council of the National Academy of Sciences, shall carry out a study to determine how the changes to the Air Force science and technology program implemented during the past two years affect the future capability of the Air Force.

(b) MATTERS STUDIED.—(1) The study shall independently review and assess whether such changes as a whole are sufficient to:
(A) Cooperate the needs of Air Force warfighters with decisions on science and technology investments and the establishment of priorities among different science and technology programs.
(B) Whether the designation of the command structure provides for a sufficiently senior advocate of science and technology to the coordination, focus, and content of the science and technology program.
(C) Whether the implementation of section 292 of the Floyd D. Spence National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2001 (as enacted into law by Public Law 106–398; 114 Stat. 1854A–46) is effective to identify the basis for the appropriate science and technology program top line and investment portfolio.
(D) Whether the implementation of section 227 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2004 (as enacted into law by Public Law 108–136; 118 Stat. 1225) is effective to assure that an adequate budget top line is set.
(E) Whether the revised development planning process is effective to aid in the coordination of the needs of the Air Force warfighters with decisions on science and technology programs.
(F) Whether changes in the Air Force science and technology budget advocate are effective to assure that an adequate budget top line is set.

(b) FUNDING.—Of the amount made available pursuant to subsection (a) for research, development, test, and evaluation for the Air Force, $950,000 shall be available only to carry out this section.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. MANZULLO: At the end of subtitle A of title VIII (page 268, after line 9), insert the following new section:

SEC. 8. INCREASE OF ASSISTANCE LIMITATION REGARDING PROCUREMENT TECHNICAL ASSISTANCE PROGRAMS.

Section 241(a)(1) of title 10, United States Code, is amended by striking “$300,000” and inserting “$600,000.”

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. LANTOS: Strike section 1044 (page 281 beginning line 6), relating to a sense of the Congress regarding Kwajalein Atoll.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. SPRAT: At the end of title X (page 307, after line 20), insert the following new section:

SEC. 10. LEASING OF NAVY SHIPS FOR UNIVERSITY NATIONAL OCEANOGRAPHIC LABORATORY SYSTEM.

Subsection (g) of section 2667 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:
“(3) Paragraph (1) does not apply to a renewal or extension of a lease by the Secretary of the Navy with a selected institution for operation of a ship within the University National Oceanographic Laboratory System if, under the lease, each of the following applies:
(A) Use of the ship is restricted to federally supported research programs and to non-Federal uses under specific conditions with approval by the Secretary of the Navy.
(B) Because of the anticipated value to the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration of research and training that will result from the ship’s operation, no monetary lease payments are required from the lessee under the initial lease or under any renewal or extension.
(C) The lessee is responsible for the safety of the ship, its crew, and scientific personnel aboard.”.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. STRAUGHS: At the end of subtitle E of title X (page 307, after line 20), insert the following new section:

SEC. 11. SENSE OF CONGRESS REGARDING Continued United States Commitment to Restoring Lafayette Escadrille Memorial, Marnes-la-Coquette, France.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds the following:
(1) The Lafayette Escadrille, an aviation squadron within the French Lafayette Flying Corps, was formed April 16, 1916.
(2) The Lafayette Escadrille consisted of aviators from the United States who volunteered to fight for the people of France during World War I.
(3) 265 volunteers from the United States served in the Lafayette Flying Corps, completing 3,000 combat sorties and amassing nearly 200 victories.
(4) The Lafayette Escadrille won 4 Legions of Honor, 7 Medailles Militaires, and 31 citations, each with a Croix de Guerre.
(5) In 1918, command of the Lafayette Escadrille was transferred to the United States, where the Lafayette Escadrille became the combat air force of the United States.
(6) In 1921, a Franco-American committee was organized to locate and resting place for the 68 United States aviators who lost their lives flying for France during World War I.
(7) The Lafayette Escadrille Memorial was dedicated on July 4, 1928, in honor of all United States aviators who flew for France during World War I.
(8) The Lafayette Escadrille Memorial Foundation, located in the United States and in France, was founded by Nelson Cromwell in 1930 and endowed with a $1,500,000 trust for the maintenance and upkeep of the Lafayette Escadrille Memorial.
(9) Environmental conditions have contributed to structural damage to, and the overall degradation of, the Lafayette Escadrille Memorial, preventing the holding of memorial services inside the crypt.
(10) The French Government has pledged funds to support a restoration of the Lafayette Escadrille Memorial.
(11) The Lafayette Escadrille Memorial should be restored to its original beauty to honor all United States aviators who flew for France during World War I and to demonstrate the respect of the United States for the sacrifices made by all Americans who have served our Nation and our allies.

(b) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that the United States should continue to honor its commitment to the United States aviators who lost their lives flying for France during World War I by appropriating sufficient funds to restore the Lafayette Escadrille Memorial in Marnes-la-Coquette, France.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. WELDON OF PENNSYLVANIA: At the end of title X (page 307, after line 20), insert the following new section:

(1) by inserting “and designation” after “establishment”; and

(2) by adding, at the end of the preceding sentence, the following sentence: “The program of firefighter assistance administered by the Office shall be known as the ‘Floyd D. Spence Memorial Domestic Defense …’.”

(b) Sense of Congress.—The firefighters assistance grant program authorized by section 33 of the Federal Fire Prevention and Control Act of 1974 (15 U.S.C. 2229) is recognized as having served as an effective device in Congress’ ongoing effort to address the needs of America’s fire service, and it is the sense of Congress that the program should be reauthorized for fiscal year 2003 and subsequent fiscal years at a higher level of funding.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. EHRlich:

At the end of title XII (page 331, after line 15), insert the following new section:

SEC. 12. AUTHORITY FOR EMPLOYEES OF FEDERAL GOVERNMENT CONTRACTORS TO ACCOMPANY CHEMICAL WEAPONS INSPECTION TEAMS AT GOVERNMENT-OWNED FACILITIES.

(a) Authority to Conduct Inspections.—Section 303 of the Chemical Weapons Convention Implementation Act of 1998 (as contained in Public Law 105–277; 112 Stat. 2881–873; 22 U.S.C. 6723) is amended in subsection (b)(2) by inserting “(and in the case of inspection of Federal Government-owned facilities, such designation may include employees of a contractor with the Federal Government)” after “Federal Government”.

(b) Procedures for Inspections.—Section 304 of such Act (22 U.S.C. 6724) is amended in subsection (c) by inserting “or contractor with the Federal Government” after “Federal Government”.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. KIRK:

At the end of subtitle B of title XXVIII (page 394, after line 20), insert the following new section:

SEC. 285. USE OF BUILDINGS ON MILITARY INSTALLATIONS AND RESERVE COMPONENT FACILITIES AS POLLING PLACES.

(a) Use of Military Installations Authorized.—Section 2670 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

“(b) Use as Polling Places.—(1) Notwithstanding chapter 29 of title 18 (including sections 592 and 593 of such title), the Secretary of a military department may make a building located on a military installation under the jurisdiction of the Secretary available for use as a polling place in any Federal, State, or local election for public office notwithstanding chapter 29 of title 18 (including sections 592 and 593 of such title).”:

(2) The heading of such section is amended to read as follows:

“§ 2670. Buildings on military installations: use by American National Red Cross and as polling places”.

(3) The item relating to such section in the table of sections at the beginning of chapter 159 of such title is amended to read as follows:

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. BOYD:

At the end of part III of subtitle D of title XXVIII (page 414, after line 7), insert the following new section:

SEC. 286. ADDITIONAL EXTENSION OF DEMONSTRATION PROJECT FOR PUBLIC WORKS, AND UTILITY SERVICES FROM LOCAL GOVERNMENT AGENCIES.

Section 816(c) of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1995 (Public Law 103–337; 108 Stat. 2320), as added by section 2873 of the Strom Thurmond National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1999 (Public Law 105–261; 112 Stat. 2225), is amended by inserting before the period at the end the following: “, with regard to fire- fighter Chaplains and police sections and September 30, 2003, with regard to other services described in subsection (a)”.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. LEWIS OF CALIFORNIA:

At the end of title XXVIII (page 427, after line 7), insert the following new section:

SEC. 2866. CONVEYANCE OF AVIATION EASEMENTS, FORMER NORTON AIR FORCE BASE, CALIFORNIA.

The Administrator of General Services shall convey, without consideration, to the San Bernardino Valley Development Authority for the redevelopment authority for former Norton Air Force Base, California) two avigation easements (identified as APN 299–331–08 and APN 299–232–08) held by the Federal Government.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to the order of the House of Wednesday, September 19, 2001, the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. STUMP) and the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. SKElTON) each will control 5 minutes.

Mr. STUMP. Madam Chairman, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. STEARNS).

Mr. STEARNS. Madam Chairman, I wish to thank the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. STUMP), my good friend, for incorporating my amendments as part of the manager’s amendment in this defense authorization bill.

My first amendment concerns the de- locating state of the Lafayette-Escadrielle Memorial. It is basically a sense of the Congress resolution. This memorial honors all U.S. aviators who flew for France in World War I. I laid a wreath at the memorial on June 17 with 40 of my colleagues in attendance to commemorate the 90th anniversary of the squadron’s formation.

Seven Americans originally formed the squadron. When the escadrielle transferred to the U.S. command in 1918, 265 American volunteers had served in the French air service with 180 of those having flown combat missions. In all, the escadrielle flew 3,000 combat sorties, amassing nearly 200 victories. In fact, the escadrielle became the birth of the United States Air Force.

A joint French/American committee was organized at the end of World War I to locate a final resting place for those Americans who died there. With land donated by the French Government, the Lafayette-Escadrielle Memorial was dedicated on July 4, 1928. It is essentially an American cemetery with 68 Americans who gave their lives interred in the memorial.

Sadly, this memorial is in desperate need of repair. The structure sits in a meadow with a high water table. Heavy rains flood the tomb, exacerbated by the poor functioning drains and water.
The Lafayette-Escadrille Memorial Foundation was endowed originally with a $1.5 million trust fund for its maintenance by a bequest that has been exhausted. The French Government has pledged funds and has begun working in earnest to repair this memorial. I want to point out that the foundation is an American not-for-profit and is subject to IRS regulations governing not-for-profit activities.

Madam Chairman, our men and women in uniform, present and future and past, we hold those who served in the highest regard; and they should be remembered for their sacrifices. I have received letters from descendents of members of the Lafayette-Escadrille offering their support, and I have received calls from persons only wanting to see the memorial restored.

The second amendment that I offer and is part of the en bloc amendment highlights the need for the Department of Defense to realign its focus on using energy efficient technologies. I feel that the Department of Defense should take into account the recommendations contained in the report by the Defense Science Board entitled “More Capable War-Fighting Through Reduced Fuel Burden.”

The report states: “Military fuel consumption for aircraft, ships, ground vehicles and facilities make the Department of Defense the single largest consumer of petroleum in America, perhaps in the world. Naval forces depend on a large fleet of ships, and with it, the need for fuel. The Air Force spends approximately 85 percent of its fuel budget to deliver, by airborne tankers, just 6 percent of its annual jet fuel usage.”

It is without a doubt that fuel cost is directly associated with military readiness. By no means, however, should the DOD sacrifice performance requirements to save a few gallons of fuel. Obviously, including energy efficiency as a requirement under DOD’s procurement process and investing in new improvements through its S&T community is a significant step in the direction of curtailing energy consumption in a responsible manner, while maintaining the performance and overall military capability.

The DSB report states “that the largest element of the total fuel cost in DOD is the cost of delivery.” Improving on daily use of fuel for both combat and support units could reduce the logistics need while allowing units to deploy and remain in the field for a longer sustained period of time.

Undoubtedly, a component in the war against terrorism will be the use of lighter, more mobile forces. So, it is imperative that we improve our logistics capability and reduce the logistics tail.” As the DSB report notes, “efficiency is a strong component of agility.”

So I again want to thank the chairman, the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. STUMP), for allowing me to incorporate these into the manager’s amendment, and I urge the adoption of the manager’s amendment.

Mr. WELDON. Madam Chairman, I might say that we have seen these amendments on our side, and we fully agree and approve of them.

Madam Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. STUMP. Madam Chairman, I move to strike the last word, and I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. WELDON).

Mr. WELDON of Pennsylvania. Madam Chairman, I want to thank our distinguished chairman and ranking member for their support of three amendments in this en bloc amendment that I introduced. The first one I think is perhaps the most important that I want to talk about.

Two years ago I made a recommendation to our leadership that we establish a task force that would integrate our domestic response network, our fire and EMS community, with our military. That task force recommendation was accepted and the panel that was established became known as the Advisory Panel to Assess Domestic Response Capabilities for Terrorism Involving Weapons of Mass Destruction, more commonly known as the Gilmore Commission, because the Gilmore Commission has been chaired by Governor Gilmore of Virginia.

This commission for the past 2 years has been looking at ways that we can further integrate our military and the response of our first responders, our fire and EMS personnel.

Madam Chairman, this commission has done tremendous work in giving us recommendations to assist our domestic defenders who just this past week were the first responders at the World Trade Center.

In fact, Madam Chairman, I went to New York on Friday. I went up on Friday for a very specific reason. The Gilmore Commission, the task force we are extending for 2 years, had members from all aspects of our urban response network: the military, domestic fire service.

The representative of the New York City Fire Department in charge of Special Operations Command was Ray Downey. He was killed. Ray Downey was one of the special operations function for the New York City department. He was a member of the commission that we are going to extend for 2 more years in this amendment. He was the point person to help us understand the military urban response community and civilian response community could interact.

He was making specific recommendations. Madam Chairman, that have helped us better integrate our two networks. In fact, one of the results of their recommendations was that initiative last year that is, in fact, the subject of a second amendment that we have accepted. That amendment deals with the recommendation by the Congress that we accept the firefighter assistance program that we first put into place last year.

Last year it was $100 million. We had $300 billion of requests across the country. We are asking for an extension of that program, and the amendment here says that Congress should renew the authorization for that program.

That program, again, was a bipartisan effort. The gentleman from Maryland (Mr. HOYER) and the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. PASCRELL), Congressmen on our side, including the chairman of our Committee on Armed Services and our ranking member, the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. SKELTON), were the reason why that recommendation became law.

This year we are in the process of giving out $100 million of direct grants through FEMA to the local fire and emergency services groups across the country, including the New York City Fire Department.

So the recommendation in the second amendment is to continue this program and to name it after the honorable Floyd Spence, without whose acceptance, as our committee chairman, it would not have become law. That does not diminish the work by other colleagues, the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. SKELTON), the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. HOYER), the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. PASCRELL), the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. STUMP), and a whole host of others from the Congress.

But we are naming it after Floyd Spence because he was the one, as chair of the committee, that allowed this program to move forward.

Madam Chairman, these two amendments are critically important because they both deal with events of the past week. They also show that this committee was far in front of the Congress and the American people in preparing for the kind of incident that we saw occur on Tuesday.

That kind of foresight is what this Committee on Armed Services has been Small business participation in government procurement is dropping, particularly for Defense Department contracts. For new contracts worth over $25,000, the number of small business opportunities dropped from a high of 70,088 in 1995 to 41,075 in 1999. Even for sales opportunities to the federal government of $2,500 or less, which used to be reserved for small business, the number of small purchase actions from federal agencies declined from nearly 10 million in 1995 to 3.8 million in 2000. One solution to this problem is to enhance the role of Procurement Technical Assistance Centers (PTACs).

During the 1998 Congress, created local PTACs around the country to increase small business participation in defense procurement. Modeled after Small Business Development Centers (SBDCs) run by the Small Business Administration (SBA), these centers offer free advice and help to small businesses both in educating them on how to get involved in government procurement and also how to obtain contracts. Most of the PTACs are co-located in a local higher education institution.

About half of the funding for most of the PTACs comes from Defense Logistics Agency (DLA). The remainder comes from the state government and/or the local host such as the community college. States currently have a choice: they can either ask for up to $300,000 to run a state-wide program or regional centers can ask for up to $150,000 to run a program locally. Some states have decided to run a statewide program in order to have continuity of service throughout the state. However, some states have allowed regional or city PTACs to operate.

Currently, 15 states have regional or city PTACs that receive an excess of $300,000. For example, Pennsylvania received nearly $1.2 million in DLA funding to run eight regional PTACs. Similarly, Michigan received just over $1 million to run eight regional PTACs. The current funding formula penalizes states like my home state of Illinois who have opted out of the current assistance services throughout the state but also serve a large population.

My amendment, which was also introduced as a clean bill (H.R. 2689) supported by all the Illinois Members of the House Armed Services Committee, increases the DLA grant match to states that run a state-wide PTAC program so that they would be able to receive up to $600,000 in funding.

In recent years, Congress has made efforts to reverse the decline in Air Force S&T development by appropriating funds greater than requested in the President’s budget request. Congress also has legislated legislation into the S&T program to ensure that it remains a high priority. The 2001 Department of Defense Appropriations Act (Public Law 107–66) increased the S&T budget to $1.8 billion, the highest level in more than a decade.

The National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2002, enacted in 2000, called for a comprehensive review of the long-term challenges and short-term objectives of the Air Force S&T program. My amendment requires the National Academy of Sciences’ National Research Council (NRC) to study the effectiveness of these changes and make recommendations for long-term changes in the strategy of the S&T program. The amendment authorizes $850,000 for the study from the funds currently authorized under section 201(3) of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2002.

My amendment also expresses the sense of Congress that the Air Force should continue and improve on the recent actions taken by the Air Force to solidify and institutionalize the S&T management and budget decisions process; formally adopt the policy directives to implement those actions; conduct at least once every five years a review of long-term challenges and short-term objectives of the Air Force science and technology program; and ensure the integration of science and technology development for space and nonspace warfighting systems.

In light of recent events, it is important to note that military experts believe that maintaining the United States’ technological superiority is key to fighting terrorism. However, numerous studies have suggested that the investment in science is inadequate to meet the needs of fighting the future emerging threats including threats to homeland security. My amendment is aimed at helping the Air Force develop the necessary technology to respond flexibly and quickly to a wide range of future threats, including terrorism.

I strongly urge the adoption of the amendment.

Mr. SKELETON, Madam Chairwoman, I must blush the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. The amendment is on the amendments en bloc offered by the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. STUMP).

The amendments en bloc were agreed to.

AMENDMENTS EN BLOC OFFERED BY MR. STUMP.—Mr. STUMP, Madam Chairwoman, I offer amendments on bloc made in order by the House yesterday.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will designate the amendments en bloc:

The text of the amendments en bloc is as follows:

Amendments en bloc offered by Mr. STUMP: consisting of the amendments originally proposed by the following Members and made in order by the order of the House of September 19, 2001: Mr. OSE, Mr. BERERUER, Mr. UNDERHILL, Mr. ATKINSON, Mr. VELÁZQUEZ, No. 46 offered by Mr. STEARNS, Mrs. TAUCHER, No. 70 offered by Mr. WELDON of Pennsylvania, No. 78 offered by Mr. WELDON of Pennsylvania, and Ms. KELLY.

Amendment offered by Mr. OSE:

In section 341, relating to assistance to local educational agencies that benefit dependents of members of the Armed Forces and Department of Defense civilian employees (page 64, beginning line 20), strike subsections (a) and (b) and insert the following new subsections:

(a) CONTINUATION OF DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE PROGRAM FOR FISCAL YEAR 2002.—Of the amount authorized to be appropriated pursuant to section 301(5) for operation and maintenance for Defense-wide activities—

(1) $30,000,000 shall be available only for the purpose of providing educational assistance to local educational agencies; and

(2) $1,000,000 shall be available only for the purpose of making payments to local educational agencies to assist such agencies in adjusting to reductions in the number of military dependent students as a result of the closure or realignment of military installations, as provided in section 386(b) of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1993 (Public Law 102–484; 20 U.S.C. 7703 note).

(b) NOTIFICATION.—Not later than June 30, 2002, the Secretary of Defense shall notify each local educational agency that is eligible for assistance or a payment under subsection (a) of—

(1) that agency’s eligibility for the assistance or payment; and

(2) the amount of the assistance or payment for which that agency is eligible.

Amendment Offered by Mr. BERERUER:

At the end of subtitle B of title V (page 115, after line 18), insert the following new section:

SEC. 520. PREPARATION FOR, PARTICIPATION IN, AND CONDUCT OF ATHLETIC COMPETITIONS BY THE NATIONAL GUARD AND MEMBERS OF THE NATIONAL GUARD.

(a) ATHLETIC AND SMALL ARMS COMPETITIONS.—Section 504 of title 32, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

(c) CONDUCT OF AND PARTICIPATION IN CERTAIN COMPETITIONS.—(1) Under regulations prescribed by the Secretary of Defense, members and units of the National Guard may conduct and compete in a qualifying athletic competition or a small arms competition so long as—

(A) the conduct of, or participation in, the competition does not adversely affect the training or proficiency of a member or unit of the National Guard to perform the military functions of the member or unit;

(B) National Guard personnel will enhance their military skills as a result of conducting or participating in the competition; and

(C) the conduct of or participation in the competition will not result in a significant increase in National Guard costs.

(2) Facilities and equipment of the National Guard, including military property and vehicles described in section 508(c) of this title, may be used in connection with the conduct of or participation in a qualifying athletic competition or a small arms competition under paragraph (1).

Amendment Offered by Mr. UNDERHILL:

The amendment is further amended by adding after subsection (c), as added by subsection (a) of this section, the following new subsections:

(d) AVAILABILITY OF FUNDS.—(1) Subject to paragraph (2) and such limitations as may be enacted in appropriations Acts and such regulations as the Secretary of Defense may prescribe, amounts appropriated for the National Guard may be used to cover—

(A) the costs of conducting or participating in a qualifying athletic competition or a small arms competition under subsection (c); and
CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE

September 20, 2001

17448

"(B) the expenses of members of the National Guard under subsection (a)(3), including expenses of attendance and participation fees, travel, per diem, clothing, equipment, and related expenses.

(2) Not more than $2,500,000 may be obligated or expended in any fiscal year under subsection (c).

"(e) QUALIFYING ATHLETIC COMPETITION DEFINED.—In this section, the term ‘qualifying athletic competition’ means a competition in athletic events that require skills relevant to military duties or involve aspects of physical fitness that are evaluated by the armed forces in determining whether a member of the National Guard is fit for military duty."

(c) STYLISTIC AMENDMENTS.—Such section is further amended—

(1) in subsection (a), by inserting "AUTHORIZED ACTIVITIES.—" after ‘‘(a)’’; and

(2) in the heading of such section, by inserting "AUTHORIZED LOCATIONS.—" after ‘‘(b)’’.

(d) CONFORMING AND CLERICAL AMENDMENTS.—(1) Subsection (a) of such section is amended—

(A) in paragraph (1), by inserting ‘‘and’’ after the semicolon;

(B) in paragraph (2), by striking ‘‘or’’ and inserting ‘‘and’’ in lieu thereof;

(C) by striking paragraph (3).

(2) The heading of such section is amended to read—

"504. National Guard schools; small arms competitions; athletic competitions’’.

(3) The item relating to section 504 in the table of sections at the beginning of chapter 5 of title 10, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"504. National Guard schools; small arms competitions; athletic competitions’’.

At the end of section 522 (page 186, after line 5), insert the following new subsection:

(f) STATE DEFINED.—In this section, the term ‘‘State’’ includes the District of Columbia, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, Guam, the Virgin Islands, and American Samoa.

Amendment offered by Mr. GILCHREST:

At the end of title V (page 187, after line 12), insert the following new section:

SEC. 504. REPORT ON HEALTH AND DISABILITY BENEFITS FOR PRE-ACCESSION TRAINING AND EDUCATION PROGRAMS.

(a) STUDY.—The Secretary of Defense shall conduct a review of the health and disability benefit programs available to recruits and officer candidates engaged in training, education, or other types of programs conducted by the Secretary of a military department.

(b) REPORT.—Not later than March 1, 2002, the Secretary shall submit to the Committee on Armed Services of the Senate and the Committee on Armed Services of the House of Representatives a report on the findings of the review. The report shall include the following with respect to persons described in subsection (a):

(1) A statement of the process and detailed procedures followed by each of the Armed Forces to provide health care and disability benefits to all such persons injured in training, education, or other types of programs conducted by the Secretary of a military department.

(2) Information on the number of total cases of such persons requiring health care and disability benefits, and the total number and percentage of cases of average and available value of health care and disability benefits provided under the authority for each source of benefits available to those persons.

(3) A discussion of the issues regarding health and disability benefits for such persons that are encountered by the Secretary during the review conducted with individuals who have received those benefits.

(4) A discussion of the necessity for legislative changes and specific legislative proposals needed to improve the benefits provided those persons.

Amendment offered by Mr. STRICKLAND:

At the end of title V (page 187, after line 12), insert the following new section:

SEC. 505. REQUIREMENT TO PROVIDE APPROPRIATE ARTICLES OF CLOTHING FOR VETERANS UPON PARTICIPATING IN FUNERAL HONOR DETAILS.

Section 1491(d) of title 10, United States Code, is amended—

(1) by inserting ‘‘(1)’’ before ‘‘To provide’’;

(2) by redesignating paragraphs (1) and (2) as subparagraphs (A) and (B), respectively; and

(3) by adding, at the end of the foregoing:

"(2)(A) Upon a showing of financial need and subject to subparagraph (B), the Secretary of a military department shall provide articles of clothing described in subparagraph (C) to an organization who participate in funeral honors details. Any such showing of financial need shall be made in such manner as the Secretary may require.

"(B) The Secretary concerned may provide articles of clothing to an organization (or members of an organization) under this paragraph only if the Secretary determines that participation of that organization or its members in a funeral honors detail is advantageous to the performance of that mission and meets the performance standards set by the Secretary for that mission.

"(C) Articles of clothing referred to in subparagraph (A) are articles of clothing determined by the Secretary concerned to be appropriate as a civilian uniform for persons participating in a funeral honors detail who are not authorized to wear the uniform of any of the armed forces.

Amendment offered by Ms. VELÁZQUEZ:

At the end of subtitle A of title VIII (page 248, after line 9), insert the following new section:

SEC. 806. STUDY OF CONTRACT CONSOLIDATIONS.

The Secretary of Defense, in consultation with the Comptroller General of the United States, shall develop a database to track contract consolidations which consolidate 2 or more contracts previously awarded by the Department of Defense to small business concerns. The database shall contain, at a minimum, the following:

(1) for cooperation with Russia on disposition as soon as practicable of nuclear weapons or other weapons of mass destruction, including delivery systems.

(b) CONTENT OF PLAN.—The plan required by subsection (a) shall include the following:

(1) Specific goals and measurable objectives for the programs that are designed to carry out the objectives specified in paragraphs (1) and (2) of subsection (a).

(2) Criteria for success for those programs and a strategy for eventual termination of United States contributions to those programs and assumption of the ongoing support of those programs by Russia.
A description of any administrative and organizational changes necessary to improve the coordination and effectiveness of the programs to be implemented under the plan.

An estimate of the cost of carrying out those programs.

Caspar W. Weinberger. — In developing the plan required by subsection (a), the President shall consult with Russia regarding the practicality of various options.

Caspar W. Weinberger. — In developing the plan required by subsection (a), the President shall consult with the majority and minority leadership of the appropriate committees of Congress.

Amendment No. 70 offered by Mr. Weldon of Pennsylvania (page 307, after line 20), insert the following new section:

SEC. 1048. TWO-YEAR EXTENSION OF ADVISORY BOARD TO PROVIDE DOMESTIC RESPONSIVE CAPABILITIES FOR TERRORISM INVOLVING WEAPONS OF MASS DESTRUCTION.

(1) in subsection (d), by striking “2001” and inserting “2003”; and

(2) in subsection (l), by striking “three years” and inserting “five years”.

Amendment No. 78 offered by Mr. Weldon of Pennsylvania. At the end of title X (page 307, after line 20), insert the following new section:

SEC. 1048. ACTION TO PROMOTE NATIONAL DEFENSE FEATURES PROGRAM.

(a) FINDINGS.—The Congress finds the following:

(1) The National Defense Features program, which is funded from the National Defense Sealift Fund established by section 2218 of title 10, United States Code, is a constituent element of the defense policy of the United States intended to provide essential sealift capacity in emergencies, to maintain a resource of highly trained merchant seamen, and to implement the National Defense Features program would provide significant benefits both for the United States and for allied nations during military contingencies.

(3) For the United States and nations allied with the United States to realize these benefits, it is essential that vessels built under that program enjoy commercial opportunities in peacetime on trade routes between the United States and allied nations and that those vessels not be excluded from such opportunities through restrictive trade practices.

(4) The failure of vessels built, or to be built, under the National Defense Features program to obtain employment as common carriers in emergency situations in the particular sector of any trade route in the foreign commerce of the United States for which they are designed to operate, together with the failure of those seamen to obtain employment on such trade routes, evidences the existence of restrictive trade practices.

(b) ACTION TO PROMOTE PROGRAM.—In any case in which the Secretary of Defense finds the existence of the conditions determined by subsection (a)(4) to prove the existence of restrictive trade practices, the Secretary shall certify the case to the Federal Maritime Commission, thereupon, in consultation with the Secretary, shall take action to counteract such practices, utilizing all remedies available under section 1002(e)(1) of the Foreign Shipping Practices Act of 1988 (46 U.S.C. App. 1710a).

Amendment offered by Mrs. Kelly: At the end of title XXVIII (page 427, after line 7), insert the following new section:

SEC. 2866. REPORT ON OPTIONS TO PROMOTE ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT IN COMMUNITY ADJACENT TO UNITED STATES MILITARY ACADEMY, NEW YORK.

(a) REPORT REQUIRED.—Not later than February 1, 2002, the Secretary of the Army shall submit to Congress a report evaluating various options by which the Secretary may promote economic development in the Village of Highland Falls, New York, which is located adjacent to the United States Military Academy.

(b) SPECIFIC CONSIDERATION OF CERTAIN OPTIONS.—Among the options evaluated under subsection (a), the Secretary shall specifically address the following:

(1) The fee simple conveyance of real property under the jurisdiction of the Secretary in the Town of Orange, New York, to the Village, without consideration, for the purpose of permitting the Village to use the property to promote economic development.

(2) Use by the Secretary of the authority under section 2567 of title 10, United States Code, to make non-excess real property under the jurisdiction of the Secretary available to the Village for such purpose.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to the order of the House of Wednesday, September 19, 2001, the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. Stump) and the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. Skelton) each will control 5 minutes.

Mr. Stump. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. Gilchrest).

Mr. Gilchrest. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman from Arizona for yielding time to me.

I would just like to make three quick comments.

One, I think it is vital for the defense authorization bill to go through this House today, and I would hope that we could pass it with the unanimous votes of the Members on both sides of the aisle.

We also come here today to express our condolences to those families and victims of this cruel tragedy; praise, with as much compassion and encouragement to those people who have responded, and in particular the firefighters, the medical teams, the police and all of emergency response organizations around the world, all those volunteers that have contributed to that effort, as well as the non-governmental organizations like people of religious faiths, and also certainly the Red Cross.

In essence the long-term victory will come in this battle when we as Members of Congress and the Nation come together to focus our attention and our hearts to those tragedies that have been brought to America, and with our allies to ensure that we know that we need to make this worldwide effort to replace arrogance with humility, to replace ignorance with knowledge, and to replace dogma with tolerance. This is what is needed. I think, in fact, this is probably what will happen.

On a smaller scale, in the defense authorization bill, I am glad that the chairman of the committee has basically included this in bloc amendment in H.R. 2386, in the Defense Authorization Act, to ask the Secretary of Defense to study the effects that have not been resolved yet, dealing with our citizens that attend our military academies, to determine whether or not they can be in the same category as men and women in the regular armed services as far as compensation is concerned for disabilities that they incurred while they were at the military academies.

Mr. Skelton. Mr. Chairman, I re- serve the balance of my time.

Mr. Stump. Madam Chairman, I yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from California (Mr. Hunter).

Mr. Hunter. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me, and once again I thank the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. Stump) and the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. Skelton) for their leadership in bringing Democrats and Republicans together on this bill at this time of national emergency.

Mr. Chairman, I thought I would just let my colleagues know, or give them the broader context within which we are working with this defense bill.

Ronald Reagan in 1985 had a very major defense bill. That was the height of the buildup, the rebuilding of America's Armed Forces. That bill in today's dollars was $145 billion. Today's bill is a little over $340 billion. That means that even in constant dollars that we have placed in this bill so far, we are still $100 billion under Ronald Reagan's defense bill of 1985, when we had a gross national product which was much smaller.

So it is important for Americans, both in uniform and out of uniform, to understand that today we are asking our people to do more with less. We do not have the force structure that we had during Desert Storm. We had the Mr. Stump. Mr. Chairman, defense buildup used in Desert Storm. In those days, we had 18 Army divisions. We have cut those 18 Army divisions down to 10. We had about 546 Navy ships. We have cut that down to 316. We are going down. We have almost lost our on deck wings. We have cut that down to 13.

Beyond that, we have piled up some shortages in munitions, equipment, spare parts, and other vital areas. So this effort is not the finish. This is the start of a rebalancing of national defense. I hope we work together in a bipartisan way to add some more things that we now need as we go through the conference with the other body and finally get a bill on the President’s desk.

Mr. SKELTON. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HUNTER. I yield to the gentleman from Missouri.

Mr. SKELTON. Mr. Chairman, I would just like to add that in recent comments that I made to the CSIS, I touched on the area of air power. It appears to me that through the years we have done a pretty good job in the area of fighter aircraft and air-to-ground aircraft, but we have not done what we should have done in the area of bomber support.

If one looks at the geography, particularly of the Asian Pacific area, hopefully nothing will ever come to pass where we will need long-range bomber efforts. However, I think this is an area that the gentleman and I have explored together over a period of years, that we must look to the future of the B-2 fleet, not only keeping it up to date, but even hopefully some day adding to that fleet.

Mr. HUNTER. I think the gentleman is absolutely right, Mr. Chairman. Once again, we made more bombers in one day in San Diego in 1943 than the entire B-2 fleet, and expecting that small fleet of 21 aircraft to do the job they are going to have to do in future years I think is a strain. I thank the gentleman for his remarks. I would hope that we would continue to build that fleet.

Mr. SKELTON. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, let me for a moment tell the Members that this base at Whiteman Air Force base in my district, which has the 509th bomb wing, which is a very historic wing and has the B-2s, is in superb condition and ready, should they ever be called upon, now or at any time in the future.

I was with them yesterday and had the opportunity to visit with them. I am so very, very proud of the young men and young women who not only fly but who maintain that fleet.

I have a question of the gentleman from California, Mr. Chairman. I would ask the gentleman, in his opinion, would he tell us the importance of continuing to expand the bomber fleet of the United States?

Mr. HUNTER. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SKELTON. I yield to the gentleman from California.

Mr. HUNTER. Mr. Chairman, I would be happy to, and I notice my good friend the gentleman from Washington (Mr. Dicks) has just arrived, who is also an expert on long-range strike and deep strike.

Very simply, if we look at the experience of Desert Storm, I think that carries with it the importance of having deep strike aircraft but also deep strike aircraft with stealth. We analyzed at the time the two B-2 bombers, for example, which do not have to have flight cover. Because they are able to avoid and evade radar, they do not have as much air-to-air refueling or support from other U.S. aircraft, and they can hit as many targets, two aircraft can hit as many targets as 75 conventional aircraft.

At a time when we have cut our air wings from 24 to 13, our tactical aircraft, it is important to have that leverage capability. We saw this in Kosovo, where we hit multiple targets with a single B-2 mission, hit multiple targets and destroyed a much larger percentage of the target availability than other conventional planes. So this is a leverage capability. It leverages the thing Americans are greatest at, which is technology.

If we couple that with precision munitions, where, for example, into that bridge we send that one precision munition into a brick and knock that entire bridge out, because we are able to hit one precise spot, that is better than dropping 2,000 bombs on it with older conventional aircraft.

So leverage, technology, and precision munitions leverage is what we get from deep strike fighter capability like the B-2. I would be happy to hear the comments of the gentleman from Washington.

Mr. SKELTON. Mr. Chairman, I might point out that the aircraft, the B-2, in the Kosovo conflict, and of course they are still capable, the pilots flew out of Whiteman Air Force Base, had refuelings, bombed the targets with great precision, and returned with refuelings, came back home. In one case, the pilot went back and was greeted by his wife. She said, please cut the grass.

In other words, they do superb work from one base, and they are worldwide. I thank the gentleman.

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SKELTON. I yield to the gentleman from Washington.

Mr. DICKS. Mr. Chairman, I would just say to the gentleman from California and my good friend, the gentleman from Missouri, who have been two of the stalwarts in the House of Representatives for advocacy for the B-2, we still have work to do. I know that the gentleman from California (Mr. Hunter) had included some of the upgrades that are necessary to improve upon this capability.

But to think about this one revolutionary fact, in Kosovo the B-2 carried 162,000 pounds bombs called JDAMs, near precision weapons, almost precision.

And the interesting thing is, like 3 percent of the fixed targets, like 3 percent of the targets, they took out 33 percent of the fixed targets. Now, we see even another revolution of being able to put eighty 500-pound JDAMs on these airplanes and they would be able to hit 80 separate fixed targets on one sortie, and two of them would be 160, obviously.

The other thing that is interesting, just in the last few days there has been a successful test; and I know the gentleman from California is aware of this, of being able, from one of these airplanes, to hit a moving target. One of the best problems has been the inability to hit moving targets. This target was moving at 30 miles an hour, it was an F-16, and they used this weapon and they were able to hit the moving target. Now, this will be a major breakthrough as we pursue this.

I just appreciate all the work of these two gentlemen. We have all worked together. The B-2 is certainly the premier conventional weapon in our arsenal today.

Mr. SKELTON. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from California (Mrs. Tauscher).

Mrs. TAUSCHER. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Chairman, I would like to thank the leadership for allowing my amendment to be considered during the floor debate of the defense authorization bill. In January of this year, a bipartisan task force, chaired former Senator Howard Baker and former White House Counsel Lloyd Cutler stated that the most urgent unmet national security threat to the United States is the danger that weapons of mass destruction in Russia can be stolen and sold to terrorists or hostile nations and used against American troops abroad or citizens at home.

The report concluded that the national security benefits to the United States from securing or neutralizing the equivalent of more than 800,000 existing potential nuclear weapons would constitute the highest return on investment of any current U.S. national security defense program.

To address this critically important concern, I am offering a simple amendment requiring the President to submit a strategic plan to Congress on how to dispose of excess nuclear material that Russia does not retain in its arsenal and to prevent the outflow from Russia of nuclear weapons expertise. I am offering this amendment because I believe it is critical that we have an overall strategic road map of how we plan to deal with the growing threat of weapons of mass destruction.

During the past week we make our nonproliferation programs even more important. If we can assure that excess nuclear material in Russia does not flow into the wrong hands, we can reduce the chances that a nuclear weapon used by a hostile state or a terrorist group can be used against us. I was pleased to work with the chairman, the gentleman from Arizona (Mr.
Mr. Chairman, I respectfully urge my colleagues to support this amendment. Mr. SKELTON. Mr. Chairman, reclaiming my time, I thank the gentleman from California.

Mr. Chairman, we have examined the amendments en bloc, and we agree thereto on this side.

Ms. VELAZQUEZ. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the en bloc amendment and to thank Chairman STUPM and Ranking Democratic Member SKELTON for agreeing to include my amendment to H.R. 2586, the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2002. My amendment requires that the Department of Defense work with the Comptroller General to develop a database to track the consolidation of contracts that displace two or more small businesses, and that the Department use this database to generate reports to Congress. This amendment will, for the first time, require that the Department collect empirical data so that Congress can determine the true effect of these consolidated contracts on small businesses and so that we can determine if any savings to the taxpayer are accruing as a result of this practice.

Since World War II, when small businesses were called upon to assist with the war effort, small businesses have greatly contributed to our nation’s diverse industrial base, and have been adept at providing goods and services for the changing needs of the government. Federal agencies have often found that corporate America was too large to react quickly and efficiently. The unique niche that small businesses filled, and continue to fill, has allowed for a competitive Federal contracting process. We all know that a competitive Federal marketplace leads to true cost savings and higher quality—a great return for the American taxpayer.

Any discussion of the Federal marketplace, leads to a discussion of the Department of Defense’s role, as the Department of Defense has historically accounted for 65 percent of Federal contracts. However, for the last several years, the Small Business Committee has noted that the Department’s contract opportunities available to small businesses have decreased. It is this declining number of small business opportunities by the Department and other large agencies, that inspired Committee Democrats to start grading agency’s small business efforts.

For the past two years, myself and my Democratic colleagues on the Committee on Small Business, have released what we call the “Scorecard.” The “Scorecard” is an evaluation of the small business achievements of 21 Federal agencies, compared to their statutory goals.

The results of these two studies have been disturbing. Last year, the overall government grade was a “C”–. This year, although the overall grade is also a “C,” the Department of Defense is slipping further into the “D” range.

The Department of Defense stood out both last year and this year, as an exceptionally poor performer as it relates to doing business with our nation’s small businesses. This year, the Department had the lowest grade of all agencies: a “D.” This is important, in light of the fact that the Department of Defense historically accounts for 65 percent of Federal procurement. When the Department of Defense fails to make the grade, it is unlikely that the rest of the government will make the grade either.

Small businesses are still not getting their fair share of the Department’s contracts—from either a dollars or a numbers standpoint. Despite an increase in procurement volume from $119.7 billion in 1999 to $126.2 billion in 2000, the Department did not achieve its small business goal, or its women-owned business goal. The Department of Defense had a 23 percent goal for small businesses and achieved only 21.41 percent. This translates to over $2 billion in contracts that should have gone to small businesses, but didn’t. Women-owned businesses, however, had a goal of 5 percent for women-owned businesses, but achieved 2 percent. This translates to nearly $4 billion in contracts that should have gone to women-owned businesses, but didn’t.

From 1997 to 2000, the numbers of contracts awarded to small businesses by the Department have decreased by over 41 percent. The numbers of contracts to minority-owned businesses have decreased by over 55 percent. The number of contracts awarded to women-owned businesses have decreased by over 43 percent. This declining trend in the number of contracts translates directly to the number of opportunities available to small businesses to sell their products and services directly to their government.

Both the 1999 study and the 2000 study demonstrate that little progress is being made as far as agency’s small business goal achievements. In fact, the 2000 study highlights that the plight of small businesses is getting worse—small businesses have fewer opportunities for participation in the Federal marketplace than before.

To begin to correct this problem, my amendment was included in the en bloc amendment. A similar amendment was accepted into the House version of last year’s Defense Authorization but failed to be included in the final Conference Report signed by the President. The amendment requires that the Department of Defense work with the Comptroller General to develop a database for tracking and annual reporting to Congress of contract awards that result in the displacement of two or more small businesses.

What remained in Public Law 106–398, the Floyed D. Spence National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2001 regarding contract bundling, was a requirement in Section 834 that the Secretary of Defense conduct a study on contract bundling. “Contract bundling” is the consolidation of two or more contracts performed by small businesses, into one contract that is too large for small business participation as prime contractors. In seven hearings since 1993, the Committee has heard a very compelling case by numerous small businesses that they are losing untold millions of dollars in business as a result of this practice. The Department of Defense contends that through contract bundling, they are able to save money, yet not one dollar has been shown to have been saved. Instead, the numbers of Defense contracts available to small businesses are declining every year, and the anecdotal information is overwhelming that small businesses are able to provide higher quality products at prices that result in savings to the taxpayer.

Despite the statutory requirement contained in Section 834 of Public Law 106–398 that required the Department of Defense to conduct a comprehensive study on contract bundling, the Committee on Small Business received a letter dated April 17, 2001 from Deputy Secretary of Defense Paul Wolfowitz. The letter states, in part, “the Department is unable to conduct the comprehensive study required by Section 834 because the General Service Administration’s Federal Procurement Data System—the repository of all Federal contracting information—only began collecting data on contract bundling in October of 2000. The letter goes on to reference a study performed by the Department under contract with the Logistics Management Institute (LMI).

The requirement to perform the study was not an “optional” requirement for the Department to follow—it was part of the agency’s authorizing statute. It was mandated by Congress that the study be performed. To have an agency essentially refuse to comply with its authorizing statute is, to me, unheard of. The Department knew the study was required by statute. If essential data was not being collected, the Department should have started collecting data in order to comply. The taxpayers deserve to know and we have an obligation to tell them—whether the consolidation of contracts that eliminate small businesses save them money.

As previously stated, the letter sent by Deputy Secretary Wolfowitz refers to a study on contract bundling performed by LMI. This study is the direct result of a hearing held by the Committee on Small Business in November of 1999. It was undertaken not by an independent auditor, but by the Logistics Management Institute (LMI)—a non-profit organization that is funded 50 percent by the Department of Defense. LMI performed a case review, rather than the study that the Department promised, of 10 contracts out of a pool of 718 contracts—barely 1 percent—not a statistically valid sampling by anyone’s definition. LMI concluded that “savings (as a result of contract bundling) are based on intuition. This means that people THINK they are savings money, but it has not been proven with empirical data.” Clearly, given the mind-set of the Department of Defense’s contracting officers, much more needs to be done.

In order to get something done, in last year’s Small Business Reauthorization, we were successful in getting former-Chairman Jim Talent’s bundling data collection bill language into the Reauthorization. Unfortunately, that language has a flaw. By using the definition of “contract bundling” contained in the Small Business Act, it only narrowly looks at those bundled contracts determined as such by the Department, leaving the vast majority of consolidations out of the database’s scope. This deprives us of critical information necessary to solve this problem.
My amendment requires that the Department of Defense work with the Comptroller General to collect data on a much broader definition. As the General Accounting Office continues to report that no data can be collected, we believe that the Department should work with the Comptroller General to ensure that the data that is ultimately collected will provide useful information. This amendment will cover all contracts in which two or more small businesses are placed as prime contractors. At a minimum, the database will include the names and addresses of the small businesses that are displaced, the rationale for consolidating the contracts, and the monetary benefits projected to be realized by the consolidation. This database will give Congress very important information on contract consolidations that we can use to not only protect small businesses, but also ensure the taxpayer that their money is being saved. Once we start getting reports from this database, we will learn what happens to those small businesses who are displaced. Do they go out of business? Do they become subcontractors? Are taxpayer dollars actually being saved with these contract consolidations that displace small businesses? There is an important distinction between streamlining Federal contracting processes for streamlining's sake and streamlining for a reason. We know now that small businesses are being displaced—effectively streamlined right out of business. What we haven't seen is taxpayer savings.

The impact of these contract consolidations on the small business community has been enormous, and has flowed-down to the economies of local communities. There is no doubt that the need to collect empirical data more than warrants any inconvenience this could place on the Department to collect this important and useful information.

For Congress to determine the depth of the problem of contract bundling, we need all of the facts. It is imperative that empirical data is collected that will allow Congress to determine what, if any, statutory changes need to be made. The Federal acquisition system is a big, complex system that is fair to small businesses, and ensures that taxpayers receive the very best value for their dollars. My amendment is the first step in making that determination, and it is a common-sense solution. As a direct result of the data collected by the requirements of my amendment, the Federal procurement system will be one that provides true savings to the taxpayer. Further, small businesses in communities across the country will have increased access to Federal prime contracts.

Again, I thank Chairman STUMP and Ranking Democratic Member SKELTON for agreeing to include my amendment in the en bloc so Congress can finally get some comprehensive information on how contract consolidations have affected our Nation's small businesses. Mr. Chairman, this Member rises in strong support of the bipartisan amendment which he is offering with the distinguished gentleman from Rhode Island, Mr. LANGEVIN. The Bereuter-Langevin Amendment would authorize the use of appropriated funds for meetings of the National Guard Bureau to conduct and participate in athletic competitions and small arms competitions in conjunction with required training.

Mr. Chairman, the National Guard provides the men and women serving their country with the opportunity to hone their service-related skills in competitive events as the National Guard participates in events such as biathlons in Vermont; the Leapfest in Rhode Island; and marksmanship competitions in North Little Rock, Arkansas. Indeed, the opportunity to participate in these competitions provides incentives for National Guard recruitment and retention. Additionally, the competitions bring National Guard members together with Active Duty military personnel which builds better appreciation among the various components and overall force cohesion.

However, the playing field for the National Guard is not level with that for Active Duty military members. Currently, state National Guard units can use only non-appropriated funds to cover operating expenses for the events and for health, pay, and personal expenses for participating unit members. Because the non-appropriated funds are very limited, National Guard members must often pay out of their own pockets for expenses, including medical coverage. For Active Duty military participants, appropriated funds cover all expenses participants incur.

By authorizing the use of appropriated funds in addition to the non-appropriated funds, National Guard members participating in competitions could receive full coverage for health, pay, and personal expenses. This is particularly important for National Guard members who cannot afford medical expenses stemming from possible injuries. Additionally, the National Guard units would face fewer budget constraints when continuing to host these valuable competitions and when sending teams and individuals into competition.

Finally, it is important to note that H.R. 1705 does not recommend appropriation levels nor does the legislation create participation incentives for National Guard members which are greater than those incentives for Active Duty military.

Mr. Chairman, this Member urges his colleagues to vote for the Bereuter-Langevin amendment as an important way to show support for the men and women serving their country in our National Guard.

Mr. WELDON of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, Congress authorized the original National Defense Features (NDF) program in the mid-1990s in response to a report by a report by the Department of Defense describing a shortage of sealift capacity during military contingencies. The NDF program was considered to be the most cost-effective way to augment the substantial investment that was being made in new sealift ships by the Navy.

Since then, Congress has authorized and appropriated funds to install special defense features in new commercial vessels to be built in the shipyards of the United States. Last year, for example, at my request and as a result of the leadership of our colleague from New Jersey, Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN, the House included in the National Defense Authorization Act for FY 2001 a provision that would expand the Secretary of Defense's ability to fund military useful projects under the NDF program.

I am pleased to report that our amendment was included in the final legislation signed into law by the President.

When the NDF program was launched, Congress expected that our allies, particularly Japan, would find mutual defense benefits in promoting the program. Under one project that has received considerable attention in the press and has the support of domestic maritime labor, ten commercial vessels would be built in the United States based on a design funded and approved by DARPA's Maritime Technology Program. These vessels would normally operate in the Japan-United States vehicle trade, which is at present entirely dominated by Japanese carriers. Quite importantly, the vessels would be crewed by American merchant seamen, a group vital to maintaining the readiness of our military to handle contingencies abroad.

Notwithstanding expressions of support by very senior officials in our government, this expectation has not been realized. As a result, the hopes of our commercial shipbuilders and merchant mariners have not been realized, and our military planners have not been able to rely upon NDF vessels to support their contingencies operations. Much to my disappointment, the Government of Japan apparently continues to take the position that the decision to employ NDF ships is strictly a matter for the commercial judgment of Japanese vehicle manufacturing and shipping companies. The vehicle manufacturers, which operate under closely inter-locking relationships with the Japanese vehicle carriers, continue to insist that the NDF program is a matter between the two respective governments since it addresses defense.

In view of the U.S. role in providing security for our Far East allies, it hardly seems appropriate that defense concerns expressed by our government should not have been met with a more positive response. Our government's repeated representations to the Japanese government have fallen to the ground as if the NDF program was without military value, a position that is contradicted by two U.S. Navy reports on the NDF program. Taking note of the extensive military collaboration of our two governments, which is based on the considerable material benefits on Japan, this is not the position that Congress should have expected.

The position that this matter is purely commercial in nature rather than governmental in character is not defensible. Japan, like other nations, supports its merchant marine with financial assistance, including direct construction loans at artificially low rates of interest. This is not the mark of a purely private industry operating under purely commercial conditions.

Based on all the evidence gathered to date, it would appear that the real reason our carriers are effectively being excluded from this market is the Japanese kereitsu system of doing business. In short, a fleet of U.S.-built and operated ships, commercially competitive and providing significant defense value to both nations, have apparently no chance to break through the economic fence encircling the Japanese vehicle trade.

As I explained to my colleagues last year, I continue to hope that the Government of Japan will recognize the importance of ultimately see the merit of supporting the NDF program, especially given the longstanding support of the Department of Defense. But if the past is any guide, we may anticipate further intransigence. Therefore, I am joining today with my colleague from New Jersey, Mr. FRELINGHUYSEN, in introducing a bill that we intend to push later this year if we do not see any movement on the part of the Government of Japan. The bill—which is identical to the bill we introduced late last year in the form of H.R. 5488—is very straightforward. It says: if the Federal Maritime Commission finds that vessels built under the NDF program are unable to obtain employment in a particular trade route in the foreign commerce of the United States for which they are designed to operate, and if that sector of the trade route has been dominated historically by citizens of an allied nation, then the Commission shall take action to counteract the restrictive trade practices that have led to this situation.

As I pointed out last year, it should not be necessary to enact legislation to encourage support for a program so self-evidently in the mutual security interests of our two nations. I trust that the Government of Japan will support the new consultative mechanism so that the NDF program can begin the much needed recapitalization of our aging Ready Reserve Force.

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. STUMP. Mr. Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore (Mr. LATOURETTE). All time for debate on the amendments has expired.

The question is on the amendments en bloc offered by the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. STUMP).

The amendments en bloc were agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN pro tempore. No further amendments are in order. Under the order of the House of yesterday, the Committee rises.

Accordingly, the Committee rose; and the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. WALSH) having assumed the chair, Mr. LATOURETTE, Chairman pro tempore of the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union, reported that that Committee, having had under consideration the bill (H.R. 2586) to authorize appropriations for fiscal year 2002 for military activities of the Department of Defense, to prescribe military personnel strengths for fiscal year 2002, and for other purposes, had come to no resolution thereon.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. STUMP. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks and to include extraneous material on H.R. 2586.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. LATOURETTE). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Arizona?

There was no objection.

REPORT ON H.R. 2904, MILITARY CONSTRUCTION APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 2002

Mr. HOBSH, from the Committee on Appropriations, submitted a privileged report (Rept. No. 107–207) on the bill (H.R. 2904) making appropriations for military construction, family housing, and base realignment and closure for the Department of Defense for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2002, and for other purposes, which was referred to the Union Calendar and ordered to be printed.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 1, rule XXI, all points of order are reserved on the bill.

APPOINTMENT OF CONFEREES ON H.R. 2647, LEGISLATIVE BRANCH APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 2002

Mr. TAYLOR of North Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H.R. 2647) making appropriations for the Legislative Branch for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2002, and for other purposes, with a Senate amendment thereto, disagree to the Senate amendment, and agree to the conference asked by the Senate.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from North Carolina? The Chair hears none and, without objection, appoints the following conferees: Messrs. CALLAHAN, ROGERS, FRELINGHUYSEN, LATHAM, WICKER, WAMP, WARRINER, MOSES, DOOLITTLE, YOUNG of Florida, VISCLOSKY, EDWARDS, PASTOR, CLYBURN, Ms. ROYBAL-ALLARD, and Mr. OBERY.

There was no objection.

APPOINTMENT OF CONFEREES ON H.R. 2217, DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR AND RELATED AGENCIES APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 2002

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H.R. 2217) making appropriations for the Department of the Interior and related agencies for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2002, and for other purposes, with a Senate amendment thereto, disagree to the Senate amendment, and agree to the conference asked by the Senate.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York? The Chair hears none and, without objection, appoints the following conferees: Messrs. SKELTON, O'NEILL, VISENK, ROSENTHAL, WICKER, WAMP, Mrs. EMERSON, SUNUNU, GOODE, DERHOLT, YOUNG of Florida, ROYBAL-ALLARD, and Mr. OBERY.

There was no objection.

APPOINTMENT OF CONFEREES ON H.R. 2311, ENERGY AND WATER DEVELOPMENT APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 2002

Mr. WALSH. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H.R. 2311) making appropriations for energy and water development for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2002, and for other purposes, with a Senate amendment thereto, disagree to the Senate amendment, and agree to the conference asked by the Senate.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from New York? The Chair hears none and, without objection, appoints the following conferees: Messrs. CALLAHAN, ROGERS, FRELINGHUYSEN, LATHAM, WICKER, WAMP, WARRINER, MOSES, SUNUNU, GOODE, DERHOLT, YOUNG of Florida, ROYBAL-ALLARD, and Mr. OBERY.

There was no objection.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair desires to make an announcement.

After consultation with the majority and minority leaders, and with their consent and approval, the Chair announces that tonight when the two Houses meet in joint session to hear an address by the President of the United States, only the doors immediately opposite the Speaker and those on his left and right will be opened.
CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE  September 20, 2001

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a question of the privileges of the House. As recently as July 14, and then again on August 12, 1994, on the Treasury-Postal, appropriation bill and then on the Agriculture appropriation bill, just such a blue slip was requested and granted. This is another indication of the difficulty of wanting to move legislation but understanding that there is a process constitutionally required.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. RANGEL. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I agree with the chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means that this is an important piece of legislation, but there are constitutional prerogatives that provide that the Chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means originate this kind of legislation.

Mr. Speaker, in view of the merits of the legislation, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. HALL), one of the original sponsors in the House of the legislation such as myself and other Members.

Mr. HALL of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from New York (Mr. RANGEL) for yielding me the time. I do not intend to oppose the resolution. The reason why the chairman of the committee has opposed it, as I understand it, is more technical and procedural. It does not prejudice, I think, the views of the House on this issue because he does not oppose the substantive part of it.

The substantive part of the bill which they are sending back to the Senate has to do with blood diamonds. That’s work with the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. WOLF), the gentleman from New York (Mr. Houghton), the gentleman from New York (Mr. Range), and a lot of Members in a bipartisan way, as well as Senator Feingold, Senator Durbin, Senator Gregg, and Senators from California.

Blood diamonds are diamonds that are used to really fund wars in Africa, particularly in Sierra Leone, and Angola, and in the Congo. For years they have been using diamonds, either through the smuggled ways, or through a lot of different ways that they find themselves coming into America to fund the kind of wars that are going on; particularly in Sierra Leone, where a group of 500 ragtag rebels were able to increase their small little army to about 25,000 with very sophisticated training, drugs, guns, et cetera. They terrorized all of Sierra Leone. They have done the same thing in Angola. It has been used in Liberia in many different ways.

Why should we be interested in this as Americans? The reason why we should be interested in it is that Americans buy 65 percent of all the diamonds in the world every year. A lot of these blood diamonds are coming into our country. We essentially are funding wars in Africa. It is my understanding just in the last couple of days, I have been told through press accounts and through intelligence services, that even bin Laden has used the services of conflict diamonds to fund some of his activities in the world.

We have great bipartisan support on this, both Republicans and Democrats, in both the House and the Senate. We have 100 of the top human rights organizations that are firmly behind this legislation. And, for the first time, the diamond merchants, the diamond industry, is 100 percent behind this bill.

We were hoping that this would be accepted in this particular way. The gentleman from California (Mr. Thomas), the chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means, he does not want to deal with it in this way. He wants to deal with it in another way, as I understand.

I hope that he and the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. Wolf) and I can have a colloquy on it from the standpoint of what they intend to do with this bill in their committee; and with that, I would urge the House to take up this issue soon, in a manner which is acceptable to the Committee on Ways and Means. And I would ask the gentleman from California, the Speaker pro tempore, what his intentions are with the substance of the bill that he objects to.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will yield, the gentleman from New York (Mr. Range) is here for the question, and the substance of the bill has been under discussion at the United Nations level on

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a question of the privileges of the House. I offer a privileged resolution (H. Res. 240) and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. Res. 240

Resolved, That the amendment of the Senate to the bill H.R. 2500 entitled the “Departments of Commerce, Justice, and State, the Judiciary, and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 2002”, in the opinion of this House, contravenes the first clause of the seventh section of the first article of the Constitution of the United States and is an infringement of the privileges of this House and that such bill be respectfully returned to the Senate with a message communicating this resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The resolution raises a question of the privileges of the House.

The gentleman from California (Mr. Thomas) and the gentleman from New York (Mr. Range) each will be recognized for 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from California (Mr. Thomas).

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

As was indicated by the content of the resolution, the resolution is necessary to return to the Senate, unfortunately, the Commerce-State-Justice appropriations bill because there is a provision, section 404 of the Senate amendment with importation bans on diamonds from certain African countries that are used to finance rebel causes, the underlying constitutional question of the Constitution’s statement that all bills for raising revenue shall originate in the House of Representatives transcends any particular issue, no matter the merits of a particular issue. Therefore, I am asking the House that it insist on its constitutional prerogative as the sole originator of revenue measures, notwithstanding the aspects of any particular desired piece of legislation.

In addition to that, Mr. Speaker, I would indicate that this is not necessarily, unfortunately, a novel or new conflict between the House and the Senate. As recently as July 14, and then again on August 12, 1994, on the Treasury-Postal, appropriation bill and then on the Agriculture appropriation bill, just such a blue slip was requested and granted. This is another indication of the difficulty of wanting to move legislation but understanding that there is a process constitutionally required.

And I would ask the gentleman from California, the Speaker pro tempore, what his intentions are with the substance of the bill that he objects to.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will yield, the gentleman from New York (Mr. Range) is here for the question, and the substance of the bill has been under discussion at the United Nations level on an international discussion. The United States Trade Representative has indicated that a unilateral sanction by any particular country is in violation of World Trade Organization rules, but an ability to move under the United Nations’ auspices is not.

We would obviously all like to see an international agreement under which these kinds of diamonds could be banned. If, in fact, observing that process it does not appear that it is going to reach any reasonable or positive conclusion in the timeframe within which we could act legislatively, I will tell the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. HALL), and the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. WOLF) as well, that we would then bring up legislation.

The gentleman from New York (Mr. Houghton) already has a bill in the hopper. We would examine that bill, if necessary, make the appropriate changes and look forward to moving that bill out of committee in a timely fashion.

Mr. HALL of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, when the chairman says a timely fashion, I hope that he is meaning before the end of the year or before we adjourn.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Speaker, definitely a timely fashion means before the session of Congress ends; and it seems to me that if, in fact, the committee moves, it should not be difficult to deal with the scheduling to bring it to the floor, if that is the appropriate thing to do on the basis of leadership's decision.

Mr. HALL of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the gentleman's answer. I think it is a good answer. I look forward to seeing it in the bill soon. I think the longer that we keep this piece of legislation from passing in this Congress the more kinds of civil wars we are going to see in Africa; and it is just horrendous, when you see these people, how they have had their lives terrorized.

Americans can help Africa, it is very interesting, through a piece of legislation, by being very careful through the kind of diamonds they buy in America. Mr. THOMAS, Mr. Speaker, it is my pleasure to yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. WOLF).

Mr. WOLF. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the chairman for agreeing to bring this up.

The reason this is so important is that many of these groups who are being funded from these diamonds are really connected to all of the disreputable groups that are around the world. The passage of this legislation, one, will save the diamond industry, particularly in New York City and other places, may very well collapse because I think there may be a boycott against it. Secondly, the opportunity to bring about a lot of good whereby people will no longer have their arms cut off or limbs cut off. There are indications that the RUF in Sierra Leone, Charles Taylor in Liberia, have been connected with other terrorist groups around the world and were even together earlier this year meeting and agreeing and talking, and the resources of this may very well be used by terrorists and many others around the world.

Mr. HOLY. Mr. Speaker, I called Senator Craig from New Hampshire, and he was very gracious and said he would attempt to work this out. He is committed to doing this. Hopefully we can resolve this issue whereby it will be worked out, the conference on Commerce, State, Justice can be appointed, which has a lot of counterrorism money, lot of money with regard to the Justice Department and other areas, INS, money with regard to the State Department, embassy security, diplomatic security, we can move ahead.

So with the gentleman from Ohio's (Mr. HALL) promise to move it as a freestanding bill, hopefully the Senate can resolve that issue; and I want to thank my friend from Ohio (Mr. HALL) for his faithfulness on this issue and thank the gentleman from California (Mr. THOMAS) for his commitment.

Mr. RANGEL. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume. I just want to give assurances to the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. WOLF) and the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. HALL) that I will be working with Mr. Houghton and the gentleman from California (Mr. THOMAS), the chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means, not only on the legislation but on our trade ambassador to make certain that he is giving this a priority.

When it reaches the point that we can meet together, see where we are and then if we do not get the type of assurance that we are seeking, then you can depend on me working with the committee and the chairman to see that this is done.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Speaker, it is my pleasure to yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from California (Mr. Dreier), the chairman of the Committee on Rules.

Mr. DREIER. Mr. Speaker, I thank my friend from Bakersfield, California (Mr. Thomas), for yielding me time; and I would like to congratulate the chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means and the gentleman from New York (Mr. Range), the ranking minority member of that group.

This concern was first raised to my attention by the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. HALL) of the Committee on Rules late one night; and we have been trying since that time when he, the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. Wolf), and I discussed this, to move ahead.

I would simply like to congratulate the leadership of the committee on Ways and Means for addressing this very important human rights issue, which I believe can see successful resolution, and will look forward to the progress that is made.

I thank my friends for bringing this to our attention and for the work they have done on it.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time, and I move the previous question on the resolution.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. LATOURETTE). The question is on the resolution.

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

RECESS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 12 of rule I, the Chair declares the House in recess until approximately 8:40 p.m. for the purpose of receiving in joint session the President of the United States.

Accordingly (at 4 o'clock and 7 minutes p.m.), the House stood in recess until approximately 8:40 p.m.

AFTER RECESS

The recess having expired, the House was called to order by the Speaker at 8 o'clock and 41 minutes p.m.

FURTHER MESSAGE FROM THE SENATE

A further message from the Senate by Mr. Lundregan, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate has passed with an amendment in which the concurrence of the House is requested, a bill of the House of the following title:

H.R. 2590. An act making appropriations for the Treasury Department, the United States Postal Service, the Executive Office of the President, and certain Independent Agencies, for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2002, and for other purposes.

The message also announced that the Senate insists upon its amendment to the bill (H.R. 2590) “An Act making appropriations for the Treasury Department, the United States Postal Service, the Executive Office of the President, and certain Independent Agencies, for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2002, and for other purposes.” and requests a conference with the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and appoints, Mr. Dorgan, Ms. Mikulski, Ms. Landrieu, Mr. Reid, Mr. Byrd, Mr. Campbell, Mr. Shelby, Mr. DeWine, and Mr. Stevens to be the conferees on the part of the Senate.
ADDRESS TO THE NATION BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES

The PRESIDENT. Thank you all. Please was told.
Mr. Speaker, Mr. President Pro Tempore, Members of Congress, and fellow Americans:
In the normal course of events, Presidents come to this Chamber to report on the state of the Union. Tonight no such report is needed. It has already been delivered by the American people. We have seen it in the courage of passengers who rushed terrorists to save others on the ground, passengers like an exceptional man named Todd Beamer. Please help me welcome his wife, Lisa Beamer, here tonight.

We have seen the state of our Union in the endurance of rescuers working past exhaustion. We have seen the unfurling of flags, the lighting of candles, the giving of blood, the saying of prayers, in English, Hebrew and Arabic. We have seen the decency of a loving and giving people who have made the grief of strangers their own.

And my fellow citizens, for the last 9 days, the entire world has seen for itself the state of our Union, and it is strong.

Tonight we are a country awakened to danger and called to defend freedom. Our grief has turned to anger, and anger to resolution. Whether we bring our enemies to justice or bring justice to our enemies, justice will be done.
I thank the Congress for its leadership at such an important time. All of America was touched on the evening of the tragedy to see Republicans and Democrats joined together on the steps of this Capitol singing "God Bless America." And you did more than sing. You acted, by delivering $66 billion to those who could and should meet the needs of our military.

Speaker Hastert. Minority Leader Gephardt, Majority Leader Daschle and Senator Lott, I thank you for your friendship, for your leadership, and for your service to our country.
And on behalf of the American people, I thank the world for its outpouring of support. America will never

At 9 o'clock and 2 minutes p.m., the Sergeant at Arms, Mr. Wilson Livingood, announced the President of the United States, escorted by the committee of Senators and Representatives, entered the Hall of Representatives and stood at the Clerk's desk.

(Appause, the Members rising.)

The SPEAKER. The Chair appoints as members of the committee on the part of the House to escort the President of the United States into the Chamber:
The gentleman from Texas (Mr. Delay); The gentleman from Oklahoma (Mr. Watts); The gentleman from Missouri (Mr. Gephardt); and The gentleman from Michigan (Mr. Bonior).
The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The President pro tempore of the Senate, at the direction of that body, appoints the following Senators as members of the committee on the part of the Senate to escort the President of the United States into the House Chamber:
The Senator from South Dakota (Mr. Daschle); The Senator from Nevada (Mr. Reid); The Senator from Mississippi (Mr. Lott); and The Senator from Oklahoma (Mr. Nickles).
The Assistant to the Sergeant at Arms announced the Dean of the Diplomatic Corps, His Royal Highness Prince Bandar Bin Sultan Bin Abdul Aziz, Ambassador of the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia.
The Dean of the Diplomatic Corps entered the Hall of the House of Representatives and took the seat reserved for him.
The Assistant to the Sergeant at Arms announced the Chief Justice of the United States and the Associate Justices of the Supreme Court.
The Chief Justice of the United States and the Associate Justices of the Supreme Court entered the Hall of the House of Representatives and took the seats reserved for them in front of the Speaker's rostrum.
The Assistant to the Sergeant at Arms announced the Cabinet of the President of the United States.
The members of the Cabinet of the President of the United States entered the Hall of the House of Representatives and took the seats reserved for them in front of the Speaker's rostrum.

Nor will we forget the citizens of 80 other nations who died with our own: dozens of Pakistanis, more than 130 Israelis, more than 250 citizens of India, men and women from El Salvador, Iran, Mexico and Japan, and hundreds of British citizens. America has no truer friend than Great Britain. Once again we are joined together in a great cause. We are so honored the British Prime Minister has crossed an ocean to show his support for America. Thank you for coming, friend.
On September the 11th, enemies of freedom committed an act of war against our country. Americans have known wars, but for the past 136 years they have been wars on foreign soil, except for one Sunday in 1941. Americans have known the casualties of war, but not at the center of a great city on a peaceful morning. Americans have known surprise attacks, but never before on thousands of civilians. All of this was brought upon us in a single day, and night fell on a different world, a world where freedom itself is under attack.

Americans have many questions tonight. Americans are asking who attacked our country? The evidence we have gathered all points to a collection of loosely affiliated terrorist organizations known as al-Qaida. They are the same murderers indicted for bombing American embassies in Tanzania and Kenya, and responsible for bombing the U.S.S. Cole. Al-Qaida is to terror what the Mafia is to crime. But its goal is not making money. Its goal is remaking the world and imposing its radical beliefs on people everywhere.
The terrorists practice a fringe form of Islamic extremism that has been rejected by Muslim scholars and the vast majority of Muslim clerics, a fringe movement that perverts the peaceful teaching that is Islam. The terrorists direct others to kill Christians and Jews, to kill all Americans, and make no distinctions among military and civilians, including women and children.

This group and its leader, a person named Osama bin Laden, have financed or offered support to many other organizations in different countries, including the Egyptian Islamic Jihad and the Islamic Movement of Uzbekistan. There are thousands of these terrorists in more than 60 countries, and they are rooted in their own nations and neighborhoods and brought to camps in places like Afghanistan where they are trained in the tactics of terror. They are sent back to their homes or they are sent to hide in countries around the world to plot evil and destruction.

The leadership of al-Qaida has great influence in Afghanistan and supports the Taliban regime in controlling most of that country. In Afghanistan, we see al-Qaida’s vision for the world. Afghanistan’s people have been brutalized. Many are starving and many have fled. Women are not allowed to attend school. You can be jailed for owning a television. Religion can be practiced only as their leaders dictate. A man can be jailed in Afghanistan if his beard is not long enough.

The United States respects the people of Afghanistan. After all, we are currently its largest source of humanitarian aid. But we condemn the Taliban regime. It is not only repressing its own people; it is threatening people everywhere by sponsoring and sheltering and supplying terrorists. By aiding and abetting murder, the Taliban regime is committing murder. And tonight, the United States of America makes the following demands on the Taliban:

Deliver to United States authorities all the leaders of al-Qaida who hide in your land. Release all foreign nationals, including American citizens you have unjustly imprisoned. Protect foreign journalists, diplomats, and aid workers in your country. Close immediately and permanently every terrorist training camp in Afghanistan, and hand over every terrorist and every person in their support structure to appropriate authorities. Give the United States full access to terrorist training camps so we can make sure they are no longer operating.

These demands are not open to negotiation or discussion. The Taliban must act, and act immediately. They will hand over the terrorists, or they will share in their fate.

I also want to speak tonight directly to Muslims throughout the world; we respect your faith. It is practiced freely by many millions of Americans, and by millions more in countries that America counts as friends. Its teachings are good and peaceful, and those who commit evil in the name of Allah blaspheme the name of Allah.

The Taliban are traitors to their own faith, trying, in effect, to hijack Islam itself. The enemy of America is not our many Muslim friends; it is not our many Arab friends. Our enemy is a radical network of terrorists, and every government that supports them.

Our war on terror begins with al-Qaida, but it does not end there. It will not end until every terrorist group of global reach has been found, stopped, and defeated.

Americans are asking: Why do they hate us? They hate what they see right here in this Chamber, a democratically elected government. Their leaders are self-appointed. They hate our freedoms, our freedom of religion, our freedom of speech, our freedom to vote and assemble and disagree with each other.

The United States is supporting governments in many Muslim countries, such as Egypt, Saudi Arabia, and Jordan. They want to drive Israel out of the Middle East. They want to drive Christians and Jews out of vast regions of Asia and Africa.

These terrorists kill not merely to end lives, but to disrupt and end a way of life. With every atrocity, they hope that America grows fearful, retreating from the world and forsaking our friends. They stand against us because we stand in their way.

We are not deceived by their pretenses to piety. We have seen their kind before. They are the heirs of all of the murderous ideologies of the 20th century—totalitarianism, fascism, communism, imperialism, and every necessary weapon of war, to the disruption and defeat of the global terror network.

Now this war will not be like the war against Iraq a decade ago, with its decisive liberation of territory and its swift conclusion. It will not look like the air war above Kosovo 2 years ago, where no ground troops were used and not a single American was lost in combat.

Our response involves far more than instant retaliation and isolated strikes. Americans should not expect one battle, but a lengthy campaign, unlike any other we have seen. It may include dramatic strikes visible on TV, and covert operations, secret even in success. We will starve terrorists of funding, turn them one against another, drive them from place to place, until there is no refuge or rest. And we will pursue nations that provide aid or sanctuary to terrorists. By sacrificing human life to justify their twisted tenses to piety. We have seen their communal dreams, all the leaders of al-Qaida who hide in Afghanistan, and hand over every terrorist and every person in their support structure to appropriate authorities. Give the United States full access to terrorist training camps so we can make sure they are no longer operating.

These demands are not open to negotiation or discussion. The Taliban must act, and act immediately. They will hand over the terrorists, or they will share in their fate.

I also want to speak tonight directly to Muslims throughout the world; we respect your faith. It is practiced freely by many millions of Americans, and by millions more in countries that America counts as friends. Its teachings are good and peaceful, and those who commit evil in the name of Allah blaspheme the name of Allah.

The Taliban are traitors to their own faith, trying, in effect, to hijack Islam itself. The enemy of America is not our many Muslim friends; it is not our many Arab friends. Our enemy is a radical network of terrorists, and every government that supports them.

Our war on terror begins with al-Qaida, but it does not end there. It will not end until every terrorist group of global reach has been found, stopped, and defeated.

Americans are asking: Why do they hate us? They hate what they see right here in this Chamber, a democratically elected government. Their leaders are self-appointed. They hate our freedoms, our freedom of religion, our freedom of speech, our freedom to vote and assemble and disagree with each other.

The United States is supporting governments in many Muslim countries, such as Egypt, Saudi Arabia, and Jordan. They want to drive Israel out of the Middle East. They want to drive Christians and Jews out of vast regions of Asia and Africa.

These terrorists kill not merely to end lives, but to disrupt and end a way of life. With every atrocity, they hope that America grows fearful, retreating from the world and forsaking our friends. They stand against us because we stand in their way.

We are not deceived by their pretenses to piety. We have seen their kind before. They are the heirs of all of the murderous ideologies of the 20th century—totalitarianism, fascism, communism, imperialism, and every necessary weapon of war, to the disruption and defeat of the global terror network.

Now this war will not be like the war against Iraq a decade ago, with its decisive liberation of territory and its swift conclusion. It will not look like the air war above Kosovo 2 years ago, where no ground troops were used and not a single American was lost in combat.

Our response involves far more than instant retaliation and isolated strikes. Americans should not expect one battle, but a lengthy campaign, unlike any other we have seen. It may include dramatic strikes visible on TV, and covert operations, secret even in success. We will starve terrorists of funding, turn them one against another, drive them from place to place, until there is no refuge or rest. And we will pursue nations that provide aid or sanctuary to terrorists. By sacrificing human life to justify their twisted tenses to piety. We have seen their

REPORTS OF COMMITTEES ON PUBLIC BILLS AND RESOLUTIONS

Under clause 2 of rule XIII, reports of committees were delivered to the Clerk for printing and reference to the proper calendar, as follows:

Mr. HOBSO: Committee on Appropriations. H.R. 2904. A bill making appropriations for military construction, family housing, and base realignment and closure for the Department of Defense for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2002, and for other purposes (Rept. 107-207). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union.

Mr. YOUNG of Florida: Committee on Appropriations. Report on Suballocation of Budget Allocations for Fiscal Year 2002 (Rept. 107-208). Referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union.

RESOLUTIONS

Mr. LAHODD. Mr. Speaker, I move that the message of the President be referred to the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union.

GOING HIGHEST PRIORITY TO CHILDREN VICTIMIZED BY EVENTS OF SEPTEMBER 11, 2001

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Speaker, again I wish to offer my deepest sympathy and compassion for those who have lost their lives, their loved ones and, as well, who have been injured through the heinous acts of September 11. Now I think it is time for us to come together as Americans and deal with the human tragedy for those who are remaining.

It is very important that we speak to and address the issues dealing with our children. I am delighted to join with almost 30 other cosponsors and my co-chair of the Congressional Children’s Caucus, the gentlewoman from Florida (Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN), to put to the Congress H. Con. Res. 228, which expresses the sense of the Congress to deal with those children who have lost a parent or guardians, or who are returning to a sense of the Congress that the children who have lost a parent or guardian in this horrific tragedy. This important resolution expresses the sense of the Congress that the children who lost one or both parents or a guardian in the September 11, 2001, World Trade Center and Pentagon tragedies (including the aircraft crash in Somerset County, Pennsylvania) should be provided with all necessary assistance, services, and benefits and urges the heads of Federal agencies responsible for providing such assistance, services and benefits to give the highest possible priority to those children.

Mr. Speaker, this resolution is non-controversial. It merely prioritizes the delivery of federal benefits currently available under federal law to children who have lost their parent(s) or guardian in this horrific tragedy. These should include: (1) foster care assistance; (2) adoption assistance; (3) medical, nutritional, and psychological care; (4) educational services; and (5) such additional care or services as may be necessary in light of this tragedy.

Additionally, we urge such agencies, to the maximum extent possible, to take such steps as necessary to ensure that such assistance, services and benefits are provided within 60 days of the date of the determination of the death of the child’s parent or guardian. We urge my colleagues to support this important legislation.

LEAVE OF ABSENCE

By unanimous consent, leave of absence was granted to:

Mr. KIND (at the request of Mr. GEHRDIT) for today on account of medical reasons.

Mr. ORTIZ (at the request of Mr. GEHRDIT) for today on account of medical reasons.

ADJOURNMENT

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, I move that the House do now adjourn.

The motion was agreed to; accordingly (at 8 o’clock and 52 minutes a.m.), the House adjourned until today, Friday, September 21, 2001, at 9 a.m.
TRIBUTE TO JAMES A. MONTJOY
HON. BOB SCHAFFER
OF COLORADO
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 20, 2001

Mr. SCHAFFER. Mr. Speaker, it is an honor to rise today to express gratitude and congratulations to one of Colorado's outstanding public servants, Trinidad Police Chief James A. Montoya, who recently announced his retirement. Chief Montoya is a true professional who has performed his duties with the highest degree of excellence. His leadership as Chief of Police will be greatly missed.

For 23 years James Montoya served as a distinguished public servant carrying out both his personal and professional life with dignity, respect and dedication. His reflections in a recent edition of The Pueblo Chieftain convey the gratefulness James has for being Police Chief. "I want to express my genuine gratitude for the opportunities afforded me during my career with the city of Trinidad. I am proud of the department's many accomplishments and the advancements we've made. I leave a staff genuinely dedicated to the mission, ethics and ideas of policing. I will always consider it a privilege to have served this community," Chief Montoya said.

A constituent of the Fourth Congressional District in Colorado, Chief Montoya not only makes his community proud but also his State and country. He has taken the responsibilities and standards of his job to a higher level and I applaud him. On behalf of the citizens of Colorado, I ask the House to join me in extending congratulations to Chief Montoya on his commendable accomplishments.

BOB BIRD: GENTLEMAN, ADVOCATE, AND FRIEND
HON. MARCY KAPTUR
OF OHIO
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 20, 2001

Ms. KAPTUR. Mr. Speaker, our friends at the other cereal company may think they have something that's "Grreat", but for nearly 25 years, true greatness has been present at General Mills in the form of one outstanding gentleman, Bob Bird. Bob is retiring after more heart-felt skirmishes than some of our greatest generals, and is being feted by friends and colleagues this evening for a career that is worthy of admiration.

From his early days as a copyboy at The New York Post through his years with the Baltimore Sun and then writing for Jack Anderson and Drew Pearson, Bob Bird has had a keen appreciation for news. He went from reporting to creating it during his days with Sargent Shriver at the U.S. Office of Economic Opportunity, then director of governmental relations for the National Center for Resource Recovery, and then with the Senate Subcommittee on Executive Reorganization under Senator Abraham Ribicoff.

Many of our colleagues know Bob Bird from his stellar days with General Mills, where he has worked to represent one of our Nation's finest food companies in a most responsible and successful fashion. In particular, Bob's efforts on behalf of General Mills to support food assistance programs to critically at risk women, infants, and children, have earned him the respect and praise of colleagues, of food program advocates, and respected members of the nutrition community. Acting always as a true professional, no one could doubt that this gentleman of good humor was always acting in an honorable and forthright fashion.

Bob likes to mention that a lesson he learned early in his career is that it is most important to listen, to hear the ideas of others, and to evaluate all information that may be at hand. This method of operation has allowed him to act as a well-informed advocate for General Mills who is welcomed by those who agree with him, as well as those who may have other views. A man of honor who knows how to operate in an honorable fashion is a precious commodity, so I assure you that he will be truly missed by all of us who have come to depend on him as an advisor. And those of us who may be fortunate enough to call him a friend will look forward to more contacts with him in the years to come, but will still miss having him come by as frequently as he had in the past.

With his wonderful wife Lillian, and his family, perhaps Bob will have a better chance to continue his love of jazz, his voracious reading, and to evaluate all information that may be at hand. But I am also certain that this man of skills and commitment will have many more opportunities to leave his impression on important policy matters.

So from one member who represents the Cheyenne Capitol of the World, Toledo, OH, let me say to the man who helped make this Capitol cheerier on many days, Bob, thank you. We are blessed to have known and worked with you. We wish you the best and look forward to seeing your smiling self for many days to come.

PAYING TRIBUTE TO JIM GOLDSMITH
HON. MIKE ROGERS
OF MICHIGAN
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 20, 2001

Mr. ROGERS of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to congratulate Jim Goldsmith on his new position as National Commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

After he was drafted into the U.S. Army in 1965, Jim served his country with distinction for eighteen months in Vietnam as a member of the 84th Engineering Battalion, returning home in 1967. Since that time no job has been too small for Jim at his local VFW Post 5666, from holding public office to working evening fish fries. In his new position as National Commander, Jim will likely travel more than 300 days per year working on behalf of veterans.

Jim's last commitment to his country and his fellow veterans must not go unrecognized. Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I respectfully ask my colleagues to join me in paying tribute to Jim Goldsmith for his continued devotion to those who sacrificed their lives protecting all our freedoms.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION
HON. DANNY K. DAVIS
OF ILLINOIS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 20, 2001

Mr. DAVIS of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, I was unable to cast votes on September 10 due to important district business, and I was out of the country on September 11, 12, and 13, 2001. If I was present for rollcall votes for the following bills:

336 on motion to suspend the rules and pass H.R. 1766—To designate the facility of the United States Postal Service located at 4270 John Marr Drive in Annandale, Virginia, as the "Stan Parris Post Office Building";

337 on motion to suspend the rules and pass as amended H.R. 1761—To designate the facility of the United States Postal Service located at 8588 Richmond Highway in Alexandria, Virginia, as the "Herb E. Harris Post Office Building";

338 on passage of H.J. Res. 61—Expressing the sense of the Senate and House of Representatives regarding the terrorist attacks launched against the United States on September 11, 2001;

339 on passage of H.R. 2882—To provide for the expedited payment of certain benefits for a public safety officer who was killed or suffered a catastrophic injury as a direct result of a personal injury sustained in the line of duty in connection with the terrorist attacks on September 11, 2001;

340 on passage of H.R. 2884—Victims of Terrorism Relief Act of 2001; and I would have voted "yea" to all of these bills.

TRIBUTE TO NATIONAL CENTER FOR INDIGENOUS AMERICAN CULTURES IN KANSAS CITY, MO

HON. SAM GRAVES
OF MISSOURI
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 20, 2001

Mr. GRAVES. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize the National Center for Indigenous American Cultures at Line Creek in Frank Vaydik Park in Kansas City, Missouri.

Frank Vaydik Park lies within an area that has been recognized as sacred ground by Native Americans. It contains a large number of American Indian archeological artifacts, many of which date back more than 1,000 years. The National Center for Indigenous American Cultures at Line Creek, an organization created to preserving the site, is working hard to ensure that future generations will be able to learn about the different cultures that have inhabited that sacred land. Additionally, the Center intends to establish an educational center to promote and protect this important archeological site.

On September 21st, 22nd, and 23rd, there will be a meeting of Spiritual Leaders from all over the nation at the site to perform a Healing Ceremony. It will be an opportunity for people from both the American Indian and the Kansas City communities to come together to celebrate as the plans for the construction of an educational center and protection of the archeological site progress.

I would like to commend the National Center for Indigenous American Cultures for their work to preserve the past, and I wish them many blessings as they partake in this important sacred ritual that will provide a wonderful environment for education and preservation endeavors.

TRIBUTE TO PARKER AGRICULTURAL SERVICE

HON. BOB SCHAFFER
OF COLORADO
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 20, 2001

Mr. SCHAFFER. Mr. Speaker, it is an honor to rise today to express gratitude and congratulations to Parker Agricultural Services of Limon, Colorado, a recent recipient of the Environmental Achievement Award from the United States Environmental Protection Agency. The Environmental Achievement Award is one of the highest awards given by the Environmental Protection Agency and recognizes Parker Ag’s success of using biosolids as a fertilizer and soil enhancement product in Prowers County.

The biosolid program performance by Parker Agricultural Service has made monumental changes in the environmental makeup of Prowers County. Through this program New York and Boston biosolids are used as fertilizer for farmland. Not only has this program been successful for farmland but has also transformed marginal lands once again into rich producing ground. As reported by The Limon Leader, a 250-acre plot of land was transformed from bare sand to being completely covered by vegetation. Other instances have shown that using this program has increased the amount of protein content in certain plants as well as increasing yield per acre.

Parker Ag has been a shining example of what every company must strive for, achieving the delicate balance between production and environmental protection. I applaud the company for its sagacity and noble effort to preserve and enhance the environment in its community.

As a company located in Colorado’s Fourth Congressional District, Parker Ag not only makes its community proud but also those of its state and country. It is a true honor to have such an extraordinary company reside in Colorado and we owe it a debt of gratitude for its service. I ask the House to join me in extending wholehearted congratulations to Parker Agricultural Services.

HONORING DR. HRAYR “HAGOP” HOVAGUIMIAN
HON. GEORGE RADANOVICH
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 20, 2001

Mr. RADANOVICH. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor Dr. Hrayer “Hagop” Hovaguimian for his contributions to the improvement of health care in Armenia. He started the Nork Marash Medical Center, which provides cardiac surgery, free of cost, in Armenia.

Decades of under-the-table, behind-closed-door payments have plagued the health care system in Armenia. Armenian citizens tell stories of bribing nurses, doctors and other health care staff just to get the medical attention they require. Dr. Hovaguimian, a Syrian-born specialist in complex pediatric surgery, made his first trip to Armenia in 1991 to expose the corrupt medical practices first-hand. Since then he has been actively committed to providing affordable cardiac surgery in Armenia and abolishing corrupt medical practices prevalent in that country.

Dr. Hovaguimian left behind a lucrative career in Portland, Oregon to establish Nork Marash Medical Center in Yerevan, Armenia. With the help of a pediatric cardiologist from Spokane, Washington, Dr. Hrair Garabedian, Hagop is running Armenia’s first medical facility that is free of the corruptive influences that are crippling the country’s health care system. In June of 1994, the first pediatric heart surgery was performed at the hospital. In 1996, the first adult surgery was performed. Nork Marash Medical Center operates at standards equivalent to those of United States hospitals. The center also includes noncorrupt business practices indicated by a zero-tolerance policy against gratuities. Led by the efforts of Dr. Hovaguimian, the Nork Marash Medical Center has brought a breath of fresh air to a health care system marked by bribes, kickbacks and payoffs.

Nork Marash has struggled to achieve financial self-sufficiency without government subsidies. Many surgeries on pediatric patients who cannot afford the cost of cardiac surgery are performed at no charge. Dr. Hovaguimian has a guiding principle: no patient is denied care because of inability to pay. Although the hospital has faced several financial obstacles, they have been able to achieve financial self-sufficiency.

Mr. Speaker, I honor Dr. Hovaguimian for his efforts to bring high standards and professionalism to the health care system in Armenia. I urge my colleagues to join me in wishing Dr. Hrayer “Hagop” Hovaguimian many more years of continued success.

2001 EMERGENCY SUPPLEMENTAL APPROPRIATIONS ACT FOR RECOVERY FROM AND RESPONSE TO TERRORIST ATTACKS ON THE UNITED STATES

SPEECH OF
HON. MARCY KAPTUR
OF OHIO
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, September 14, 2001

Ms. KAPTUR. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 2888, the emergency supplemental appropriations bill providing essential funds for recovery from and response to the terrorist attacks on New York, Washington, and Pennsylvania.

I want to thank our distinguished Chairman, Mr. YOUNG of Florida, and our ranking member, Mr. OSEY, for their hard work in negotiating this essential package with the leadership of both bodies and the President. The mettle of a nation is tested at trying times, and the response before us today demonstrates that America, her people, and her leaders, are ready for this test.

Today we provide $40 billion to start begining to pay for the damage caused by the attack, to assist the victims who were impacted by it, to upgrade our security, and to begin the military preparations necessary for an appropriate response. $10 billion is available immediately for the President to use as he sees fit. Another $10 billion is available only if the President specifies how he wishes to use the funding provided that the Congress concurs within fifteen days of that plan. Congress as part of our work on regular appropriations bills will expend the final $20 billion based upon a sub-mission of a budget request by the President and further action in the weeks ahead.

Mr. Speaker, there have been so many times when America has committed her resources to the causes of peace and in support of freedom. There can be no more appropriate time than when our homeland has been attacked and our citizens killed.

I am one who believes that we should celebrate the victory that we had in the thousands of people who survived, and in the outpouring of the American spirit in support of the victims of the attack.

No one will forget the devotion of the firefighters, police, and emergency medical technicians who braved the danger presented by the destruction.

No one can ignore the determination of the iron, steel and construction workers who felt an obligation to donate their professional skills to the rescue effort.
No one can doubt the conviction of the men and women of America’s military who moved swiftly to safeguard our nation, or the thousands of Americans on reserve duty who stood ready for the call to action.
The entire world is in awe of the outpouring of support of people, from the youngest children to our senior citizens who looked for things or money to donate, wrote encouraging messages the the worker, and supported friends, neighbors and even strangers in any way they could during a traumatic time.

But that is what America is. America is resilient.
America is resourceful. America is at her very best when challenged and when angered.
Others around the world often misunderstand America’s resolve. Now the execution of that resolve will leave no questions.

In this Capitol, we celebrate what makes our nation special. We revere the times when we can pursue those policies that we believe to be in the best interest of the United States. We have had heated and principled debates in which we highlight, not hide, our differences of opinion. We cherish those moments because that is what freedom brings to us—the ability to advance those causes that are important to us, while openly disagreeing with those we dislike without the fear of retribution.

And now, in a moment of historical significance, we also celebrate another matter that makes our nation special—the ability to come together as one when our precious freedom is attacked by those who either misunderstand or are fearful of freedom’s power.

In the days and weeks to come, this Congress will work together on behalf of our nation. We will have disagreements, and at the end of the day our nation and we will be better for it.

Those who thought that they could infect our nation with ill will should remember the words of a great man who served in this very building, Hubert Humphrey: “Freedom is the most contagious virus known to man.” Let us use this challenge to create an opportunity for America to once again celebrate freedom, and to help spread it to others who for too long have been under the scourge of terror.

SPECIAL RECOGNITION AND COM-MENDATION FOR KIDS DAY AMERICA/INTERNATIONAL

HON. MICHAEL G. OXLEY
OF OHIO
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 20, 2001

Mr. OXLEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to highlight a special community event that will take place in Lima, Ohio. I am pleased to announce that the second annual “Kids Day America/International” will occur September 22, 2001. This special day is set aside to address health, safety and environmental issues that affect us as individuals and as a community. It was founded for the purpose of educating families and communities about these important social issues. I am glad to report that it has been a huge success.

More than 1,300 communities have taken part in this event and more than 1,000,000 children and their families have enjoyed this day across the globe. With the assistance and support of thousands of local police departments, county sheriff offices, dentists, and photographers who volunteer their time, all these children completed Child Safety ID cards.

I join Mayors, Governors, Senators, and Representatives who have endorsed Kids Day America/International Chiropractors have also contributed greatly in helping our communities’ children. Dr. Kay Heasont of Network Chiropractrict of Lima is also volunteering her time and skills for this event.

This year the event in Lima will benefit DARE. Officer Bob Stoodt will attend, with the DARE mascot “Daren” the lion, to fingerprint ID children. Doctors will be doing spinal screenings; Huntington Bank will be sending Winnie the Pooh and friends. The Lima Fire Department will bring a fire truck and their mascot. Lima City officers will inspect for car seat safety. Girl Scouts will have environmental presentations. In conclusion, a rally in which all will participate, this event will allow families to protect their children even more.

Mr. Speaker, once again allow me to voice my strong support for this worthy event and those supporting it.

RECOGNIZING MR. SCOTT HURFF
HON. PATRICK J. TIBERI
OF OHIO
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 20, 2001

Mr. TIBERI. Mr. Speaker, I would like to congratulate and honor a young Ohioan from my district who has distinguished himself among his peers and community.

Mr. Scott Hurff, an honor student at Dublin Coffman High School and a 2001 delegate to Ohio’s American Legion Boys State, delivered the following address at this year’s Memorial Day ceremonies in Dublin, OH. I believe this stirring presentation is worthy of the Nation’s attention.

ORATION BY SCOTT HURFF, BOY’S STATE
DELEGATE 2001

They kicked him. The Nazis kicked him to see if he was dead.

My great-grandfather, who landed at Norm-dandy in WW II, had to play dead to stay alive. He had landed fighting next to his friends. Now they were dead. The Nazis kicked their bodies to see if they were alive, and if they believed that there was some spark of life left in them, they shot them.

My great-grandfather then was eventually wartime with the French army. He was harshly treated for his beliefs. He was forced to go to Tunisia, places like Guadalcanal, places like Okinawa, places like the Chosin reservoir, places like Khe Sahn. They had to endure the most horrible conditions to save the world and our country.

What have we given them?

Too many people of this generation barely acknowledge the significance of this holiday.

Too many people of this generation have no idea what the holiday represents.

Thus, the people of my generation must ensure a transition to restore confidence and security to all citizens. We must begin with Memorial Day.

The only way we can honor the men that surrendered their time to wholeheartedly safeguard our nation, is for this generation to dedicate their time to ensuring that the citizens of America are fully aware of what has been given to them and what could easily be taken away. This generation has to re-instigate the active patriotism and restore the constant awareness of what this country is based upon. We must ensure another 11 generations, 225 years, and beyond. We must be leaders in this transition.

As President Bush said, “The only good so-icety is a caring society.” Take heart to what has been done for you, and be motivated to make a difference in someone’s life.

Become a teacher. Help lead the way to guarantee equality in Ohio’s schools. Support the World War II memorial. Participate in government. That is the way to ensure that America’s pillars stand. That is the way to honor the soldiers that fought to preserve those pillars.

TRIBUTE TO COLORADO STATE SENATOR MARK HILLMAN
HON. BOB SCHAFER
OF COLORADO
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 20, 2001

Mr. SCHAFER. Mr. Speaker, it is an honor to rise to express gratitude and congratulations to Colorado State Senator Mark Hillman of Burlington, CO, this year’s recipient of the National Legislator of the Year by the American Legislative Exchange Council. The American Legislative Exchange Council gives this award to outstanding legislators who understand that what is good for business is good for America.

In a recent edition of the La Junta Tribune Democrat Duane Parde, executive director of the American Legislative Exchange Council in Colorado, said, “I feel that legislators in the state work hard to understand what is best for the state, but only a few are among the outstanding legislators in the nation. He’s a leader who truly personifies the Jeffersonian principles of independent liberty, limited government and free markets.”

Mr. Speaker, Senator Hillman is a person of high integrity and honor. He considers it a privilege to know and work with him. Mark has served the State of Colorado well taking the responsibilities and standards of his job to the CONGRATULATING TONY AND ALICE GIANNETTA

HON. GEORGE RADANOVICH
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 20, 2001

Mr. RADANOVICH. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to congratulate Tony and Alice Giannetta on their appointments to the status of Senior Life Directors. The Building Industry Association (BIA) recognizes the appointments by the National Association of Home Builders (NAHB) and the National Association of Home Builders Women’s Council.

The National Association of Home Builders is recognizing Tony Giannetta for his 20 consecutive years of dedicated service as a member of the NAHB Board of Directors. Tony began his career in Fresno County in the 1940s. He has developed over 27 subdivisions and constructed over 4,500 homes. He has been a member of the BIA of the San Joaquin Valley for more than 50 years. Tony served as the BIA President in 1967, 1979, and 1980. He has been active in community activities, including providing student work experience training, helping to establish a National Association of Home Builders Student Chapter at Fresno City College and California State University, Fresno, and supporting scholarships programs to provide financial aid to construction students at both Fresno City College and California State University, Fresno.

The NAHB is recognizing Alice Giannetta for 20 years of consecutive service as a member of the NAHB Women’s Council. She is a charter member of the Women’s Council of the BIA of the San Joaquin Valley, started in 1980. Alice served as the Women’s Council President in 1982. She has also been active in community activities, including providing ongoing assistance and support to a young blind child, volunteering with the American Cancer Society’s Angels on Wheels Program, and repeatedly serving as a Cub Scout Den Mother and Room Mother.

The BIA’s membership of builders, developers, subcontractors, and associated businesses is dedicated to protect and promote the home building industry and keep the ownership possible.

Mr. Speaker, I rise to congratulate Tony and Alice Giannetta on the occasion of their appointments to the status of Senior Life Directors by the National Association of Home Builders and their Women’s Council. I urge my colleagues to join me in wishing Tony and Alice Giannetta many more years of continued success.

EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

IN HONOR OF THE DEDICATED SERVICE OF M. JOSEPH MATAN

HON. MICHAEL N. CASTLE OF DELAWARE
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 20, 2001

Mr. CASTLE. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize the passing of a Delawarean who served his country, his government, and his family with great honor and distinction. This past July, M. Joseph Matan passed away at the age of 92 at his home in Rehoboth Beach, DE.

During World War II, Mr. Matan left his job as a Justice Department lawyer working on issues related to mail fraud, and enlisted as a sailor in the U.S. Navy. He quickly rose to an officer’s rank and worked on intelligence matters. He retired in 1970 from his position as counsel to the House Government Operations Subcommittee on Legal and Monetary Affairs, where he directed investigations into banking, currency, and organized crime. Prior to that, he had practiced law in Washington, DC, law firm of Tumulty & Tumulty.

In addition to residing in Rehoboth Beach, Mr. Matan and his wife Anne Marie lived part of the year in the Washington, DC, metropolitan area. Joe was active as a member of this city’s social and religious communities. He was a strong supporter of local Catholic youth organizations and a faithful member of St. Jane Frances de Chantal Catholic Church and the Shrine of the Most Blessed Sacrament. A wonderful legacy of 6 children, 22 grandchildren, and 21 great-grandchildren has been given to us by the man they all knew as “Daddy Joe”.

Mr. Speaker, I salute M. Joseph Matan for his contributions to the American people, the Washington, DC, area and the State of Delaware. He was a committed family man whose values have been passed on to his adoring family and the many people who he touched during his lifetime.

NEW YORK FIREFIGHTERS GRIEVE FOR LOST BROTHERS

HON. NYDIA M. VELAZQUEZ
OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 20, 2001

Ms. VELAZQUEZ. Mr. Speaker, I would like to share with this House a unique story of individual sacrifice and heroism after last week’s devastating terrorist assault on the United States. The Washington Post published an article about Engine 202 from Brooklyn in the 12th District of New York, NY. It tells the story of this company of fire fighters that rushed to the World Trade Center after it was attacked. Seven men from their company disappeared in the inferno and collapse. This is a personal story of heroism and loss tragically repeated in other rescue teams working at ground zero. I am proud of this band of brothers from Red Hook, and I join the country in mourning with them.

September 20, 2001

[From the Washington Post, Sept. 14, 2001]

NEW YORK’S FIREFIGHTERS GRIEVE FOR LOST BROTHERS

(By Anne Hull)
NEW YORK, Sept. 13—The firefighters from Engine 202 in Brooklyn called themselves the brothers from Red Hook. At the firehouse, they tried out new recipes on one another. They named their softball team the Red Hook Raiders and started a cigar club that allowed them to puff on Macanudos at their adopted hangout, Smokey’s.

On Tuesday, seven of them disappeared in the World Trade Center inferno.

Where, Tony Catapano wondered, did his brothers go?

For 39 years, Catapano has survived his line of work. He is 61, with gray hair and a pension within reach. He is old and they were young. He showed them how to make meatballs and how to find fire hidden in a wall.

“Today he walked near the smoldering landscape of rubble and kept thinking he would see them, shining flashlights miraculously from a crevice,” he said.

About 400 firefighters were missing and presumed dead, a numbing toll exacted on a tight fraternity. Entire ladder companies and squads were gone, including all five of the elite rescue companies that serve New York City.

Five of the department’s most senior officials died, plus a dozen battalion chiefs. Unlike other senior military officers, who are strategically kept from the front, senior fire officers typically enter burning buildings to assess damage and plot a strategy for rescue and fire containment.

But the rank-and-file firefighters—the Irish and Italian sons of working-class neighborhoods in Long Island and Staten Island, many of them grandchildren of New York immigrants—symbolize the deepest loss. Men like the brothers from Red Hook.

On Tuesday, seven of them sacrificed their lives, was a fancier world than they knew. They didn’t shop for cuff links or keep portfolios with Goldman Sachs. After nearly four decades with the Fire Department of New York, Tony Catapano made $55,000 a year. Once, ages ago, he splurged and took his wife, Marie, for their anniversary dinner to Windows on the World, on the 106th floor of the World Trade Center.

It was expensive, Catapano remembered, “but the view was spectacular, and sometimes you need that.”

The next time Catapano returned to the World Trade Center, he could barely see his hands through the smoke.

“It was snowing dirt,” said Catapano, who came in the second wave of firefighters from his 32nd Battalion Tuesday, following the first wave responding to a call that a plane had crashed into the north tower of the World Trade Center—a call that came just as shifts were changing at firehouses across metropolitan New York. Firefighters hanging off their night shifts hopped on ladder trucks and engines with the fresh day crews, fattening the deployment.

Arriving early to the scene, as many of the companies from lower Manhattan and Brooklyn did, proved fatal.

“You’ve got to understand,” said Matthew James, the Brooklyn trustee for the Uniformed Firefighters Association of Greater
New York, “all the companies that were there, they're not there anymore.”

At 9:15… 18 minutes after the commercial airliner hit the North Tower, a second airliner hit the South Tower. Surviving office workers who were evacuating reported going downtown while firefighters were marching up to help those on the higher floors. One firefighter still on the ground was killed when a person on a burning upper floor jumped and landed on him. The fire department priest who was ministering last rites to this fireman died when a crush of rubble came down on both of them.

At high noon, no one could really see anything. Catapano hocked up thick, black spit. Medics washed out his eyes. He kept looking for names he knew on firefighters’ jackets.

Hours later, when Catapano made it back to his firehouse in Red Hook, not all the men were there. The young guys—the ones who would poke fun at his culinary inventions like “Petroudi, Rodeo Style”—left empty beds. Catapano kept thinking they were stuck somewhere or transferred to other firehouses to sleep.

He searched for them when he returned to the wreckage the next day. “Down there,” he called it. Or “the site.” He spoke with the Brooklyn union trustees James, an Irishman who keeps a bow and Johnnie Walker Black on a shelf in his office.

“I lost some brothers, Matty,” Catapano said, his voice breaking.

“I know, brother, we all did,” James said.

None of the firefighters could escape the stink. At the firehouses where they retreated after long shifts last night, there piles of dirty T-shirts and underwear reminded them. They washed and scrubbed, but the smell beat soap and clung inside their noses.

At the divisional headquarters of the Salvation Army in Manhattan, where many out-of-town search and rescue workers camped, the cots were filled with great, heaving bodies that needed to find a food and sleep and peace even their blankets carried proof of the mission: that sour smell, like singed hair, lit matchsticks and a child’s chemistry set.

Nor could they get away from everything they saw.

At 2 a.m. today, the site was like a stage set for a disaster movie, blasted with light. So many steel beams and girders were still strewn through the wreckage that firefighters resorted to bucket brigades, with dogs trotted out across the foothills of rubble. The streets were littered with crushed vehicles and tons of financial documents. “We are pleased to confirm the following transactions,” read one investment statement nearly ground into the sidewalk.

Tony Catapano noticed none of it. His eyes could not stay off the rubble.

Before he returned for another shift this afternoon, his wife told him not to push too hard. But it was no use. "Those guys are a bunch, a family, you know,” she said. "Tony is not really their brother; he’s more like their father.”

While Catapano suited up at the firehouse, a father and son brought flowers and a toy fire truck. The pastries and cakes kept coming. But Catapano was ready to return.

"Be strong, guys," a man on the sidewalk called out to him.

Catapano didn’t even hear. He was already mentally back on the rubble. With a four-day beard and red-rimmed eyes, he gunned the car back down to Lower Manhattan.

When he was a boy he dreamed of being a cowboy. Then he worked in a bank, pushing papers around. Then he found his calling as a firefighter, “trying to save people.” His son is now on the waiting list to join the New York City Fire Department.

TRIBUTE TO JAY FEAVEL

WALL STREET JOURNAL REPORTS THAT U.S. IS PRESSING LEBANON AND SYRIA FOR ACTION AGAINST HEZBOLLAH TERRORISTS

HON. TOM LANTOS
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 20, 2001

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, yesterday, the Wall Street Journal reported that the United States Government has asked Lebanon and Syria to extradite Palestinians and Lebanese Shiites suspected of committing acts of terrorism over the past two decades. I welcome this indication of aggressive action against all terrorists. As I have said on numerous occasions last week we debated our response to the horrendous acts of terrorism committed against the United States, the only action we can take that will end this plague of terrorist violence is to act against terrorists everywhere.

If Osama bin Laden were to fall into our hands this afternoon, this would not end the possibility of terrorist actions against our nation and others. This is a struggle that must take on terrorism wherever and however it appears, and we delude ourselves if we think that this is a struggle only against bin Laden. To succeed, we must move against terrorists everywhere.

First, Mr. Speaker, the Taliban must hand over to us Osama bin Laden—if not for the horrible acts committed last week, for his previous acts of terrorism in Africa, Saudi Arabia, and Kuwait. But that cannot and must not be an end action against the scourge of terrorism against innocent children, women, and men.

Iran must cease its support of Hezbollah. Lebanon and Syria must take action to disarm and end the terrorist actions of Hezbollah unless also close the headquarters of the various terrorist organizations which are now located in Damascus. Yasser Arafat should arrest all terrorists, suicide bombers, and plotters of mass murder who have been released since the Palestinian Authority assumed authority in parts of the West Bank and Gaza. Europe must join us in our policy vis-a-vis Iran and Libya and stop providing aid and important economic and trade assistance to them. Russia, China, and North Korea must stop selling technology and weapons of mass destruction to countries that support terrorism.

Mr. Speaker, earlier this year, the House approved by a narrow vote—216 to 212—an amendment to the Foreign Relations Authorization Act for 2002–2003 which I offered. That amendment would cut off U.S. IMET assistance to the Lebanese military unless the Lebanese government acts against Hezbollah and secures its southern border, where numerous terrorist actions

U.S. PRESSES LEBANON ON SUSPECTS

BRITISH LEBANON.—The U.S. has asked Lebanon and Syria to extradite Palestinians and Lebanese Shites suspected of terrorism in the past 20 years, according to Lebanese officials and people close to Lebanese Prime Minister Rafik Hariri.

The officials and people close to the prime minister said the Bush administration was also calling for disarmament if not disbbling, of Hezbollah. The group is a Shiite Muslim militia believed responsible for the 1983 suicide bombing of the U.S. Embassy in Beirut and a U.S. Marine peacekeeping mission in Beirut as well as the 1980s kidnapping in Lebanon of Westerners, including 18 Americans. The U.S. demands are part of seven requests presented this week to Lebanon and Syrian officials.

The Lebanese officials cautioned that meeting the demands could tear apart the country’s fragile social fabric unless it is carried out properly. A Hezbollah spokesman, in his Beirut office sitting beneath portraits of the late Iranian leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini and the current Iranian religious leader Ayatollah Seyed Ali Khamenei, expressed confidence that Lebanon and Syria would reject the U.S. demands. I rule out the Lebanese government doing anything against the Lebanese resistance that liberated Lebanon and Israeli occupation. The Lebanese government knows how to protect innocent people,” the spokesman said.

A spokesman for the U.S. Embassy in Beirut, Ann O’Leary, said the Bush administration was “is asking the Lebanese government for its complete cooperation in the war against terrorism presently being waged as well as to comment on the specific list of demands.

The officials and people close to Mr. Hariri said the U.S. demands included the prosecution or extradition of terrorists, stopping their movement in and out of Lebanon and Syria, intelligence sharing and banning organizations that support terrorism.

Whether the demands bring any result depends largely on Syria, and possibly Iran, because of their support for Hezbollah and other radical groups, these people said. Syria has an estimated 30,000 troops based in Lebanon.

“Hezbollah is a major political party here. It represents a major segment of society. They are regarded as heroes. Now, they’ve become a hot potato and everybody is looking at what the Syrians will do,” said one person close to Mr. Hariri.

Mr. Hariri in the past year has allied himself with Hezbollah, seeking to benefit from its popularity after the group’s successful military campaign that last year forced Israel to end its 22-year occupation of southern Lebanon. The officials said Mr. Hariri had aided the Hezbollah campaign by granting Hezbollah access to military intelligence, licensing arms and securing access roads to southern Lebanon. Hezbollah earlier this week offered its condolences to the victims of last week’s bombings in New York and Washington.

Signaling that Lebanon wouldn’t simply comply with the U.S. demands, Syrian endorsement would be essential to cracking down on Hezbollah without disrupting the fragile communal balance established in Lebanon after the end of that country’s civil war in 1991, people close to Mr. Hariri said. Syria is likely to drive a hard bargain, they said, possibly demanding that the U.S. pressure Israel to withdraw from the Golan Heights conquered by Syria in 1967 and create a platform for a negotiated end to the Israeli-Palestinian conflict.

“Anything less than Madrid Two will not be acceptable. Syria will not relinquish its tools in its struggle against Israel for less,” said one person close to the Syrian government. Madrid Two refers to a 1991 conference organized by the U.S. that launched the Mideast peace process. The U.S. role in calling for the peace talks helped win Syrian and other Arab support for its military campaign a year earlier to force Iraq’s withdrawal from Kuwait.

Among those the U.S. wants extradited, people close to Mr. Hariri said, are former Hezbollah leader Imad Mughniyeh and the Damascus-based head of the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, General Command Ahmed Jibril, who is believed to be responsible for a series of attacks in the 1980s.

Authorities in the U.S., Israel and some Arab states suspect Mr. Mughniyeh of involvement in the April 1983 bombing that destroyed the U.S. Embassy in Beirut and killed 63 people, including 17 Americans. Other attacks he is believed to have masterminded: the suicide bombing six months later that destroyed a U.S. Marine base in the Lebanese capital and killed 241 Marines; and a 1985 attack on the current U.S. Embassy compound in Beirut, in which a vehicle packed with explosives rammed the embassy, killing 15 people.

Mr. Mughniyeh is also thought to be behind the kidnapping of foreigners in Lebanon in the 1980s, including former Associated Press correspondent Terry Anderson.

Israeli and Argentine officials hold Mr. Mughniyeh responsible for the 1992 bombing of the Israeli Embassy in Buenos Aires as well as an attack on a Jewish social center. About 124 people were killed in the two incidents. Argentina’s Supreme Court earlier this year issued a warrant for Mr. Mughniyeh’s arrest.

RE-EMPHASIZING THE NEED FOR TOLERANCE

HON. HILDA L. SOLIS
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 20, 2001

Ms. SOLIS. Mr. Speaker, today I rise to again urge tolerance during this challenging time.

In California, there have been over 70 acts of violence against individuals perceived to be of Arab or Muslim descent in the last week. My own district has served witness to one of these most abhorrent acts. An Egyptian shopkeeper in San Gabriel was shot to death Saturday in a potential hate crime.

Adel Karas and his family had lived in San Gabriel for over 20 years and had become a welcome fixture in the community.

In another act of ignorance, a Latino man was mistaken as an Arab and was pulled from his car and beaten.

This misguided violence must cease.

OF COLORADO
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 20, 2001

Mr. SCHAFER. Mr. Speaker, it is an honor to rise today to express gratitude and congratulations to Mrs. Lelea Turner of Campo, CO, one of Colorado’s most outstanding citizens. Lelea, better known as “Grandmother Turner” by her community, is an individual who has made a positive and lasting difference in the lives of others.

Lelea has been a hard worker her entire life as well as being a compassionate leader always making time to change the lives of others. Lelea grew up in Campo, CO, where she received most of her education until transferring to Springfield, CO, to finish her senior year of high school. Lelea then began teaching at the age of 18 and continued to teach and serve her country until the age of 84. It was in 1932 that Lelea met her husband Uel Turner and was married in Boise City, OK. During World War II Lelea did her part aiding in the war effort by working in a munitions factory continuing to teach part time. Lelea’s husband, Uel Turner passed away in 1963, leaving her to single handedly care and provide for her sons. Through this struggle Lelea persevered as she not only went to school part time while working to receive her bachelor’s but also went on to receive her master’s degree in special education. She then went on to teach special education in Campo for 25 years.

Mr. Speaker, Lelea’s service and dedication to teaching and serving her country remind us of that is good in America. Lelea is truly a shining example for all Americans.

As a constituent of Colorado’s Fourth Congressional District, “Grandma Turner” not only makes her community proud, but also her State and country. It is a true honor to have such an extraordinary citizen in Colorado and we owe her a debt of gratitude for her service and dedication to the community. I ask the House to join me in extending wholehearted congratulations to Mrs. Lelea Turner.

TRIBUTE TO TERRY LYNCH

HON. JAMES A. TRAFICANT, JR.
OF OHIO
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 20, 2001

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Speaker, today, I am deeply saddened to share the news of the passing of Terry Lynch. Terry, who was a graduate of Ursuline High School and Youngstown State University in my district, was lost in the unfortunate incident that occurred at the Pentagon on September 11, 2001.

Terry, now currently of Mount Vernon, VA, worked as a congressional aide to Senators RICHARD SHELBY and ARLEN SPECTER. Through his work, Terry became committed to the fight against arthritis, by helping to introduce legislation that created National Juvenile Arthritis Awareness Week.

Two years ago, Terry joined the firm Booz-Allen & Hamilton, Inc. His work often required him to visit the Pentagon.

My heart and my prayers go out to Terry’s wife, Jackie, his daughters, Tiffany and Ashley, and his extended family. Terry was a great American who had a history of showing compassion for people in need. He will be deeply missed.

INTRODUCTION OF CONCURRENT RESOLUTION FOR THE “FIRST RESPONDERS” INJURED AT THE WTC, PENTAGON, AND IN PENNSYLVANIA

HON. J.C. WATTS OF OKLAHOMA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 20, 2001

Mr. WATTS of Oklahoma. Mr. Speaker, it is with great honor that I introduce this Concurrent Resolution on behalf of myself, Rep. ENGEL and the other original House cosponsors.

The resolution expresses Congress’ profound sorrow for the loss of life and injuries suffered by “first responders” as a result of their efforts to save innocent Americans in the aftermath of the World Trade Center, Pentagon and Pennsylvania terrorist attacks on September 11, 2001. It also expresses our deepest condolences to the families and loved ones of the first responders who will never again return home.

Last Tuesday, in New York City and at the Pentagon, law enforcement, firefighters, and emergency medical personnel (first responders) were the first public service personnel on the scene of the attacks. If it were not for their heroic efforts immediately after these attacks, numerous innocent people would not be alive today.

EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

We also believe that it is important for America to better understand the activities and responsibilities of first responders. In addition to the everyday well-being, security and safety of Americans, that duty upon first responders’ official duties, the consequences of terrorist attacks also compel their service. In preparation for these tragedies, first responders around the country plan, train and exercise for mass casualty events. Our resolution recognizes the hard work and dedication of “first responder” personnel for their anti-terrorist preparation efforts that many participate in on their own time.

In addition, this resolution recognizes the hard work and dedication of first responders after the 1993 World Trade Center and 1995 Oklahoma City bombings.

As the days in this session of Congress wind down, we must lead the nation to ensure that Americans are as protected as possible against future terrorist attacks. Congress must remain vigilant against other threats such as biological, chemical, nuclear, radiological attacks that terrorists may unleash on our shores in the future. I am going to fight to maintain and increase America’s deterrence, prevention, preparation, and response abilities today and the coming tomorrows.

THE PRAIRIE ROSE CHAPTER OF THE Daughters of the American Revolution SALUTES CONSTITUTION WEEK

HON. DENNIS MOORE OF KANSAS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 20, 2001

Mr. MOORE. Mr. Speaker, the week of September 17–23 has been officially designated as Constitution Week. This marks the 214th anniversary of the signing of our Constitution.

The guardian of our liberties, our Constitution established our republic as a self-governing nation dedicated to rule by law. This document is the cornerstone of our freedom. It was written to protect every American from the abuse of power by government. Without that restraint, our founders believed the republic would perish.

The ideals upon which our Constitution is based are reinforced each day by the success of our political system to which it gave birth. The success of our way of government requires an enlightened citizenry.

Constitution Week provides an opportunity for all Americans, young and old, to learn of the achievements of our founders, the nature of limited government, and the rights, privileges and responsibilities of citizenship. It provides us the opportunity to be better informed about our rights, freedoms and duties as citizens.

Mr. Speaker, at this time I particularly want to take note of the outstanding work of the Prairie Rose Chapter of the Kansas Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution, which is actively involved in the Third Congressional District in events this week commemorating Constitution Week. The Prairie Rose Chapter has been involved with this effort in our communities for a number of years and I commend them for doing so.

Our Constitution has served us well for over 200 years, but it will continue as a strong, vibrant, and vital foundation for freedom only so long as the American people remain dedicated to the basic principles on which it rests. Thus, as the United States continues into its third century of constitutional democracy, let us renew our commitment to, in the words of our Constitution’s preamble: “form a more perfect Union, establish Justice, insure domestic Tranquility, provide for the common defense, promote the general Welfare, and secure the Blessings of Liberty to ourselves and our Posterity . . . “ I know that the Prairie Rose Chapter of the Kansas Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution joins with me in urging all Americans to renew their commitment to, and understanding of, our Constitution, particularly during our current time of crises, when Americans have been attacked on our own soil by terrorists who do not recognize the rule of human law.

TRIBUTE TO WILL HEERMANN

HON. BOB SCHAFFER
OF COLORADO
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 20, 2001

Mr. SCHAFFER. Mr. Speaker, I rise tonight to recognize Will Heermann of Haxtun, Colorado. Will was one of only nine to be selected at the National Future Business Leaders of America convention to be a part of the national officer team. For this, Mr. Speaker, the United States Congress should honor him.

Will led the regional FBLA leadership conference in Denver and was also a guest speaker, contest judge, and led workshops at many other regional conferences. According to Will’s teachers, he is an energetic, hardworking, and caring young man, an outstanding student, and dedicated to helping others while contributing to his community.

Will has been instrumental in many organizations from being a group leader in the March of Dimes project to participating in the “burn-the-mortgage” campaign.

Mr. Speaker, students like Will Heermann take our minds off of all the negative and tragic events in our Nation’s schools, and focus on all the positives. As a constituent of Colorado’s Fourth Congressional District, Will is truly someone who can be looked up to by young people everywhere. He makes his community, and his State and country proud. I ask the House to join me in extending wholehearted congratulations to Mr. Will Heermann.

HONORING DOBThY BRYAN O’NEll ON THE OCCASION OF HER 90TH BIRTHDAY

HON. FRANK PALLONE, JR.
OF NEW JERSEY
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 20, 2001

Mr. PALLONE. Mr. Speaker, it is with great pleasure that I introduce and honor Mrs. Dorothy Bryan O’Neill as she celebrates her 90th birthday on September 23, 2001. As a devoted wife and mother, Dorothy has led an exemplary life of dedication to her family and to her community.

A native of Charleston, SC, Dorothy Bryan was born on September 23, 1911. Upon her graduation from Burke High School, she married Mr. Lawrence I. O'Neill and became his wife, then mother to their 12 children, including their third oldest Lawrence E. O'Neill (Buddy), a resident of the county of Monmouth, NJ, since 1950. As her new family grew larger with the birth of each child, her commitment to them grew as well; 11 children have graduated college, some with graduate degrees, all going on to successful careers ranging from lawyers to business entrepreneurs. Carrying with her the inspiration of her mother, whom she considers her personal hero, Dorothy has maintained her strength and fully embodies the traits of kindness, selflessness, and encouragement that are only possessed by a truly devoted mother. Her own children describe her as their best friend, their confidant, and their trusted advisor.

Today Dorothy is defined as “a beacon and family matriarch for whom we all should aspire.” In reaching her 90th year, Dorothy O’Neill has done more than fulfill her goal of raising successful children; rather, her dream lives on through her 54 grandchildren, 19 great-grandchildren and 4 great-great-grandchildren. “Mrs. O’Neill once called her children an investment that paid many dividends.” Fellow community members and friends admire Dorothy for her lifelong commitment to the idea of family and the important role that family plays in our society. As both a woman and an African-American, she is an inspiration to those who need to work a little bit harder in the midst of adversity in order to obtain personal achievement.

Mr. Speaker, it is my hope that you join me in distinguishing Dorothy Bryan O’Neill, as her 12 children and family celebrate her life as a most remarkable woman, wife and professional mother, in addition to her continuing efforts to sustain the invaluable institution of the family.

CONGRATULATIONS TO MR. ALDO M. CACCAMO

HON. ELLEN O. TAUSCHER
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 20, 2001

Mrs. TAUSCHER. Mr. Speaker, I would like to honor and congratulate Mr. Aldo M. Caccamo upon his retirement from Chevron. Mr. Caccamo is retiring from his current position as Vice President of Public Affairs, and corporate officer, after completing a distinguished 37-year career. Mr. Caccamo was born in 1937, received his Bachelor of Science in Civil Engineering from the New Jersey Institute of Technology in 1960, and a MBE degree from Harvard Business School in 1964. That same year he joined Chevron.

I would like to also honor Jane Caccamo, Al’s wife, who together celebrated their 38th wedding anniversary this past August. They have three sons, Daniel—36 years old, Paul—33 years old, and David—who is 31 years old and married to Amy Jo. Al and Jane recently became grandparents with the birth of David and Amy Jo’s daughter, Emily Jane, who is now almost 1 year old.

His distinguished service has included global responsibilities. Prior to assuming his current position in 1996, he was the President of Chevron International Oil Co.—responsible for Chevron’s international crude oil, products trading and international sales. He started as a financial analyst and progressed, in 1967 to the assistant area manager-aviation sales for Chevron International. He became worldwide aviation fuels manager in San Francisco in 1971, and subsequently held positions as corporate planning consultant and planning manager for Chevron U.S.A.

In 1979, he was named manager, pricing and evaluation, for Chevron U.S.A. marketing. In 1982, he became manager of the west central marketing division, which he was named general manager, western region, supply and distribution. In 1986, he became general manager, eastern region, supply and distribution in Houston. In 1988, he was named general manager, marketing for Chevron U.S.A. Products Co.

Mr. Caccamo has served on the board of directors of the San Francisco Friends of the Urban Forest, the San Francisco Academy, the San Francisco Opera, and the National Council of La Raza. He has also served as chairman of the San Francisco Global Trade Council Advisory Board, and as a director of Caltex Petroleum Corp.—which operates a major refining and marketing business in Africa and the Far East.

On behalf of the U.S. Congress, and my fellow citizens of the San Francisco Bay area, I extend our sincere congratulations to Al Caccamo.
the World Trade Center, the Pentagon, or in the four hijacked airliners on September 11th. The Breast Cancer Research stamp has raised $20 million since its inception in 1997. The funds raised by the September 11th Families Stamp would be distributed by the Office of Victims of Crimes, in the Department of Justice, and would be tax-exempt for the recipients. The stamp would be issued by December 1, so that it is available for the holiday season, and would be in circulation for two years.

And I am very pleased to say that this is only one of several ideas put forward to help the families torn apart by last week’s terrible events. My colleagues, Representative ACKERMAN and Representative FOSSELLA, have a bill to issue a stamp specifically for the families of the firefighters, police, and rescuers lost in this terrible loss our countrymen have suffered. Representative ENGEL has introduced a bill to issue a commemorative coin to do much the same. Representative LAFALCE has put forward a Victory Bond bill as yet another excellent way to allow Americans to give to the relief effort. And Representative VELAZQUEZ has introduced legislation to allow people to devote their tax refunds to the relief efforts more easily.

I think it is absolutely wonderful to have so many options before the Congress. And I hope that more members will come up with such good ideas and keep introducing legislation to help the victims. But I also want to encourage the leadership to use these ideas in developing a comprehensive package to build upon America’s generous desire to help all of the victims of these unspeakable events.

Clearly, nothing will ever make up for the terrible loss our countrymen have suffered. But we can at least help make their lives easier as they go forward.

IN RECOGNITION OF LAWSUIT ABUSE AWARENESS WEEK: SEPTEMBER 17–21, 2001

HON. ROBERT L. EHRLICH, JR.
OF MARYLAND

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 20, 2001

Mr. EHRLICH. Mr. Speaker, while the tragic events of last week remain paramount in our hearts and minds, I, nonetheless, rise today to recognize Maryland Citizens Against Lawsuit Abuse (MDCALA), who joins thousands of Marylanders in declaring the week of September 17, 2001, to be Lawsuit Abuse Awareness Week.

MDCALA is a nonprofit, nonpartisan, legal watchdog organization dedicated to improving the civil justice system. Over the last six years, MDCALA has worked to educate Marylanders about the cost of frivolous litigation. With more than 10,000 supporters statewide, MDCALA emphasizes the negative consequences that lawsuit abuse has on the public.

Maryland is home to many large corporations and family businesses. Yet, the constant fear of lawsuits threatens the economic vitality of our State. Small businesses simply cannot afford one frivolous lawsuit. In order to compensate for potential legal bills, businesses are forced to raise prices to protect their bottom-line. Lawsuit abuse, therefore, results in higher prices, increased medical expenses and loss of business growth.

Through its outreach programs, MDCALA increases awareness of frivolous litigation and the need for personal responsibility throughout the State. In particular, the MDCALA sponsored an essay contest for high school seniors earlier this year. In a terrific example of concern for the next generation of voters, students from throughout Maryland took the time to craft thoughtful, well-written essays on the importance of personal responsibility in their daily lives.

As a former member of the Maryland General Assembly, I worked hard to reform our legal system at the State level. During my tenure in Congress, I have supported efforts with respect to product liability reform, securities litigation reform, and reform of the Federal Superfund program. More importantly, I sponsored legislation that would, in my view, frivolous class action lawsuits brought against mortgage brokers.

Legal reform is a very complex issue. The legal system must function to provide justice to every American. But it does not mean, however, that the status quo is necessarily perfect. When lawsuits and the courts are used in excess or to the detriment of innocent parties, the system should be reviewed and reformed if possible.

For their efforts, let me acknowledge MDCALA Chairman, the Honorable Phillip D. Bissett; Board of Directors—Joseph Brown, Jack Doll, Janna Naylor, Vikki Nelson, Gary Prince, The Honorable Joseph Sachs, Dr. Michael Saylor, and The Honorable Michael Wagner; and Executive Director Nancy H. Hill.

In closing, Mr. Speaker, I remind our citizens that frivolous lawsuits—nationwide—clog our courts and prevent access to legitimate litigation. We must work together to implement common sense reform in order to restore fairness and justice to our legal system. I commend these citizens, and all involved in this worthwhile effort, for their dedication and commitment to acknowledge this week as a time of public awareness on the serious issues associated with lawsuit abuse.

AUTHORIZING USE OF UNITED STATES ARMED FORCES AGAINST THOSE RESPONSIBLE FOR RECENT ATTACKS AGAINST THE UNITED STATES

SPONSORED BY

HON. JOSE E. SERRANO
OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Friday, September 14, 2001

Mr. SERRANO. Mr. Speaker, as you know, I traditionally do not support the use of military force to pursue our national objectives. In the past, I felt that we often resorted to military force too early, resorting to military reprisals before we explored all of our diplomatic options or fully questioned our motivations for such action. But today we are facing a different situation altogether.

I will support this resolution. The attacks on America only three days ago, without a doubt, were an act of war and unmitigated aggression against our country. I will not spend another day of my life without remembering the nightmare of that day. And I, like every other American, know that our liberties and our freedom cannot go unanswered. We have no other option but to respond.

Still, I hope that the president will fully realize the awesome power he has been given and that he uses its full strength only after all other options to protecting our freedoms and bringing our attackers to their knees have been exhausted. The president must use this power prudently and with the understanding that many of us who vote today to approve this power do so with a heavy heart.

Nonetheless, we have no other option. I never thought I would find myself in this situation, where I would agree with many of my more eager peers, that force would be a legitimate option. But I, like my colleagues, know that we have no other choice. Faceless aggressors have challenged our society’s core principles and I am confident that the ideals of our great land will prevail.

We will complete our objective and will not yield until we find and mete out justice to those nations, organizations or persons behind those horrific attacks. Yet I remain confident that we will not fall to the level of the terrorist. I know that the president will use our military force to make the world safer for free peoples and be careful not to wantonly crush innocent souls purely to make a point. Our motivations are right, our goals are just and I know that we will use our awesome military power to make the world better for all of us who embrace freedom in our hearts.

AUTHORIZING USE OF UNITED STATES ARMED FORCES AGAINST THOSE RESPONSIBLE FOR RECENT ATTACKS AGAINST THE UNITED STATES

HON. CAROLYN B. MALONEY
OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Friday, September 14, 2001

Mrs. MALONEY of New York. Mr. Speaker, in strong support of H.J. Res. 64/S.J. Res. 23, the use-of-military force resolution. By passing this resolution, the House of Representatives will send a clear message to our country’s enemies—the United States is resolute. We stand with the President. We are united in defending our freedom and our liberty.

I spent the last two days in New York, offering assistance and comfort to my constituents in this time of great tragedy. Earlier this afternoon, I toured lower Manhattan with the President and other members of the New York, New Jersey and Connecticut delegations.

Over these last few days I have not been able to truly describe the landscape of destruction. When I walk among the rubble I am speechless. I have often thought that perhaps I should call upon religious scholars or poets to try to put these visions into words—I do not think I am up to the task. It is an indescribable place.
Walking through New York City I can tell you that the pain is very deep and very real but so is the resolve to rebuild and to not give into terror.

I have never been so moved by the actions of everyday people.

I have held the relatives of the missing as they sob for their loved ones while they proclaim in the same breath that they have never been so proud of New York City and America.

I have witnessed ash-covered firefighters, as they move upfown after working at ground zero, applauded and embraced by total strangers as if returning from battle.

New Yorkers want a response to the madness of September 11th. Passage of the resolution will solidify this country’s ability to take military action.

Congress stands with the President. And when the perpetrators have been identified, this resolution says that we will support President Bush when he takes action against the cowards who attacked our beloved country.

A day after Pearl Harbor was attacked, President Franklin D. Roosevelt, a great President and a great New Yorker said: “I believe I interpret the will of the Congress and of the President and a great New Yorker said: “I believe I interpret the will of the Congress and of the President.”

We support you and we pray for the people of America. God bless you and God bless America.

Sincerely,

DR. GURMIT SINGH AULAKH,
President,
Council of Khalistan.

COUNCIL OF KHALISTAN CONDEMNS ATTACK ON UNITED STATES
URGES SIKHS TO GIVE BLOOD
WASHINGTON, DC—SEPTEMBER 12, 2001—Dr. Gurmit Singh Aulakh, President of the Council of Khalistan, today condemned the brutal attack on the United States that occurred yesterday.

“The Sikh religion recognizes all humanity as our brothers and we pray for the well-being of all. Our sympathies are with the people of the United States at this tragic time. We especially pray for the families of those who have departed. May God bring peace to these departed souls and to their families.

We support you and we pray for the people of America. God bless you and God bless America.”

Sincerely,

DR. GURMIT SINGH AULAKH,
President,
Council of Khalistan.

COUNCIL OF KHALISTAN CONDEMNS ATTACK ON UNITED STATES
URGES SIKHS TO GIVE BLOOD
WASHINGTON, DC—SEPTEMBER 12, 2001—Dr. Gurmit Singh Aulakh, President of the Council of Khalistan, today condemned the brutal attack on the United States that occurred yesterday.

“On behalf of the 21-million strong Sikh Nation and especially on behalf of more than 500,000 Sikh Americans, I would like to express our sadness and our sympathies to the people of the United States for the terrible attack on the United States yesterday and for the loss of life it entails.”

Dr. Aulakh said.

“I urge Sikh Americans to give blood and to pray for the victims, for their families, and for all those who are helping our country and our communities. I would like to express our sadness and our sympathies to the people of the United States for the terrible attack on the United States yesterday and for the loss of life it entails,” Dr. Aulakh said.

“We must do our part as American citizens,” he said. “We stand together as a nation.”

“Like all Americans and all decent people everywhere, we condemn this brutal and senseless attack. The Sikh religion recognizes all the human race as one and we pray for the well-being of all. Our prayers and our sympathies are with the people of the United States at this tragic time. We especially pray for the families of those who have departed.”

“This tragic event happened in the most diverse city in the world.” Dr. Aulakh said.

“There is hardly a national or ethnic group that has not been touched directly by this tragedy. Our sympathies are extended to those who have been touched personally,” he said. “Violence against innocent people of any religion or ethnicity is unacceptable. It must be ended.”

Unfortunately, some people have engaged in violence against Sikhs in the wake of the bombings yesterday. A couple of young Sikhs were attacked in Brooklyn. Sikh businesses have been stoned and cars have been burned. A Sikh boy was even shot in New York.

“Today we all stand together as Americans, regardless of race, religion, or ethnicity,” he said. “We must not accept terrorism. We must unite against this evil.” He said. “We must work to bring all Americans together to defeat this brutal enemy.”

HON. MIKE ROGERS
OF MICHIGAN
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 20, 2001

Mr. ROGERS of Michigan. Mr. Speaker, today, I speak in support of House Concurrent Resolution 227, condemning bigotry and violence against Arab-Americans, American Muslims, and Americans from South Asia in the wake of the terrorist attacks in New York City, New York, and Washington, D.C., on September 11, 2001.

Our nation suffered a horrendous tragedy on September 11, 2001. There is no question that those responsible for this heinous act must be brought to justice. However, we must not further compound the tragedy by turning against each other in our time of grief and anger. Unfortunately, in the aftermath of the recent attack, there have been reports of violence against Americans of Arab and South Asian descent. This is nothing short of divisive, and is unacceptable, unconscionable, and un-American.

The Arab-American, South Asian-American, and Muslim communities are an integral part of the United States. The state of Michigan itself has one of the largest Middle Eastern communities outside of the Middle East. Like all Americans, members of these communities are outraged by the recent attacks upon our nation. As law abiding and patriotic citizens of our nation they do not deserve our rancor, but the dignity afforded to every American.

Indeed, in the wake of the recent terrorists attacks, the rights and liberties of all Americans must continue to be respected and upheld. We must relentlessly pursue those guilty of this cowardly act, and refrain from lashing out against the innocent. I fully support the language of H. Con. Res. 227, which stresses that throughout our search for the perpetrators of the terrorists acts of September 11, 2001, our nation will continue to adhere to the civil rights and civil liberties that has made the United States the land of the free.

IN RECOGNITION OF THE MT. OLIVE MISSIONARY BAPTIST WORSHIP CENTER

HON. KEN BENTS T
OF TEXAS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 20, 2001

Mr. BENTS T, Mr. Speaker, I rise today in recognition of the 100th Anniversary of the construction of Mt. Olive Missionary Baptist Worship Center in Houston, Texas. On Sunday, September 23, 2001, the congregation will celebrate their centennial.

Under the direction of Pastor Willie James Coleman, the theme for the celebration will be Faith, Love, Patience, a Reality. The program for the celebration will also include a nice tribute to the late Professor Nathaniel Edward. Professor Edward will always be remembered for his commitment to the congregation and his musical offerings. Each December Professor Edward would direct the annual Candlelight musical.

Pastor Willie James Coleman has been at the helm of Mt. Olive Missionary Baptist Worship Center since 1974. His leadership has seen the congregation through the past 27 years. Throughout his tenure the church has undergone much renovation and expanded its membership.

Mt. Olive also has several Deacons; John Paul, William Derrick, Tommy E. Ford, Stacy Brisco, Ed Edwards, Issac Johnson, John McClellan, Charles Johnson, and Walter Jefferson. The spiritual leadership at Mt. Olive serves as a beacon in the Third Ward community. With such programs as Feed the Hungry and the Annual back to School Clothing Drive, the congregation’s sense of community activism and outreach provides an ideal model of service to the city of Houston. Their dedication to the community and commitment to their neighbors sets them apart as the spark that keeps faith aglow.

In closing Mr. Speaker, I want to again recognize the many years of the construction of Mt. Olive Missionary Baptist Worship Center and offer my sincerest wishes for a successful celebration.

2001 EMERGENCY SUPPLEMENTAL APPROPRIATIONS ACT FOR RECOVERY FROM AND RESPONSE TO TERRORIST ATTACKS ON THE UNITED STATES

SPEECH OF
HON. CAROLYN B. MALONEY
OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Friday, September 14, 2001

Mrs. MALONEY of New York. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank Chairman YOUNG and Ranking Member O’BRYEN for their leadership today. Congress has taken swift action to respond to the critical needs of our Nation stemming from the terrorist attack.

This emergency supplemental appropriations for $40 billion in disaster relief and increased security means so much to this Nation and to the great city of New York. The support for domestic and humanitarian assistance is a vital and important first step on our Nation’s long road of recovery.

The emergency supplemental package provides $40 billion both to fund rescue operations and a military response to Tuesday’s terrorist attacks in New York and Virginia.

I am especially pleased that the supplemental funds targeting to New York. To return lower Manhattan to its former state, New York will need this funding and much more support in the future.

Today is the first time I have been back to Washington since the attacks. I can tell you that I have never been so moved by the actions of everyday people.

Walking through New York City I can tell you that the pain is very deep and very real but so is the resolve to rebuild and not give in to terror.

I have held the relatives of the missing as they sob for their loved ones while they proclaim in the same breath that they have never been so proud of New York City and America. I have witnessed ash-en-faced firefighters, as they move uptown after working at ground zero, applauded and embraced by total strangers as if returning from battle.

New Yorkers will come back. Today I thank all of my colleagues and all Americans for this legislation and for helping get the City on its way.

HON. DUNCAN HUNTER
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 20, 2001

Mr. HUNTER. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize the extraordinary service and dedication of Mr. Wilton “Curly” Collier of Alpine, California, who will be honored by his community this Saturday, September 22, 2001. Curly was born in Vernon, Texas on April 19, 1921. His family moved to Colorado where he attended high school before moving to California, who will be honored by his community.

Curly joined the International Kiwanis Club with the sponsorship of fellow Alpine resident Bob Wilson on October 6, 1967. In the Kiwanis, Curly spent his time volunteering for the many activities and fund-raisers the Kiwanis sponsor, including the Worldwide Service Project, disaster-relief efforts, worldwide charities, and the Kiwanis family youth programs.

Curly became the president of the Alpine Kiwanis Club in 1970 and he used this position to help raise money to purchase radio equipment for the Alpine Fire Station. He was also responsible for a 346% membership increase at the Alpine Chapter, which went from 15 to 52 members in just his first year of office. In recognition of his outstanding efforts and achievements, he was elected to the office of Lt. Governor of Kiwanis Division 31 in 1976.

In 1985, Curly started the Endowment Fund for Children’s Hospitals and the Miracle Mile of Quarters Project. In the first year of its existence, the Miracle Mile of Quarters Project raised and donated $56 to the Children’s Hospital. Last year, the project awarded the hospital’s single largest donation of $45,500.

During his tenure as a member of the Kiwanis Club, Curly has not only held high-ranking offices, but has been the recipient of many awards, including the Kiwanian of the Year in 1987 and the distinguished Hexson Award in 1996. This Kiwanian International Foundation in honor of the first Kiwanian International President, George F. Hexson. The recipients are honored each year during a special reception at the Kiwanis International and District Conventions and are listed in the annual publication of the Kiwanis Honors Booklet, as well as on a permanent donor recognition electronic accolade at the Kiwanis International Office.

In 1998, Curly received the Tablet of Honor, the most prestigious honor available from the Kiwanis International Foundation. This award is given to recipients on behalf of individuals, Kiwanis Clubs, corporations, or organizations to honor their accomplishments and recognize their service. Besides the prestige that comes with the award, recipients are pleased to know that contributions made in their names are helping the Kiwanis organization provide assistance to children around the world. Each recipient has their name added to the Tablet of Honor accolade in the lobby of the International Office in Indianapolis, IN, and all are honored at a special Kiwanis reception at each year’s international convention.

Mr. Speaker, Curly is a symbol of commitment and dedication to his fellow citizens and community. He has dedicated his life to helping the Kiwanis serve both his community and children across the world. Today, let us all honor and thank Curly for his remarkable contributions and for serving as an example of placing others before yourself.

HON. LANE EVANS
OF ILLINOIS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 20, 2001

Mr. EVANS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to a dedicated citizen and long-time employee of the Quad Cities Development Group of Rock Island, Illinois—Ms. Helen Brandt.

The Quad Cities Development Group, an umbrella organization for economic development for the major cities in my district, has certainly been a dynamic force for enhancing the quality of life in the Quad Cities.

For the past nine years, Helen has been a Project Manager for the Quad Cities Development Group. Helen has been a part of the successful projects that brought jobs and investment to the Quad Cities area including organizing marketing efforts for business clients.
TRIBUTE TO JESUS ‘JESSE’ SALVADOR VARGAS AND ROBERT ‘BOBBY’ A. HILL

HON. PETER J. VISCLOSKY OF INDIANA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 20, 2001

Mr. VISCLOSKY. Mr. Speaker, it gives me great pleasure to honor two dedicated citizens of Indiana’s First Congressional District on the occasion of their retirement from the Inland Steel Company of East Chicago, Indiana. Jesus “Jesse” Salvador Vargas and Robert “Bobby” A. Hill, both longtime members of Local Union 1010 of the United Steelworkers of America, will be honored at a Retirement Party to be held on Friday, September 21, 2001 at American Legion Post 369 in East Chicago.

A native of Monterrey, Mexico, Jesse Vargas has been employed in the Transportation Department at Inland Steel since 1965. During that time, Mr. Vargas has been extremely active in Local Union 1010. He has held many appointed positions, including serving on both the Sports and Community Service committees. Mr. Vargas has also been elected Safety Man for the Transportation Department, and has been selected to represent Local 1010 at many United Steelworkers of America International Conventions. Throughout his career, he has shown his dedication to his Union Brothers and Sisters by traveling across the nation to assist them in strikes, lockouts, and organizing drives. Now retiring with his wife, Rubia, after a 36-year career, Mr. Vargas serves as an outstanding example of the dedicated Union craftsmen and laborers that built our nation.

Bobby Hill, an employee of Inland Steel and member of Local Union 1010 for 43 years, has provided exemplary service and leadership to both his employer and his union. Hailing from Haysi, Virginia, Mr. Hill grew up the youngest of nine children. Since 1958, he worked as a Switchman, Conductor, and Engineer at the Indiana Harbor Works. Mr. Hill has also served diligently in numerous elected positions at Local 1010, including Safety Steward for the Transportation Department, Guide, Trustee, and Head Trustee. As a member of the Community Service committee, Mr. Hill volunteered his services across the Calumet Region. Like Jesse Vargas, Mr. Hill traveled across the country to assist his brethren in strikes, lockouts, and organizing drives. Bobby Hill will be greatly missed by his colleagues at Inland Steel and Local 1010 as he retires with his wife, Mary Ann.

Mr. Speaker, I ask that you and my colleagues join with me today in thanking these two men for their lifetime of service, and in wishing them well in their retirement. Bobby Hill and Jesse Vargas have given many hours of their precious time in service of their Union brethren. The sacrifices made by dedicated workers like Mr. Hill and Mr. Vargas have made American labor the safest, most efficient, and most quality-driven labor force in the world. I wish them both a long, healthy, and happy retirement.

TRIBUTE TO COMMANDER JOHN MILEY

HON. JOHN P. MURTHA OF PENNSYLVANIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 20, 2001

Mr. MURTHA. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize a truly outstanding Naval Officer, Commander John Miley. He has served with distinction and dedication for three years as a Congressional Liaison Officer in the Appropriations Matters Office. It is a privilege for me to recognize his many outstanding achievements and commend him for the superb service he has provided to the Department of the Navy, the Congress, and our great Nation.

During his tenure as a representative of the Department of the Navy to the House and Senate Appropriations Committees, Commander Miley diligently and successfully worked on a wide range of timely issues. During that time he has accompanied me on numerous fact-finding visits to Navy and Marine Corps facilities both stateside and abroad. I could always count on him to provide well thought out and candid input. Commander Miley was always on top of the issues of the day, and being briefed on all matters, I always got the “right information at the right time”.

Additionally, Commander Miley has provided members of the Appropriations Committees, as well as our professional and associate staffs with timely and accurate support regarding Navy plans, programs and budget decisions. He has earned our respect and trust for his dedication, knowledge of the Navy and the way he handles himself in this demanding position. His valuable contributions have enabled us to continue our support of the vibrant relationship and to maintain the most modern, well-trained and well-equipped naval forces in the world.

Mr. Speaker, it gives me great pleasure to recognize Commander John Miley before the Congress today, for through his stated and unstated accomplishments that he is a true leader with a clear sense of purpose, conviction, and conscience of service to his Nation. As he departs the Washington area to command Helicopter Combat Support Squadron EIGHT in Norfolk, VA, I call upon my colleagues to wish him and his wife, Anne-Marie, and their young son, Sean, continued success and the traditional Navy send-off “faul winds and following seas.”

IN TRIBUTE TO CHARLES M. HAIR, M.D.

HON. ELTON GALLEGLY
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 20, 2001

Mr. GALLEGLY. Mr. Speaker, I rise in tribute to Charles M. Hair, M.D., cofounder and President of the Livingston Memorial Foundation and Chairman of the Board of Livingston Memorial Visiting Nurse Association.

Dr. Hair was raised in my district, in the farming community of Santa Paula, California. He joined the U.S. Army after earning his M.D. at the USC School of Medicine, and served two years in an Army field hospital in post-World War II Salzburg, Austria.

He returned to his home in Ventura County, California, in 1948, and for the next 38 years led a fulfilling life as a family doctor. He and his wife, Gerry, whom he met when he was a student at Ventura College and she a student at Ventura High School, raised five children here.

During that time, Dr. Hair made his home a better home for all his neighbors. Dr. Hair’s leadership in the field of nonprofit healthcare philanthropy began in 1950 when he became an active member of the Ventura County Medical Society, of which he became president in 1958. He soon joined the Governing Council of the California Medical Council and served as CMA president from 1981 to 1983. Other boards he served on through the years are the California State Board of Consumer Affairs, the California State Chamber of Commerce, Western Conference of Prepaid Service Plan and Blue Shield of California.

Perhaps his most enduring legacy is co-founding Livingston Memorial Foundation in 1974 with Oxnard attorney Ben Nordman. The Foundation provides grants to enhance local patient care and make it available to people in financial need. In 1981, the then-Visiting Nurses Association, founded in 1947, affiliated with Livingston Memorial Foundation and changed its name to Livingston Memorial Visiting Nurse Association (LMVNA). Together, the nonprofit organizations have greatly enhanced health care for those who otherwise would not be able to afford it.

LMVNA was founded to provide home care services as an alternative to institutionalizing the frail, elderly, sick and disabled, an idea dear to the heart of a family physician. In 1965, Medicare certified LMVNA as a home health agency. In 1987—now affiliated with Livingston Memorial Foundation—it developed a Medicare-certified Hospice program. The LMVNA Hospice program incorporates skilled nursing care with a multidisciplinary team approach to meet the physical, emotional and spiritual needs of the terminally ill and their families.
EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

September 20, 2001

Mr. Speaker, Dr. Hair “retired” in the mid-1980s, but his dedication to his profession and the ill continues undaunted. He is the epitome of the family doctor, one who knows that diagnosing an illness is just one part of the healing process. I know my colleagues will join me in recognizing his vast contributions to medicine, to his community, to the ill, and thank him for a lifetime of healing.

TRIBUTE TO RABBI ISRAEL ZOBERMAN

HON. EDWARD L. SCHROCK OF VIRGINIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 20, 2001

Mr. SCHROCK. Dear Mr. Speaker, it is with great pleasure that I rise today to honor Rabbi Israel Zoberman, spiritual leader of Congregation Beth Chaverim in Virginia Beach. He is also the President of the Hampton Roads Board of Rabbis, and Chairman of the Community Relations Council of the United Jewish Federation of Tidewater. I would like to share the following article that was written by Rabbi Zoberman and appeared in the Virginian-Pilot on August 13, 2001.

ISRAEL WILL FOCUS ON SURVIVAL FIRST, PEACE LATER

I have just encountered a place like no other where a watermelon may include an explosive device and fanatic suicide bombers threaten to rip apart all who happen to be in their vicinity. Being in Jerusalem a week ago, the latest terrifying carnage there has a chilling immediacy of both numbness and outrage. Given the toll on fulfilling our individual lives in the here and now, catering to our every whim, understand those young Islamic terrorists transformed into martyrs with their bodies perfumed to reach heavenly delights not before turning earth into hell?

On a recent solidarity mission to Israel sponsored by the Union of American Hebrew Congregations (Judaism’s Reform branch), I was exposed to that reality reminiscent of the twilight zone, though the Israelis, to their credit proceed almost with life as usual. In fact, a major disaster was averted in Haifa when a suicide bomber got cold feet, unusual occurrence. We were there to offer our brethren the familial support that only our physical presence could provide, so essential to their ability to persevere in face of a challenge not to them alone but to all civilized life.

Israel’s dramatic accomplishments, aided by the promise of peace, particularly shine brightly in that part of the world, with a GNP approaching Western Europe’s and a second-to-none high-tech revolution reflective of its brain-power, underlining an alliance with human progress and innovation. It is even more significant when given the context of security concerns while absorbing a million immigrants from as diverse cultures as the Russian and Ethiopian ones. The great attribute of the new Israel is rooted in the Arab world following bitter wars with only a year ago reaching the brink of finally burying the hatchet with the resilient Palestinians. That dream dashed by Chairman Arafat who apparently could not grasp how far his people came, turning instead to his all too familiar way of violence in violation of the Oslo Accords that he signed. Rabbi Michael Ryan, a former Prime Minister, who was at Camp David, assured us that former Prime Minister Barak indeed courageously made the “historical concessions” inviting Arafat to the test. The latter’s message of non-compromise is quite clear. Colonel (Res.) Yigal Carmon, president of the Middle East Peace Study of Peace, that the fateful bullet continues to affect the Middle East’s destiny. But the petite and assertive woman was also adamant of the need to stand up to terrorism, and carefully separate the two peoples, in which I wholeheartedly concur. Discourtingly, she reported of yet no information on the fate of the three kidnapped Israeli soldiers including Benny Avraham of Tidewater’s adopted Parades Katz. At the same setting, the new U.S. Ambassador to Israel, Daniel Kurtzer, asked us in the midst of a trying scenario to remember the end goal of peace.

Prime Minister Ariel Sharon’s message to us dwelled on the overriding importance of preserving our common Jewish identity and his profound appreciation for the role played by American Jewry, the bridge between the small Jewish state and the tested ally and true friend of the world’s sole super power, which too has painfully faced Arab terrorism. He is under heavy criticism for this dovish transformation from his own Likud party and Israelis at large to end an intolerable situation that no state would put up with and some of them actually did. They also engaged in organized terror in which Arafat’s non-democratic and corrupt Palestinian Authority is a key factor, aims at reducing the level of cooperation and the risk of wider war which, I believe, might not be prevented after all. From the political left, Yossi Beilin, the former Justice Minister and architect of the Oslo Accords, told us of Sharon’s need to negotiate with Arafat even under fire. However, the latter’s message of non-compromise is quite clear. Colonel (Res.) Yigal Carmon, president of the Middle East Media and Research Institute, proved to us that the Arab leaders use double-talk in English and Arabic. They are denying the very basic assumptions of Jewish peoplehood, its link to the land of Israel and sacred bond to Jerusalem’s Temple Mount, intent on covering Israel with Palestinian refugees, whom they abandoned. Employing traditional anti-Semitism, they also disregard the Holocaust and continue to teach their children to demonize Israelis and become terrorist-martyrs.

Israel can not afford to give up its vision of peace for itself and the entire region. If the terrorists had attacked Oak Ridge, we might have been injured or killed. There may be a war, but I am not afraid. Many others will be put to the test but given the context of security concerns while absorbing a million immigrants from as diverse cultures as the Russian and Ethiopian ones. The great attribute of the new Israel is rooted in the Arab world following bitter wars with only a year ago reaching the brink of finally burying the hatchet with the resilient Palestinians. That dream dashed by Chairman Arafat who apparently could not grasp how William McDonough has dedicated his professional life to strengthening the economic and spiritual ties between our environment and ourselves. It is therefore fitting that he is being honored with the 2001 Josephine and Frank Duveneck Humanitarian Award. Mr. Speaker, I ask my colleagues today to join me in honoring this special man who has given so much to our community and our environment. We are indeed a better country, a better planet and a better people because of him.

TRIBUTE TO THE FIREFIGHTERS OF THE THIRTYMILE FIRE

HON. JAY INSLEE OF WASHINGTON
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 20, 2001

Mr. INSLEE. Mr. Speaker, I rise to speak in honor of four heroic individuals from Washington State who gave their lives protecting our precious national forests. On July 10, 2001, Tom Craven, Karen Fitzpatrick, Jessica Johnson, and Devin Weaver died while battling a fire in the Okanogan National Forest. The House of Representatives, rightly so, has already passed a resolution honoring these firefighters, but I would like to share with my colleagues, and indeed the rest of the nation, a little more about these courageous young Americans whose lives were cut far too short.

Tom Craven, of Ellensburg, began working for the Forest Service as a firefighter in 1990. Tom earned 11 letters from Cle Elum High School in football, track, and basketball, and played football at the College of the Redwoods in Eureka, CA. He graduated from Central Washington University in 1997, and was the first member of the Craven family to graduate from college and obtain a degree. A devoted family man, Tom is survived by his wife, Evelyn, and his two children.

Karen Fitzpatrick, of Yakima, had just graduated from West Valley High School where she was an honor student, soccer player, and musician. She was involved in the Department of Ecology’s Youth Corps, active in her church and the Kiwanis Key Club, and loved to cook, bake, and sew. Karen is survived by her parents, John and Kathie Fitzpatrick.

Jessica Johnson, of Yakima, graduated from West Valley High School in 1999 and was a junior at Central Washington University majoring in Food Science and Nutrition. She loved the outdoors and was strong in body and spirit. A volunteer at West Valley Fire Department since 1998, Jessica is survived by her parents, Jody Gray and Rick Johnson.

Devin Weaver, of Yakima, was enrolled in Yakima Valley Community College since 1999 and was planning to pursue a degree in Electrcal Engineering from the University of Washington. Devin enjoyed backpacking, hunting, and camping in his free time. Since the eighth grade, Devin worked for his father’s silk-flower manufacturing business and always volunteered for extra work assignments. Devin is survived by his parents, Ken and Barbara Weaver.

Firefighters are on the front lines, every single day, saving lives and safeguarding our property and natural resources. While most of us would immediately flee a smoky, fire-engulfed home, building, or forest, these brave souls choose to enter these dangerous places sacrificing their safety for ours. I want to thank them personally for their bravery and their courage. Their heroism is of the same rank as so many other American patriots who have lost their lives in service to our country, Tom, Karen, Jessica, and Devin—you are in our thoughts and prayers.
TRIBUTE TO MARTHELIA HARGROVE ON BEING AWARDED THE 2001 JOSEPHINE AND FRANK DUVENECK HUMANITARIAN AWARD FOR REGIONAL SERVICE

HON. ANNA G. ESHOO
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 20, 2001

Ms. ESHOO. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor a great American and distinguished Californian, Marthelia Hargrove, who is being honored with the 2001 Josephine and Frank Duveneck Humanitarian Award for regional service on Saturday, September 22, 2001, in Los Altos Hills, California.

Named the National Principal of the Year for 2000–2001 by the National Alliance of Black School Educators, Marthelia Hargrove has distinguished herself as a passionate advocate of students and the disenchanted, and as a model of excellence in teaching and administration.

A native of the segregated South, Marthelia Hargrove traces her commitment to education back to a one-room schoolhouse near Oxford, North Carolina. A child growing up in the wake of the depression, her parents endured great sacrifice in order to ensure that Marthelia, her sister and her brother received a decent education. Marthelia Hargrove earned a scholarship to study at Virginia Union University in Richmond and a Master's Degree in early education from Petersburg's Virginia State University.

Having married while in Richmond, Marthelia and her husband relocated to Santa Clara 28 years ago where they've lived ever since. In 1981, Marthelia Hargrove was appointed principal of the Brentwood Oaks School in East Palo Alto. Nine years later, she took the helm at Costano School, determined to transform this low-achieving elementary school into a premier teaching institution. During her eleven-year tenure, she has more than succeeded. Last year Costano's score in the state’s Academic Performance Index was 142 points higher than the previous year and 84 points higher than the state median.

The recipient of the Ravenswood Principal of the Year Award, Marthelia Hargrove has also been honored by the Mid-peninsula NAACP, the San Jose University Department of Teacher Education, the Ravenswood Community Nguzo Saba Committee, the San Mateo County Sheriff's Department and the City of East Palo Alto. A member of the National Political Congress of Black Women, she also serves on the Board of the East Palo Alto Kids Foundation.

Marthelia Hargrove has dedicated her life to building extraordinary educational institutions that involve students, parents and community members in its success and its failure. She has worked hard to provide a brighter future for underprivileged children and for children of diverse ethnicities and backgrounds. It is therefore fitting that Marthelia Hargrove is being honored with the 2001 Josephine and Frank Duveneck Humanitarian Award. Mr. Speaker, I ask my colleagues to join me today in honoring this great and good woman who has given so much to our young citizens and to our educational institutions. We are indeed a better nation, a better community and a better people because of her.

IN HONOR OF JEREMY GLICK OF WEST MILFORD, NEW JERSEY

HON. MARGE ROUKEMA
OF NEW JERSEY
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 20, 2001

Mrs. ROUKEMA. Mr. Speaker, I rise today with a heavy heart to honor the great bravery, courage, and patriotism of Jeremy Glick of West Milford, New Jersey. His acts of exceptional bravery, valor, and patriotism are worthy of the Congress granting Jeremy the Congressional Gold Medal.

Jeremy Glick was a passenger on board United Airlines Flight #93 that on September 11, 2001, departed from Newark International Airport at 8:01 a.m. on its scheduled route to San Francisco, California, with 11 passengers and crew members and 37 passengers on board. Shortly after departure, the plane was hijacked by terrorists. At 10:37 a.m. United Airlines Flight 93 crashed near Shanksville, Pennsylvania, killing all on board.

It is clear from the evidence that after learning that other hijacked planes had been used to attack the World Trade Center in New York City, Jeremy and others onboard United Airlines Flight #93 decided to fight the terrorists for control of the plane. Their brave defiance appears to have caused United Flight #93 to crash prematurely, potentially saving hundreds of thousands of lives. It is widely believed that the White House or the Capitol was the target of the terrorists.

Jeremy was a devoted family man. His wife Lyzbeth had recently given birth to their daughter Emerson. Anyone who has seen the picture of Jeremy holding his baby daughter can clearly see the deep love that was in his heart.

Jeremy was a man who loved life. Lyz, his brother Jared, or any of his friends could tell you endless stories that end in laughter. Ironically, Jeremy and his buddies dressed up like their favorite superhero couple of weeks ago. Jeremy dressed up as the Green Lantern. Little would we know that on September 11, 2001, Jeremy became a superhero.

Soon after the terrorists took over the plane, Jeremy called his wife on his cell phone. Jeremy's family relayed the information to the police over another phone line. After Jeremy learned that other terrorists crashed planes into the World Trade Center he left his phone for a while and returned to say that the men voted to attack the terrorists. He left the phone and said he would be back—he never came back on the line.

Now our nation faces a long and hard struggle to rid the world of the evil that took Jeremy's and so many others lives on September 11. Many thousands of our men and women in uniform will meet the challenge. Jeremy though not expecting to become one of the first "soldiers" in this crusade. I will forever remember and honor Jeremy as a true American superhero.

Mr. Speaker, I urge passage of this measure. God bless Jeremy Glick and God bless America.

TRIBUTE TO MARY CURTIS DAVEY ON BEING AWARDED THE 2001 JOSEPHINE AND FRANK DUVENECK HUMANITARIAN AWARD FOR LOCAL SERVICE

HON. ANNA G. ESHOO
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 20, 2001

Ms. ESHOO. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor a great American and distinguished Californian, Mary Curtis Davey, who is being honored with the 2001 Josephine and Frank Duveneck Humanitarian Award for local service on Saturday, September 22, 2001, in Los Altos Hills, California.

In 1986, Mary Curtis Davey became the first woman to serve on the Los Altos Hills City Council. During her 6-year tenure, she distinguished herself through her unparalleled support of open space and fair housing. Through her civic and community involvement, Mary Curtis Davey has improved countless lies on the Peninsula, by focusing on housing for low-income residents, basic services for the elderly, and encouraging others to engage in volunteer work, non-profit organizations and local government. Among the organizations that have benefited from her effective leadership are the United Way of Santa Clara County, the American Red Cross, Avenidas, Bay Area Action, and Committee for Green Foothills.

At the request of legendary humanitarian Josephine Duveneck, Mary Curtis Davey joined the Board of Trust for the Hidden Villa environmental Preserve in 1966 where she served for 20 years, including four as its president. A 1600-acre oasis for both children and adults.
EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

Ms. KAPTUR. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this resolution condemning bigotry and violence against Arab-Americans. I am proud to be a cosponsor of this resolution introduced by the gentleman from Michigan, Mr. BONIOR, and I thank the distinguished majority leader, Mr. ARMEY, for his active support of the resolution.

This past week our precious nation has suffered a great amount of pain and sorrow inflicted by horrible individuals who have no respect for innocent life. America can ill-afford to have our own people unfairly and unjustifiably inflicting even more pain on other Americans or friends of Americans who are of Arab heritage or of the Muslim faith, and who bear no responsibility for the events of September 11th. In fact, they have joined with their neighbors in condemning this heinous attack. Arab Americans deserve to be recognized as the patriotic individuals they are, not victimized for their heritage. Indeed, the greatest enemy of a radical Islamic terrorist is a practicing Muslim.

This past Tuesday evening, as the Toledo Blade reported in its September 19th edition, "about 1,500 people, a . . . mix of Christians and Muslims, gathered . . . at the Islamic Center of Greater Toledo in Perrysburg Township to encircle the mosque, pray for the safety of those who worship within, and sing patriotic songs."

"American flags were everywhere—medium-sized ones along the driveways, a large one hanging from the mosque's roof, and small red, white, and blue stickers adorning everyone’s clothing."

"The people making up the crowd, many of whom rarely cross paths, made an effort to reach out to one another in this time of national crisis."

There will be many images that we recall from last week. One, which will always stand out for me, is the image of the Statue of Liberty erect in New York Harbor. More importantly, the values for which she stands are lodged deeper in our hearts. While Lady Liberty witnessed this assault on peace, she remains a beacon calling for our tired but valiant and indispensable rescue workers. She reassures our fellow citizens who lost their loved ones. And she encourages our huddled neighbors throughout America who are offering support for one another, as we discover who made this assault on freedom and why. She continues to lift her lamp beside the golden door of freedom. She increases our resolve as Americans. She lifts her lamp to celebrate the thousands who did survive, and to illuminate those who banded together in one of the most tremendous outpourings of selflessness in our nation's history.

The depth of the American people's resourcefulness has been demonstrated to the entire world. Our nation will prevail over the most recent challenge to our liberties. We will actively embrace the precious diversity that is America. Our families hail from throughout the world, with religious convictions of every faith. Our diverse population offers the strongest nation in support of freedom in the world.

Over the years, many people of Arab heritage have come to call the United States home. They are just as loyal as any other American and deserve equal treatment. I know in my own community of Toledo one could not have asked for a stronger show of patriotism than what I had heard from so many Arab Americans wanting to know what they could do to help the victims of Tuesday's assault.

It was truly sad to hear the stories of Arab Americans around the nation, including some in my community, who were the targets of wrong-placed anger. I share the intense feeling that our nation and our people have been immeasurably hurt. But I firmly believe that as a people we must commit ourselves to fighting the terrorism that invaded our shores, not succumb to its infective powers by lashing out at the innocent.

We need to honor the lives that were lost, celebrate the heroes that created another wonderful moment in our nation's stunning history, and emulate the people of Toledo who came together across faiths and across heritage to form what Hussein Barby described as "like a family."

Our American family has been hurt. And in the best American tradition, let our family band together at a time when our strength lies in our unity.
The Senate met at 9 a.m. and was called to order by the Honorable Jack Reed, a Senator from the State of Rhode Island.

Pledge of Allegiance

The Honorable Jack Reed led the Pledge of Allegiance, as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

The legislative clerk read the following letter:

To the Senate:

Under the provisions of rule I, paragraph 3, of the Standing Rules of the Senate, I hereby appoint the Honorable Jack Reed, a Senator from the State of Rhode Island, to perform the duties of the Chair.

Robert C. Byrd, President pro tempore.

Mr. REED thereupon assumed the chair as Acting President pro tempore.

Recognition of the Acting Majority Leader

The Acting President pro tempore, the acting majority leader is recognized.

Schedule

Mr. REID. Mr. President, the majority leader has asked me to remind everyone we are going to have a vote at approximately 9:25 this morning.

There will now be 20 minutes of concurrent debate on the nomination of Sharon Prost to be United States Circuit Judge and Reggie Walton to be United States District Judge.

Following these votes, the Senate will stand in recess subject to the call of the Chair, as both parties are having conferences.

This is an extremely important day for us. We have the Defense Appropriations Committee bill which we believe will be brought up and also some legislation dealing with the airlines.

So there will be rollcall votes today. There will be rollcall votes on Monday, earlier than usual—sometimes probably midmorning or early afternoon. So we ask everyone’s cooperation, which we usually get.

Reservation of Leader Time

The Acting President pro tempore. Under the previous order, the leadership time is reserved.

Executive Session

Nomination of Sharon Prost, of the District of Columbia, to be United States Circuit Judge for the Federal Circuit

The Acting President pro tempore. Under the previous order, there will be a total of 20 minutes for debate on the two nominations, with the time to be equally divided between the chairman and the ranking member.

The Senator from Utah.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, let me first thank the distinguished majority leader, Senator Daschle, and my dear friend the Chairman of the Judiciary Committee, Senator Leahy, for their support and efforts in moving this nomination and scheduling this vote today. The nominees before us are both great. We are happy to have them. We are going to have a vote at approximately 9:25 this morning.

The Senator from Utah.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, let me first thank the distinguished majority leader, Senator Daschle, and my dear friend the Chairman of the Judiciary Committee, Senator Leahy, for their support and efforts in moving this nomination and scheduling this vote today. The nominees before us are both great. We are happy to have them. We are going to have a vote at approximately 9:25 this morning.

There will now be 20 minutes of concurrent debate on the nomination of Sharon Prost to be United States Circuit Judge and Reggie Walton to be United States District Judge.

Following these votes, the Senate will stand in recess subject to the call of the Chair, as both parties are having conferences.

This is an extremely important day for us. We have the Defense Appropriations Committee bill which we believe will be brought up and also some legislation dealing with the airlines.

So there will be rollcall votes today. There will be rollcall votes on Monday, earlier than usual—sometimes probably midmorning or early afternoon. So we ask everyone’s cooperation, which we usually get.
serving as acting solicitor of the NLRB. I sought Sharon out to work for me on the Senate Labor Committee because I learned of her intellect, her integrity, her exceptional legal skills, and her background in finance.

In her role as my chief counsel on the Judiciary Committee, she has been responsible for everything on the committee agenda, including matters of immigration, antitrust, and patent law.

I cannot stress enough how indebted I am to her for her service over all of these many years. She is one of the most loyal, decent, and intelligent people with whom I have had the privilege to serve.

Sharon truly is something of a modern renaissance woman, with a breadth and depth of knowledge in a variety of areas. Her background and education make her well suited for service on the Federal Circuit, which, as you know, handles myriad issues ranging from veterans matters to patent cases to employment cases.

It has been said that “[t]he value of government is the people it serves is in direct relationship to the interest citizens themselves display in the affairs of state.” Sharon has proved herself to be a valuable asset to our Nation, having devoted much of her life to public service.

I know that Sharon holds the other Members of this body in the highest regard, and that those who have worked with her have the utmost respect for her as well—a fact reflected by the standing ovation that the Judiciary Committee members gave Sharon when they unanimously approved her nomination to be sent to the full Senate.

Sharon has been the primary counsel working for me on a number of bipartisan initiatives, including the Violence Against Women Act with Senator BIDEN and his staff, as well as the religious liberty bill that was passed last year. And Sharon has worked closely with Senator KENNEDY’s staff over the years on Labor Committee and immigration issues.

I would be remiss in talking about Sharon Prost and her many accomplishments without mentioning the role she considers most important of all: that of being the mother of her terrific sons, Matthew and Jeffrey. She is one of the most noble and fine people I have ever known.

Let me close by noting that Sharon is not only an able counsel and wonderful mother, but she is a person with a good heart.

As Robert Traver wrote more than four decades ago, judges, like people, may be divided roughly into four classes: judges with neither head nor heart—these are to be avoided at all costs; judges with head but no heart—they are almost as bad; then judges with heart but no head—risky but better than the first two; and finally, those rare judges who possess both head and heart.

Sharon will serve this country as a judge with head and a heart. In fact, Matthew and Jeffrey will tell you that one of their mom’s favorite things to say to them when they needed their mom’s love and reassurance was “use your head and your heart, you will do things right and do the right things.”

These words are insufficient to express how much I respect and love her, and how much I will miss her and her skill and good counsel. She truly has mixed emotions, but I have no doubt that confirming her to the Federal Circuit will be the right thing for the country.

Let me also take a moment to express again my personal thanks to the distinguished chairman of the Judiciary Committee, Senator LEAHY for moving Sharon out of the committee and for the distinguished majority leader for scheduling this vote today. I also appreciate recognizing Sharon’s skills and talent and selecting her for the prestigious and noble position of being a circuit judge.

I urge and thank my colleagues’ support for Sharon’s nomination.

Mr. President, I wish to say a few words in support of Judge Reggie Walton, who has been nominated to be a district court judge for the District of Columbia. Judge Walton is an excellent nominee for this position who brings a wealth of talent and experience to the job.

In 1981, President Ronald Reagan appointed Judge Walton to the Superior Court of the District of Columbia. He served as the deputy presiding judge of the Superior Court’s Criminal Division from 1986 to 1989. In 1989, Judge Walton was appointed by President George H.W. Bush as the Associate Director of the Office of National Drug Control Policy, Executive Office of the President. Judge Walton served in this position until 1991, when he was named by President Bush as the Senior White House Advisor for Crime. Judge Walton was reappointed to the Superior Court bench by President Bush in 1991. Judge Walton served as the presiding judge of the Superior Court’s Domestic Violence Unit in 2000. Since January 1, 2001, Judge Walton has served as the presiding judge of the Superior Court’s Family Division.

Judge Walton has been active in legal education throughout his professional career. Currently, he serves as a faculty member with the National Institute of Trial Advocacy.

The Acting President pro tempore, The Senator from Vermont.

Mr. LEAHY. Mr. President, what is the parliamentary situation?

The Acting President pro tempore. The Senate is considering en bloc the nominations of Sharon Prost and Reggie Walton. There are 20 minutes evenly divided. The Senator controls 10 minutes.

Mr. LEAHY. I thank the Chair, my distinguished friend from New England. To reiterate, I commend the President of the United States for his speech last night. I said to him after the speech that I thought, as most people do, it was the finest speech of his public career. He spoke to us in accordance with constitutional provisions contained in article II, section 3 of our Constitution to report to the Congress on the state of the Union. But, more importantly, he spoke to all Americans.

I was there. My wife Marcelle was in the galleries. Millions upon millions of Americans across the country and people all around the world are with the President. We knew America had been hit by murderous terrorist acts in New York and at the Pentagon in Virginia, and at the plane crash in Pennsylvania.

The President was right in saying that there are no easy answers; that we face a long and terrible fight.

I could not help but think as I listened to him that we will know our defeats in the years ahead. Often we will not know our victories. That makes the fight even more difficult. It is easier when you face a well-known foe, as we have in other times. Here we will know when we lose some battles. We will not always know when we win some.

The President should know that we have a United States behind us—a United States of America united more than at any time since I have served in the Senate. We must use that unity to bring about what is the best in our country, both in protecting our own liberties and our own rights as Americans—and we will do that—but also in demonstrating to the rest of the world that we are not a defenseless giant.

I have served for many years with both the Majority Leader and the Republican leader. In fact, I have been in... the Senate throughout all of their careers. I commend Senators Daschle and Lott for their reinforcing reaction and response. I believe Senator Daschle, Senator Lott and Senator Torlackson best of the Senate last night and in these difficult days.

The desk I sit in was once used by Senator George Vandenberg. Senator Vandenberg said “politics stops at the water’s edge.” And we showed that last night.

I have been working with the President and the Attorney General to bring together a package of legislative proposals to aid in this effort, laws that can help without sacrificing the freedoms and constitutional protections that define what is best in America. I want publicly to thank Attorney General Ashcroft for his cooperation. He and I have probably spoken more times in the last half than we might have in months when we served side by side in the Senate.

Since the terrorist attacks of September 11, the Judiciary Committee has been devoting virtually undivided attention to the aftermath, the investigation and the proper legislative response. The exceptions have been the confirmation hearings we have conducted since the attacks for high-ranking law enforcement officials at the Department of Justice and for judicial nominees. All will hopefully help today. We are going to confirm Sharon Prost and Judge Walton.

I spoke of the pride I had and all Senators had—both Democrat and Republican—when Ms. Prost appeared before our committee, at our extraordinary hearings during the August recess.

I spoke about her not just as a person and as a lawyer and not just because I feel she will be a superb judge but because she is not only the mother of two wonderful young men. I was gratified in seeing the looks in the faces of those two young men as they watched their mother testify but also the love that young men as they watched their mother testify but also the love that

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE 17479

I hope that we can continue to show unani-mity both for the American people and for this Senate. For example, I want my colleagues to know that early this morning, before most of us could barely keep our eyes open, we reached agreement with the White House and with the House of Representatives on a victims’ compensation program for the victims of the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001. I thank the majority leader, Senator Daschle; Senator Lott, the Republican leader; Speaker Hastert; Leader Gephardt; Senator Hatch; Senator Kohl; Senator DeWine; Senator Schumer; and Senator Clinton for their bipartisan efforts. We have created a victims’ compensation fund. Payments to these victims will be tax free. We will move forward quickly.

I thank Ed Pagano, John Dowd and Greg Cota of my staff for being willing to work around the clock and Makan Delrahim of Senator Hatch’s staff. I commend Mark Childress and Andrea LaRue of the Majority Leader’s staff and Dave Hoppe of the Republican Leader’s office, as well as Victoria Bassetti, Pete Levitas, Jeff Berman and Leecia Eve. This is extremely important. There is no higher priority. Again, this has been an occasion where in a bipartisan effort working for long hours in good faith and with common resolve, we have been able to forge a good agreement.

I see the time has arrived for the votes. I ask unanimous consent to print in the Record the following relating to establishment of a victims’ compensation fund.

The motion being agreed to, the material was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE 17479

SENATE BIPARTISAN COMPROMISE: ESTABLISHMENT OF A SEPTEMBER 11 VICTIMS’ COMPENSATION FUND

CREATION OF THE SEPTEMBER 11 VICTIMS’ COMPENSATION PROGRAM

Congress shall authorize and appropriate such funds as may be necessary to compensate any victims or their families with physical injury or wrongful death claims arising out of the terrorist-related airline crashes in the United States on September 11, 2001.

To be eligible for compensation, applicants will need to provide information about the harm they suffered or death linked to the terrorist-related airline crashes in the United States on September 11, 2001. Applicants will not be required to prove negligence or any other theory of liability.

The Department of Justice shall supervise the program and the Senate shall confirm a Special Master to administer the program to determine victim compensation.

KEY REVIEW AND PAYMENT OF CLAIMS FOR COMPENSATION

The Special Master shall make a final determination of the applicant’s eligibility for the application form to determine victim compensation.
compensation and appropriate level of compensation within 100 days of having received the application.
In all cases, the compensation shall be paid within 20 days of the final determination.
Filing of a claim under the program will proceed for other remedies available under federal or state law for the same physical injury or wrongful death suffered as a result of the September 11, 2001 terrorist acts.
Payments to victims will be tax free.

Mr. LEAHY. I ask for the yeas and nays on the nominees.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The yeas and nays have been previously ordered.

Mr. LEAHY. I thank the Chair.
The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Utah.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to proceed for 1 minute.
The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. HATCH. I thank the chairman of the Judiciary Committee for his solid support of Sharon Prost and Reggie Walton. The work he has done. I also have enjoyed working with him as we worked to fashion, along with all the people whose names he mentioned, and certainly in the House of Representatives, the law enforcement changes and terrorism laws that really need to occur. I hope we can get that done. I hope we can do it on a completely bipartisan basis. It has to be done.

We have also worked very hard on the airline bill which he has described adequately. I thank him for the efforts he is putting forth, and his staff and, of course, my staff. A number of these staff people worked all night long on some of this legislation. They deserve an awful lot of credit, along with the White House staff, staffs of both Houses, and the staff of both sides on this issue. I am very grateful that we were able to move ahead on these matters. I hope we can move ahead in a way to protect, preserve, and defend our country as it deserves to be protected, defended, and preserved.

Let’s proceed to the vote.
The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The question is, Will the Senate advise and consent to the nomination of Reggie Walton to be a U.S. District Judge for the District of Columbia, to be a United States Circuit Judge for the Federal Circuit? The yeas and nays have been ordered. The clerk will call the roll.
The legislative clerk called the roll.
Mr. LEAHY. I announce that the Senator from Texas (Mr. GRAMM), the Senator from Arizona (Mr. MCCAIN), and the Senator from Wyoming (Mr. THOMAS) are necessarily absent.
The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?
The result was announced—yeas 97, nays 0, as follows:

LEGISLATIVE SESSION

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, the Senate will now resume legislative session.

RECESS SUBJECT TO THE CALL OF THE CHAIR

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senate will stand in recess subject to the call of the Chair.

Thereupon, the Senate, at 10:17 a.m., recessed subject to the call of the Chair and reassembled at 11:54 a.m. when called to order by the Presiding Officer (Mr. JOHNSON).
The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada is recognized.

DEFENSE AUTHORIZATION

Mr. REID. Mr. President, the majority and minority leaders have agreed that in the near future, the two managers, Senators WARNER and LEVIN, will move forward with the Defense authorization bill. The opening statements will take some time because this is such an important piece of legislation.

At some point later in the day, when the House, we hope, completes their work on the airlines legislation, which they have worked on during the night, and we worked on during the night, we will move to that. The managers understand that.

I hope that people will understand how hard these two veteran legislators—Senator LEVIN and Senator WARNER—have worked on this legislation. I personally know of the time they have spent on this bill in the past week, and prior to that they spent much more time on it. This is a very crucial time in the history of this country, and although it is always important, it is even more so now.

I hope Members will be very cautious in trying to make a Christmas tree out of
We are grateful that Senator REID is on board without the support of our leadership, of the aisle in helping to bring this bill before the Senate. I first thank the Senator from Nevada what they do with this legislation as it relates to these two managers.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Michigan is recognized.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, let me first thank the Senator from Nevada for his very kind words and for his efforts and the leadership on both sides of the aisle in helping to bring this bill forward. Senator WARNER and I have indeed worked very hard on it and, as always, we have worked together to bring a bill forward that hopefully the Senate can pass and pass quickly. But without the support of our leadership, that would not have been possible. As hard as we and our staffs work, it takes leadership support to make it happen. We are grateful that Senator Reid is on the floor, and we thank all leaders not on the floor.

Mr. WARNER. If the Senator will yield, I join that with respect to the leadership provided by our distinguished majority whip, yesterday on the train, as we were going to New York, we had Senator DASCHLE, Senator LOTT, Senator REID, Senator LEVIN, and I, and I think we finished up basically the procedural and, to some degree, the points that remain, under the circumstances on which we concluded on the eve of visiting ground zero.

That is an example of how, throughout the last six or seven days, Senator LEVIN and I have collaborated on bringing together a closure of the differences that were experienced in the committee, when the committee for the first time in living memory had a partisan division on reporting out a bill.

I commend our chairman and the leadership. I think we are prepared today to present to the Senate a very fine bill on behalf of the men and women of the Armed Forces, their families, and those who are devoted to work with our Armed Forces. It would be my hope that in the course of the day, we can address such items as Members wish. But I think on our side, having participated in our caucus this morning, the feeling is that we would like to move forward on this bill; and depending on the number of hours today, quite possibly we can bring to a conclusion a number of issues and possibly begin to focus on when final passage could be achieved, subject to the leadership’s desire for the time of the vote. I thank my colleague.

NATIONAL DEFENSE AUTHORIZATION ACT FOR FISCAL YEAR 2002

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate now proceed to Calendar No. 163, S. 1438, the Department of Defense authorization bill; that once the bill is reported, I be recognized to offer a managers’ amendment; that the amendment be agreed to and the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. WARNER. Reserving the right to object—and I certainly will not object— I join with the distinguished chairman in preparation of the managers’ amendment and will be a co-sponsor of it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The clerk will report the bill. The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 1438) to authorize appropriations for fiscal year 2002 for military activities of the Department of Defense, for military construction, and for defense activities of the Department of Energy, to prescribe personnel strengths for such fiscal year for the Armed Forces, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Michigan is recognized.

AMENDMENT NO. 1598

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, the managers’ amendment is at the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the amendment.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Michigan (Mr. LEVIN), for himself and Mr. WARNER, proposes an amendment numbered 1598.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Without objection, the amendment is agreed to, and the motion to reconsider is laid upon the table.

The amendment (No. 1598) was agreed to.

The amendment is as follows: At the appropriate place in the bill, add the following:

SEC. 1. AUTHORIZATION OF ADDITIONAL FUNDS.

(a) AUTHORIZATION.—$1,300,000,000 is hereby authorized for the fiscal year 2002, in addition to the funds authorized elsewhere in Division A of this Act, for research, development, test and evaluation for ballistic missile defense; and the following:

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, this is no ordinary time in our country. In New York and just across the Potomac in Virginia, our fellow citizens continue to sift through the ruins left by the most deadly attack ever against the United States. Our fury at those who attack innocents is matched by our determination to prevent them from more terror and by our resolve to track down, root out, and relentlessly pursue the terrorists and those who would shelter or harbor them. The President spoke eloquently and forcefully last night setting out those goals.

Against this background, we bring the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2002 to the floor of the Senate. The bill authorizes the full amount requested by the administration for national defense, including the $18.4 billion requested by the President in his amended budget request. The bill also addresses a number of important priorities identified by the Armed Services Committee.

I am pleased we were able to add a significant amount of money, over $700 million, to the budget request for compensation and quality of life.

We added more than $1 billion to improve the readiness of the military services to carry out their assigned missions.

We added a large amount of money to advance the transformation of the military services and to improve the capability of the armed forces to meet nontraditional threats, including terrorism.

Even in advance of the terrorist attack on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon, we gave particular attention to the problem of terrorism as reflected in our bill and in the report that accompanies it. Not only did the committee fully fund the President’s proposal for combating terrorism, we were able to add funds for a new combating terrorism initiative to improve the ability of the U.S. forces to deter and defend against terrorism, including additional funds for research by the Department of Defense and the Department of Energy on the detection, identification, and measurement of chemical and biological weapons, and funds to upgrade Army installations and make them less vulnerable to terrorism. Much more remains to be done in this area, and that has surely been dramatized by the events of September 11.

We have already passed a $40 billion emergency supplemental for our war on terrorism. I understand the Department of Defense will be coming forward with an additional supplemental budget request in the next several weeks, and our committee will review any such request.

The U.S. military is by far the most capable fighting force in the world. From Europe to the Persian Gulf to the Korean peninsula, the presence of U.S. military forces and their contributions to regional peace and security reassure our allies and deter adversaries. U.S. forces have excelled in every mission assigned to them, including the 1999 NATO air campaign over Kosovo and ongoing enforcement of the no-fly zones over Iraq, humanitarian operations from Central America to Africa, and peacekeeping operations from the Balkans to East Timor.

The U.S. armed forces remain the standard against which all militaries are measured. Our armed forces are without peer today, and this bill will help ensure they remain so for the foreseeable future. At his confirmation hearing before the Armed Services Committee last week, Gen. Richard Myers, the next Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, testified that we have military forces and capabilities that we need to respond to the terrorist attack on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon.

We identified five priorities to guide our consideration of the bill: Continuing improvements in the compensation and quality of life of the men and women of the armed forces and their families; improving the capability of the armed forces to meet non-traditional threats, including terrorism and unconventional means of delivering weapons of mass destruction, and the proliferation of nuclear, chemical, and biological weapons. The Emerging Threats Subcommittee, under the leadership of Senator MARY LANDRIEU and Senator PAT ROBERTS, took the lead in this effort.

Our committee added funds to the budget request to help address non-traditional threats. First, the bill adds funds for a combating terrorism initiative to improve the ability of U.S. forces to deter and defend against terrorism, including almost $100 million for research by the Department of Defense and the Department of Energy to detect and identify chemical and biological weapons in advance of their use, and more than $75 million to upgrade Army installations and make them less vulnerable to terrorism.

I am particularly pleased that we were able to add $13 million to the budget for standoff explosive detection research and development, a proof-of-concept system for pre-detonation of explosives, and for enhancing explosive detectors for the U.S. Navy, all fulfilling the requirements which were so urgently identified in the aftermath of the October 2000 attack on the U.S.S. Cole.

If we can develop that standoff explosive detection, if we can come up with the technology to do that, learning the lesson which we learned to our great expense, cost, and horror with the attack on the U.S.S. Cole, we will make a very significant gain in the war against terrorism.

The bill would authorize the full $400 million requested by the administration for cooperative threat reduction programs, to continue destroying and dismantling nuclear warheads and missiles in the former Soviet Union, and we added more than $50 million to Department of Energy programs to prevent the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction and related expertise. The committee added additional funds for a task force, chaired by former Senator Howard Baker and former White House counsel Lloyd Cutler, concluded the following: The most urgent unmet national security threat to the United States today is the danger that weapons of mass destruction or weapons-us could be stolen and sold to terrorists or hostile nation states and used against American troops abroad or citizens at home.

With this funding, the committee has placed itself firmly on record in support of continuous efforts to reduce the threats posed by offensive nuclear weapons, their delivery systems, and related material.

Another priority of the committee was to sustain the readiness of the U.S. military. Toward that end, we added approximately $1 billion to the budget request to fund critical priorities of the military services. These additions included the following: Almost $250 million to improve the Army aviation, including additional Black Hawk helicopters, upgrades to Apache helicopters, and additional TH-67 training helicopters.

We added $125 million for upgrades to the F-5 and F-16 aircraft, and we added almost $100 million for the maintenance of surface ships and Navy and Marine Corps equipment. The committee also added money to increase full-time manning in the Army National Guard, to upgrade the Navy’s electronic warfare aircraft, to improve the operational safety and capabilities of the test ranges and space launch facilities, and to continue modernizing the training aircraft used by the Air Force and Navy for the training of new pilots.

Again, I emphasize these additions to the President’s budget request were all made before the events of September 11. There will be additional ones I will list in a moment, but we will be receiving in the next few days an amended budget request from the administration, or a supplemental budget request, to add additional funds to those I am outlining.

We do not have that request before us yet, so we are unable to respond to it. Of course, it will be mainly an appropriations request, but we also hope to have an opportunity to take a look at that request in the days ahead.

The committee also gave priority to continued support for transformation efforts of the military to a lighter, more lethal, and a more flexible force. These additions included the following: Nearly $80 million to support the Navy transformation, including more than $300 million to support conversion of four excess Trident missile submarines to carry Tomahawk cruise missiles; more than $200 million to increase the defense science and technology budget, including substantial increases for the advanced materials and manufacturing technologies, nanotechnologies, and cutting-edge communication technologies. We added almost $200 million for Army transformation programs, including full funding for all of the objective-led priorities on the Army’s list of unfunded requirements in fiscal year 2002, and more than $80 million to fund continued efforts to develop and field unmanned vehicles.

I want to give special credit to our ranking member, Senator WARNER. He has been an active advocate, for as long as I can remember, for putting additional funds in for our unmanned aerial vehicles and other unmanned vehicles. He has had a great deal of focus on focusing on the importance of doing that, and I have supported those efforts, but the credit for the leadership really belongs to Senator WARNER. The Nation is in his debt for that and so many other actions on his part. In future years and future decades, we will see the payoff for these kinds of investments now in these unmanned vehicles.

The money that is needed to fund these priorities was obtained through management and other efficiencies identified by the committees. In particular, we determined the Department should be able to achieve significant savings through improved management of its purchases of services, including— I emphasize this—the increased use of performance-based service contracting, competition for orders under service contract, program review spending analyses, and other best practices commonly used in the commercial sector.

In fact, the final report on an OMB pilot which the Quadrennial Defense Review determined the Department of Defense, because we do want to make sure the Defense Department position is still the same and that is still a tool they consider to be essential for them in waging a war efficiently and in having resources needed to wage future efforts, such as the long effort that is going to be needed in the war against terrorism.

Why on earth would anyone argue to just about every Member of Congress concerning an area of major seriousness, regardless of what position people took on that issue, to just about every Member of this body. Rather than to have the effort made to resolve that issue now, we decided we would withhold those provisions from the Department of Defense whether or not, in light of recent circumstances, there is any change in their position that they want the tool of reducing excess infrastructure in order to make savings so they can apply those savings in the years ahead to other vital needs of the Defense Department. That request has been sent to the Senator McCAIN and I have been fighting for a new BRAC, as we call it, for more than 4 years. I am glad the Senator McCAIN and I have been fighting for a new BRAC, as we call it, for more than 4 years. I am glad the Senator McCAIN and I have been fighting for a new BRAC, as we call it, for more than 4 years. As important as the funding that we provide is, there is something else that is critically important. That is the unity of purpose that we show as we enter into the current struggle. Debate among people, some of which is healthy, is part of our democracy. While our democratic institutions are stronger than any terrorist attack, in one regard we operate differently in times of national emergency. We set aside those differences. We try to resolve differences that we previously were unable to resolve. But in cases of other differences, we put them off for another day, where the effort or attempt to resolve them now would create dissent where we need unity.

There are a number of these issues that were in this bill that we had to do with the question of national missile defense. We were able, by one vote in committee, to put into the original bill which came before this Senate a provision which would have required Presidential certification in the event that it was decided or determined there were activities that were going to be funded that were in conflict with the arms reduction and arms control treaty that we entered into. It was a matter of major seriousness, regardless of what position people took on that issue, to just about every Member of this body. Rather than to have the effort made to resolve that issue now, we decided we would withhold those provisions from that bill and introduced under rule XIV a separate bill which contained those provisions.

Under that rule, today, that separate bill which contains those provisions relative to national missile defense is on the calendar of the Senate. It is available for the majority leader to call up, should he choose to do so, for debate by this body. If and when—and I emphasize the “if,” not just the “when”—the administration determines that an activity for which it is using funds from this bill conflicts with the arms control treaty, the ABM Treaty, it would then be an option for the majority leader to call up the bill that is now on the calendar which would then provide the opportunity for us to debate whether or not we wanted to fund such activity. That was the way in which we preserved that option, delayed that debate that preserved the integrity of the provision in the bill, but, rather, would have deferred a congressional decision on funding them until we had a determination from the administration as to whether the activities would be in conflict with the treaty.

There are a number of these issues, that is very important information. As the author of that provision, I believe very strongly that we have a responsibility to determine whether or not a testing activity or funding conflicts with an arms control agreement. Some might vote to approve the funding without regard to that arms control agreement. Others would want additional information and the nature of the conflict between the treaty and the requested activity. Some Members would want to know the significance of the testing effort, to weight it. There are not the very same test which is in conflict with that arms control agreement outweighs some of the negative circumstances which might be created by the unilateral withdrawal which would have to take place for a such a testing activity occurred.

It seemed to me, regardless of one’s position relative to the issue of whether or not we should proceed with such activities in conflict with the treaty, that was important information for all Members to have. We don’t have that information now. The Department has been unable to tell us whether or not any of the activities which funds are being asked for in this bill, and to be authorized in the bill, are in conflict with the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty. They have been unable to tell us. The thought behind the language was that if and when the time comes when they do determine there is such a conflict, at that time Congress should have an opportunity to vote.

Again, I emphasize that language, subject of much debate and much dissensent, has now been withdrawn from this bill by myself and put into a separate bill which is now on the Senate calendar. This was also a very difficult decision, I tell my good friend from New Jersey.

While the Senator is presiding, I must say how extraordinarily moving he and Senator TORRICELLI were in New Jersey yesterday, as many Senators visited New Jersey after our visit to ground zero in New York City. It helped Members get a full picture by our visit to New Jersey with the presentation which was made to us by Senator CORZINE, Senator TORRICELLI, by the Governor of New Jersey, and by so many mayors who helped to round out exactly what the effect was of that attack upon us on September 11. I know I speak for all those who were present yesterday in New Jersey when our Presiding Officer, Senator CORZINE, and Senator TORRICELLI made such an effec tive presentation. Many of us were not aware that perhaps half of the people killed in that terrorist attack were residents of New Jersey. While New York City was ground zero, and we had severe losses at the Pentagon, New Jersey and also many from Connecticut and I believe from as many as 40 or 50 other countries were attacked by those terrorists. New Jersey, and many other countries symbolized on that attack upon the World Trade Center when citizens from so many countries were killed in that attack. I think Britain lost literally hundreds of its citizens.

What I particularly presented to us yesterday was the fact that New Jersey’s families are suffering in as great a number as any other place, including New York, as a result of that attack. I just wanted to thank Senator CORZINE for his role in bringing us to New Jersey, along with Senator TORRICELLI. It makes a difference.

Just as important as it is that we stand together in these days, coming together where we can on a bill which is so important to the defense of this Nation and to our security—and where we cannot defer those other issues to a different time and place—it is also important that our colleagues join us in trying to focus on issues that directly relate to this bill and do not come before the Senate.

Obviously, amendments are appropriate. They always are appropriate. But there are some amendments currently being filed that really cannot be appropriately considered on this bill. It is going to be really difficult to get all of us to focus on the material in this bill and the subject matter of this bill if we are going to get a bill passed as it should be passed urgently: if not today, and that is unlikely—by Monday or Tuesday.

(MR. CORZINE assumed the chair.)

Mr. WARNER. Today may be possible.

Mr. LEVIN. Today may be possible, I am told by my good friend, Senator WARNER. We should not even eliminate that possibility. But if we all cooperate in the kind of spirit which we have in bringing this bill to the committee and trying to avoid amendments which are not related to the subject matter of this bill, we have a chance of passing this bill as it should be passed, with great urgency and with great unity and with one voice.

Senator WARNER and I have spent a lot of time in the last few days working to do just that—to be able to bring a bill to the floor where we can say toget-ther that we, the members of the committee, all support this bill now. We hope that the Senate will join in this debate, offer amendments as they must, which relate to the subject matter, but help us to pass this bill with the urgency which is required and the unity which, God knows, is appropriated in circumstances such as this.

I want to say one other thing to my friend from Virginia before I yield; that is, how grateful this Nation is to him and to our attention the losses, the personal losses and the tragedies that were involved in the attack on the Pentagon. I was able to personally join with Senator WAR-NER on a number of these visits that he arranged to the Pentagon. I have, he and I, within a very short time after learning of the attacks both in New York and in Virginia, and of course the devastation that occurred in Pennsylvania and the peripheral tragic consequences that came upon the States of New Jersey, Connecticut, Maryland and the District of Columbia, in close proximity to these attacks—I called my friends and I said I think you and I should show our support at this point in time for the men and women of the Armed Forces and for the President and for the Secretary of Defense.

I made a call to the Pentagon which resulted in the Secretary of Defense saying, “Your participation this day of the attack would be welcome and help-ul.”

The two of us met and went to the Department of Defense. Just a few hours after that attack, Senator LEVIN, the Secretary of Defense, and I stood together there, about 100 yards or so from where that plane crashed into that edifice, the Pentagon, which represents, to our men and women in uniform, the epicenter of the command and control of their destiny.

I thank my colleague for joining me that morning in going to the Department. I think every time I have had the opportunity to address the Senate since that period, I begin by saying that all of us in the Senate have in our minds the lives of the victims who were lost in these attacks and their families, no matter where they are, around the nation and around the world. Yes, we have them in our prayers. But, those prayers are combined with the prayers of our fellow citizens, who are, and will continue to be, our friends and our prayers.

That band of brothers and sisters, as one fireman said to me, whether they are in Virginia or New York or Pennsylvania, or from any of the many States that we represent, represent the finest traditions of this great Nation about how we respond and help each other in time of need, all of us.

Now the Nation is arm in arm united behind our President, moving forward—steadily, carefully, thoughtfully—to address the needs of the Nation and the means by which we, seeking justice, will bring about a redress of these criminal acts, perhaps with the use of force, which is likely to be necessary. Of course, last night, as our President spoke, I and others had in mind the men and women in the uniform of the United States Armed Forces and their families who will bear the brunt if and when that force is used.

Mr. President, I thank my chairman. We have worked together in this chamber for 23 years and now we face another challenge. We are fortunate to have on our committee men and women who are absolutely committed to do what is necessary and proper to help this country in this hour of challenge and need.

I think it is appropriate, following the President’s magnificent address last night—and I know our President in the history of the United States of America who has ever been faced with a more challenging, a more complex framework of international security issues, economic issues, and threats to the United States than has our President, President Bush—that we now take up and swiftly pass this Defense Authorization Bill for Fiscal Year 2002 that provides the President the resources he has asked for and that our armed forces need.

The President not only rose to the occasion last night, but I think, if I may say, he exceeded in every way our hopes and prayers that he would take command—as he did—and deliver a very clear message.

Today, as the Senate turns to the consideration of our national defense authorization bill for the year 2002, in this time of national emergency, it is time we provide our President and the men and women of the Armed Forces, and the thousands of civilians who support those men and women, the requirements that they have for the coming fiscal year as best we can judge them.

The chairman indicated that the President would be forthcoming any day now with an amendment to the 2002 bill. Our committee and other committees of the Senate will immediately turn to that, upon receipt. It is my expectation that you will not be incorporated in this legislation during the course of the conference between the House and the Senate.

The events of September 11 have forever changed this world, and forever changed the United States. The one change that is clear is that we are a different and stronger country. That different strength emerged not a second after the infliction of these grave attacks. The 11th, when we saw the smoke billowing from our homeland, is a day forever etched into everyone’s memory.

The initial shock was followed by a surging sense of new purpose and strength and, a word that all of us understand—“patriotism”—love of country for the freedoms that we have.

Now a responsibility and a challenge fall upon the Congress—a coequal branch our Government—to work with our President and to serve our citizens. It is vital that we very carefully—as we have done—and expeditiously address this bill and, hopefully, act on it. The leadership of the Senate, supportive of Senator LEVIN, myself, and other members of the committee throughout the course of the past few days as we have worked to bridge our differences and bring this bill to the floor.

I hope we can pass this bill, for this bill will communicate a message to our citizens and to the world that the U.S. resolves to do whatever is necessary to protect our homeland and our forces abroad, to work with our allies for their mutual protection, and to address the full spectrum of threats that confront our Nation, the entire Western World, and, indeed, all of civilization. As we have all heard and felt, this was not just an attack on America, but an attack on the world and the fundamental principles of civilization.

All of us in this Chamber have recognized the fact that this is an increasingly dangerous world. There will be a time to look back on events and how we were or were not prepared, to deal with this crisis. But those debates are yet to come. Now is the time for unity. We have it here today in the Senate.

I addressed my caucus this morning outlining what Senator LEVIN and I have agreed upon. He addressed his caucus. We bridged the one remaining difference early this morning between the hours of 8 and 9. This managers’ amendment, which we have just adopted by unanimous consent, in my judgment, satisfactorily addresses the remaining differences we had.

When the authorization bill was reported out by the Armed Services Committee almost 2 weeks ago, there was a division among its members. That was understandable because our side—the Republican side—was unified behind what we saw were clear and justified requests by our President. The bill, at that time, contained certain provisions which we felt were excessive and, in my judgment, could undermine his ability under the Constitution as the chief architect of foreign policy to continue and, hopefully, conclude certain negotiations he has undertaken with Russia with regard to the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty.

Further, we thought the dollar amount which our President requested of the Congress for the purpose of initiating new research, development and testing with regard to our Nation’s absolute necessity to prepare ourselves today, and most especially for future generations, against the threat of a limited attack on us, were inconsistent with what I believe are the President’s justifiable requests. For that reason, we were not able to report out, as is the tradition of our committee, a bipartisan bill.

But in the aftermath of the tragic events of September 11, the distinguished chairman and I, working with our Members on both sides, have now bridged these differences in large measure and I am pleased to report, as I have stated, that we feel that, in the aftermath of these attacks, the justification for moving forward with new ways to prepare this Nation against a limited attack of missiles is enhanced by what we saw on the 11th. It brought to us the realization that, yes, while there was some thought it was remote that a missile could attack this Nation someday, now we cannot ignore or eliminate any part of that full spectrum of threats that may be directed towards this country.

So, as never before, we are strongly committed to support our President.

In my own many years on this committee, I have worked as ranking member with Chairman Nunn, Chairman Stennis, and others. There were rare times when the chairman and the ranking member of the Armed Services Committee recognized, for whatever reason, that they could no longer have bipartisanship. I am reminded of two such instances between Senator Nunn and myself. One was when we had a difference of view on the Tower nomination, and the other was the Gulf War resolution giving President George H. W. Bush the authority to utilize force in 1991.

History reflects the outcome of those two events. But I remember that Senator Nunn and I shook hands. We recognized we had to go our different ways, and we did it. In the aftermath of both events, we rejoined as the chairman and ranking of the committee to work together. Senator LEVIN and I have likewise done so.

There came a point in the course of our deliberations—it was actually last weekend following a joint appearance of the President, desired and needed. This included preserving his ability to continue negotiations regarding the ABM
We have heard incredible stories of courage and heroism amidst the tragedy of the past week and a half. Our Nation today, as the President said last night, remains under threat. All American citizens should understand that. I remember so clearly in my past experience with the military, there was occasionally that sign—the all clear, sound the all clear bell aboard ships. And at my airbase in Korea, the cold winter of 1951–1952: The all clear siren had blown—We could rest easy.

Today, that siren has not blown. I don’t know, nor does anyone else know, when that siren can be blown across this Nation. We are in danger at this moment. We remain in danger. But the world should know that we are a much stronger Nation, and we are prepared, with the men and women of the Armed Forces today and the other many resources that we have, to deter and hopefully not let another attack hit this Nation.

I hope those Members who have amendments will come to the floor. I see other Members seeking recognition. I hope our members of the committee will likewise come and express their views about this bill and their active participation on the committee.

Again, I thank our chairman. I thank all members of our committee and our magnificent staff, on both sides. We have produced a commendable piece of legislation which is deserving of prompt consideration and enactment by the Senate.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Colorado.

Mr. ALLARD. Mr. President, I thank both the chairman of the Armed Services Committee and the ranking Republican, Senator WARNER, for their diligent efforts in reaching thiscompromise. It means a lot to the State of Colorado, and particularly to the Nation. When you consider the events that happened just 10 days ago, those tragic events, it is imperative that we get a Defense authorization bill to move forward.

The way the issue of missile defense started out in the subcommittee on which I am the ranking Republican, it was a rocky road. The chairman of that strategic subcommittee, Senator JACK REED of Rhode Island, is a tremendous chairman. I like working with him. There are a couple of committees on which I serve with him, where he is the chairman and I am the head Republican. Our working relationship I describe as superb. He listens, tries to understand the minority side. I try and do everything I can to work with him. We have a very good relationship.

This subcommittee, under the leadership of the Senator from Colorado, Senator LEVIN, established a subcommittee entitled “Emerging Threats.” The Bush administration, in that subcommittee was to provide the full committee with the wide spectrum of issues as they saw it with regard to known, anticipated, and unanticipated threats. This subcommittee examines whether the current elements of the national defense we have in place need to be strengthened or, indeed, new initiatives taken to strengthen, to hopefully deter, and, if necessary, to respond to these threats. This subcommittee has done a lot of valuable work. Senator ROBERTS was chairman; now Senator LANDREAU is chairman. They have continued to provide very helpful assistance to the full committee, and the full committee has acted in many ways to protect our country from the growing threat of terrorism.

When the bill was adopted by the committee this year—and I commend the chairman—the chairman actually, with his initiative, added another $200 million towards antiterrorist activities. As he mentioned earlier, part of that increase was expanding the scope of research and development of unmanned military vehicles. I thank the chairman for his recognition of my modest role in that. I assure you, I could not have achieved those initiatives as chairman without his support and that of the other members of the committee.

The President of the United States has committed significant resources to deal with the types of terrorist threats we witnessed a week ago. For fiscal year 2002, President Bush requested $5.6 billion for the Department of Defense for activities to combat terrorism. This is a $1 billion increase over last year’s level of funding. Again, the chairman added another $215 million, for which I commend him. With the committee’s support, we clearly have a bill that addresses homeland defense, and supports this highest priority concern our President brought to the attention of the Nation in the fall of 1999 at the Citadel.

Missile defense, in my judgment, is a critical component of that homeland defense. The President stands by his vision to prepare America and begin now to look at new options by which to prepare us to hopefully deter and then defend against a limited attack. This is clearly the time to stand by our President.

I remember when the Director of the Central Intelligence Agency, George Tenet, came before our committee. He has repeatedly warned us that “America’s superpower status does not bestow invulnerability upon us but in fact makes us a target for the angry and disaffected of the world.”

That was in his testimony. We as a Nation have grown accustomed to being safe within our borders. While many of us recognized the growing vulnerability, this vicious attack on our country brought the reality of our full spectrum of the capabilities, military and otherwise, that the terrorists can use to inflict damage upon us.
were for it, the chairman. It was over the issue of missile defense. Then the issue went to the full Armed Services Committee and that debate continued.

I know that there has been in the debate, people began to lock in their positions, and we would still be tied up today if it would not have been for the tremendous leadership of our chairman, the Armed Services Committee, Senator Bob Smith. But, as well as the ranking Republican working together on this most important issue.

There are many other important issues in this bill. I am particularly pleased that we have moved forward with missile defense. I am pleased the restrictive language in missile defense was taken out and the funding is there with the flexibility to either use for missile defense or for terrorism. The President has agreed to the results of the recent changes in the last 10 days, needed that flexibility. I, for one, was more than willing to give it to him.

I appreciate the efforts in the area of defense environmental management of my subcommittee, the Environment Subcommittee; in particular, the support in the bill for closure sites which would benefit the sites' surrounding communities and the Nation as a whole. This would provide a clean and safe environment at the sites of former defense clear weapons facilities. It would free up scarce resources as these sites are cleaned up and closed down to help advance environmental cleanup and restoration in other environmental management sites.

In my subcommittee, we had basically two functions. We have the armed services function, and then also we have the Energy Department function. So we deal with many of the nuclear programs, as well as the bombing programs and missile defense and defense intelligence. So I think this was important to the country as well as the State of Colorado.

I also appreciate the efforts for the National Nuclear Security Administration. The National Nuclear Security Administration appears to be making important strides. There are still enormous challenges ahead, but I think the NNSA seems to be moving in the right direction. In intelligence matters, I was encouraged by the support for unmanned aerial vehicles, sensor capabilities, and commercial satellite imagery. I am still concerned, however, that other critical components of the intelligence architecture did not receive similar support.

Processing and dissemination of intelligence products remains a weakness in the overall system. Current programs in intelligence are underfunded and would greatly benefit from increased support. Hopefully, we have taken care of much of that with some of the funding approved by the Senate in the past week.

I was pleased with the support for greater Department of Defense involvement in the development of reusable launch vehicles. However, I should note that I was disappointed that the committee had opted not to implement any of the reforms of the Space Commission. This is an area of particular interest to me and to another former member of the subcommittee, Senator Bob Smith.

There was a lot of hard work put into the Space Commission report. So I was very disappointed that there wasn't more consideration taken on those recommendations.

I was also a member of another commission, the NRO Commission. Many of the provisions we recommended in our commission were adopted in the Intelligence Committee and then subsequently adopted in my subcommittee and the full Armed Services Committee.

So I think we have set the stage for us to move forward at this point in time. I am supportive of the bill and am pleased the chairman and the ranking member could work out our differences and move forward. I look forward to the debate, and I thank the ranking Republican for his tremendous statement.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Colorado yields the floor.

Who seeks recognition?

The Senator from Oklahoma is recognized.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, I have been listening intently to our chairman, our ranking member, as well as the Senator from Colorado. I find myself in agreement with virtually everything that has been said. I think it is important for us to realize something that really has not been said, which is that on Friday, September 7, we met—the Senate Armed Services Committee. We passed out of our committee our Defense Authorization bill. Four days later, we find ourselves at war. So there are some things that have changed; the dynamics have changed—those things which we know are urgent to our Nation's defense and to our national security. They weren't there back on September 7 when we passed our authorization bill.

I have around 14 amendments at the desk. It is not my intention to offer any of them now or call for a resolution to those. But I will be doing it when we get into the bill on Monday.

One is to give the President the authority to waive sanctions against allies in our war on global terrorism. That is a big issue with our friends and allies. This really is required on September 7. It was just a matter of weeks ago that we passed sanctions against both India and Pakistan, which receive both military and economic aid. There are some conditions under which the President can waive these sanctions, but they are not too well defined. They put him in a position, when negotiating with countries, where he doesn't have that authority firmly planted within his powers to do it. So I am going to propose in an amendment, No. 1593, that we provide for notification in a 30-day period of time to Congress. But the President can say, if you do this, we are going to lift sanctions.

You might argue that there are vehicles in place to say sanctions right now. But if it happens that we are in recess at that time, if it happens that there is some ambiguity as to whether or not Congress would go along with it, this way he can say, yes, we are going to lift these sanctions or waive these sanctions. I don't think there will be a lot of opposition to this. It is something that would give power to the President, who last night, I believe, gave the defining speech of his career. Second, it deals with something more technical, but I think we need to look at it differently now, and that is depot maintenance. Depot maintenance refers to the type of maintenance of our military fighting equipment that has to be done in a publicly owned depot. The idea behind it, which has always been our policy, was we should have the capability of doing core maintenance—maintenance that would help us in times of war—so that we don't take the risk of being held hostage by a single supplier or contractor. So what I am going to be suggesting is to change our waiver policy. What we have done over the past several years is say, well, we do want to give the depots the capability of maintaining our vehicles.

Take, for example, aircraft, the air logistics centers; there are three. There used to be five; now there are three. They are operating with equipment put in place back during World War II. It is outdated. We still have on the books a law that says 50 percent of the core maintenance has to be done in a public depot. So we have been operating on a second-class basis. The waivers are put in there by the Secretary of the Air Force, in this case, or the Secretaries.

This power should be changed so that there is a new accountability. We have gone waiver after waiver after waiver, with no hope that in the following year we would be able to do it without a national security waiver. I will suggest it be written into the bill that we give the President of the United States the authority to waive the performance of depot level maintenance instead of the Secretary of the Air Force. If the President signs the waiver, he must deliver a report that lists why the waiver is necessary and what will be done to prevent the waiver from being required in the future.

The President, under the amendment I will be offering, may delegate this to another party. The President has that responsibility. This is what is missing because right now it goes from administration to administration without any interest in really resolving the problem or saying what we are doing to increase the capability of our public depots in order to make the maintenance that is being held by the military.

There are several others. I want to say that even though I am hoping that the amendment I have filed—I have two, 1997 and 1996, that would attach to the Defense authorization bill an energy policy for America. Let me be critical of not Democrats, not of Republicans, but of both, going all the way back to the early eighties because then, when President Reagan was President of the United States, we tried to get him to have an energy policy. In fact, Don Hodel was Secretary of the Interior at that time, or in that timeframe.

Mr. President, we had this dog and pony show where we went all around the United States, to the consumption States, not the production States—demonstrating clearly that the outcome of every war, back to and including the First World War, has been determined by who has control of the energy. That is still true today.

Nobody believed it then. Since then we have gone through the Persian Gulf war. We realize we have enemies in the Middle East, and yet to a great extent we have been urging Democrats and Republicans to deal with this for years, and they have refused to do it. Even George Sr., coming from an oil patch, said: Yes, we have to have an energy policy, the cornerstone of which would be the independence of the energy we need to fight a war.

In the year 2000, 19.6 million barrels a day was used for the consumers of America. I guess what I am trying to say is, our need for petroleum consumption has grown up for a long time. From the year 2000 to 2001, it is up to 19.7 million barrels of oil a day. That is on the rise.

The second chart shows our domestic oil production has sharply decreased over the last 10 years. We have produced less domestic oil since World War II. In January of 1991, we produced 17.6 million barrels a day, and that has dropped down to 6 million barrels a day during this timeframe.

On chart No. 3, we can see that our domestic oil production continues to decrease while our consumption continues to increase. This was not true in the days when we started calling this to the public’s attention, but it is true today.

That means we are getting oil from foreign sources, and that is what this chart shows. It shows our imports in that same year, January of 1991, were 4.6 million barrels a day, and they went up to 8 million barrels a day. It has almost doubled since that period of time.

Our dependence on foreign oil has dramatically increased since 1973 and is projected to increase in the future. Currently, 56.6 percent of U.S. oil needs are met by foreign sources. This presents a real energy and national security problem, equally dependent on foreign oil, as is the general public. We must seek to drastically increase a domestically produced, diverse energy supply, including nuclear, coal, oil, gas, and renewables.

All of these sources of energy are addressed in the House bill, and I have one amendment that would merely adopt the language in the House bill and also the language in the bill from the Senate Energy Committee.

Looking at our dependence on foreign oil imports and how it has escalated, we are today at 56 percent. We were at 36 percent when I talked about going around the country alerting people to the seriousness of the problem. In the same progression, we are going to be up to 66-percent dependent upon foreign sources in our ability to fight a war.

What is most startling is that we depend on nations in the Middle East, such as Iraq, to supply our oil needs. The Middle East supplies about 25 percent of our oil. What shocks an awful lot of people is that of that amount, we are importing 862,000 barrels a day from Iraq, a country we just defeated in a war 10 years ago, a country whose President made the statement that: If we had waited 10 years to march into Kuwait, the Americans would not have come to their aid because we would have the capability of lobbing a missile at them. That is the dilemma in which we find ourselves today. That is why I say this is a national defense issue.

Iraq is the fastest growing source of United States oil imports. That is the same nation that we took military action against seven times last month, the same nation that has links to bin Laden, who is the prime suspect in the horrible attacks in New York and Washington, as well as the U.S.S. Cole and both Embassy bombings in East Africa.

This is a major national security problem. Energy will be critical if and when America engages in military action. which they and their families live. This bill supports the $10.0 billion administration request for military construction and family housing for fiscal year 2002, which is a 10-percent increase over fiscal year 2001 levels. This funding will, according to Department of Defense calculations, reduce the current 192-year replacement cycle for military facilities to 101 years. While this is a significant improvement, this figure is still nearly double the standard of approximately 57 years accepted in the private sector.

The bill invests an additional $651 million from savings and efficiencies achieved elsewhere in the budget to make further improvements in military facilities, including projects to enhance mission performance, build additional unaccompanied housing and family housing, establish key tracts of land at military installations to prevent future encroachment problems, and adequately fund legally binding cleanup requirements at facilities closed by previous base closure rounds. The bill includes an increase of $40.0 million for personal gear for military members to improve their safety and comfort in the field.

The committee’s second theme was that the whole committee care deeply about: sustaining the readiness of our Armed Forces.

This bill supports the funding increases contained in the administration’s budget request to more accurately reflect the increased use of spare parts and the higher prices for spare parts associated with older weapons systems. In addition to the requested increases, the bill provides almost $100 million in additional funding for maintenance of surface ships and other Marine Corps and Navy equipment. These funds will increase the availability of equipment to units and allow them to spend more time training.

The bill also supports the budget request for an increase of seven percent in real terms for facilities sustainment, restoration and modernization over fiscal year 2001 levels. I believe that these additional funds will provide critical improvements to service members’ places of work, allowing for greater productivity and increased job satisfaction.

I also believe that further advances in sustainment, restoration and equipment maintenance are possible, in particular by increasing attention to corrosion prevention technologies and products. As I know from the military facilities in Hawaii and elsewhere in the Pacific, maintaining military equipment and facilities in wet, salty, and hot environments is a significant challenge. I believe progress can be made on this critical issue that will both improve the service life of our property and the lives of our service members who have to maintain this property.

This bill includes a $7.4 million increase for anti-corrosion product testing and treatments, and directs the Department of Defense to coordinate with other services and agencies across the military services. The bill also supports small increases in a limited number of ammunition programs to reduce training and war reserve shortfalls and enhance troop safety.

The committee’s third goal was encouraging transformation. This bill includes small increases to support necessary training for the Army’s new Interim Brigade Combat Teams (IBCTs), a critical step in the Army’s transformation to a lighter, more rapidly-deployable force. Other actions taken by the Readiness Subcommittee to improve efficiency should also result in savings in both the current and future budgets, savings that can be redirected to the necessary process of transforming our armed forces.

The committee’s fourth priority was to improve the Department of Defense’s capability to meet non-traditional threats, the importance of which was made painfully and sorrowfully clear to us all last week. Many of my colleagues will speak forcefully on this issue, and I share their sentiments of outrage and extreme sadness as we cope with this horrendous attack. The committee looks forward to bringing more attention to the issues raised by the colleagues on this critical issue in the near future. Until this occurs, the bill before us will provide funding for the requested improvements to bases and installations that will increase the safety of our forces at home and abroad.

The fifth theme of our bill this year was to improve the efficiency of DOD programs and operations. This is a goal the committee shares with Secretary Rumsfeld, of Defense Department, and we look forward to working with him closely to make further progress on this in the future. The bill presented here today takes important steps to help us along the path.

In the area of acquisition reform, the bill includes a number of provisions to improve the acquisition of equipment and services. One provision would require the Department to set up a management structure, management information system, a program review structure for the Department’s contracts for services. A related provision would establish savings goals for services contracts and goals that would be achieved through the application of best commercial practices including competition, performance-based contracting, and spending analyses.

Another provision strengthens requirements for competition for multiple-award contracts to purchase products, a provision that would require 15 percent approval for sole-source awards. The bill also includes provisions enabling DOD to shorten the acquisition cycle for weapons systems by codifying a technological maturity requirement for key technologies to be incorporated into new systems. Other provisions of the bill address acquisition workforce issues and aim to ensure that the defense components have sufficient staff to manage requirements in a cost effective manner. I was impressed by the work of the Acquisition 2005 Task Force’s recent report, “Shaping the Civilian Acquisition Work Force of the Future.” I intend to confer with the Task Force to further define the extent of the problem. As the chairman of the Senate Governmental Affairs Subcommittee on International Security, Proliferation, and Federal Services as well as the Senate Armed Services Subcommittee on Readiness, the issues raised by the Task Force are of great interest to me.

This bill also takes steps to improve financial management within DOD. Specifically, it includes a provision that would refocus comptroller and auditor resources on addressing systemic problems in DOD financial systems rather than wasting resources on reviews of financial statements. Another provision codifies the Department’s Senior Financial Management Oversight Council and financial feeder systems compliance process to provide top-level guidance in addressing financial management problems.

Though the committee finished its work just days prior to last week’s terrible attacks in New York and at the Pentagon, I believe that the bill we produced is just as relevant today as it was then. This bill lays a firm foundation to fortify our armed forces, takes many important actions to sustain and improve their readiness in both the short- and the long-term, and represents a product which I commend to our colleagues. I urge your support for this bill.

I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent the order for the quorum call be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. CLELAND. Mr. President, I am going to make a statement on an amendment I had filed. I did not know the Senator from Georgia was about to speak now. I will be happy to yield to him.

Mr. CLELAND. Mr. President, I am glad to work with the distinguished Senator from Texas, and I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas.

Mr. CLELAND. Mr. President, I want to speak briefly on an amendment I offered to the armed services bill. It relates to survivor benefits for people in the military who are killed in the line of duty. I had offered this amendment with Senator INOUYE actually before September 11, the day that changed our lives. I thought there was an injustice in the law as it deals with our military personnel; that is, if someone died in a training accident or in the line of duty but had not yet retired, he or she would not be entitled to any retirement benefits, even the benefits already earned. So if someone died after 10 years of service and had not had the opportunity to serve the full 20 years, the survivors would have no benefits.

I do not think that is the way to treat our military families, so I have been working on a piece of legislation that would allow those people who die in the line of service while on active duty to have the retirement benefits for which they have already accumulated. It would not give them the full 20 years, but it would give them the 5 years they served or the 10 years they served. This is something that now takes on an even bigger, more important role as we are dealing with the issues of September 11 because, as we know, over 100 of our military personnel were in the Pentagon and were killed in the line of service while on active duty.

So I am offering this amendment, once again, to the armed services bill. I hope it will be accepted. I hope both sides will agree that all those who were in the Pentagon at the time should have the survivor benefits to which they are entitled by their years of service.

The interesting thing about this is that the very parts of the Pentagon where this particular issue was being worked is the part that was hit.

I want to specifically mention a couple of the individuals who were in the Pentagon and who are now missing who were really pushing for my legislation to go forward—not for themselves because they were already retired. But they knew about the dangers of not taking care of our people. They were in the Pentagon talking to the personnel about the necessity of this particular piece of legislation. COL Gary F. Smith, who was the Chief of Army Retirement Services, and Army MSG Max Beilke were working on this legislation. Those two men were in the Pentagon and are now missing as of September 11, 2001. LTC Smith wrote to my staff about this legislation on June 15 saying:

Those of us who work on these issues daily know how important this will be. We'll keep our fingers crossed and hope it will get into law.

That was written to Jimmie Keenan, who is an Army nurse on my staff detailed to the Pentagon. She is an expert in this area and has worked tirelessly on this issue. She has worked long hours. It was because of her experience in working with her fellow members of the military medical corps that she realized there was something wrong. Many times in a training accident or in a training accident, we go through a process that medically retires that person.

My staff says this isn't right; why would we go through this process when the family is already in trauma and the people around the person who has died are in trauma? Why do we have to go through that? Why don't we just say when someone dies in the line of duty for heaven's sake, they should have the benefits to which they are entitled by the number of years they served.

She went to work. It is a great idea. Another fellow knew what was needed. And they worked on this for almost a year.

It just happens that the people who were working on it with her in the Pentagon will not be able to see this bill pass. But what they will get is the comfort of knowing that their families are going to be taken care of in a much better way than before.

I am asking the managers of the bill to put this provision in the managers' amendment. I think it is a very important part of taking care of all members of the military—not only the ones who have died before and not only the ones who died on September 11.

I think this is an important message to the members of our military who are getting ready to be called up. Many are already called up. Many are waiting for those orders. Our military does. They wait until they are called up to serve their country. They are waiting to be called to service today as we speak and as we are seeing the preparations to enact the war against terrorism that our President so eloquently laid out for the people of America.

As we know, the brunt of carrying out the President's orders is going to be on the men and women of our military. I want them to answer the call knowing that if anything does happen to them, their survivors will be entitled to the benefits of their retirement for whatever number of years prorated they would be entitled to under the preretirement laws.

I thank Jimmie Keenan and Ray Ivie in my office, along with Michael Ralsky and David Davis who have also helped on this issue.

In meeting LTC Gary Smith andMSG Max Beilke, I ask that this amendment be accepted.

Thank you, Mr. President. I yield floor.

Mr. PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Georgia is recognized.

Mr. CLELAND. Mr. President, it has been an incredible 10 days.
strength last night in that regard. But I will say that the U.S. military will not be alone in this fight. Indeed, I have spent some time this morning listening to testimony before the Governmental Affairs Committee regarding how we ought best to support the President’s establishment of a National Office for Homeland Security. In that hearing, it was the unanimous consent of the witnesses that the current effort of the myriad agencies involved in the fight against terrorism, including the Department of Defense, must be better coordinated.

The Government Accounting Office report recently released—actually released yesterday—sums up the problem succinctly. “Current Federal efforts,” the GAO says, “to combat terrorism are inherently difficult to lead and manage because the policies, strategies, programs, budgets, and activities are spread across more than 40 different Federal agencies.”

Since the problem appears to be one of coordination—and the GAO has fingered that—I believe the President’s Office of Homeland Security is an excellent solution. It promises to adapt our Government to accomplish more effective counterterrorism coordination and assign responsibility for measurable results.

It is simple enough to be rapidly implemented—and that is important—without disrupting the operations of the agencies which are affected.

I join the distinguished chairman of the Governmental Affairs Committee, Senator Lieberman, in his desire to move quickly to support the President’s action with appropriate legislation.

Notwithstanding the fact that our response to terrorism will involve many agencies, it will be our military that will be moving quickly to support the President—the spear, so to speak. It will be our military, our young men and women, that will wage one of the most visible and dangerous attacks that we have seen in many, many years. They are on the cutting edge of this war on terrorism. For many around the world, the performance of our military will characterize our success or failure in the war on terrorism.

As the military carries out its critical part in the war, we must also continue to provide for our military men and women in terms of their security as they protect our national security. This bill does that.

Prior to the recent terrorist attacks, the Senate Armed Services Committee increased the original budget request for combating terrorism by well over $200 million. This increase includes over $100 million to support research and development aimed at detecting, defending against and retaliating with nuclear, biological and chemical weapons. We also increased the ability of U.S. forces to deter and U.S. installations to defend against a terrorist attack.

Within this latter total, the committee determined that the Army had an unfunded mandate for installation security, and we provided an additional $778 million to address this need.

The committee also added funding of almost $14 million for U.S. special operations for the special operations command. Though we expect additional requests and will identify future needs, the measure pending before the Senate continues this committee’s bipartisan efforts to provide a solid foundation for combating terrorism.

Just one anecdote: On the last day of consideration of this massive bill, authorizing over $300 billion to be spent for our defense, one of the questions I asked my fellow committee members was: Defense secretary, what is the threat? This was 2 weeks ago.

Senator Pat Roberts, the distinguished Senator from Kansas, for the last couple years has been the chairman of the Subcommittee on Emerging Threats. Senator Mary Landrieu from Louisiana is now the chairman of that subcommittee. I asked both of them in their research, in their hearings, in their study of the real threat against America: What is it? What are we defending against?

Both agreed the most likely threat to the country was a terrorist attack, a stealthy attack, with no known address, no return to sender address, especially biological or chemical attack. That was the threat No. 1. Threat No. 2 was cyber-warfare against our Internet, against our computers to, in effect, shut us down in terms of our communications and our data processing.

I thought about that last Tuesday when we had the terrifying attack on our financial core. I thought about the fact that the real honest to goodness threat against this Nation was going to be a terrorist attack.

Today I had the pleasure of visiting with two former Members, Senator Warren Rudman and Senator Gary Hart, part of the Hart-Rudman commission, who months ago identified the chilling fact that it wasn’t a question of whether this country was going to get hit by a terrorist attack but when. We know, we have learned that lesson.

As we proceed in the days and weeks and months ahead to consider additional counterterrorist efforts, I cite an editorial that appeared in Monday’s Atlanta Journal Constitution.

In that editorial, former U.S. Senator Sam Nunn, in whose seat I now sit, whose position I now have in the Senate and position I have on the Senate Armed Services Committee, coauthor of the Nunn-Lugar Cooperative Threat Reduction Act, who currently serves as cochairman of the Nuclear Threat Initiative, clearly summarized the threat we face and outlined some key elements that should be included in our response.

Senator Nunn points out that the threat in those murderous deeds are limited only by the weapons they are able to employ—limited only by the weapons they are able to employ. He notes that the disintegration of the former Soviet Union left many thousands of tons of nuclear, biological, and chemical weapons, along with the scientists who worked with those weapons, adrift in an eroding infrastructure of inadequate controls and depressed economies.

We must prevent terrorist groups from exploiting this situation to obtain weapons of mass destruction, weapons materials and know-how. As we have only narrowly averted some attempts by terrorists to purchase these materials in recent years, I call on my colleagues to act on the recommendation of the bipartisan task force called for a fourfold increase in the funding of programs aimed at reducing the threat of inadequately safeguarding weapons, materials, and know-how in Russia.

As Senator Nunn correctly states: we must develop a comprehensive defense against the full range of threats based on relative risk and supported by strong alliances around the world so that the pain of today will not be known by the children of tomorrow.

In the trials to come, we must remember our military might springs from the willingness of our people to serve. I have always thought, since I was a young serviceman in Vietnam, 35 years ago, the key to our defense is our defenders. They are the military and civilian personnel who make up the Department of Defense. They are our defenders.

As chairman of the Personnel Subcommittee of the Armed Services Committee, I am pleased to inform the Senate that this authorization measure is a good bill and the provisions that address the needs of our military men and women and their families enjoy the full and bipartisan support of all members of our committee.

Some of the personnel provisions in this legislation include: total funding for personnel-related items at a level of $106 billion, about $7 million over the original budget request; and support for the recommended active duty end strength requested by the administration. This includes an increase of over 3,000 personnel in the Navy and almost an increase of 2,000 in the Air Force.

This bill provides an increase in the full-time manning end strength by almost 2,000 personnel. This is the first installment of an 11-year plan to increase full-time manning, which is one of the top readiness priorities for the Reserves.

As we now know, some 50,000 reservists have already been called up. All of our State adjutant generals have said to us that they need help with the shortage in full-time support that they receive from the active duty force. This bill also provides a significant pay raise—well above the rate of inflation—for all military personnel. Mr. President, again, for our troops in the field, military personnel, there is a significant pay raise in this bill, well above the rate of inflation. We recommend a targeted pay raise that ranges from 5 percent to 10 percent, beginning in January of 2002. It is between 5 and 10 percent. Enlisted personnel and junior officers will receive a pay raise of at least 6 percent or more. We also extend the special pays and bonuses that are so important for recruiting and retention. As someone who has served on the Personnel Subcommittee over the last 5, 5 1/2 years, and now chairs that subcommittee, as you know, we have been struggling with critical skills. As a matter of fact, I am pleased to report the military services have seen a burst of recruitment around the country. That is another sign that the steadfastness of this country is sound, particularly when we are threatened.

Acceleration by 2 years of the existing plan to gradually increase the basic allowance for quarters to eliminate average out-of-pocket expenditures for off-post housing by 2006—accelerate that to 2 years—the BAH will cover median housing costs by 2003. We have capped the average out-of-pocket expenditures for 2002 at 7.5 years.

The bill authorizes a significant increase in funding for the defense health program, which includes full funding for TRICARE for Life. That is for the military retirees over 65. This is the retiree benefit that this committee initiated. The bill includes an authorization of an expanded benefit for disabled dependents of active duty personnel. This benefit comprehends dental care, home health care, and case management services for the disabled family member and respite care for the primary caregiver to the disabled family member. We recognize that providing for the special needs of disabled family members increases the capability of service members to perform their military mission.

The bill also includes two new initiatives to help retain service members with critical skills and retainment of fact, I was surprised to actually learn that part of the report recommended a focus on terrorist attacks and an emphasis on homeland defense. This report by Senator Rudman and Senator Hart also included a recommendation to dramatically upgrade the Montgomery GI bill. Some of those recommendations were already in this authorization bill.

These initiatives include my own initiative, which I worked on for 3 years with an attempt to allow service members to transfer up to 18 months of unused Montgomery GI bill benefits to family members and Senator HUTCHINSON’s education savings bond initiative. Both of these help the educational package now available to service men and women.

The bill also authorizes retired service members with a service-connected disability to receive both military retired pay and veterans disability compensation, contingent upon the President proposing and Congress authorizing an offset.

The bill also authorizes pilot programs with the VA for a joint program of graduate medical education, and for the VA to conduct separation and re-employment physicals.

Finally, the bill authorizes $35 million for impact aid and $5 million for impact aid for children with severe disabilities. Not only is this bill good for our service members, but this year’s Defense authorization bill provides a significant pay raise in this bill, and it guarantees that we as a nation are continuing the strong tradition of supporting our military, as well as preparing for the threats of the future.

In conclusion, I thank Chairman LATOS for his leadership and hard work on this bill and the ranking Republican, Senator WARNER—he and his staff. They have made a strong contribution to this year’s authorization bill.

I think we should all commend these two gentlemen for their tremendous dedication to our Nation’s military and their continued example of true bipartisan cooperation and accomplishment.

Mr. President, I will conclude with a personal story. I was going through Reserve Officer Training Corps school as a young cadet, written by one of Wellington’s troops after the Battle of Waterloo, after the glory of the battle had long since faded. He wrote once that:

In time of war and not before,
God and the soldier men adore,
But in time of peace, with all things righted, God is forgotten and the soldier slighted.

Mr. President, over the last 10 days, my country has in many ways rediscovered our God and certainly has re-discovered our soldiers, our service men and women. This bill is in their interest. I urge my colleagues to adopt it.

I yield the floor.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, a number of our colleagues have been calling both leaders asking for some update on the schedule for the day. I wanted to notify Senators that the negotiations that have been on the dole for the last hour have just been concluded. So it is my expectation that we will take the bill up within the next hour and a half.

All Senators should be on notice that we will attempt to get a unanimous consent agreement to move to the bill shortly after the legislation has been considered. And it would be my expectation to take the bill up immediately. There would be most likely a rollcall vote before the end of the day. I guess, in the 3:30 to 4 o’clock range we will take the bill up. I am not sure about the length of the debate. We will have a rollcall vote on that legislation before the end of the day.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Missouri is recognized.

Mrs. CARNAHAN. Mr. President, I associate myself with the remarks of the chairman and the ranking member, as well as the eloquent statement that my colleague, Senator CLELAND, has just made.

This is a good bill. It is one that strengthens our military and enhances the quality of life for our Armed Forces and prepares our Nation to confront terrorism.

One group of Americans will be on the front line of the new war on terrorism: our reservists and National Guard members. President Bush has authorized a call up of 50,000 of these citizen soldiers. They may soon leave their families and civilian jobs and, at a great personal sacrifice, report to active duty. They will be among those who will confront our enemies, defending our freedoms in a shadowy and potentially brutal war.

Our Nation must do all we can to support these brave men and women and their families. There are many things we need to do to address the issues for reservists’ quality of life. One of those is to ensure that those who are called to duty and their families have access to uninterrupted health care coverage.

Currently, when reservists are called up, they are temporarily considered active duty components. While they are in harm’s way, members of the Reserves and National Guard and their dependents are entitled to the same military health care coverage as other military personnel, with what is called TRICARE. Reservists who have deployed for more than 30 days during a major contingency may enjoy their military health care coverage for 30 days after they return.

I have discussed this issue at length with several reservists and the leadership of the Missouri National Guard, and I can tell you 30 days simply is not long enough. Oftentimes, civilian employers are unable to restore the reservists’ health care benefits immediately. In other cases, Reserve members have quit their jobs before deploying and have no source of insurance when they return.

On Monday I will offer an amendment on behalf of myself and Senators DEWINE, LEAHY, LANDRÉIU, JOHNSON, Breaux, Bingaman, Dodd, and Thurmond. The amendment is based on legislation I introduced with Senator DeWine earlier this year with seven cosponsors. She asked the Army for help, but was turned down. Captain McGranahan has fallen through the cracks of two health care bureaucracies.

We have to do better than this. Mr. President, my amendment will provide comfort to thousands of reserve families whose loved ones risk their lives defending our Nation. But more important it would be part of our national effort to unite behind our troops during this time of national crisis.

The bill on which the amendment is based has been endorsed by 26 organizations across the country, including the Reserve Officers Association, National Guard Association, Enlisted Association of the National Guard, the Air Force Association, the Association of the U.S. Army, and several other organizations.

Over 50,000 reservists may soon be called into service. As President Bush himself has said, “We’re talking about somebody’s mom, or somebody’s dad, somebody’s employee, somebody’s friend, or somebody’s neighbor.”

Our initial cost estimate for our original bill was just 5 million dollars a year. This proposal is not extravagant in a $343 billion defense budget. It is the right thing to do, and it is needed right now. This is not a permanent solution. We need a full health care program for these service men and women. The Defense authorization bill requires the Pentagon to study this issue, and I look forward to reviewing it. But in the meantime, I am pleased to offer this amendment in the name of our Missouri’s National Guard and Reservists, as well as our country’s other citizen soldiers.

General Eisenhower once said: Leadership cannot be exercised by the weak. It demands strength—the strength of this great nation when its people are united in purpose, united in a common fundamental faith, united in the willingness to work for human freedom and peace.

Mr. President, let us assure our citizen soldiers that when they return home, they will not be denied health care because of their military’s service. They deserve no less. I thank the Chair.

I yield the floor.

Mr. LEVIN. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The senior assistant bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DASCHEL. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

RECESS SUBJECT TO THE CALL OF THE CHAIR

Mr. DASCHEL. Mr. President, I move that the Senate stand in recess subject to the call of the Chair.

The motion was agreed to, and at 2:45 p.m. the Senate recessed, subject to the call of the Chair, and reassembled at 3:07 p.m., when called to order by the Presiding Officer (Mrs. Feinstein).

Ms. LANDRIEU, Madam President, I come to the floor this afternoon to speak on the subject of our Defense authorization bill.

First, let me say how appreciative I am of the leadership of Senator Levin and Senator Warner. These are two Senators who trust one another and who work beautifully together. I have personally witnessed the work they have done both publicly and during many hours of private negotiations. I cannot thank them enough for their extraordinary leadership at this very important time in our Nation. I truly think that God has blessed us at this time to have these two fine men helping lead the negotiations at this particular time on a very important bill for our country.

President Kennedy reminded us during the height of the cold war that to ensure the peace we must prepare for war. September 11 seems to many of us literally years ago. It was just last week that our different sort of military—our intelligence operatives, with psychological operations, cyber operations, with our special forces, with our intelligence operatives, with psychological operations, with cyber operations—took us by surprise. It was a war in which our greatest victories may never be fully appreciated and in which our full vulnerabilities are perceived by only a few.

It is also a silent war because silence is the only real asset of our enemies. When we can identify our foes, they will be eliminated. For that reason, we must be relentless and patient. We are in a chess match with killers. A great deal rides upon its outcome.

My confidence in our victory comes from one simple fact: Our opponents rely on a few pathological minds to win this war. Our Nation can call upon the minds of free-thinking, freedom-loving people around the world to ensure our victory. And ultimately we will prevail.

We have a long journey in front of us. Today we take another step. I commend our chairman, Senator Levin of Michigan, and Senator Warner of Virginia for their outstanding leadership at this time.

As the chairperson of the Emerging Threats Subcommittee, I am clear about the work our committee must undertake over the next few months and perhaps years until the successful conclusion of this conflict. I also sincerely thank the Senator from Kansas, Mr. Roberts, our ranking member of this important committee, for his cooperation, his insight, his vision, and his passion on this subject. His advice and counsel and our excellent working relationship have made a difficult task more bearable.

It should be noted that I have determined a new policy for our subcommittee. From now on, all meetings of the Emerging Threats Subcommittee will be bipartisan in nature. We have neither the time, nor do the American people have the patience, for partisan squabbling and bickering because the stakes are so high.

In formulating the Department of Defense budget for the next fiscal year, we considered five priorities. Sadly, recent events have brought three of those priorities to the forefront. We have done very good work recently in ensuring that our plans and defend America and its allies against this unprecedented challenge to our Nation.

In addition, we have sought to improve the quality of life for our service men and women and their families. It is the service family who will keep the hearth warm while our fighting men and women are deployed. We must provide them with the quality of life they deserve.

In almost every war of which we are aware and have studied—and many have actually participated in—it was always hard on the family. I imagine and predict that in this war, in some ways it will be harder on families because the intelligence, the secrecy of what we have to do, while it was always important in past wars, is going to be more so. There will be families separated from loved ones for long periods of time and children who will never be able to receive a letter from a father or a mother or to hear their voice for long periods of time. I urge that our Nation give some extraordinary and new thinking to what we might do to support the families who are going to be called to the front lines and, in addition, to recognize while my committee only supervises and oversees the operations, as our President and as our leaders have so eloquently stated recently, it is not just men and women in uniform who are on the front line, but our fire-fighters, our local elected officials, our National Guard, business people, in many instances, are on the front line, depending on what their business is. Their families need special consideration.

We have also done important work in improving the efficiencies of the Defense Department. This will become more crucial in the coming days as our Nation commits its treasury to the present struggle. We must ensure that we invest wisely in the best possible means toward ensuring absolute victory.

There are a few aspects of this legislation of which I am particularly proud. We have made a significant investment in training and support for our fighters and our bombers. Any student of modern history cannot overlook how important these are to conducting modern war and how vital they will be to achieving victory in this new type of war.

In this bill, we have authorized a 5-percent pay raise for all of our service personnel. Perhaps it can be more. Perhaps 5 percent is not enough. We can revisit that issue. It is another step along with an 8-percent pay raise that was done the year before and raises the year before to make the paycheck begin to match—which it can never quite do, obviously—the sacrifices our men and women are called on to perform.

As we contemplate the tasks that our men and women in uniform face, we are made aware of our duty to properly compensate them and their families and to support them financially, psychologically, emotionally and, in many ways, spiritually.

We have provided a guarantee that our fighting men and women will be able to fully participate in democracy while being deployed abroad. We included language in this bill to ensure that their right to vote will be uninhibited, barriers taken down, and that valid votes will be counted.

This Nation set a precedent in 1864, when we conducted a Presidential election in the midst of a paralyzing war. This bill ensures that we will not allow the current crisis to disrupt our democratic process.

I now focus, briefly, and in conclusion, on the work done by the Emerging Threats Subcommittee in the last few months. Our committee is charged with the task of concentrating on the efforts of the Department of Defense to counter new and emerging threats to our national security interests. Our jurisdiction is on the subject that is absorbing the attention of the entire world at this time.

I stress that as the threat of terrorism has emerged in a most horrific way, we must not overlook our other jurisdiction of counterproliferation and chemical warfare. Those responsible for the tragic events of last Tuesday know they must find new ways to threaten our security, and we must be ready for them.

I will concentrate on the subcommittee's work on counterterrorism initiatives just for a moment.

The threat of terrorism can no longer be described as emerging. It has, unfortunately, emerged. The subcommittee has done substantial work in protecting our Nation from the terrorist threat, but it is obvious that we must do more.

There is no doubt in my mind that in the coming days we will see the work of this committee increase and our efforts to fight terrorism here on our homeland. We have sought to meet the immediate needs of the services and commanders for counterterrorism initiatives and force protection. These initiatives include $14.3 million to fund enhanced counterterrorism training for the special operations command—a very special command now in this new war with this emerged threat—which has a mission of defeating terrorist actions. This is crucial training. There will be more to be made in the future, and I call on all Members of Congress and the President to understand the critical importance of significant investment in this particular area.

In this bill, we have $10 million to increase and formalize the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff combating terrorism readiness initiative fund, which allows commanders in the field to fund emergent, high-priority requirements. Additionally, the amount of money put in prior to 9/11. I am certain, as we have time to confer with each other and revisit the budget allocations again, there can be additional funding authorization so that our commanders in the field have no barrier to protect their forces and to protect Americans wherever they may be in the world.

We also devoted $107 million to the Departments of Defense and Energy for detecting, defending against, and responding to the use of weapons of mass destruction. This includes funds allocated for chemical and biological detection and prevention.

The attack initiated against the United States last week was committed with a rather crude weapon of mass destruction. It is important that we keep our guard up against other more sophisticated weapons.

Additionally, we have devoted over $77 million to establish minimum access and entry controls at military installations both domestically and abroad, these funds are needed now more than ever.

But while we focus on the threat that has emerged, it is important that we also address the proliferation of nuclear weapons. As our enemy searches for new and innovative and very destructive ways to attack us, it is important that we deny him access to the most destructive weapons. The markup process has been, and I am very proud that this decision was made last week—the Cooperative Threat Reduction Program at the DOD budget request level of $403 million. Included in the $403 million is $56 million for destruction of Russian chemical munitions, before the program can spend the money to destroy the Russian chemical munitions, however, DOD must meet certain prerequisites. These prerequisites include a Russian commitment to contribute $25 million to the program per year. These prerequisites are based on those originated by Senator ROBERTS last year.

We also cannot overlook chemical and biological weapons that can inflict unthinkable, unbearable harm on our civilian population and our men and women in the field. That is why our committee devoted over $1.2 billion for demilitarization. Additionally, we have acquired vaccines to combat the threat of chemical and biological weapons and are in the process of acquiring that entire system much more robust, and that work is well underway.

Let me close by proclaiming my extreme confidence and admiration for the men and women of our Armed Forces who are facing every day out for their ultimate mission. And now we must all call on them to fulfill that mission. I am confident they are up to the task because, as I said in my opening, this war that we fight does not rely on the genius and the strength of our President, although he showed great strength and genius last night. It doesn’t just rely on the great strength of the 100 of us in this Chamber, but it rests squarely and stably and securely on the shoulders of every American everywhere, our allies, and of free-thinking people everywhere. It is inspired by God over the centuries to fight this war. That is why I know we will win and we will do all our part.

I yield back the remainder of my time.

Mr. THURMOND. Mr. President, at this tragic time in our Nation’s history, it is time for the Senate to lay aside politics and focus on the needs of our country, especially those of the men and women of our military services. The National Defense Authorization Bill for Fiscal Year 2002 is the key legislation that this Senate will consider this year to provide critical funding and legislative authority to the Department of Defense so it can carry out its national security role. That this bill includes important provisions to improve the quality of life for our soldiers, sailors, airmen and Marines. These men and women will be the spear in the fight to rid this world of the terrorist that threaten not only this great Nation, but all peace loving people throughout the world.

The fact that we are considering this important legislation at this time is a reflection of the bipartisan effort to support this mission. I joined my Republican colleagues on the Armed Services Committee in voting against reporting out the Defense Authorization Bill for Fiscal Year 2002. I would have joined my colleagues in voting against final passage of this bill if the onerous provision on the future course of the deployment of ballistic missile defenses had not been struck from the bill. By removing the provisions that would have hindered the President’s ability to deploy an effective National Missile Defense System, Chairman Levin has come a long way toward assuring passage of this important legislation and laid aside partisanship in favor of unity.

I will support this important legislation in its current form, although I have significant reservations regarding the section 821 which severely restricts Federal Prison Industries’ ability to sell to the Department of Defense. Since the Department is FPI’s largest customer, a new security role. The bill also includes important provisions to improve the quality of life for our soldiers, sailors, airmen and Marines. These men and women will be the spear in the fight to rid this world of the terrorist that threaten not only this great Nation, but all peace loving people throughout the world.

the Port of Everett, Washington. The Port, in cooperation with the City of Everett, the City of Mukilteo, the Washington State Department of Transportation, Sound Transit, and the Washington State Ferry System, plans to redevelop the site to include a new ferry terminal, commuter rail, a marina and enhanced shoreline access. This redevelopment will revitalize Mukilteo while improving transportation in this area. An important first step in implementing these development plans is for the Air Force to convey this property to the Port of Everett.

For almost 30 years, the 22 acre parcel of land has also been home to the National Marine Fisheries Service's, NMFS', Mukilteo Field Research Facility. Its laboratories are currently housed in old, run-down military barracks. Last year's land transfer legislation did not convey any of the property to NMFS. The agency was concerned that it had lost its chance to own a portion of the 22 acres, and thus to make significant improvements to the site. The facility conducts valuable marine research, which will lead to improved long-term success in protecting and restoring salmon, groundfish and other species in Puget Sound.

I directed the parties involved to reach a mutually agreeable solution. I am very pleased to announce that today's amendment reflects an agreement between the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, NOAA, NMFS and the Port of Everett. Upon transfer of the 22 acres, the Air Force will convey 1.1 acres to NOAA. After 12 years, any portion of the 1.1 acres not being used by NOAA shall automatically revert to the Port of Everett. In addition, the Secretary of Commerce will have the authority to exchange portions of the 1.1 acres with the Port of Everett if such an exchange deemed mutually agreeable.

This amendment reflects almost a year of negotiations and hard work on the part of many people within each organization. I would like to thank John Mohr, Executive Director for the Port of Everett, and Donna Darm, Acting Regional Administrator for NMFS in the Northwest Region. I appreciate their outstanding leadership in crafting this agreement. I look forward to continuing to work with the Port of Everett, NMFS and NOAA on this and any other issue that may arise in the future. Congratulations on working out an agreement which, I believe, is in the long-term interest of the community, the state of Washington and the nation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from South Carolina is recognized.

Mr. HOLLINGS. I ask unanimous consent that the ranking member from the great State of Louisiana for all of her hard work and for her taking over the chairmanship of the Emerging Threats Subcommittee. I don't know of any other task facing the Senate today that is greater than her taking over the chairmanship now that the President has made some very significant announcements in restructuring efforts of the Federal Government toward addressing the emerging and, indeed, regrettably existing threats now poised at our country. So I commend the Senator from Louisiana and wish her well in the weeks and months to come in her new capacity as chairman.

Ms. LANDRIEU. I thank the Senator. Let me respond briefly. To assure the Senator from Virginia that we are up to the task and that our members are ready to go, we look forward to working with him, and I appreciate his guidance, support, and direction.

Mr. WARNER. I thank the Senator from Louisiana.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from South Carolina to speak as in morning business?

Mr. REID. Madam President, what was the request?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The request is from the Senator from South Carolina to speak as in morning business.

Mr. REID. Reserving the right to object, before we move off the Defense bill—if it is within the rules, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. DASCHLE. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. DASCHLE. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate enter into a period for morning business, with Senator Byrd to speak for more than 15 minutes each.

Mr. WARNER. Madam President, I will not object. That will mean we will now go off the Defense bill, which we discussed. In consultation with our chairman, Senator Byrd, today we will be ready to proceed with some amendments as soon as the leadership establishes the parameters as to when the votes will be taken. We will be ready.

Mr. DASCHLE. Madam President, I appreciate the cooperation from the ranking member. The ranking member and the chairwoman have done a good job getting us to this point. We ought to be ready with amendments. We are going to have votes as early as 12 o'clock on Monday. I would like to entertain amendments as early as 10 o'clock on Monday morning. We need to get started. I would like to get into a very complete debate on Monday. We will be in throughout the day and maybe into the evening on Monday in order to continue our work on the Defense authorization bill.

Mr. WARNER. Madam President, I thank our distinguished leader.

Mr. DASCHLE. Madam President, I will also say for the interest of my colleagues, we will be propounding the unanimous consent request with regard to the consideration of the aviation legislation sometime, but it was in the interest of accommodating Senators who wish to speak that I thought it would be appropriate for us now to enter into a period for morning business. We will do that and be back on the floor with the request in the not too distant future.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Who seeks recognition? The Senator from South Carolina.

MEASURE READ THE FIRST TIME—S. 1447

Mr. HOLLINGS. Madam President, I understand that a settlement has been reached between the budgets of the House and Senate relative to the airline assistance measure. This measure, an attempt to propound a bare bones solution, does not encompass all the main considerations that came out at other hearings we had in the Commerce Committee yesterday.

It is more or less a gentlemen's agreement that safety is just as important, or this particular Senator was trying to get safety and security ahead of money. Be that as it may, the money has prevailed and the bill will pass, perhaps this weekend or perhaps this afternoon. I want to save time by speaking now so that when the bill is under consideration, I will not be holding up my colleagues who are trying to catch transportation to get home for the weekend.

In that light, I have at the desk a bill by myself, Senator McCa, Senator Kerry, Senator Rockefeller, Senator Breaux, Senator Cleland, Senator Nelson, Senator Edwards, Senator Burns, Senator Smith, and Senator Reid. I ask it be given its first reading.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:
Mr. HOLLINGS. I thank the distinguished Chair. Madam President, there is not a single person when we are talking about financing that we can give the airline industry billions upon billions of dollars in the next 10 minutes, but the sustenance, success, and the full resumption of air travel will never be flight if the traveling public is confident of safety and security at the airports and on planes in America.

First and foremost, of course, is the matter of the cockpit. Pilots do not want to get into the position of those pilots on 9–11. So they are not only asking for a secure door that can only be opened from the inside, going along with the rule that it not be opened in flight, but that they also be equipped with arm guards. That is going to be taken care of.

We have Federal marshals. We need to extend that program, there is no question about it. But the main kick in the arm of security at all airports of America is the reliance upon the industry itself to provide for that security. It has been going to the lowest bidder, to temporary workers paid minimum wage, their average stay not exceeding 5 months. So there is no professionalism, there is no experience and, as a result, there is no security. Everybody knows this. This was not just revealed at the hearing.

The bill establishes a Deputy Administrator at the Federal Aviation Administration for Aviation Security. We need a central command with fixed responsibility for this security.

The bill also establishes an Aviation Security Council comprised of representatives from the FAA, the Department of Justice, the Department of Defense, and the CIA to coordinate national security, intelligence, and aviation security information and make recommendations.

There was a question about curbside check-in. Employees stationed there look at their computers. They are well trained to look for certain persons that Interpol, other countries, or the FBI in this country have given as known security risks.

With those that they may have some suspicion about, they check that baggage. Obviously, if the distinguished Senator from California was going through, and she comes through every other week or so, going back and forth to the west coast, she is a discernible public figure, no security risk whatsoever and there is no reason to open the bag. That facilitates airline travel and that is needed.

Even at curbside when they use the computer and bring up the name “Hollings” on the computer, they can see exactly what his travel practices are and of the information, in terms to the security of air travel, and either give a double-check through his luggage or maybe a personal check.

El Al Airlines requires that in Tel Aviv. The truth is, we invited El Al’s safety executive, and due to the holidays he could not make it, but he will be here the first of the week and is going to brief our committee.

We know there is required security in the country of Israel, and as a result we want to try to emulate their success in that regard. First, put in a deputy administrator with a coordinated council and strengthen the cockpit doors and locks.

We have heard from the distinguished Senator from Massachusetts of his constituent who manufactures such a door. He will be momentarily addressing that.

There is no question in this Senator’s mind that once the door is locked securely with a substance such as Kevlar that it cannot be penetrated. Once that is secured and the security personnel at Reagan National Airport, you can open up Reagan National. There is no difference between opening up Dulles Airport or Baltimore-Washington Airport and not Reagan with respect to the proximity because, after all, it was the Dulles flight that hit the Pentagon.

Once a flight takes off, to turn around and come back into Washington, it is just as easy to turn from, say, Baltimore or Dulles before anything can really done to stomp its course and come right into the Pentagon again.

I understand what the Secret Service and the National Security Council are saying, but this is no time for debate. As the President said, this is a time for action. So let us start with action, get in the security personnel in a studied, incremental fashion. Start with the shuttle flights to New York and Boston and immediately have enough security personnel in those particular planes already equipped with the secured cockpit.

This particular measure also increases the number of Federal air marshals. In the interim, the FAA can use personnel from other Federal agencies to serve as those air marshals. It federalizes airport security operations. I heard a while ago at a conference that the Secretary of Transportation said we did not have the money to do this. We do have the money, and we have voted the and you get to why this Senator voted the $20 billion. Someone has said it is $3 billion, and that $3 billion is enough. Put some 23,000, 24,000 security personnel in the airports around the country as Federal service employees, skilled, with training, with adequate pay and retirement and health care benefits. That is when you are going to get the competent personnel.

I have had this struggle for the past several Federal administrations as to why the controllers. I do not see anybody in the Chamber this afternoon talking about privatize, privatize, privatize. We can see what privatization has done to security.

Europe affords government workers in its airports. If Europe can afford it, we can in fact, after 9–11, we must afford it. We cannot play games with the number of employees and everything else of that kind when it comes to security, and this is just as important or more so to this particular Senator than anybody else of that kind when it comes to security.

I am going to explain the money in a little while. You can give airlines all the money in the world, but if nobody comes to fly on their planes, if the airports and the planes themselves are not secure, then they are going to suffer badly financially and there is not enough money in the Government Treasury to keep them alive unless we do this No. 1 thing; namely, provide for airport security, which is on everybody’s mind.

The bill also improves screening procedures for passengers. It checks the passenger’s name against a coordinated list comprised of criminal, national security intelligence, and INS information.

I heard the previous administrator of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, Doris Meissner, on TV the other evening. She was talking about checking names off as they come in. The INS gets this information. The FBI gets this information. It ought to be absolutely certain that it also goes to all of the airports and is disseminated, because there is some question that they had some information about the 9–11 attack ahead of time but it was not properly dispensed among those responsible.

The bill provides for hijack training for the flight crew. It calls for background checks on students at flight schools for large planes and increases personnel security at airports and air traffic facilities. It assesses a dollar-per-passenger security charge and authorizes funds to carry out the security initiatives.

This bill is totally bipartisan, but there was a concern amongst several of the Senators about assessing a charge. I think all members of our committee more or less will cosponsor the bill, once we can check this afternoon, in a bipartisan fashion.

Now, that charge will bring in $250 million. Assuming the security responsibility at airports is federalized, it relieves the private airline industry of $1 billion. So $250 million for passengers to start contributing toward taking care of their own security at airports and air traffic facilities. It assesses a dollar-per-passenger security charge and authorizes funds to carry out the security initiatives.

We, in our industry, are eager to get back to the business of financing this industry, as we were eager to get back generally. It is our livelihood. The rebuilding of this industry will generate terrific investment opportunities which will attract the private capital necessary to fund the future of this industry and eventually supplant the aid you are considering.

The fact that these investments will be risky does not necessarily diminish their appeal. The assessment of risk and speculation about an uncertain future are at the core of the investing process. There are, however, some types of risks that financial markets find hard to deal with which the current situation contains, and act as barriers to re-starting the investing process.

For example, the more stringent security procedures which are essential to attracting passengers back to the airlines will be costly and disruptive, but we don’t know how much because we don’t understand them nor do we know who will bear the costs. Clarity on the “rules of the game” will be essential for the investment community to begin to assess the financial potential for and the risks of the various participants. Until the rules are clear, investors will put their brains to work elsewhere. Since this issue also affects the likelihood of the fleet being able to recover in the future, it makes the value of aircraft the bed-rock collateral for much of the industry’s financing, also hard to determine.

Second, investors are conditioned to assessing management turnaround plans and placing their bets, but liquidity concerns will make analysis again difficult. “Shrink-and-sell” is not the answer for the airlines industry. Given the rigidity of airline cost structures in both capital and labor, it will be very long time, years for a turnaround to take place. No airline has anything like the resources necessary to fund this turnaround and investors in the current poor general investment climate are not likely to bet on a company’s ability to raise money in the future to fund its plan. Therefore another, necessary condition to getting private capital moving back in is to give the airlines access to sufficient liquidity to fund a turnaround, so that investors can focus on the business risks they understand.

It is in the nature of these support arrangements that, if the process goes as intended, much of this support will not be used because it will act as a catalyst for private capital to flow to the industry and take back from the government the role of financing the industry.

Third, new kinds of liability issues have arisen because of the catastrophe itself and the state of war resulting from it. The industry’s insurance arrangements are not adequate to deal with the risk that the war risk is effectively uninsurable at present. This has the potential to paralyze the industry as investors and creditors are faced with the potential catastrophic loss. This is an impossible situation for investors to grapple with.

Clarity, liquidity, liability. Address these issues we’re we’re ready to get back to business.
Continuing:

Second, the reduction in demand caused by the loss of passenger confidence impact on travel times causes to find the security of airlines necessary to restore that confidence, coupled with the increased operating costs and lower fleet utilization that those same safety and security procedures are likely to require, means that the profit model for the industry will change, perhaps permanently. For the first time ever an industry conditioned to growth will have to find its way to shrink to profitability. It will take a lot of Yankee ingenuity to find that path, and many will not succeed.

Third, the catastrophe last week and our government’s response to it have served to raise the perceived potential liabilities of operating an airline while simultaneously reducing the availability of insurance for that risk. This means that airline shareholders, creditors, and potentially even the officers and directors of those carriers are being asked to bear the risk of potentially catastrophic losses; an unprecedented and highly disruptive situation.

Finally, the industry I participate in, has always had a big role to play in this industry because its persistent growth, capital intensity, financial and low profit margins mean lots of external capital needs to be raised: About $10 billion so far this year. Because the airplanes can be deployed anywhere—where there are long useful lives and a long history of holding their value, the vast proportion of the capital raised is in the form of long-term debt secured by these aircraft.

Madam President, jumping forward:

Second, investors are conditioned to assessing management turnaround plans and placing their bets, but liquidity concerns will make analysis again difficult. “Shrinking to profitability” is a new concept in the airline industry. Given the rigidity of airline cost structures in both capital and labor, it will take a long time, years, for a turnaround to take place. No airline has anything like the resources necessary to fund this turnaround.

Madam President, we are going to do our best at the Washington level to reestablish confidence in airlines, their operation, and, more particularly, the airline traveling public. We have been watching it day by day, and incrementally we have to address the insurance problem, we have to address the warrant problem with respect to payments to dividend.

I am not worried about the pay of the airline executives right now; I am worried about more substantial things for the moment.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Massachusetts.

Mr. MCATIN. Could I ask for 10 seconds? I ask unanimous consent, following the Senator from Illinois, I be allowed to speak.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are you proposing a unanimous consent request?

Mr. WELLSTONE. Yes, that after the Senator from Illinois, I be allowed to speak.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Massachusetts is recognized.

Mr. KERRY. Madam President, I thank the distinguished chairman of the Senate Commerce Committee for his leadership on this issue over a number of years. It has been almost 10 years that the Senate in committee has been advocating at many levels the notion of the federalizing of airport security. I guess it is part of the nature of all Members not to mention just the nature of our politics, that sometimes things of good common sense don’t happen for inertia, for indifference, for other interests that weigh in, until there is a tragedy such as we experienced a week ago.

The Senator from South Carolina has talked for a moment about the issue of the finances of our airlines. I emphasize that we obviously need to do something and do it fast. But that something has to be smart. That something has to recognize the distinction between the airline industry that existed on September 10 and the airline industry that was impacted on September 11 and what happens as a consequence of that. It is clear that prior to September 11, the airline industry was already experiencing a significant downturn in passengers and ridership because of the state of the economy. That has now been exacerbated a hundredfold.

I say to my fellow Americans today, as forcefully as I can, there is no reason not to fly in an airplane in the continental United States or to fly out of the United States in today’s system. There really isn’t. That system is safer than the air system has been in years. The scrutiny level already in our airports today is significantly higher than it has ever been. The level of safety and the level of scrutiny and the level of concern by airport security and the level of concern by air marshals and State police, and others is raised to the highest level it has ever been in our country. It is safe to fly in aircraft in the United States today. It may be that some people in this country would deem most of those in Washington expendable anyway, but if it is any consolation, Senators, Congressmen, and others are flying those planes now, and the American public should not hesitate to do so.

Here is also a truth, a reality. We can do things that create almost a fail-safe capacity, that raise the scrutiny level often further in order to establish an even greater level of confidence notwithstanding that what we are doing today is the greatest level of scrutiny we have ever had. That is what brings the Senator from South Carolina, Mr. mcATIN, and others to the floor today to introduce an airport security bill that will, in fact, raise the level to the point where there is no excuse for anybody having any fear or any sense of dread about flying.

How do we do that? Let me remind people that what happened last Tuesday was not high technology, nor was it even force at the end of a gun barrel or a bomb that had somehow found its way through and evaded security. In fact, even after the September 10th, when a weapon was used within the permissiveness of the system as it existed then. It wasn’t as if somebody walked through security and had a weapon that wasn’t detected. What these terrorists evidently did was use terror in a low-tech way as effectively and as deviously, as hideously, as any of us could have ever imagined; using a box cutter, using a minimalist kind of weapon, they managed to terrorize flight attendants and terrorize passengers who, up until that point in time, had an understanding of hijacking that you sort of break. You try not to unsettle the hijackers. In fact, the tapes that were used by the flight attendants were 1970 tapes of a one-hour tape that taught them to try to calm the hijackers and perhaps persuade them to seek political asylum, or at least not to harm the passengers while they took them to Cuba or took them to some other place.

What we learned on September 11 was that now there is a completely different strategy, that we now know people are willing to employ. Someone is willing to commit suicide and try to take over an airplane and use it as a weapon.

The task now is to make certain that no one can ever again use an airplane as a weapon. I again point out that, in an act of absolutely extraordinary heroism, three American citizens who were informed of the change in tactic, who were told by loved ones on the ground that the planes prior to them had been used as weapons, understood the new equation. They were informed of the change in tactic, that they were faced with the potential of imminent death and, if that was true, they were going to take matters into their own hands.

I think that forever changes the any doubt whatsoever about the potential of an aircraft again being used as a directed weapon by someone moving into the cockpit, taking over and actually flying the aircraft, using it as an instrument with specific targeting.

It may well be that through some extraordinary lapse, even after all the security measures, although it is hard to imagine how that might be if we do our jobs properly, someone might be able to penetrate airport security. But they could not walk into any restaurant anytime, anywhere and do that. They could walk into any mosque, any church, any synagogue—they could walk into any place where crowds gather and, if they were willing to die tragically, they would have had the ability to wreak havoc and chaos and mayhem in the area of their choice.

But we have the ability to do something to make it safe to fly, beyond any doubt whatsoever, beyond what I think is the extraordinary level of safety that exists today. One of the things that would give greater confidence to our fellow citizens is the awareness that all across this country there is a standardized, uniform system by which people are being screened as they travel to an airport, not some individual company in Boston and a different company in New York and a different company in another city with different supervisors and no accountability across the board except to those people at the airports, and to some Federal standard which is not applied in a Federal way.

It seems to me we could guarantee that safety. A lot of people in America are not aware of it, but the turnover rate of the current employment of those security operators is simply unacceptable: in some places 100-percent turnover, 200-percent, 300-percent turnover within the span of a year. And that is even among supervisors.

If we federalize the process we will not only have the opportunity to hire people at a decent wage, to guarantee the continuity, to guarantee the level of supervision, but we also will have an ability to do one of the most critical things now. We recognize that airport security is also a matter of national security. If it is a matter of national security, then those airport personnel have to work within a system that has the ability to share information that comes from law enforcement, information that can be used to stop those security operators— the CIA, the NSA, the FBI, the Defense Department.

If someone is on a watch list or if someone is a frequent flier with patterns that raise suspicion because of those prior trips and travels—which, incidentally, do show up in your passport check when you come through INS, and you can begin to make those determinations but there is no such similar kind of cross-tabulation or verifying those kinds of passengers' manifests and flights—in a virtual world where we have computers at our fingertips with instantaneous communication of the Internet, shame on us for not having a system that has that kind of cross-pollination between our law enforcement agencies and security agencies across the Nation.

This is now a matter of law enforcement and national security. The only way to raise the airport security issue to that level is to federalize the process.

We are here to talk about how we are going to bail out or help the airlines. The airlines pay $1 billion a year for their security costs. So if the Federal Government takes over those security costs, we are automatically reducing the burden of $1 billion a year or more, under increased status, from the airlines. Given that the airlines are working, hopefully, for profit and this affects the kind of bids and expenses they are willing to put out in it, we should guarantee to Americans that security at our airports is not going to be subject to the bottom line of an industry that is already in difficulties. It is going to be subject only to the judgment of someone who is established as a Deputy Administrator at the FAA for airport security. We establish an Aviation Security Council with the FAA, the Department of Justice, the Department of Defense, and the CIA, to coordinate national security intelligence and aviation security information and make recommendations.

We require the strengthening of cockpit doors and locks with limited access to the cockpit so every passenger believes an airplane will not be hijacked. We know it is at the choice of the pilots, no person will enter that cockpit from the time they leave the gate until the time they arrive at their destination.

We increase the number of Federal air marshals so people will know that while riding an aircraft, particularly those with the greatest potential of diversion, they would be protected by the use of Federal air marshals riding in the air with the pilot today.

We coordinate the overall airport security operations, providing improved training and testing for screening personnel.

We improve the screening procedures for passengers, checking passengers' names against a coordinated list comprised of criminal, national security, intelligence, and INS information. I might add, the INS component is a critical component in the context of security.

We will provide new and modern hijack training for flight crews based on what we now understand to be the threat. We perform background checks on students at flight schools. We increase perimeter security at airports and air traffic facilities, and we authorize the funds to carry out these initiatives.

Let me echo what has been said here previously. We can pass a bill that provides funding for the airlines through those who benefit from the airline business. Airlines have paid $1 billion a year for their security costs. We are reducing the burden of $1 billion a year or more. The airlines are paying for their security costs, and we are reducing that burden.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to follow the Aviation Security bill that has been introduced by the distinguished Senator from South Carolina, Mr. HOLLINGS; Senator MCCAIN, the distinguished ranking Member of the Commerce Committee, the Senator from Massachusetts, and myself. This is very much a part of the overall program that we are putting forward.

The bill we will probably vote on today is the finance part of the package. I think most Americans agree we cannot allow our aviation industry to fall. So we are going to pass, I hope very shortly, a measure that will help our airlines get over the hump until the people have the security to come back and fly.

The aviation security bill that we are introducing today, that I hope we will be able to pass early next week or the following week, is very much a part of a airlines getting back to normal. I rise to speak on behalf of the aviation security bill that has been introduced by the distinguished Senator from South Carolina, Mr. HOLLINGS; Senator MCCAIN, the distinguished ranking Member of the Commerce Committee, the Senator from Massachusetts, and myself. This is very much a part of the overall package that we are putting forward.

I rise to speak on behalf of the aviation security bill that has been introduced by the distinguished Senator from South Carolina, Mr. HOLLINGS; Senator MCCAIN, the distinguished ranking Member of the Commerce Committee, the Senator from Massachusetts, and myself. This is very much a part of the overall package that we are putting forward.

The way we are going to draw them back is to have the security in place so they know they will be safe when they step out of their car and board an air plane. But in the interim, until we are able to put all of these things in place, we need the financial aid package that is before us today.

I am very pleased that under the chairmanship of Senator HOLLINGS yesterday we had a hearing to talk about the security need. We talked to the Secretary of Transportation. We talked to the FAA Administrator. We talked to pilots and people who know what needs to be done to close the vulnerabilities that we saw on September 11. I think the FAA Administrator for putting the screeners on many of our flights around the country. They are in plain clothes. Most people would not know they are on a flight. But we do indeed have armed sky marshals on many of the flights that are in the air as we speak. But we want to make them permanent. We want to make sure we have sky marshals on virtually every flight, and possibly every flight later down the road.

We also have the passengers that there is a certified peace officer onboard who is trained to do what is necessary to deal with the crime that is committed in the air.

The second major provision in this bill that I think we must do is upgrade the screening. We will upgrade the equipment, and we will upgrade personnel education and training. We all know the screeners have been hired by contractors. They have high turnover rates. They do not have the experience that we would expect in screening. We have seen pictures of things that have gone through the screens and gotten onto an airplane that are just not appropriate. We want to stop that from happening.

That is why upgrading the screeners is important. I think they should be a part of a Federal system of security.

We are going to put some kind of barrier between the pilots and the rest of the airplane so that someone would not be able to get in to a cockpit, as so sad happened on September 11. We will have a Deputy FAA Administrator in charge of aviation security so that we will have one person in charge of all of aviation security.

It is my hope that we would start with entry-level screeners, and that it would be a career path for the aviation security department which would include graduating to become a sky marshal, staying in the system with a career in the system so we could have more trained and experienced people.

Those are some of the important points that are in this bill. I know some people disagree with certain parts of this bill. But it is a great start. It is an important step for rehabilitating our airline industry.

If we have the security, people will fly. People love to fly. We had 600 million people fly last year. We can build back to that number if we have the security. That confidence will be there. It is going to take a little longer going through the airport, but I think people are willing to wait a little longer and go earlier in order to feel safe. The flying public will come back.

I support this bill. I will continue to work on it with the chairman. But I also think that we must do something very shortly, as we are also trying to shore up our airlines. We will not let our transportation system fail. If we do, the terrorists will have won. The terrorists are not going to be the United States of America.

Thank you, Mr. President.

UNANIMOUS CONSENT REQUEST— S. 1450

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate now proceed to S. 1450, the aviation assistance and security bill; that no amendment or motion be made to the bill; that there be 1 hour for debate equally divided between the two leaders or their designees, with an additional 15 minutes under the control of Senator BYRD, with 10 minutes for Senator KENNEDY; that at the conclusion or yielding back of the time, the bill be read a third time and the Senate vote without intervening action or debate on final passage of the bill.

I further ask unanimous consent that when the Senate receives from the House its companion bill, it be immediately considered, read a third time, and passed, provided it is identical to the Senate-passed bill.

I further ask unanimous consent that once the House bill has been enacted into law, provided it is identical to the Senate measure, then action on the Senate bill be vitiated and the measure then be indefinitely postponed.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. FITZGERALD. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

The PRESIDENT, with 10 minutes for Senator KENNEDY.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

The Senator from Minnesota.

AVIATION SAFETY

Mr. WELLSSTONE. Mr. President, I believe this Transportation Safety Act, which I know Senator HOLLINGS and others are going to introduce very soon, will certainly pass with strong support.

First of all, I ask unanimous consent to be added as an original cosponsor of this piece of legislation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. WELLSSTONE. Mr. President, the Senator from South Carolina is absolutely right. Not only does safety have to be there with the money, but the fact is, without the safety, people aren't going to fly. If they don't fly, we aren't going to have this industry financially viable. It is that simple. You can see it traveling around the country right now. There are very few people at the airports. People are quite frightened. We have to absolutely pass this bill. I think it should be in this package right here. But we will be coming back to this very soon, and I think the sooner the better.

There were some provisions that I desperately wanted to see in this bill. I know the Senator from South Carolina and others tried with all their might. I know Senator DASCHLE did. There were negotiations late into the evening.

From my point of view, this language is essential to air service. I want to make sure that gets lived up to.

A good part of our State is rural. We don't want our smaller airports left out.

On the question of general aviation and VFR, there are a lot of people hurting right now. I traveled in a small plane this last weekend. They are having a hard time offering any protection for them. We will get back to that next week.

But the final point I want to make is that we had, I think, about a $3.7 billion package that dealt with all the people who are being laid off. Northwest Airlines just announced that 10,000 people will be laid off. Half of them are in the State of Minnesota. Frankly, look at the economy.

There are an awful lot of people in a world of economic pain. I believe what should have been in this package—I know there were Representatives on the House side who resisted this, talking about the companies, yes—is the extending of unemployment benefits and making sure people have access to job training, that there is a dislocated worker focus.

The most frightening thing of all, next to losing your job, is that you then lose your health care coverage. COBRA is too expensive. I wish we had something better for these employees. This is going to be critically important.

These are going to be some really hard times for people. As one Senator from the State of Minnesota, I am really disappointed we did not get this included. I know the Senate majority leader, Mr. DASCHLE, said this would be a first priority. I know Senator HOLLINGS has said that. We have to come back next week and we have to focus on these employees. We have to make sure we provide the help to them and to their families. That has to be part of a relief package. We have to move fast now. We couldn't get it in today. It will be in next week or it will be in as soon as the Senate returns.

Last point: We have all these huge issues staring us in the face. When I flew out here, I was talking to some of the employees of Northwest. I said: How are you doing? They said: We are doing fine. They meant about the world they live in. Everybody is very worried. Everybody is very resolute. Everybody is very worried. But they also meant: We are afraid we are going to lose our jobs. I am sure a number of those people now have lost their jobs. We have to provide help for them.

Mr. NELSON. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Florida is recognized.

Mr. NELSON of Florida. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I be recognized for 5 minutes. It is my understanding, under a previous order, that the Senator from Illinois has the floor. If he is not ready, then I ask unanimous consent that I be recognized for 5 minutes prior to him.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. NELSON of Florida. Mr. President, as we consider a major component of America’s economic engine and what to do about it, clearly there are two things that stand out and that came out of our Commerce Committee hearing yesterday chaired by Senator HOLLINGS.

For the airlines to be able to fly again financially solvent, the security measures must be put into place so that the American public has confidence to fly again.

I personally think it is safe to fly. I flew Monday night to Orlando, and there were only 10 people on the plane. Happily, when I flew back from Florida, from Tampa to Washington on Tuesday night, there were 40 people on the plane. My recommendation on the basis of going to two major airports in Florida, checking all of their security arrangements, is that the security apparatus is beginning to work. It didn’t work on September 11.

The first part of restoring this industry to health is security, so that we can get people back in the airplanes and the American public flying again. That, of course, has been amply demonstrated by this deposition today. I am a cosponsor of this bill.

The second component that came out of our hearing was that the airlines, in order to be able to operate, have to have insurance that is available and affordable. That is what is creating the crisis right now, that several of the insurance carriers are about to yank the coverage from the airlines. Of course, the airlines will be grounded if that is going to occur.

That is why it is so important in this package that is coming out that the majority leader and the Republican leader are about to describe, a component of victims’ compensation which would eliminate a lot of the uncertainty, the lawsuit damage that had been done as a result of the World Trade Center being rammed by those two jetliners and where would be the source of that funding.

Preliminarily, for the leaders to discuss what had been agreed upon as a first step—and I do believe this is a first step in a long journey, as we return to normality in our airline traffic system, a very big, essential first step—the American public, the American traveling public, has to be a major component. They have to have the confidence that they are going to be safe when they get back into air travel.

A major component of economic restoration in this country is hanging in the balance. I am going to discuss why I think this is of critical importance to our national security.

Once we get through and decide on this first package—hopefully we will enact it this afternoon—then there are going to be many steps in this journey. There are collateral industries that have been decimated. Clearly, all of these other collateral industries, such as hotels, restaurants, tourist attractions, car rental agencies—and I have three of the Nation’s largest that are headquartered in the State of Florida: Avis, National, and Budget Rent A Car companies are headquartered in the State of Florida. You can imagine, with 50 percent of their business now not coming in the door, what is happening to their financial obligations, and to the obligations they have to banks on loan payments, and their obligations to the salaries of their employees.

So as we go on down the road, I think what we are going to discover is, first and foremost, we have to get the airline industry back in the air operating with fairly full loads, so the economic engine is working and so it is supplying all of the air traffic that feeds so many of these other collateral industries, such as car rentals, such as hotels, such as convention centers, such as restaurants. Once that package has been firmly established—and I hope this gathering right here in this Senate is bringing reasonable men together so they might agree—then I think in the very near future, we will be talking about next week—we can address some of these other collateral industries that desperately need help.

Today we are going to proceed with the debate on the aviation security bill. I don’t think there is going to be a lot of disagreement on that. I think it clearly will reestablish in the public’s mind that it is safe to travel. Indeed, I am going to demonstrate that with my own feet tonight when I walk out to the airport to demonstrate that.

I really do believe it is safe. By the way, if you need to fly, now is the time to fly because there are no lines. But in addition, it is my hope that we are going to have agreement here so we can leave the commercial airliner. I really do believe it is safe. By the way, if you need to fly, now is the time to fly because there are no lines. But in addition, it is my hope that we are going to have agreement here so we can leave the commercial airliner.

air carrier providing interstate or foreign air transportation:

No unsolicited communication concerning a potential personal injury or wrongful death may be made by an attorney (including an associate, agent, employee, or other representative of an attorney) or any potential party to the litigation to the individual injured in the accident, or to a relative of an individual involved in the accident, before the 45th day following the date of the accident.

Let me repeat: For 45 days after this tragedy, Federal law protects the victims and their families from unsolicited contact and harassment by lawyers or their agents. And this protection applies to all victims, whether they are from New York, New Jersey, Virginia, or any other State.

I am glad we acted in 1996 to protect the emotionally vulnerable from those in the legal community who do not have their best interests at heart. I am glad we acted again in 2000 to extend the bereavement time from 30 to 45 days. This gives the relatives of victims time to find their loved ones, arrange and work through the legal process, and come to grips with their loss. And I want to make sure that the victims and their families know that, as we speak, Federal law protects them in this fashion. This is a Federal Government guarantee to innocent victims that all aggrieved families will be protected until Friday, October 26, from any contact whatsoever on the part of lawyers seeking to represent those who have been victims of this disaster.

I wish the legislation had included at least a 25-percent cap on fees, such as is already the case in the Federal Tort Claims Act today. Already today, in the Federal Tort Claims Act, there is a 25-percent cap on legal fees. I wish that had been applied to this bill. At least we do have the bereavement rule in existing law to protect the victims of this disaster from being contacted by lawyers for 45 days, and that will go up until October 26.

I commend the Senate from South Carolina for his legislation regarding airport safety. There is no question that we need to make thoughtful and sweeping changes to help ensure that the tragedy of September 11 never occurs again.

I would also like to commend the Senator from Arizona and the Senator from Texas for their leadership on this issue. Yesterday, I introduced legislation that had a similar purpose to expand airport and airplane security.

The legislation I introduced yesterday, however, took a different approach by placing the primary responsibility on Congress. I introduced Federal Air Marshal program with the Attorney General, as our nation's top law enforcement official. I firmly believe that we need a comprehensive Federal Air Marshal program to secure airports from curbside to cockpit.

So, the fundamental difference between my approach and the Committee approach is that my legislation would relieve the obligations of airport security from the FAA and the airlines, whose primary purpose is to facilitate air transportation, to carry that responsibility to the Department of Justice, whose primary mission is to enforce federal law, and most importantly, to safeguard and protect us from terrorism.

This new Federal Air Marshal program will require additional manpower and financial resources. And that is where we intend to harness the volunteer spirit espoused by so many of our law enforcement personnel throughout the country. The new Federal Air Marshal program not only will recruit new full-time active professional marshals but will augment that program with Deputy Federal Air Marshals drawn from retired military personnel, as well as active duty Federal, State, and local law enforcement officers—anyone from a DEA agent to a local law enforcement officer who wants to serve his country by securing our airports and aircraft. It is also crucial that we retain a sufficient measure of cost-sharing with private and state and local entities. Private airlines and airport authorities should share a responsibility, as they do now, to help fund a portion of airport security.

We actually already have models in place for the type of expansion of cockpit security envisioned in this bill. Our federal courthouses currently are secured by our United States Marshals, who also employ Court Security Officers (CSOs) to provide security around the perimeter of the building, at each point of entry, and in the courtrooms themselves. These CSO are themselves retired Federal, State, and local law enforcement personnel. Part of the reason our courthouses are so secure today that our law provides for layers of security far before one enters the actual courtroom. This is perhaps why Americans have so little to fear today when they walk inside a federal courtroom. What is good for our federal judges is good for all Americans. Our nation's Capitol also is secured by a uniform system of federal officers who patrol from the interior of this chamber to the surrounding neighborhood sidewalks. Our democracy now demands, in the interest of our national security, that we make sure our cockpits are every bit as secure as our courthouses and this chamber.

I believe we should entrust this national security item with the resources, expertise, and experience of our esteemed Federal Aviation Agency, and that we do so immediately.

I look forward to ongoing discussions with my colleagues who serve on the Commerce Committee and the Judiciary Committee. I think we can work together to produce a thoughtful and effective airline security law.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arizona is recognized.

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, I wish to speak on this bill and to add my voice to those who have pointed out how critical it is that the U.S. Government support our airline industry.

I share some concerns, such as those expressed by the Senator from Kentucky. There are other concerns that others have expressed that also have merit. I will note in a moment why I am very concerned about a provision of the bill. I would not have written it the way it is written, but I think fundamentally the U.S. Government must support our airlines at this critical time.

Everyone knows what happened on September 11. Everybody knows that as a result the U.S. Government shut down the airlines—no more air travel until we fixed it.

That shutdown resulted in huge losses to our airlines, not just for the days those airlines were down, but we have seen a continuation of a reluctance of people to fly, a diminution in the revenues of these airlines, fewer flights, people laid off and, frankly, the possibility of a spiraling down of this industry to the point that it could affect many other facets of our economy and drive our GNP down to an unacceptable level.

In my State, which depends a lot on tourism—either everyone has come to Arizona for a vacation or would like to, I suspect, just as they would for the State of the Presiding Officer, States such as Hawaii, Nevada, Arizona—we have had a tremendous loss in our tourism industry, everything from the hotels and the motels, the golf courses, the limousine and taxi services, and everything else connected with it. Those losses are going to be extraordinary and will drag down on everybody if people do not begin to have confidence that they can fly in safety at reasonable fares.

That brings up the concern I have about the legislation. We need to support this industry. I think we are going to pass this legislation overwhelmingly. I hope so. I look forward to supporting it. I want to issue a warning about the way this will be implemented because the administration will have a forum in the road and they will have to choose which path to follow. I am going to argue strongly for the first path rather than the second, and I want to explain why.

This bill actually provides, among other things, something we need for the airlines of two different kinds. The first is $5 billion of grants. This is to make up for the immediate loss to the airlines when the Federal Government shut them down. That is fair. Everybody agrees with the formula for that based on passenger miles and some other factors that have been agreed to by the airline industry.
That same formula was supposed to apply to the subsequent loan guarantees. The bill has $10 billion of loan guarantees. The industry wanted more, but there is $10 billion of loan guarantees in the bill. That is also very important for the industry because besides getting over the immediate hump of those revenue losses, they need to make themselves whole again by going out to the financial market and financing their future needs until the fares begin to make up for that lost revenue. To do that, they need the backing of the U.S. Government because most of them cannot convince lenders at this point that they are a good credit risk, for all of the obvious reasons of which we are aware.

The administration did not want the formula to apply to the loan guarantees and has fought very hard to take that formula out. This is regrettable because it suggests the possibility that this administration will actually involve itself in picking winners and losers in the industry. That is not right.

One can say it is not a free market if the Government guarantees loans, but the Government is supposed to be guaranteeing these loans on an equal basis to everybody. It should not be deciding which companies to favor and which ones not to favor.

That is my concern about the possibility that because there is no formula for the loan guarantees, some Federal official is going to literally be picking winners and losers. The Administration certainly would not do that on the basis of some prejudice. I am not suggesting that. Instead, they would argue they need to protect the taxpayers’ money. There is not anybody who has been stronger in this body on that than I have been. We all agree we need to protect the taxpayers and to grant these loans on the basis that they are going to be repaid, obviously so the taxpayers are not left holding the bag. Therein lies the rub because some airlines are collateral from other airlines in terms of what they can show the bank. Let me give an example.

I will give an example. An airline headquartered in my State, America West Airlines, which is 9th or 10th in the country, but a relatively new airline, had obtained a commitment for a $200 million line of credit based upon future expected revenues. That was set to go through on September 11, when the bottom fell out. Obviously, no lender under the current circumstances would do that. That is why we are talking about guaranteed loans.

There are those who say these loans should be based on some collateral, something very specific and definite, or else the Federal Government should not be in the business of guaranteeing the loan. That would cut out certain companies, the very companies that offer the primary competition to these older, larger airlines to keep the fares low.

The reason these newer airlines have succeeded is that they have been able to offer low-fare service, and the net result has been a lot of people have gone to these newer, smaller airlines. But it has also served to keep the older, larger airlines’ fares within a reasonable level.

I happen to fly a couple of these older, larger airlines a lot, and I love them. They have provided very good service, and I want to help them, but I think they would agree that it would not be fair simply because of a difference in size or age, therefore representing different circumstances, that one airline should be preferred over another airline in terms of the ability to get these loans.

The legislation has embodied within it total discretion on the part of the President and his agents in any event because it says that the loans that are made under this guaranteed loan provisions are subject only under rules and regulations the President deems necessary—no other further restrictions.

The reality is, if the President of the United States wants to say: I want to make sure the taxpayers get their money back, so I am going to require a condition of X, he can do that. The ability, however, to do that should not be confused with the ability of an airline to say: Even though the President has total discretion to set terms and conditions that we may not be able to satisfy, if there is a formula involved, we at least have the right to go to the banks or other lenders and say: Under the legislation, we are, in effect, guaranteed 3 percent, or 5 percent, or whatever that percentage is, of the available loans, and therefore would you, please, based upon that commitment of the Federal Government, lend us that money? There is a legal right to seek for a certain amount of money to borrow. There is at least the right to do that. That is what returning the formula to the legislation would do.

Senator MCCAIN and I have considered offering an amendment to that effect. We know the leadership would like to consider the bill without amendments, and we are willing to proceed on that basis if everyone else is as well.

What I am saying to our leadership, to you, Mr. President, and to anybody in the administration who will listen, is we are willing to cooperate on this, and, on behalf of the people we represent, we are willing to be cooperative, but we plead with them that for good public policy, they need to appreciate the differences among the airlines, the fact that some can do one thing, others can do another, and that this Government should not be in the business of literally picking winners and losers, the result of which could be to drive companies into bankruptcy. I do not think anybody wants that on the books.

In the granting of these loans, I hope it will be done in such a way that they do not disadvantage certain companies with the result that they cannot stay in business. All of the industry will suffer as a result, and the American travelers will suffer as a result.

Mr. ROCKEFELLER. Mr. President, I arise before you today to support the Aviation Security Bill introduced by Senator HOLLINGS and me. As the nation strives to recover from the tragic events of September 11, 2001, one of the vital steps we must take to protect our economy and regain our sense of national security is to restore full function and confidence to our nation’s air transport system. We are on the verge of passing a large financial package to aid in relieving the financial pressures placed on our airlines as a result of these heinous attacks. This is a crucial first step in restoring consumer confidence in our air transportation system. We are on the verge of passing the Aviation Security Bill before us today is an important first step in restoring such confidence to those in the sky and those on the ground. I am proud to stand with Senator HOLLINGS to introduce this momentous legislation.

The Aviation Security Bill contains important security measures which will drastically reduce the potential for future disruptions in our nation's air traffic. The bill demands the strengthening of cockpit doors and limits access to the cockpit itself, ensuring that a commercial plane can never again be used as a guided weapon of destruction. Only pilots will be able to allow others into the cockpit. Under the provisions of this bill, even flight attendants won't have keys. It federalizes airport security operations, improving the training and testing programs for screening personnel, giving these invaluable men and women the tools necessary to perform their jobs properly. It increases perimeter security at airports, in their parking lots, and in air traffic facilities so that we can be sure at all times that only authorized personnel and vehicles have immediate access to our airports and aircrafts. It increases the number of federal Air Marshals and provides hijack training for flight crews to make certain those in the skies are equipped to deal with any situation that may arise after takeoff. It establishes a Deputy Administrator at the Federal Aviation Administration for Aviation Security and establishes an interagency Aviation Security Council to make it easier for the government to assess and respond to the needs of the aviation community. It requires the performance of background checks on those seeking training in the operation of large planes. This will allow us to ensure that those who know how to fly our planes have the noble goals of service and self-betterment in mind. All of these steps guarantee that air transportation will be safer and more secure than it has ever been.

However, it is important to remember that this is only the first step. It is crucial. We must implement these immediate, but not final action. In the eleven days since these tragic events, many common-sense security solutions have emerged all over the country and on Capitol Hill. These are the solutions included in this bill. Yet a longer look requires us to ensure that those who know how to fly our planes have the noble goals of service and self-betterment in mind. All of these steps guarantee that air transportation will be safer and more secure than it has ever been.

I further ask unanimous consent that when the Senate receives from the House its companion bill, it be immediately considered, read a third time, and passed, provided it is identical to the Senate-passed bill.

I further ask unanimous consent that once the bill has been enacted into law, provided it is identical to the Senate measure, then action on the Senate bill be vitiated and the measure then be indefinitely postponed.

we have to address it. I indicated my caucus this morning that it is my strong view that this is the first installment of a series of efforts that must be made to put our economy back on track and to address the myriad other economic challenges we face, especially those involving workers and their families. So we are going to continue to work and find ways in which to do that.

I emphasize I see this only as the first installment. We will have to go back and address other issues, especially those involving families. I thank the Senator for raising the issue.

Mrs. CARNahan. As always, I thank the leader for his guidance. I look forward to working with him next week, and I do not object.

Mr. LOtt. Reserving the right to object, and I will not object, but I ask that Senator Nickles get 20 minutes so we will have a balance of the time. I urge all Senators to not feel they must use all of the time.

I inquire of the Chair, with that change, has the question been put?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AIR TRANSPORTATION SAFETY AND SYSTEM STABILIZATION ACT

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the bill by title.

The bill clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 1450) to preserve the continued viability of the United States air transportation system.

Mr. DasChle. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

The Senator from Missouri, Mr. Bond.

Mrs. Hutchison. Mr. President, parliamentary inquiry.

Mr. Bond. Mr. President, I yield to the distinguished Senator from Texas.

Mrs. Hutchison. Mr. President, are we now on the bill and into my 30 minutes of time?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

Mrs. Hutchison. Thank you, Mr. President. I yield 5 minutes to the Senator from Missouri.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Missouri.

Mr. Lott. Mr. President, I thank the Senator from Texas for yielding me time. Let me try to be quicker than 5 minutes.

No. 1, while this package may not be what anyone likes, I am sure in this body and the other body there are probably 535 different ideas as to what we need to do. I hope we can come together, the House and Senate, and decide that we must move. I am more than willing to take what has been put together as an emergency measure and urge my colleagues to support it, and not without due process that was sustained when the Federal Government rightfully shut down air transportation this past week, to the current time where consumer concerns over safety have limited the flying public. We have put our entire airline industry at great risk. This bill is necessary if we are to solve those problems and if we are to get the planes back in the air.

I can understand what my colleagues in this body and the other body have raised as concerns about insurance and compensation for those who are out of work. Let me be clear; it is not just the airline industry which has suffered losses. It is family workers.

I have just talked to people in the travel and tourism industry and consumer products industries. They have suffered a great downturn, and there may be people out of work. The good news is we have in place statutes and programs designed to assist those people.

Let me be clear; if we delay passing this bill, as we attempt to craft a change or adjustment on assistance for laid-off employees, we risk causing a tremendous economic calamity.

I understand that in the House objections over the failure to include relief for unemployment led to objections that put the passage of this package in doubt.

Right now, we are looking at layoffs in the airline industry in the neighborhood of 20 to 25 percent. If we do not pass this bill, we are looking at 100-percent layoffs not only at disaster for those people who work in the airline industry, those of us who depend upon airline traffic to get back to our constituents, those who depend upon airline travel for business, for recreation, and for tourism, but a risk to the entire economy. So this bill needs to be passed.

Let me also point out that last week I was in this Chamber and I said that one of the key things we must include in the airline rescue package is a carefully crafted, structured means of providing compensation to the victims. There is a two-part means of providing compensation for the families of those who are deceased as a result of the accident and those who are injured.

There are various provisions built in which would seem to make an option of two structures available, and there is a clear-cut indication that airlines will be liable only up to the limits of their existing insurance coverage.

I thank the White House and the leadership for including those protections. Without them, at least two of our major airlines would not be able to continue in business next week. This is critically important, as is the provision in the measure to direct loans to those who can demonstrate their need to the Secretary of Transportation as well as loans which are to be structured by a board composed of the Secretary of Transportation, the Chair of the Federal Reserve, the Secretary of the Treasury, and the Comptroller General. We put a great deal of discretion and responsibility in the hands of those very able officials. While none of us may have crafted the bill exactly as it was crafted, this is our only hope to ensure we do not have a disaster resulting from the total shutdown of the airline industry.

I urge my colleagues, I beg my colleagues, to pass it.

I return to the manager on this side any time remaining on my time. I thank the Chair and the Senator from Texas for their accommodation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Ms. Smith). The Senator from Texas?

Mrs. Hutchison. I take up to 3 minutes of time now to explain what is in the bill, but I want to be told when 3 minutes is up because I will lose the remaining 30 minutes of people.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Chair will notify the Senator.

Mrs. Hutchison. Madam President, the Air Transportation System Stabilization Act is the effort of the U.S. Congress, working with the President, to shore up the aviation industry in our country. Already we have seen announced almost 100,000 layoffs in the aviation industry in our country. That will have a rippling effect throughout the economy. What we are doing today is trying to stabilize this industry to keep it on its feet in very tough times so we can minimize the layoffs. Hopefully, they will not be as bad as the airline announcement. We can get this country back on track so our economy will stay strong.

What this bill does is have $5 billion in immediate assistance to the carriers based on their actual losses for the grounded airplane time they have had. As we know, there is still one airport that does not have service. We still have airlines losing business because of the September 11 tragedy that was not an act of the United States.

We have in addition $10 billion of loan guarantees subject to terms and conditions set by the President. There will be a board created to review and decide on the applications for these loans. The membership of this board will be the Secretary of the Treasury, the Federal Reserve Chairman, the Secretary of Transportation, and the Comptroller General. These loans will be based on sound, solid, hopefully, financially sound guarantees in order to put limits on executive compensation of any carrier that gets a part of this airline cash assistance package.

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE

We also have provisions for the Secretary of Transportation to provide help for airlines that are the only airline serving a community, and if the airline is going to shut down, we are going to try to encourage that airline to stay in the community. We are dealing with the liability issues, trying to take from the airlines any liability beyond what their insurers will carry.

We also have liability provisions for the war risk insurance for all other industries that might be affected in the future with an act of terrorism that is beyond their control so that they will not be liable beyond their means and be put out of business.

These are the basic parts of this legislation that we are hoping to pass tonight and send to the President.

I yield up to 10 minutes to the Senator from Illinois.

Mr. FITZGERALD. Madam President, I rise to say what I think are important observations that have been made to the bill as it has been negotiated by various parties in the House and the Senate, and I guess with involvement from the White House and the Office of Management and Budget.

I am very concerned about the airline industry and especially the many employees of the industry. Tens of thousands of airline employees have already been laid off. My home State of Illinois is home to O ’Hare International Airport which is a hub for United and American Airlines, the nation’s two largest carriers. Perhaps no State in the country is as immediately affected by the problems affecting the aviation industry as is Illinois. I am very concerned about the employees. I met with several skyscrapers the other day who told me it was their last day on the job, and to see the forlorn look in their eyes was heart wrenching.

Now, my colleagues, the way this bill is designed, there is no protection for the employees of these airlines. There are no strings, really, attached to the airline access of up to $15 billion in taxpayer money. It is money that some airlines will take, and still we will see lots of layoffs and poor treatment of some of the airline employees.

I think Congress is remiss; we are moving too fast. We should have some strings attached if they are getting all this government money. We should have some protections for the airline employees. That is an omission in this bill.

I am also concerned that anytime you have a bailout of an industry, you have to ask, by what principle or what reasoning are you bailing out this industry? In this case, we have chosen to bail out the airline industry. The airline industry has said they are entitled to bail-out money. In addition, the Federal Government issued a ground stop order on September 11 that kept their planes out of the air for at least 2½ days, and but for that ground stop order, that edict of the Government, they would not have incurred the losses they did during those days.

This bill may not be compensating them for the losses incurred by virtue of that ground stop order. The fact is we are compensating them for many times the losses they suffered as a result of the ground stop order.

Analysts testified before the Senate Commerce Committee yesterday. I sat in the whole hearing for 4 hours. We heard from many people. It was testified that the direct loss to the aviation industry in America as a result of that ground stop order on September 11 was $2 to $3 billion. That comports with the estimates that have come out from research departments, investment banks around the country, and comports with everything else. This bill will give the airline industry $5 billion in direct cash assistance and another $10 billion in loan guarantees or $15 billion in Federal taxpayer bailouts.

Leo Mullin, the CEO of Delta Air Lines, testified that the direct loss of Delta Air Lines for each day they were shut down as a result of that ground stop order was $70 million. So over 3 days, Delta Air Lines incurred a loss as a result of the ground stop order of $210 million. How much in Federal assistance will Delta get as a result of this bill? At least four times the losses they sustained as a result of the ground stop order. Delta will get about 60 percent of the $5 billion in cash assistance. In other words, they will get a grant of about $800 million, four times their losses, plus they will be eligible for these new loan guarantees.

The bottom line is, I think this assistance is too generous. It gives too much money. It goes far beyond compensating the airlines for those 3 days that Government edict was in effect. At least four times the losses they did during those days. Then my question is. By what principle do we not agree to help other industries? I had the general counsel of a major car rental company call me and say they needed the bailout. I had restaurants tell me they were shutting down. There are hotels shutting down. The fact is, those other industries did not quite have the effective lobbying team the airline industries had. They were very prompt in coming to Capitol Hill and requesting relief. And, moreover, they got this relief in a way that I think is virtually unprecedented.

When the Chrysler Corporation got its loans guaranteed back in the 1970s, in return for making those Government funds available, the Government was paid in warrants of Chrysler Corporation stock. The Government took 14 million warrants of Chrysler Corporation. When those warrants rose in value as the company did better and got back on its feet, the Government sold those warrants at, I believe, a $300 million profit.

Fortunately, Senator CORZINE and I worked together. We did get put into this bill, at our request, language to allow the Treasury Department, in return for any of the loan guarantees that are given out under this bill—the Treasury will have the authority to negotiate appropriate warrants so the taxpayers can participate in the upside here.

I would prefer that the Treasury Department have clear authority to ask for warrants in return for the $5 billion in cash assistance. I think that would be the appropriate protection for the taxpayers. In fact, without that protection, then, what we are doing, by the way, is structuring this bill such that this is not a bailout of the industry so much as it is a transfer of the loss that industry has incurred from the airline industry shareholders to Joe Taxpayer.

It may be intuitive to some that the general decline of the industry, that loss, should be borne by the taxpayers. To this Senator it is not intuitive that the shareholders of airlines should be protected and indemnified from any loss here. I find it very troubling. I think there should be a price the shareholders have to pay.

I hope the Treasury Department and the Office of Management and Budget will try to find if they have any residual authority—they tell me they believe they do—to ask for warrants from each airline in return for the grants they are given.

In the Continental Bank bailout, which happened in Chicago, IL, many years ago, in the 1980s, the FDIC did not come in and make the shareholders of Continental Bank rich. In fact, they wiped out the shareholders of Continental Bank in return for the Government assistance, and FDIC ended up owning 80 percent of the bank. Then, when the bank got back on its feet, the Government did an initial public offering of its shares and sold them back to the public and recouped for the taxpayers what they had given.

I think we could have done better. It is an improvement from where it was earlier. We are structuring this bill such that the issuance of warrants—and the Treasury has the authority now to accept warrants in return for the issuance of the loan guarantees—I hope that authority on the part of the Treasury will deter companies, that in return for the cash grants available under this bill, the Treasury will insist upon getting some equity instruments in the corporation or some payment for the taxpayers, lest this just be a complete and total indemnification of the sophisticated shareholders of the airline industry.

Madam President, I yield the floor.

Mr. CORZINE. Will the Senator yield for a question before he yields the floor?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has no time at this time. His time has expired.

Who yields time?

Mr. ROCKEFELLER. The Senator from West Virginia is happy to yield 5 minutes to the Senator from New Jersey.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Jersey.

Mr. CORZINE. I wonder if I might ask a question of the Senator from Illinois with regard to his premise that would comply has the authority of my time?

Mr. ROCKEFELLER. If the Senator wishes to do it, it is on his time.

Mr. CORZINE. The Senator from Illinois spoke about the need to ensure some accountability by giving the Government a stake in airlines that are provided grants beyond the funding necessary to compensate them for the shutdown period. I agree with him on that.

Has the Senator had conversations with anyone on this question? Has he been led to believe that equity participation—warrants, options, calls—will be extended to grants that go beyond compensation for losses associated with the shutdown?

Mr. CORZINE. Is it the Senator’s belief that the equity stake associated with those grants would operate in the same way that is explicitly outlined in the bill with respect to loan guarantees, with respect to which the Treasury cannot be subtracted from the right to access warrants, options, or calls?

Mr. FITZGERALD. Yes. Just as in return for the loan guarantees the Treasury could ask for warrants, I believe that in return for the cash grants, the Treasury can ask for warrants from the corporation.

Mr. CORZINE. I thank the Senator from Illinois for helping clarify this, and making clear what the administration has said about this aspect of the bill.

Having said that, Madam President, let me emphasize that I rise very much in support of the efforts to reinforce our aviation industry. This industry is in dire straits. And it is an industry that plays a critical role in our economy.

It also plays an important role for our military. Senator Torricelli and I visited McGuire Air Force Base with senior officers on Monday, and they told us that about 40 percent of the transportation that our military folks will need in a full war might be provided by our private aviation industry. The strength of that industry clearly is important for our national security.

Madam President, I live in a State where about 12,000 Continental employees work at Newark Airport. It is the largest employer in Newark. I very much understand the needs and desires of having a healthy and ongoing industry which is under stress. But, in my view, unless we have some discipline in the provision of cash grants, the Treasury could ask for warrants, or options, or calls?

Mr. FITZGERALD. In my view, it would be a mistake to provide direct support without discipline. So I hope the Administration will do what it said it will do, and ensure that, as with the loan guarantees, the grants that we are offering companies—beyond those needed to compensate them for losses directly associated with the stop order—are accompanied by warrants, or options held by the Federal government. This will help ensure discipline and accountability, just as would be required in the private sector.

Mr. ROCKEFELLER. Madam President, I would like to commend the Majority Leader for his hard work in putting together an airline stabilization bill that will save our nation’s airlines and our air transport infrastructure. I will strongly support this bill without amendment.

The terrorists who launched those despicable attacks on September 11 took thousands of American lives, and did billions of dollars of damage. It has taken the country, and in particular those who had a direct role in the September 11th incident, a long time to recover. It already was difficult for the airlines to recover from that.

Mr. CORZINE. The Senator has 4 minutes remaining.

In my view, coming on top of what was already a difficult outlook because of our slowing economy, the nation’s airlines—mainline carriers and regional carriers alike—could be in bankruptcy within a few weeks and possibly out of business within a few months. Already we are seeing the first signs: a round of massive, painful layoffs for nearly 100,000 of our nation’s hard-working airline employees. And huge cutbacks of around 20 percent to most airlines’ schedules. Some people have said, well, this is the market, and it is not the American way to interfere with the market. But I have been pleased, as chairman of the Senate’s aviation subcommittee, to see a broad consensus among my colleagues that the air transport industry is not just a huge business and employer, but it is also a critical element of our nation’s infrastructure. Nowhere is that more the case than in the smaller states and communities like West Virginia. When we think of the airline industry, they usually think of big hub airports like Hartsfield and O’Hare. But airline traffic is just as important—maybe more important—to smaller communities like Beckley and Bridgeport. Safe, convenient and affordable air service represents an important element of our efforts to attract development to our state.

And when I see planes flying with one passenger, and learn that carriers are cutting back on their schedules, and when I see several airlines in bankruptcy within two weeks, I know that the first communities to be hit will be small communities like those in West Virginia that are at the end of the food chain, so to speak. That would be tragic. It would reverse the efforts our communities have made to attract and retain air service, and turn their residents into aviation “have-nots.” It would also set in motion the slow implosion of the U.S. airline industry, which would spread to larger hubs and airports as well. And finally, it would give the terrorist who perpetrated last week’s heinous attacks the ultimate victory, as their actions would lead to a severe curtailment of America’s freedom of movement and mobility.

It is the shared consensus of this body that we must act now, and that has driven our remarkable efforts this past week to put together a stabilization package for our nation’s airlines. It will contain up to $5 billion in immediate credits to reimburse airlines for the revenues they lost when the government shut down U.S. air space last week. It will also contain $10 billion in loan guarantees so that our airlines can continue to obtain financing in the near term.

It will limit airlines’ liability for collateral damage incurred up to the amount of their existing insurance coverage as a result of last week’s terrorist attacks—a key provision because our airlines might otherwise not be able to obtain or afford insurance. It will set up a victim’s compensation fund for the families of the innocent victims of last week’s despicable attacks. It will provide $120 million in additional authority to fund the Essential Air Service program, a key element in preserving air service to smaller communities.

This package is an important first step in stabilizing the U.S. airline industry and ensuring that air service to communities across the nation survives this crisis. But it does not address all the needs that this crisis has created.

One important issue we will need to take up in short order is the plight of the nearly 100,000 airline workers who will lose their jobs as a result of this week’s cutbacks. We have already begun to see airline layoffs in West Virginia. Excellent workers who expected a promising career in a growing industry, until terrorists hijacked four planes and frightened Americans out of the skies. We must take measures to address their needs. We provide special assistance to American workers who have been displaced by foreign trade; we must provide the same level of assistance to American workers who have been displaced by foreign terrorism.

We must also be prepared to look at the needs of related industries, as well as the future needs of the airline industry. Many related industries—aircraft manufacturers, travel agents, and various travel-related businesses—have already begun to feel the effects of this attack. It is up to us to look at the real needs of those industries, and be prepared to take bold measures where they are needed and appropriate.

One thing is certain: the survival of America’s airlines is a key element of any solution. Their needs are real and urgent, and I congratulate the Major-Dow leader of this day within our national security situation. If the planes don’t fly, much of the economy shuts down. I think this is arithmetically uncontestable. I think it is an absolute priority of this Senate to pass it and hopefully do so in a very short amount of time.

I call upon my colleagues to support this aviation legislation—not to say that it is perfect, but to say that some of the legislation which has arisen out of this crisis is perfect. We will have a chance to revisit it. This is only the first of a wave of accountability and dealings with the airline industry, its financial health, safety, and all other manner of conditions that are coming before us. Without this, nothing else follows.

I plead with my colleagues to support this legislation in spite of worker protection and other things which will be absolutely a part of what follows this vote and this legislation.

I reserve the remainder of my time and yield 5 minutes to the senior Senator from the State of New York.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas is recognized.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Madam President, I yield 5 minutes to the Senator from Alabama, who has been waiting for 5 hours.

Mr. SCHUMER. Thank you, Madam President.

First, I thank the chairman of our Aviation Subcommittee, the Senator from West Virginia, and the Senator from Texas, the ranking member, and everybody who worked so hard on this issue.

I particularly thank our leader, Tom Daschle, for his outstanding efforts on this bill and for all the help he provided to New York and the Nation in this recovery from the crash and tragic events of September 11. I also want to thank his talented staff who worked long and hard on into the night in working out provisions that were vexing to me—they are: Andrea LaRue, Laura Petrou, Randy DeValk, Mark Childress, and Mark Patterson—for all of their help during the past 2 weeks.

In addition, there are two technical points I want to clarify. It may be a little unclear to some whether all lawsuits or just lawsuits against the airlines will be situated in the Southern District of New York. The intent here is to put all civil suits arising from the tragic events of September 11 in the Southern District.

Second, the prospective liability package covers the airlines, their agents, and other relevant parties.
Agents includes, as I understand it, airplane lessors and financiers.

This bill is a mixed bag. It has some things that I am grateful for and support. It takes any gains that money from the $20 billion we were able to vote for for New York. There was a real attempt to do that. It does not, I appreciate that.

There was a huge fight on the liability issues. I understand the need for prospective liability exemption. But at some point the families of those who died in the World Trade Center and not on the airplanes are going to be treated differently than victims who had been and those who died who were on the ground or in buildings in the past. That has been rectified. There is a very generous package for those families who lost members in the World Trade Center bombing—those who were in the World Trade Center but not to the airplane.

Finally, my crusade has been to bring good service to the middle-sized cities of upstate New York. While I am not fully satisfied with the provisions, there are provisions in the bill, and let us hope that is the beginning of a new chapter. The airlines are no longer totally independent. Therefore, I am relying on my meetings with them. What the majority leader and others have told us is that as we come back in future bills, we will strengthen those provisions further so that these airlines cannot abandon middle-sized cities such as Rochester, Syracuse, Albany, and Buffalo—rather large cities that depend on airline service. But there is a provision in the bill that recognizes some of that. It is better than the present law, and I appreciate it.

For all those reasons, this bill is a bill I will vote for. I have some misgivings. Amtrak should have been included in this bill. To have a comprehensive protection system, we need a good rail system. The congestion that so many of us see in New York airports and other airports around the country could well be relieved by a functioning Amtrak. Again, I am relying on the understanding of our leadership on both sides of the aisle that when we come back and do other airline bills, we will include Amtrak.

It also does nothing for the workers. I am very worried, and I urge the airlines not to just on the war clause when they deal with their union workers. Yes, indeed, when business contracts, we don’t expect airlines to accept those economic consequences, but I would regard enacting that clause as a breach of faith. I hope that they will be willing to come back to us and deal with it. We have to include employees and what they need in this package as well.

It is a mixed bag: good on liability, good on the middle-sized cities, and OK making progress on taking account for middle size cities; not enough, nothing for Amtrak, nothing for labor, but we will come back and deal with those issues.

If it is a mixed bag, why am I supporting this bill? Because we are in a new era where every one of us has to give a little bit. We heard the President speak. We were unified yesterday. We must keep that unity. It is important that each one of us no longer say: It is my way or no way.

I did not get anything I wanted in this bill. I did get some things. I am a little worried about the numbers as well.

If we don’t vote for this bill and we bicker, airlines will not fly on Monday. It will set a tone in this body that we don’t need right now.

Relying on the good work of our majority leader and our minority leader and knowing we will get back to the other issues we care about, I will vote for the bill and I urge my colleagues to do the same.

Mrs. BOXER. Madam President, I am pleased that the Senate has been able to act so quickly on this issue.

As you know, all four planes hijacked last week were headed for my State of California. Consequently, many Californians who were simply trying to make their way home lost their lives in these attacks. My heart goes out not only to the Californians who fell victim to terrorism, but to all the victims of last week’s attacks and their loved ones.

Our Nation’s aviation system was transformed into a terrorist weapon. As a result of the terrorist attack, the airlines are confronting an alarming financial situation. Last week’s tragedy will be compounded if the aviation industry is destroyed as well.

As an industry, airlines are losing $300 million per day. Lines of credit may not be available. Insurance premiums may rise $100 million per year or may be unavailable. Without insurance, the airlines cannot fly.

Therefore, I support this bill to provide financial assistance to the airlines, I also support a victim’s compensation fund to help ensure that victims’ families receive compensation in a timely fashion.

I am particularly pleased with the language in this bill that commits $3 billion of the $40 billion in the emergency funding that we passed last week for airline security. I hope this funding is used to improve screening in our airports. It is extremely important that security be the responsibility of the Government, including creation of a professional security force for passenger screening. I also believe the funding should be used to increase the number of air marshals by placing an air marshal on every commercial domestic flight.

This is only the first step in aviation security. In the next week or two, I will be working to see that Congress passes comprehensive security legislation, including federalizing screening and guaranteeing that air marshals are on every flight.

Finally, I am disappointed that this bill, while bailing out the airlines, does not provide assistance to laid-off workers. This week almost 100,000 jobs were lost industry-wide. That is 100,000 families who are losing their incomes.

These numbers do not even include the manufacturing sector of the airline industry. Boeing also announced that it could lay off as many as 30,000 employees in the next few months.

We must not forget the workers who are affected. They may need help with job training and acquiring new skills. They may need help with keeping their health insurance. Again, I will be working to see that help comes to these families soon.

This bill is important, but it is only the beginning of what we need to do after last week’s tragic events.

Mr. NELSON of Nebraska. Madam President, as we evident, as we evident, is this much needed legislation to provide financial assistance to our airline industry, I would like to voice my concern that air service to our small communities not be lost in this effort. I have consistently supported adequate funding for the Essential Air Service Program, and ensuring the viability of our small airports is a priority for me. Because I realize the economic impact a loss of air service would have on our small, rural communities, as I know is the case in many States. As we continually focus on how to regain confidence in our economy, I believe this is one area where Government assistance can truly be beneficial. Because it is imperative to the economic wellbeing of these small communities that air service be continued, increasing the level of essential air service funding is critical to ensuring the air carriers serving small communities can continue to fly.

I understand that the bill contains language authorizing the Secretary of Transportation to require air carriers currently receiving direct financial assistance to provide air service to any point served by that carrier prior to September 11. In addition, the Secretary may require these carriers to enter into agreements, which will, to the maximum extent practicable, ensure that all U.S. carriers that had scheduled air service before September 11 continue to receive adequate air service.
I do have concern that in light of recent events some of these carriers will cut service to communities that rely on Government-subsidized air service. Therefore, I urge the Secretary of Transportation, in carrying out his authority under this bill with respect to these carriers, to consider the devastating impact cutting air service to small communities, especially rural communities. It is my understanding that the provisions of this bill provide sufficient protection of air service to small communities.

Mr. McCAIN. Madam President, the bill that we are voting on today not only provides financial assistance to airlines, it addresses the issue of legal liability for the tragic events of last week by creating a federally-funded victims' compensation fund and by limiting airlines' potential legal liability to ensure their continued operation.

The effect on the airlines of the September 11 terrorist attack put Congress in the unenviable position of having to take immediate action to prevent the collapse of the aviation industry as a result of the federally ordered grounding of all aircraft and the anticipated reduction of air travel.

One of the most difficult issues we had to grapple with was the enormous potential liability that airlines faced if courts determine that they were negligent and in some way responsible for the damage wrought by the terrorist attacks last week.

Aviation financiers informed Congress that this potential liability was a barrier to the airlines' obtaining credit in the private market, which we anticipate they will soon have to seek despite the credit assistance we are providing to them today.

The vast uncertainty of our litigation system posed significant challenges to crafting reasonable limitations on liability while providing compensation for the victims of the terrorist attacks and their families.

Disturbingly, while courts could order the liquidation of our biggest airlines if they are deemed liable for the catastrophic damage of September 11, victims could also receive no compensation from the courts if they determine that corporate entities, including airlines, were not responsible for the devastating damage arising from the terrorist attacks.

We faced two unsatisfactory outcomes: 1. that the airlines, whose liability insurance coverage is insufficient to cover all damage, would be dissolved if the direct financial assistance were not provided to them and/or; 2. some or all of the victims who were injured or killed in this tragedy would receive no compensation.

The provisions in this bill are by no means perfect, but they are intended to prevent these two unacceptable results.

To ensure that the victims and families of victims who were physically injured or killed on September 11th are compensated even if courts determine that they were negligent and/or that potential corporate defendants are not liable for the harm; if insurance monies are exhausted; or are consumed by massive punitive damage awards or attorneys' fees, the bill also creates a victims' compensation fund. These victims and their families may, but are not required to, seek compensation from the Federal fund instead of through the litigation system.

At the same time, to provide for the continued operation of our airlines, the bill limits airlines' civil liability to the amount for which they were insured at the time of these unforeseen events.

No amount of money can begin to compensate the victims for their suffering. Nothing will make them and their families "whole." It is not the intent of the federal fund to do this. Nor is it the fund of the intent to duplicate the arbitrary, wildly divergent awards that sometimes come from our deeply flawed tort system—awards from which up to one third or more of the victims' award is often taken by attorneys.

The intent of the fund is to ensure that the victims of this unprecedented, unforeseeable, and horrific event, and their families do not suffer financial hardship in addition to the terrible hardships they already have been forced to endure.

In addition to removing the specter of devastating potential liability from the airlines, and guaranteeing that victims and their families will receive compensation regardless of the outcomes of the tangle of lawsuits that will ensue, the bill attempts to provide some sense to the litigation by consolidating all civil litigation arising from the terrorist attacks of September 11 in one court.

It is regrettable, but perhaps inevitable, that the unity that this terrorist attack has wrought will devolve in the courts to massive legal wrangling and assignment of blame among our corporate citizens. It is my hope that the liability provisions we are adopting today will serve, to some extent, to reduce this, and produce as fair a result as possible in light of the gross injustice of these events.

Mr. GRASSLEY. Madam President, I am pleased that the Senate is moving with great speed to insure the short-term stability of our nation's airlines. The tragic events of September 11 have fundamentally altered our legislative priorities and the absolute and immediate necessity. This Senate is wisely moving with great dispatch.

This act is difficult for all of us. It has not been easy to negotiate by any means. But it is necessary to do together for the good of this great nation to do the right thing. That is, to keep the airlines in the air.

The airline industry is a marginal industry, just like farming. And just like farming, it depends upon a constant and consistent flow of cash. That critical cash flow dried up on September 11. This legislation provides needed cash assistance and loan guarantees to make up for the current terrorist induced shortfall.

The bill also addresses critical liability issues. As a member of the Judiciary Committee, I will monitor these provisions continually and closely as to their propriety and proper functioning. I will not hesitate to step in as I see necessary to deal with the situation call for further action.

I welcome the language concerning Essential Air Service, EAS. This is a proven program with an administrative bureaucracy already in place. State and local communities understand the EAS program and its important role in maintaining air service to small, underserved communities. This program has the potential to help several communities in Iowa which now face the loss of air service. It will help to prevent these small communities from bearing the brunt of air service reductions. I strongly urge appropriations to provide the funding necessary to insure the success of the program.

I also believe that this bill is not necessary. But it is. The cowardly acts committed by terrorists on September 11 have made it so.

The terrorists will not win. The American airlines will continue to fly, and Americans will continue to fly on them. Our economy and culture will grow and thrive. Of this, I am confident.

Mr. HATCH. Madam President, I rise today to speak about S. 1450, the Air Transportation Safety and System Stabilization Act.

Let me first say that I support the intention of this bill. I want to ensure that the victims of this terrible event receive just compensation while at the same time we provide much needed stabilization to the airline industry. That balance is a very difficult thing to achieve. I have very strong reservations about whether we accomplished that task in a fair or feasible manner here today. It is with mixed emotions that I support this bill. I hope that there is an opportunity to address these concerns down the road and to improve on what we have done here.

This bill does do some good. We provide a generous administrative remedy for all victims who were physically injured or killed as a result of this attack. This will help to ensure that injured people receive money and receive it faster than they otherwise would if left to pursue claims through litigation. It also provides that the Federal Government can recoup, to the extent possible, the money due from private parties, including the terrorists whose assets we may be able to recover in the future.
We also provide the airlines with some much needed cash to cover the losses they incurred as a result of the Federal Aviation Administration’s order to ground all air traffic for 48 hours, a week. However, we have not included a provision that I wanted to guarantee that once the airlines receive this cash infusion and government loan guarantees, they would not discharge their federally guaranteed debt in bankruptcy.

The limitation on liability included in this bill has some productive aspects. We limit the liability of the airlines to the extent of their insurance coverage in order to allow them to keep operating. In my home state of Utah, Delta Airlines employs over 4,700 people. I don’t want to see a company that employs so many people in my State go out of business. Air service is essential to our State, and it is also in the public interest to protect the liability of other defendants in potential litigation. If we do not, then we very likely will place other defendants in a worse position than if we do nothing at all. For instance, under the legal principle of joint and several liability, even if a nonairline defendant is only 10 percent liable and the airline is determined to be 90 percent liable, the nonairline defendant may be required to pay more than its share of liability because the airline’s policy limits have already been exhausted. In such a judgment, this could be an unfair outcome and is a serious concern. So we really accomplish our goal of keeping air transportation operating if we sacrifice the other entities that contribute to a well-functioning airline industry? I am talking about the airline contractors and subcontractors as well as the companies that built the planes, the parts authorities, and even those that built the World Trade Center itself.

For those who seek to pursue the litigation route, I am pleased that we consolidated the causes of action in one Federal court so that there will be some consistency in the judgments awarded. However, because the pool of funds available to potential plaintiffs will be limited, we need to eliminate, or at least limit, the punitive damages that can be awarded. I do not want to deny any legitimate plaintiff just compensation. He or she should receive both economic and reasonable noneconomic damages which would include everything from lost earnings to emotional distress. However, if we do not limit outrageous jury awards of punitive damages, we run the risk of denying some plaintiffs their rightful share in an award. If one plaintiff’s punitive damage award is excessive, it could very well deplete the amount of funds available to pay awards, leaving other plaintiffs out in the cold. Don’t we want to ensure that all legitimate plaintiffs receive compensation?

This was indeed a horrible attack on our country and I have confidence that the President will make sure that the terrorists are brought to justice. With this bill the Government attempts to provide some relief to the victims of this tragedy. Unfortunately, the Government cannot do everything. What pleases me most in the aftermath of this tragedy is the extent to which the communities across the country have reached out to help their neighbors. We have volunteer firemen and police officers who gave their lives trying to save the lives of others. Also, those noble passengers who sacrificed themselves rather than let the terrorist inflict even greater damage on the ground. There are many wonderful charitable organizations such as the Red Cross and the Salvation Army who responded immediately to assist victims of the terrorist attack. Donations have been pouring in from across the country to assist the victims. It warms my heart to see some of the Thousand Points of Light that President Bush’s father often referenced regarding the generous nature of our communities. Because of all of this, I am confident our country will come out of this tragedy stronger.

Mr. CLELAND. Madam President, I rise today to direct my colleagues' attention to the needs the workers who play a vital role in our nation’s aviation system—tens of thousands of men and women who will be faced withBOOKED by those who travel by air. From the ticket agents to the sky caps to the mechanics, these workers support the American airline industry and promote its viability.

These same workers were uniquely impacted by the terrorist attack on September 11, 2001. Their place of work—a place that should be safe—was violated when terrorists turned the four commercial planes into missiles. On their ordinary travel system in this country ground to a halt. The order to ground our aircraft was an unprecedented and correct action by the Department of Transportation. For the next four days there was virtually no air travel in this country, and the airlines suffered huge financial losses.

In the wake of this tragedy and as the airline industry is returning to the skies, the Administration and Congress are working to stabilize this industry. Unfortunately, the aid Congress is providing will not be enough to retain the entire current workforce of the major airlines. I have heard that lay-offs in the airline industry could top 100,000 by next week! That is one hundred thousand people who will be faced with losing their health insurance and their source of income. One hundred thousand people who will be faced with making difficult decisions. These people cannot be forgotten.

While I will be supporting the economic aid package for the airlines without a provision for employee assistance, I will be redoubling my efforts to ensure these dedicated employees, who are casualties of the first war we have faced in the 21st century, are not overlooked. I am cosponsoring a bill introduced by Senator CARNahan to provide benefits to the dislocated employees of our aviation industry. This package of relief would provide funding for unemployment insurance and health insurance, and it will contain provisions to aid in the retraining of these workers. These are basic measures we can and must take to help stabilize these employees.

No one expected September 11 to develop as it did, and we are reeling from this tragedy. Congress is appropriately acting today to support the airlines—an industry critical to our national security and economy. And I fully support and will work to provide assistance to those workers who are suffering as a result of this attack.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Madam President, I will support this relief package, however, I have a number of concerns. There is certainly a legitimate need to assist our nation’s airlines in this time of crisis. I am concerned, however, that we are forgetting about airline employees and their families, including many Wisconsinites. These massive layoffs are a double blow to an already shocked country. We should act quickly to ensure that those who work for our nation’s airlines and their families receive adequate relief, including continued access to health care and unemployment and job training assistance. We must be careful that this airline relief package is targeted at those airlines that are facing economic losses due to the recent terrorist attacks and not instead used to prop up firms that were already in financial trouble before the tragedy.

Mr. LEVIN. Madam President, I am very disappointed language was not included in the Air Transportation Safety and System Stabilization Act addressing employee compensation for the thousands of airline employees who have lost their jobs in the past week. It is imperative that we address this in the immediate future. However, there is a crucial need to act swiftly to stabilize the airline industry. Therefore, I will support the legislation which includes a number of critical provisions to stabilize the airline industry and restore confidence in this industry. I hope that we will address employee compensation and additional airline security measures in the near future.

The airline industry is losing about $300 million to $350 million a day. Losses incurred by the industry for the 2 days that the airlines were grounded totaled $1.25 billion. In the past week alone there have been 100,000 layoffs by the airlines including 10,000 at Northwest Airlines. Northwest Airlines has as a major hub in Detroit and serves as

September 21, 2001

Mr. FEINSTEIN. Madam President, I rise today in support of the financial package before the Senate to help protect a vital industry to our Nation’s economy. I believe that this legislation is one essential component in a series of steps that Congress has taken, and will continue to take, to address the tragic and horrific attacks of September 11, 2001.

So far, Congress has taken considerable action in the wake of the unprecedented events last Tuesday. Congress condemned the violence in a joint resolution, Congress authorized the President to use “all necessary and appropriate force” to retaliate for the acts of war against our Nation, and Congress approved $40 billion to rebuild from the rubble and prevent further acts of terrorism during this time of national peril.

These were the steps Congress has taken so far, but they are not the last of what we will do, or what we need to do to mitigate the damage and destruction.

The next step we must take is to pass this financial relief package. Once this is passed, Congress will need to consider legislative solutions on other matters stemming from the September 11 attacks. For example: What long-term changes do we need to make to our aviation security system? How can we establish stricter guidelines on issuing visas? How do we build up our homeland defense against more deadly terrorist attacks in the future? What can we do to stimulate more consumer spending, more job creation, and more investment in this time of uncertainty?

The events of September 11 demand that Congress and the President work together to remedy the devastation the attacks impose on our safety, our economy, and our livelihood. The legislation before us today is part of the comprehensive action Congress must take to help our Nation reclaim unprecedented growth of which we know our economy is capable.

The terrorist attacks of September 11 have dealt a crippling blow to the airline industry. This package of assistance is essential to keep the airlines up and running because they are an important component to our Nation’s economy. Airlines are the very backbone of our transportation infrastructure enabling people and goods to flow freely and quickly across our Nation.

Airline travel and air cargo ship-ments interconnect our global economy and contribute a significant amount of jobs to the U.S. Economy. Consider the following: Approximately 1.2 million people work for the airlines in this country. Last year about 670 million people flew on commercial airlines and the industry provided over 25 billion ton miles of freight delivery. The U.S. commercial aviation industry contributes over 10 percent of the Nation’s GDP.

Yesterday, David Walker, Comptroller General of the United States, condemned the violence in a joint resolution. According to Mr. Walker, “The continuation of a strong, vibrant, and competitive commercial air transportation system is critical not only for the basic movement of people and goods, but also because of the broader effects this sector exerts throughout the economy.”

The contributions airlines make to our economy are clear, yet the industry estimates that the overall impact of the terrorist attacks will cost $24 billion and companies may be forced to lay off over 140,000 employees. Airline stocks plummeted when the market reacted Monday and they have continued to fall this week.

Secretary Mineta has indicated that the industry has been losing $300 million a day in lost revenue since Tuesday, September 11. Some financial analysts predict the airline industry will lose $6.5 billion this year, triple the $2.2 billion loss that was expected.

The ripple effect of the terrorist attacks is clear. Once people stop flying, airlines cut back on flights. Lighter flight schedules mean airplanes lie idle and companies’ employees lose their jobs. Fewer flights mean airlines do not need as many new planes or air- plane parts. So it comes as no surprise that this week, Boeing announced 30,000 employees would lose their jobs. I have received many letters asking me to support this plan before the Senate, and I believe it is important to point out that the vast majority of these letters are not from airline em- ployees, but rather, from workers whose jobs are indirectly dependent on airlines.

One such letter is from G. Hardy Acree, the director of Sacramento County’s airports. Mr. Acree wrote, “Quality air service is critical to our community. Without it, Sacramento County’s economic development and tourism industry will suffer, and the growth we’ve worked so hard to sustain will be lost. This is an issue whose impact goes well beyond the airline sec- tor.”

The same could be said for all of California’s 58 counties and, in fact, for every one of the 3,142 counties across the Nation.

The economic impact is spreading beyond airlines. Lowell Block of Virgin Atlantic Airways said it must trim its operations by 20 percent and lay off 1,200 employees, the first ever layoffs for the company in its 18 years of exist- ence.

Just as the problems are not confined to one region, they are not confined to one industry. The president of the American Society of Travel Agents, Richard Copland, wrote to tell me of the tremendous losses suffered by the travel agencies across the U.S. According to Mr. Copland, “There are many other attacks that are normally thought of as separate ‘industries’ but that in fundamental reality are an integral part of what airlines do. Travel agencies are among those.”

Travel agencies, hotels, cruises, and many other industries directly depend on the airline industry. And there is almost no business that does not indirectly depend on the airlines. How else do employees meet with clients? How else do goods ship overnight?

As Jonathan Tisch, chairman of the Travel Business Roundtable, wrote, “The link that airlines provide to the travel and tourism industry cannot be underscored enough. Airlines are the conduit for so many industry activities, bringing travelers to hotels, restaurants and shopping in cities and towns around the country.”

I want to acknowledge Mr. Tisch’s point, the collective ripple effect airlines have on the entire economy is immense. I would like to ask my colleagues and constituents to think of this legislation, not as a bailout plan, but as a relief package. It is just compensation for the direct damage inflicted on the airline industry and the U.S. economy as a whole.

One thing I would like to make is that since my husband is on the board of an airline company, the easiest thing for me to do would be not to vote on this legislation. The Senate Ethics Committee, however, has assured me that voting on this bill is not a conflict of interest for me because there will be a wide range of beneficaries from this legislation.

Furthermore, at this time, the economic ramifications are as such that I am compelled to vote on this bill because I strongly believe it is in the national interest to do so.

We have allocated billions to rebuild in New York and Virginia. Let us also allocate billions to rebuild our Nation’s economy.

Mr. DOMENICI. Madam President, this is an important piece of legislation. We need to enact it today. Without immediate financial assistance, many airlines face imminent bankruptcy. That is a direct result of the horrific terrorist attacks that took place on September 11.

This bill provides $5 billion in emergency direct assistance to reimburse the airlines for the direct costs of the terrorist attacks, the cost of all other attack. It also provides $10 billion in loans and loan guarantees to help the airlines while they recover from these attacks. These loans will also restore the confidence of the private capital markets, which are unwilling to lend the airlines.

Because of this legislation, the airlines are going to be around to pay back these loans. Therefore, from a budget point of view, the impact of the loans on the Federal budget will only be about $3 billion. But the airlines get the loan essential to keep them in business.

Also, this afternoon President Bush made the first apportionment of monies we appropriated one week ago today for the Emergency Supplemental Appropriations Act for Recovery to the Terrorists Attacks.

Out of the $40 billion in that Emergency appropriation bill provided to the President, he has this afternoon transferred nearly $5.1 billion to Departments and Agencies to address funding needs related to the attacks of September 11.

This is just the first in what will be many more transfers out of the total funds provided. The Department of Defense will receive $16.5 billion and the Federal Emergency Management Agency will receive $2.0 billion today.

But also within today’s transfers is $141 million for the Department of Transportation, the bulk of which is to the FAA to support immediate increased airport security measures. I am sure, once again this is just the first of what will be much more funding coming out of the $40 billion to increase security measures at our airports and our Nation’s aviation security.

This expansion requires first-rate training for our new law enforcement officers, The Federal Law Enforcement Training Center, FLETC, in Artesia, NM, is uniquely positioned to serve as the primary training center for the new sky marshals and other aviation law enforcement officers. Moreover, it is located only 40 miles from the Roswell Industrial Air Center, which can handle planes as large as 747’s. These facilities can play a vital role in enhancing our Nation’s aviation security.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator’s time has expired. The Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. ROCKEFELLER. Madam President, the Senator from West Virginia recognizes the junior Senator from New York for a period of 5 minutes.

Mrs. CLINTON. Madam President, I thank the Senator from West Virginia. I rise to join the comments of my colleague, Senator SCHUMER.

President Bush recognized the need for immediate action to aid our struggling airline industry and are prepared to do so. We also appreciate greatly the continuing bipartisan cooperation that is helping this body address the needs of our country in the wake of the terrible attacks of September 11.

I am very grateful that the long negotiations in the House and the Senate over the last several days, along with the White House, have resulted in a process to provide relief to families who have either lost a loved one or sustained significant property damage.

We are also grateful that the legislation provides more support for essential air services, particularly in many of our more rural areas, such as Water town, NY, that are totally reliant on air service which still comes in to serve those communities.

The passage of this legislation can only be a beginning. We also must make our airports as secure as possible. I am honored to join in legislation Senator HOLLINGS and Senator ROCKEFELLER and others are putting forward to address the security issues so that Americans have the confidence I know they should have in flying once again, resuming our normal life.

I am honored to join in legislation Senator HOLLINGS and Senator ROCKEFELLER and others are putting forward to address the security issues so that Americans have the confidence I know they should have in flying once again, resuming our normal life.

I am also grateful that the assurances we have received with respect to the airline workers who have been laid off or displaced will be addressed as soon as possible. I am aware that a package was stripped out of this bill. We need to revisit it. It is something that we should address in the next few days. There are now at least 74,000 people affected. We expect in the next few days that number to grow to 100,000. I suggest we look at some kind of an aid package modeled after trade adjustment assistance to extend unemployment insurance, job training, support services to airline workers and other workers who have been directly affected by the attacks on our country.

We also will have to look at the way our entire transportation system operates. I am very proud of the way Amtrak stepped in to fill the need for the movement of passengers and goods. Their ridership is up nationwide. They have honored airline tickets of stranded individuals and brought in emergency relief and medical supplies. Amtrak has also made security upgrades on trains and in stations. But we need to do much more to address the critical needs in the Northeast corridor as well as the rest of the country.

I look forward to working with my colleagues. I see my good friend Senator HUTCHISON from Texas who led the fight on the high speed rail bonding act. That is just one of the many issues we need to consider as we look at transportation, again, as part of national defense.

I well recall how President Eisenhower obtained the funding for the Interstate Highway System because it was part of national defense. Our highways, our airways, and our railways are all part of our national defense infrastructure.

Finally, I say once again how grateful we in New York are for the tremendous and continuing outpouring of support from the American people. I particularly thank the President for his strong support. I was overcome by his absolute resolve commitment to rebuilding New York in his speech last night as well as the other very strong words of reassurance and resoluteness he delivered with respect to the challenges we face. I appreciate greatly his leadership and his support throughout this crisis.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Madam President, I yield 5 minutes from my time to the Senator from Virginia.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Virginia.

Mr. ALLEN. Madam President, I thank Senator HUTCHISON, who has been an outstanding leader on the issue of aviation safety and better airline quality for many years.

This is not something that Senator HUTCHISON first started worrying about after this terrible disaster of September 11. She has been working on this issue way ahead of time. If more people had listened to Senator HUTCHISON years ago, some of the concerns we are now finally addressing would have been addressed.

I join with many of my colleagues in thanking Senator HUTCHISON and all those who worked together on this package to provide some stabilization for air transportation.

Yesterday we had hours and hours of hearings with Secretary Mineta, who all of us recognize did a great job in coordination with the FAA, in grounding all flights. They saved lives. They saved lives here in America with that quick decision. However, without that decision in response to the terrorist attack, our airlines would be in much better financial shape today. We are now in a different paradigm, a different world.

I have heard comments from my colleagues: Federal government involved in this versus other businesses? The main reason is, the Federal Government controls the air, and the FAA grounded all the airplanes. It actually said: You must stop airplanes. It actually said: You must stop planes. It actually said: You must stop planes. However, I had hoped that this bill would include assistance for workers who had lost their jobs as a result of the airlines being grounded.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Madam President, my time is taken. I apologize, but my time is taken.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. ALLEN. Senator ROCKEFELLER, may I have 1 minute of your time?

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Our time has been divided.

Mr. ROCKEFELLER. I yield 30 seconds.

Mr. ALLEN. I thank the Senator from West Virginia. I share the desire to make sure employees who are out of work are also taken care of with both health and unemployment benefits. I am working with Senator CARNahan of Missouri to make sure that this is made part of the overall package. I will cosponsor her bill to provide unemployment assistance, extend healthcare benefits and to provide for worker retraining. We need to act today on aid for the airlines so that future job losses are avoided, and in the future let’s make sure we take care of those hardworking employees who are have already lost their jobs through no fault of their own. I thank my friend from West Virginia.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

The Senator from Massachusetts is recognized.

Mr. KENNEDY. Madam President, the airline industry’s damages from the September 11 terrorist attacks are immense and unprecedented. Clearly, we have a stake in the airlines, but we must not forget the airline workers and other workers harmed by this tragedy.

Failing to include relief to workers in this bill is a serious omission. It is essential for Congress to act as soon as possible to provide support for airline workers.

The toll across the economy from this tragedy will be staggering, and the economic hardships to millions of American working families will be severe. Large numbers of workers have already been laid off, and the working poor will soon become the unemployed poor.

We have already seen tens of thousands of layoffs. Who are these workers? They are the flight attendants who are single parents raising their kids on their own; they are the reservation agents trying to make a living; they are the security clerks, cashiers, and baggage handlers.

I also understand that the airlines have tried to keep workers from under the contracts they have with employees. I think this is wrong.

We are assisting the airlines, and they should not leave their workers high and dry. We need to provide critical long-term unemployment insurance benefits, training assistance, and health care coverage for workers affected by these terrorist attacks. Layoffs in the airline industry alone are expected to total more than 100,000 workers.

Even beyond the issue of fairness, helping workers during a slowing economy is good economic policy. The unemployment insurance system will be critical to our Nation’s recovery and economic health. Unemployment benefits help workers bridge the gap between jobs. It also puts the money in the hands of the unemployed. Unemployed workers spend benefits rather than saving them, thereby stimulating the economy.

I call on my colleagues and the President to address this matter as soon as possible. No one has been more affected by this than our State of Washington, and Senator MURRAY has spoken frequently about this, as well as Senator CANTWELL.

I yield a minute to the Senator from Washington and the remaining time to the floor manager.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Washington.

Mrs. MURRAY. Madam President, I thank my colleague from Massachusetts. I thank all of our colleagues who have worked together in a very bipartisan manner over the last week to address the critical issues coming at us. I know we need to help the airline industry, and that is why this bill is important.

I remind my colleagues that thousands of workers were left out of this bill. I have 30,000 employees in my home State of Washington at Boeing who have been left out of this bill. They are just as patriotic and they have worked just as hard. They deserve our attention just as much. We should not forget them when we are taking care of the owners of these airline companies.

It is the workers who go to work every day who make this country great and strong. We need to make sure we have a commitment to them in the coming week to put together an aviation package that includes employee assistance for those who have made this country what it is.

I thank my colleagues from Massachusetts and Senator Cantwell from my State, and other Members, such as Senator Carper, I pledge my support to make sure this Senate doesn’t forget the workers as we put together the aviation package that has been promised. I thank my colleague from Massachusetts, and I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Connecticut.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. I yield 3 minutes to the Senator from Pennsylvania.

Mr. SPECTER. I thank my colleague from Texas. I am encouraged to see the Senate and the House moving so promptly on this legislation to keep the airlines functioning. The terrorist attack is really an attack against the United States as a whole, and when we have losses directly attributable to that attack, it seems fair to me that the employees should sustain those damages. What we are doing today with the cash grant and especially the loan guarantee will keep the airlines operating, which is very important for the lifeblood of our country and very important for an economic recovery.

US Airways, illustratively, needs the loan guarantees in order to get financing to keep operating. US Airways is only one of many carriers across the country, but it illustrates the issue especially pertinent to my State of Pennsylvania, which has some 17,000 US Airways employees dependent upon their jobs. This is a very, very important matter for Pennsylvania, and a very important matter for America.

This legislation also establishes a very appropriate procedure for compensating the victims on a program administered by the Attorney General’s office without going through the long litigation process. However, it is only a first step.

There is more to be done on airport security, on security within the airport, on compensation for the workers with some 100,000 already having lost their jobs, and with the ripple effect on hotels, on the airport complex, on restaurants, on tourism and on the airports which sustain themselves by having the shops now frequented by customers because only ticketed passengers can get within the area.

How much time remains on my 3 minutes?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has 45 seconds.

Mr. SPECTER. I yield back the time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Pennsylvania.

Mr. ROCKEFELLER. I yield 2 minutes to the Senator from Vermont.

Mr. LEAHY. Madam President, I thank the Senator from West Virginia.

The heart of every American aches for those who have died or been injured because of the tragic terrorist attacks in New York, Virginia, and Pennsylvania on September 11th. Our first priority should be ensuring that their needs are met and that they receive adequate compensation.

At the same time, the airline industry of this country is in grave danger of collapse. The industry has announced more than 100,000 layoffs. Insurance companies have reportedly contacted the airlines about lowering the terrorist-related protections in their policies. And they have warned that they are running out of cash. If Congress does not pass this legislation today, it is likely that all of our Nation’s air carriers would cease service next Wednesday.

The bipartisan, bicameral legislation we are considering today provides $5 billion in direct grants to cover the cost to the airlines from the closing of all the nation’s airports after last week’s attacks. The bill also provides $10 billion in loan guarantees to help the airlines through their cash crunch, funds to be distributed within 14 days by a four-member Air Transportation Stabilization Board. Further, it extends the existing War Act, which protects airlines from liability during wartime for overseas flights, to cover domestic flights and include terrorist acts. Finally, it provides that the liability of the airlines involved in the terrorist who die on airline crashes on September 11, 2001, will be limited to the amount of the insurance coverage they have for such instances, and all legal cases stemming from these incidents will be consolidated in the District of Columbia.

Most importantly, working with Majority Leader Daschle, Republican Leader Lott, Speaker Hastert, Congressmen Gephardt, and Senators Specter, Harkenrider, and Schumer and Clinton, we have established a Victims Compensation Program to provide expedited payments to victims and their families. To be eligible for compensation, applicants will need to provide information about the harm they suffered or death linked to the terrorist attack, but they will not be required to prove negligence or liability. It is our responsibility to provide fair compensation to those most affected by this disaster. We have devised a plan that means prompt filing, quick resolution, and prompt payments to victims and families.

The Department of Justice will supervise the Victims’ Compensation Fund that will be administered by a Special Master. The Special Master will make a final determination of an applicants eligibility and level of compensation within 120 days of receiving a claim. All payments must be paid within 20 days after the determination. This is a simple and fair approach to the problem.

These payments will be tax free. Filing a claim under the program will preclude other civil remedies. This program is targeted to help the neediest victims and their families.

When making a determination, the Special Master will take into account any life insurance, death benefit, or other government payment received by the victims and their families.

The victims in this tragedy and the airline industry are in need of relief. The terrorists will win if victims continue to suffer and the airlines go under. Establishing the Victim Compensation Fund and giving the airlines the capital they need to continue operating are crucial first steps in our national healing process. I thank the leadership of both parties in both Houses of Congress for their cooperation in moving this essential legislation forward.

Madam President, again, the heart of every American aches for those who have died or have been injured because of the terrorist attacks in New York, Virginia, and Pennsylvania on September 11—and due to the ripple effect out to New Jersey and Connecticut and Maryland and the District of Columbia. It has been terrible. I think we have to ensure that the needs of those who suffered most directly are met, that they receive adequate compensation.

We also know that the airline industry of this country is in danger of collapse. They have announced, I believe, around 100,000 layoffs. Insurance companies reportedly contacted airlines saying they will lower terrorist-related protections in their policies. They said they would not be required to be able to pay their bills. If we don’t do something, we can literally see the terrorists shutting down the airlines next week. We have worked with Senators Daschle and Lott, Speaker Hastert of the House, and Senators Hatch, Kohl, DeWine, Schumer, and Clinton, and we put together a victims’ compensation program to provide for victims and their families. It is going to be simple. It is a speeded-up process. In fact, the payments will be tax free, with prompt filing, quick review, and prompt payments to victims of families. We literally had children who kissed their parents good-bye in the morning and came home at night and found that they were orphans, and the mortgage is due in 2 weeks. We have to do something to help them. We can.

The victims in this tragedy are in need of relief. The airline industry is in need of relief.

The terrorists will have even a greater victory if we do not help. We can help.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. ROCKEFELLER. Madam President, I yield 10 minutes to the senior Senator from West Virginia.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The senior Senator from West Virginia has 15 minutes of his own time under the agreement.

Mr. ROCKEFELLER. Madam President, I revise my statement simply to say the senior Senator from West Virginia has 15 minutes under the unanimous consent agreement.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The senior Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. BYRD. Madam President, the distinguished majority whip wishes me to yield time to him. How much time does he need?

Mr. REID. Three minutes.

Mr. BYRD. I yield 3 minutes of my time to the Senator.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada.

Mr. REID. Madam President, I received a letter, as did all Senators, today addressed to the Honorable Tom Daschle, majority leader, and the Honorable Trent Lott, minority leader, of the U.S. Senate. The letter reads as follows:

DEAR SENATORS: The Association of Trial Lawyers of America (ATLA) commends the United States Congress and President Bush for their leadership and decision to put families victimized by our national tragedy first and to ease their pain by expediting appropriate relief to them through the "September 11th Compensation Act of 2001." ATLA agrees with you that extraordinary situations demand extraordinary response.

At least 10,000 families are hurting more than any of us can imagine. And, because the first priority of every American should be prompt and full justice for the thousands of families who know first-hand the unspeakable horror visited upon the world on September 11, 2001, members of ATLA will provide free legal services to any family who request it or pursue justice through the fund established by this unprecedented, humanitarian legislation.

ATLA believes that 100% of the compensation from the fund should go directly to these families.

The officers and Executive Committee of ATLA have volunteered to be the first attorneys to provide legal services free of charge under this program.

God Bless America.
Sincerely,
Leo V. Boyle, President, on behalf of the 60,000 men and woman of ATLA.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. BYRD. Madam President, the bill currently before the Senate is precedent-setting in its magnitude, billion in immediate direct cash assistance to the airline industry. It also provides up to an additional $10 billion in loan guarantees for the airlines. This bill is not simply an authorization bill. It is also an appropriations bill which provides funding over and above the $40 billion Emergency Supplemental Appropriations Bill that the Senate passed one week ago today.

The airline industry is essential to this Nation’s economy. It produces about $125 billion annually and creates work for thousands of manufacturers and other companies. The Federal Government cannot allow this industry to fold without seriously disrupting the American economy.

However, we have now reached an important turning point in the relationship between the Federal Government and the airlines, and this should not go unnoticed. As of this day, the airlines are now required to live off the generosity of the general treasury. We are about to grant them several billion dollars of assistance, not from the Aviation Trust Fund, which collects user taxes from airline passengers, but from the general treasury. We are talking about money from people’s income taxes, including the income taxes of millions of Americans who did not board a plane this year, and who will not board a plane next year.

Twenty-three years ago, the Senate passed the conference report on the airline deregulation bill on October 14, 1978 by a vote of 82-2. I was the Majority Leader at the time. I was among the 82 Senators who voted for that bill. And as I have mentioned on the Senate floor many times, I have regretted that vote ever since.

My colleague at that time was Jennings Randolph. Jennings Randolph voted against deregulation. I voted for deregulation. He voted the right way at that time, and I voted the wrong way. I regret that vote because even since deregulation, numerous airlines have pulled out of West Virginia and other rural states altogether. Many of them pulled out immediately following the vote. My constituents and millions of other Americans who live in smaller communities with infrequent air service at astronomical prices. Indeed, today, it is often cheaper to fly from Washington D.C. to London, England, than it is to fly from Washington D.C. to Charleston, WV.

Mr. Byrd. Madam President, I yield to the Senator from Charleston.

Mr. BYRD. Madam President, the Secretary of Transportation Appropriations Subcommittee hearing with Secretary Mineta, I expressed my view that we should not be profiting the airlines with billions of dollars from the income taxes of hard working Americans without requiring the air carriers to provide a reasonable level of service to those Americans. Now that this industry must live off the generosity of the U.S. taxpayer, at least for a while, I think we have a responsibility to ensure that the taxpayers are well served. But today, we find that the airlines are cutting back service and eliminating cities from their national network at the same time they have their hands out on Capitol Hill.

I recognize that the airlines find themselves in such precarious financial condition because of a recent tragedy of massive proportion. However, the airlines were not doing so well before that time. I am determined to make sure that the airlines do not use this incident as a rationale for abandoning or dramatically reducing service to communities that depend on that service to connect with the national economy.

Toward that end, I want to call the attention of the Senate to a critically important section of the bill. Under this bill, the Secretary of Transportation is granted broad new statutory authority to require an airline that receives direct financial assistance under this act to continue to provide service to any city that it was serving prior to the tragedy of September 11.

The bill also grants the Secretary the authority to require any airline taking assistance under this act to enter into agreements to ensure that communities that had scheduled air service before September 11 continue to receive adequate air service.

These provisions, if applied appropriately, will ensure that the small cities and the rural airports of America are not cut off from our national aviation system as the industry endures a downturn. The Committee on Appropriations, which I chair, will monitor carefully how Secretary Mineta implements these critically important provisions. He has been granted important new powers in this time of crisis, and I expect him to use these powers. The committee will also monitor carefully the actions of the airlines when it comes to discontinuing routes and reducing service. We must see to it that the small communities of our country are not relegated to the status of an economic backwater as the jets keep flying from New York to Los Angeles and London and to other far away ports.

I understand there are discussions that the airline industry may need the airlines in West Virginia and across the Nation are even worse.

Yesterday, as part of a Transportation Appropriations Subcommittee hearing with Secretary Mineta, I expressed my view that we should not be profiting the airlines with billions of dollars from the income taxes of hard working Americans without requiring the air carriers to provide a reasonable level of service to those Americans. Now that this industry must live off the generosity of the U.S. taxpayer, at least for a while, I think we have a responsibility to ensure that the taxpayers are well served. But today, we find that the airlines are cutting back service and eliminating cities from their national network at the same time they have their hands out on Capitol Hill.
should be on notice that if the provisions in this bill are not applied appropriately, and we see a pattern wherein the small communities of our Nation are not being treated fairly, we will be back with stronger legislative measures to address this problem. This issue will not go away with the passage of this bill.

As we stand poised to hand the airlines billions of dollars in general revenue tax dollars, we must ensure that taxpayers in all communities, small and large, have access to reasonable and affordable air service. During this time of national crises—during a time of war—we should require that there will be air service to all parts of America to ensure that there is mobility for all Americans.

I want to thank my colleague, Senator ROGERS, for the leadership he has demonstrated in this area of legislation. He has done a great piece of work. He is highly dedicated to the service of his constituents, who are my constituents, but in thinking of our consternation, we also think of Americans across this country who live in rural areas and who have been deprived of fairness in service and in connection with costs in flying.

I yield the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Madam President, I yield 2 minutes to the Senator from Alabama, Mr. Sessions.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alabama.

Mr. SESSIONS. Madam President, I appreciate the work of our leadership in this Senate working together to produce legislation that each day, since this tragedy occurred, we have been virtually unanimous on. I want to keep that unanimity going. I express my appreciation to Senators DASCHLE, Lott, and the others who have worked on this legislation. I know there is a belief that there is a critical time period, and apparently there is, an insurance problem of monumental proportions that needs to be dealt with promptly.

However, I do believe, as Senator FITZGERALD from Illinois has said, we are rushing this matter, that this bill is not a perfect bill. It is far from a perfect bill. When one is approximately correct, but we do not know all of that yet. I am not happy with how fast this is moving and how much money we are dealing with. I want to support our leadership. I know they havehammered it out. I know they have made some promises. I know they have made some agreements. I know Senator NICKLES has worked hard to bring as much accountability as he could in the time he had to make this a reality. So I salute them for it, but I am not convinced we are done with the right way.

I was pleased to see trial lawyers say they would do work for free, but I am not sure that, in the way we have crafted the bill, a client still does not need a lawyer that is loyal to them and that is paid by them. I would like to see us deal fairly with people who feel simply by who they are. If they are the widow of a person who has lost his life, they can make a claim and certify that and get their payment without any fees needing to be paid. Maybe we could do that this kind of task. We have not had time to think that through. I know this bill is probably moving on to passage tonight. I am troubled by it. We are going to need to do some work on it in the future, and I expect we will be coming back and revisiting this. I think that should be made clear. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

The Senator from Texas.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. I am going to finish our 30 minutes of time by saying this is not a perfect bill. There are areas we have not addressed but that we will address in the future. Since September 11, 2001, a lot of things have been thrown at us, and we are going to handle every one of them as they come. We will keep the airlines flying. We will try to minimize the damage to the economy of layoffs from the airline industry and all the other people who are laid off from their jobs. We will take it one step at a time.

Senator ROCKEFELLER and I have worked hand-in-hand on this issue and on the security issue that we will have on the floor next week or the week after, because security is what will make the flying public feel safe in our skies. So we are going to address this issue and keep the airlines financially secure in the interim period while we are getting that security bill passed so America will not be in any way hampered in its ability to have commerce and business as usual in our country. That is what we are all trying to accomplish.

I yield back the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mrs. LINCOLN). The Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. NICKLES. I yield to the Senator from West Virginia.

Mr. ROCKEFELLER. I commend the majority leader for his hard work in putting together an airline stabilization bill that will save our nation’s airlines and our air transport infrastructure. I will strongly support this bill without amendment.

The terrorists who launched those despicable acts on September 11 took thousands of American lives, and did billions of dollars of damage. It has also become clear in the past 10 days that they dealt a body blow to the U.S. airline industry, on which virtually all of our citizens depend to one degree or another.

Demand for air travel has virtually collapsed in the past week. Last weekend I flew back to West Virginia, and on the return flight Sunday night—usually a crowded flight from Charleston to Dulles—I was the only passenger on the plane. Many of you likely have mentioned that they’ve had similar experiences in the past ten days. Flights are departing West Virginia airports with a load factor of 25 per cent—only one in four seats filled. Unfortunately, this is not the end of last week’s closure of the New York Stock Exchange, a temporary phenomenon. Based on past air disasters or international conflicts—none of which was of the same massive scale as last Tuesday’s attacks—airlines are predicting that passenger traffic will be down by almost half for the remainder of this year, and will take until next summer to return to normal levels. And those are optimistic estimates.

The United Airlines flight that my family was booked on for a trip to New York last week was cancelled. It is doubtful that many flights will fly to New York during the coming months. Their insurance rates have shot up, with some airlines telling us of a 600 percent increase in their insurance rates. Coming on top of what was already a difficult outlook because of our slowing economy, the nation’s airlines—main line carriers and regional carriers alike—could be in bankruptcy within a few weeks and possibly out of business within a few months. Already we are seeing the first signs: a round of massive, painful layoffs for nearly 100,000 of our nation’s hardworking airline employees. And huge cutbacks of around 20 percent to most airlines’ schedules.

Some people have said, well, this is the market, and it’s not the American way to interfere with the market. But I’m pleased to say the Senate’s Aviation Subcommittee, to see a broad consensus among my colleagues that the air transport industry is not just a huge business and employer, but it’s also a critical element of our nation’s infrastructure. Nowhere is that more the case than in the smaller states and communities like West Virginia. When people think of the airline industry, they usually think of big hub airports like O’Hare and LAX. But airline traffic is just as important—maybe more important—to smaller communities like Beckley and Bridgeport. Safe, convenient and affordable air service represents an important element of our efforts to attract development to our state. It’s an important connection that allows our citizens and our businesses to overcome our state’s historic isolation created by our mountainous terrain.

And when I see planes flying with one passenger, and learn that carriers are cutting back on their schedules, and hear that several carriers could be in bankruptcy within two weeks, I know that the first communities to be hit will be small communities like those in West Virginia that are at the end of the food chain, so to speak. The industry, which would spread to larger hubs and airports as well. And finally, it would give the terrorists who perpetrated last week’s heinous attacks the ultimate victory, as their actions would lead to a severe curtailment of America’s freedom of movement and mobility.

It is the shared consensus of this body that cannot be permitted to happen, and that has driven our remarkable efforts this past week to put together a stabilization package for our nation’s airlines. It will contain up to $5 billion in immediate credits to reimburse airlines for the revenues they lost when the government shut down U.S. air space last week. It will also contain $10 billion in loan guarantees so that our airlines can continue to obtain financing in the coming months.

It will limit airlines’ liability for collateral damage incurred as a result of last week’s terrorist attacks up to the amount allowable under their insurance policies—a key provision because our airlines might otherwise not be able to obtain or afford insurance.

It will set up a victim’s compensation fund for the families of the innocent victims of last week’s despicable attacks.

It will provide $120 million in additional authorization authority for the Essential Air Service program, a key element in preserving air service to smaller, economically vital airports.

This package is an important first step in stabilizing the U.S. airline industry and ensuring that air service to communities across the nation survives this crisis. But it does not address all the needs that this crisis has created.

One important issue we will need to take up in short order is the plight of the nearly 100,000 airline workers who will lose their jobs as a result of this week’s cutbacks. We have already begun to see airline layoffs in West Virginia. Excellent workers who expected a promising career in a growing industry, until terrorists hijacked four planes and frightened Americans out of the skies. We must take immediate action to address their needs. We provide special assistance to American workers who have been displaced by foreign trade: we must provide the same level of assistance to American workers who have been displaced by foreign terrorism.

We must also be prepared to look at the needs of related industries, as well as the future needs of the airline industry. Many related industries—aircraft manufacturers, travel agents, and various travel-related businesses—have already begun to feel the impact of this attack. We will have to look carefully at the real needs of those industries, and be prepared to take bold measures where they are needed and appropriate.

One thing is certain: the survival of America’s airlines is a key element of any solution. Their needs are real and urgent, and I congratulate the majority leader on his success in putting together a stabilization package that will address them.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma is recognized.

Mr. NICKLES. I thank the Chair.

(The remarks of Mr. Nickles pertaining to the submission of S. Con. Res. 73 are located in today’s Record under “Submission of Concurrent and Senate Resolutions.”)

Mr. NICKLES. Madam President, I have worked with some of our colleagues on the underlying bill that deals with assisting the airline industry to try to make a significant and positive impact, and I compliment both Democrats and Republicans, because we have worked together, and I think we are passing a bill tonight that will provide needed assistance to the airline industry.

This bill has several provisions some of our colleagues are somewhat familiar with, some maybe not, but it has a provision that provides for $5 billion in cash assistance. Some people said that is too much. Actually, last Friday we were looking at a bill that was two and a half. The airline industry generates revenues of about $2 billion per week, and this bill provides $5 billion. Well, they were shut down for 2½ days, but certainly when they started again they lost a lot of revenue, and this $5 billion is an attempt to offset the losses that will be incurred not only for the shutdown but for the resumption of service, and that is for the time period from September 11 through December 31.

Also, there are losses that have to be incurred. I would love to see ridership come up to a very full volume in a very short period of time and maybe that $5 billion would not be necessary. In all likelihood it will be. The legislation also provides for $10 billion of loan assistance. Some people have asked for details, but we left the regulations up to OMB, and some people have disputed whether it be cost share, whether it will be a government guarantee, or whatever.

When we did the steel loan guarantees, that this Senator did not support but we put a percentage must be required, the Federal Government did not guarantee 100 percent. The Federal Government did not guarantee 100 percent, and I hope that would be the case in this bill. So it would not be a 100-percent Federal loan guarantee but up to 80, with those regulations to be determined by the Office of Management and Budget. They have 15 days to do so from date of enactment.

The legislation begins that a page and a half, or two pages, dealing with essential air service. It is my thought that should not be in the legislation, and it is because Senator BYRD and Senator ROCKEFELLER and others wanted to have it and said the Secretary should make efforts to endeavor that communities that now have assistance in Federal air service would continue to receive it. In my opinion, it should not have been put in, but it is in and I am not that upset. It does give some discretion, but in some of these communities we have airplanes flying with two or three people on them and they cost a lot of money. They cost the airlines and taxpayers a lot of money, and I question whether we should provide it and I will continue.

The language we have in the bill is less than a mandate. It does have some discretion, so hopefully common sense will prevail. That is not a particularly big provision.

Most importantly, the bill does provide some limitation on liabilities for the air carriers. If we did not have that, they probably would not be able to buy insurance. They probably would not be flying in a month. We did not want that to happen, so we did put some liability protection, some limitations there. Carriers would be liable on September 11. The limitations for liability will be for the amount of insurance they have. So that was pretty well agreed upon.

The prospective liability, where the Government would assume additional liability if there were another act of war or terrorism, was pretty well agreed upon.

The legislation passed legislation, and it begins on page 19 and goes through page 30 in this legislation, called victims’ compensation. It basically says that victims and/or their family survivors, people who were killed by the terrorist act of September 11, may receive financial assistance or at least have legal recourse. They can do it either by suing in a Federal district court or they can do it through a new system we are now creating in this legislation called the special master.

It was my hope this would not be included in this legislation, that we would defer it until we had a little more time to study it. This is very complex law. It deals with the State of New York, but in this federal law, it deals with liability, and the liability of not only the airlines but also the building, the port authority, and other individuals and governments. It is very complicated and very complex. I would love to see that it the other people who worked on it did a pretty good job, the special master has enormous responsibility under this legislation, to be making determinations on what family survivors will receive, what injured members and individual will receive.

I am persuaded, having a victims' compensation section, but when we put this together in a short period of time, I am not sure we did it the best way. I am not trying to be critical, and I have assurance from proponents of this, as late as last night: If we find it is in error and it needs adjustments, we will revisit it. I compliment my colleagues because we have operated in a bipartisan spirit, and we should continue to do so. That is vitally important. We did it last week; we did it this week.

Some people said we want to rewrite unemployment compensation laws and make everybody whole on unemployment compensation because of the airline employees, because of restaurant employees. We have to be cautious. The unemployment compensation system can be enormously expensive. We have an unemployment compensation system providing benefits in most cases for 26 weeks. I don't know that has such urgency we need to address it in the next week. Some said we need to do this next week. Almost everyone in every State of the Nation has unemployment compensation that will last at least for 6 months.

We have made good progress in providing stability for the airlines. They will be able to buy insurance; they will be able to continue flying. We provided cash assistance and provided loan guarantees to get them through, bridging this very difficult time as a result of the terrorist act and tragedy that happened on September 11. I encourage my colleagues to vote in favor of this legislation.

For the information of our colleagues, a lot of people are wanting to get out of their interest is my intention to yield back the remainder of time and commence the rollover in a very short period of time.

Mr. ROCHEFELLER. Madam President, the Senator from the State of Oregon has up to 5 minutes.

Mr. WYDEN. In a few hours the U.S. Congress is going to respond to the horrible tragedy in New York in an unprecedented way. The U.S. Congress is going to vote to send billions of dollars to the airline industry, while running any funds available to the scores and scores of other businesses across this country affected by this tragedy that also teeter on bankruptcy.

The process that the U.S. Congress is using is also unprecedented. The money being used to send these billions of dollars of taxpayer money to the airline industry comes from the airline industry itself. There has not been an independent, third party review of the number of claims on which this legislation tonight is based. It is a leap of faith. The Congress tonight is responding to the airline industry's aspiration that because this tragedy is so dire and the circumstances so enormous, we should waive the traditional process of saying that someone indemnified have a piece of legislation such as this involving billions and billions of dollars.

But it is also unprecedented, the horror and the tragedy that the Congress must address. Tonight, in what has been one of the most difficult things I have ever had to face, I am going to vote for this legislation because of one addition that has been made, and I am pleased to announce it tonight. Senator Daschle, the majority leader, has worked so hard on this legislation; Senator Hollings, chairman of the Commerce Committee, has done yeoman work on this bill; Congressman Doggett; and a variety of Members have indicated they expect the Senate Accounting Office to give a briefing to the U.S. Congress by September 28 on this legislation.

I make it clear tonight, if it appears on September 28 or in the days that succeed that briefing that this legislation was in error in the airlines if needed, I am going to come back on this floor and do everything in my power to send this money to the scores of other businesses across this country that teeter on bankruptcy tonight.

This is unprecedented, first, because of the tragedy; second, because one class of those affected in the airline industry is receiving help while others are not; and third, because there has not been an independent analysis of what the claims actually constitute and what funds are truly needed.

Because the circumstances are so dire, the Congress is going to vote for this legislation over the next few hours. I want the Congress to know that briefing on September 28 will be critical because it will be our first chance to get an objective analysis of whether the industry needs this sum of money and needs it for the claims that are being made.

I wrap up by saying in my view Senator Rockefeller and Senator Hutchinson have done a first-rate job on this legislation. This is, as we all know, just the beginning of the debate about how to deal with the financial consequences of the horror in New York, but it is a particularly difficult choice the Congress is making tonight.

I assure my constituents and others who are following this debate that the fact this money going to be spent is something that is going to be scrutinized with as much care as any subject that has ever come before the U.S. Congress.

I yield the floor.

Mr. REID. Madam President, it is my understanding that all time is going to be yielded back on this matter.

Mr. ENZI. I rise to make a few remarks concerning the Air Transportation Stabilization Act.

First, I would like to associate myself with the comments by the Senator from Alabama, Mr. Sessions and the Senator from Oklahoma, Mr. Nickles.

I know we need to take immediate action to keep the airline industry in the air. The last few days have taught us that air travel is the heart of our economy. Many businesses have been hurt by the events last week. I am disappointed that help has not been offered particularly to the small businesses will be out of business if air travel ceases or is greatly reduced. Airlines are a lifeline for many occupations.

This morning I had many concerns about this bill. I am pleased that many of my suggestions were taken and now appear in the bill. Other parts of this bill can and must be reworked in the days to come.

I am pleased at the recognition that we need to provide essential air service, help to airlines that serve small, rural communities throughout the nation.

I am pleased that we remembered the regional air carriers and proportionally helped them.

I understand the reluctance of the insurance companies to continue to insure air carriers, because of the uncertainty of the exposure, so I am pleased that an insurance provision was provided.

I am pleased that provisions were put into the bill that would remove concern and provide assurance that the grant money will not be golden parachutes for highly paid executives.

I know the bill now has provisions for audits to be sure the money is spent within the criteria set out. I would feel more comfortable if the audits were mandatory instead of optional. Taxpayer money always comes with strings.

I understand the need for expediting compensation to victims, but I'm not sure that we have done that. Perhaps we have just opened up a trial lawyer's dream. I have been assured that section will be reworked to give assurance that the money will go to the victims and not just to attorneys, and that the taxpayer won't be the one providing all the compensation. I had hoped that the Federal obligation would be available only for those who took the expedited avenue of resolving their loss using the Special Master. I applaud my colleagues and the Administration in expediting aid to the nation's airlines under this bill for damages arising out of the September 11, 2001 terrorist attack. This initial funding will provide the resources necessary to assure continuity and stabilization of the airline industry. By including direct cash assistance, loan guarantees, increased air transportation safety, and prospective and prior measures to ensure the safety of the American public and restore confidence in our economic foundations. The provisions of this bill are designed to restore the confidence of airline customers and industry investors and provide a bridge of assistance to the new environment in which the industry will need to operate.

I am pleased that the bill states that the U.S. Department of Transportation Secretary shall take appropriate action to ensure that all communities, both rural and urban communities, that had scheduled air service before September 11, 2001, continue to receive adequate air transportation service and that essential air service to small communities continues without interruption. In addition, the bill authorized an appropriation of $120 million for the Essential Air Service program. This additional funding in the EAS program will greatly benefit the rural communities in Wyoming.

Resolution of normal air travel is essential for commerce and the mobility for our way of life. We have to act to keep our airlines flying without throwing the free market out of the window. These businesses need to show that their requests for assistance are tied to the recent terrorist attacks and not debts incurred prior to September 11, 2001. They also need to show that the financial assistance they receive will be used wisely, keeping their planes flying and their employees working.

I believe that the airlines should submit a business plan to the U.S. Department of Transportation to justify why they need the grant funding and loan guarantees and what the funds will be used for. Within the business plan, the airlines should state specific provisions that executive management of the airlines should not receive pay increases greater than the cost-of-living adjustment and they should not receive any bonuses due to the funding allocated to them. In order to believe that the emergency funding for the airlines should help all airline employees, not just the executive management.

I have been assured there will be specific criteria when directing federal funding to the airlines in the form of a loan guarantee. For example, the bill gives the President the authority to issue the $10 billion in loan guarantees to the airline industry subject to terms and conditions as he seems necessary. We must for our own sake use and abuse that the bill protects the federal government who is the U.S. taxpayer from incurring costs from the possible defaulting on the loans.

Traditionally, loan guarantee programs authorized by the General Accounting Office, GAO, can exercise its authority by auditing the business that receives a loan guarantee. The administration should include a provision that mandates the GAO act as the auditor of this loan guarantee program. At present, an audit may be conducted by the GAO and U.S. Department of Transportation if the Controller General and Transportation Secretary deem necessary. We have to ensure that the funds are spent accordingly in relation to the intended purpose of this bill.

Furthermore, the bill should more directly address the higher costs incurred by commuter and short-haul carriers and issues arising from recent changes in air transportation available to small- and medium-sized communities. These regional airlines provide the only air service between the major airports and the more than a hundred small- and medium-sized communities in the West.

I am committed to supporting an economically strong airline industry for the West and the nation. Due to last week’s tragic events, we have realized that interdependence is key to keeping our economy strong, if planes are flying, then the hotels are being occupied and the restaurants are being utilized. I look forward to supporting my colleagues in restoring public confidence in the fact that the United States has the strongest and safest airline system in the world.

UNANIMOUS CONSENT AGREEMENT—NOMINATION OF KIRK VAN TINE TO BE GENERAL COUNSEL FOR THE DEPARTMENT OF TRANSPORTATION

Mr. REID. I ask unanimous consent that on Monday, September 24, at 2 p.m., the Senate proceed to executive session to consider Calendar No. 385, the nomination of Kirk Van Tine to be general counsel of the Department of Transportation; that the Senate vote immediately on confirmation of the nomination; that the motion to reconsider be laid on the table, all with no intervening action or debate.

The PRESIDENT OF THE SENATE. Without objection, it is so ordered.

AIR TRANSPORTATION SAFETY AND SYSTEM STABILIZATION ACT—Continued

Mr. NICKLES. We yield back the remainder of our time.

Mr. REID. I yield 1 minute to the Senator from Washington.

Mr. CANTWELL. Madam President, I do appreciate the time before the vote. I thank the leadership of Senator Daschle, Senator Kennedy, Senator Carnahan, and Senator Murray for working on what is part of this package that we will discuss next week and that is worker compensation.

Last week’s terrorist attacks murdered thousands of innocent Americans, and left thousands more grieving for friends and loved ones. Those people are the first and most visible victims of the unprovoked terrorist attacks—but they are not the only ones.

Already tens of thousands of workers at major U.S. airlines have lost their jobs due to the economic fallout of the terrorist attacks on September 11. Current projections are for a total of 100,000 airline jobs to be cut this year—nearly 10 percent of the industry workforce. Boeing, America’s leading aircraft manufacturer, has announced it will lay off up to 30,000 employees by the end of 2002.

These workers and their families are secondary victims of the terrorists who attacked the World Trade Center and the Pentagon, and Congress should not leave them to bear a disproportionate share of the economic burden of terrorism.

I am supportive of the overall intent of this bill and the need to shore up the airline industry, but I still have some concerns.

The current airline relief package is good as far as it goes—but it does not go far enough.

The airline relief package does nothing to ensure that airlines will uphold their contractual obligations and other commitments to employees. Those should be fundamental qualifications for any airline seeking government assistance.

The airline relief package does nothing to directly benefit the thousands of airline and aircraft manufacturing workers who are being laid off as a result of the recent terrorist attacks.

In this speech to the nation last night, President Bush told the American people “justice will be done.” If Congress passes an airline relief package without addressing worker assistance, we will have done a grave injustice to thousands of American workers...
The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

The bill (S. 1450) was passed, as follows:

S. 1450

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the “Air Transportation Safety and System Stabilization Act.”

TITLE I—AIRLINE STABILIZATION
SEC. 101. AVIATION DISASTER RELIEF.
(a) In General.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the President shall take the following actions to compensate air carriers for losses incurred by the air carriers as a result of the terrorist attacks on the United States that occurred on September 11, 2001.

(1) Subject to such terms and conditions as the President deems necessary, issue Federal credit instruments to air carriers that do not, in the aggregate, exceed $10,000,000,000 and provide such amounts necessary for such instruments in accordance with the provisions of the Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990 (2 U.S.C. 661 et seq.).

(2) Compensate air carriers in an aggregate amount equal to $5,000,000,000 for—

(A) direct losses incurred beginning on September 11, 2001, by air carriers as a result of any Federal Government stop order issued by the Secretary of Transportation or any subsequent order which continues or renews such a stoppage; and

(B) the incremental losses incurred beginning September 11, 2001, and ending December 31, 2001, by air carriers as a direct result of such attacks.

(b) EMERGENCY DESIGNATION.—Congress designates the amount of new budget authority and outlays in all fiscal years resulting from this title as an emergency requirement pursuant to section 252(c) of the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985 (2 U.S.C. 901(e)). Such amount shall be available only to the extent that a request, that includes designation of such amount as an emergency requirement as defined in such Act, is transmitted by the President to Congress.

SEC. 102. AIR TRANSPORTATION STABILIZATION BOARD.
(a) DEFINITIONS.—In this section, the following definitions apply:

(1) BOARD.—The term “Board” means the Air Transportation Stabilization Board established under subsection (b).

(2) FINANCIAL OBLIGATION.—The term “financial obligation” means any note, bond, debenture, or other debt obligation issued by an obligor in connection with financing under this section and section 101(a)(1).

(3) LENDER.—The term “lender” means any non-Federal qualified institutional buyer (as defined by section 230.144A(a) of title 17, Code of Federal Regulations (as successor regulations under the Security Act of 1933, including—

(A) a qualified retirement plan (as defined in section 4975(c)(1) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (26 U.S.C. 4975(c)(1)) that is a qualified institutional buyer; and

(B) a governmental plan (as defined in section 4975(c)(1) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (26 U.S.C. 4975(c)(1)) that is a qualified institutional buyer.

(4) OBLIGOR.—The term “obligor” means a party primarily liable for payment of a financial obligation, which party may be a corporation, partnership, joint venture, trust, or governmental entity, agency, or instrumentality.

(b) AIR TRANSPORTATION STABILIZATION BOARD.

(1) ESTABLISHMENT.—There is established a board (to be known as the “Air Transportation Stabilization Board”) to review and decide on applications for Federal credit instruments under section 101(a)(1).

(2) COMPOSITION.—The Board shall consist of—

(A) the Secretary of Transportation or the designee of the Secretary;

(B) the Chairman of the Board of Governors of the Federal Reserve System, or the designee of the Chairman, who shall be the Chair of the Board;

(C) the Secretary of the Treasury or the designee of the Secretary; and

(D) the Comptroller General of the United States, or the designee of the Comptroller General, as a nonvoting member of the Board.

(c) FEDERAL CREDIT INSTRUMENTS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Board may enter into agreements with 1 or more obligors to issue Federal credit instruments under section 101(a)(1).

(2) TERMS AND LIMITATIONS.—

(A) FORMS; TERMS AND CONDITIONS.—A Federal credit instrument shall be issued under section 101(a)(1) in such form and on such PAYABLE PER AIR CARRIER.—The maximum and the Comptroller General deems necessary in making guarantees under this title. The Secretary of Transportation shall issue regulations setting forth procedures for application and minimum requirements, which may be supplemented by the Board in its discretion, for the issuance of Federal credit instruments under section 101(a)(1).

SEC. 106. SPECIAL RULES FOR COMPENSATION.

(a) Subject to subsection (b), the amount of compensation payable to an air carrier under section 101(a)(2) may not exceed the amount of losses described in section 101(a)(2) that the air carrier demonstrates to the satisfaction of the President, using sworn financial statements or other appropriate data, that the air carrier incurred in providing transportation for which the Comptroller General and the Comptroller General of the United States may audit such statements and may determine in making guarantees under this title.

(b) Maximum Amount of Compensation Payable Per Air Carrier.—The maximum total amount of compensation payable to an air carrier under section 101(a)(2) may not exceed the lesser of—

(1) the amount of such air carrier's direct and incremental losses described in section 101(a)(2); or

(2) the case of—

(A) flights involving passenger-only or combined passenger and cargo transportation, the product of—

(i) $1,500,000,000; and

(ii) the ratio of—

(I) the available seat miles of the air carrier for the month of August 2001 as reported to the Secretary; to

(II) the total available seat miles of all such air carriers for such month as reported to the Secretary; and

(B) flights involving cargo-only transportation, the product of—

(i) §500,000,000; and

(ii) the ratio of—

(I) the revenue ton miles or other auditable measure of the air carrier for cargo for the latest quarter for which data is available as reported to the Secretary; to

(II) the total revenue ton miles or other auditable measure of all such air carriers for cargo for such quarter as reported to the Secretary.

(c) Payments.—The President may provide compensation to air carriers under section 101(a)(2) in more payments up to the amount authorized by this title.

SEC. 104. LIMITATION ON CERTAIN EMPLOYEE COMPENSATION.

(a) In General.—The President may only issue a Federal credit instrument under section 101(a)(1) to an air carrier after the air carrier enters into a legally binding agreement with the President that, during the 2-year period beginning September 11, 2001, and ending September 11, 2003, no officer or employee of the air carrier whose total compensation exceeded $300,000 in calendar year 2000 (other than an employee whose compensation is determined through an existing collective bargaining agreement entered into prior to September 11, 2001).

(1) will receive from the air carrier total compensation which exceeds, during any 12 consecutive months of such 2-year period, the total compensation received by the officer or employee from the air carrier in calendar year 2000; and

(2) will receive from the air carrier severance pay in the aggregate over the 2-year period ending September 11, 2003, that exceeds the lesser of—

(I) the available seat miles of the air carrier for the month of August 2001 as reported to the Secretary; and

(II) the product of—

(i) $500,000,000; and

(ii) the ratio of—

(I) the revenue ton miles or other auditable measure of the air carrier for the month of August 2001 as reported to the Secretary; to

(II) the total amount of compensation payable to an air carrier under section 101(a)(1).

(b) Total Compensation Defined.—In this section, the term "total compensation" includes salary, bonuses, awards of stock, and other financial benefits provided by an air carrier to an officer or employee of the air carrier.

SEC. 105. CONTINUATION OF CERTAIN AIR SERVICE.

(a) Action of Secretary.—The Secretary of Transportation shall issue regulations setting forth procedures for application and minimum requirements, which may be supplemented by the Board in its discretion, for the issuance of Federal credit instruments under section 101(a)(1).

(b) Deposit in Treasury.—All amounts collected by the Secretary of the Treasury under this subsection shall be deposited in the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts.

SEC. 106. SPECIAL RULES FOR COMPENSATION.

(a) Subject to subsection (b), the amount of compensation payable to an air carrier under section 101(a)(2) may not exceed the amount of losses described in section 101(a)(2) that the air carrier demonstrates to the satisfaction of the President, using sworn financial statements or other appropriate data, that the air carrier incurred in providing transportation for which the Comptroller General and the Comptroller General of the United States may audit such statements and may determine in making guarantees under this title.

(b) Maximum Amount of Compensation Payable Per Air Carrier.—The maximum total amount of compensation payable to an air carrier under section 101(a)(2) may not exceed the lesser of—

(1) the amount of such air carrier's direct and incremental losses described in section 101(a)(2); or

(2) in the case of—

(A) flights involving passenger-only or combined passenger and cargo transportation, the product of—

(i) $1,500,000,000; and

(ii) the ratio of—

(I) the available seat miles of the air carrier for the month of August 2001 as reported to the Secretary; to

(II) the total available seat miles of all such air carriers for such month as reported to the Secretary; and

(B) flights involving cargo-only transportation, the product of—

(i) §500,000,000; and

(ii) the ratio of—

(II) the total revenue ton miles or other auditable measure of all such air carriers for cargo for such quarter as reported to the Secretary.

(c) Payments.—The President may provide compensation to air carriers under section 101(a)(2) in more payments up to the amount authorized by this title.

SEC. 102. DOMESTIC INSURANCE AND REIMBURSEMENT OF INSURANCE COSTS.

(a) In General.—The President may only reimburse an air carrier for the increase in the cost of insurance, with respect to a premium for coverage ending before October 1, 2002, for losses or damages to any aircraft or risk from the operation of an American aircraft over the insurance premium that was in effect for a comparable operation during September 4, 2001, and ending September 10, 2001, as the Secretary may determine. Such reimbursement is subject to subsections (a)(2), (c), and (d) of this section and subsections (a)(2), (c), and (d) of section 44307 and all that follows through the period at the end of subparagraph (B) and subsections (b), (c), and (d) of section 44307.

(b) Reimbursement of Insurance Costs.—

(1) In General.—The Secretary may reimburse an air carrier for the increase in the cost of insurance, with respect to a premium for coverage ending before October 1, 2002, for losses or damages to any aircraft or risk from the operation of an American aircraft over the insurance premium that was in effect for a comparable operation during September 4, 2001, and ending September 10, 2001, as the Secretary may determine. Such reimbursement is subject to subsections (a)(2), (c), and (d) of this section and subsections (a)(2), (c), and (d) of section 44307.

(2) Payment from Revolving Fund.—A reimbursement under this subsection shall be paid from the revolving fund established by section 44307.

(3) Further Conditions.—The Secretary may impose such further conditions on insurance for which the increase in premium is subject to reimbursement under this subsection as the Secretary may deem appropriate in the interest of air commerce.

(4) Termination of Authority.—The authority to reimburse air carriers under this subsection shall expire 180 days after the date of enactment of this paragraph.

(b) Reimbursement of Insurance Costs.—

(1) In General.—The President may reimburse an air carrier for the increase in the cost of insurance, with respect to a premium for coverage ending before October 1, 2002, for losses or damages to any aircraft or risk from the operation of an American aircraft over the insurance premium that was in effect for a comparable operation during September 4, 2001, and ending September 10, 2001, as the Secretary may determine. Such reimbursement is subject to subsections (a)(2), (c), and (d) of this section and subsections (a)(2), (c), and (d) of section 44307.

(b) Reimbursement of Insurance Costs.—

(1) In General.—The President may reimburse an air carrier for the increase in the cost of insurance, with respect to a premium for coverage ending before October 1, 2002, for losses or damages to any aircraft or risk from the operation of an American aircraft over the insurance premium that was in effect for a comparable operation during September 4, 2001, and ending September 10, 2001, as the Secretary may determine. Such reimbursement is subject to subsections (a)(2), (c), and (d) of this section and subsections (a)(2), (c), and (d) of section 44307.

(b) Reimbursement of Insurance Costs.—

(1) In General.—The President may reimburse an air carrier for the increase in the cost of insurance, with respect to a premium for coverage ending before October 1, 2002, for losses or damages to any aircraft or risk from the operation of an American aircraft over the insurance premium that was in effect for a comparable operation during September 4, 2001, and ending September 10, 2001, as the Secretary may determine. Such reimbursement is subject to subsections (a)(2), (c), and (d) of this section and subsections (a)(2), (c), and (d) of section 44307.

(b) Reimbursement of Insurance Costs.—

(1) In General.—The President may reimburse an air carrier for the increase in the cost of insurance, with respect to a premium for coverage ending before October 1, 2002, for losses or damages to any aircraft or risk from the operation of an American aircraft over the insurance premium that was in effect for a comparable operation during September 4, 2001, and ending September 10, 2001, as the Secretary may determine. Such reimbursement is subject to subsections (a)(2), (c), and (d) of this section and subsections (a)(2), (c), and (d) of section 44307. in subsections (c) and (d), respectively; and

(d) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 44306 of such title is amended—

(1) by redesignating subsections (b) and (c) as (c) and (d), respectively; and

(2) by inserting after subsection (a) the following:

"(b) ALLOWANCES IN SETTING PREMIUM RATES FOR REINSURANCE.—In setting premium rates for reinsurance, the Secretary may make allowances to the insurance carrier for expenses incurred in providing such services and facilities that the Secretary considers good business practices, except for payments by the air carrier for the stimulation or enhancement of insurance business."

(10) ECONOMIC LOSS.—The term "economic loss" means all economic losses that the claimant suffered, or in the case of a claim filed on behalf of the claimant, the economic losses that the claimant is entitled to receive as a result of such losses; and

(11) NONECONOMIC LOSSES.—The term "noneconomic losses" means losses for physical and emotional pain, suffering, inconvenience, physical impairment, mental anguish, loss of society and companionship, loss of consortium (other than loss of domestic service), hedonic damages, injury to reputation, and all other nonpecuniary losses of any kind or nature.

(b) SPECIAL MASTER.—The term "Special Master" means the Special Master appointed by the Attorney General acting through a Special Master appointed by the Attorney General, to perform the duties of the Special Master under this title.

(2) REVIEW AND DETERMINATION.—The Special Master shall review and determine—

(A) whether the claimant is an eligible individual under subsection (c); and

(B) with respect to a claimant determined to be an eligible individual—

(i) the extent of the harm to the claimant, including any economic and noneconomic losses; and

(ii) the amount of compensation to which the claimant is entitled based on the harm to the claimant, the facts of the claim, and the individual circumstances of the claimant.

(2) NONELIGIBILITY.—With respect to a claimant, the Special Master shall not consider negligence or any other theory of liability.
(3) DETERMINATION.—Not later than 120 days after that date on which a claim is filed under this title, the Special Master shall complete a review, make a determination, and provide written notice to the claimant, with respect to the matters that were the subject of the claim under review. Such a determination shall be final and not subject to judicial review.

(4) RIGHTS OF CLAIMANT.—A claimant in a review under paragraph (1) shall have—

(A) the right to be represented by an attorney;

(B) the right to present evidence, including the presentation of witnesses and documents; and

(C) any other due process rights determined appropriate by the Special Master.

(5) NO PUNITIVE DAMAGES.—The Special Master may not include amounts for punitive damages in any compensation paid under a claim under this title.

(6) COLLATERAL COMPENSATION.—The Special Master shall reduce the amount of compensation determined under paragraph (1)(B)(i) by the amount of the collateral source compensation the claimant has received or is entitled to receive as a result of the terrorist-related aircraft crashes of September 11, 2001.

(c) EXPEDITED DETERMINATION.—(1) IN GENERAL.—A claim shall be determined to be an eligible individual for purposes of this subsection if the Special Master determines that the claimant is—

(A) an individual described in paragraph (2); and

(B) meets the requirements of paragraph (3).

(2) INDIVIDUALS.—A claimant is an individual described in this paragraph if the claimant is—

(A) an individual who—

(i) was present at the World Trade Center, (New York, New York), the Pentagon (Arlington, Virginia), or the site of the aircraft crashes of September 11, 2001, at the time, or in the immediate aftermath, of the terrorist-related aircraft crashes of September 11, 2001; and

(ii) suffered personal harm or death as a result of such an air crash;

(B) an individual who was a member of the flight crew or a passenger on American Airlines flight 11, United Airlines flight 93, or any other U.S. passenger airline aircraft or United Airlines flight 77, or any other U.S. passenger airline aircraft, at the time, or in the immediate aftermath, of the terrorist-related aircraft crashes of September 11, 2001; and

(i) suffered personal harm or death as a result of such an air crash;

(ii) was a member of the flight crew or a passenger on American Airlines flight 11, United Airlines flight 93, or any other U.S. passenger airline aircraft or United Airlines flight 77, or any other U.S. passenger airline aircraft, at the time, or in the immediate aftermath, of the terrorist-related aircraft crashes of September 11, 2001; and

(iii) suffered personal harm or death as a result of such an air crash;

(C) any other matters determined appropriate by the Attorney General.

SEC. 406. PAYMENTS TO ELIGIBLE INDIVIDUALS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Attorney General is authorized to accept such amounts as may be contributed by individuals, business concerns, or other entities to carry out this title, under such terms and conditions as the Attorney General may impose.

(b) USE OF SEPARATE ACCOUNT.—In making payments under this section, amounts contained in any account containing funds provided under paragraph (1) shall be used prior to using appropriated amounts.

SEC. 407. REGULATIONS.

Not later than 90 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Attorney General, in consultation with the Special Master, shall promulgate regulations to carry out this title, including regulations with respect to—

(1) forms to be used in submitting claims under this title;

(2) the information to be included in such forms;

(3) procedures for hearing and the presentation of evidence;

(4) procedures to assist an individual in filing a claim under this title; and

(5) other matters determined appropriate by the Attorney General.

SEC. 408. LIMITATION ON AIR CARRIER LIABILITY.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, liability for all claims, whether for compensatory or punitive damages, arising from the terrorist-related aircraft crashes of September 11, 2001, against any air carrier shall not be in an amount greater than the limits of the liability coverage maintained by the air carrier.

(b) FEDERAL CAUSE OF ACTION.—

(1) AVAILABILITY OF ACTION.—There shall exist a Federal cause of action for damages arising out of the hijacking and subsequent crashes of American Airlines flights 11 and 175, United Airlines flights 93 and 175, and other U.S. passenger airline aircraft, at the time, or in the immediate aftermath, of the terrorist-related aircraft crashes of September 11, 2001, against any air carrier.

(2) SUBSTANTIVE LAW.—The substantive law for decision in any such suit shall be derived from the law, including choice of law principles, of the State in which the crash occurred unless the State's law is inconsistent with or preempted by Federal law.

(3) JURISDICTION.—The United States District Court for the Southern District of New York shall have original and exclusive jurisdiction over all actions brought for any claim (including any claim for loss of property, personal injury, or death) resulting from or relating to the terrorist-related aircraft crashes of September 11, 2001.

(c) EXCLUSION.—Nothing in this section shall in any way limit any liability of any person who is a knowing participant in any conspiracy to hijack any aircraft or commit any terrorist act.

SEC. 409. RIGHT OF SUBROGATION.

The United States shall have the right of subrogation with respect to any claim paid by the United States under this title.

TITLE V—AIR TRANSPORTATION SAFETY

SEC. 501. INCREASED AIR TRANSPORTATION SAFETY.

Congress affirms the President's decision to spend $3,000,000,000 on airline safety and security in conjunction with this Act in order to restore public confidence in the airline industry.

SEC. 502. CONGRESSIONAL COMMITMENT.

Congress is committed to act expeditiously, in consultation with the Secretary of Transportation, to strengthen airport security and take further measures to enhance the security of air travel.

TITLE VI—SEPARABILITY

SEC. 601. SEPARABILITY.

If any provision of this Act (including any amendment made by this Act) and the application thereof to any person or circumstance is held invalid, the remainder of this Act (including any amendment made by this Act) and the application thereof to other persons or circumstances shall not be affected thereby.

Mr. NICKLES. Madam President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. DASCHLE. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority leader.

ORDER OF BUSINESS

Mr. DASCHLE. Madam President, for the interest of all Senators, I want to make sure people understand what the vote is for today.

We will convene at 12 noon. From 12 o'clock to 2 o'clock, we will take up the Jordan free trade agreement. That has already been established by unanimous consent. There will be a 2-hour debate and, by agreement, a voice vote.

At 2 p.m., there will be a rollcall vote on the Kirk Van Tine nomination. Mr. Van Tine to be general counsel of the Department of Transportation.

Following that vote, we will resume consideration of the Defense authorization bill.

I appreciate very much the tremendous cooperation of all Senators. I know this bill was extremely difficult and very complex, very controversial in many respects. I appreciate the way both sides worked to be able to get us to the point we are now.

I know there are a lot of Senators who would have appreciated the opportunity to offer amendments. It is not our intent to deny Senators the right to offer amendments. Under these circumstances, I am grateful for the acknowledgment that we are in a very difficult time and that cooperation, as was demonstrated again this afternoon, is essential if we are able to respond as we now have to the crisis we are facing, not only in the aviation industry but in the economy as well. The other ways of coming to terms having to do with the tragedy.

In my view, there were two essential pieces of legislation missing from this bill. Others have already addressed it. Senators Carnahan, Murray, Cantwell, and Kennedy, and others have been working on a proposal to deal with the disaster adjustment assistance and extended COBRA coverage. It is essential that we provide dislocated workers some income security, some training, access to health benefits. We did a little bit of that in this bill. It was a first step, but we really have a long way to go if we are going to address in a comprehensive and meaningful way the tremendous problems that families all over this country are now facing as a result of layoffs, as a result of bankruptcies, as a result of the economic slowdown. For all of the reasons we have heard, we simply cannot allow the circumstances to go unattended. It is critical that we do it sooner rather than later.

I have talked to Senators Kennedy and Carnahan and others. I have talked with some Senators on this side of the aisle, especially Senator Lott. It is my hope and my determination to address this issue in the months to come.

I have talked to the President about this issue, as is his intention to address the issue in a much more comprehensive way as well. I have no doubt we can work with him on security. The President began very eloquently and passionately addressed the issue of security this country is now facing as a result of the terrorist attacks, as a result of the economy, and that we must simply not go without the acknowledgment of the seriousness of the problem as well as a recognition that this problem must be addressed.

Secondly, I am very pleased that the Senator from South Carolina, Mr. Hollings, Senator McCain, Senator Rockefeller, Senator Hutchinson, so many others, and Senator Kerry, have worked as closely together as they have in the past in a number of important ways. We must continue to find ways with which to address security, perhaps as early as next week.

The bill the Commerce Committee has now introduced is a bill I believe very confidently will address many of these issues, so confidently that I have cosponsored it along with many other Senators. I am hopeful that in the not-too-distant future it can be a subject for debate and consideration in the Senate Chamber and that we will work to quickly and effectively provide the kind of infrastructure and security that will be required to raise the confidence level that is necessary.

Security, additional compensation, and a safety net for all of those workers who have been left out so far are issues that I am committed to address and that I know the Senate is committed to address. I will continue to work with my colleague Senator Lott, who is every bit as concerned about many of these issues as I am.

We will continue to find ways to work together to do what we know we must to put this country back and to recognize the needs of families, workers, and businesses across the country.

MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. GRAHAM. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that there be a period for morning business with Senators permitted to speak for up to 10 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Florida.

Mr. GRAHAM. Madam President, I desire to call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. REID. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

Mr. GRAHAM. Without objection, it is so ordered.

KAZAKHSTAN

Ms. LANDRIEU. Madam President, the events of last week by terrorists illustrate all too vividly the worst of human nature, however, the actions of people in the wake of the disaster has shown the best.

While the attacks were in the United States, they were directed at the entire civilized world. And the entire world has responded. Today, I would like to direct the attention of the Senate to a key ally in Central Asia.

In light of the direct threat to world freedom that we faced on September 11, 2001, Kazakhstan has emerged as one of the only "silver-lining" in Central Asia. I am very grateful for the outpouring of support from the President of Kazakhstan, Mr. Nursultan Nazarbayev. Within a day of the attack President Nazarbayev said, "Kazakhstan is ready to support measures undertaken by the United States to fight against terrorism, with all the means necessary." I would also ask unanimous consent to submit the President's entire statement into the Congressional Record.

Kazakhstan is predominantly a Muslim nation about four times the size of Texas in Central Asia. Surrounded by Russia, China, Turkey, Iran, and Afghanistan, Kazakhstan's continued economic and political stability is critical to the long-term success of the Central Asian nations.

In the first few years after its independence from the former Soviet Union in 1991, Kazakhstan successfully dismantled the fourth largest nuclear arsenal in the world with U.S. support via the Cooperative Threat Reduction Program, CTR. Kazakhstan continues to set a model for the global community in its leadership on unilateral disarmament and nonproliferation.

In addition, I believe our Nation needs to continue to support the Government of Kazakhstan which has begun to transform its economy from the old Soviet-based model to a market-based economy with significant U.S. foreign direct investment, FDI.

It is for these reasons that I have cosponsored S. 1448 that authorizes the extension of nondiscriminatory treatment to the products of Kazakhstan. In summary, the United States must do its part to enhance cooperation and encourage prosperity and stability for the entire Central Asian region.
None of us is untouched by last Tuesday's terror, and it is now painfully clear that many residents of California were part of each tragic moment of that terrible day. Some were trapped in the World Trade Center towers. Some were at work in the Pentagon. And the fates of some were sealed as they boarded planes bound for San Francisco or Los Angeles.

I offer today this tribute to the dozens of Californians who perished on that awful morning. I want to assure the victims' families that their fathers and mothers, sons and daughters, aunts, uncles, brothers and sisters will not be forgotten. As a nation, we hold them close.

Words alone cannot convey the depth of our dismay, but the names of those Californians who lost their lives provide a stark and simple symbol of danger and our pain. The list that follows may well grow. I will honor each one in every way that I can.

David Angell of Pasadena; Lynn Angell of Pasadena; Selma Aoyama of Los Angeles; Barbara Areesteguis of Los Angeles; Melissa Barnes of Redlands; Alan Beaver of Emeryville; Berry Berenson of Los Angeles; Carolyn Beug of Los Angeles; Yeneneh Betru of Burbank; Mark Bingham of San Francisco; Deora Bodley of Santa Clara; Touri Bolourchi of Beverly Hills; Daniel Brandhout of Hollywood Hills; David Brandhout of Hollywood Hills; Thomas Burnett of San Ramon; Suzanne Calley of San Martin; Jefferey Collman of Novato; Dorothy Dearaujo of Long Beach; Darlene Flagg of Corona; Dee Flagg of Corona; Wilson Flagg of Corona; Lee Frost of Rancho Santa Margarita; Ronald Gamboa of Los Angeles; Andrew Garcia of Portola Valley; Edmund Glazer of Chatsworth; Lauren Grandoclas of San Rafael; Andrew Curry Green of Los Angeles; Richard Guadagno of Humboldt County; Stanley Hall of Rancho Palos Verdes; Gerald Hardacre of Carlsbad; John Hofer of Belflower; Stephen Hyland of Claremont; Barbara Keating of Palm Springs; Chandler Keller of El Segundo; Jude Larson of Los Angeles; Natalie Larson of Los Angeles; Daniel John Lee of Van Nuys; Maclovio Lopez of Norwalk; Dora Menchaca of Santa Monica; Nicole Miller of San Jose; Laurie A. Neira of Los Angeles; Ruben Ormaza of Los Angeles; Jerrold Paskins of Anaheim Hills; Thomas Pecorelli of Los Angeles; Robert Penniger of Poway; Mari-Rae Sopper of Santa Barbara; Alicia Titus of San Francisco; Otis Tolbert of Lemoore; Pendyala Vamsikrishna of Los Angeles; Timothy Ward of San Diego; and John Wenckus of Torrance.

In the name of these Californians, and in the name of all the other innocent victims, it is time for the terrorism to stop.

RETRIEVAL OF SHERRY ADKINS

Mr. HATCH. Madam President, I am grateful for this opportunity to recognize and pay tribute to Sherry Adkins, who has worked in my Salt Lake City office for 25 years as a Constituent Services Representative. Sherry is retiring after many years of hard work to fulfill her dream of moving to Alaska with her husband Bruce to spend time with her grandchildren.

Sherry's life has epitomized true public service. She literally touched thousands of Utahans' lives by assisting me in helping constituents with problems ranging from Social Security issues to Veterans Administration benefits. Over the years, I have received hundreds of letters from constituents who have praised Sherry's work and expressed their gratitude to her for her assistance.

Sherry's life has been an example of service. She has always championed the underdog and looked for ways to help others in need. She spent many years volunteering at the Salt Lake City Odyssey House, an organization designed to help men and women overcome the tragic disease of alcoholism. In fact, she even directed the Odyssey House Choir, giving members new hope and experiences, as well as entertaining thousands of people through their music.

I have always known that I could count on Sherry to get her job done, and to do it well. In fact, Sherry's work with me didn't start when I was a selectee to the Senate. When I go back even further, I was privileged to have Sherry as my personal secretary for a few years while I practiced law in Utah. So, Sherry has been my longest serving staff member, and I will miss her greatly.

It has always been a pleasure to work with Sherry Adkins. I am so grateful to Sherry for her efforts and the service that she has rendered to me, my office, and to all Utahans. I feel blessed to be able to call her a friend. I want to wish Sherry and her husband Bruce the very best that life has to offer in the beautiful land of Alaska. May they find peace and happiness in their retirement years doing the things that they love the most.

ARMENIAN INDEPENDENCE DAY

Mr. JOHNSON. Madam President, I rise today to recognize the 10th anniversary of Armenia's independence.

On September 21, 1991, the people of Armenia began their journey of freedom and democracy. The road they have travelled over the past 10 years has been full of challenges including natural disasters, conflict in Nagorno Karabagh, and the still unmet challenges associated with economic and political transformation. Any of these could have led Armenians off the path of liberty. However, it is through the perseverance of Armenians, and those around the world who support them, that Armenia begins this new century a strong republic and an example for young democracies worldwide.

The events of September 11, 2001, pose a new challenge to Armenians, Americans, and those who reject terrorism and fight the war against fear. In his September 11 letter to President George Bush, Armenian President Robert Kocharyan called on Armenians to confront the "evil of terrorism" with "determination and resolve." At this critical time, we are all thankful for Armenia's support, and together, along with a global coalition of freedom-loving nations, we will find the strength and patience to continue our journey.

NATIONAL POW/MIA RECOGNITION DAY

Mr. LUGAR. Madam President, today is National POW/MIA Recognition Day.

In light of the tragic events of September 11, this day of remembrance and recognition has new meaning. We have spoken about a new kind of "war" but we are not sure what shape it will take. Whatever form, however, it will likely include casualties and perhaps prisoners, these are among the harsh lessons history has taught us. This day gains new meaning, too, when we consider the rescue workers who continue to comb through the war zones at the Pentagon and in New York for the bodies of the fallen, the missing, in action.

In time of war, an entire nation unites with a singularity of purpose. But, we all know how swiftly the Nation's attention can wane and be distracted. Those of us in this body and across the relevant Executive agencies, however, cannot be distracted from one thing; that is, a commitment to ensure the return of POWs and MIAs at the end of hostilities. The vigorous pursuit of this commitment must continue through painstaking on-site investigations, diplomatic negotiations and complete examinations of records following a conflict.

As we look forward with resolve, we must recognize the work that the many POW/MIA organizations have done, led by the Department of Defense Prisoner of War/Missing Personnel Office, DPMO. The painstaking work of recovery operations have, in the past year, seen the return of 36 Americans from the war in Southeast Asia; however, 1,957 remain unaccounted for at

September 21, 2001

As we know well, this is a team effort requiring the commitment and dedication of the Congress, the Administration, the Departments of Defense and State, the Joint Chiefs of Staff and the U.S. Army. We have worked closely with our allies, through continued humanitarian support and dedicated diplomatic endeavors will gain further information about the servicemen still missing to honor their sacrifice and provide peace and solace to their loved ones. You are not forgotten.

At this point in the record, I ask unanimous consent that the names of Indiana’s missing as identified from the Korea and Vietnam Wars be printed in the record.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

HONORING THE BRAVERY OF MISSOURI TASK FORCE ONE

Mrs. CARNAHAN. Madam President, during the course of the past week, we have witnessed extraordinary acts of bravery. Americans from all walks of life have reached deep into their souls and sought to bring forth comfort to those who have lost loved ones and returned to the aftermath for survivors. Today I rise to applaud the efforts of a special team of Americans, Missouri Task Force One.

Created in the early ‘80s by the Federal Emergency Management Agency, the philosophy behind urban search and rescue was to compile a team of highly trained and motivated rescue personnel who have the skills to find and return people in collapsed buildings. This past week the 62 volunteers that make up Missouri Task Force One have used the full range of their skills in the New York City rescue mission. Searchers work in 12-hour shifts. They search around the clock. The effort is slow and methodical and emotions run high. “It’s sensory overload in every aspect,” said team member Doug Worsar, a firefighter from St. Louis. “Yet despite the fact they can’t even begin to fathom what went on in the World Trade Center, they know that they will have the ability to accomplish their mission.”

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE

driven by an inner force they find hard to explain. Their job is as difficult and challenging as perhaps any task that has been undertaken since the attack on our nation, and their focus remains true. As the days and weeks progress and the chances of finding survivors wane, they press on, their hope and determination strong.

On behalf of all Missourians I express my sincere and heartfelt appreciation to the heroes and heroines who make up Missouri Task Force One. They are shining examples of the best Missouri has to offer and an inspiration to the world.

LOCAL LAW ENFORCEMENT ACT OF 2001

Mr. SMITH of Oregon. Madam President, I rise today to speak about hate crimes legislation I introduced with Senator KENNEDY in March of this year. The Local Law Enforcement Act of 2001 would add new categories to current hate crimes legislation sending a signal that violence of any kind is unacceptable in our society.

I would like to describe a terrible crime that occurred November 30, 1993 in Tyler, TX. Nicholas West, a 23-year-old gay man, was abducted from a park known as a meeting place for gays, robbed and shot to death. Donald Aldrich, 29, David Ray McMillan, 17, and Henry Dunn Jr., 19, were charged with murder.

I believe that government’s first duty is to defend its citizens, to defend them against the harms that come out of hate. The Local Law Enforcement Enhancement Act of 2001 is now a symbol that can become substance. I believe that by passing this legislation, we can change hearts and minds as well.

IN MEMORY OF TWO BRAVE CALIFORNIA PILOTS, LARRY GROFF AND LARS STRATTE

Mrs. BOXER. Madam President, I rise today to commemorate the tragic deaths of Larry Groff and Lars Stratte, pilots who were killed on August 27, 2001 in a mid-air tanker collision while fighting the Bus Fire in Northern California. Both pilots were flying Gruman S-2 aircraft and were making fire retardant drops on the fire when they collided.

Larry Groff and Lars Stratte were established and dedicated pilots who have recorded numerous hours of flying time. Both pilots were employees of San Joaquin Helicopters, Incorporated. Larry Groff was a 20 year Navy Veteran pilot and Lars Stratte was Past President of the Redding Area Pilots Association.

We will never forget the service of these courageous men, in a difficult and dangerous occupation, they demonstrated outstanding courage and extraordinary ability to fight fires from the air in their service with the California Department of Forestry and Fire Protection.

Larry Groff, from Windsor, CA, leaves behind Christine, his six children and two grandchildren. Lars Stratte, from Redding, CA, leaves behind his wife Terri and two children.

Larry Groff and Lars Stratte served their community and the people of California with great distinction. I am honored to pay tribute to these brave men today and I encourage my fellow colleagues to join me in celebrating their lives and service, mourning their passing and extending our condolences to their families.

IN RECOGNITION OF DAVID BOHLEY

Mr. BOND. Madam President, I ask the Senate to pause long enough to recognize an outstanding member of my staff who is moving on to new challenges and new opportunities. Dave Bohley has been a member of my Small Business Committee staff since 1998. Since that time he has set a high standard of excellence and knowledge in handling banking and related matters for the Committee. He was also deeply involved in the Small Business Innovation Research program reauthorization we passed last year, and in the Small Business Technology Transfer program legislation currently working its way through the Congress.

Dave’s expertise recently attracted him into a new career at Fannie Mae, the financial services company. Although I am happy for him to have this new opportunity, I am sorry to see him leave my staff. Fannie Mae’s gain is truly our loss. I wish him every success and thank him so very much for his exemplary service to me and to the Senate.

NATURALIZATION EXTENSION ACT OF 2001

Mr. KOHL. Madam President, I rise today as an original cosponsor of the Bruce Vento Hmong Veterans Naturalization Extension Act of 2001. This important piece of legislation will ensure that the sizable Hmong population in Wisconsin is able to take advantage of a status adjustment opportunity extended to them unanimously by this Congress last year. The Hmong, and particularly the Lao Veterans of America, deserve our respect and honor for all their help during the conflict in Vietnam.

The Hmong Veterans Naturalization Act of 2000 waives the English language requirement and provides for a translator during administration of the Civics test for all Hmong Veterans of the Special Forces in Laos and their spouses and widows applying for U.S. citizenship. However, the Hmong veteran community only had the benefit of this legislation for 18 months. Since enactment, fewer than half of all Hmong veterans and their family members have been able to seek citizenship through these standards. The legislation introduced today would give those eligible an additional 18 months to apply for citizenship under the Naturalization Act.

I commend my colleague Senator WELLSTONE for his efforts on behalf of the Hmong population living in the upper midwestern United States, and I urge expeditious consideration of this legislation.

CONDEMNING BIGOTRY AND VIOLENCE AGAINST ARAB, MUSLIM AND SOUTH ASIAN AMERICANS

Mr. FEINGOLD. Madam President, I rise to join with my colleagues in support of H. Con. Res 227 condemning bigotry and violence against Arab, Muslim, and South Asian Americans.

I am sincerely grateful for and proud of the tremendous response of the American people who have shown true courage and loyalty in the face of the horrific attacks on our country on September 11, 2001. No one should doubt the resolve of this Nation to meet the challenge before us in fighting terrorism. But as we continue to wrestle with deep and conflicting emotions of sadness, pain, anger, and fear, we must ensure that the spirit of America, that ability to transcend differences in race, religion, and ethnicity to achieve greatness, is not only preserved, but strengthened as a result of this tragedy.

As history has shown, America has always triumphed when we are united. That is why it is so important in this chapter in our history, as we prepare to defend and preserve our Nation, that we stay united as one Nation. This should not be an occasion for irrational impulses of fear, hate or violence towards Arab-Americans, Muslim Americans, South Asian Americans, or any other person in this country. Such actions are wrong. The idea of ‘America’ knows no racial, ethnic, or religious boundaries, and no American should have to live in fear as a result of this situation. I stand together with my colleagues, and with Americans of all backgrounds, in condemning such actions. We must renew our commitment to protect our fellow Americans and our Nation against those who want to divide us with hate.

Unfortunately, there has been a rash of hate crimes recently, compounding the anxiety of Americans in communities throughout this Nation. I have been saddened to hear of incidents in my own State. Ashraf “Mike” Khaled, a Wisconsin resident of Egyptian descent and gas station owner, has been the victim of several incidents of hateful statements and threats of his safety by customers and passerby. He reminded us of why our country is so great and why these actions of hatred can be so damaging. He said, "I love this country because I found my freedom here."

This is a critical moment for America. One in which we must all live by and honor our Pledge to live as "One Nation, under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all."

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

TRIBUTE TO BISHOP TIMLIN

- Mr. SPECTER. Madam President, I seek recognition today to acknowledge the service of my friend, Bishop James C. Timlin, D.D., of the Diocese of Scranton, who is today celebrating 25 years since his elevation to the rank of bishop. Recently, on July 16, 2001, Bishop Timlin also observed the 50th anniversary of his priestly ordination.

Bishop Timlin was born in Scranton on August 5, 1927. He attended Holy Rosary High School and St. Charles College in Catonsville, MD. He then attended St. Mary’s Seminary in Baltimore and the North American College in Rome, Italy, where he completed his studies for the priesthood. Bishop Timlin was ordained on July 16, 1951, in Rome by the Most Reverend Martin J. O’Connor, D.D. Bishop Timlin continued his studies in theology there before returning to the Diocese of Scranton, where he was appointed Assistant Pastor at St. John Evangelist Parish, Pittston, in 1952.

Pope John Paul II appointed him the eighth Bishop of Scranton on April 24, 1984, and his installation followed on June 7, 1984. Bishop Timlin has served two terms of the Administrative Board and the National Advisory Council of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops. He also served as a member of the Board of the North American College, as well as a consultant on the Liturgy Committee. He is presently a consultant to the NCCB’s Ecumenical and Migration committees.

For his leadership and spiritual shepherding of 340,000 Catholics in the 11 counties of the Diocese of Scranton, I would like to extend the gratitude and recognition of the United States Senate to Bishop James Timlin.

IN MEMORY OF ROSE ANN VUICH

- Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I rise today to recognize the passing of Rose Ann Vuich, an extraordinary public servant and Californian who died on August 30th at the age of 74, after a long battle with Alzheimer’s.

Rose Ann Vuich was California’s first woman State senator, serving in the California State Senate for 16 years until her retirement in 1992. With the election of Senator Vuich in 1976, she became an icon in California’s political history and helped to write a new era in the history of the California State Senate.

Rose Ann Vuich set a high level of integrity and decency. To this day, there is a Rose Ann Vuich award recognizing other great public servants who meet her high standards. She was a woman of great determination and dedication, who worked tirelessly for her constituents and was loved and respected by so many.

Rose Ann Vuich was the daughter of Yugoslavian immigrants and was from the small farming community of Dinuba in Tulare County, California. Senator Vuich was dedicated to agriculture, family, community and promoting the San Joaquin Valley. She will be greatly missed by all.

On behalf of the Senate, I extend our thoughts and prayers to the Vuich Family on the loss of an extraordinary woman. I ask that the Fresno Bee Editorial from August 31, 2001 be printed in the RECORD.

(From the Fresno Bee, Aug. 31, 2001)

ROSE ANN VUICH—VALLEY LAWMAKER LEFT ENDURING LEGACY OF ETHICAL, HONEST BEHAVIOR

At a time when there’s so much cynicism about government, Rose Ann Vuich reminded us that public service is noble. Sen. Vuich, who died Thursday, was California’s first woman state senator, but her mark in Sacramento was made with her integrity and a commitment to her Valley constituents.

A Democrat from Dinuba, Sen. Vuich represented the region for 16 years until retiring in 1992. She served at a time when the Legislature was controlled by special interests and laws limiting gifts from lobbyists were not as strict as they are today. Many legislators had their hands out, and the special interests were only too happy to grease them. But they could not get to Sen. Vuich, although they tried. Sen. Vuich, a woman of integrity, earned a reputation for voting her conscience and, didn’t look kindly on so-called “juice bills,” which were bills that had no value other than attracting campaign contributions for lawmakers. In Sacramento, FBI agents played a tape that had a witness saying a bill shouldn’t go to the Banking and Commerce Committee, which Sen. Vuich chaired, because she didn’t “play ball.”

In 1998, an award for ethical leadership was established in Sen. Vuich’s name. The aim was to raise the ethical bar in the region, which was sorely needed after the many indictments in the local Operation Rezone case.

Sen. Vuich also was a role model for women in government. It was difficult being California’s first woman state senator, but she broke into that men’s club with humor and dignity. She kept a bell on her desk in the Senate chamber, and when her male colleagues referred to the “gentlemen of the Senate” or “fellow senators,” she rang the bell loudly. The Senate soon became more sensitive to gender-biased language.

Sen. Vuich was instrumental in getting the local freeway system built and the centerpiece of her 1976 campaign was completing Freeway 41, which she called “the freeway to nowhere.” Sen. Vuich remains a role model for all of us. The lessons she taught us must endure.

IN MEMORY OF SARAH MAE SHOEMAKER CALHOON

- Mr. CARPER. Mr. President, I rise today to commemorate the passing of a wonderful woman, mother, and American. Sarah Mae Shoemaker Calhoon died on July 7, 2001 outside of Columbus, OH, (Hilliard), after a courageous battle with cancer. Mrs. Calhoon was 75 years old.

Mrs. Calhoon was born on August 31, 1926 in Philadelphia, PA to the late Samuel and Sarah Mae Shoemaker. She spent her childhood in Philadelphia, where she would graduate from Scheltenham High School. On August 29, 1947, just two days before her 22nd birthday, Sarah Mae Shoemaker was married to J. Thomas Calhoon, a Marine from Grandview Heights, a suburb of Columbus, OH.

The new Mr. and Mrs. Calhoon had their first child, Thomas F., or “little” Tom as they often called him early in their marriage. In September of 1948, Tom, Sarah, and “little” Tom moved to Columbus, OH, where, over the next four years they would become the proud parents of three more sons, Sam, Don, and Bob. Their only daughter, Sue, would be born more than three decades. Despite living so far from each other, Tom and I have managed to keep in touch over the years. It is often said that all children are a reflection of their parents. If Tom is even a faint reflection of his mother, it is a great tribute to the values she carried throughout her life and instilled in her children.

Since her recent passing, I have heard and read many wonderful things about Sarah Mae Calhoon. I have learned about her unswerving commitment to the community of Columbus, whether it be through her active membership in a variety of organizations like the PTA, 4-H, the Lions Auxiliary or in her unofficial role as the “zoning watchdog” of the Calhoon’s neighborhood on Old Cemetery Road. I have read about her great success as a multi-million dollar producer in the real estate industry. I have heard, from both former customers and competitors alike, about the dedication, loyalty, and integrity that she brought to her job every day.

Most importantly, however, I have learned about her unfailing commitment to being a mother and wife. Nothing was more precious to Sarah Calhoon than her family and she did all she could to ensure that all of her children grew up in a loving and nurturing environment that would enable them to go on to lead valuable and fulfilling lives. She consistently put the needs, concerns and feelings of her family and others, before her own wishes, never asking for much but always giving a great deal. Her life served as an example for everyone everywhere struggling to maintain the careful balance between career and family, a task that she carried out with admirable grace and skill.

Everything that I have learned about Sarah Mae Calhoon since her death has only confirmed what I had always pictured my good friend Tom’s mother, a wonderful wife, mother, business woman, and citizen.

In closing, I would like to extend my greatest condolences to her husband, their five children, seven grandchildren, and countless others whose lives were touched by this wonderful woman. As we celebrate her remarkable life, let it be known that Sarah Mae Calhoon will be dearly missed, yet never forgotten.

IN HONOR OF SHOSHONA GREENBAUM

• Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, a suicide bombing occurred in Jerusalem during the Congressional recess that claimed the life of a young American woman, Shoshona Greenbaum. Ms. Greenbaum, four months pregnant with her first child, is yet another tragic victim in the numbing string of suicide bomb attacks perpetrated by Palestinian extremists against innocent Israeli citizens.

Shoshona Greenbaum was one of 15 people killed on August 9th in a downtown Jerusalem pizzeria, after a Palestinian terrorist detonated a bomb stuffed with nails, screws and bolts that he had strapped to his body. She died instantly, along with Shifra Hayman, still four months pregnant with her first child, is yet another tragic victim in the numbing string of suicide bomb attacks perpetrated by Palestinian extremists against innocent Israeli citizens.

Since her recent passing, I have heard and read many wonderful things about Sarah Mae Calhoon. I have learned about her unswerving commitment to the community of Columbus, whether it be through her active membership in a variety of organizations like the PTA, 4-H, the Lions Auxiliary or in her unofficial role as the “zoning watchdog” of the Calhoon’s neighborhood on Old Cemetery Road. MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT Messages from the President of the United States were communicated to the Senate by Ms. Evans, one of his secretaries.

EXECUTIVE MESSAGES REFERRED

As in executive session the Presiding Officer laid before the Senate messages from the President of the United States submitting sundry nominations which were referred to the appropriate committees.

(The nominations received today are printed at the end of the Senate proceedings.)

MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

At 9:04 a.m., a message from the House of Representatives, delivered by Ms. Niland, one of its reading clerks, announced that the House has passed the following bills, in which it requests the concurrence of the Senate: H.R. 1900. An act to amend the Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Act of 1974 to provide quality prevention programs and accountability programs relating to juvenile delinquency, and for other purposes.

Statements on Introduced Bills and Joint Resolutions

By Mr. McConnell.

S. 1444. A bill to establish a Federal air marshals program under the Attorney General; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

Mr. McConnell. Madam President, two unmistakable American voices have emerged from the aftermath of September 11.

One voice expressed a newfound hesitancy to fly. Passengers have canceled scheduled flights en masse and I, for one, can hardly blame them. Just this week we heard chilly reports that more acts of terror may be planned in our skies, and, even after the tragic events of September 11, we continue to hear anecdotes of lax security at our Nation's airports. Almost overnight, air travel, a way of life for millions of Americans every day, is now limping along. Families who gather to celebrate holidays, businesspeople who depend upon air transport, and Americans who simply prefer the speed of airplanes, now all must deal with the awful reality of terrorism. The hard economic truth of September 11 is that it scared so many passengers from air travel that it threatened our multi-billion dollar aviation industry.

But a second, more inspiring, voice emerged from Americans after the acts of September 11, a visceral, instinctive urge to serve their country in some way after the attack on American soil. Minutes after Tuesday's tragedy, we saw real-life armies of compassion come to the aid of those whose lives were destroyed. We saw police and fire rescue units risk their lives to save their fellow citizens. We saw American families generously pour nearly $200 million of relief money to charitable organizations such as the Red Cross, the United Way, and the Salvation Army. And in memorial services and vigils all over the country, we saw real-life armies of compassion come to the aid of those whose lives were destroyed. We saw police and fire

What we need to do is harness this spirit in order to make our airlines safe again for American families. So, today, I am introducing legislation that authorizes the Attorney General to establish a comprehensive Federal Air Marshal program to secure airports from curbside to cockpit. And to capitalize on the desire of so many Americans to serve our country in the fight against terrorism, the legislation specifically authorizes the Attorney General to use active and retired Federal, State, and local law enforcement officers to serve in the Air Marshal program.

America needs a uniform Federal Air Marshal program to combat potential terrorism from the minute passengers arrive at an airport until the time they arrive safely at their intended destinations. As a professional law enforcement team to police airport points of entry, operate x-ray machines, and serve as undercover air security marshals on board commercial aircraft. While we have an existing FAA Federal Air Marshal program on board aircraft, we need to expand Federal aviation security to put Federal marshals on more flights and to stop terrorism on the ground before it can board an aircraft. For a comprehensive Air Marshal program to be most effective, we need to relieve the obligation of airport security from the FAA and the airlines, whose primary purpose is to facilitate and manage air travel, and entrust that obligation to the Department of Justice, whose primary mission is to enforce Federal law, and most important, to safeguard and protect us from terrorism.

Obviously this new Federal Air Marshal program will require additional manpower and financial resources. And that is why we intend to harness the spirit espoused by so many of our law enforcement personnel throughout the country. The new Federal Air Marshal program not only will recruit new full-time active professional marshals but will augment that program with Deputy Federal Air Marshals drawn from retired military personnel, anyone from a DEA agent to a local law enforcement officer who wants to serve his country by securing our airports and aircraft. It is also crucial that we retain a sufficient measure of cost-sharing with private and State and local entities. Private airlines and airport authorities should share a responsibility, as they do now, to help fund a portion of airport security.

The Attorney General will, of course, determine how to deploy the Deputy Air Marshals most effectively, and will ensure that proper training is performed to the task required of them, be it thwarting hijackers on board an aircraft or searching suspicious packages in the terminal. What is certain, however, is that tapping this reservoir of knowledgeable and experienced law enforcement officers to serve this vital national security function will allow us to put more Marshals both in the air and on the ground. Our goal should be to secure as many airports and as many aircraft as possible using the most experienced and professional staff available.

We already have models in place for the type of curbside to cockpit security envisioned in this bill. Our Federal courthouses currently are secured by our United States Marshals, who also employ Court Security Officers, CSOs, to provide security around the perimeter of the building, at each point of entry, and in the courtrooms themselves. These CSOs are themselves retired Federal, State, and local law enforcement personnel. Part of the reason our courthouses enjoy such security today is that this unified system provides for layers of security far before one enters the actual courtroom. Our democracy now demands, in the interest of our national security, that we make sure our cockpits are every bit as secure as our courthouses.

In times and events such as these, the Federal Government is not only the best answer, but the only answer. The challenge we face in securing our airports and airlines is not a matter of free market economics, it is a matter of national security, as the tragic events of September 11 made so horrifyingly clear. That is why it is imperative that we entrust this national security item with the resources, expertise, and experience of our Nation’s top law enforcement agency, and that we do so immediately.

I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1444
Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled.

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE. This Act may be cited as the “Federal Air Marshals and Safe Sky Act of 2001”.

SEC. 2. PROGRAM ESTABLISHED.

(a) In General.—Chapter 37 of title 28, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following:

"§ 570. Federal air marshals program

(1) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

(A) AIRCRAFT.—The term ‘aircraft’ has the meaning given that term in section 40102 of title 49.

(B) AIR TRANSPORTATION.—The term ‘air transportation’ has the meaning given that term in section 40102 of title 49.

(C) PROGRAM.—The term ‘program’ means the program established under subsection (d).

(D) UNITS OF LOCAL GOVERNMENT.—The term ‘units of local government’ includes an airport authority.

(E) RESPONSIBILITY FOR AIRPORT AND AIRCRAFT SAFETY.—This section shall govern the security at airports and on board commercial aircraft.

(F) FEDERAL AIR MARSHALS PROGRAM.—

(1) GOAL.—The goal of the program is to provide maximum security at airports and on board commercial aircraft by having the Federal Government be responsible for all phases of security for air passengers.

(2) ESTABLISHMENT.—The Attorney General shall establish a Federal Air Marshal program consisting of Federal Air Marshals, including the Federal Air Marshals participating in the Federal Air Marshal Program being administered by the Federal Aviation Administration before the effective date of this section, and Deputy Federal Air Marshals in order to provide maximum security at airports and on board commercial aircraft.

(b) ESTABLISHMENT.—Federal Air Marshals shall serve for the purpose of enforcing Federal laws that regulate security at airports and on board commercial aircraft, including laws relating to acts of terrorism, hijacking, or air piracy and laws relating to violent, abusive, or disruptive behavior by passengers in air transportation.

(c) DEPUTY FEDERAL AIR MARSHALS.—The Attorney General shall deputize individuals described in clause (ii) as Deputy Federal Air Marshals for the purpose of augmenting and assisting Federal Air Marshals.

(d) PERSONNEL.—The Attorney General shall utilize retired military personnel, retired Federal, State, and local law enforcement personnel, retirement personnel, and active-duty Federal, State, and local law enforcement personnel from other government departments and agencies as Deputy Federal Air Marshals.

(e) COMPENSATION.—The Attorney General may employ personnel described in clause (ii)—

(I) as volunteers;

(II) by paying a reasonable per diem;

(III) by employing a fee-for-service or contract arrangement; or

(IV) using any other method authorized by law.

(f) DUTY.—In establishing the program, the Attorney General shall consult with appropriate officials of—

(I) the United States Government (including the Administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration or his designated representative); and

(II) State and local governments in any geographic area in which the program may operate.

(g) CERTIFICATION, TRAINING AND EXAMINATION¬ OF AIR MARSHALS.—PRIOR APPROVAL OF EMPLOYER TO SERVE AS DEPUTY AIR MARSHAL.—

(a) IN GENERAL.—Under the program, the Attorney General shall provide appropriate training and supervision of all air marshals, as well as appropriate background and fitness examination of eligible candidates as part of their certification.

(b) EMPLOYER APPROVAL.—Active Federal, State, or local law enforcement officers who serve as Deputy Federal Air Marshals shall receive approval to participate in the program from their employer.

(c) POWERS AND STATUS OF FEDERAL AIR MARSHALS AND DEPUTY AIR MARSHALS.—

(b) IN GENERAL.—Subject to paragraph (2), Federal Air Marshals and Deputy Federal Air Marshals may arrest and apprehend an individual suspected of violating any Federal law relating to security at airports or on board aircraft, including any individual who... violates a provision subject to a civil penalty under section 46301, 46302, 46303, 46314, 46318, 46502, or 46507 of title 49, who violates a provision of title 49, or who violates a provision of title 49, or who violates a provision subject to a criminal penalty under sections 32 and 37 of title 18.

(2) LIMITATION.—The powers granted to a Deputy Federal Air Marshal shall be limited to enforcing Federal laws relating to security at airports or on board aircraft.

(3) STATUTORY CONSTRUCTION.—Nothing in this section may be construed to—

(1) grant any Federal Air Marshal or Deputy Federal Air Marshal the power to enforce any Federal law that is not described in subsection (d); or

(2) limit the authority that a Federal, State, or local law enforcement officer may otherwise exercise in the officer's capacity under any other applicable law.

(f) REGULATIONS.—The Attorney General shall promulgate such regulations as may be necessary to carry out this section.

(g) COST SHARING.—The costs of the program shall be paid by—

(1) the State or local government in which the State and units of local government were paying for airport security on the date before the effective date of this section; and

(2) State and units of local government in an amount not less than the amount (as adjusted for inflation after the effective date of this section) the airlines were paying for airport security on the date before the effective date of this section.

(h) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Subject to paragraph (2), there are authorized to be appropriated to the Federal Government—

(2) Limitation.—The Federal share of carrying out this section shall be limited to the cost of the program after payments by airlines and States and units of local government were paying for airport security on the date before the effective date of this section.

SEC. 3. REPEAL.

Section 46308 of title 49, United States Code, is repealed.

SEC. 4. EFFECTIVE DATE.

This Act and the amendments made by this Act shall take effect 90 days after the date of enactment of this Act.

By Mr. ENZI (for himself, Mr. DORGAN, Mr. Frist, and Mr. Rockefeller):

S. 1449: A bill to amend the Higher Education Act of 1965 to expand the opportunities of higher education via telecommunication; to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions.

Mr. ENZI. Mr. President, I am pleased to have this opportunity to introduce the Internet Equity and Education Act of 2001 in the Senate. This important legislation, which is based on the bipartisan Web-Based Education Commission on which I served, will accomplish the critical goal of giving more students in both rural and urban areas access to distance education by expanding Internet-based educational opportunities at the post-secondary level.

Specifically, this legislation, which is co-sponsored by Senators DORGAN, Frist and HUTCHINSON, will remove three regulatory barriers that are slowing the growth of distance education in our nation. First, it will modify the Department of Education's "50 percent rule" that requires institutions that are eligible for Title IV student aid programs under the Higher Education Act to offer at least 50 percent of their instruction in a classroom-based environment instead of allowing institutions to offer more than 50 percent of their classes by telecommunications methods if the institution already participates in the student loan programs and their student loan default rate is less than 10 percent for the three preceding years. This ensures that distance education options are available to schools with a proven track record of successfully administering federal financial aid programs.

Second, it will eliminate the "12 hour rule." This rule defines a week of instructional time to mean 12 hours of "regularly scheduled instruction, examinations, or preparation for examination" for programs that are offered in non-standard terms. This legislation will instead require that programs offered on a non-standard term, as such those offered by the University of Wyoming and the Western Governors University, be held to the same accountability standards as those offered on a traditional semester or quarter basis.

Third, this legislation will clarify the incentive compensation restrictions that were passed by Congress in 1992 with the intent of prohibiting colleges and universities that participate in federal student financial aid programs from paying any commission, bonus, or other incentive payments to third parties based on their success in enrolling new students. These restrictions, while well intentioned, have had the unintended consequence of preventing some higher education institutions from using third-party Web portals. This practice, which is fairly common and often necessary for many distance education and Internet based education programs, provides prospective students with access to information about the programs they offer and admissions requirements. This legislation clarifies the incentive compensation prohibitions in the Higher Education Act by allowing the development of third-party Web portals and allowing schools to appropriately reward employees for their job performance. The bill preserves the intent of the 1992 law by stating that non-salary payments to those directly involved in student recruitment or awarding financial aid are not allowed. It will also allow the Secretary of Education to impose appropriate sanctions against an institution if a violation occurs. This change to the regulation will increase the growth of distance education in our nation.

In closing, I would like to take this opportunity to extend my thanks to the Chairwoman Mr. ISAKSON and his staff. As the Vice Chair of the Committee, Mr. CONGRESSMAN JOHNNIE ISAKSON and his staff, and Mr. MIKULSKI, Mr. BAYH, Mr. ROCKEFELLER; Mr. REID, Mr. DURBIN, Mr. NELSON of Florida, and Mr. DURBIN.

S. 1448: A bill to enhance intelligence and intelligence-related activities of the United States Government in the prevention of terrorism, and for other purposes; to the Select Committee on Intelligence.
Mr. GRAHAM. Madam President, it has now been 10 days since our Nation was struck by a well-coordinated series of terrorist attacks. It has been 10 days since we all witnessed the horrific crash of hijacked airliners crashing into the World Trade Center and the Pentagon. It has 10 days since we vowed to track down and bring to justice those who assisted, financed, and harbored these terrorists and to treat them as terrorists.

Today, as the investigation proceeds, I believe it is time we begin to look beyond the crisis of September 11. It is time we begin to develop a long-term response to the continued threat of terrorism. Terrorism ultimately is not a crisis. It is a cancerous condition, a condition that all Americans must come to grips with as we strive to return to normalcy.

Today, with several of my colleagues, I am introducing a pair of bills that offer a prescription for the condition of terrorism.

The first bill will make changes to a number of laws, including the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act of 1978, to enhance our ability to infiltrate terrorist cells, to collect information necessary to guarantee America's security, and to coordinate more effectively our domestic efforts against terrorism.

There are four primary goals of this legislation. The first relates to data collection to assure that our foreign intelligence should be brought into line with the laws that control domestic law enforcement actions. In a number of areas, we have different standards if we are collecting information for domestic law enforcement than when we are collecting analogous information for purposes of foreign intelligence.

Second, many regulations have not kept pace with the rapid changes we have seen, particularly in communication technology, and need to be updated.

Third, as we saw on September 11, most terrorist acts have both a criminal and an intelligence component. Our foreign intelligence and domestic law enforcement agencies need to be able to share information in order to protect our citizens.

Fourth, there are some strategic changes we need to make in the laws, such as better training of our local law enforcement so that they can play their appropriate role in responding to terrorism before the act to prevent terrorist acts is submitted to the President, for the creation of a position of homeland defense within the White House. He has assigned that responsibility to the current Governor of Pennsylvania, Tom Ridge.

I believe we should build on what the President has recommended by going a step further and making this position a statutory position.

Mr. ROCKEFELLER. Madam President, it is not with pride exactly, but with a firm resolve that I join with my good friend and colleague Senator Bob Graham, the chairman of the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence, in cosponsoring two important pieces of legislation: Bills to establish the National Office for Combating Terrorism and the Intelligence to Prevent Terrorism Act of 2001.

While we strive to go on and do the work that the people sent us here to do, we cannot help but feel heartsick as we do, as our Nation, and we look forward to fully reviewing those recommendations that have been made within the last 72 hours by the Attorney General.

I also want to make it clear that I am mindful of the concerns we are beginning to hear from various organizations that we might overreact and impose upon the civil liberties of our people. We would hand the ultimate victory to the terrorists if we were to allow them to coerce our great Nation into compromising our highest values, personal freedom, and civil rights.

Madam President, in many ways we are here today much as the country was in the 1920s. It was at that time that America launched a national crusade against organized crime. The Nation committed itself to rooting out the corrupt captains of crime who had infiltrated labor unions, run gambling operations, trafficked in illegal drugs and, in the process, accumulated great wealth and, in many communities, great political influence.

We can take pride that over several decades an earlier generation of Americans leaders managed to put many of these domestic enemies behind bars and diminish their influence and their corrosive effect on our society.

I take this experience of the 20th century, our ability to begin to roll back the influence of organized crime in the United States, as a hopeful sign, a sign that we can pass on to our children and our grandchildren a world that has greatly diminished the threat we now face from terrorists. It is our hope that these two legislative proposals will be a step in that direction.

Under our proposal, the President will appoint the Director of the National Office for Combating Terrorism subject to Senate confirmation. This individual will be accountable to the President, to the Congress, and to the Nation.

One of the key responsibilities of this new office would be budget coordination to assure that all of the agencies and there are now as many as 40 agencies that have some piece of antiterrorism activity—are operating from a coordinated plan and that resources to carry out their portions of the plan are properly coordinated. To do that will require the statutory authority from Congress.

Madam President, the second bill has as its objective to assure that the dozens of Federal agencies that have counterterrorism as one of their missions are working together in a coordinated way to detect and disarm terrorism.

There have been over the past several years several independent commissions which have reviewed the issue of terrorism. Two of our former colleagues, Senators Rudman and Hart, have headed one of those commissions. All of those commissions have endorsed the principle of a stronger central coordination of the Federal Government's efforts against terrorism.

Just this past week, the General Accounting Office issued yet another study of this issue. I quote a portion of that General Accounting Office study:

Key interagency functions are resident in several different organizations, resulting in fragmented leadership and coordination. These circumstances hinder unity of effort and limit accountability. However, the current attention being focused on this issue provides an opportunity to improve the overall leadership and coordination of programs to combat terrorism.

In other words, we need to assign responsibility to someone who will be the leader of our national effort to make certain that all of the agencies are on the field, from the Central Intelligence Agency to the FBI, and are following a common set of objectives. I am pleased that President Bush endorsed this approach in his address to the Nation.

The President called, by Executive order, for the creation of a position of homeland defense within the White House. He has assigned that responsibility to the current Governor of Pennsylvania, Tom Ridge.

When a relatively large group of foreign terrorists who had lived and even trained in this country carried out a despicable and unfortunately wellchoreographed wave of terror attacks months or years in the planning, it cast a harsh light on a range of deficiencies in our Nation’s efforts to combat terrorism. We are made to feel vulnerable by the sheer enormity of the evil and by the realization that any of us could become targets of the next fateful assault. Our dread might even turn to despondency if we consider the agonizing possibility that our law enforcement and intelligence establishment might have been able to prevent the horror of last Tuesday if they had had adequate mechanisms with which to collaborate on strategy, share information, and assist in investigation and apprehension of men capable of these heinous crimes.

Rather than feeling despondent, however, it is our duty as a Congress to act. This Nation and this Congress can no longer tolerate a situation in which competing missions of agencies— or competing personalities of public officials—put our citizens and our property at risk. We must create an environment of coordination between the intelligence community, our Federal, State, and local law enforcement agencies, the military, public health authorities, and all the other parties who can play a role in combating terrorism. I believe these two pieces of legislation, which establish a centralized authority for intelligence gathering needs of this nation, will have been able to prevent the horror of last Tuesday if they had had adequate mechanisms with which to collaborate on strategy, share information, and assist in investigation and apprehension of men capable of these heinous crimes.

Briefly, the bills introduced today in the Senate would do the following:

Establish a “National Office for Combating Terrorism” to provide a greater level of coordination among the Nation’s law enforcement establishment, the intelligence community, the military, public health authorities, and State and local governments to create a coherent, functional strategy for combating terrorism out of a current system blue-ribbon Presidential Commission has called fragmented, uncoordinated, and politically unaccountable.

Ensure that terrorism-related intelligence gathered under the Foreign Intelligence Surveillance Act—FISA—is used to further the overall antiterrorism strategy. The legislation clarifies that the Director of Central Intelligence—DCI—is the primary government official responsible for coordination and dissemination of intelligence gathered under, while retaining the FBI as the agency with operational authority for intelligence gathering from foreign nationals.

Require law enforcement agencies to share with the DCI any terrorism-related intelligence information gathered in criminal investigations.

Mandate cooperation between the DCI and the Treasury Department to root out and cut off the international money trail terrorists use to finance their activities.

Develop training programs for State and local law enforcement agencies and public officials to help them detect terrorist activity, and to improve their understanding and use of intelligence shared with them.

Establish a National Virtual Translation Center to enable intelligence information collected anywhere in the world to be transmitted over secure electronic lines, translated and analyzed by experts elsewhere, and shared with relevant law enforcement and government personnel throughout this country, as well as by policymakers in Washington and intelligence agents overseas.

Make explicit that U.S. Government officers, acting in their official capacity, may recruit any person who has information about terrorist, terrorist groups, or those who assist or harbor them—including foreign governments.

The reactions to last week’s attacks have ranged from shock, to horror, to sadness, to rage, and now, as I said at the beginning of my remarks, to resolve. Just over a week after the worst act of terrorism, indeed, the worst crime, in the history of the country, we are united as a people behind our President, our armed forces, and our law enforcement agencies, resolved to root out and defeat terrorism wherever this particular breed of hatred is fostered. Part of that resolve may be seen in the package of legislation introduced here today, although it would be incorrect to characterize this legislation as a reaction to the nightmare of September 11. These bills are the product of a longstanding concern about a lack of coordination between our law enforcement and intelligence resources and agencies, and the Athletics of hard work on the part of Chairman GRAHAM, several other members of our committee, and Intelligence Committee staff. I believe these bills represent good first steps.

I have not had the privilege of being a member of the Intelligence Committee for very long, but from the very first day I have been enormously impressed with the careful balance the committee strikes between the intelligence-gathering needs of this nation and the civil liberties enjoyed by its citizens. However, in this time of heightened tension and increased security, I must admit that I share some of the concerns of many Americans, from across the political spectrum, who fear that well-meaning reforms may unduly infringe on the liberties we cherish.

While I am confident that in crafting this legislation Senator GRAHAM has taken those concerns very much to heart, I have no doubt that this great country, as well as the rights of law-abiding Americans, I will closely monitor the progress of this legislation. I cannot overestimate the importance of ensuring that in our zeal to prevent another terrorist assault on this Nation we do not contribute to an atmosphere of fear and mistrust of our fellow citizens.

I will also be looking for an understanding of these concerns from our colleagues on the various committees of referral, and in the Senate as a whole. We must commit ourselves and our fellow citizens.

By Mr. DASCHLE (for himself and Mr. LOTTY):

S. 1450. A bill to preserve the continued viability of the United States air transportation system; considered and passed.

Mr. DASCHLE. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

If, there being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1450

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, SECTION I. SHORT TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the “Air Transportation Safety and System Stabilization Act.”

TITLE I—AIRLINE STABILIZATION

SEC. 101. AVIATION DISASTER RELIEF.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the President shall take the following actions to compensate air carriers for losses incurred by the air carriers as a result of the terrorist attacks on the United States that occurred on September 11, 2001:

(1) Subject to such terms and conditions as the President deems necessary, issue Federal credit instruments to air carriers that do not, in the aggregate, exceed $10,000,000,000 and provide the subsidy amounts necessary for such instruments in accordance with the provisions of the Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990 (2 U.S.C. 661 et seq.).

(2) Compensate air carriers in an aggregate amount equal to $5,000,000,000 for—

(A) direct losses incurred beginning on September 11, 2001, by air carriers as a result of any Federal ground stop order issued by the Secretary of Transportation or any subsequent order which continues or renews such a stoppage; and

(B) incremental losses incurred beginning September 11, 2001, and ending December 31, 2001, by air carriers as a direct result of such attacks.

of 1985 (2 U.S.C. 901(e)). Such amount shall be available only to the extent that a request, that includes such element of prudence established as an emergency requirement as defined in such Act, is transmitted by the President to Congress.

SEC. 102. AIR TRANSPORTATION STABILIZATION BOARD.

(a) DEFINITIONS.—In this section, the following definitions apply:

(1) Board.—The term “Board” means the Air Transportation Stabilization Board established under subsection (b).

(2) FINANCIAL OBLIGATION.—The term “financial obligation” means any note, bond, debenture, or other debt obligation issued by an obligor in connection with financing under this section and section 101(a)(1).

(3) LENDER.—The term “lender” means any non-Federal qualified institutional buyer (as defined by section 230.14A(a) of title 17, Code of Federal Regulations (or any successor regulation) known as Rule 144A(a) of the Securities and Exchange Commission) and issued under the Security Act of 1933, including—

(A) a qualified retirement plan (as defined in section 401 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (26 U.S.C. 401(c)) that is a qualified institutional buyer; and
(B) a governmental plan (as defined in section 414(d) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (26 U.S.C. 414(d)) that is a qualified institutional buyer.

(4) OBLIGOR.—The term “obligor” means a party primarily liable for payment of the principal of or interest on a Federal credit instrument, which party may be a corporation, partnership, joint venture, trust, or governmental entity, agency, or instrumentality.

(b) AIR TRANSPORTATION STABILIZATION BOARD.

(1) ESTABLISHMENT.—There is established a board (to be known as the “Air Transportation Stabilization Board”) to review and decide on applications for Federal credit instruments, and in such cases as is practicable, the Board shall ensure, to the maximum extent practicable, the product of—

(A) the amount of such air carrier’s direct and incremental losses described in section 101(a)(2); or
(B) the ratio of—

(i) $500,000,000; and
(ii) the average daily seat miles of all such air carriers for such month as reported to the Secretary.

(c) FEDERAL CREDIT INSTRUMENTS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Board may enter into agreements with 1 or more obligors to issue Federal credit instruments under section 101(a)(1) if the Board determines, in its discretion, that—

(A) the obligor is an air carrier for which credit is not reasonably available at the time of the transaction;
(B) the intended obligation by the obligor is prudent incurred; and
(C) such agreement is a necessary part of maintaining a safe, efficient, and viable commercial aviation system in the United States.

(2) TERMS AND LIMITATIONS.—

(A) FORMS; TERMS AND CONDITIONS.—A Federal credit instrument shall be issued under section 101(a)(1) in such form and on such terms and conditions and contain such covenants, representatives, warranties, and requirements (including requirements for audits) as the Board determines appropriate.

(B) PROCEDURES.—Not later than 14 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Director of the Office of Management and Budget shall issue regulations setting forth procedures for application and minimum requirements, which may be supplemented by the Board in the case of the issuance of Federal credit instruments under section 101(a)(1).

(d) FINANCIAL PROTECTION OF GOVERNMENT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—To the extent feasible and practicable, the Board shall ensure that the Government is compensated for the risk assumed in making guarantees under this title.

(2) GOVERNMENT PARTICIPATION IN GAINS.—To the extent to which any participating corporation accepts financial assistance, in the form of accepting the proceeds of any loans guaranteed by the Government under this title, the Board is authorized to enter into contracts under which the Government, contingent on the financial success of the participating corporation, would participate in the gains of the participating corporation or its security holders through the use of such instruments as warrants, stock options, common or preferred stock, or other appropriate equity instruments.

(3) DEPOSIT IN TREASURY.—All amounts collected by the Board under this section and section 101(a)(1) to an air carrier after the date of enactment of this Act shall be deposited in the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts.

SEC. 103. SPECIAL RULES FOR COMPENSATION.

(a) DOCUMENTS SUBJECT TO SUBSECTION (b), the amount of compensation payable to an air carrier under section 101(a)(2) may not exceed the amount of losses described in section 101(a)(2); or
(b) the ratio of—

(i) $500,000,000; and
(ii) the average daily seat miles of all such air carriers for such month as reported to the Secretary.

(c) PROCEEDS.—In this title, the following definitions apply:

(1) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Secretary is authorized to require an air carrier receiving direct financial assistance under this Act to submit a report to the Secretary of Transportation which demonstrates, at the option of the Secretary, that all communities that had scheduled air service before September 11, 2001, continue to receive adequate air transportation service and that essential air service to small communities continues without interruption.

(2) ESSENTIAL AIR SERVICE.—There is authorized to be appropriated to the Secretary to carry out the essential air service program under subchapter II of chapter 417 of title 49, United States Code, $120,000,000 for fiscal year 2002.

(d) REPORT.—Not later than February 1, 2001, the President shall submit to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure, the Committee on Appropriations, and the Committee on the Budget of the Senate a report on the financial status of the air carrier industry and the amounts provided under this title to each air carrier.

(e) UPDATE.—Not later than the last day of the 7-month period following the date of enactment of this Act, the President shall update and transmit the report to the Committees.
CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE
September 21, 2001

AIR CARRIER.—The term “air carrier” has the meaning such term has under section 40102 of title 49, United States Code.

(2) FEDERAL CREDIT INSTRUMENT.—The term “Federal credit instrument” means any guarantee or other pledge by the Board issued under section 159a(a)(1) to pledge the full faith and credit of the United States to pay all or part of any of the principal of and interest on a loan or other debt obligation issued by a lender.

(3) INCREMENTAL LOSS.—The term “incremental loss” does not include any loss that the President determines would have been incurred if the terrorist attacks on the United States that occurred on September 11, 2001, had not occurred.

TITLE II—AVIATION INSURANCE

SEC. 201. DOMESTIC INSURANCE AND REIMBURSEMENT OF INSURANCE COSTS.

(a) In General.—Section 44302 of title 49, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subsection (a)(1)—

(A) by striking “subsection (b)” and inserting “subsection (d)”;

(B) by striking “foreign-flag aircraft” and all that follows through the end of subparagraph (B) and inserting “foreign-flag aircraft’’;

(2) by redesigning subsections (b), (c), and (d) as subsections (c), (d), and (e), respectively;

(b) Reimbursement of Insurance Cost Incrass.—

(1) in General.—The Secretary may reimburse an air carrier for the increase in the cost of insurance, with respect to a premium for coverage ending before October 1, 2002, against loss or damage arising out of any risk from the operation of an American aircraft over the insurance premium that was in effect for a comparable operation during the period beginning September 4, 2001, and ending September 10, 2001, as the Secretary may determine. Such reimbursement is subject to subsections (a)(2), (c), and (d) of this section and to section 44303.

(2) Extension of Revolving Fund.—A reimbursement under subsection (a) shall be paid from the revolving fund established by section 44302.

(3) Further Conditions.—The Secretary may impose such further conditions on insurance for which the increase in premium is subject to reimbursement under subsection (b) as the Secretary may deem appropriate in the interest of air commerce.

(4) Termination of Authority.—The authority to reimburse air carriers under this subsection shall expire 180 days after the date of enactment of this paragraph.

(5) in subsection (b) (as so redesignated)—

(A) in the first sentence by inserting “, or reimbursing an air carrier under subsection (b) of this section,” before “only with the approval”;

(B) in the second sentence—

(i) by inserting “or the reimbursement” before “only after deciding”;

(ii) by inserting “in the interest of air commerce and security” before “to carry out the foreign policy”; and

(6) in subsection (d) (as so redesignated) by inserting “or reimbursing an air carrier” before “for purposes of this chapter”.

(c) DISCRETION OF THE SECRETARY.—For acts of terrorism committed on or to an air carrier during the 180-day period following the date of enactment of this title, the Secretary of Transportation may certify that the air carrier was a victim of an act of terrorism and in the Secretary’s judgment, circumstances of each case, shall not be responsible for losses suffered by third parties as referred to in section 205.5(b)(1) of title 49, Code of Federal Regulations that exceed $100,000,000, in the aggregate, for all claims by such parties arising out of such act. If the Secretary so certifies, the air carrier shall not be liable for an amount that exceeds $100,000,000, in the aggregate, for all claims by such parties arising out of such act, and the Government shall be responsible for any liability above such amount. No punitive damages may be awarded against an air carrier (or the Government taking responsibility for such carrier pursuant to paragraph (a)) on a cause of action arising out of such act.

(d) Reimbursement.—Section 44304 of such Act is amended—

(1) by striking “(a) GENERAL AUTHORITY”;

(2) by striking subsection (b).

(3) PREMIUMS.—Section 44306 of such title is amended—

(1) by redesigning subsections (b) and (c) as subsections (c) and (d), respectively; and

(2) by inserting after subsection (a) the following:

“(b) Allowances in Setting Premium Rates.—In setting premium rates for reimbursement, the Secretary may make allowances to the insurance carrier for expenses incurred in providing services and facilities that the Secretary considers good business practices, except for payments by the air carrier for the stimulation or solicitation of insurance business.’’.

(e) Collateral Source.—Section 44305(b) of such title is amended by striking “44302(b)” and inserting “44302(c)”.

SEC. 202. EXTENSION OF PROVISIONS TO VENUE BUCKS, AGENTS, AND SUBCONTRACTORS OF AIR CARRIERS.

Notwithstanding any other provision of this title, the Secretary may extend any provision of this title to any eligible carrier under section 404(a) of title 49, United States Code, as amended by this title, and the provisions of this title to vendors, agents, and subcontractors of air carriers. For the 180-day period beginning on the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary may extend or amend any such provisions so as to ensure that the entities referred to in the preceding sentence are reimbursed in cases of acts of terrorism for losses suffered by third parties that exceed the amount of such entities’ liability coverage, as determined by the Special Master appointed under section 33 of such Act.

TITLE III—TAX PROVISIONS

SEC. 301. EXTENSION OF DUE DATE FOR EXCISE TAX DEPOSITS, TREATMENT OF LOSS COMPENSATION.

(a) Extension of Due Date for Excise Tax Deposits.—

(1) In General.—In the case of an eligible air carrier, any excise tax deposited required under section 40102 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to be made after September 10, 2001, and before November 15, 2001, shall be treated for purposes of such code as timely made if such deposit is made on or before November 15, 2001. If the Secretary of the United States determines that such deposit was not made timely, the preceding sentence shall be applied by substituting for the date November 15, 2001—

(A) “January 15, 2002”, or

(B) such earlier date after November 15, 2001, as such Secretary may prescribe.

(2) Special Master.—For purposes of this subsection, the term “Special Master” means the Special Master appointed under section 404(a).

(3) PURPOSE.—It is the purpose of this title to provide compensation to any individual (or relatives at the end of subparagraph (B) and inserting “subsection (c)”;

(4) INCREMENTAL LOSS.—The term “incremental loss” does not include any loss that the President determines would have been incurred if the terrorist attacks on the United States that occurred on September 11, 2001, had not occurred.

(5) TREATMENT OF LOSS COMPENSATION.—Nothing in any provision of law shall be construed to exclude from gross income under the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 any compensation received under section 101(a)(2) of this Act.

TITLE IV—VICTIM COMPENSATION

(b) SUBSTANTIVE LAW.—The substantive law for decision in any such suit shall be derived from the law, including choice of law principles, of the State in which the crash occurred unless such law is inconsistent with or preempted by Federal law.

SEC. 408. LIMITATION ON AIR CARRIER LIABILITY.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, liability for all claims, whether for compensatory or punitive damages, arising from the terrorist-related aircraft crashes of September 11, 2001, against any air carrier shall not be in an amount greater than the limits of the liability coverage maintained by the air carrier.

(b) SUBSTANTIVE LAW.—The substantive law for decision in any such suit shall be derived from the law, including choice of law principles, of the State in which the crash occurred unless such law is inconsistent with or preempted by Federal law.

(3) JURISDICTION.—The United States District Court for the Southern District of New York shall have original and exclusive jurisdiction over all actions brought for any claim (including any claim for loss of property, personal injury, or death) resulting from or relating to the terrorist-related aircraft crashes of September 11, 2001.

(c) EXCLUSION.—Nothing in this section shall in any way limit any liability of any person who is a knowing participant in any conspiracy to hijack any aircraft or commit any terrorist act.
SEC. 409. RIGHT OF SUBROGATION. The United States shall have the right of subrogation with respect to any claim paid by the United States under this title.

TITLE V—AIR TRANSPORTATION SAFETY

SEC. 501. INCREASED AIR TRANSPORTATION SAFETY. Congress finds that—
(A) the United States has experienced such rapid growth in the last few years that traditional locations for target shooting are now too close to populated areas for safety; (B) it is necessary to designate a central location in the Las Vegas area where target shooters can practice safely; and (C) a central facility is also needed for persons training in firearms, such as law enforcement and security personnel.

SECTION 1. CONVEYANCE OF PROPERTY TO CLARK COUNTY, NEVADA.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress finds that—
(1) the Las Vegas Valley has experienced such rapid growth in the last few years that traditional locations for target shooting are now too close to populated areas for safety; (2) it is necessary to designate a central location in the Las Vegas area where target shooters can practice safely; and (3) a central facility is also needed for persons training in firearms, such as local law enforcement and security personnel.

(b) PURPOSES.—The purposes of this Act are—
(1) to provide a suitable location for the establishment of a centralized shooting facility in the Las Vegas area; and
(2) to provide the public with—
(A) opportunities for education and recreation; and
(B) a location for competitive events and marksmanship training.

(c) CONVEYANCE.—As soon as practicable after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary of the Interior shall convey to Clark County, Nevada, subject to valid existing rights, for no consideration, all right, title, and interest of the United States in and to the parcels of land described in subsection (d).

(d) LAND DESCRIPTIONS.—The parcels of land to be conveyed under subsection (c) are—
(1) Approximately 320 acres of land in Clark County, Nevada, in S\(^2\), sec. 25, T. 18 S., R. 60 E., Mount Diablo Base and Meridian.
(2) Approximately 320 acres of land in Clark County, Nevada, in S\(^2\), sec. 26, T. 18 S., R. 60 E., Mount Diablo Base and Meridian.
(3) Approximately 320 acres of land in Clark County, Nevada, in S\(^2\), sec. 27, T. 18 S., R. 60 E., Mount Diablo Base and Meridian.
(4) Approximately 640 acres of land in Clark County, Nevada, in S\(^2\), sec. 26, T. 18 S., R. 60 E., Mount Diablo Base and Meridian.
(5) Approximately 640 acres of land in Clark County, Nevada, in S\(^2\), sec. 27, T. 18 S., R. 60 E., Mount Diablo Base and Meridian.
(6) Approximately 640 acres of land in Clark County, Nevada, in S\(^2\), sec. 28, T. 18 S., R. 60 E., Mount Diablo Base and Meridian.

(e) USE OF LAND.—
(1) IN GENERAL.—The parcels of land conveyed under subsection (c) shall be used by Clark County for the purposes described in subsection (b) only; and
(B) shall not be disposed of by the county.

(2) REVERSION.—If Clark County ceases to use any parcel for the purposes described in subsection (b), title to the parcel shall revert to the United States, at the option of the United States.

TITLES VI—SEPARABILITY

SEC. 601. SEPARABILITY. If any provision of this Act (including any amendment made by this Act) or the application thereof to any person or circumstance is held invalid, the remainder of this Act (including any amendment made by this Act) and the application thereof to other persons or circumstances shall not be affected thereby.

By Mr. REID (for himself and Mr. ENYNg):
S. 1451. A bill to provide for the conveyance of certain public land in Clark County, Nevada, for use as a shooting range; to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources.

Mr. REID, Madam President, I rise today for myself and for Senator ENYNg to introduce the Clark County Public Shooting Range Conveyance Act.

Clark County and the Las Vegas Valley have experienced tremendous population growth over the past decade from about 770,000 in 1990 to over 1.4 million people today. This growth has had a tremendous impact on the use of public lands, including traditional recreational activities such as hunting, fishing and target shooting. There are literally dozens, if not hundreds, of makeshift shooting ranges across Las Vegas Valley which pose extreme danger to nearby homes and increasingly busy roads.

My bill provides the foundation for the establishment of a world-class shooting range, sports park and firearms training facility by conveying 2,880 acres of public land to Clark County. This facility will be used by residents and visitors to the Las Vegas Valley for recreation, education, competitive and marksmanship events, and training related to firearms. Firearms training facilities owned and operated by the Metropolitan Police Department and the North Las Vegas Police Department are also being encroached upon by residential and commercial development. Special facilities will be provided at the Clark County facility to accommodate law enforcement training for firearms qualification and certification.

This facility will provide a great public benefit by creating a safe central-issuance or denial of visas or immigration benefits, and so that its confidentiality will be maintained to protect the privacy rights of those who are the subjects of the investigation.

These steps are needed now. We must also examine other ideas to improve safety at the Nation’s borders and strengthen our overall ability as much as possible to prevent future terrorist attacks.

I urge all of my colleagues to support this important legislation.

By Ms. SNOWE (for herself and Mr. STEVENS):

S. 1455. A bill to amend title 49, United States Code, to regulate the training of aliens to operate jet-propelled aircraft, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

Ms. SNOWE. Madam President, I am sure I am not alone in finding that one of the more disturbing revelations of the investigation into the September 11 terrorist attack on the World Trade Center and Pentagon is that over half of the hijackers received flight instruction at American facilities. Investigators have named ten separate flying schools across the United States, from California to Oklahoma to Florida, where the hijacking may have been engaged in flight training in one form or another. In addition, it is believed that one of these suspects was able to gain legal entry into the United States through the assistance of a flight school that provided immigration documentation.

I know that this ironic turn of events, the schools dedicated to the safety of the airline industry were unwittingly utilized to facilitate the worst airline disaster in history, has school administrators and instructors asking themselves, “What if . . .” as they look in the mirror every morning.

We need to take action now to remove the doubts of the instructors as well as restore confidence in student pilots engaged in valid training. That is why I am introducing legislation to require thorough background checks on foreign nationals seeking advanced flight or jet aircraft training in American flight schools.

At present the Federal Aviation Administration FAA regulates course content at these schools and does it well, the U.S. has the best training program in the world and pilot certification from the FAA is considered the industry “gold standard.” That is why a large number of foreign students are attracted to American schools. And we want to continue to encourage foreign participation at our schools, it assures aviation safety world wide.

However, the FAA does not regulate who can participate in pilot training, be it glider plane basics or 737 advanced training. More specifically, the requirement for foreign students is limited to demonstrated English proficiency and proper immigration documentation.

Given the events of September 11, it is imperative that the screening process for pilot trainees be improved. As such, the legislation I am introducing today mandates the completion of security checks before foreign nationals may commence advanced jet training. Specifically, by requiring that the Attorney General carry out background investigations on individuals seeking such training, the legislation ensures a comprehensive review against records held by such agencies as the FBI, INS, and DEA will be carried out prior to starting training on any simulator or jet powered aircraft. Also, given the recent tragedies in New York, Washington DC, and Pennsylvania, all foreign nationals currently in training would be required to stop until a satisfactory background check is completed.

I want to urge my colleagues to join me in taking this small but critical step to prevent a repeat of unintentionally training those who would terrorize our cities and skies and ask for their support in increasing security requirements for flight training.

STATMENTS ON SUBMITTED RESOLUTIONS

SENATE RESOLUTION 162—PROVIDING FOR MEMBERS ON THE PART OF THE SENATE OF THE JOINT COMMITTEE ON PRINTING AND THE JOINT COMMITTEE OF CONGRESS ON THE LIBRARY

Mr. DODD (for himself and Mr. McCONNELL) submitted the following resolution; which was considered and agreed to:

S. Res. 162

Resolved, That the following named Members be, and they are hereby, elected members of the following joint committees of Congress:

JOINT COMMITTEE ON PRINTING: Mr. Dayton, Mrs. Feinstein, Mr. Inouye, Mr. Cochran, and Mr. Santorum.

JOINT COMMITTEE OF CONGRESS ON THE LIBRARY: Mr. Dodd, Mr. Schumer, Mr. Dayton, Mr. Stevens, and Mr. Cochran.

Ms. LANDRIEU (for herself, Mrs. MURRAY, Ms. COLLINS, Ms. SNOWE, Mrs. CARNAHAN, Mrs. HUTCHISON, Mrs. CANTWELL, Mrs. FEINSTEIN, Ms. STABENOW, Ms. MIKULSKI, Mrs. LINCOLN, Mrs. FLANDERS, Mr. BOXER, Mr. BUDOWLE, Mrs. LANDRIEU, and Mrs. LANDRIEU) submitted the following resolution; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary:

Whereas 1 out of every 55 women will develop ovarian cancer at some point during her life;

Whereas over 70 percent of women with ovarian cancer will not be diagnosed until the cancer has spread beyond the ovaries;

Whereas prompt diagnosis of ovarian cancer is crucial to effective treatment, with the chances of curing the disease before it has spread beyond the ovaries ranging from 45 to 90 percent, as compared to between 20 and 25 percent after the cancer has spread;

Whereas several easily identifiable factors, particularly a family history of ovarian cancer, can help determine how susceptible a woman is to developing the disease;

Whereas effective early testing is available to women who have a high risk of developing ovarian cancer;

Whereas heightened public awareness can make treatment of ovarian cancer more effective for women who are at-risk; and

Whereas the Senate, as an institution, and Members of Congress, as individuals, are in unique positions to help raise awareness about the need for early diagnosis and treatment for ovarian cancer: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That the Senate—

(1) designates the week of September 23, through September 29, 2001, as “National Ovarian Cancer Awareness Week”; and

(2) requests that the President issue a proclamation calling upon the people of the United States to observe National Ovarian Cancer Awareness Week with appropriate ceremonies and activities.

SENATE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION 69—EXPRESSING SUPPORT FOR TUBEROUS SCLEROSIS AWARENESS

Mr. WARNER (for himself and Mr. HAGEL) submitted the following concurrent resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions:

S. CON. RES. 69

Whereas at least two children born each day will be affected with tuberous sclerosis; Whereas nearly one million people worldwide are known to have tuberous sclerosis; Whereas tuberous sclerosis affects all races and ethnic groups equally; Whereas tuberous sclerosis is caused by either an inherited autosomal disorder or by a spontaneous genetic mutation; Whereas when tuberous sclerosis is genetically transmitted as an autosomal dominant disorder, a child with a parent with the gene will have a 50-percent chance of inheriting the disease; Whereas two-thirds of the cases of tuberous sclerosis are believed to be a result of spontaneous mutation, although the cause of such mutations is a mystery; Whereas diagnosis takes an average of 90 days with consultation of at least three specialists; Whereas tuberous sclerosis frequently goes undiagnosed because of the obscurity of the disease and the riddle form the symptoms may take; and Whereas the Congress as an institution, and Members of Congress as individuals, are in unique positions to help raise public awareness about the need for increased funding for research, detection, and treatment of tuberous sclerosis and to support the fight against tuberous sclerosis: Now, therefore, be it
Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That it is the sense of the Congress that—

(1) all Americans should take an active role in the fight against tuberous sclerosis by all means available to them, including early and complete clinical testing and investigating family histories;

(2) the role played by national and community organizations and health care providers in promoting awareness of the importance of early diagnosis, testing, and ongoing screening should be recognized and applauded;

(3) the Federal Government has a responsibility to—

(A) endeavor to raise awareness about the importance of the early detection of, and proper treatment for, tuberous sclerosis;

(B) increase funding for research so that the causes of, and improved treatment for, tuberous sclerosis may be discovered; and

(C) continue to consider ways to improve access to, and the quality of, health care services for detecting and treating tuberous sclerosis; and

(4) the Director of the National Institutes of Health should take a leadership role in the fight against tuberous sclerosis by acting with appropriate offices within the National Institutes of Health to provide to the Congress a five-year research plan for tuberous sclerosis.

Mr. WARNER. Madam President, I rise today to introduce a resolution to help increase the awareness of tuberous sclerosis or TS. Even though 1,000,000 people worldwide are affected with this disease, few are even aware of it.

TS is a genetic condition characterized by lesions of the skin and central nervous system, tumor growth and seizures, and TS is transmitted either through genetic inheritance or as a spontaneous genetic mutation. It is the leading known cause of epilepsy, and may also cause brain, eye or kidney tumors, hydrocephalus, and disfiguring growths on the skin. At least two children born every day will be affected by tuberous sclerosis, which affects 1 million people worldwide of all races and ethnic groups. Infants and children too often spend their lives being misdiagnosed, possibly leading to irreparable brain damage, kidney failure, and even premature death.

Because there is no cure for this disease, early intervention is important in helping to overcome developmental delays. Passage of this important resolution will help to raise the importance of early detection and proper treatment of TS; encourage increased funding for research and treatments; and call upon the National Institutes of Health, NIH, to develop a research plan for TS.

For all of the families that are affected by this terrible disease, I ask that my colleagues support this important legislation in helping us learn about and understand tuberous sclerosis, we will help to improve the quality of life for many Americans.

SENATE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION 70—EXPRESSING THE SENSE OF THE CONGRESS IN SUPPORT OF THE NATIONAL WASH AWAY THE HURT CAMPAIGN

Mr. WARNER (for himself and Mr. ALLEY) submitted the following concurrent resolution; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary:

S. CON. RES. 70

Whereas on September 11, 2001, the United States was victim to the worst terrorist attack on American soil, as hijacked aircraft were deliberately crashed into the World Trade Center in New York, New York, and the Pentagon outside Washington, D.C.:

Whereas the tragic events of September 11, 2001, have inflicted enormous emotional pain on Americans of all ages;

Whereas young Americans, who are generally unable to donate blood, help with rescue efforts, or make financial contributions, are nevertheless sharing in the Nation's pain and are especially in need of a way to make a difference and express their sympathy;

Whereas four young sister, Ashley, Aubrey, Alyssa and Alana Welsh, from Annandale, Virginia, whose father serves in the military and who with the Pentagon disaster, have resolved that they could make a difference by holding local car washes to raise funds for the American Red Cross and to “help wash away the hurt;”

Whereas within forty-eight hours the young girls had involved hundreds of others and raised more than $10,000, all in one day;

Whereas there are more than 100,000 schools across the United States, whose teachers, students, and parents are searching for ways to unite and help rebuild the Nation as the Welsh sisters have done in their hometown;

Whereas a National Wash America Campaign has been created with its own Internet site, www.WashAmerica.org, to help other communities launch similar efforts on the weekends of September 22 and 23, September 29 and 30, and October 6 and 7, 2001, and

Whereas the American Red Cross is designating an account to receive all Wash America funds, giving the children of this campaign an opportunity to be part of one of its largest fund-raising drives ever: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved, by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That is is the sense of the Congress that—

(1) salutes the young Americans who take part in Wash America events in their communities to help raise funds for the American Red Cross in the wake of the terrorist attacks on the United States on September 11, 2001, and thanks them for doing their part to “Help Wash Away the Hurt” across the Nation.

(2) recognizes and calls upon the Federal Government to increase funding for research and treatment of TS, encourage increased funding for research and treatments; and call upon the National Institutes of Health, NIH, to develop a research plan for TS.

For all of the families that are affected by this terrible disease, I ask that my colleagues support this important legislation in helping us learn about and understand tuberous sclerosis, we will help to improve the quality of life for many Americans.

SENATE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION 71—DESIGNATING THE WEEK OF OCTOBER 7 THROUGH OCTOBER 13, 2001, AS ‘NATIONAL MENTAL HEALTH AWARENESS WEEK’

Ms. LANDRIEU submitted the following concurrent resolution; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary:

Whereas mental health is defined by the state of emotional and psychological well-being in which an individual is able to use the individual’s cognitive and emotional capabilities, to function in society, and to meet the ordinary demands of everyday life; Whereas mental health disorders include, depression, substance abuse, anxiety, Alzheimer’s disease, autism, bipolar illness, and panic attacks; Whereas more than 51,000,000 individuals in the United States suffer from a mental illness in a single year, but only 8,000,000 seek treatment; Whereas 40,000,000 adults in the United States are affected by 1 or more mental disorders; Whereas 6,500,000 individuals in the United States are disabled by severe mental illness; Whereas the Surgeon General has reported that 4 out of 10 of the leading causes of disability for persons age 5 and older are mental disorders; Whereas 5.4 percent of the adult population in the United States suffers from a “serious” mental illness which interferes with some area of their social functioning; Whereas children and adolescents, like adults, have mental health problems that can lead to school failure, family conflicts, drug abuse, violence, and suicide; Whereas education and awareness about mental health and mental health services are necessary to detection and treatment; and Whereas Congress, as an institution, and the Members of Congress, as individuals, have the unique possibility of raising awareness about mental health: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That Congress—

(1) designates the week of October 7 through October 13, 2001, as “National Mental Health Awareness Week”;

(2) encourages all Americans to find out more about mental health services in their communities and seek mental health treatment when necessary; and

(3) requests that the President issue a proclamation calling upon the people of the United States and interested groups to observe such week with appropriate ceremonies and activities.

SENATE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION 72—EXPRESSING THE SENSE OF CONGRESS THAT A COMMEMORATIVE POSTAGE STAMP WITH AN IMAGE HONORING MARTHA MATILDA HARPER, AND THAT THE CITIZENS’ STAMP ADVISORY COMMITTEE SHOULD RECOMMEND TO THE POSTMASTER GENERAL THAT SUCH A STAMP BE ISSUED

Ms. LANDRIEU (for herself, Ms. COLLINS, and Ms. STABENOW) submitted the following concurrent resolution; which was referred to the Committee on Governmental Affairs:

Whereas Martha Matilda Harper, after spending much of the first 25 years of her life as a domestic servant, opened the Harper Method Shops and School, a health-conscious hair and skin care store in Rochester, New York, in 1888; Whereas Martha Matilda Harper subsequently expanded the business to include 2 international manufacturing centers, 5 training schools, and over 500 beauty shops around the country; Whereas Martha Matilda Harper shared the opportunity of business ownership with former servant women, and created the first franchise business model; Whereas customers of Harper shops included world leaders, socialites, and suffragettes, such as Presidents Woodrow Wilson and Franklin D. Roosevelt, First Lady Jacqueline Kennedy and Lady Bird Johnson, and Susan B. Anthony; Whereas Martha Matilda Harper’s 19th century management practices, which included a customer-oriented focus, an equitable relationship with staff, a childcare center in each shop, and the manufacturer and promotion of organic products and procedures, would be contemporary by today’s standards; Whereas franchising a franchise retail business (with a new franchise opening every 8 minutes) and generates more than $1,000,000,000,000 in revenues annually; and Whereas, for her accomplishments, Martha Matilda Harper is honored today as the “mother of franchising”: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the Senate (the House of Representatives concurring), That it is the sense of Congress that—

(1) a commemorative postage stamp should be issued honoring Martha Matilda Harper; and

(2) the Citizens’ Stamp Advisory Committee should recommend to the Postmaster General that such a stamp be issued.

SENATE CONCURRENT RESOLUTION 73—EXPRESSING THE PROFOUND SORROW OF CONGRESS FOR THE DEATHS AND INJURIES SUFFERED BY FIRST RESPONDERS AS THEY ENDEAVORED TO SAVE INNOCENT PEOPLE IN THE AFTERMATH OF THE TERRORIST ATTACKS ON THE WORLD TRADE CENTER AND THE PENTAGON ON SEPTEMBER 11, 2001

Mr. NICKLES (for himself, Mr. INHOFE, Mr. SCHUMER, Mrs. CLINTON, Mr. ALLEN Mr. MCCONNELL, Mr. CRAPO, Mr. LUGAR, Mr. WARNER, Mr. ROBERTS, Mr. MCCAIN, Mr. LEVIN, Mr. BIDEN, Mr. BAYH, Mr. JOHNSON, Mr. SARANES, Mr. FITZGERALD, Mr. CLELAND, Ms. CANTWELL, Mr. NELSON, of Florida, Mr. KOHL, Mr. KERRY, Mr. FEINGOLD, Mr. BREAUX, Mr. LIBERMAN, Ms. COLLINS, and Mr. HUTCHINSON) submitted the following concurrent resolution; which was referred to the Committee on the Judiciary:

Whereas law enforcement officers, firefighters, and emergency medical personnel are collectively known as first responders; whereas the Nation’s response to the terrorist attacks on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon on September 11, 2001, first responders reacted immediately in evacuating and rescuing innocent people from the attacks; whereas first responders also arrived quickly at the crash site of United Airlines Flight 93 in southwestern Pennsylvania; whereas if it were not for the heroic efforts of first responders immediately after the terrorist attacks, numerous additional casualties would have resulted from the attacks; whereas as the first emergency personnel to arrive at the scenes of the terrorist attacks, first responders risked their lives in their efforts to save others; whereas while first responders were bravely conducting the evacuation and rescue after the terrorist attacks on the World Trade Center, the 2 towers of that complex collapsed, and many first responders themselves became victims of the attacks; whereas the everyday well-being, security, and safety of Americans depend upon the official duties of first responders; whereas in addition to their official duties, first responders around the Nation participate in planning, training, and exercises to respond to terrorist attacks; whereas emergency managers, public health officials, medical care providers also invest significant time in planning, training, and exercises to better respond to terrorist attacks in the United States; whereas the Nation has been drawn by the heroic efforts of first responders after the bombing of the World Trade Center on February 26, 1993, and the bombing of the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building in Oklahoma City, Oklahoma, on April 19, 1995; whereas there are numerous Federal programs that help prepare first responders from across the Nation, including the Domestic Preparedness Program and other training and exercise programs administered by the Department of Justice; whereas there are numerous Domestic preparedness programs administered by the Federal Emergency Management Agency, which together with the programs of the Department of Justice, Department of Health and Human Services, and other Federal Departments and Agencies, provide training, education, technical assistance, exercise planning, and execution; whereas many of the first responders who participate in such programs do so on their own time; whereas an effective response of local first responders to a terrorist attack saves lives; and whereas in response to a terrorist attack, first responders are exposed to a high risk of bodily harm and death as the first line of defense of the United States in managing the aftermath of the attack: Now, therefore, be it expresses its profound sorrow for the deaths and injuries suffered by first responders as they raced to save innocent people in the aftermath of the terrorist attacks on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon on September 11, 2001; (2) expresses its deepest sympathies to the families and loved ones of the fallen first responders; (3) honors and commends the first responders who evacuated and rescuing the innocent people in the World Trade Center and the Pentagon after the terrorist attacks; (4) encourages the President to issue a proclamation calling upon the people of the United States to pay respect to the first responder community for their service in the aftermath of the terrorist attacks and their continuing efforts to save lives; and (5) encourages all levels of government to continue to work together to effectively coordinate emergency preparedness by providing the infrastructure, funding, and interagency communication and cooperation necessary to ensure that if an attack occurs, first responders will be as prepared as possible to respond effectively.

Mr. NICKLES. Madam President, it is with great honor that I introduce this concurrent resolution on behalf of Senator INHOFE, Senator SCHUMER, Senator CLINTON, and myself, as well as many other original co-sponsors.

The resolution expresses Congress' profound sorrow for the loss of life and injuries from "first responders'" as a result of their efforts to save innocent Americans in the aftermath of the World Trade Center, Pentagon and Pennsylvania disasters on September 11, 2001. It also expresses our deepest condolences to the families and loved ones of the first responders who will never again return home.

Last Tuesday, in New York City and at the Pentagon, law enforcement, firefighters, and emergency medical personnel (first responders) were the first public-service personnel on the scene. If it were not for their heroic efforts immediately after these attacks, the death toll would be much higher.

We also believe that it is important for America to better understand the daily activities and responsibilities of first responders. Our everyday well-being, security and safety depend upon first responders' official duties. In preparation for these tragedies, first responders around the country plan, train and exercise for mass-casualty events. Our resolution recognizes the hard work and dedication of "first responders' personnel and thanks them for the long hours of training that many participate in on their own time.

In addition, this resolution recognizes the hard work and dedication of first responders after the 1993 World Trade Center and the 1995 Oklahoma City bombing.

First Responders exemplify great courage and patriotism in the darkest of hours and for this we are most grateful.

(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of sections at the beginning of chapter 4 of title 10 of such title is amended by striking the item relating to section 149.

SA 1593. Mr. INHOFE submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill S. 1438, to authorize appropriations for fiscal year 2002 for military activities of the Department of Defense, for military constructions, and for defense activities of the Department of Energy, to prescribe personnel strengths for such fiscal year for the Armed Forces, and for other purposes; which was ordered to lie on the table; as follows:

At the end of subtitle B of title XII, add the following:

SEC. 1217. AUTHORITY TO WAIVE SANCTIONS.

(a) AUTHORITY.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the President is authorized to waive any sanction imposed against any foreign country or government (including any agency or instrumentality thereof) or any foreign entity if the President determines that to do so would assist in efforts to combat global terrorism or is otherwise in the national security interests of the United States.

(b) CONGRESSIONAL NOTIFICATION.—Not less than 30 days prior to the exercise of any waiver authorized by subsection (a) the President shall notify Congress of his intention to exercise the waiver, together with an explanation of his reasons for the waiver.

(c) SANCTION DEFERRED.—In this section, the term "sanction" means any prohibition or restriction with respect to a foreign country or government; or foreign entity that is imposed by the United States for reasons of foreign policy or national security, except in a case in which the United States imposes the sanction pursuant to—

(1) a multilateral regime and the other member countries of that regime have agreed to impose substantially equivalent measures; or

(2) a mandatory decision of the United Nations Security Council.

SA 1594. Mr. INHOFE submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill S. 1438, to authorize appropriations for fiscal year 2002 for military activities of the Department of Defense, for military constructions, and for defense activities of the Department of Energy, to prescribe personnel strengths for such fiscal year for the Armed Forces, and for other purposes; which was ordered to lie on the table; as follows:

At the end of subtitle D of title III, add the following:

SEC. 335. REVISION OF AUTHORITY TO WAIVE LIMITATION ON PERFORMANCE OF DEPOT-LEVEL MAINTENANCE.

Section 2466(c) of title 10, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"(c) WAIVER OF LIMITATION.—(1) The President may waive the limitation in subsection (a) for a fiscal year if—

"(A) the President determines that—"(i) the waiver is necessary for reasons of national security; and

"(ii) compliance with the limitation cannot be achieved through effective management of depot operations consistent with the government; or foreign entity that is imposed by the United States for reasons of foreign policy or national security, except in a case in which the United States imposes the sanction pursuant to—

"(1) a multilateral regime and the other member countries of that regime have agreed to impose substantially equivalent measures; or

"(2) a mandatory decision of the United Nations Security Council.

SA 1595. Mr. INHOFE submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill S. 1438, to authorize appropriations for fiscal year 2002 for military activities of the Department of Defense, for military constructions, and for defense activities of the Department of Energy, to prescribe personnel strengths for such fiscal year for the Armed Forces, and for other purposes; which was ordered to lie on the table; as follows:

SEC. 1505. ACTIONS UPON CLOSURE OF THE VIEQUES NAVAL TRAINING RANGE.

SEC. 1506. CLOSURE OF VIEQUES NAVAL TRAINING RANGE.

SEC. 1503. CONDITIONS ON CLOSURE OF VIEQUES NAVAL TRAINING RANGE.

The Secretary of the Navy may close the VIEQUES Naval Training Range on the island of Vieques, Puerto Rico, and discontinue live-fire training at that range only if the Chief of Naval Operations and the Commandant of the Marine Corps jointly certify that the training range is no longer needed for the training of units of the Navy and the Marine Corps stationed or deployed in the eastern United States.

(a) CONDITIONAL AUTHORITY.—Title XV of the Fiscal Year 2001 Special National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2001 (as enacted by Public Law 106–398; 114 Stat. 1654A–388) is amended by striking sections 1503 and 1504 and inserting the following new section:

(b) ACTIONS RELATED TO CLOSURE.—(1) Section 1505 of such Act (114 Stat. 1654A–355) is amended—

SEC. 1596. OF THE INTERIOR.—Upon a declaration of war by Congress or a declaration of a national emergency by the President or Congress, the provisions of H.R. 4 of the 107th Congress, which was ordered to lie on the table; as follows:

DIVISION D—NATIONAL ENERGY SECURITY

SEC. 4001. ENACTMENT OF ENERGY PROVISIONS.

The provisions of H.R. 4 of the 107th Congress, which was ordered to lie on the table; as follows:

SEC. 1505. ACTIONS UPON CLOSURE OF THE VIEQUES NAVAL TRAINING RANGE.

SEC. 1506. CLOSURE OF VIEQUES NAVAL TRAINING RANGE.

SEC. 1503. CONDITIONS ON CLOSURE OF VIEQUES NAVAL TRAINING RANGE.

The Secretary of the Navy may close the VIEQUES Naval Training Range on the island of Vieques, Puerto Rico, and discontinue live-fire training at that range only if the Chief of Naval Operations and the Commandant of the Marine Corps jointly certify that the training range is no longer needed for the training of units of the Navy and the Marine Corps stationed or deployed in the eastern United States.

(a) CONDITIONAL AUTHORITY.—Title XV of the Fiscal Year 2001 Special National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2001 (as enacted by Public Law 106–398; 114 Stat. 1654A–388) is amended by striking sections 1503 and 1504 and inserting the following new section:

(b) ACTIONS RELATED TO CLOSURE.—(1) Section 1505 of such Act (114 Stat. 1654A–355) is amended—

- (A) by striking subsection (a) and inserting the following:

- (B) in subsection (b)(1), by striking “Not later than May 1, 2003, the” and inserting “The”;

- (C) in subsection (d)(1), by striking “pending the enactment of a law that addresses the disposition of such properties”;

- (D) in subsection (e)(2), “the referendum under section 1503” and all that follows and inserting “the Secretary of the Navy closes the VIEQUES Naval Training Range.”;

- (E) by adding at the end the following new subsection:

- "(1) MILITARY USE OF TRANSFERRED PROPERTY DURING WAR OR NATIONAL EMERGENCY.—(1) TEMPORARY TRANSFER BY SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR.—Upon a declaration of war by Congress or a declaration of a national emergency by the President or Congress, the Secretary of the Interior shall transfer the administrative jurisdiction of the Live Impact Area to the Secretary of the Navy notwithstanding the requirement to retain the property under subsection (d)(1).

- "(2) TRAINING AUTHORIZED.—Training of the Armed Forces may be conducted in the Live Impact Area while the property is under the administrative jurisdiction of the Secretary of the Navy pursuant to a transfer made under that paragraph (1). The training may include live-fire training. Subsection (b) shall not apply to training authorized under this paragraph.

- "(3) RETURN OF PROPERTY TO SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR.—Upon the termination of the war or national emergency, the Secretary of the Interior shall return the Live Impact Area to the Secretary of the Navy.

- (2) The heading of such section is amended as read to as follows:

SEC. 4001. SHORT TITLE.

This division may be cited as the “National Energy Security Act of 2001”.

SEC. 4002. FINDINGS AND PURPOSES.

(a) Purpose.—(1) increasing dependence on foreign sources of oil causes systemic harm to all sectors of the United States economy, undermines the ability of Federal, State, and local units of government to provide essential services, and jeopardizes the peace, security, and welfare of the American people;

- (2) dependence on imports of foreign oil was 46 percent in 1992, rose to more than 55 percent by the beginning of 2000, and is estimated by the Department of Energy to rise to 65 percent by 2020 unless current policies are altered;

- (3) even with increased energy efficiency, the energy supply in the United States is expected to increase 27 percent by 2020;

- (4) the United States lacks a comprehensive national energy policy and has taken actions that limit the availability and capability of the domestic energy sources of oil and gas, coal, nuclear and hydroelectric;

- (5) a comprehensive energy strategy must be developed that addresses oil security; that decreases the United States dependence on imported oil supplies and strengthens our national energy security;

- (6) this comprehensive energy strategy must decrease the United States dependence on foreign oil supplies by more than 50 percent by the year 2011.}
with a benefit-cost analysis for each option or alternative together with an estimate of the cost to the consumer or producer could make to reduce foreign oil imports. The Secretary shall solicit information from the public and request information from the energy, including conventional and non-conventional sources such as, but not limited to, increased hydroelectric generation at existing Federal facilities, (2) conserve energy resources, including improving efficiencies and decreasing consumption, and (3) increase domestic production and use of oil, natural gas, nuclear, and coal, including any actions necessary to provide access to, and transportation of, these energy resources.

(c) Refinery Capacity.—As part of the reports submitted in 2001, 2005, and 2008, the Secretary shall examine and report on the condition of the domestic refinery industry and the extent of domestic storage capacity for various petroleum products, and make such recommendations as he believes will enhance domestic capabilities to respond to short-term shortages of various fuels during periods of supply disruptions and ensure long-term supplies on a reliable and affordable basis.

(d) Notification to Congress.—Whenever the Secretary determines that stocks of petroleum products have declined or are anticipated to decline to levels that would jeopardize national security or threaten supply disruptions on a national or regional basis, he shall immediately notify Congress of the situation and shall make such recommendations for administrative or legislative action as he believes are necessary to alleviate the situation.

SEC. 4103. STRATEGIC PETROLEUM RESERVE STUDY AND REPORT.

(1) the President shall immediately establish an Interagency Panel on the Strategic Petroleum Reserve (referred to in this section as the “Panel”) to study oil markets and estimate the extent and frequency of fluctuations in the price of oil, and submit quarterly reports to Congress on the condition of the domestic petroleum refining, distribution and retailing industries, (2) conserve energy resources, including improving efficiencies and decreasing consumption, and (3) increase domestic production and use of oil, natural gas, nuclear, and coal, including any actions necessary to provide access to, and transportation of, these energy resources.

(c) Refinery Capacity.—As part of the reports submitted in 2001, 2005, and 2008, the Secretary shall examine and report on the condition of the domestic refinery industry and the extent of domestic storage capacity for various petroleum products, and make such recommendations as he believes will enhance domestic capabilities to respond to short-term shortages of various fuels during periods of supply disruptions and ensure long-term supplies on a reliable and affordable basis.

(d) Notification to Congress.—Whenever the Secretary determines that stocks of petroleum products have declined or are anticipated to decline to levels that would jeopardize national security or threaten supply disruptions on a national or regional basis, he shall immediately notify Congress of the situation and shall make such recommendations for administrative or legislative action as he believes are necessary to alleviate the situation.

SEC. 4104. STUDY OF EXISTING RIGHTS-OF-WAY TO DETERMINE CAPABILITY TO SUPPORT NEW PIPELINES OR OTHER TURBINE FACILITIES.

Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the head of each Federal agency that has authorized a right-of-way across Federal lands for transportation of energy supplies or transmission of electric power shall review each such right-of-way and submit a report to the Secretary of Energy and to the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission whether the right-of-way can be used to support new or additional capacity and what modifications or other actions would be necessary to accommodate such additional capacity. In performing the review, the head of each agency shall consult with agencies of State or local units of government as appropriate and consider whether safety or other concerns related to current uses might preclude the availability of a right-of-way for additional pipeline or turbine facilities and shall set forth those considerations in the report.

SEC. 4105. USE OF FEDERAL FACILITIES.

(a) The Secretary of the Interior and the Secretary of the Army shall develop separate inventories of all dams, impoundments, and other facilities under their jurisdiction.

(b) The Secretary of the Interior and the Secretary of the Army shall submit a report to Congress not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act. Each report shall—

(1) describe, in detail, each facility that is capable, with or without modification, of providing additional hydroelectric power; and

(2) describe what actions are planned or underway to increase hydroelectric producing facilities through a suitable methodology and including actions that the Secretary deems advisable to increase such production, reduce costs, and improve efficiency at such facilities, including, but not limited to, use of lease of power privilege and contracting with non-Federal entities for operation and maintenance.

SEC. 4106. NUCLEAR GENERATION STUDY.

(a) The Chairman of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission shall submit a report to Congress not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act on the state of nuclear generating capacity for electricity in the United States and the potential for increasing nuclear generating capacity and production as part of this Nation’s energy mix. The report shall include—

(b) conduct research and development activities that will support such a state of readiness.

(2) ensure that research efforts with the Office are coordinated with research on advanced processing and separations;

(3) encourage that research efforts include participation of international collaborators; and

(4) authorize the Office of Spent Nuclear Fuel Research to fund international collaborations when they bring unique capabilities not available in the United States and their host country is unable to provide for the research.

(10) ensure that research efforts with the Office are coordinated with research on advanced nuclear facilities and reactors conducted within the Office of Nuclear Energy Science and Technology.

(5) REPORT.—The Associate Director of the Office of Spent Nuclear Fuel Research shall annually prepare and submit a report to Congress on the activities and expenditures of the Office, including the progress that has been made to achieve the objectives of subsection (c).

SEC. 4107. DEVELOPMENT OF A NATIONAL SPENT NUCLEAR FUEL STRATEGY AND ESTABLISHMENT OF OFFICE OF SPENT NUCLEAR FUEL RESEARCH.

(a) Determination by Congress.—Prior to the Federal Government taking any irreversible action relating to the disposal of spent nuclear fuel, Congress must determine whether the spent fuel should be treated as waste subject to permanent burial or should be considered as a resource that is needed to meet future energy requirements.

(b) Office of Spent Nuclear Fuel Research.—There is hereby established an Office of Spent Nuclear Fuel Research within the Office of Nuclear Energy Science and Technology of the Department of Energy.

(1) the Office’s budget shall be determined annually by the Secretary based on the number of employees, and the Office shall be headed by the Associate Director, who shall be a member of the Senior Executive Service appointed by the Director of the Office of Nuclear Energy Science and Technology.

(2) The Office shall be responsible for carrying out an integrated research, development, and demonstration program on technologies for treatment, recycling, and disposal of high-level nuclear radioactive waste and spent nuclear fuel, subject to the general supervision of the Secretary.

(3) The Associate Director of the Office shall report to the Director of the Office of Nuclear Energy Science and Technology. The first such Associate Director shall be appointed not later than 90 days after the date of enactment of this Act.
the Secretary believes should be implemented either through legislation or regulation to ensure adequate domestic refining capacity and motor fuel supplies to meet the economic, social, and security requirements of the United States.

(c) Agencies. In preparing each annual report, the Secretary shall—

(1) provide an assessment of the condition of the domestic refining industry and the Nation’s motor fuel distribution system, including the ability to make future capital investments necessary to manufacture, transport, and store different petroleum products required by local, State, and Federal statute and regulations;

(2) examine the reliability and cost of feedstocks and energy supplied to the refining industry as well as the reliability and cost of products manufactured by such industry;

(3) provide an assessment of the collective effect of current and future motor fuel requirements on—

(A) the ability of the domestic motor fuels refining, distribution, and retailing industries to reliably and cost-effectively supply fuel to the Nation’s consumers and businesses;

(B) gasoline (reformulated and conventional) and diesel fuel (on-highway and off-highway) supplies; and

(C) retail motor fuel price volatility;

(4) explore opportunities to streamline permitting processes and approvals for expanding existing and/or building new domestic refining capacity;

(5) recommend actions that can be taken to reduce refiner motor supply concerns; and

(6) provide an assessment of whether uniform, regional, or national performance-based fuel specifications would reduce supply disruptions.

(d) CONFIDENTIALITY OF DATA.—Any information requested by the Secretary to be submitted by industry for purposes of this section shall be treated as confidential and shall be used only for the preparation of the annual report.

SEC. 4109. REVIEW OF FEDERAL ENERGY REGULATORY COMMISSION NATURAL GAS PIPELINE CERTIFICATION PROCEDURES

The Federal Energy Regulatory Commission shall, in consultation with other appropriate Federal agencies, immediately underwrite and implement regulatory procedures and policies that—

(1) ensure long-term safety, reliability and service life for existing pipelines;

(2) expand capabilities of internal inspection devices to identify accurately and verify pipeline defects and anomalies;

(3) develop inspection techniques for pipelines that cannot accommodate the internal inspection devices available on the date of enactment of this Act;

(4) develop innovative techniques to ensure the structural integrity of pipelines to prevent pipeline failures;

(5) develop improved materials and coatings for use in pipelines;

(6) improve the capability, reliability, and practicability of external leak detection devices;

(7) identify underground environments that lead to shortened service life;

(8) enhance safety, pipeline siting, and land use;

(9) minimize the environmental impact of pipelines;

(10) demonstrate technologies that improve pipeline safety, reliability, and integrity;

(b) PURPOSE.—The purpose of the cooperative research program shall be to—

(1) provide risk assessment tools for optimizing risk mitigation strategies; and

(2) provide highly secure information systems for controlling the operation of pipelines.

(c) AREAS.—In carrying out this section, the Secretary of Transportation, in coordination with the Secretary of Energy, shall consider research and development on natural gas, crude oil, and petroleum product pipelines for—

(1) early crack, defect, and damage detection including real-time damage monitoring;

(2) automated internal pipeline inspection sensor systems; and

(3) land use guidance and set back management along pipeline rights-of-way for communities;

(4) internal corrosion control;

(5) corrosion-resistant coatings;

(6) improved cathodic protection;

(7) inspection techniques where internal inspection is not feasible, including measurement of structural integrity and other pipeline integrity monitoring techniques.

(8) external leak detection, including portable real-time video imaging technology, and the advancement of computerized control center leak detection systems utilizing real-time remote field data input;
Advisory Committee. Consistent with the recommendations of the tures, other transactions, and any other 1980 (15 U.S.C. 3701 et seq.), grants, joint ven- sion-Wydler Technology Innovation Act of 1995. The purpose of this title is to direct the Secretary of Energy to ensure the 5-year plan provided for in subsection (d) is implemented as in- bility for ensuring the 5-year plan providedщения of the 5-year research, develop- ment, and demonstration program plan as 18 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall submit to Congress a report containing— 17557

September 21, 2001 CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE

(9) longer life, high strength, non-corrosive pipeline materials; (10) assessing the remaining strength of existing pipes; (11) risk and reliability analysis models, to be used to identify safety improvements that could be made in the near term resulting from analysis of data obtained from a pipeline performance tracking initiative; (12) identification, monitoring, and preven- tion of outside force damage, including sat- sweet surveillance; and (13) any other areas necessary to ensuring the public safety and protecting the environ- ment.

(d) Research and Development Program Plan.—Within 240 days after the date of en- actment of this section, the Secretary of Transportation, in coordination with the Secretary of Energy and the Pipeline Integrity Technical Advisory Committee, shall prepare and submit to Congress a 5-year pro- gram plan to guide activities under this sec- tion. In preparing the program plan, the Sec- retary shall consult with the appropriate representatives of the natural gas, crude oil, and petroleum pipeline industries, State pipeline safety officials, environmental organizations, pipeline safety advocates, and professional and technical socie- ties.

(e) Implementation.—The Secretary of Transportation shall have primary responsi- bility for ensuring the 5-year plan provided for in subsection (d) is implemented as inten- ded by this section. In carrying out the research, development, and demonstration activities under this section, the Secretary of Transportation and the Secretary of Energy may use, to the extent authorized under applicable provisions of law, contracts, coop- erative research and development agreements, and any other form of agreement available to the Secretary consistent with the recommendations of the Advisory Committee.

(f) Description of Progress.—The Secretary of Transportation shall report to Congress annually as to the status and results to date of the implementation of the research and development program plan. The report shall include the activities of the Departments of Transportation and Energy, the national lab- oratories, State pipeline safety officials, universities, and any other re- search organizations, including industry re- search organizations.

(g) Pipeline Integrity Technical Advi- sory Committee. (1) Establishment.—The Secretary of Transportation shall enter into appropriate arrangements with the National Academy of Sciences to establish and manage the Pipe- line Integrity Technical Advisory Com- mittee for the purpose of advising the Sec- retary of Transportation and the Secretary of Energy on the development and imple- mentation of research, development, and demonstration program plan as defined in subsection (d). The Advisory Committee shall have an ongoing role in evalu- ating the results of the research, development, and demonstration carried out under this section.

(2) Membership.—The National Academy of Sciences shall appoint the members of the Pipeline Integrity Technical Advisory Com- mittee after consultation with the Secretary of Transportation and the Secretary of En- ergy. The Secretary of Energy shall have the authority to approve the membership of the Advisory Committee.

(3) Authority.—The Advisory Committee shall have the authority to— (A) recommend to the Secretary a program plan to achieve the goals of this title; (B) establish a mechanism for the collection and analysis of data on the performance of pipelines; (C) review and evaluate the outcomes of the research, development, and demonstration program; (D) establish a mechanism for the collection and analysis of data on the performance of pipelines; (E) provide advice and guidance to the Secretary on the development and implementation of the research, development, and demonstration program; (F) evaluate the performance of the Secretary in implementing the research, development, and demonstration program; and (G) conduct a study to— (i) identify technologies capable of achieving cost and performance goals, either individually or in various combinations;

(3) develop recommendations for technology development programs, which the De- partment of Energy could carry out in co- operation with industry, to develop and demon- strate such technologies.

(b) Cooperation.—In carrying out this sec- tion, the Secretary shall give consider- ation to the expert advice of the entities described in section 411(b).

Title II—Technology Research and Development Program for Advanced Coal Technology for Coal-Based Electricity Generating Facilities SEC. 4201. Purpose. The purpose of this title is to direct the Secretary of Energy to conduct a comprehensive 5-year program for re- search, development and demonstration to improve the reliability, efficiency, safety, and performance of the natural gas transpor- tation and distribution infrastructure and for distributed energy resources (including microturbines, fuel cells, advanced enginegenerators gas turbines reciprocating en- gines, hybrid power generation systems, and all ancillary equipment for dispatch, control and maintenance).

(c) Authorization of Appropriations.— The Secretary shall be authorized to appropriated such sums as may be necessary for the pur- poses of this section.

Title II—Technology Research and Development Program for Coal-Based Electricity Generating Facilities SEC. 4201. Purpose. The purpose of this title is to direct the Secretary of Energy to conduct a comprehensive 5-year program for research, development and demonstration to improve the reliability, efficiency, safety, and performance of the natural gas transpor- tation and distribution infrastructure and for distributed energy resources (including microturbines, fuel cells, advanced enginegenerators gas turbines reciprocating en- gines, hybrid power generation systems, and all ancillary equipment for dispatch, control and maintenance).

(b) Conditions.—The Secretary shall be authorized to appropriate such sums as may be necessary for the purposes of this title.

(a) In General.—(1) Not later than 12 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary shall submit to the President and Congress a report containing— (A) an overview of the programs that, as of the date of the report, are in effect or are to be carried out by the Department of Energy to support technologies that are designed to achieve the cost and performance goals; and (B) recommendations for additional authori- ties required to achieve the cost and performance goals.

(a) In General.—There is authorized to be appropriated to carry out the provisions of sections 4202, 4203, and 4204, $100,000,000 for each of fiscal years 2002 through 2012, to remain available until expended.

(a) In General.—There is authorized to be appropri- ated such sums as may be necessary for the purposes of this title.

(a) In General.—There is authorized to be appropri- ated such sums as may be necessary for the purposes of this title.
plants, including co-production plants, that, either individually or in combination, advance environmental performance and cost competitiveness well beyond which is in operation or has been demonstrated to date.

(b) In General.—Not later than 120 days after the date of enactment of this title, the Secretary shall submit to Congress a plan to carry out subsection (a) that includes a description of—

1. the program elements and management structure to be used;
2. the technical milestones to be achieved with respect to each of the advanced coal-based technologies included in the plan; and
3. the demonstration activities that will benefit new or existing coal-based electric generation units having at least a 50-megawatt nameplate rating including improvements to allow the units to achieve either—

(A) an overall design efficiency improvement of not less than 3 percentage points as compared with the efficiency of the unit as operated on the date of enactment of this title and before any retrofit, repowering, re-placement of equipment, or installation; or
(B) a significant improvement in the environmental performance related to the control of sulfur dioxide, nitrogen oxide or mercury in coal as is well below the cost of technologies that are in operation or have been demonstrated to date; or
(C) a means of recycling or reusing a significant proportion of coal combustion wastes produced by coal-based generating units excluding practices that are commercially available at the date of enactment.

SEC. 4204. FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE. (a) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 180 days after the date on which the Secretary submits to Congress the plan under section 4206(b), the Secretary shall solicit proposals for projects which serve or benefit new or existing facilities and, either individually or in combination, are designed to achieve the levels of performance set forth in section 4206(b)(3).

(b) PROJECT CRITERIA.—A solicitation under subsection (a) may include solicitation of a proposal for a project to demonstrate—

1. the reduction of emissions of 1 or more pollutants; or
2. the production of coal combustion by-products of economic values significantly greater than by-products produced on the date of enactment of this title.

(c) FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE.—The Secretary shall provide financial assistance to projects that—

1. demonstrate overall cost reductions in the utilization of coal to generate useful forms of energy;
2. improve the competitiveness of coal among various forms of energy to maintain a diverse pool of fuel choices in the United States to meet electricity generation requirements; and
3. achieve in a cost-effective manner, 1 or more of the criteria set out in the solicitation.

(d) DEMONSTRATE TECHNOLOGIES THAT ARE APPLICABLE.—The Secretary shall demonstrate technologies that are applicable to 25 percent of the electricity generating facilities that use coal as the primary fuel stock on the date of enactment of this title.

(e) DEDUCTIBLE SHARE.—The Federal share of the cost of any project funded under this section shall not exceed 50 percent.

(f) EXEMPTION FROM NEW SOURCE REVIEW PROVISIONS.—A project funded under this section shall be exempt from the new source review provisions of the Clean Air Act (42 U.S.C. 7401 et seq.).

SEC. 4208. FUNDING. To carry out sections 4206 and 4207, there are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary.

SEC. 4209. RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT FOR ADVANCED SAFE AND EFFICIENT COAL-BASED TECHNOLOGIES. (a) The Secretary of Energy shall establish a cooperative research partnership involving appropriate Federal agencies, coal producers, including associations, equipment manufacturers, universities with mining engineering departments, and other relevant entities to develop mining research priorities identified by the Mining Industry of the Future Program and in the National Academy of Sciences report on Mining Technologies, establish a process for joint industry-government research; and expand mining research capabilities at universities.

(b) There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out the requirements of this section—

$10,000,000 in fiscal year 2002; $12,000,000 in fiscal year 2003; and $15,000,000 in fiscal year 2004. At least 20 percent of any funds appropriated shall be dedicated to research carried out at universities.

SEC. 4210. RAILROAD EFFICIENCY. (a) The Secretary shall, in conjunction with the Secretaries of Transportation and Defense, the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, establish a public-private research partnership involving the Federal Government, railroad carriers, locomotive manufacturers, and the Association of American Railroads. The goal of the initiative shall include developing and demonstrating locomotive technologies that increase fuel efficiency, improve safety, and lower costs.

(b) There are authorized to be appropriated to carry out the requirements of this section—

$50,000,000 in fiscal year 2002; $60,000,000 in fiscal year 2003; and $70,000,000 in fiscal year 2004.

TITLE III—OIL AND GAS

Subtitle A—Deepwater and Frontier Royalty Relief

SEC. 4301. SHORT TITLE. This subtitle may be cited as the “Outer Continental Shelf Deep Water and Frontier Royalty Relief Act”.

SEC. 4302. AMENDMENTS TO THE OUTER CONTINENTAL SHELF LANDS ACT. (a) Section 8(a)(1)(D) of the Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act (43 U.S.C. 1337(a)(1)(D)) is amended by striking the word “area,” and inserting in lieu thereof the phrase “area or areas,”

(b) and the following new text: “except in the Arctic areas of Alaska, where the Secretary is authorized to set the net profit share at 16 percent. For purposes of this section, ‘Arctic areas’ means the Beaufort Sea and Chukchi Sea Planning Areas of the United States’;

(c) Section 8(a) of the Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act (43 U.S.C. 1337(a)) is amended by striking the word “area,” and inserting in lieu thereof the phrase “area or areas,”

(d) and the following new text: “except in the Arctic areas of Alaska, where the Secretary is authorized to set the net profit share at 16 percent. For purposes of this section, ‘Arctic areas’ means the Beaufort Sea and Chukchi Sea Planning Areas of the United States’;

(e) Section 8(a)(1)(D) of the Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act (43 U.S.C. 1337(a)(1)(D)) is amended by striking the word “area,” and inserting in lieu thereof the phrase “area or areas,”

(f) and the following new text: “except in the Arctic areas of Alaska, where the Secretary is authorized to set the net profit share at 16 percent. For purposes of this section, ‘Arctic areas’ means the Beaufort Sea and Chukchi Sea Planning Areas of the United States’;

SEC. 4303. REGULATIONS. The Secretary shall promulgate such rules and regulations as are necessary to implement the provisions of this subtitle not later than 180 days after the date of enactment of this Act.

SEC. 4304. SAVINGS CLAUSE. Nothing in this subtitle shall be construed to affect any offshore pre-existing leasing, or development moratorium, including any moratorium applicable to the Eastern Planning Area of the Gulf of Mexico located off the Gulf Coast of Florida.

Subtitle B—Oil and Gas Royalties in Kind

SEC. 4310. PROGRAM ON OIL AND GAS ROYALTIES IN KIND.

(a) APPLICABILITY OF SECTION.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the provisions of this section shall apply to all royalties in kind accepted by the Secretary of the Interior under any Federal oil or gas lease or permit under section 36 of the Mineral Leasing Act (30 U.S.C. 192) or section 27 of the Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act (43 U.S.C. 1333) or any other mineral leasing law from the date of enactment of this Act through September 30, 2006.

(b) TERMS AND CONDITIONS.—All royalty accruing to the United States under any Federal oil or gas lease or permit under the Mineral Leasing Act (30 U.S.C. 181 et seq.), or the Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act (43 U.S.C. 1331 et seq.), or any other mineral leasing law on demand of the Secretary of the Interior shall be paid in oil or gas. If the Secretary of the Interior elects to accept the royalty in kind—

1. delivery by, or on behalf of, the lessee of the royalty amount and quality due at the lease satisfies the lessee’s royalty obligation for the amount delivered, except that transportation and processing reimbursements paid to, or deductions claimed by, the lessee shall be subject to review and audit;
2. (B) royalty production shall be placed in marketable condition in the United States;
3. (C) the Secretary of the Interior may—

A. sell or otherwise dispose of any royalty oil or gas taken in kind for not less than fair market value; and
B. transport or process any oil or gas royalty taken in kind; regard to fiscal year limitation, or may use royalty production, to pay the cost of—
(A) transporting the oil or gas;
(B) processing the gas; or
(C) disposing of the oil or gas; and
(5) the Secretary may not use revenues from the sale of oil and gas produced in kind to pay for personnel, travel or other administrative costs of the Federal Government.
(c) REIMBURSEMENT OF COSTS.—If the lessee, pursuant to an agreement with the United States or as provided in the lease, processes the royalty oil or gas at a point not on or adjacent to the lease area, the Secretary of the Interior shall reimburse the lessee for the reasonable costs of transportation (not including gathering) from the lease to the point of delivery or for processing costs, or, at the discretion of the Secretary of the Interior, allow the lessee to deduct such transportation or processing costs in reporting and paying royalties in value for other Federal oil and gas leases.
(d) BENEFIT TO THE UNITED STATES.—The Secretary shall administer any program taking royalty oil or gas in kind only if the Secretary determines that the program is providing benefits to the United States greater than or equal to those which would be realized under a comparable royalty in value program.
(e) REPORT TO CONGRESS.—For every fiscal year, beginning in 2002 through 2006, in which the United States takes oil or gas in kind within any State or from the outer Continental Shelf in kind, excluding royalties taken in kind and sold to refiners under subsection (b)(1) of this section, the Secretary of the Interior shall provide a report to Congress that describes—
(1) the methodology or methodologies used by the Secretary to determine compliance with subsection (d), including performance standards for comparing to amounts likely to have been received had royalties been taken in kind;
(2) an explanation of the evaluation that led the Secretary to take royalties in kind from a lease or group of leases, including the expected revenue effect of taking royalties in kind;
(3) actual amounts realized from taking royalties in kind, and costs and savings associated with taking royalties in kind; and
(4) an evaluation of other relevant public benefits or detriments associated with taking royalties in kind.
(f) DECLINATION OF EXPENSES.—
(1) Prior to making disbursements under section 33 of the Mineral Leasing Act (30 U.S.C. 133(f)(3)) or any other applicable provision of law, of revenues derived from the sale of royalty production taken in kind from a lease, the Secretary of the Interior shall deduct amounts paid or paid under paragraph (b)(3) and (c), and shall deposit such amounts to miscellaneous receipts.
(2) If the Secretary of the Interior allows the lessee to deduct transportation or processing costs under paragraph (c), the Secretary of the Interior will consult with a State prior to conducting a royalty in kind program within the State and may delegate management of any portion of the Federal royalty in kind program to such State except as otherwise prohibited by Federal law.
The Secretary shall also consult annually with any State from which Federal royalty oil or gas is produced to ensure to the maximum extent practicable that the royalty in kind program provides revenues to the State greater than or equal to those which would be realized under a comparable royalty in value program.
(h) PROVISIONS FOR SMALL REFINERIES.—
(1) If the Secretary of the Interior determines that crude oil or gas are not available in the open market to refiners not having their own source of supply for crude oil, the Secretary may grant prior preference to such refiners in the sale of any royalty oil accruing or reserved to the United States under Federal oil and gas leases issued under any mineral leasing law, for processing or use in such refineries at private sale at not less than fair market value.
(2) In selling oil under this subsection, the Secretary of the Interior may at his discretion prorate such oil among such refiners in the area in which the oil is produced.
(i) DISPOSITION TO FEDERAL AGENCIES.—
(1) If the Secretary of the Interior allows the taking of royalty oil or gas in kind from onshore oil and gas leases, the Secretary shall be entitled to disposition of such royalty oil or gas at the highest price at which such royalty oil or gas is available in the open market.
(2) The Secretary shall determine the price per unit at which royalty oil or gas shall be sold.
(j) DISPOSITION TO FEDERAL AGENCIES.—
(1) In selling royalty oil or gas under this section, the Secretary shall determine the price per unit at which royalty oil or gas shall be sold.
(2) In selling oil under this subsection, the Secretary of the Interior may at his discretion prorate such oil among such refiners in the area in which the oil is produced.
(j) DISPOSITION TO FEDERAL AGENCIES.—
(1) If the Secretary of the Interior allows the taking of royalty oil or gas in kind from onshore oil and gas leases, the Secretary shall be entitled to disposition of such royalty oil or gas at the highest price at which such royalty oil or gas is available in the open market.
(2) The Secretary shall determine the price per unit at which royalty oil or gas shall be sold.
(3) The Secretary may not use revenues from the sale of oil and gas program excluding royalties in kind, excluding royalties taken in kind and sold to refiners under subsection (b)(1) of this section, the Secretary of the Interior shall provide a report to Congress that describes—
(1) the methodology or methodologies used by the Secretary to determine compliance with subsection (d), including performance standards for comparing to amounts likely to have been received had royalties been taken in kind;
(2) an explanation of the evaluation that led the Secretary to take royalties in kind from a lease or group of leases, including the expected revenue effect of taking royalties in kind;
(3) actual amounts realized from taking royalties in kind, and costs and savings associated with taking royalties in kind; and
(4) an evaluation of other relevant public benefits or detriments associated with taking royalties in kind.
(1) Prior to making disbursements under section 33 of the Mineral Leasing Act (30 U.S.C. 133(f)(3)) or any other applicable provision of law, of revenues derived from the sale of royalty production taken in kind from a lease, the Secretary of the Interior shall deduct amounts paid or paid under paragraphs (b)(3) and (c), and shall deposit such amounts to miscellaneous receipts.
(2) If the Secretary of the Interior allows the lessee to deduct transportation or processing costs under paragraph (c), the Secretary of the Interior will consult with a State prior to conducting a royalty in kind program within the State and may delegate management of any portion of the Federal royalty in kind program to such State except as otherwise prohibited by Federal law.
lease operations and related operations with due regard to the national interest in the ex-pedited and sound development of oil and gas resources in a manner con-sistent with oil and gas conservation prin-ciples.

(2) APPEALS.—Following a transfer of au-thority under section 4333, an appeal of any decision made by a State oil and gas con-servation authority shall be made in accord-ance with the administrative procedures.

(c) PENDING ENFORCEMENT ACTIONS.—The Secretary may continue to enforce any pend-ing actions respecting acts committed before the date on which authority is transferred to a State under section 4333 until those pro-ceedings are concluded.

(d) PENDING APPLICATIONS.—

(1) TRANSFER TO STATE.—All applications respecting oil and gas lease operations and related operations on Federal land pending before the Secretary shall be transferred to the State in which the Federal land is located.

(2) ACTION BY THE STATE.—The oil and gas conservation authority shall act on the ap-plication in accordance with State laws (including regulations) and requirements.

SEC. 4335. COMPENSATION FOR COSTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Subject to the avail-ability of appropriations, the Secretary shall compens-ate States for costs incurred to carry out the authorities transferred under section 4333.

(b) PAYMENT SCHEDULE.—Payments shall be made not less frequently than every quar-ter.

(c) COST BREAKDOWN REPORT.—Each State seeking compensation shall report to the Secretary a cost breakdown for the authori-ties transferred.

SEC. 4336. APPLICATIONS.

(a) LIMITATION ON COST RECOVERY.—Not-withstanding sections 304 and 504 of the Fed-eral Land Policy and Management Act of 1976 (43 U.S.C. 1734, 1764) and section 301 of title 31, United States Code, the Secretary shall not recover the Secretary’s costs with respect to applications and other documents relating to leases.

(b) COMPLETION OF PLANNING DOCUMENTS AND ANALYSES.

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall com-plete all resource management planning documents and analyses not later than 90 days after receiving any offer, application, or request for which a planning document or analysis is required to be prepared.

(2) PREPARATION BY APPLICANT OR LESSOR.—If the Secretary is unable to complete the document or analysis within the time pre-scribed by paragraph (1), the Secretary shall notify the applicant or lessee of the oppor-tunity to prepare the required document or analysis for the agency’s review and use in decisionmaking.

(c) REIMBURSEMENT FOR COSTS OF NEPA ANALYSES, DOCUMENTATION, AND STUDIES.—

If—

(1) adequate funding to enable the Secre-tary to timely prepare a project-level analysis required under the National Environ-mental Policy Act of 1969 (42 U.S.C. 4332 et seq.) with respect to an oil or gas lease is not appro-priated; and

(2) the lessee, operator, or operating rights owner timely provides for the completion of the required analysis, documentation, or related study;

the Secretary shall reimburse the lessee, oper-ator, or operating rights owner for its costs through royalty credits attributable to the lease, unit agreement, or project area.

SEC. 4337. TIMELY ISSUANCE OF DECISIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall en-force the timely issuance of all decisions respecting oil and gas leasing and operations on Federal land.

(b) OFFER TO LEASE.—

(1) DEADLINE.—The Secretary shall accept or reject an offer to lease not later than 90 days after the filing of the offer.

(2) FAILURE TO MEET DEADLINE.—If an offer is not acted upon within that time, the offer shall be deemed to have been accepted.

(c) APPLICATION FOR PERMIT TO DRILL.—

(1) DEADLINE.—The Secretary and a State that has accepted a transfer of authority under section 4333 shall approve or dis-appove an application for permit to drill not later than 30 days after receiving a complete application.

(2) FAILURE TO MEET DEADLINE.—If the appli-cation is not acted on within the time pre-scribed by paragraph (1), the application shall be deemed to have been approved.

(d) SURFACE USE PLAN OF OPERATIONS.—The Secretary shall approve or disapprove a surface use plan of operations not later than 30 days after receiving a complete plan.

(e) ADMINISTRATIVE APPEALS.—

(1) DEADLINE.—From the time that a Fed-eral oil and gas lessee or operator files a no-tice of administrative appeal of a decision or order of an officer or employee of the Depart-ment of the Interior or the Forest Service re-specting a Federal oil and gas Federal lease, the Secretary shall have 2 years in which to issue a final decision in the appeal.

(2) FAILURE TO MEET DEADLINE.—If no final decision has been issued within the time pre-scribed by paragraph (1), the appeal shall be deemed to have been granted.

SEC. 4338. ELIMINATION OF UNWARRANTED DE-MENTS AND STAY.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall en-force that unwarranted denials and stays of lease issuance and unwarranted restrictions on lease operations are eliminated from the Federal administration of oil and gas leasing on Fed-eral land.

(b) LAND DESIGNATED FOR MULTIPLE USE.—

(1) GENERAL.—Land designated as avail-able for multiple uses shall be available for oil and gas leasing without unwarranted restrictions on surface use and operations im-pose by the laws (including regulations) of the State oil and gas conservation authori-ty unless the Secretary includes in the deci-sion approving the management plan or lease- oring analysis a written explanation why more stringent stipulations are warranted.

(2) APPEAL.—Any decision to require a more stringent stipulation shall be adminis-tratively appealable and, following a final agency decision, shall be subject to judicial review.

(c) REJECTION OF OFFER TO LEASE.—

(1) GENERAL.—If the Secretary rejects an offer to lease on the ground that the land is unavailable for leasing, the Secretary shall provide a written, detailed explanation of the reasons the land is unavailable for leasing.

(2) PREVIOUS RESOURCE MANAGEMENT DECISION.—If the determination of unavailability is based on a previous resource management decision, the explanation shall include a careful analysis of when the reasons underlying the previous decision are still persuasive.

(d) SEGREGATION OF AVAILABLE LAND FROM UNAVAILABLE LAND.—The Secretary may not reject an offer to lease land available for leasing on the ground that the offer includes land unavailable for leasing, and the Secretary shall segregate from the offer any land that is unavailable for leasing, on the offeror’s request follow-ing notice by the Secretary, before acting on the offer to lease.

SEC. 4339. DISAPPROVAL OR REQUIRED MODI-FICATION OF SURFACE USE PLANS OF OPERATIONS AND APPLICATION FOR PERMIT TO DRILL.—The Secretary shall provide a written, detailed explanation of the reasons requiring modifications of any surface use plan of operations or application for permit to drill.

SEC. 4351. ROYALTY INCENTIVE PROGRAM.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Not later than March 31, 2002, the Secretaries shall jointly submit to Congress a report explaining the most effi-cient means of eliminating overlapping jurisdic-tion, duplication of effort, and inconsis-tent policymaking and policy implementa-tion among the agencies and bureaus of the Department of the Interior and the Department of Agriculture unless that office grants a stay in response to a petition satis-fying the criteria for a stay established by section 423(b) of Title 43, Code of Federal Regulations (or any successor regulation).

SEC. 4339. REPORTS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Not later than March 31, 2002, the Secretaries shall jointly submit to Congress a report explaining the most effi-cient means of eliminating overlapping jurisdic-tion, duplication of effort, and inconsis-tent policymaking and policy implementa-tion among the agencies and bureaus of the Department of the Interior and the Department of Agriculture unless that office grants a stay in response to a petition satis-fying the criteria for a stay established by section 423(b) of Title 43, Code of Federal Regulations (or any successor regulation).

Subtitle A—Price-Anderson Amendments

SEC. 4401. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the “Price-Anderson Amendments Act of 2001”.

SEC. 4402. INDEMNIFICATION AUTHORITY.

(a) INDEMNIFICATION OF NRC LICENSEES.—Section 170c. of the Atomic Energy Act of 1954 (42 U.S.C. 2130(c)) is amended by striking “August 1, 2002” each place it appears and in-seasing August 1, 2002.

(b) INDEMNIFICATION OF DOE CONTRACTORS.—Section 170d.(1.)A.of the Atomic Energy Act of 1954 (42 U.S.C. 2130(d)(1)(A)) is amended by striking , until August 1, 2002.”.

(c) INDEMNIFICATION OF NONPROFIT EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTIONS.—Section 170k. of the Atomic Energy Act of 1954 (42 U.S.C. 2120(k)) is amended by striking “August 1, 2002” each place it appears and inserting "August 1, 2012".

SEC. 4403. DOE LIABILITY LIMIT.
(a) AGGREGATE LIABILITY LIMIT.—Section 170d. of the Atomic Energy Act of 1954 (42 U.S.C. 2210(d)) is amended by striking paragraph (2) and inserting the following:

"(2) by adding after paragraph (1) the following:

(b) CONTRACT AMENDMENTS.—Section 170d. of the Atomic Energy Act of 1954 (42 U.S.C. 2210(d)) is further amended by striking paragraph (3) and inserting the following:

"(2) the previous adjustment under this subsection; or

"(3) not less than once during each 5-year period following the date of enactment of the Price-Anderson Amendments Act of 2001, to reflect the amount of indemnity for public liability and any applicable financial protection required of the contractor under this subsection on such date.

SEC. 4404. INCIDENTS OUTSIDE THE UNITED STATES.
(a) AMOUNT OF INDEMNIFICATION.—Section 170d.(5) of the Atomic Energy Act of 1954 (42 U.S.C. 2210(d)(5)) is amended by striking "$100,000,000" and inserting "$500,000,000".
(b) LIABILITY LIMIT.—Section 170e.(4) of the Atomic Energy Act of 1954 (42 U.S.C. 2210(e)(4)) is amended by striking "$100,000,000" and inserting "$500,000,000".

SEC. 4405. REPORTS.
Section 170t. of the Atomic Energy Act of 1954 (42 U.S.C. 2210(t)) is amended by striking "August 1, 1998" and inserting "August 1, 2008".

SEC. 4406. INFLATION ADJUSTMENT.
Section 170t. of the Atomic Energy Act of 1954 (42 U.S.C. 2210(t)) is amended—
(1) by renumbering paragraph (2) as paragraph (3); and
(2) by adding after paragraph (1) the following:

"(3) not less than once during each 5-year period following the date of enactment of the Price-Anderson Amendments Act of 2001, to reflect the aggregate percentage change in the Consumer Price Index since—"

"(A) such date of enactment, in the case of the first adjustment under this subsection; or

"(B) the previous adjustment under this subsection.".

SEC. 4407. CIVIL PENALTIES.
(a) REPEAL OF AUTOMATIC REMISSION.—Section 29d. of the Atomic Energy Act of 1954 (42 U.S.C. 2282a(b)(2)) is amended by striking the last sentence.
(b) LIMITATION FOR NONPROFIT INSTITUTIONS.—Section 29d. of the Atomic Energy Act of 1954 (42 U.S.C. 2282a) is further amended by striking subsection d. and inserting the following:

"d. Notwithstanding subsection a., no contractor, subcontractor, or supplier considered to be nonprofit under the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 shall be subject to a civil penalty under this section of the amount of any performance fee paid by the Secretary to such contractor, subcontractor, or supplier under the contract under which the violation occurred.".

SEC. 4408. EFFECTIVE DATE.
(a) IN GENERAL.—The amendments made by this subtitle shall become effective on the date of enactment of this Act.
(b) INDEFINITE PROVISIONS.—The amendments made by sections 4403 and 4404 shall not apply to any nuclear incident occurring before the date of enactment of this Act.
(c) CIVIL PENALTY PROVISIONS.—The amendments made by section 4407 to section 29d.A of the Atomic Energy Act of 1954 (42 U.S.C. 2282a) shall not apply to any violation occurring under a contract entered into before the date of enactment of this Act.

Subtitle B—Funding From the Department of Energy
SEC. 4410. NUCLEAR ENERGY RESEARCH INITIATIVE.
There are authorized to be appropriated $60,000,000 for fiscal year 2002 and such sums as are necessary for each fiscal year thereafter for a Nuclear Energy Research Initiative to be managed by the Director of the Office of Nuclear Energy, for grants to be competitively awarded and subject to peer review for research relating to nuclear energy. The Secretary of Energy shall submit to the Committee on Science and the Committee on Appropriations in the House of Representatives, and to the Committee on Energy and Natural Resources and the Committee on Appropriations of the Senate, an annual report on the activities of the Nuclear Energy Research Initiative.

SEC. 4411. NUCLEAR ENERGY PLANT OPTIMIZATION.
There are authorized to be appropriated $10,000,000 for fiscal year 2002 and such sums as are necessary for each fiscal year thereafter for a Nuclear Energy Plant Optimization Program to increase the amount of electricity generated by the qualified nuclear energy facility during the incentive period. The amount of such payment shall be 1 mill for each kilowatt-hour produced in excess of the total generation produced over the most recent calendar year prior to the first fiscal year in which payment is sought. Such payment made under this section may be carried forward and used in the next fiscal year.

SEC. 4412. NUCLEAR ENERGY TECHNOLOGY DEVELOPMENT PROGRAM.
There are authorized to be appropriated $50,000,000 for each of the fiscal years 2001 through 2015.

Subtitle C—Grants for Incentive Payments for Capital Improvements To Increase Efficiency
SEC. 4420. NUCLEAR ENERGY PRODUCTION INCENTIVES.
(a) INCENTIVE PAYMENTS.—For electric energy generated and sold by an existing nuclear energy facility during the incentive period, the Secretary of Energy shall make subject to the availability of appropriations, incentive payments to the owner or operator of such facility. The amount of such payment made to any such owner or operator shall be as determined under subsection (e) of this section. Payments under this section may only be made upon receipt by the Secretary of an incentive payment application, which establishes that the applicant is eligible to receive such payment and which satisfies such other requirements as the Secretary determines necessary. Such application shall be in such form, and shall be submitted at such time, as the Secretary shall establish.
(b) DEFINITIONS.—For purposes of this section:
(1) QUALIFIED NUCLEAR ENERGY FACILITY.—The term "qualified nuclear energy facility" means an existing reactor used to generate electricity for sale.
(2) EXISTING REACTOR.—The term "existing reactor" means any nuclear reactor the construction of which was completed and is licensed by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission before the date of enactment of this section.
(3) INCENTIVE PERIOD.—A qualified nuclear energy facility may receive payments under this section for a period of 15 years (referred to in this section as the "incentive period").
(d) AMOUNT OF PAYMENT.—(1) Payments made by the Secretary under this section to the owner or operator of a nuclear energy facility shall be based on the increased volume of kilowatt hours of electricity generated and sold by an existing nuclear energy facility during the incentive period.
(2) The amount of the payment made to any person under this section as provided in paragraph (1) shall be adjusted for inflation for each fiscal year beginning after calendar year 2001 in the same manner as provided in the provisions of section 29d.(2)(B) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986, except that in applying such provisions, the calendar year 2001 shall be substituted for the calendar year 1979.
(e) SUNSET.—No payment may be made under this section to any nuclear energy facility after the expiration of the period of 15 fiscal years beginning with fiscal year 2001, and no payment may be made under this section to any such facility after a payment has been made with respect to such facility for a period of 15 fiscal years.
(f) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated to the Secretary to carry out the purposes of this section $50,000,000 for each of the fiscal years 2001 through 2015.
SEC. 4421. NUCLEAR ENERGY EFFICIENCY IMPROVEMENT.

(a) INCREASE IN PAYMENTS.—The Secretary of Energy shall make incentive payments to the owners or operators of qualified nuclear energy facilities to be used to make capital improvements in the facilities that are directly related to improving the electrical output efficiency of such facilities by at least 1 percent.

(b) LIMITATIONS.—

(1) Incentive payments under this section shall not exceed 10 percent of the costs of the capital improvements concerned and no more than 1 payment may be made with respect to improvements at a single facility.

(2) No payments in excess of $1,000,000 in the aggregate may be made with respect to improvements at a single facility.

(c) Compatibility.—Congress hereby determines that the oil and gas leasing program final rules and regulations authorized by this section in the 1002 Area are compatible with the purposes for which the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge was established, and that no further findings or determinations required to implement this determination.

(d) Sole Authority.—This title shall be the sole authority for leasing on the 1002 Area. Provided, That nothing in this title shall be deemed to expand or limit State and local regulatory authority.

(e) Federal Land.—The 1002 Area shall be considered "Federal land" for the purposes of the Federal Ocean and Coastal Resources Management Act of 1982.

(f) Special Areas.—The Secretary, after consultation with the State of Alaska, City and Borough of Kaktovik, and the North Slope Borough, is authorized to designate up to a total of 45,000 acres of the 1002 Area as Special Areas and close such areas to leasing if the Secretary believes has the highest resource potential, but a total acreage nominated is less than 200,000 acres and no more than 300,000 acres shall be offered. If the total acreage nominated is less than 200,000 acres, the Secretary shall include in the lease sale areas, any other areas which he believes has the highest resource potential, but in no event shall more than 300,000 acres be offered in such sales. The Secretary shall, by regulation, establish procedures for—

(1) receipt and consideration of sealed nominations for any area in the 1002 Area for lease in, or exclusion as provided in subsection (c) from, a lease sale; and

(2) public notice of and comment on designation of areas to be included in, or excluded from, a lease sale.

(c) LEASE SALES ON 1002 AREA.—The Secretary shall, by regulation, provide for lease sales of lands on the 1002 Area. When lease sales are to be held, they shall occur after publication of a notice of the lease sale which is to be provided for in subsection (b) of this section. For the first lease sale, the Secretary shall offer for lease those acres receiving the greatest number of nominations, but no less than 200,000 acres and no more than 300,000 acres shall be offered. If the total acreage nominated is less than 200,000 acres, the Secretary shall include in the lease sale any other areas which he believes has the highest resource potential, but in no event shall more than 300,000 acres be offered in such sales. The Secretary shall, by regulation, establish procedures for—

(1) receipt and consideration of sealed nominations for any area in the 1002 Area for lease in, or exclusion as provided in subsection (c) from, a lease sale; and

(2) public notice of and comment on designation of areas to be included in, or excluded from, a lease sale.

SEC. 4502. DEFINITIONS.

When used in this title the term—

(1) "1002 Area" means that area identified as "Corridor enabling map encom- passing the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge", dated August 1980, as referenced in section 1002(b) of the Alaska National Interest Lands Conservation Act of 1980 (16 U.S.C. 3121(b)(2)) comprising approximately 1,549,000 acres; and

(2) "Secretary", except as otherwise provided, means the Secretary of the Interior or the Secretary's designee.

SEC. 4503. LEASING PROGRAM FOR LANDS WITHIN THE ANWR 1002 AREA.

(a) Authorization.—The Secretary hereby authorizes and directs the Secretary, acting through the Bureau of Land Management in consultation with the Fish and Wildlife Service and other appropriate Federal offices and agencies, to take such actions as are necessary to establish and implement a competitive oil and gas leasing program that will result in an environmentally sound program for the exploration, development, and production of the oil and gas resources of the 1002 Area and to administer the provisions of this title; through regulations, lease terms, conditions, restrictions, prohibitions, stipulations and other provisions that ensure the oil and gas exploration, development, and production activities on the 1002 Area will result in no significant adverse effect on fish and wildlife, their habitat, subsistence resources, related environment, and shall require the application of the best commercially available technology for oil and gas exploration, development, and production, on all leases, including, development, and production operations, and whenever practicable, on existing operations, and in a manner to ensure the receipt of fair market value to the public for the mineral resources to be leased.

(b) Repeal.—The prohibitions and limitations contained in section 1003 of the Alaska National Interest Lands Conservation Act of 1980 (16 U.S.C. 3134) are hereby repealed.

SEC. 4504. RULES AND REGULATIONS.

(a) Premises.—The Secretary shall prescribe such rules and regulations as may be necessary to carry out the purposes and provisions of this title, including rules and regulations relating to the relinquishment of the fish and wildlife, their habitat, subsistence resources, and the environment of the 1002 Area. Such rules and regulations shall be promulgated not later than fourteen months after publication of regulations of this title and shall, of their effective date, apply to all operations conducted under a lease issued or made available for purposes of this title. The Secretary shall periodically review and, if necessary, shall make such revisions and amendments to such rules and regulations, and all operations on the 1002 Area related to the leasing, exploration, development and production of oil and gas.

(b) Revision of Regulations.—The Secretary shall periodically review and, if appropriate, revise the rules and regulations issued under subsection (a) of this section to reflect any significant biological, environmental, or engineering data which come to the Secretary's attention.

SEC. 4505. ADEQUACY OF THE DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR'S LEGISLATIVE ENVIRONMENTAL IMPACT STATEMENT.

The "Final Legislative Environmental Impact Statement" (April 1987) prepared pursuant to section 1002 of the Alaska National Interest Lands Conservation Act of 1980 (16 U.S.C. 3142) and section 102(2)(C) of the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (42 U.S.C. 4332(2)(C)) is hereby found by Congress to be consistent with the legal and procedural requirements of the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 with respect to actions authorized to be taken by the Secretary to develop and promulgate regulations for the establishment of the leasing program authorized by this title, to conduct the first lease sale and any subsequent lease sale authorized by this title, and to grant rights-of-way and easements to carry out the purposes of this title.

SEC. 4506. LEASE SALES.

(a) Lease Sales.—Leases may be leased pursuant to the provisions of this title to any person qualified to obtain a lease for deposits of oil and gas under the Mineral Leasing Act (30 U.S.C. 181 et seq.).

(b) ANTITRUST REVIEW.—Following each lease sale, the Secretary shall offer for lease those acres receiving the greatest number of nominations, but no less than 200,000 acres and no more than 300,000 acres shall be offered. If the total acreage nominated is less than 200,000 acres, the Secretary shall include in the lease sale any other areas which he believes has the highest resource potential, but in no event shall more than 300,000 acres be offered in such sales. The Secretary shall, by regulation, establish procedures for—

(1) receipt and consideration of sealed nominations for any area in the 1002 Area for lease in, or exclusion as provided in subsection (c) from, a lease sale; and

(2) public notice of and comment on designation of areas to be included in, or excluded from, a lease sale.

(c) LEASE SALES ON 1002 AREA.—The Secretary shall, by regulation, provide for lease sales of lands on the 1002 Area. When lease sales are to be held, they shall occur after publication of a notice of the lease sale which is to be provided for in subsection (b) of this section. For the first lease sale, the Secretary shall offer for lease those acres receiving the greatest number of nominations, but no less than 200,000 acres and no more than 300,000 acres shall be offered. If the total acreage nominated is less than 200,000 acres, the Secretary shall include in the lease sale any other areas which he believes has the highest resource potential, but in no event shall more than 300,000 acres be offered in such sales. The Secretary shall, by regulation, establish procedures for—

(1) receipt and consideration of sealed nominations for any area in the 1002 Area for lease in, or exclusion as provided in subsection (c) from, a lease sale; and

(2) public notice of and comment on designation of areas to be included in, or excluded from, a lease sale.

SEC. 4507. GRANT OF LEASES BY THE SECRETARY.

(a) In General.—The Secretary is authorized to grant to the highest responsible qualified bidder by sealed competitive bidding the right to prospect, drill, and/or mine on any or all of the 1002 Area upon payment of the lessee of such bonus as may be accepted by the Secretary and of such royalty as may be fixed in the lease, which shall be paid to the Secretary by the lessee in the manner and in the amounts as provided in the lease. The Secretary shall be authorized to grant to the highest responsible qualified bidder by sealed competitive bidding the right to prospect, drill, and/or mine on any or all of the 1002 Area upon payment of the lessee of such bonus as may be accepted by the Secretary and of such royalty as may be fixed in the lease, which shall be paid to the Secretary by the lessee in the manner and in the amounts as provided in the lease.

(b) ANTITRUST REVIEW.—Following each notice of a proposed lease sale and before the Secretary grants a lease as provided in section 1002, the Secretary shall grant the public an opportunity to comment on the notice of the proposed lease sale. The Secretary shall, within 30 days of the date of enactment of this title, perform an antitrust review of the results of such lease sale on the likely effects the issuance of such leases would have on competition and the Attorney General shall ad dvise the Committee conducting any exploration for, or development, the Secretary may prescribe at the time of offering the area for lease.
provide that the Secretary shall provide the lessee and its surety under the terms of this title, to ensure the complete and consistent recognition of a national inter-ent feasible that will ensure productivity

CANCELLATION OF LEASES.—A lease shall be forfeited and canceled by any appropriate proceeding brought by the Secretary in any United States district court having jurisdiction under the provisions of this title; and
(2) provide that cancellation of a lease under this title shall in no way release the owner of the lease from the obligation to provide for reclamation of the lease site.

SEC. 4510. OIL AND GAS INFORMATION.

(a) REQUIREMENT.—The Secretary shall, by rule or regulation, establish such standards as may be necessary to ensure that an adequate bond, surety, or other financial arrangement will be established prior to the commencement of surface disturbing activities on any lease, to ensure the complete and timely reclamation of the lease tract, and the protection of any water and waters adversely affected by lease operations after the abandonment or cessation of oil and gas operations on the lease. Such bond, surety, or other financial arrangement shall be in an amount—
(1) to be determined by the Secretary to provide for reclamation of the lease tract, in accordance with an approved or revised exploration or development and production plan; plus
(2) set by the Secretary consistent with the type of operations proposed, to provide the means for rapid and effective cleanup, and to minimize damages resulting from an oil spill, the escape of gas, refuse, domestic wastewater, hazardous or toxic substances, or fire caused by oil and gas activities.

(b) ADJUSTMENT.—In the event an approved exploration or development and production plan is revised, the Secretary may adjust the amount of the bond, surety, or other financial arrangement to conform to such modified plan.

(d) DURATION.—The responsibility and liability of the lessee and its surety under the bond, surety, or other financial arrangement shall continue until such time as the Secretary determines that there has been compliance with the terms and conditions of the lease and all applicable laws.

(e) TERMINATION.—Within 60 days after determining that there has been compliance with the terms and conditions of the lease and all applicable laws, the Secretary, after consultation with affected Federal and State agencies, shall notify the lessee that the period of liability under the bond, surety, or other financial arrangement has been termiated.

SEC. 4510. OIL AND GAS INFORMATION.

(a) In General.—(1) Any lessee or permittee conducting any exploration for, or development, the Secretary may prescribe at the time of offering the area for lease; upon the lessee at the lease owner's post office address of record;

(12) provide that whenever the owner of any productive lease fails to comply with any of the provisions of this title, or of any applicable provision of Federal or State environmental law, or of the lease, or of any regulation issued under this title, such lease may be forfeited and canceled by any appropriate proceeding brought by the Secretary in any United States district court having jurisdiction under the provisions of this title;

(13) allow the lessee, at the discretion of the Secretary, to make written relinquishment of all rights under any lease issued pursuant to this title, except such relinquishment by the lessee of any lease issued under this title where there has not been surface disturbance on the lands covered by such lease;

(14) provide that for the purpose of conserving the natural resources of any oil or gas pool, field, or like area, or any part thereof, the Secretary may, as nearly as practicable, lessees unite with each other in collectively adopting and operating under a cooperative or unit plan of development for operation of such pool, field, or like area, or any part thereof, and the Secretary is also authorized and directed to enter into such agreements as are necessary or appropriate for the conservation of the United States against drainage;

(15) require that the holder of a lease or leases on lands within the 1002 Area shall be liable for the full reclamation of those lands within and any other Federal lands adversely affected in connection with exploration, development, production or transportation of oil or gas, to the Secretary within the 1002 Area by the holder of a lease or as a result of activities conducted on the lease by any of the lessees' subcontractors or agents;

(16) provide that the holder of a lease may not delegate or convey, by contract or otherwise, the reclamation responsibility and liability to another party without the express written approval of the Secretary;

(17) provide that the standard of reclamation for lands required to be reclaimed under this title shall be established by a condition capable of supporting the uses which the lands were capable of supporting prior to any exploration, development, or production activities, or upon application by the lessee to a higher or better use as approved by the Secretary;

(18) contain such other provisions as the Secretary determines necessary to ensure compliance with the provisions of this title and the regulations issued under this title.

SEC. 4509. BONDING REQUIREMENTS TO ENSURE FINANCIAL RESPONSIBILITY OF LESSEE AND AVOID FEDERAL LIABILITY.

(a) REQUIREMENT.—The Secretary shall, by rule or regulation, establish such standards as may be necessary to ensure that an adequate bond, surety, or other financial arrangement will be established prior to the commencement of surface disturbing activities on any lease, to ensure the complete and timely reclamation of the lease tract, and the protection of any water and water resources adversely affected by lease operations after the abandonment or cessation of oil and gas operations on the lease. Such bond, surety, or financial arrangement shall be in an amount—

(1) “antitrust review” shall be deemed an “antitrust investigation” for the purposes of the Antitrust Division Act (15 U.S.C. 1311 et seq.); and

(2) the provisions of this title shall—
(1) require that exploration activities pur-SUANT TO ANY LEASE.—No lease issued or maintained under this title shall—

(10) provide that whenever the owner of a nonproducing lease fails to comply with any of the provisions of this title, or of any applicable provision of Federal or State environmental law, or of the lease, or of any regulation issued under this title, such lease may be canceled by the Secretary if such default continues for more than thirty days after notice by registered letter to the lease owner at the lease owner's post office

(9) require the lessee to provide for reclamation of all rights under any lease issued pursuant to this title;

(8) contain such provisions relating to the lease site, and in order to avoid the unnecessary duplication of facilities, to protect the environment of the 1002 Area, and to protect correlative rights, the Secretary shall require the lessee to make good, or to practicable, lessees unite with each other in collect-tively adopting and operating under a cooperative or unit plan of development for operation of such pool, field, or like area, or any part thereof, and the Secretary is also authorized and directed to enter into such agreements as are necessary or appropriate for the conservation of the United States against drainage;

(5) require that all development and production on lands subject to lease issued or maintained pursuant to this title shall be conducted in accordance with development and production plans approved by the Secretary;

(6) require posting of bond as required by section 4509 of this title;

(7) provide that the Secretary may close, on a seasonal basis, portions of the 1002 Area to exploratory drilling activities as nec-ecessary to protect caribou calving areas and other species of fish and wildlife;

(8) contain such provisions relating to the protection of fish and wildlife, their habitat, and the environment, as required by section 4503(a) of this title;

(9) provide that the holder of a lease, its agents, and the lessee shall use best efforts to provide a fair share, as determined by the level of obligation previously agreed to in the 1974 agreement implementing section 29 of the Federal Agreement and Grant of Right of Way for the Operation of the Trans-Alaska Pipeline, of employment and contracting for Alaska Natives and Alaska Native Corporations and tribal organizations acting in the name of the State of Alaska, as described in the

SEC. 4512. RENewed ENERGY RESEARCH AND DEVELOPMENT FUND.

(a) Deposit into Treasury.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, all revenues received by the Federal Government from the sale of materials, such as natural gas, oil, coal, and uranium, which are produced from oil and gas leases on the 1002 Area for the transportation of oil and gas leases on the 1002 Area shall be deposited into the Treasury of the United States, solely as provided in this section.

(b) Use of Renewable Energy Fund.—Of the amounts in the Renewable Energy Fund, $1,000,000,000 for each of fiscal years 2000 and 2001, and $2,000,000,000 for each of fiscal years 2002 through 2010 shall be used to fund renewable energy research, demonstration, and development activities which shall be used to respond appropriately to increasing school enrollments or achieve such savings as may be necessary for each of fiscal years 2000 and 2001, and $2,000,000,000 for each of fiscal years 2002 through 2010.

SEC. 4513. ENFORCEMENT OF SAFETY AND ENVIRONMENTAL SAFETY AND ENVIRONMENTAL REGULATIONS; ENFORCEMENT OF SAFETY AND ENVIRONMENTAL SAFETY AND ENVIRONMENTAL REGULATIONS; PROHIBITING SPECIFIED CONSTRUCTION; REQUIREMENTS OF LEASE

(a) Responsibility of the Secretary.—The Secretary shall diligently enforce all regulations, regulations, terms, conditions, restrictions, prohibitions, and stipulations promulgated pursuant to this title.

(b) Responsibility of Operators of Leases.—It shall be the responsibility of any holder of a lease under this title to—

(1) maintain all operations within such regulations, lease terms, conditions, restrictions, prohibitions, and stipulations promulgated pursuant to this title.

(2) maintain such operations in a manner to prevent any adverse effect on the fish and wildlife, their habitat, subsistence resources, and the environment of, the 1002 Area.

(3) provide to the Secretary, pursuant to paragraphs (1) and (2) of this section, such information as the Secretary may reasonably request.

(4) notify the Secretary of any violation of any provision in this title, or any other Federal law, Federal regulations, lease terms, conditions, restrictions which shall be applicable to the release of such data and information.

SEC. 4514. NEW REVENUES.

(a) Deposit into Treasury.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, all revenues received by the Federal Government from the sale of materials, such as natural gas, oil, coal, and uranium, which are produced from oil and gas leases on the 1002 Area for the transportation of oil and gas leases on the 1002 Area shall be deposited into the Treasury of the United States, solely as provided in this section.

(b) Use of Renewable Energy Fund.—Of the amounts in the Renewable Energy Fund, $1,000,000,000 for each of fiscal years 2000 and 2001, and $2,000,000,000 for each of fiscal years 2002 through 2010 shall be used to fund renewable energy research, demonstration, and development activities which shall be used to respond appropriately to increasing school enrollments or achieve such savings as may be necessary for each of fiscal years 2000 and 2001, and $2,000,000,000 for each of fiscal years 2002 through 2010.

(c) Emergency Funds.—Section 2602(e) of the Omnibus Budget Reconciliation Act of 1981 (42 U.S.C. 8621) is amended by striking “2004” and inserting “2010”.

(d) Other Grants.—(1) Grants for Administration.—Grants under subsection (b)(2) shall be used to achieve energy efficiency performance not less than 3 percent beyond the levels prescribed in the 1998 International Energy Conservation Code as it is in effect for new construction and existing buildings. Grants under such subsection shall be made to school districts that have—

(A) demonstrated a need for such grants in order to respond appropriately to increasing elementary and secondary school enrollments or to make major investments in renovation of school facilities; and

(B) demonstrated that the districts do not have adequate funds to respond appropriately to such enrollments or achieve such investments without assistance; and

(2) made a commitment to use the grant funds to develop energy efficient school buildings in accordance with the plan developed and approved pursuant to subsection (e)(1).

(e) Other Grants.—(1) Grants for Administration.—Grants under subsection (b)(2) shall be used to evaluate compliance by school districts with the requirements of this section and in addition for—

(A) distributing information and materials to clearly define and promote the development of energy efficient school buildings for new and existing facilities;

(B) organizing and conducting programs for school board members, school district personnel, architects, engineers, and others to advance the concepts of energy efficient school buildings;
(C) obtaining technical services and assistance in planning and designing energy efficient school buildings;

(D) collecting and monitoring data and information pertaining to the energy efficient school building projects.

SEC. 4603. AMENDMENTS TO WEATHERIZATION ASSISTANCE PROGRAM.

(a) ELIGIBILITY.—Section 412(c) of the Energy Conservation and Production Act (42 U.S.C. 6822(c)) is amended—

(1) in paragraph (7)(A), by striking “15” and inserting “150”;

and

(2) in paragraph (7)(C), by striking “125” and inserting “150”.

(b) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—

Section 422(a) of the Energy Conservation and Production Act (42 U.S.C. 6822(a)) is amended—

(1) by striking “$200,000,000” and inserting “$250,000,000”;

and

(2) by striking “1991” and all that follows through “1994,” and inserting “2009, $400,000,000 for fiscal year 2003, $450,000,000 for fiscal year 2004, $500,000,000 for fiscal year 2005, and such sums as are necessary for each fiscal year thereafter.”

SEC. 4604. AMENDMENTS TO STATE ENERGY PROGRAM.

(a) STATE ENERGY CONSERVATION PLANS.—Section 364 of the Energy Policy and Conservation Act (42 U.S.C. 6324) is amended—

(2) in subsection (g), by striking “15 years” and inserting “20 years”,

(3) by striking “1991” and all that follows through “1994,” and inserting “2009, $400,000,000 for fiscal year 2003, $450,000,000 for fiscal year 2004, $500,000,000 for fiscal year 2005, and such sums as are necessary for each fiscal year thereafter.”

(b) ENERGY EFFICIENCY GOALS.—Section 364 of the Energy Policy and Conservation Act (42 U.S.C. 6324) is amended—

(1) by striking “1991” and inserting “January 1, 2001”; and

(2) by striking “20 years” and inserting “25 years”.;

(c) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—Section 365(f)(1) of the Energy Policy and Conservation Act (42 U.S.C. 6325(f)(1)) is amended by striking “1991” and all that follows through “1994,” and inserting “2009, $400,000,000 for fiscal year 2003, $450,000,000 for fiscal year 2004, $500,000,000 for fiscal year 2005, and such sums as are necessary for each fiscal year thereafter.”

SEC. 4605. ENHANCEMENT AND EXTENSION OF AUTHORITY RELATING TO FEDERAL ENERGY SAVINGS PERFORMANCE CONTRACTS.

(a) ENERGY SAVINGS THROUGH CONSTRUCTION OF REPLACEMENT FACILITIES.—Section 804 of the National Energy Conservation Policy Act (42 U.S.C. 8287c) is amended—

(1) in paragraph (2)—

(A) by redesignating subparagraphs (A) and (B) as clauses (1) and (2), respectively;

(B) by inserting “(A)” after “(2)”;

and

(C) by adding at the end the following:

(2) The term ‘energy savings’ also means a reduction in the cost of energy, from such a base cost established through a methodology set forth in the contract, that would otherwise be utilized in 1 or more existing federal buildings or facilities, in consideration of ownership or operation by reason of the construction and operation of 1 or more buildings or facilities, as well as benefits ancillary to the purpose of such contract or contract term, including savings resulting from reduced costs of operation and maintenance at new and/or additional buildings or facilities when compared with the costs of operation and maintenance at existing buildings or facilities.”.

(b) COST SAVINGS FROM OPERATIONAL AND MAINTENANCE EFFICIENCIES IN REPLACEMENT FACILITIES.—Section 804 of the National Energy Conservation Policy Act (42 U.S.C. 8287(a)) is amended by adding at the end the following—

In the case of an energy savings contract or energy savings performance contract providing for energy savings through the construction and operation of 1 or more buildings or facilities, to replace 1 or more existing buildings or facilities, benefits ancillary to the purpose of such contract under paragraph (1) may include savings resulting from reduced costs of operation and maintenance at new and/or additional buildings or facilities, from a base cost of operation and maintenance established through a methodology set forth in the contract.

SEC. 4606. FEDERAL ENERGY EFFICIENCY REQUIREMENT.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Through cost-effective measures, each agency shall reduce energy consumption per gross square foot of its facilities by 30 percent by 2015 and 50 percent by 2020 relative to 1990.

(b) IMPLEMENTATION PLAN.—Not later than 1 year after date of enactment of this section, each agency shall develop and submit to the President a description and implementation plan for fulfilling the requirements of this section.

(c) ANNUAL REPORT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Each agency shall measure and report annually to Congress and the President its progress in meeting the requirements of this section.

(2) GUIDELINES.—The Secretary of Energy, in consultation with the Administrator of... the Energy Information Administration, shall develop and issue guidelines for agencies’ policies of their annual report, including guidance on how to measure energy consumption in Federal facilities.

(d) EXEMPTION OF CERTAIN FACILITIES.—A facility is subject to this order if the Secretary determines that compliance with the Energy Policy Act of 1992 is not practical for that particular facility. Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment, the Secretary shall, in consultation with the Administrator of the Energy Information Administration, set guidelines for agencies to use in excluding certain facilities to meet the requirements of this section.

(e) APPLICABILITY.—The Department of Defense is subject to this order only to the extent that it does not impact, or adversely affect, military operations and training (defense is subject to this order only to the extent that it does not impact, or adversely affect, military operations and training).

Section 508 of the Energy Policy Act of 1992 (42 U.S.C. 13258) is amended by adding at the end the following:—

"(e) CREDIT FOR ACQUISITION OR INSTALLATION OF QUALIFYING INFRASTRUCTURE.—The Secretary shall allocate an infrastructure credit to an agency under this section if the agency is required to acquire an alternative fueled vehicle under this title, or to a Federal fleet as defined by section 304(b)(3) of this Act, for the acquisition or installation of the fuel or the needed infrastructure, including the supply and delivery systems, necessary to operate or maintain the alternative fueled vehicle. Such necessary infrastructure shall include—

"(1) equipment required to refuel or recharge the alternative fueled vehicle;

"(2) facilities or equipment required to maintain, repair or operate the alternative fueled vehicle;

"(3) training programs, educational materials or other activity to provide information regarding the operation, maintenance or benefits associated with the alternative fueled vehicle; and

"(4) such other activity as the Secretary deems an appropriate expenditure in support of the operation, maintenance or further widespread adoption or utilization of the alternative fueled vehicle.

"(f) QUALIFYING INFRASTRUCTURE CREDIT.—The term ‘infrastructure credit’ shall mean—

"(1) that equipment or activity defined in subsection (e) above; and

"(2) be equivalent in cost to the acquisition of an alternative fueled vehicle for which the expenditure on the infrastructure is made.

"(g) LIMITATION ON NUMBER OF INFRASTRUCTURE CREDITS ISSUED.—Each fleet or covered person that is required to acquire an alternative fueled vehicle under this title, or each Federal fleet as defined by section 304(b)(3) of this title, shall be limited in the number of infrastructure credits that may be acquired and used to meet the alternative fueled vehicle requirements of this Act to no more than the equivalent of 1/2 of the percentage of the fuel volume used per annum.''

SEC. 4704. FEDERAL FLEET FUEL ECONOMY ANDalusia

(a) FUEL ECONOMY.—Through cost-effective measures, each agency shall increase the average fuel economy rating of passenger cars and light trucks acquired by at least 3 miles per gallon by the end of fiscal year 2005 compared to acquisitions in fiscal year 2000.

(b) USE OF ALTERNATIVE FUELS.—Through cost-effective measures, each agency shall, by the end of fiscal year 2005, use alternative fuels for at least 50 percent of the total annual volume of fuel used by the agency. No more than 25 percent of fuel purchased by Federal agencies may include—

SEC. 704. FEDERAL FLEET FUEL ECONOMY AND USE OF ALTERNATIVE FUELS.

(a) FUEL ECONOMY.—Through cost-effective measures, each agency shall increase the average fuel economy rating of passenger cars and light trucks acquired by at least 3 miles per gallon by the end of fiscal year 2005 compared to acquisitions in fiscal year 2000.

(b) USE OF ALTERNATIVE FUELS.—Through cost-effective measures, each agency shall, by the end of fiscal year 2005, use alternative fuels for at least 50 percent of the total annual volume of fuel used by the agency. No more than 25 percent of fuel purchased by Federal agencies may include—

SEC. 4705. LOCAL GOVERNMENT GRANT PROGRAM.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—Within 1 year of date of enactment of this section, the Secretary of Energy shall establish a program for making grants to local governments for covering the incremental cost of qualified alternative fueled vehicles.

(b) CRITERIA.—In deciding to whom grants shall be made under this subsection, the Secretary shall make grants to those local governments having the incremental cost of qualified alternative fueled vehicles:

(1) In general.—Each agency shall measure and report annually to Congress and the President its progress in meeting the requirements of this section.

(2) GUIDELINES.—The Secretary of Energy, through the Federal Energy Management Program and in consultation with the Administrator of the Energy Information Administration, shall develop and issue guidelines for agencies’ preparation of their annual report, including guidance on how to measure fuel economy for the collection and annual reporting of data to demonstrate compliance with the requirements of this section.

(3) Definitions.—In this section:

(1) SUBJECT.—The term ‘alternative fuel’ means any fuel defined as an alternative fuel under section 303(b)(3) of title III of the Energy Policy and Conservation Act of 1975, as amended, is defined as follows:

(2) in subsection (g)(4)(B), after the words, ‘‘solely on alternative fuel’’, insert the words ‘‘such vehicle has a VIN number’’.

SEC. 4705. LOCAL GOVERNMENT GRANT PROGRAM.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—Within 1 year of date of enactment of this section, the Secretary of Energy shall establish a program for making grants to local governments for covering the incremental cost of qualified alternative fueled vehicles.

(b) CRITERIA.—In deciding to whom grants shall be made under this subsection, the Secretary shall establish a program for making grants to local governments for covering the incremental cost of qualified alternative fueled vehicles.
would have a significant beneficial effect on energy security and the environment.

(d) QUALIFIED ALTERNATIVE FUEL MOTOR VEHICLE DEFINED.—For purposes of this section, the term ‘‘qualified motor vehicle’’ means any motor vehicle which is capable of operating only on an alternative fuel.

(e) INCREMENTAL COST.—For purposes of this section, the incremental cost of any qualified alternative fuel motor vehicle is equal to the amount of the excess of the manufacturer’s suggested retail price for such vehicle over such price for a gasoline or diesel motor vehicle of the same model.

(f) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—For the purposes of this section, there are authorized to be appropriated $100,000,000 annually for each of the fiscal years 2002 through 2006.

Subtitle B—Renewable Energy

SEC. 4710. RESIDENTIAL RENEWABLE ENERGY GRANT PROGRAM

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of Energy shall develop and implement a grant program to offset a portion of the total cost of certain eligible residential renewable energy systems.

(b) ELIGIBILITY.—Grants may be awarded for—

(1) the new installation of an eligible residential energy system for an existing dwelling unit;

(2) the purchase of an existing dwelling unit with an eligible residential renewable energy system that was installed prior to the date of enactment of this section;

(3) the addition to or augmentation of an existing eligible residential renewable energy system installed on a dwelling unit prior to the date of enactment of this section, provided that any such addition or augmentation results in additional electricity, heat, or other useful energy; or

(4) the construction of a new home or rental property which includes an eligible residential renewable energy system.

(c) TOTAL COST.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—For purposes of this section, ‘‘total cost’’ means expenditure of funds for—

(A) any equipment whose primary purpose is to provide for the collection, conversion, transfer, distribution, storage or control of electricity or heat generated from renewable energy systems installed on or in connection with a dwelling unit;

(B) installation charges;

(C) labor costs properly allocable to the on-site preparation, assembly, or original installation of the system; and

(D) piping or wiring to interconnect such system to the dwelling unit.

(2) LEASED SYSTEMS.—In the case of a system that is leased, ‘‘total cost’’ means the principal recovery portion of all lease payments scheduled to be made during the full term of the lease, excluding interest charges and maintenance expenses.

(3) EXISTING SYSTEMS.—In the case of an addition to or augmentation of an existing system, ‘‘total cost’’ shall include only those expenditures related to the incremental cost of the addition or augmentation, and not the full cost of the system.

(d) COST BUY-DOWN.—Grants provided under this section shall not exceed $3,000 per eligible residential renewable energy system, and shall be limited further as follows:

(1) For fiscal years 2002 and 2003, grants provided under this section shall be limited to the smaller of—

(A) 40 percent of the total cost of the energy system; or

(B) $2.50 per watt of system electricity output.

(2) For fiscal years 2004 and 2005, grants provided under this section shall be limited to the smaller of—

(A) 50 percent of the total cost of the energy system; or

(B) $3.00 per watt of system electricity output.

(3) For fiscal years 2006 and 2007, grants provided under this section shall be limited to the smaller of—

(A) 20 percent of the total cost of the energy system; or

(B) $1.50 per watt of system electricity output.

(4) For fiscal years 2008 and 2009, grants provided under this section shall be limited to the smaller of—

(A) 20 percent of the total cost of the energy system; or

(B) $1.50 per watt of system electricity output.

(5) For fiscal years 2010 and 2011, grants provided under this section shall be limited to the smaller of—

(A) 10 percent of the total cost of the energy system; or

(B) $1.00 per watt of system electricity output.

(e) LIMITATIONS.—No grant shall be allowed under this section unless—

(1) such expenditure is made for property installed on or in connection with a dwelling unit which is located in the United States and which is used as a residence;

(2) in the case of solar water heating equipment such equipment is certified for performance and safety by the nonprofit Solar Rating Certification Corporation or a comparable entity endorsed by the government of the State in which such property is installed; and

(3) such system meets appropriate fire and electric code requirements.

(f) RENEWABLE ENERGY.—

(1) DEFINITIONS.—In this subsection:

(A) FORM OF RENEWABLE ENERGY.—The term ‘‘form of renewable energy’’ means energy produced through the use of—

(i) a solar thermal system;

(ii) a solar photovoltaic system;

(iii) wind;

(iv) biomass;

(v) a hydroelectric system; or

(vi) a source of geothermal energy.

(B) RENEWABLE ENERGY SYSTEM.—The term ‘‘renewable energy system’’ means property that uses a form of renewable energy to create electricity, heat, or any other form of useful energy.

(2) SOLAR PANELS.—No expenditure relating to a solar panel or other property installed as a roof (or portion thereof) shall fail to be treated as property described in paragraph (1) solely because it constitutes a structural component of the structure on which it is installed.

(3) ENERGY STORAGE MEDIUM.—Expenditures which are properly allocable to a swimming pool, hot tub, or any other energy storage medium which has a function other than the function of such storage shall not be taken into account for purposes of this section.

(g) SPECIAL RULES.—For purposes of this section:

(1) TENANT-STOCKHOLDER IN COOPERATIVE HOUSING CORPORATION.—In the case of an individual who is a tenant-stockholder (as defined in section 10 of the cooperative housing corporation (as defined in such section), such individual shall be treated as having made his tenant-stockholder’s proportionate share (as defined in 26 U.S.C. 216(b)(3)) of any expenditures of such corporation.

SEC. 4711. ASSESSMENT OF RENEWABLE ENERGY RESOURCES

(a) IN GENERAL.—Not later than twelve months after the date of enactment of this section, the Secretary of Energy shall submit to Congress an assessment of all renewable energy resources available within the United States.

(b) RESOURCE ASSESSMENT.—Such report shall include a detailed inventory describing the available amount and characteristics of solar, wind, biomass, geothermal, hydroelectric and other renewable energy sources, and an estimate of the costs needed to develop each resource. The report shall also include such other information as the Secretary of Energy believes would be useful in siting renewable energy generation, such as appropriate terrain, population and load centers, nearby energy infrastructure, and localities.

(c) AVAILABILITY.—The information and cost estimates in this report shall be updated annually and made available to the public, along with the data used to create the report.

(d) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—For the purposes of carrying out this section, there are authorized to be appropriated $10,000,000 for fiscal years 2002 through 2006.
Subtitle C—Hydroelectric Licensing Reform

SEC. 4721. SHORT TITLE.

This subtitle may be cited as the “Hydroelectric Licensing Process Improvement Act of 2001.”

SEC. 4722. FINDINGS.

Congress finds that—

(1) hydroelectric power is an irreplaceable source of clean, economic, renewable energy with the unique capability of supporting reliable electric service while maintaining environmental quality;

(2) hydroelectric power is the leading renewable energy resource of the United States;

(3) hydroelectric power projects provide multiple benefits to the United States, including recreation, irrigation, flood control, water supply, and fish and wildlife benefits;

(4) in the next 15 years, the bulk of all non-Federal hydroelectric power capacity in the United States is due to be relicensed by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission;

(5) the process of licensing hydroelectric projects by the Commission—

(A) does not produce optimal decisions, because the agencies that participate in the process are not required to consider the full effects of their mandatory and recommended conditions on a license;

(B) is inefficient, in part because agencies do not always submit their mandatory and recommended conditions by a time certain;

(C) is burdened by uncoordinated environmental reviews and duplicative permitting authority; and

(D) is burdensome for all participants and too often results in litigation; and

(6) while the alternative licensing procedures to applicants for hydroelectric power licenses provide important opportunities for the collaborative resolution of many of the issues in hydroelectric project licensing, those procedures are not appropriate in every case and cannot substitute for statutory reforms of the hydroelectric licensing process.

SEC. 4723. PURPOSES.

The purpose of this subtitle is to achieve the objective of relicensing hydroelectric power projects to maintain high environmental standards while preserving low cost power by—

(1) requiring agencies to consider the full effects of their mandatory and recommended conditions on a hydroelectric power license and to document the consideration of a broad range of factors;

(2) requiring the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission to impose deadlines by which Federal agencies must submit proposed mandatory and recommended conditions to a license; and

(3) making other improvements in the licensing process.

SEC. 4724. PROCESS FOR CONSIDERATION BY FEDERAL AGENCIES OF CONDITIONS TO LICENSES.

(a) In General.—Part I of the Federal Power Act (16 U.S.C. 791a et seq.) is amended by adding at the end the following:

```
SEC. 33. PROCESS FOR CONSIDERATION BY FEDERAL AGENCIES OF CONDITIONS TO LICENSES.
```

```
(a) DEFINITIONS.—In this section:

(1) CONDITION.—The term ‘‘condition’’ means—

(A) a condition to a license for a project on a Federal reservation determined by a consulting agency for the purpose of the first proviso of section 4(e); and

(B) a prescription relating to the construction, maintenance, or operation of a fishway determined by a consulting agency for the purpose of the first sentence of section 18.

(2) CONSULTING AGENCY.—The term ‘‘consulting agency’’ means—

(A) in relation to a condition described in paragraph (1)(A), the Federal agency with responsibility for supervising the reservation; and

(B) in relation to a condition described in paragraph (1)(B), the Secretary of the Interior or the Secretary of Commerce, as appropriate.

(3) FACTORS TO BE CONSIDERED.—

(I) IN GENERAL.—In determining a condition, a consulting agency shall take into consideration—

(A) the impacts of the condition on—

(i) economic and power values;

(ii) electric generation capacity and system reliability;

(iii) air quality (including consideration of the impacts on greenhouse gas emissions); and

(iv) drinking, flood control, irrigation, navigation, or recreation water supply;

(B) compatibility with other conditions to be imposed on a license, including mandatory conditions of other agencies, when available; and

(C) means to ensure that the condition contributes only direct project environmental impacts, and does so at the lowest project cost.

(2) DOCUMENTATION.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—In the course of the consideration of factors under paragraph (1) and before any review under subsection (e), a consulting agency shall create written documentation detailing, among other pertinent matters, all proposals made, comments received, facts considered, and analyses made regarding each of those factors sufficient to demonstrate that each of the factors was given full consideration in determining the condition to be submitted to the Commission.

(B) SUBMISSION TO THE COMMISSION.—A consulting agency shall include the documentation under subparagraph (A) in its submission of a condition to the Commission.

(c) SCIENTIFIC REVIEW.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Each condition determined by a consulting agency shall be subjected to appropriately substantiated scientific review if the review—

(A) was based on current empirical data or field-tested data; and

(B) was subjected to peer review.

(2) DATA.—For the purpose of paragraph (1), a condition shall be considered to have been subjected to appropriately substantiated scientific review if the review—

(A) was based on current empirical data or field-tested data; and

(B) was subjected to peer review.

(d) RELATIONSHIP TO IMPACTS ON FEDERAL RESERVATION.—In the case of a condition for the purpose of the first proviso of section 4(e), each condition determined by a consulting agency and relating to the impacts of the project within the Federal reservation.

(e) ADMINISTRATIVE REVIEW.—

(1) OPPORTUNITY FOR REVIEW.—Before submitting to the Commission a proposed condition, and at least 90 days before a license applicant notifies the consulting agency to propose or establish a condition to the license applicant and offer the license applicant an opportunity to obtain expedited administrative review before an administrative law judge or reviewing body; or

(2) SUBMISSION OF FINAL CONDITION.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—After an applicant files a license application, the Commission shall—

(i) conduct an administrative review under this subsection, a consulting agency shall—

(i) take such action as is necessary to—

(A) submit the condition;

(B) include with its submission to the Commission of a proposed condition—

(i) the record on administrative review; and

(ii) documentation of any action taken following administrative review.

(B) FAILURE TO MAKE TIMELY COMPLETION REVIEW.—If the consulting agency fails to make timely completion of the review—

(A) IN GENERAL.—A review under paragraph (1) shall be completed not more than 180 days after the license applicant notifies the consulting agency of the request for review.

(B) FAILURE TO MAKE TIMELY COMPLETION REVIEW.—If a review of a proposed condition is not completed within the time specified by subparagraph (A), the Commission may treat a condition submitted by the consulting agency as a recommendation is treated under section 10(j).

(3) REMAND.—If the administrative law judge or reviewing body finds that a proposed condition is unreasonable or that the consulting agency failed to comply with any of the requirements of this section, the administrative law judge or reviewing body shall—

(A) render a decision that—

(i) explains the reasons for a finding that the condition is unreasonable or that the consulting agency failed to comply with any of the requirements of this section, and

(ii) formulate a condition that follows the recommendation of the administrative law judge or reviewing body; or

(iii) otherwise comply with this section; and

(B) include with its submission to the Commission of a proposed condition—

(i) the record on administrative review; and

(ii) documentation of any action taken following administrative review.

(f) SUBMISSION OF FINAL CONDITION.—In General.—After a consulting agency determines that the final condition meets the requirements of this section, the final condition shall be not later than 1 year after have authority to recommend or establish a condition to the license; and

(B) the Commission may, but shall not be required to, recommend or establish an appropriate condition to the license that—

(i) furthers the interest sought to be protected by the provision of law that authorizes the consulting agency to propose or establish a condition to the license; and

(ii) conforms to the requirements of this Act.

(4) EXTENSION.—The Commission may make 1 extension, of not more than 30 days, of a deadline set under paragraph (1).

```

(B) compliance by the consulting agency with the requirements of this section, including the requirement to consider the factors described in subsection (b)(1).

(2) COMPLETION Review.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—A review under paragraph (1) shall be completed not more than 180 days after the license applicant notifies the consulting agency of the request for review.

(B) FAILURE TO MAKE TIMELY COMPLETION REVIEW.—If a review of a proposed condition is not completed within the time specified by subparagraph (A), the Commission may treat a condition submitted by the consulting agency as a recommendation is treated under section 10(j).

(3) REMAND.—If the administrative law judge or reviewing body finds that a proposed condition is unreasonable or that the consulting agency failed to comply with any of the requirements of this section, the administrative law judge or reviewing body shall—

(A) render a decision that—

(i) explains the reasons for a finding that the condition is unreasonable or that the consulting agency failed to comply with any of the requirements of this section, and

(ii) formulate a condition that follows the recommendation of the administrative law judge or reviewing body; or

(iii) otherwise comply with this section; and

(B) include with its submission to the Commission of a proposed condition—

(i) the record on administrative review; and

(ii) documentation of any action taken following administrative review.

(C) REMAND.—If a consulting agency does not submit a final condition to a license by the date set under paragraph (1)—

(A) the consulting agency shall not thereafter have authority to recommend or establish a condition to the license; and

(B) the Commission may, but shall not be required to, recommend or establish an appropriate condition to the license that—

(i) furthers the interest sought to be protected by the provision of law that authorizes the consulting agency to propose or establish a condition to the license; and

(ii) conforms to the requirements of this Act.

(D) EXTENSION.—The Commission may make 1 extension, of not more than 30 days, of a deadline set under paragraph (1).

Congressional Record—Senate September 21, 2001

17568
(1) ANALYSIS BY THE COMMISSION.—

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Commission shall conduct an economic analysis of each condition submitted by a consulting agency to determine whether the condition would render the project uneconomic.

(b) COMMISSION DETERMINATION ON EFFECT OF CONDITION.—The Commission, in exercising authority under section 10(j)(2), shall consider whether any recommendation submitted under section 10(j)(1) is consistent with the purposes and requirements of subsections (b) and (c) of this section.

(2) COMMISSION DETERMINATION ON EFFECT OF CONDITION.—In exercising authority under section 10(j)(2), the Commission shall conduct an economic analysis of each condition submitted by a consulting agency in a request for rehearing.

(3) CONDUCT OF ANALYSIS.—In conducting an analysis under paragraph (1), the Commission shall make a written determination on whether a condition submitted by a consulting agency—

(A) is in the public interest, as measured by the impact of the condition on the factors described in subsection (c)(1); and

(B) relates to direct project impacts within the meaning of the case of a condition for the first proviso of section 4(e); and

(C) is consistent with this Act and other terms and conditions to be included in the license.

(b) CONFORMING AND TECHNICAL AMENDMENTS.—

(1) Section 4.—Section 4(e) of the Federal Power Act (16 U.S.C. 791 et seq.) is amended—

(A) in the first proviso of the first sentence, by inserting after "conditions" the following:

"or the ability of the Commission to determine rates, terms, and conditions of an Organization Standard that is adopted by an affiliated regional reliability entity and applicable to all or a part of the region for which the affiliated regional reliability entity is responsible. A variance shall be approved by the organization and once approved, shall be treated as an Organization Standard.

(2) The term 'user of the bulk power system' means any entity that sells, purchases, or transmits electric power over a bulk power system, or that owns, operates, or maintains facilities or control systems that are part of a bulk power system, or that is a system operator, a regional transmission organization, a transmission company, a transmission system operator, or a regional security coordinator.

(3) Nothing in this section shall be construed as limiting or impairing any authority of the Commission under any other provision of this Act, including its exclusive authority to determine the conditions of transmission services subject to its jurisdiction.
guidance, or practice that such entity would propose to be made mandatory and enforceable. After allowing the Commission an opportunity to submit comments, may approve any such proposed mandatory standard, guidance, or practice, or any amendment thereto if it determines that the standard, guidance, or practice, or amendment is just, reasonable, not unduly discriminatory or preferential, and in the public interest. The Commission, upon notice and an opportunity for proceeding or finding, grant its approval to any standard, guidance, or practice for which no substantive objections are filed in the comment period. Filed standards, guidance, or practices, including any amendments thereto, shall be mandatory and applicable according to their terms following approval by the Commission and shall remain in effect until—'(1) withdrawn, disapproved, or superseded by an Organization Standard, issued or approved by the Electric Reliability Organization and made effective by the Commission under subsection (e); or

'(2) disapproved by the Commission if, upon changing its own position and after notice and an opportunity for comment, the Commission finds the standard, guidance, or practice unjust, unreasonable, unduly discriminatory or preferential or not in the public interest.

Standards, guidelines, or practices in effect pursuant to the provisions of this subsection shall be enforceable by the Commission.

'(d) ORGANIZATION APPROVAL.—

'(1) Following the issuance of a final Commission rule under subsection (b)(3), an entity may make application to the Commission for approval as the Electric Reliability Organization. The applicant shall specify in its application its governance and procedures, as well as its funding mechanism and initial funding requirements.

'(2) The Commission shall provide public notice of the application and afford interested parties opportunity to comment.

'(3) The Commission shall approve the application if the Commission determines that the applicant—

'(A) has the ability to develop, implement, and enforce standards that provide for an adequate level of reliability of the bulk power system;

'(B) has the voluntary membership to any user of the bulk power system or public interest group;

'(C) ensures fair representation of its members in the selection of its directors and fair management of its affairs, taking into account the need for efficiency and effectiveness in decisionmaking and operations and the requirements for technical competency in the development of Organization Standards and the exercise of oversight of bulk power system reliability;

'(D) ensures that no 2 industry sectors have the ability to control, and no 1 industry sector has the ability to veto, the Electric Reliability Organization’s discharge of its responsibilities (including actions by committees recommending standards to the board or other board actions to implement and enforce standards);

'(E) identifies governance by a board wholly comprised of independent directors;

'(F) provides a funding mechanism and requirements that are just, reasonable, and not unduly discriminatory or preferential, and in the public interest, which satisfy the requirements of subsection (i);

'(G) establishes procedures for development of Organization Standards that provide reasonable notice and opportunity for public comment, taking into account the need for efficiency and effectiveness in decisionmaking and operations and the requirements for technical competency in the development of Organization Standards, and which standards development process has—

'(i) open; and

'(ii) balance of interests; and

'(iii) due process, except that the procedures may include alternative procedures for emergencies;

'(H) establishes fair and impartial procedures for implementation and enforcement of Organization Standards, either directly or through delegation to an affiliated regional reliability entity, including the imposition of penalties, limitations on activities, functions, or operations, or other appropriate sanctions;

'(I) establishes procedures for notice and opportunity for public observation of all meetings, except that the procedures for public observation may include alternative procedures for emergencies or for the discussion of information the directors determine should take place in closed session, such as organization standards, directions, or commercially sensitive information;

'(J) provides for the consideration of recommendations of States and State commissions.

'(K) addresses other matters that the Commission may deem necessary or appropriate to ensure that the procedures, governance, and funding of the Electric Reliability Organization are just, reasonable, not unduly discriminatory or preferential, and are in the public interest.

'(4) The Commission shall approve only 1 Electric Reliability Organization. If the Commission receives 2 or more timely applications that satisfy the requirements of this subsection, the Commission shall approve only the application it concludes will best implement the provisions of this section.

'(e) ESTABLISHMENT OF AND MODIFICATIONS TO ORGANIZATION STANDARDS.—

'(1) The Electric Reliability Organization shall file with the Commission any new or modified organization standards, including any new or modified or organization standard, and the Commission shall follow the procedures under paragraph (2) for review of that filing.

'(2) Submissions under paragraph (1) shall include—

'(A) a concise statement of the purpose of the proposal; and

'(B) a record of any proceedings conducted with respect to such proposal.

The Commission shall provide notice of the filing of such proposal and afford interested entities 30 days to submit comments. The Commission, after taking into consideration any submitted comments, shall approve or disapprove such proposal not later than 60 days after the deadline for the submission of comments. The Commission may extend the 60 day period for an additional 90 days for good cause, and except further that if the Commission does not act to approve or disapprove a proposal within the foregoing periods, the proposal shall go into effect subject to its terms, without prejudice to the authority of the Commission thereafter to modify the proposal to conform to the applicable standards and requirements of this section.

Proposals approved by the Commission shall take effect according to their terms but not before the effective date prescribed by the Commission’s order, except as provided in paragraph (3) of this subsection.

'(3) A) In the exercise of its review responsibilities under this subsection, the Commission shall give due weight to the technical expertise of the Electric Reliability Organization with respect to the content of a new or modified organization standard, but shall not defer to the organization with respect to the effect of the standard on competition. The Commission shall approve a proposed new or modified organization standard if it determines the proposal to be just, reasonable, not unduly discriminatory or preferential, and in the public interest.

'(B) An existing or proposed organization standard which is disapproved in whole or in part by the Commission may be submitted to the Electric Reliability Organization for further consideration.

'(C) The Commission, on its own motion or upon complaint, may direct the Electric Reliability Organization to develop an organization standard, including modification to an existing organization standard, address ing a specific matter by a date certain if the Commission considers such new or modified organization standard necessary or appropriate to further the purposes of this section. The Electric Reliability Organization shall file such new or modified organization standard in accordance with this subsection.

'(D) An affiliated regional reliability entity may propose a variance or entity rule to the Electric Reliability Organization. The affiliated regional reliability entity may request that the Electric Reliability Organization expedite consideration of the proposal, and may file a notice of such request with the Commission, if expedited consideration is necessary to provide for bulk-power system reliability. If the Electric Reliability Organization fails to adopt the variance or entity rule, either in whole or in part, the affiliated regional reliability entity may request that the Commission review such action. If the Commission determines, after its review of such a request, that the action of the Electric Reliability Organization did not conform to the applicable standards and procedures approved by the Commission, or if the Commission determines that the variance or entity rule is unjust, unreasonable, not unduly discriminatory or preferential, and in the public interest, and that the Electric Reliability Organization has unreasonably rejected the proposed variance or entity rule, the Commission may, in its discretion, provide for the proposed variance or entity rule for further consideration by the Electric Reliability Organization or may direct the Electric Reliability Organization or the affiliated regional reliability entity to develop a variance or entity rule consistent with that requested by the affiliated regional reliability entity. Any such variance or entity rule proposed by an affiliated regional reliability entity shall be submitted to the Electric Reliability Organization for review and filing with the Commission in accordance with the provision specified in subsection (e).

'(E) Notwithstanding any other provision of this subsection, a proposed organization standard or amendment shall take effect according to its terms. The Electric Reliability Organization determines that an emergency exists requiring that such proposed organization standard or amendment take effect without notice or comment. The Electric Reliability Organization shall notify the Commission immediately following such determination and shall file such emergency organization standard or amendment with the Commission not later than 5 days following such determination and shall include in such filing an explanation of the need for such emergency standard. Subse-sequently, the Commission shall provide notice of an organization standard or amendment for comment, and shall follow the procedures set out in paragraphs (2) and (3) for review of the new or modified organization standard or amendment. A proposed delegation that has gone into effect shall remain in ef-flect unless and until suspended or disapproved by the Commission. If the Commission determines at any time that the emergency organization standard or amendment is not necessary, the Commission may suspend such emergency organization standard or amendment.

“(4) All users of the bulk power system shall comply with any organization standard or amendment that has gone into effect unless and until suspended or dis-approved by the Commission. If the Commission determines at any time that the emergency organization standard or amendment shall be consistent with the provisions of such international agreements.

“(g) CHANGES IN PROCEDURES, GOVERNANCE, OR FUNDING.—

“(1) The Electric Reliability Organization shall file with the Commission any proposed change in its procedures, governance, or funding, or any changes in the affiliated regional reliability entity's procedures, governance, or funding relating to delegated functions, and shall include with the filing an explanation of the basis and purpose for the change.

“(2) A proposed procedural change may take effect only upon a finding by the Commission if the change constitutes a statement of policy, practice, or interpretation with respect to the meaning or enforcement of an emergency standard to amend the effectiveness of the Electric Reliability Organization in carrying out its mission and responsibilities. All actions taken by the Electric Reliability Organization, any affiliated regional reliability entity, and the Commission shall be consistent with the provisions of subsection (d)(4).

“(3) A change in governance or funding shall not take effect unless the Commission finds that the change is just, reasonable, not unduly discriminatory or preferential, in the public interest, and satisfies the requirements of subsection (d)(4).

“(4) The Commission, upon complaint or upon its own motion, may require the Electric Reliability Organization to amend the procedures, governance, or funding if the Commission determines that the amendment is necessary to meet the requirements of this section. The Electric Reliability Organization shall file the amendment in accordance with paragraph (1) of this subsection.

“(b) DELEGATIONS OF AUTHORITY.—

“(1) The Electric Reliability Organization shall, upon request by an entity, enter into an agreement with such entity for the delegation of authority to implement and enforce organization standards in a specified geographic area if the organization finds that the entity requesting the delegation satisfies the requirements of subparagraphs (A), (B), (C), (D), (F), (J), and (K) of subsection (d)(4), and if the delegation promotes the effective and efficient implementation and administration of bulk power system reliability and the Electric Reliability Organization may enter into an agreement to delegate to the entity any other authority, except that the Electric Reliability Organization shall not enter into an agreement and approve standards for bulk power system reliability.

“(2) The Electric Reliability Organization shall enter into such agreement entered into under this subsection and any information the Commission requires with respect to the affiliated regional reli-bility entity to which authority is to be delegated. The Commission shall approve the agreement, following public notice and an opportunity for comment, if it finds that the agreement meets the requirements of paragraph (1), and is just, reasonable, not unduly discriminatory or preferential, and is in the public interest. A proposed delegation agreement with an affiliated regional reliability entity organized on an interconnection-wide basis shall be rebuttably presumed by the Commission to meet the required standards for effective and efficient implementation and administration of bulk power system reliability. No delegation by the Electric Reliability Organization shall be valid unless approved by the Commission.

“(3)(A) A delegation agreement entered into under this subsection shall specify the procedures for an affiliated regional reli-bility entity to propose entity rules or variances for review by the Electric Reliability Organization. With respect to any such proposal to adopt or modify an interconnection-wide basis, the Electric Reliability Organization shall presume such proposal valid if made by an interconnection-wide entity that is not wholly within the boundary of an affiliated regional reliability entity unless the Electric Reliability Organization makes a written finding that the proposal—

“(i) was not developed in a fair and open process that provided an opportunity for all interested parties to participate;

“(ii) has a significant adverse impact on reliability or commerce in other interconnections;

“(iii) fails to provide a level of reliability of the bulk-power system within the interconnection such that it would constitute a serious and substantial risk to the public health, safety, welfare, or national security;

“(iv) creates a serious and substantial burden on commerce within the interconnection that is not necessary for reliability.

“(B) With respect to any such proposal that would apply only to part of an interconnection, the Electric Reliability Organization shall find such proposal valid if the affiliated regional reliability entity or entities making the proposal demonstrate that it is

“(i) was developed in a fair and open process that provided an opportunity for all interested parties to participate;

“(ii) did not have a significant adverse impact on commerce that is not necessary for reli-bility;

“(iii) provides a level of bulk power system reliability adequate to protect public health, safety, welfare, and national security, and would not have a significant adverse impact on reliability; and

“(iv) in the event of a variance, is based on legitimate differences between regions or between subregions within the affiliated regional reliability entity's geographic area.

The Electric Reliability Organization shall approve or disapprove such proposal within 120 days, or the proposal shall be deemed approved. Following approval of any such proposal under this paragraph, the Electric Reliability Organization shall enter into an agreement pursuant to the procedures prescribed under subsection (e)(3). Affiliated regional reliability entities may not make redelgations to other affiliated regional reli-bility entities except pursuant to subsection (e)(3)(D).

“(4) If an affiliated regional reliability entity requests, consistent with paragraph (1) of this subsection, that the Electric Reliability Organization delegate authority to it, but is unable within 180 days to reach agreement with the Electric Reliability Organization with respect to such requested delegation, such entity may seek relief from the Commission. If, following notice and opportunity for comment, the Commission deterlates that a delegation to the entity would meet the requirements of paragraph (1) above, and that the delegation would be just, reasonable, not unduly discriminatory or preferential, and in the public interest, and that the Electric Reliability Organization has unreasonably withheld such delegation, the Commission may, by order, direct the Electric Reliability Organization to make such delegation.

“(5)(A) The Commission may, upon its own motion or upon complaint, and with notice to the appropriate affiliated regional document under an agreement, shall be consistent with the provisions of subsection (d)(4).

“(2) If, following notice and opportunity for comment, the Commission deterlates that the delegation proposed as a result of the agreement is consistent with the provisions of subsection (d)(4), the Commission may suspend the affected agreement and propose an alternative agreement. If the Commission suspends the agreement, it shall presume such proposal valid if it is made by an interconnection-wide entity that is not wholly within the boundary of an affiliated regional reliability entity and such difference is inconsistent with the effective and efficient implementation and administration of bulk power system reliability or enforcement responsibilities under the agreement.

“(iii) the geographic boundary of a transmission entity approved by the Commission is consistent with that of an affiliated regional reliability entity and such difference is inconsistent with the effective and efficient implementation and administration of bulk power system reliability or enforcement responsibilities under the agreement;

“(iv) the agreement is inconsistent with another delegation agreement as a result of actions taken under paragraph (4) of this subsection.

“(B) Following an order of the Commission issued under subparagraph (A), the Commission may suspend the affected agreement if the Electric Reliability Organization or the affiliated regional reliability entity does not propose an agreement and timely modification. If the agreement is suspended, the Electric Reliability Organization shall resume the previously delegated responsibilities.

The Commission shall allow the Electric Reliability Organization and the affiliated regional reliability entity an opportunity to appeal the suspension.

“(1) ORGANIZATION MEMBERSHIP.—Every system operator shall be required to be a member of the Electric Reliability Organiization and shall be required also to be a member of any affiliated regional reliability entity operating under an agreement effective pursuant to subsection (e)(3)(D) applicable to the region in which the system operator operates or is responsible for the operation of bulkpower system facilities.

“(j) INJUNCTIONS AND DISCIPLINARY AC-TION.—
“(1) Consistent with the range of actions approved by the Commission under subsection (e), the Electric Reliability Organization may impose a penalty, limitation of activities, functions, operations, or other disciplinary action the Electric Reliability Organization finds necessary to ensure compliance with an organization standard. A disciplinary action may be appealed to the Federal court in the district in which the affected entity is located, consistent with organization standards.(2) A disciplinary action taken under paragraph (1) may take effect not earlier than the 30th day after the Electric Reliability Organization finds necessary to prevent a serious threat to reliability, the organization may seek injunctive relief in a Federal court in the district in which the affected entity is located, consistent with organization standards.(3) Nothing in this section shall be construed to preempt any authority of any State to take action to ensure the safety, adequacy, and reliability of electric service within the State, and such action is not inconsistent with any Organization Standard.(4) Within 90 days of the application of an Organization Standard, the Electric Reliability Organization shall establish a regional advisory body consistent with the Electric Reliability Organization's ability to fulfill the requirements of any rule, regulation, schedule or agreement accepted, approved or ordered by the Commission. Where such hindrance or conflict is identified, the Commission shall direct the Regional Transmission Organization to take any actions necessary to resolve such hindrance or conflict, and the Commission shall report to the Commission, and notify the electric reliability organization and any applicable affiliated regional reliability entity, regarding any reliability standard hinders or conflicts with that regional transmission organization’s ability to fulfill the requirements of any rule, regulation, schedule or agreement accepted, approved or ordered by the Commission. Where such hindrance or conflict is identified, the Commission shall report to the Commission, and notify the electric reliability organization and any applicable affiliated regional reliability entity, regarding any reliability standard hinders or conflicts with that regional transmission organization’s ability to fulfill the requirements of any rule, regulation, schedule or agreement accepted, approved or ordered by the Commission. Where such hindrance or conflict is identified, the Commission shall report to the Commission, and notify the electric reliability organization and any applicable affiliated regional reliability entity, regarding any reliability standard hinders or conflicts with that regional transmission organization’s ability to fulfill the requirements of any rule, regulation, schedule or agreement accepted, approved or ordered by the Commission. Where such hindrance or conflict is identified, the Commission shall report to the Commission, and notify the electric reliability organization and any applicable affiliated regional reliability entity, regarding any reliability standard hinders or conflicts with that regional transmission organization’s ability to fulfill the requirements of any rule, regulation, schedule or agreement accepted, approved or ordered by the Commission. Where such hindrance or conflict is identified, the Commission shall report to the Commission, and notify the electric reliability organization and any applicable affiliated regional reliability entity, regarding any reliability standard hinders or conflicts with that regional transmission organization.”

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Alabama.

Mr. SESSIONS. I ask unanimous consent that I be allowed to speak as in normal business.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Without objection, it is so ordered. The Senator is recognized.

DEFENSE BUDGETS

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, we have for the most part today been dealing with the Defense authorization bill. As a member of the Armed Services Committee, it is something we wrestled with for some time. We realize how tight our budget is, and I thought it would be important for those Americans who care about those things, that remnant out there, that we give them some perspective as to where we are, what this authorization bill would mean, and how it would affect our Armed Forces.

In the early 1990s, our defense budget was as high as $326 billion, as I recall, well over $300 billion. After the collapse of the Soviet Union, President Bush commenced a decline in that budget. He had projected it out over a certain number of years and then it began to flatten out at a fairly substantial rate over $300 billion.

What happened was, in our glee over the collapse of the Soviet Union, we allowed that budget to continue downward. We reached as low as $236 billion. I believe, in the mid-1990s, $20 billion more or less than former President Bush had proposed, and as a result we reduced our personnel very rapidly.

We had problems in a number of areas funding our budget, and as a result, the military began to suffer. In particular, what suffered was our plans to recapitalize defense in America. I am talking about ships and planes and equipment that is pretty expensive. We paid the electric company to do rapidity, and we paid our men and women in uniform. We paid their salaries. We did the things we needed to do, but as one naval officer said, we created a bow wave out in front of the ship of increased capitalization needs. We have been doing that for some years.

Gradually, we made a few increases since I have been in the Senate in the last 3 years, an increase in our defense budget, but it has not been much.

President Bush ran on the promise that he would do more for defense. He said, "Help is on the way." We remember that phrase.

We do indeed, this year, have a Defense appropriations bill that shows the light. As a percentage of our GDP, we are doing very well over a decade. I know the President pro tempore is so familiar with these numbers, there is no need for me to recall them for him. We made some progress, and as I read this budget, this authorization bill, we will take defense spending from $296 billion last year to $328.

If you count the supplemental of $6 billion, we have a $35 billion increase in defense, which amounts to a little over 10 percent of the budget.

I thought we would have more impact, but I have not seen it. It strikes me that presumably the money has gone to do the things we need to do. We promised and committed to higher pay and better medical care, as we promised our men and women in uniform.

They received that, and they are pleased with it. Retention and recruitment and morale is up, for which we can certainly celebrate, but it has left us not nearly as much as we had hoped we would have to begin to do better about capitalization.

For example, it was not too many years ago we were looking for a 600-ship Navy. We are now down to around 315 ships. We have ships going out of service every year because of age and lack of serviceability, and the number of ships coming on are less. So at the present rate, we can expect our fleet to fall well below 300. Maybe that is wise. I doubt it. I think we are getting a bit tight. I say that simply to say the money is not there in this budget to build ships at the rate it needs to.

I served as the ranking member on the Sea Power Subcommittee and dealt with those numbers, along with Senator KENNEDY, and we did the best we could within the limits we had to allocate, but we are not where we need to be in shipbuilding.

So now we find ourselves in a war against terrorism. I think it is causing us to reevaluate what we have done and try to do with far fewer resources than ever before. As a percentage of our total gross domestic product, our spending on defense is at a low level, certainly since the midpoint of the last century. We are at a low level in spending as a percentage of the gross domestic product.

I think we can do better. Right now, in preparing, we will receive the QDR, the Quadrennial Defense Review, report. That should help us plan for the future. I hope it will be a bold and aggressive call for reform and change and innovation. I think it will have some of that in it, but I am not sure it will go as far as we would like it to. We will be looking at that.

Then the Secretary of Defense is also completing his review, and he will analyze the situation and will make a recommendation to us for a realignment of our military, a transformation of our military, so it is more capable of dealing with conflicts of the kind we are discussing this very night, the television commentators are discussing: Are we ready to fight that kind of war? I believe we need to be sure we are. I do not think it will cost us an amount of money that we cannot afford. I am not sure we are where we need to be with regard to transformation to go from a military that was capable and required to defend on the plains of Europe against massive attacks by tanks and infantry and troops from the Soviet Union to a world that is much more complex, much more diverse, requiring more speed, more maneuver, more mobility to transport troops around the country.

I salute Senator LEVIN and Senator WARNER, the ranking Republican on the committee, for working together to reach an accord at this critical time in our country that I can support at this time, and that was not easy. We had some differences of opinion, and when the bill came out of committee on a partisan vote, 13-12, we were distressed about that. In the days that have followed this terrorist attack, I think we all realized it was necessary we should reach an agreement on how to proceed.

I believe that was done. I can support this bill as I understand it today, and we will probably vote next Tuesday. We will have made a step in the right direction. Our challenge, of course, with $20 billion more in defense, is to confront terrorism around the world.

Our distinguished President pro tempore was a student of history, the best in this Senate, probably one of the best in the United States. I thought I would share tonight a little bit of Roman history, Apian’s Roman history, as someone referred to me, what the Romans did about pirates.

This is the situation they faced: Pirates were developing throughout the Mediterranean. It became unsafe for Roman ships to sail. According to Appian, in a very short time these pirates outnumbered Roman ships to tens of thousands. They dominated not only the eastern waters but the whole Mediterranean to the Pillars of Hercules.
They now even vanquished some of the Roman generals in naval engagements, and among others the praetor of Sicily on the battle-field.

No sea could be navigated in safety, and land remained unfilled for want of commercial intercourse. The city of Rome felt this evil most keenly, her subjects being distressed and herself suffering grievously from hunger by reason of her own populosity. But it appeared to her to be a great and difficult task to destroy so large a force of seafaring men scattered everywhere on land and sea, with no fixed possession to encumber their flight, sailing out from no particular country or any known places, having no property or anything to call their own, but only what they might chance to light upon. Thus, the unprecedented nature of this war, even if won, would have been so immense, within a matter of days the war was won, 10,000 of the pirates were killed and the rest surrendered.

Thus the sea was cleared by Pompey forthwith without a fight, and the pirates dispersed over so wide a sea, hiding easily in so many places. They were after a lot—

According to Appian’s history, whereas it was expected to take 3 years to win this war because they were so united, so determined, and so committed, within a matter of days the war was won, 10,000 of the pirates were killed and the rest surrendered.

I don’t know and don’t expect we can accomplish this much in dealing with our modern-day terrorist pirates, but I like the way they set about to do it. They recognized their nation was threatened and jeopardized, and when the disgrace could be stood no more, they took action to defend their just interest, and did so with a commitment that was total and complete, and they set about it and were successful far more quickly than people thought possible.

I don’t know if this will occur more quickly than we think possible, but I know one thing: If we commit ourselves to it, just as the Romans, we can succeed. And even though these people move about and seem to have no place they call their own, and are difficult to locate, they can be poisonous, they can be present, they can be attacked, and can be defeated. I hope and pray we will succeed in that.

I am honored to be a Member of this Senate—not the Roman Senate but this Senate. It is a great Senate, as the President of the United States is wont to remind us—the greatest since the Roman Senate. I believe, united as we are today, we can succeed in eliminating these modern-day terrorists who threaten our world, our prosperity, and our liberty.

I am honored to have the opportunity to speak tonight, and I yield the floor.

The House met at 9 a.m.

The Chaplain, the Reverend Daniel P. Coughlin, offered the following prayer:

Lord God, ever faithful to Your covenant with Your people, and always loving to those who call upon Your Holy Name, be with us today and in the unfolding historic days ahead. In this land of liberty, we freely choose to be renewed in faith and place our trust in You.

At this time of seeking justice, Lord, guide our President and the Members of this Congress. Confirm them and all Americans, military and civilians alike, to the noble task of performing daily work to the best of their ability.

Already You have lifted this Nation from death and debris with stories of heroes and heroines, songs of revitalized patriotism and new depth of unity born out of love of family and love of country.

With Your help, our grieving will never end but become fond remembrance. With Your help, our response to all forces of evil and injustice has just begun and will never cease.

Emerging from clouds of dismay, You Lord, have brought about quiet resolve, a deeper respect for all humanity and a longing for lasting peace.

Lord, may the words of Daniel Webster which are engraved above this Chamber now come to life in the flesh and bone of this country.

Let us develop the resources of our land, call forth its power, build up its institutions, promote all its great interests and see whether we also, in our day and generation, may not perform something worthy to be remembered.

And with Your blessing, may this country itself become a vast and splendid monument, not of oppression and terror, but of wisdom, of peace, and of liberty upon which the world may gaze with admiration forever. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

The SPEAKER. The Chair has examined the Journal of the last day's proceedings and announces to the House his approval thereof.

Pursuant to clause 1, rule 1, the Journal stands approved.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The SPEAKER. Will the gentleman from New York (Mr. REYNOLDS) come forward and lead the House in the Pledge of Allegiance.

Mr. REYNOLDS led the Pledge of Allegiance as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER

The SPEAKER. The Chair will delay 1-minute requests until the end of the legislative day.

MAKING IN ORDER AT ANY TIME CONSIDERATION OF H.R. 2904, MILITARY CONSTRUCTION APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 2002

Mr. HOBBSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that it be in order at any time for the Speaker, as though pursuant to clause 2(b) of rule XVIII, to declare the House resolved into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for consideration of the bill (H.R. 2904) making appropriations for military construction, family housing, and base realignment and closure for the Department of Defense for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2002, and for other purposes, and that consideration of the bill proceed according to the following order.

The first reading of the bill shall be dispensed with.

All points of order against the bill and against its consideration are waived.

General debate shall be confined to the bill and shall not exceed 1 hour equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Appropriations.

After general debate the bill shall be considered for amendment under the 5-minute rule.

During consideration of the bill for amendment, the Chairman of the Committee of the Whole may accord priority in recognition on the basis of whether the Member offering an amendment has caused it to be printed in the portion of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD designated for that purpose in clause 8 of rule XVIII, and amendments so printed shall be considered as read.

At the conclusion of consideration of the bill for amendment, the Committee shall rise and report the bill to the House with such amendments as may have been adopted.

The previous question shall be considered as ordered on the bill and amendments thereto to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit with or without instructions.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. HOBBSON. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks on H.R. 2904, and that I may include tabular and extraneous material.

The SPEAKER. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

MILITARY CONSTRUCTION APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 2002

The SPEAKER. Pursuant to the order of the House of today and rule XVIII, the Chair declares the House in the Committee of the Whole of the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill, H.R. 2904.

□ 0905

IN THE COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

Accordingly, the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 2904) making appropriations for military construction, family housing, and base realignment and closure for the Department of Defense for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2002, and for other purposes, with Mr. GILLMOR in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to the order of the House of today, September 21, 2001, the bill is considered as having been read the first time.

The gentleman from Ohio (Mr. HOBBS) and the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. OLVER) each will control 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. HOBBS).

Mr. HOBBSON. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, before I present the subcommittee’s recommendations, let me take a moment to address the events perpetrated on the United States last week.

America has been hurt by these attacks, but we are far from defeated. We will care for our wounded and mourn for those who have lost their lives. We will repair the physical damage to our institutions and seek out those who are responsible. We will have justice. We will stand together, and we will emerge from this catastrophe stronger than before.

This subcommittee is committed to working with the Defense Department to ensure the necessary resources are available for reconstructing the Pentagon and improving the anti-terrorism and force protection measures of defense facilities at home and abroad.

Let me assure the Members, the funding needed to rebuild the Pentagon will be made available from last week's $40 billion emergency spending measure; and it is my understanding that the Department is already moving ahead with the reconstruction effort from the first $10 billion provided to the President.

Mr. Chairman, I would also like to point out that the portion of the Pentagon which was damaged in the attack on September recently received a thorough renovation. The safety improvements made as part of those renovations, including the Kevlar window protection and the new sprinkler system, have been credited with saving more lives from being lost in the attack.

Although the renovation of the Pentagon was originally funded through the Subcommittee on Defense of the Committee on Appropriations and the Pentagon Renovation Revolving Fund, we fully expect the reconstruction of the destroyed wedge of the building to be funded through the military construction defense-wide appropriation.

For now, the President has encouraged America to go back to work. This includes the Congress, and today we are moving forward with this needed legislation to improve the quality of life for our military personnel.

This legislation also includes numerous infrastructure and security improvements at bases across the country. These are desperately needed by our military forces. Force protection requirements are addressed in every new building or major renovation, and we will continue to work with the Department to ensure these requirements are current and met.

Therefore, it is my pleasure to present to the House the recommendations of the military construction appropriations bill for fiscal year 2002. I would particularly like to thank the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. OLVER), my ranking member, and other members of the subcommittee for their help in producing a bipartisan recommendation.

The bill presented to the House today totals $10.5 billion. This represents a $1.56 billion, or 17 percent increase, from last year's appropriation. This appropriation amount is within the 302(b) allocation for both budget authority and outlays.

The recommendations before the House are solid, fully funded priority projects for the services and our troops. The legislation helps meet the needs of our military families and improves our national security infrastructure. It is fiscally responsible, while supporting the housing, child care and medical needs of our military.

Within the $10.5 billion, we have been able to address quality of life issues, including $1.2 billion for troop housing, $43 million for child development centers, $199 million for hospital and medical facilities, $1.1 billion for new family housing units and for improvements to existing units, and $2.9 billion for operating and maintenance of existing family housing units.

In this bill, there is over $1.1 billion for overseas construction of family housing. This subcommittee has seen firsthand the conditions that our troops live and work in overseas, and we are appalled by what we have seen.

This $1.1 billion only begins to buy down these requirements, but it will go a long way for the spirit and morale of our servicemen and women stationed overseas.

We have worked closely with the authorizing committee; and I would like to thank the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. SAXTON) and his staff for their help, particularly Phil Grone, a long-time staff member who is leaving to go down to the Defense Department.

Also this year we have had a new clerk of our committee, Valerie Baldwin. Valerie and her staff have done a great job in her first year as clerk.

I would also like to thank Tom Forhan of the minority staff. Tom has traveled with us as we have gone around. He has been very helpful in making sure that this is a bipartisan bill.

Of course, I have to thank my ranking member. The gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. OLVER) has been a great Member. He has gone with us all over the world looking at facilities, making sure that the environment is protected, and where we are going for the future. He has done a terrific job in learning this job. This is not an easy job to do, and he has done a great job at it.

In conclusion, this $10.5 billion is roughly 3 percent of the total defense budget, but it directly supports the men and women in our Armed Forces. There are critical shortfalls in our defense infrastructure; and we believe this bill begins to address those shortfalls, in increasing productivity, readiness, recruitment and retention, all very vital at this most critical time in our national defense.

Mr. Chairman, I include the following tabular material for the RECORD.

Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. OLVER. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, I want to start out by returning the thanks that the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. HOBSON), the chairman of the subcommittee has already given. I want first to thank the chairman for his cooperation in the production of what is truly a bipartisan bill. I want to thank also the very excellent work that has been done by the staffs, both the majority staff, so ably led by Valerie Baldwin, and our minority staff, Tom Forhan from the minority, and my own personal staff, Suzanne DuMont.

Mr. Chairman, I want to make clear that America will stand on no difference between the majority and the minority in our support for the men and women who protect America. So I endorse the comments that have been made along those lines by the chairman.

This bill was reported out before the terrible events of last week, but includes help on the course the President of the United States set in America’s fight against international terrorism.

Many Members know that many of our problems with military facilities are with those facilities overseas. It is much easier to get the required resources at home. Troops and their families serving at our bases in foreign countries are more easily forgotten. We have railheads that can barely be used to move equipment, vehicle maintenance shops smaller than the vehicles to move equipment, vehicle maintenance shops smaller than the vehicles.

This bill provides $500 million more than the President requested earlier this year and, obviously, before the events of September 11. The gentleman from Ohio (Mr. HOBSON) and the committee have already added to the President’s request. Projects that are badly needed in the Middle East, Europe, and the Pacific.

We have added, for instance, for separate projects a total of more than $5 million for two special forces training ranges in the Pacific which will be used to train our troops, our ground troops, the Marines and the Army, for urban combat. We have added more than $5 million for an Air Force facility in Turkey, and there is another $12 million for replacing the barracks in Korea. I think we have to make sure that nations do not speak out of both sides of their mouths. But my question was, when I first came over, I have added Buy American language to respective bills. After having looked, there were two versions of bills here. I want a clarification.

The Traficant language basically states that any grants awarded under this bill shall be to entities that shall agree to comply with the Buy American Act. In addition, the Traficant language states that any firm or company that is in violation of the Buy American Act shall be ineligible to receive grants or contracts under this bill.

I was under the impression that only one section of that existed, but the staff of the gentleman has basically stated that both provisions are in the bill.

Mr. Chairman, I would like to know if both of those provisions do exist in this particular bill.

Mr. HOBSON. Mr. Chairman, if the gentleman will yield, it is my opinion they do, as it is our intent. I am very sensitive to this. It happen to be pursuing a similar Buy American situation in another bill right now, which I plan to talk to the gentleman about at a later time.

Mr. Chairman, I want the gentleman to know I am very sympathetic to that provision.

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Chairman, I would like to offer that Buy American provision with the gentleman. I want to commend the gentleman for the great job he has done; and I also want to commend our ranking member, the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. OLVER) for his initiation here.

Mr. HOBSON. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume. I have no further requests for time, but I would like to do two things before I ask my ranking member if he has any additional speakers.

First of all, I would like to thank Kenny Kraft of my personal staff who has worked on the Hill for over 20 years. He worked on appropriations for many, many years. He has been very helpful to me as we put this bill together, along with the staff of the committee. Kenny has been very loyal to our staff, and I very much appreciate that.

Also, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. YOUNG), the chairman of the committee on Appropriations, feels very strongly about our military and about the military preparedness of our troops. He had hoped to be here this morning; he wanted to speak on this bill, but he has been requested to be in a conference discussing other bills that are before the Committee on Appropriations; and, therefore, he was not able to be here. But both the gentleman from Florida (Mr. YOUNG) and his wife, Beverly, have traveled extensively and have spent a great deal of time for our troops and the quality of life of our troops. I want to thank them for their support. I know that the gentleman, if he were here, would be much more eloquent on this, but he has done a great job for us; and I just want to say that I am sorry he is not here this morning, because I know he wanted to do that.

Mr. Chairman, I have no further requests for time, and I would ask my ranking member if he has any further requests for time.

Mr. OLVER. Mr. Chairman, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. HOBSON. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, I join my colleagues in support of H.R. 2904, legislation making appropriations for our nation’s military construction needs for FY 2002. Passage of this bill will ensure that our military infrastructure is maintained and upgraded to meet our increased national defense demands. Most importantly, this bill will enhance the quality of life for our military personnel and their families.
by improving the living and working conditions at our military installations. I am particularly pleased to note that included within this bill is funding for several MILCON projects that will directly support Guam and its strategic role to our national security in the Western Pacific. The military facilities located on Guam will benefit from over $66 million in new construction and improvements, an amount almost double what Guam received last year. Phase II of the Guam Army Guard Readiness Center and the ground breaking for a Guam Air National Guard training center will go forward as a result of this legislation. These are two very important and desperately needed projects to maintain essential readiness and operational capabilities. Other projects included in the bill are a Forward Operation Location War Reserve Material Storage Facility at Andersen Air Force Base and the modernization of the Navy’s Bachelor Enlisted Quarters and Public Works Waterfront Utilities. This bill also contains $20 million currently authorized by law, for the replacement of Andersen’s hydrant fuel system, funding that will equip the base with the largest fuel capacity in the entire Pacific.

The people of Guam welcome this significant boost in military construction activity and appreciate the recognition given our people in uniform, particularly the Guam Army and Air Guards. This bill ultimately bolsters our troops, advances our readiness and strengthens our overall defense capabilities. I commend the Chairman, Mr. Hobson, and the Ranking Member, Mr. Oliver, for their diligent work in providing funding for this important legislation and I urge its passage.

Mr. Nussle. Mr. Chairman, I rise in favor of H.R. 2904, providing appropriations for military construction.

H.R. 2904 provides $10.1 billion in budget authority and $9.2 billion in outlays for fiscal year 2002. It is fully consistent with the concurrent resolution on the budget and complies with the Congressional Budget Act.

The bill provides exactly the amount of new budget authority and outlays under the Guam (b) allocation for the Subcommittee on Military Construction. Consequently, it complies with section 302(b) of the Budget Act, which stipulates that appropriation bills may not exceed the reporting subcommittee’s 302(b) allocation. The bill exceeds the level requested by the President by $529 million in budget authority. The bill does not designate any emergencies. Nor does it provide any advanced appropriations. It does, however, rescind $67 million in previously appropriated budget authority.

I commend my colleagues for working to produce a bill that is consistent with our national priorities and the budget resolution.

Mr. Buyer. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of the Fiscal Year 2002 Military Construction Appropriations bill, which is included in the present legislation.

This bill is good for defense, and it is good for the nation. Equally important, it is good for the people of Indiana because it continues to recognize their important contributions to this nation’s national security by providing funding for Grissom Air Reserve Base, the Newport Chemical depot, and the Crane Naval Service Warfare Center.

I would like to thank Chairman Hobson for honoring my requests for funding. Specifically for the $66 million for Newport Chemical depot.

This funding comes on the heels of over $145 million for Newport over the last four years.

In addition, this bill provides $13.2 million to finish Phase III of the Grissom Air Reserve Base Services Complex.

Over the last two years, this body has authorized $22.1 million for phases I and II, as well as an additional $4.73 million for the construction of a new Marine Corps Reserve Center at Grissom, $4.8 million for three Army National Guard Maintenance Shops in Plymouth, Logansport, and Delphi.

Lastly, this bill provides $9.11 million for a Microwave Engineering Device Facility and $5.82 million for a Special Warfare Engineering Facility at the Crane Naval Surface Warfare Center.

Mr. Chairman, I want to thank this body on behalf of the hard working people of Indiana for recognizing our contributions to national security, as well as funding the military construction projects that I have requested.

Mr. Hobson. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the bill, through page 21, line 13, be considered as read, printed in the RECORD, and open to amendment at any point.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

The text of the bill through page 21, line 13, is as follows:

H.R. 2004

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the following sums are appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated for military construction, family housing, and base realignment and closure functions administered by the Department of Defense, for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2002, and for other purposes, namely:

DEPARTMENT OF DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE FAMILY HOUSING OPERATION AND MAINTENANCE
For expenses of family housing for the Department of Defense for construction and operation and maintenance, including debt payment, minor construction, principal and interest charges, and insurance premiums, as authorized by law, $400,000,000.

GENERAL PROVISIONS
SEC. 101. None of the funds appropriated in Military Construction Appropriations Acts shall be expended for payments under a cost-plus-a-fixed-fee contract for construction, in excess of $25,000, to be performed within the United States, except Alaska, without the specific approval in writing of the Secretary of Defense setting forth the reasons therefor.

SEC. 102. Funds appropriated to the Department of Defense for construction shall be available for hire of passenger motor vehicles.

SEC. 103. Funds appropriated to the Department of Defense for construction may be used for advances to the Federal Highway Administration, Department of Transpor- tation, for the construction of access roads as authorized by section 210 of title 23, United States Code, when projects authorized thereby are certified by the Secretary of Defense to be necessary for the national defense by the Secretary of Defense.

SEC. 104. None of the funds appropriated in this Act may be used to begin construction of new bases inside the United States for which specific appropriations have not been made.

SEC. 105. No part of the funds provided in Military Construction Appropriations Acts shall be used for purchase of land or land easements in excess of 100 percent of the value as determined by the Army Corps of Engineers or the Naval Facilities Engineering Command, except: (1) where there is a determination of value by a Federal court; (2) purchases negotiated by the Attorney General or his designee; (3) where the estimated value is less than $25,000; or (4) as otherwise determined by the Secretary of Defense to be in the public interest.

SEC. 106. None of the funds appropriated in Military Construction Appropriations Acts shall be used to: (1) acquire land; (2) provide for site preparation; or (3) install utilities for facilities for which funds have been made available in annual Military Construction Appropriations Acts.

SEC. 117. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, any funds appropriated to a military department or defense agency for the construction of military projects may be obligated for a military construction project or contract in the same manner as funds appropriated to a military department or defense agency for the construction of military housing projects are obligated, and any increase in the cost of such project is increased pursuant to section 207a(a)(1) of the Defense Authorization Amendments and Base Closure and Realignment Act, Public Law 100-252, as added by section 207a(a)(2)(C) of such Act, may be transferred to the account established by section 2906(a)(1) of the Department of Defense Appropriations Act, 1993 (41 U.S.C. 10a–10c, popularly known as the “Buy American Act”).

(b) Any funds made available under this Act shall be made available to any person or entity that has been convicted of violating the Act of March 3, 1933 (41 U.S.C. 10a–10c, popularly known as the “Buy American Act”).

SEC. 112. (a) In the case of any equipment or products that may be authorized to be purchased with financial assistance provided under this Act, it is the sense of the Congress that such assistance should, in expending the assistance, purchase only American-made equipment and products.

(b) In providing financial assistance under this Act, the Secretary of the Treasury shall provide to each recipient of the assistance a notice describing the statement made in subsection (a) of the Congress.

(TRANSFER OF FUNDS)

SEC. 123. Subject to 30 days prior notification to the Committees on Appropriations, such additional amounts as may be determined by the Secretary of Defense may be transferred to the Department of Defense Family Housing Improvement Fund from amounts appropriated for construction in “Family Housing” accounts, to be merged with and to be available for the same purposes and for the same period of time as amounts appropriated directly to the Fund: Provided, That appropriations made available to the Fund shall be available to cover the costs, as defined in section 502(5) of the Congress, of all direct loans or loan guaranties issued by the Department of Defense pursuant to the provisions of subchapter IV of chapter 169, title 10, United States Code, pertaining to the acquisition and improving military family housing and supporting facilities.

SEC. 124. None of the funds appropriated or made available by this Act may be obligated for Partnership for Peace Programs in the New Independent States of the former Soviet Union.

SEC. 125. (a) Not later than 60 days before issuing any solicitation for a contract with the private sector for military family housing the Secretary of the military department concerned shall consult with the Congressional defense committees the notice described in subsection (b).

(b)(1) A notice referred to in subsection (a) is a notice of any guarantee (including the making of mortgage or rental payments) proposed to be made by the Secretary to the private party under the contract involved in the event of—

(A) the closure or realignment of the installation for which housing is provided under the contract;

(B) a reduction in the force of units stationed at such installation; or

(C) the extended deployment overseas of units stationed at such installation.

(TRANSFER OF FUNDS)

SEC. 126. During the current fiscal year, in addition to any other transfer authority available to the Department of Defense, amounts may be transferred from the account established by section 2906(a)(1) of the Department of Defense Appropriations Act, 1991, to the fund established by section 1013(d) of the Demonstration Cities and Metropolitan Development Act of 1966 (42 U.S.C. 3374) to pay for expenses associated with the Homeowners Assistance Program. Any amounts transferred shall be merged with and to be available for the same purposes and for the same period of time as the fund to which transferred.

SEC. 127. Notwithstanding this or any other provision of law, funds appropriated in Military Construction Appropriations Acts for operations and maintenance of family housing shall be the exclusive source of funds for repair and maintenance of all family housing units, including flag and general officer quarters: Provided, That not more than $25,000 per unit may be spent annually for the maintenance and repair of any general or flag officer quarters without 30 days advance prior notification of the appropriate committees of Congress: Provided further, That the Under Secretary of Defense (Comptroller) is to report annually to the Committees on Appropriations all operations and maintenance expenditures, and all uses of funds pursuant to 10 U.S.C. 2001, for each individual flag and general officer quarters for the prior fiscal year: Provided further, That nothing herein precludes the Secretary concerned from using funds pursuant to 10 U.S.C. 2001 or similar authority.

SEC. 128. The Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Air Force are directed to submit to the Committee on Appropriations of the House of Representatives, by July 1, 2002, a Family Housing Master Plan demonstrating how they plan to meet the year 2010 housing goals with traditional construction, operation and maintenance support, as well as privatization initiative proposals. Each plan shall include projected life cycle costs for family housing construction, basic allowance for housing, operation and maintenance, other associated costs, and a time line for housing completions each year.

(TRANSFER OF FUNDS)

SEC. 129. Of the funds available in this Act, $4,000,000 appropriated under the heading “Military Construction, Air Force” and $4,000,000 appropriated under the heading “Military Construction, Army” shall be available to complete a military construction project for which funds were appropriated in Public Law 107–20 under the heading “Military Construction.”

RECESS

The recess having expired, the House was called to order by the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. THORNBERY) at 5 o'clock and 44 minutes p.m.
REPORT ON RESOLUTION PROVIDING FOR CONSIDERATION OF H.R. 2926, AIR TRANSPORTATION SAFETY AND SYSTEM STABILIZATION ACT

Mr. REYNOLDS, from the Committee on Rules, submitted a privileged report (Rept. No. 107-214) on the resolution (H. Res. 244) providing for consideration of the bill (H.R. 2926) to preserve the continued viability of the United States air transportation system, which was referred to the House Calendar and ordered to be printed.

WAIVING REQUIREMENT OF CLAUSE 6(a) OF RULE XIII WITH RESPECT TO CONSIDERATION OF CERTAIN RESOLUTIONS

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 242 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. RES. 242

Resolved, That the requirement of clause 6(a) of rule XIII for a two-thirds vote to consider a report from the Committee on rules on the same day it is presented to the House is waived with respect to any resolution reported on the legislative day of Friday, September 21, 2001, providing for consideration or disposition of a bill to preserve the continued viability of the United States air transportation system.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from New York (Mr. REYNOLDS) is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, for the purpose of debate only, I yield the customary 30 minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. FROST), pending which I yield myself such time as I may consume. During consideration of this resolution, all time is counted for the purpose of debate only.

Mr. Speaker, House Resolution 242 waives clause 6(a) of rule XIII requiring a two-thirds vote to consider a rule on the same day it is reported from the Committee on Rules. The rule applies to the waiver to a special rule reported on the legislative day of September 21, 2001, providing for consideration or disposition of a bill to preserve the continued viability of the United States air transportation system, H.R. 2926, the Air Transportation Safety and System Stabilization Act.

The rule allows this body to take up this legislation in a timely fashion, making it possible for prompt consideration of a much needed relief measure for the airline industry.

Mr. Speaker, this House has been united as rarely, if ever, seen before. We came together in an overwhelming and bipartisan fashion to aid those in crisis and support our President as he seeks justice. We need to come together again to consider a critical piece of legislation to further guide our Nation and its citizens through this crisis. Now is not the time for stalling or dilatory tactics. This legislation has been approved by leaders on both sides of the aisle, in both Chambers, and in American public favor. It is imperative that we move forward with this urgent measure.

I urge my colleagues to support this rule so we may proceed with the legislation itself.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I thank my colleague for yielding the time, and I yield myself such time as I may consume.

This is the first of two rules that we will consider. This rule provides for the waiver of the 24-hour layover requirement for the next rule. I will have a fairly lengthy statement when we take up the next rule. We do have a number of things we want to speak on this rule as well as the next rule.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Oregon (Mr. DEFAZIO).

Mr. DEFAZIO. I thank the gentleman for yielding time.

Mr. Speaker, here we have before us a bill that will cost the taxpayers of America more than $20 billion. There will be 1 hour of debate. No amendments will be allowed. Even if this bill passes, 100,000 people in jobs directly related to the airline industry will lose their jobs. We have heard that from the CEOs who essentially wrote this bill. They are still going to fire or lay off 100,000 people. There is not one penny in this bill of accommodation for those people, for their insurance, for their mortgage, or anything else. Not one penny.

There are tens of thousands of other people who work in related businesses: travel agents, car rental agencies, hotels. The list is endless. There is not one penny in this bill for those people of assistance in this bill. Not an emergency disaster declaration. No help with their payments to the bank. Not one penny.

And then we go to our local airports. Millions of dollars a day are being spent by our local airports to beef up security. There is not one penny in this bill for them either. So 100,000 workers, related workers, all the other governments in America that are incurring costs, not one cent in this bill.

Even more distressing than that is the fact that the inadequate security measures that prevailed before this tragedy continue to prevail and under this bill will not be improved. This bill does not specify that we will federalize airline enforcement, we have heard from virtually every expert, we have even heard it from the airline CEOs, they just say they are not willing to pay for it, and they say the American public will not pay for it. They say the only thing they will tolerate is a $3 tax for airline security. That is incredible. They are so out of touch. But they are so much in touch that they got everything they wanted in this bill, but everybody else is excluded.

This bill does not do the things we need to do to today. It might be hard to turn a bad book into a good book, but we can stay here this weekend and write a bill. If this is a crisis, why are the Republicans running out of town? Why are they pushing us out of here? Why are they limiting debate? And why are they not allowing a single amendment?

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from California (Mr. GEORGE MILLER).

Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California. Mr. Speaker, last night we heard from our President about what this Nation needs to do to come together in the face of the challenge and the crises and the dangers that we face. Yet today, the only thing we do is pass legislation that is very narrow in its focus. It only takes care of the solvency of the airlines to the exclusion of everyone else; to the exclusion of the workers who have lost their jobs, who are directly related to this, to their families, the problems they are suffering now as a result of that.

We take care of airline executive compensation. They are guaranteed in this bill they can make somewhere between 5 and 35, and if they bail out of this industry in the next few months, they can make up to $70 million. They are taken care of. But the people who have lost their health care coverage, the people who have lost their income, they are not taken care of.

This is about a Nation going forward together. But in this legislation, we left the workers behind. This legislation is based upon the premise that somehow if we give the airlines a bailout, these people will fly again. But this legislation does not deal with the problems that the American public is concerned about. They are not concerned about whether or not their airline is solvent, they are concerned about whether or not it is safe. We failed to address, as we have for over a decade, the federalization of the law enforcement powers given to the people who are screening the bags and providing security. The fact of the matter is we have heard from so many people first thing we do is bring out people are only marginally better off, if any better off, since September 11 in the airline industry. That is why they are not flying.

This legislation should direct this administration and this government to federalize those systems. No, we are going to debate it. We are going to debate, and the airlines are going to come back and tell us that airline traffic cannot stand this fee, they cannot stand this fee so we will federalize this system. We had better do this, but we do not do it in this legislation. Why? Because we had to rush home.
last weekend. Why? Because we have to rush home this weekend.

Supposedly we are in a setting here where we have to take these extraordinary measures to deal with the Nation’s business, and all the Congress can think about is getting out of town. We ought to take care of the American people. We ought to take care of the American people who lost their jobs.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from California (Mr. DREIER), the distinguished chairman of the Committee on Rules.

Mr. DREIER. Mr. Speaker, I thank my friend for yielding time.

Mr. Speaker, our Nation has gone through some of the most extraordinary days in our over 200-year history. A week ago Tuesday, we saw the harshest, most strident, barbaric attack on the population of this country that we have ever seen. We have, over the last several days, been working together in a bipartisan way to deal with the challenge that lies ahead. Last night in this Chamber, the President of the United States stood right behind me and delivered an extraordinarily eloquent statement about the challenges that are ahead of us. As he did that, I was very pleased to see enthusiastic support from Democrats and Republicans, and the American people.

Last Friday night, an attempt was made to deal with part of this challenge by addressing the concerns of an industry that is critically important to the economic survival of the United States. I am not one who is a proponent of having the Federal Government subsidize or in any way underwrite a private sector entity. I happen to have very libertarian leanings as a Republican. I want to get the government out of business practices of the past. But right now we are here dealing with a very important industry that needs to survive and continue to allow people and goods to move throughout this country. So that is why when the package, after having worked on it for a week, it was a week ago tonight that the first attempt was made to move this package through, and many Members, as I said, have been involved in this, we came together late last night. And I want to, as I often do here, thank both Democrats and Republicans on the Committee on Rules who worked late into the night in preparation for this and then reconvened early this morning to proceed again, and we have just now completed our work in the Committee on Rules, reporting out this bill which I believe is a very important step.

Now, as we held our hearing upstairs this afternoon, Mr. Speaker, I should say that there were a wide range of very important and understandable concerns that have been raised. There is a great deal of pain that these barbarians have inflicted on the American people and on the civilized world. We want to do everything that we possibly can to mitigate the level of that pain. But right now we are here dealing with a very important industry that needs to remain viable for the economic stability of the United States and the world. That is why this effort is focused on this industry.

Again, there are loads of very important provisions that are being raised and will be continually raised from both sides of the aisle. But at this point, I recommend, Mr. Speaker, that we pass, first of all, the provision that allows us to proceed with the same-day travel by airmen. We then will pass the rule, and move ahead and pass this bill so we can send that very important signal to the American people that we are going to ensure that we can see that very important flow of individuals and of goods and of services throughout this country.

I urge an “aye” vote on this first rule that allows us to bring up consideration of the rule for the legislation.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. OBEN).

Mr. OBEN. Mr. Speaker, there is absolutely no question that we must help the airline industry, but I have some real problems with the way we are going about it.

This package says we are going to give roughly $15 billion in assistance to the airline industry, and I have no objection to that so long as it is a fair package, but there is nothing in this package for the people who work for those airlines; nothing by way of extension of unemployment compensation; nothing by way of extending their health benefits under COBRA, even though they would have to pay for those benefits themselves; nothing by way of additional training for them.

People are saying, “Oh, there is a limit of $300,000 in this bill on executive compensation for airline executives.” That is not true. This proposal says that if you made more than $300,000 last year, you cannot earn more than you made last year and have your company eligible for this loan guarantee. That means that one airline CEO can collect $13 million in compensation next year. Another, $11 million. Meanwhile, for workers, there is zip, zero.

If we are going to have everybody get into the lifeboats, we ought to have enough lifeboats. We should not be like the Titanic. There are enough lifeboats so that not just investors and CEOs but also workers get some help out of their government. We ought to be willing to stay here Saturday and Sunday and Monday, however long it takes, to put this package together.

There is much talk of unity. God knows how much we need it. But if you want unity, the best way to get it is to convince all Americans that they are going to be treated equally. Do not tell the workers of this country that they were considered as afterthoughts, and that is what has happened.

Yes, we have an urgent need to act, but we also have an urgent need to provide fairness and justice. That is what the American people deserve. This package does not do that. I sincerely do not want to vote against it, but it is very difficult to vote for it when it has this kind of rampant unfairness.

This bill ought to go back to committee. Our leaders on both sides of the aisle who do not want this package should step up with dedication to take a couple of extra days and put this package together so that everyone, everyone is helped by it, not just those who have the best connections with Washington.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. REYNOLDS) for bringing this matter to consideration on the floor. I am chairman of the Travel and Tourism Caucus, as I can underscore, the concern in this building today is to get the economy moving. Now, I respect the concerns of the other Members of this body who are worried about employees and safeguards for employees. I struggle with those issues, too; but if we do not deal with this issue rather quickly, there will not be employees at all, regardless of the efforts of those to protect them in this bill.

The Dow Jones industrial average dropped 200 points this week. I left my home a moment ago to watch the news out of BWI airport talking about massive layoffs. Wall Street is looking and the major banks around the globe are watching what we do tonight to decide whether any credit will be available for airlines.

So we have a real choice here today. We have a choice of helping immediately, move some economic stimulus, loan guarantees to the airline industry or we can sit here and twiddle our thumbs and assume that this will fix itself. Wall Street is saying it will not. I can assure you, based on the economic model that I am seeing in Florida, Hawaii, California, New York, Texas, Arkansas, I do not have time to go over 50 States, but stick around because the economic pain is real, not imagined.

One of the prior speakers said somehow that we rushed out of this building last week and we are trying to rush out of this week. I take great exception to that because many of us have worked and labored and toiled to try and find some opportunity to provide comfort for those in New York, those at the Pentagon; and we have focused our efforts on both relief and remedy for those. And we have also given the President of the United States the unified support of the Congress and the people of this country to endeavor to try and rid the world of terrorism.

I would love to obviously have a lot of time to debate some of these issues. God knows we would love to sit around and hammer things out, knock the table, and protect everyone in the room. I can this in all sincerity, that we need to put this underlying legislation on the floor now today and move expeditiously so that on Monday next when the markets open there is a safety net under the structure of the airline industry.

Believe me, I complained to many of these same operators yesterday that were in my office that own the major carriers, and I was worried about baggage carriers and line workers and fuelers and mechanics and flight attendants and captains and co-captains. I worry about the treatment of individuals.

I worry about the treatment received by individual Americans as they traversed this country just but a few weeks ago and complaining about how they were treated and talked about airline passenger rules or bill of rights. And, sure, I would like to sweep up some of these things and spend hours and days and weeks on finding a perfect solution here, because I know with both sides working, we can.

But, regrettably, based on this economic crisis we face, we either provide the guarantee, as we did in the Chrysler Corporation bailout years ago that Members from Detroit insisted we needed; and, thank God, the Congress responded, because, God knows, Chrysler not only succeeded, but survived and excelled and hired millions of American workers to be on their assembly line.

So the choice is clear today: move consideration or find huge massive layoffs. So the employees you think you are protecting under the debate today will be those that are, in fact, given pink slips on Monday, because credit will be shut off, airline employees will be going home, no one will be flying, and the economy of the United States of America will grind to an absolute halt.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. Holz).

Mr. HOLT. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me time.

Mr. Speaker, this bill should not be coming up now. It is not ready. It does not deal with the fundamental problem. Yes, there is an urgent need to strengthen the airline industry. We need to do this in a bipartisan way. We need to do it urgently. There is much in this bill, $15 billion in direct aid and loan guarantees, and that is good. You will hear about perspective liability and retrospective liability. I will not talk about that.

It does not include, however, anything about the needs of working families—the baggage handlers, the flight attendants, the pilots, the agents, the clerks—unless you consider executive salary packages of $33 million as dealing with the needs of working families.

But let us face facts. What is the real problem now? People are not flying. Why are they not flying? They are concerned about airline security.

This bill has two sentences about airline security. One sentence says that last week we said we were going to do something. The other sentence says that in the future we are going to do something.

If we want to revitalize the airline industry, we have to get people back in the planes. How are we going to get them back in the planes? Certainly we cannot do it unless we reassure them about the security of the airlines. The fundamental problem we are facing right now is people are not flying.

Yes, we have an urgent need. We should stay here this weekend, Saturday, Sunday, Monday, if necessary, and get it right. This is an important industry. It is critical to all other aspects of our society. We should do it, and we should take the time to do it right.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. Weldon).

Mr. WELDON of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I rise encouraging all my colleagues to vote for this rule, which allows same day consideration, and then the subsequent rule on the bill, and certainly passage of the final bill.

This is the first bite of the apple. There have been a number of Members who have risen who want to do more. We are going to have plenty of opportunity to do more, but we are clearly in a crisis situation right now.

I know the impact of this issue in the State that I represent, Florida, is gigantic. We have hotels in Florida that are virtually empty, rental car fleets that are virtually at a standstill, theme parks and other tourist attractions that are empty. We are going to be seeing layoffs in a lot of other industries, and all of the myriad other issues, airline safety, fair treatment for employees, we are going to have an opportunity to take those issues up.

I will tell you, an issue I am very concerned about. We have indemnification in this underlying bill. We indemnify the airlines, but not the manufacturers. Some people might say how ridiculous; what trial attorney would sue a manufacturer of a black box? Mr. Speaker, it has happened. They have tried to sue manufacturers of airplanes in hijacking situations. So we are going to have to go back and revisit indemnification.

We are going to have lots of opportunities to deal with these issues. But this is the right thing to do at this hour. We need to do this for America. It is not for the airline industries, it is for Florida, California, Washington State, it is for the United States of America.

Let us pass this rule, and pass the next rule and the underlying bill.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. WATT).

Mr. WATT of North Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me time.

Mr. Speaker, I am going to vote against the rule for same day consideration because this bill were not considered today and were considered tomorrow, we could get a much, much better bill in several respects. I am going to vote against the second rule for consideration of the bill, because I think if we were allowed to offer amendments to the bill, we would end up with a much better bill.

But if, at the end of the day, those rules are passed and this bill comes before us, I am going to vote for the bill. Not because I think it is a perfect bill. It can be improved by adding security provisions, which I think are gravely needed and we must pass, whether we pass them tonight or in the near future. It can be improved with amendments regarding executive compensation and a number of other things.

But we must get the airlines back on a solid footing, and we must provide an assurance to the families of the victims of this tragic incident that their interests, their financial interests, will be taken care of. Those two things are in this bill.

So my opposition to the bill really is about the things that are not in it, which I hope the majority will see fit to bring a bill on next week. I understand that is being considered. I think it is absolutely imperative that we deal with employee assistance provisions, whether in this bill or in some other bill. And if we were not rushing to judgment tonight, we could do it in the context of this bill. I think we are missing an opportunity.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. ISAkSON).

Mr. ISAkSON. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me time.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in favor of this rule, the subsequent rule, and the final bill. As a member of the Subcommittee on Aviation and as a Member that has answered numerous questions over the last 2 days, and in light of some of the things that have been said, I think it is important that we be very honest and very candid in our debate today.

Mr. Speaker, safety was considered first priority to this bill, and any reference to the contrary is incorrect.

In fact, the $5 billion infusion is in part because the FAA shut down the American airlines, all of them, until such time as new security procedures were put in place, which, in fact, have resulted in the arrest and capture of those two things.

As J OHN SWEENEY says, who is the president of the AFL-CIO, “If Members of Congress fail to include relief to workers in the airline bailout bill, it will be an unconscionable, divisive and economically irresponsible omission.”

He writes, “Over the past ten days, our Nation has been reminded again and again by the grim and inspiring images of rescue and relief workers that it is working people who are the first to step up to respond to their neighbors, their community and their country. And it is workers and their families who are taking a direct and immediate hit from the terrorist attacks and the resulting airline crisis—a hit that will have a rippling, destabilizing effect on the economy unless it is addressed. Over the past week, the AFL-CIO, airline unions and congressional leaders have invested a huge amount of work into developing a worker relief package that includes unemployment, job training and health benefit protections to workers laid off as a result of the financial crisis in the airline industry. Extensive work has also gone into developing additional assistance to workers for their golden parachutes.”

Any member of either party who casts a vote to leave workers out of the relief bill will be voting to betray American workers in the bipartisan spirit of our last ten days.

That is a letter that JOHN SWEENEY wrote to the Members of Congress.

Mr. Speaker, I would add that we have time to do this right. Let us do it please.

The letter referred to is as follows:

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. THORNBERRY). The Chair would remind all Members of the rule and Speaker’s directive regarding the use of cellular telephones on the House floor.

The SPEAKER pro tempore: I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. SENSENBERNRENNER), the chair of the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. SENSENBERNRENNER. Mr. Speaker, I understand the amendment to the underlying bill. It is well intentioned and relief to the airline industry is necessary to keep these vital transportation...
First, the liability limitation provisions transfer the airlines’ contingent liabilities to others with devastating implications on other segments of the economy. It is fine to limit airlines’ liability, but this will simply put others on the hook.

In addition to United and American Airlines, who will have limited liability under this bill, plaintiffs’ lawyers will also likely sue Boeing, which manufactured the four planes. General Electric or Pratt and Whitney who probably made the engines, the Port Authority which is the owner of the World Trade Center, whatever company made the steel which collapsed, and on and on. These companies’ liability is not limited by this bill.

While the airlines will not face bankruptcy as a result of September 11, should this bill pass, its failure to limit others’ liability will mean Congress will need to pass corrective legislation again and again to protect American companies and their workers’ jobs because this bill did not do it right.

Remember, any company having a substantial contingent liability will not be able to borrow money from the banks to keep itself afloat.

The formula that compensates the airlines is not fair either. The United States Government does have a moral responsibility to make whole the victims of this tragedy through taxpayers’ dollars. No entitlement was enacted by Congress to compensate victims of the Oklahoma City bombing, earthquakes in California, hurricanes in Florida, and floods along the Mississippi River. If this entitlement is approved, does Congress really want to say no to the victims of future tragedies, whether as a result of natural or man-made disasters? If a disaster strikes in any of our hometowns, how can we explain voting for an entitlement in this bill, but not for our own constituents? Stop and think of the precedent this bill sets when a future disaster strikes.

There is plenty money available to compensate the families of the victims of September 11. Mr. Speaker, $20 billion has already been appropriated for relief. The President has signed legislation to speed up payments to the families of police and firefighters killed in the line of duty and the Crime Victims Compensation Fund has over $1 billion already available for disbursement. Millions come from FEMA and the Department of Health and Human Services and elsewhere, and there will be tens of billions of dollars from insurance and those liable.

But stop, let us do this right. Let us vote this bill down and come back and address these very legitimate problems.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from California (Mr. WAXMAN).

Mr. WAXMAN. Mr. Speaker, as our country faces some very difficult times, we are going to hear a lot about shared sacrifice. Suppose that the passengers and firefighters charging into the World Trade Center to rescue people they had never met and dying in the effort. Shared sacrifice, we are told, is the unfortunate news that over 100,000 workers are going to lose their jobs for the good of their companies. Shared sacrifice, it is clear, means that our sons and daughters, mothers and fathers in the military are going to be sent into battle. But today, in the first economic bailout bill to deal with the September 11 tragedy, we see that there are limits to shared sacrifice.

Under this airline bailout bill, senior executives will be able to continue to earn millions of dollars in salary and other compensation. In one case, this bill will permit a senior executive to earn over $34 million and, if he leaves the company, to receive up to $70 million in severance benefits. This is inexcusable, it is obscene, it exploits a painful tragedy, and it makes a mockery of the concept of shared sacrifice.

We cannot change this bill; but we can be morally outraged by this inequity, and we can ask the airline CEOs to do what this bill does not. They are asking taxpayers for billions of dollars in help, and then they will be firing thousands of their workers. At this time, they should publicly adopt policies that limit executive compensation to reasonable levels. That will honor shared sacrifice and the sacrifices of many others have made and will make.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Vermont (Mr. SANDERS).

Mr. SANDERS. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me time.

Mr. Speaker, during the last 10 days, the American people and Members of the Congress have been in emotional shock and grief and the loss of life and tragedy that struck. We are all together struggling and trying to determine the most effective way to end terrorism and to punish those people who committed this atrocious act.

But on the issue of how we can deal with the airlines and how as a Nation we deal with the people continuing recession, I do not think that there should be a lot of debate. The American people want to believe that we are all in this together; and when they see that 100,000 airline workers are laid off in an industry that is obviously not only want to restore that industry, but they want to make sure that the workers who have been running those industries are treated fairly. They do not want to read in the papers that they are providing taxpayer dollars so that CEOs can end up with tens and tens of millions of dollars in executive compensation but, at the same time, there is apparently no money available to provide health insurance for workers who were laid off. They want to know that the package that is passing is fair in terms of providing security for the people who will get on the planes. Where is the definition of what we will be doing in terms of security?

Mr. Speaker, we are moving into an economic recession; and in a certain sense, this legislation is the first bill that we will be looking at as to how we are going to respond; and the American people are demanding that, if we are in this together, we have got to protect the working people, we have got to protect the most vulnerable people; and this legislation does not do that.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentlewoman from North Carolina (Mrs. CLAYTON).

Mrs. CLAYTON. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time.

Mr. Speaker, we have a crisis in public confidence in our airline industry. Before September 11, fuel prices were rising, business travel was declining, and some of our airlines in my State had serious financial problems.

After September 11, the government ordered the grounding of flights for several days, which caused considerable financial loss to all airlines. Now the flights have resumed. Consumers have been slow to return to the air. Therefore, the financial problems of our airlines have become more severe, and they need help from the Federal Government.

Indeed, the Federal Government should help the airlines, but this bill does not adequately address the economic and security issues resulting from terrorist hijacking and the crashes on September 11. A Federal bailout of our airlines alone will not restore public confidence and increase ridership in our airlines which is, indeed, the basis for the airlines’ long-term security.

Simply stated, people are afraid to fly. In order to restore public confidence, we should move responsibility for aviation security from airlines and their subcontractors to the Federal Government, employing trained security experts. We should do this immediately. In this bill, at least make an indication we are committed to it, not sometime in the future but in this bill.

The tragic events of last Tuesday should be a wake-up call to this Nation. No longer can we afford to rely upon low-wage, unskilled workers, with an astonishingly high turnover annually, to manage our first line of defense against a repeat of events of September 11. We should act now to federalize airport security. This probably will substantially increase public confidence and ridership, and increase financial stability and the cash flow to our airlines.

In addition to the hardships suffered by our airlines during the crisis, thousands of workers have lost their jobs or may lose their jobs in the future. Thousands of airport vendors, hotels, tourism, business, and small business, mostly, also are suffering economically and need help from the Federal Government. We should be careful how we respond here, because we must respond to others as well; not that we should not respond, but this response is insufficient. The workers and small business operators in communities across our Nation constitute the backbone of their local economies. These workers, tens of thousands of them, may be expendable from any airline, but they are essential to their families and to their communities.

Mr. Speaker, we should vote against this rule, and we should also vote against this bill.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. BARTON), who represents the Dallas-Fort Worth Airport, one of the busiest in the world.

Mr. BARTON of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from New York, the distinguished member of the Committee on Rules, for yielding time to me.

Mr. Speaker, D-FW airport, except for one runway, is totally within the Sixth District of Texas, which happens to be the district that I am privileged to represent. There were over 40,000 American Airlines and Delta Airlines employees and various other airline employees that work at that hub airport.

We know the tragic events that happened on September 11 in which four American flag carriers, two Delta and two American Airlines, went into the Trade Center, the Pentagon, or into the countryside in Pennsylvania. At D-FW as we speak, it is an airport that is operating at less than 50 percent capacity. The flights that go in that airport are operating about at about 30 percent capacity.

American, United, and other airlines have laid off tens of thousands of people this week. This is not the time to argue about the perfect airline relief bill. We have a very reasonable bill before us. It has been hammered out in good faith by the majority, the airline industry, the airport associations, and the White House. We need to get the bill on the floor. The first thing we have to do is pass this rule. Then we have to pass the second rule. Then we have to pass the bill.

I have an airport security task force at D-FW that has been operating for over a year and a half to come up with a series of recommendations about how to increase airport security. Most of those recommendations, until last week, dealt with increasing security to prevent illegal drugs from going through our hub airports, but many of them are applicable to terrorism.

I am very willing to continue the dialogue with the Department of Transportation, the FAA, and all the other interested parties, but I am not willing to get into a contest where we refuse to bring up absolutely necessary legislation.

I would urge my colleagues, let us pass this rule, let us pass the second rule, and then let us pass the bill. If we need to come back in a month, 2 months, or whatever, let us do it, but let us not take an industry that is on its knees and force it to be flat on its back. Let us help the airlines and the economy. Pass these rules and pass this bill.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. EDWARDS).

Mr. EDWARDS. Mr. Speaker, this is not a perfect bill, but it is an important first step toward protecting the viability of our Nation’s air transportation system. For that important reason, I am going to support these rules and support the bill.

But, Mr. Speaker, I also want to send a very clear message to the airlines that will receive these taxpayers’ funds today. That is that those of us who represent hundreds of thousands of people in mid-sized cities and rural areas will be watching to see whether they take our Federal tax dollars in one hand and with the other hand cut off service to middle America.

That should not happen, it cannot happen; and if it were to happen, I think when the second round of this airline support legislation inevitably comes back before this House, it would be very difficult to encourage and convince the taxpayers of middle America that we are still supporting airline viability if there is no viability in rural areas because they have already cut off service.

With that caveat, we will support this legislation, and hope Members on both sides of the aisle will do so, as well.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. BENTSEN).

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the rule and in support of the bill. I appreciate some of the comments that our colleagues brought up. It is a shame that we did not address employee issues and security issues. Quite frankly, I think we had the time to do it, but we did not.

I want to say that I did not meet that I had particular concerns about. I, one, and I do not think this is a partisan issue, have had concerns where we have the Federal Government intervening in the private markets. The intention of giving loan guarantees in any private market function is something the Congress should have great concerns about.

I and many Members of this body have supported that from time to time when we have felt it was extraordinary situations, and I do think this is an extraordinary situation. But I also think it is incumbent upon the Members of the House and the other body to ensure that the Federal Government, and thus the taxpayers, have an ability that we may well be paid back if there is a problem with the extension of this credit.

As the bill was originally drafted, quite frankly, it did not meet that standard. So I appreciate the fact, in how I read the bill now, that we have done a couple of things that are important. One, we brought the fiduciary officers of the Federal Government, in effect, and we brought the chairman of the Federal Reserve Board and the Secretary of the Treasury, as voting members into this commission, because they should be involved in the extension of credit. That has always been the case in any other extension of credit of the Federal Reserve. If that is something that we have done as a government.

Number two is that we have said that they have to consider and in fact have to have certain collateralization of the guarantee or the credit that is extended. Many of these airlines are highly leveraged, and there is not much that they can extend in terms of collateral, but the use of warrants, the use of equity, the use of options is something that is not unprecedented and is something that in fact we should consider. I am glad it is finally in this bill.

Finally, I am glad that the bill does not include a set, specific term, but rather gives broad discretion to the board and to the administration setting the terms and condition. The burden will be on them to strike the best deal for the taxpayers, and ensuring that this is done, but it is better than a long term.

With that, I rise in strong support of the bill and ask that my colleagues pass it.
Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from New York (Ms. MALONEY).

Mrs. MALONEY of New York. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the rule and in support of the underlying bill.

Last week’s attacks did unspeakable damage, unspeakable harm with great loss of life, but last week’s attack underscored just how indispensable air travel is to our economy. Since the attacks, hotel occupancy in New York City has plummeted, restaurants are empty, Broadway shows have closed. People fly to New York from all over the world, but right now they are scared to fly.

With the $3 billion allocated from the antiterrorism package, new safeguards will make air travel safer, but we do not know when passengers will return. In the meantime, if the airlines go out of business, what will be the next business to go out of business? We will all be out of business, and we cannot let that happen.

Supporting our airlines is also an act of patriotism. The terrorists wanted to ground America, so we need to fly. We also need to compensate victims, many of whom were my constituents and friends. We need to compensate workers that are not covered in this package.

I have been assured by our leader, the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. GEPHARDT), that he will introduce a bill tomorrow which will do that, with the support of many in the leadership on the other side of the aisle. We need to answer this act of hostility by restoring the friendly skies domestically, and by sending airplanes of a different sort to get the cowards of the September 11 attacks.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. DOGGETT).

Mr. DOGGETT. Mr. Speaker, I want to begin by commending President Bush for his efforts to bring our Nation together. This is a time for bipartisan commitment to make common cause on behalf of our country.

Yet the handling of this bill, I believe, violates that very spirit. We now debate an air travel safety bill, and it immediately followed by a “gag rule” that denies the Members the slightest opportunity to improve this bill by offering amendments and strictly limits their remarks during debate. Such parliamentary tricks, really, I think divide us at a time when we should be coming together.

There was a plainspoken Texan who once sat in that chair, a legendary figure who presided over this House, by the name of Sam Rayburn. He said that, in conducting the people’s business, three of the most important words were: “Wait a minute.” That simple maxim I think has never rung more true than with this piece of legislation.

At midnight last Friday when many Members of this House were asleep, like many members of the American public, when we had been told that all of our regular work was completed, an attempt was made to force through this House, in a matter of minutes, a bill that spent $15 billion, that is billion with a B, of taxpayer money, a bill composed of mere three pages.

All that I personally did about those three pages at that time was to apply Mr. Rayburn’s three words: Wait a minute. Wait a minute, but it was the bill that we had then and that we have now contains nothing meaningful, not one word, well, a few words at the end of the bill that are meaningless, making passing reference to previous legislation. It will not assure the security of Americans on planes flying across this country. That is deferred until later, instead of making it our first priority now. We have 31 pages tonight instead of last Friday’s three pages, but those pages provide no more security for the travelling public.

I said “wait a minute” because that bill did not contain protection for the taxpayer; those three pages were only a blank check.

In that regard, I want to commend again President Bush’s administration, because had it not been for them seizing the opportunity of these last few days and demanding an Air Transportation Security Act, this would not be in the bill. This very provision of which the supporters tonight boast in this bill would not be there if they had overcome my objection at midnight last week.

I said, wait a minute then, because it contained no provision to protect those who do the hard work within our airline industry.

It contained no shared sacrifice. At that time all the money could have gone to executive compensation, to those at the top.

Tonight, now that it has been studied carefully, they put a limitation in the bill. And do you know what that limitation is? That limitation is that those at the top of the airline industry cannot make any more than they did last year. Do you know how much that is? For our CEO’s, that is $35 million. And the poorer CEO’s can only make $6 million. And so the American taxpayer is giving $70 million in a golden parachute.

What about the people that cook the meals, that clean the cabins, that stand out there and risk their lives for the safety of all of us? What security do they get in this bill? They do not get one dime or one plug nickel in this bill.

That is why I say it is a shame what is happening here tonight. They got nothing last Friday, and we have come around to another Friday and those hardworking Americans do not get the protection they need in this bill. It is wrong for this Congress to help those at the top and forget those who are doing the hard work out there. And we have been told in the interim that 800,000 Americans working for the airlines will probably be laid off even if the airlines get every dime for which they are asking.

It is not my intent to demonize this industry or question the motives of those who have come forward. This is a vital industry to our country. I am ready to help it. I am ready to respond. I am ready to respond to this very minute. But crafting this bill has not been an open inclusive process. Rather it has been one closed-door session after another where the taxpayer rights, the safety of the American public, and the rights of American workers have been ignored.

I’m voting no because it’s not right to put those at the top in first class seats and leave everybody else—the taxpayers, the flying public, and the workers out on the tarmac without even a bag of peanuts.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. THORNBERY). The time of the gentleman has expired. All time of the gentleman from Texas (Mr. FROST) has expired. The gentleman from New York (Mr. REYNOLDS) has 7 minutes remaining.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume to note that the previous speaker indicated that some Members were sleeping last Friday.

I want to remind Members of the history of last week. We were actually in regular order of business. There was a unanimous consent request brought, as the gentleman knows, because he was here as part of the debate that was under consideration.

And the second thing the gentleman referred to was the language regarding executive salaries. I would like the record to so record that the executive salaries language that capped the executive salaries was included at the request of a minority ranking member, and that is why that language appears as it does in the legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 1⁄2 minutes to my friend, the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. BLUNT), who has spent countless hours on this legislation in the spirit of compromise with both Republican and Democratic Members and leadership.

Mr. BLUNT. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

POINT OF ORDER

Mr. DeFAZIO. Mr. Speaker, I rise to a point of personal privilege on the previous statement of the gentleman. If I could state that, or I could allow my words taken down, if you would give me a moment.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair would inform the gentleman that there is no point of personal privilege based on the debate which is in order at this time.

Mr. DeFAZIO. Well, then, if the gentleman made a statement that was untrue about the position of the Democratic leaders and basically directly casting aspersion on them by saying that they did not raise the issues, raised by many Members here on the floor in those discussions, and we know that they did, there is a process under which I could have his words taken down, or review them.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. It is certainly the right of any Member during debate to ask that a Member’s words be taken down. At that point the words must be transcribed and read to the House and the Chair will rule upon them.

Mr. DeFAZIO. But what my question is, since he made an assertion about the Democratic leaders, which I know and others know to be untrue, and about the points we are making on the issues in the negotiations, is there some objection that I could lodge against such an untrue statement on the floor of the House?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair is unable to rule or respond in the negotiations, is there some objection that I could lodge against such an untrue statement on the floor of the House?

Mr. DeFAZIO. At this point, hopefully, we will get a chance to rebut those untrue words in future debate. The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from New York (Mr. REYNOLDS) has 4 minutes remaining.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 seconds to the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. BLUNT).

Mr. BLUNT. Mr. Speaker, I would just like to say that if I inadvertently suggested that anybody had not addressed these issues in good faith all week, or suggested that all of our leaders had not worked hard to make this happen, or that the issues, and I believe in fact I said I was confident that later in this debate our leaders would come to the floor, I meant to say and indicate they had discussed this; they had an understanding of how this would be handled in the future. I certainly meant no suggestion of any kind that our leaders had not worked hard; that they, and that all sides are not concerned about these issues. If I mis spoke in any way, I certainly want to do. Because I think there has been hard and dedicated work put in on this by all sides this week.
CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE

September 21, 2001

Mr. KUCINICH and Mr. BAIRD changed their vote from "yea" to "nay."

Mr. SCHIFF and MR. MALONEY of Connecticut changed their vote from "nay" to "yea."

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Mr. Jollie of Texas, pending which the Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

Resolved, That upon the adoption of this resolution the bill shall be in order without intervention of any point of order to consider in the House the bill the H. R. 296, AIR TRANSPORTATION SAFETY AND SYSTEM STABILIZATION ACT

Mr. REYNOLDS, Mr. Speaker, by direction of the Committee on Rules, I call up House Resolution 244 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The Clerk read the resolution, as follows:

H. Res. 244

Resolved, That upon the adoption of this resolution the bill shall be in order without intervention of any point of order to consider in the House the bill the H. R. 296, AIR TRANSPORTATION SAFETY AND SYSTEM STABILIZATION ACT

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, for the purpose of debate only, I yield the customary 30 minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. FROST), pending which I yield myself such time as I may consider. During consideration of this resolution, all time yielded is for the purpose of debate only.

Mr. Speaker, House Resolution 244 is a closed rule that provides for the consideration of H. R. 296, the Air Transportation Safety and System Stabilization Act. This rule and its underlying legislation address the impending needs of the airline industry after last week’s tragic attacks on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon.

The rule provides for 1 hour of debate to be equally divided between the chairman and the ranking minority member of the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure. The rule waives all points of order against consideration of the bill. Finally, the rule provides one motion to recommit, with or without instructions.

Mr. Speaker, since the morning of September 11, 2001, when, as President Bush said last night, enemies of freedom committed an act of war against our country, our Nation has been through extraordinary and trying times. Over the past week and a half, we have heard countless stories of personal tragedy and selfless heroism. We have seen a Nation come together in a steady resolve to just serve the just.

And we have felt here in this Congress an unprecedented unity, rooted not just in bipartisanship but nonpartisanship, in citizenship. And we have much work to do.

As President Bush said, “We face new and sudden national challenges,” because this war has many fronts. It was heartening for me to see my State’s great Governor, George Pataki, and New York’s outstanding Mayor, Rudy Giuliani, here in these Chambers last night. I have long valued their friendship. But as a New Yorker, today I value even more their leadership. Each as shown a steady hand and quiet courage through which so many have drawn strength. Equally important, their attendance served as a reminder that we still have work to do to recover, rebuild and strengthen a city and a Nation.

Mr. Speaker, the ripple effect of last week’s events has been felt all over the world. In the blink of an eye, the way of life that we have taken for granted has been changed forever. Despite a national state of shock, through which so many have drawn strength. Equally important, their attendance served as a reminder that we still have work to do to recover, rebuild and strengthen a city and a Nation.

Within a matter of hours on the day of the attacks, the Federal Aviation Administration carefully orchestrated the safe grounding of every single airplane flying within the United States. This quick response and cooperation from the entire airline industry ensured the safety and well-being of countless individuals. But in the wake of the cowardly attacks on our Nation, scheduling cutbacks and subsequent reductions in the number of flights have hit the industry hard. Already there have been over 80,000 airline-related layoffs, with even more expected in the days and weeks to come.

We must remember that this is not just an industry giant that is suffering. This is a critical component to our way of life and a vital segment of our national economy. Our airlines move people and products across America and...
Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of the legislation before us, the Airline Industry Emergency Assistance Act of 2001. Last night, Mr. Speaker, we were all impressed by the President’s resolve. Today, this Congress continues the work of helping America recover and rebuild from last week’s cowardly, barbaric and tragic act of terrorism.

On September 11, terrorists murdered thousands of innocent people. They also struck directly at the fabric of America’s economy, seeking to cripple our air transportation system. Make no mistake, there is strong bipartisan support for stabilizing America’s air transportation system and for ensuring the victims of September 11 get the assistance they need as they rebuild their lives. How to do those things is a difficult and complex question, but a crucially important one. At stake is nothing less than the strength of the economy, hundreds of thousands of American jobs, and our values and way of life.

So Democrats and Republicans have been working overtime to craft a bipartisan emergency package. All of those who have spent the last week hashing out this bill, especially Leader GHRISHARDT, Speaker HASTERT, and Ranking Member OBERSTAR, deserve enormous credit.

Mr. Speaker, since the Federal Government has grounded air traffic last week, the airline industry has been losing billions of dollars. As a result, hundreds of thousands of Americans, employees of the airlines, as well as the service and manufacturing industries around them, have seen their livelihoods threatened. In the aftermath of last week’s attack, fewer people are flying, further hurting the industry. Make no mistake, it is critical that we ensure the security of air travel so people are not afraid to fly. And until the government ensures just compensation for the victims of September 11, the airlines will not be able to buy the insurance or borrow the capital they need to keep operating.

Mr. Speaker, the airlines have already announced some 80,000 layoffs. Each airline job affects numerous additional jobs in other related industries. Make no mistake, the airlines are part of the foundation of our economy, affecting industries from travel and tourism to the manufacturing and electronics industries.

In North Texas, the area that I represent, thousands of hardworking Americans make their living and support their families at companies like American Airlines, Boeing and Vought Industries.

I urge my colleagues to support this rule and the underlying legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me the time, and I yield myself such time as I may consume.

And until the government ensures just compensation for the victims of September 11, the airlines will not be able to buy the insurance or borrow the capital they need to keep operating.

Mr. Speaker, the airlines have already announced some 80,000 layoffs. Each airline job affects numerous additional jobs in other related industries. Make no mistake, the airlines are part of the foundation of our economy, affecting industries from travel and tourism to the manufacturing and electronics industries.

In North Texas, the area that I represent, thousands of hardworking Americans make their living and support their families at companies like American Airlines, Boeing and Vought Industries.

I have talked to them and I believe this reasonable package will help them and people like them around the country.

This package provides $5 billion to the airlines immediately to make up for the revenue they have lost this month as a result of Tuesday’s terrorist attack, and the government’s order grounding their planes. It provides $10 billion in loan guarantees for airlines that face fewer customers, higher insurance premiums, and rising security costs in the wake of September 11. These funds will help airlines avoid massive layoffs and provide the oversight to ensure the government will not be bailing out past management mistakes. Finally, it establishes the Federal Government as the insurer of last resort against terrorist attacks and sets up a victim compensation fund.

Make no mistake, it is not a perfect bill. A lot of Democrats, myself included, believe the Federal Government should guarantee the safety of air travel by taking over security and ensuring security staff are professionally trained and paid.

Additionally, Democrats believe we should do more to help the hundreds of thousands of airline workers whose jobs are on the line. We thought we had a bipartisan agreement to significantly expand unemployment insurance and health coverage for those who lose their jobs; but unfortunately, that was lost at some point late last night. So we will keep working to get that done. I am pleased that the Speaker has moved to try to help the people who are losing their jobs. I look forward to working on it with colleagues on both sides of the aisle.

So this bill does not do everything I think it should. Mr. Speaker, but it is a reasonable response under the circumstances; and it should help stabilize an industry uniquely devastated by terrorists while also ensuring the victims of September 11 will receive the compensation they and their families need. It protects thousands of Americans’ jobs and provides thousands of Americans with justice.

For all those reasons, I urge the adoption of this rule and the passage of the bill.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. RAMSTAD).

Mr. RAMSTAD. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from New York (Mr. REYNOLDS) for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of the rule and the underlying legislation.

Mr. Speaker, today was another sad day in Minnesota. Today, Minnesota-based Northwest Airlines, the largest employer in my congressional district, was forced to eliminate 4,500 jobs. That means layoffs for more than 20 percent of Northwest’s 23,000 employees in Minnesota. System-wide, these job cuts affect 10,600 Northwest workers. Before last week’s terrorist attacks, Northwest employed 53,000 people.

Because the Federal Government had no choice but to shut down the skies last week as an act of national defense, all the carriers I believe deserve compensation. We simply cannot let the airlines fail.

In the strongest terms possible, I support the legislation before us, provided the President’s financial plan to bolster this struggling airline industry. It is clearly the right thing to do, and we need to do it now.
Mr. Speaker, America needs this airline assistance package which includes $5 billion in direct aid and $10 billion in loan guarantees so the imperiled airlines can continue flying and avoid bankruptcy. Every 1,000 layoffs by Northwest Airlines in Minnesota will result in a $30 million payroll cut. So failure by Congress to pass this critical relief package for the airlines would be absolutely devastating to our economy as well as our airline employees and their families and hundreds of thousands of airline passengers nationally.

Mr. Speaker, without this immediate financial support from the Federal Government, the future of aviation in America would be severely threatened. Let us pass this important legislation today without further delay.

I deeply appreciate the leadership on this package by the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. Oberstar), my friend and colleague, as well as the gentleman from Florida (Mr. Young); and I urge all Members to support this very critical rule and legislation. The employees of Northwest Airlines and the people of Minnesota are both grateful for your bipartisan support.

Mr. Frost. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. Hastings), a member of the Committee on Rules.

Mr. HASTINGS of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Frost), the distinguished ranking member, my friend, for yielding me this time; and I rise to oppose the rule.

I consider the airline industry to be the linchpin of our way of life in America. It is the fuel that provides the engine for our economy here and worldwide. A safe, secure, stable industry is absolutely time that we pass this rule and that we pass this bill.

What I want to know from the Members is why are we going home when we have the responsibility not only to the airline industry, but responsibility to extend unemployment benefits for those who work for the airline?

Why are we going home, when we could stay here tomorrow, Sunday, and Monday and extend job training benefits for people we know will lose their job, or provide more weeks of federally subsidized consolidated omnibus budget reconciliation premiums, and provide optional temporary Medicaid coverage for those workers without COBRA?

I think we should defeat this rule. We should protect the airline industry and the workers. We should do it all and do it now.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. Shaw).

Mr. SHAW. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me time.

Mr. Speaker, I must say that I agree very much with what my friend and colleague the gentleman from Florida (Mr. Hastings) just said. I think the conclusion is wrong. We must first save the airlines. That is what is of utmost importance.

I listened to the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. Ober) speaking on his concerns about some of the obscene salaries that are continued to be paid while these airlines continue to hemorrhage red ink. I think the people who are considering the loans that we are being asked to guarantee should look very carefully at top executive salaries and see that these salaries should be based upon performance, and performance should be based upon, in part at least, the bottom line. When these airlines are continuing to lose money, the salaries at the top should not be in the figures that are today. But this is for the loan people to figure out, and I hope that they do so.

But thinking of this country, a collapse of the airline industry all across this country would be devastating. You all know that, and I do. I have talked to some of the executives in my own district about what is happening to the car rental agencies, what is happening to the hotels, what is happening to the theme parks, what is happening to the restaurants, and all of the people who work in those businesses, it is absolutely time that we pass this rule and that we pass this bill.

It may only be the first step, but it is so important that we act tonight, and that we send this message to Wall Street, that the American United States Congress is behind the American airline industry, that we understand the problem, and that we are not going to let the airlines fail, we are not going to let our economy fail. Tonight we must pass this rule, we must pass this bill, and we must move on.

Mr. Frost. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. Jackson-Lee).

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I thank the distinguished gentleman for yielding me time.

Mr. Speaker, I thank the chairman of the Committee on Rules and the ranking member as well. I thank the gentleman (Mr. Hastert) and our leader, the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. Gephardt). Last evening, the President told America that the hour is coming. He indicated to us as a unified Nation that we would not tire or falter or fail. In that spirit, last week I voted aye for America’s response. I voted aye for the $40 billion to respond to the horrific tragedy.

Today I am equally concerned about avoiding bankrupt airlines and losing thousands of jobs. I am concerned. Let me say to Linda, who wrote me from my district, along with hundreds of other letters, that I am aware that Continental Airlines, a single mother supporting families and they have invested the last several years to Continental. It would be difficult, as she said, for them to find jobs.

I am equally aware that Captain Kevin B. Lawson may be willingly misinterpreting my position. He needs to pay attention to his Air Pilots Association who want comprehensive legislation. We are concerned about airlines and the airline industry, but we are equally concerned about people and jobs.

Therefore, I would have hoped that this Congress could have looked to solve the problem of jobs. I supported the Hastings amendment, which extended unemployment benefits, provided unemployment insurance benefits, extended job training, and provided COBRA extensions for health care. Who of the hundreds of persons that have written me from the airline industry would be against that?

I also support helping the airport concessionaires. They are in desperate need. I want an SBA disaster declaration to help them. And I want to federalize airline security so that we can get back on the airlines quickly and start flying, going to Hawaii and Las Vegas and taking their children back to college and enjoying life again.

Mr. Speaker, I believe we can do more and reach to higher angels. I believe it is important to have a comprehensive package, and that is why I have raised my voice to fight for those who cannot fight for themselves.

I want to support the airline industry and those employees, too! I want to keep the millions of existing jobs. But, do you know what, Mr. Speaker? When I walk through the airports, I talk to the skycaps, I talk to the cleaning people. Those are the ones that pat Congresswoman SHELIA JACKSON-LEE on the back, and ask for help, not a handout.

I promised them I would work on their behalf, and I want a commitment from this Congress today that we are not going to leave here today without providing legislation that benefits the skycaps, hotel employees, cleaning people, contract people, people who are also innocent of the events of September 11, 2001.

I believe that we have to work with this rule and work with this legislation. But my heart is broken. Why? Because we could have done this in a more comprehensive manner. What do I say to the skycaps of 20 and 30 years that get $2 an hour? We can do better. The hour is coming. We can vote on a plan that will help everyone, if not today—we must do this in the coming days.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. HAYES), who has spent countless hours in committee hearings on this very subject.

Mr. HAYES. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me time, and I thank the ranking member for conducting this debate in a very professional and proper way.

Mr. Speaker, I have sat through every minute of hearings on airline financial stability and on security. I have been there for every minute. Members have raised relevant points, some more relevant than others, but here tonight we are faced with doing something that is crucial to our economy and to the airlines, which are a building log of that economy.

Last Friday night, it was brought to our attention by the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. OBERTHAR) and the gentleman from Alaska (Mr. YOUNG) that the markets would open on Monday and we needed to send a strong message to Wall Street and the financial community that we would be there for this important part of our commerce.

It did not happen. We spent a week talking about very important things. Let me assure my colleagues, many of whom I have spoken to individually: the skycaps of 20 and 30 years, the skycaps, the cleaning people, contract people, people who are also innocent of the events of September 11, 2001.

I believe these are unique and extraordinary times. Some of the steins that we take are not perfect. This is not a perfect piece of legislation. If the events of last Tuesday are any indication, this is not a perfect world.

I support this assistance bill because I believe it is necessary to maintain our transportation and aviation infrastructure. Passing this legislation does not absolve Congress from moving forward with air travel safety and dislocated worker assistance. We must do both as soon as possible. There are other industries that have been and will be affected by the events of September 11, 2001. We must look at these issues in a broader context.

This financial assistance package will ensure the survival of a vital engine to our economy, the airline industry. We cannot afford to wait. By getting the aviation industry back on track, we will have a downstream effect that will provide a boost to all of the related industries that have been hit hard by the uncertainty and the new rules and regulations by which to live.

Anybody who thinks that security is not a perfect piece of legislation. If the events of last Tuesday are any indication, this is not a perfect world.

Mr. Speaker, in South Dakota where air service is provided by small carriers to small airports, we have been hit especially hard. We have already seen the impact of a 5% cut in air service and in an expanded role for the Federal Government in airport and airline security. Mr. Speaker, there is a new landscape on which we must work.

I am very pleased that Congress has chosen to make air service a priority for our Nation. I am pleased this legislation contains language to ensure that communities across the country will maintain the air service that they need and have access to.

Mr. Speaker, I would conclude by saying I look forward to working with the administration, the carriers and the communities to preserve air service, and with the help of this legislation, make sure that those small communities across South Dakota and across the country, in continuing this crisis situation. I know the air service they currently have and that it is safe and secure for the future of America.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. STENHOLM).

Mr. STENHOLM. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this rule and the legislation which it permits to be taken up later tonight.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this legislation, which will provide necessary assistance to our airlines and protect this sector of our Nation's infrastructure.

We must resolve ourselves to restore the financial stability of our airlines—for we do this not for the sake of the airlines alone, but for the sake of all of our air travelers.

Even with this assistance, Americans still will be asked to sacrifice, for our country has changed. And yet we know that our country has faced and conquered so many other challenges in its proud history and we will survive this as well.

Thousands of workers in the travel industry have already lost or will lose their jobs, and citizens will be impacted by reduced options for air travel.

My district has already felt the brunt of these airline cutbacks. Continental Express will discontinue service to Atlantic and San Angelo Airports beginning October 1, and the sole remaining carrier, American Eagle, has announced that it will reduce the number of daily flights to Dallas-Fort Worth.

I commend Chairman Young and Ranking Member Oberstar for including language in this bill to protect rural communities and small airports. Each community that had service prior to September 11 must be assured of continuing air service, and I encourage Secretary Mineta to take steps to ensure this.

It is critical that airlines for the airlines to realize that now is not the time to unreasonably raise fares on passengers—especially in rural areas that are served by only one or two carriers. We must make sure that airfare remains reasonable and affordable for all Americans.

We must make sure the safety of our skies, and the airlines that fly in our skies, and with the help of this legislation, make sure that airfare remains reasonable and affordable for all Americans.

I believe in balance and fairness. We ought to help the industry; we ought to give the $15 billion. But it is not fair to ignore the employees, the workers, the clerks, the baggage handlers, the cooks, the mechanics, the people that keep the airplanes flying and say, well you will have to be willing to bear a share of the approach of some in this body that we will take care of that later. They have made a commitment that they will indeed address the workers' concerns. I sincerely hope that they will keep that commitment, and I hope the American people will take them to task; that in the weeks to come, we will, in fact, on the floor of this House deal with the question of protecting our dislocated workers, because they are the people who truly keep America flying.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2½ minutes to the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. BUYER).

Mr. BUYER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, this is a bill that recently passed in the other body 96 to one. Ninety-six to one. I had to come to the floor because I could not believe the rhetoric that I am hearing, the passion that is being sung, but let us remember what is occurring here at the moment. An industry is hemorrhaging. Hemorrhaging. Folks, let us calm down for a moment here.

When you look into a pond and it is nice and glassy on a calm, windless day and you take a rock and you throw it into the pond, sure you see the splash; but then you have the ripples that go far out infinitum. We are trying to deal with those ripples and bring calm to it before it hits the shores. Here is an industry that is approaching 100,000 layoffs. We cannot give in to the terrorists. We have to have this immediate infusion.

I have great respect for the leaders of both parties that negotiated this. Let us bring calm here also to our words.

This needs to pass. Yes, it is an economic stabilization. Yes, we have to address security assurances. Yes, we have to address liability. There is plenty of work still yet for us to do.

I want to compliment the Governor of Indiana, Frank O'Bannon, a Democrat governor. He sent a letter to me and said, I would like to urge you to support the enactment of the economic assistance for our domestic airline industry and on the continued closure of the covers for financial benefit, reduced passenger demand due to concerns about air safety pose significant obstacles to recovery. Without Federal assistance, including grants and loans, many airlines will go bankrupt.

I want to compliment Democrat Governor Frank O'Bannon. Republicans and Democrats are unified and there is unity to do this measure, so please let us be very cautious about the rhetoric and the tone that is being used here on this floor, and let us continue our work in a bipartisan fashion on behalf of the American people.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from New York (Mr. HINCHEY).

Mr. HINCHEY. Mr. Speaker, every one in this House wants to be sure that we have a sound airline industry and that it is functioning properly for the American people. But this bill does not do enough in too many areas and in some areas, it does what it does in the wrong way.

This bill first of all, provides $5 billion in outright grants to the airline industry. The September 21 report of the Democratic staff of the Joint Economic Committee estimates that because of the shutdown, the airline industry in the United States has lost between $8 billion and $9 billion. And that this bill gives them $5 billion in outright grants and another many billions of dollars and more in loan guarantees follow upon that.

If we want people to get back into airlines, the way to do that is to increase the confidence of the American people in the airline industry. The way to do that is to put safety procedures in place, the kind of safety procedures that the airline industry has resisted for decades, since deregulation. These people who run these airlines are using the cover of crisis for financial gain, and that is what is happening in the context of this bill. No safety procedures, no increases in safety procedures, no additional confidence on the part of the American people.

If we want people back in the airlines, we have to make them safe. Why are we not requiring the airlines to do the kinds of things that will produce confidence? We owe the American people that. Where is that $5 billion going? What is it going to be used for when the airlines have only lost less... than $1 billion as a result of the shutdown.

Then, of course, there is the issue of the people who work for the airlines who are getting absolutely nothing out of this particular piece of legislation.

Airline executives making between $5 million and $35 million a year, at a time when the economy has been at its best in 50 years, at a time when more people are flying, have nevertheless been able to run several of these airline companies into the ground, and now we are rewarding them with additional billions of dollars.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. FLAKE).

Mr. FLAKE. Mr. Speaker, I have one piece of concern about the legislation that I wanted to air here. The bailout, or the billions of dollars, is given on the basis of formula, which is fine, as it should be. However, the next portion, the loan guarantees, will be distributed based not on a formula, but where a governmental entity or a group of individuals will simply pick winners and losers; you have more cash flow than the other guy. You have a bigger asset base than the other guy. You win; you lose.

I hope that as this goes forward, if this legislation passes, that we are vigilant here in ensuring that those who dole out that money do so in an equitable basis and do not try to pick winners and losers in the economy.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from California (Ms. PELOSI).

Ms. PELOSI. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the rule. At a time when the American people expect, more than ever expect and truly deserve a full discussion of our response to the global tragedy, the Committee on Rules has presented us with a closed rule.

At a time when the collateral damage to workers associated with the airline industry can run up to 100,000 layoffs, we are not even allowed to discuss amendments to help them. At a time when the airline industry has placed the burden of safety on the travelers with 3-hour waits before scheduled takeoffs, and present us with a bill which barely mentions safety, a bailout of the airline industry will only be a temporary fix if we do not get passengers back on the flights.

The airlines must do a better job of facilitating travel, and this Congress must do a better job for the thousands who are losing their jobs. To do anything less while we are considering a $15 billion bailout is a national disgrace. I urge my colleagues to oppose this.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. SHADEGG).

Mr. SHADEGG. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this rule and of the underlying bill. A week after the terrorist attacks, the first thing that was needed was a temporary fix if we do not get passengers back on the flights. The airlines must do a better job of facilitating travel, and this Congress must do a better job for the thousands who are losing their jobs. To do anything less while we are considering a $15 billion bailout is a national disgrace. I urge my colleagues to oppose this.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the rule. It is amazing, the last speaker said those airlines that were flying on September 10 should continue flying. That is exactly what the airlines are telling us. They are telling us that we should at least be able to continue to service our area.

If you are taking the taxpayers’ money and if you are doing that well before September 11, 2001, why are they now cutting out service to areas like Chattanooga; Escanaba, Michigan; and the rest of this country? They are using the terrorist attack as an excuse to get out of certain marketplaces.

The intent of my amendment was not to minimize or aggravate the losses incurred by the airline industry, but a sense of fairness. If they can service our areas before the terrorist attack and take billions of dollars from us, they should at least be able to continue to service our area.

That was our amendment, straight up, forward. That is all we wanted. It was to ensure that areas do not get dropped by airline carriers in a rush to save money during this time. It is a real concern that the carriers will use this emergency as an excuse to cut routes, and, indeed, they already have.

The amendment states, “Any carrier who drops service within the next 2 years to an airport they served prior to September 11 will not be eligible for funding under the airline bailout bill.”

If a carrier stops providing air transportation to an airport, then the carrier must repay the United States the amount of money that they received.

Billions of dollars in aid should not be given to private industry without some promises in return. Our communities are the heart and soul of America, and should not suffer undue hardship as a result of this tragedy. We cannot leave this to the airlines’ discretion. They have already spoken. They have spoken loudly. They will cut service in some parts of this country.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from New York (Mr. GRUCCI).

Mr. GRUCCI. Mr. Speaker, I thank my distinguished friend, the gentleman from New York, for yielding time to me. I thank all those in the House here tonight, and all those working on this bill.

About a week ago, when I saw what will forever be known as Ground Zero in New York, my heart ached. My heart ached for those who were affiliated with the places that were attacked, and for those who were going through the rubble and trying to find human life that was left.
Now my heart aches for more Americans, people who are out of work, people who are affected, small business owners across this country, because the airline industry is not up and running. It is the people who live in my district who work there as well. I want to help them. I will do all that I can to do that. But before we can put them back to work, we have to put the airlines back as well. We need to deal with this so we can make sure that this country continues to move forward.

We are going to do what we need to do. I heard the President say that; that not only are we going to rebuild New York and Washington, but we are going to rebuild our economy. That is going to be one brick at a time. As we move forward, we are going to take piece by piece, and this piece is to help put the airline industry back in solvency so we can go forward and put people back to work.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from Florida (Ms. BROWN).

Ms. BROWN of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

First of all, let me say that everybody in this House feels the pain of what is going on in the country, and certainly we all want to be supportive. I personally sat through the testimony of the CEOs in the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure. I know that our carriers need some relief.

But I refuse to vote for a bill that was never debated in committee, and does absolutely nothing for the thousands of employees and businesses that rely on the airline carriers for survival. We are handing over $5 billion, a blank check, to the airline CEOs, and over $10 billion in loan guarantees, with no questions asked; but not one single word about the up to 100,000 industry workers who are now losing their jobs. How can we go back to the district and tell those hardworking men and women that we were not able to provide a dime for them, but yet we are willing to give the CEOs $5 billion? Mr. Speaker, the airline carriers are taking advantage of us. We are being chumps.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Brady).

Mr. BRADY of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me, and I thank him for his leadership on this issue.

Mr. Speaker, Congress is right to act because the airline transportation system is as critical to our economy as our highways, our railroads, and our seaports. This is important locally to me because the 20,000 Continental Airlines furloughs are causing a great deal of hardship for our families in our community. Without swift action from Congress, many more of our jobs and our businesses will suffer greatly, and so will our chances for recovering from this economic strain, and as we work to open new markets for Texas and for the United States.

These are extraordinary times, and in the end, whatever concerns we may have, we simply cannot sit idle and give terrorists the satisfaction of toppling America's economy as they did the Twin Towers. This is crucial legislation tonight, not for America and its highways, our railroads, and our airports, but for this country that will never forget.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. OLVER).

Mr. OLVER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Speaker, this bill today aids the airline companies that were devastated by the terrorism of September 11: United, American, Delta, Northwest, and U.S. Air, and the others who on average have announced a 20 to 25 percent reduction in employees, and cutting 25 percent, on average, of routes. By all accounts, they need the aid.

But the airline industry is not solely these largest of the airline corporations. This bill provides no parallel aid for the nearly 100,000 direct employees of those companies who are losing their jobs, and this bill does not even contemplate the spin-off losses of jobs in the travel/tourism industry, the hotels and resorts, the restaurants, and travel services. That is a severe inequity.

Beyond that, this bill does absolutely nothing to assure the American public that they can travel safely in the new world that has followed September 11. Yesterday, the joint subcommittees of the Committee of Appropriations, the Joint Senate and House subcommittees, held a hearing and heard powerful testimony from the FAA, the GAO, the IG, which documented the utterly porous security systems operated by the airlines. They have found that the current methods to detect guns, knives, and other threats; that they have been able to repeatedly to breach the secure areas in a large percentage of the airports, and once they had breached the secure areas, could enter easily aboard aircraft.

Mr. Speaker, why is it that these breaches of security systems are so easy? The IG and the GAO cite low wages and low benefits of the employees, little or no training, weak and no uniform investigations of the screeners, no uniform standards for screening. In other words, they are largely dead-end jobs providing security. We must come back to this bill, even though I am going to support the legislation.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. TRAFICANT).

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Speaker, the terrorists not only wanted to kill our innocent, but they wanted to destroy the great symbols of America's freedom: New York, the Trade Center, the Pentagon. If not for those brave Americans, that plane in Pennsylvania would have probably visited this Capitol.

I do not think there is anybody who has fought more for jobs in this Congress than I. Failure to pass this bill will do something that I think was unintended by the terrorists. It will give them a victory because our aviation industry shutdown kills our economy, kills jobs, wrecks the stability of our freedom.

This is not a perfect bill, but we have the word of the Speaker, the minority leader, that they will revisit this issue and this bill will be perfected. But failure to pass this bill gives these terrorists a victory that they never envisioned. They wanted a symbolic victory. We are giving them an absolute economic victory. That cannot occur, it should not occur. Congress should do one other thing: not divide our resolve. That is the real goal of these terrorists.

Stay together, pass the rule, pass the bill, and let us fix that as we go on, as we remedy this great disaster.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from Illinois (Ms. SCHAKOWSKY).

Ms. SCHAKOWSKY. Mr. Speaker, every single Member of this body and every person in this country understands fully that a functioning airline industry is vital to the functioning of our country. Yet, I stand in opposition to this legislation. Why? Because, remarkably, this bill completely ignores the heroes in the airline industry who were and are most deeply and personally affected by the September 11 atrocities, the thousands of everyday airline workers who are now losing their jobs as a result of the September 11 attack.

Members can look in every line and in every page of this bill and we will not find a single mention of them. Those airline executives who earn up to $55 million a year, they will find a whole section here, but not a word about the up to 100,000 industry workers who will lose their jobs even if we pass this bill.

An angry and hurt Association of Flight Attendants said, "It is sad how quickly those who sacrificed to make our country great, even in these times of tragedy, get left out when corporations go asking for taxpayer money."

This bill says nothing about unemployment benefits, job training, and health benefits. I stand here tonight ready to help the airline industry, but not just a part of it. Those who say they will help workers next week or the week after, have to be asked: Why not tonight? If we add them to the bill, I would gladly and proudly vote yes.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to
September 21, 2001

17621 gentleman from New Mexico (Mr. UDALL).

Mr. UDALL of New Mexico. Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to stay here and address these issues: the worker employment issues and the safety issues and security issues we have talked about.

There is no doubt that the airline industry is in need of assistance. This industry is vital to our nation’s economic strength, and its current struggles have far-reaching implications for all segments of American society. Therefore, at this time of national emergency, I agree that we should help stabilize this important cog in the American economic wheel. However, I do not believe that we should simply provide a “bailout” bill for airline companies at the expense of American taxpayers.

As we consider the amount of assistance we are providing, we also need to ensure that there are sufficient provisions to assist everyone who has been affected by this tragedy. First, we must compensate the victims of the September 11th attack. Second, we need to take steps to prevent future tragedies. Third, we need to help the airline industry, but we also must remember those hard working airline employees who have lost their jobs. Finally, we need to provide support for smaller airports throughout the country. Providing assistance to the beleaguered industry, we must be mindful of these objectives.

Unfortunately, Mr. Speaker, I have reservations about whether or not this bill is mindful of those objectives. I have serious concerns about the lack of employee assistance provisions in this legislation and believe that we, the United States Congress, should be working through the weekend to ensure that those airline employees who need our help receive assistance as soon as possible. I am hopeful that the majority will keep its commitment to move additional legislation to help working families next week.

Nevertheless, Mr. Speaker, despite my reservations about this legislation, I do recognize that it is an important start in a time of great national crisis and will therefore support its passage. I should provide assistance to the airline industry, but believe it should be done responsibly. The American people demand it, and the American people deserve it.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from New York (Mr. ENGEL).

Mr. ENGEL. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, I am here in the Chamber tonight with a heavy heart. I will support this bill reluctantly, but I will oppose the rule. And I will oppose it because of the reasons that so many of my colleagues have given.

I am very disappointed that there is no relief for workers for the airline industry. There is no job training, there is no unemployment compensation, there is no health benefits protection to laid-off workers. None of that is in the bill we are going to review as it next week, and I hope we get a bill then, but it should be in the bill tonight.

Also, we all know that federalizing the security workers that are by the x-ray machines is something that we are going to have to do. Why are we not addressing this issue in the bill tonight? The fat cats, the heads of the airline industry, are guaranteed and locked in for millions, but American workers are not given the right time of day.

We ought to stay here and we ought to perfect the bill. That is why I am going to oppose the rule, because we should be having amendments that will deal with these issues that we are talking about. What could be more important than helping American workers? So I will support the bill, but I will oppose the rule. The airline industry needs to be helped, but we should be doing everything tonight.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

As I have been working on seeing this rule come to the floor for some 24 hours, I cannot help but reflect that the goal I hope to achieve in helping to invest some of America into our airlines is to protect those jobs that I have heard so much discussion about, to stop the layoffs, to stop the slowdowns of our economy, not just for the airline industry, but for those of us who have made reference to today but for all of America who is dependent on those airlines being in the air.

We are now in a global economy. We are dependent on the strength of the airline industry to make America work strong. And when I look at the investment of taxpayer dollars into our airlines, I am thinking about jobs and the economy first. I am thinking about not only the airline jobs, which are so important, but I am thinking about the jobs in my community and across America that people are working in. Americans working day in and day out are dependent on our airlines, whether they use them in their work or they are dependent on the goods and services that those airlines bring about in the reality of their jobs.

We are looking today to move forward with an opportunity for saving jobs, creating jobs, and addressing the jobs so dependent on our airlines. We have heard speeches made in debate today regarding the workers themselves, the airlines, men and women working across America in the tourism industry. That is why I think we need to move ahead and pass this rule so that we can get America working once more, to become the reliable airline industry, which is so vitally important.

I think we have seen a recognition of that in the last rule vote. I think we will see that in this vote as we move forward to debate the bill. This legislation is about preserving and growing jobs in this industry, which means so much to this country.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I would inquire of the time remaining on each side.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. GIBBONS). The gentleman from New York (Mr. REYNOLDS) has 5 minutes remaining, and the gentleman from Texas (Mr. FROST) has 5½ minutes remaining.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentlemanwoman from California (Ms. SANCHEZ).

Ms. SANCHEZ. Mr. Speaker, I thank the ranking minority member of the Committee on Rules for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, there is no question that we must help the airline industry. They are in a real danger of financial collapse. However, I have real concerns with the way that we are going about giving the airline industry financial assistance. We have left the workers behind in this bill, the workers who are or in so many cases were the heart and the soul of the very industry we may be bailing out this evening.

Despite the efforts over the last several hours, to digest and debate a bill of this magnitude, the leadership in this House, the people’s House, has refused to include in this legislation any relief for the tens of thousands of workers in the airline and related industries who have lost or will soon lose their jobs because of this crisis.

I have voted against the martial rule; and I will vote against this rule, because I believe that a bill this size, this magnitude, of this importance should not be rushed through the Congress. However, I will vote for this bill because I do not have a choice. The leadership has left no choice.

Mr. Speaker, this bill is not even close to perfect, but I will support it.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. GREEN).

Mr. GREEN of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of not only the rule but also the Air Transport System Stabilization Act of 2001.

Last week, this country suffered a terrible human loss when terrorists decided to use our airline industry as a weapon of mass destruction. The human magnitude of this attack has now started to crystallize, but the economic consequences of many of our industries, like the airlines, is only now becoming known.

Whether intentionally or unintentionally, the terrorists have brought financial ruin on our national airline system. Our national carriers have suffered a 50 to 80 percent drop in passenger miles flown, and that number may actually get worse in the short term, which means we cannot immediately and provide a financial floor for the industry. They need help, and they need it now.
I understand there are many in this Chamber who want to attach a broad list of legislative mandates and conditions to the bill. I would like to do some of these. But this assistance is only the first step. If we delay providing financial assistance one more week while we haggle over these proposals, this industry would not need the $15 billion because they will be out of business. That is because airlines are going to start declaring bankruptcy and will not need the money.

Delaying this financial assistance package means more workers will lose their jobs and Wall Street will continue to punish their stocks.

Let me make something very clear, our number one priority should be the jobs of the thousands of airline employees being furloughed or laid-off. But, we cannot begin to help them until we arrest the airlines sinking financially. This legislation is not a bailout for the airlines. This legislation is the number one priority should be the jobs of the airline industry and at Boeing will become law in the next month.

I know the chairman, the gentleman from Alaska (Mr. YOUNG) and the ranking member, the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. GEPHARDT) is my understanding that the helmet of legislative mandates and conditions on this bill, but we have very little choice. We need to move forward tonight. We need strong support for this bill, but we have very little choice.

Mr. Speaker, I rise tonight to offer my support for this legislation because I believe it is necessary for the survival of the airline industry in our country at this time. Without the infusion of cash and loan guarantees that is contained in this bill, I believe we would run the real risk that this vital component of our transportation network and our way of life—will cease to operate. We have already seen huge airline layoffs resulting from the disaster of September 11th, along with the resulting airport closures and sharp decline in air passenger traffic. And in the Puget Sound area of Washington State that I represent, we face the prospect of 20,000 to 30,000 layoffs at the Boeing Company in the year ahead, due to the industry decline that was certainly exacerbated by the terrorist attacks last week. This package we are considering today will help us avoid more bad news, Mr. Speaker, and deeper job cuts.

However, my support of this bill is contingent on the premise that a comprehensive package of assistance for workers in the airline industry and at Boeing will become law in the next month. The benefits of reform, including income support, skills training, educational assistance and other re-employment help is absolutely necessary, and it recognizes the tangible impact on workers in the industry as a result of this terrible national tragedy. In fact, I would have preferred if we had included this worker assistance in the legislation we are considering today in the House of Representatives, because the workers deserve an immediate sign from the federal government that they will not be forgotten as we are responding to the financial crisis among the airlines.

Already, I have begun working with the State of Washington and the U.S. Department of Labor to ensure that existing programs of income support and training are able to help the airlines. It is important to marshal these resources to help get these workers through the tough economic times ahead.

So I support the legislation to help the struggling airline industry in America at this critical time, Mr. Speaker. But I do so with the understanding that the workers who will be affected downstream by these same financial problems will know that help is on the way to them also.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from California (Mr. FARR).

Mr. FARR of California. Mr. Speaker, thank you for yielding me the floor.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the bill but with great concern. We have shown nothing but unaminism since the disaster last week. The airlines need this help, but it is not only the airlines that need this help. It is the employees of the airlines that need this help and it is all the other tourism related issues. I really want to ask my colleagues on the other side to try to keep the unity that we saw last night by really helping all of the industry affected in the United States, not just the airlines.

I support this because it is a 3-5-10 billion. And to explain that: it is $5 billion in direct aid; it is $3 billion for airport security, and certainly I think there is more need in airport security, I think we need to Federalize all our security, and we need a surcharge on that; and, lastly, it is $10 billion in loan guarantees.

It is a good bill but a bad process.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from New York (Mr. REYNOLDS) has 6 minutes remaining, and the gentleman from Texas (Mr. FROST) has 1½ minutes remaining.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from Connecticut (Ms. DELAUR0).

Ms. DELAUR0. Mr. Speaker, today I rise with a troubled conscience to address the rule before this body.

September 11 marked one of the darkest moments in our country’s history. On that day, terrorists struck at the heart of our social and economic fabric, and the ripple effects of this tragedy are still being felt. In particular, the airline industry was severely impacted, resulting in tremendous economic hardship for the carriers, the people who work for them, and the travel industry as a whole.

This bill will allow the airlines to continue flying, provide some security for our airports and airways, and grant critical compensation to the families of victims of last week’s barbaric attack. For those reasons, I hesitate to vote “no.” Nonetheless, the bill does little for more than the 100,000 workers laid off as a result of this tragedy. Millions of laid-off workers and their families will be left behind with no guarantee they will retain their unemployment benefits.

The security provisions do not go far enough. The airline industry has been given a go-ahead to raise the security surcharge and nail over increased airline safety. We cannot afford for the airline industries to fail; but they deserve a stern warning, not just a check.

That is why I will vote “no” on the rule.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the remaining time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Texas (Mr. FROST) has no further question of the gentlewoman from Connecticut (Ms. DELAUR0).

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, as many people have indicated, this is not a perfect bill, but we have very little choice. We need to move forward tonight. We must pass this legislation.

I urge adoption of the rule and adoption of the bill, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself the remaining time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Texas (Mr. FROST) has no further question of the Speaker.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself the balance of my time.

There has been a lot of debate on this rule about jobs and providing some assistance for what will be laid-off airline workers. And as I said earlier, I hope that we will have the opportunity, by strengthening our airline system, that they will be called back.

We have many challenges ahead of us in the airline industry, and this House and the other body and the administration has. I think about New York City, at the other end of my State, faced with 30 to 40 million square feet of lost office space, and 40,000 workers no longer working every day. A while we look at some of the things we face, and it is apparent we will have future debate on some of the airline industries assistance for laid-off workers, we have so much work to do in a comprehensive package that we need to work together on as we address some of these national tragedies that occurred in America in loss of jobs, let alone loss of life in New York City.

Our focus here today was to save jobs and continue an airline industry that this country critically dependent on. The ripple effect of last week’s attacks have been felt all over the world. In the blink of an eye, the way of life that we have taken for granted for so long has been changed forever.

Despite that national state of shock, thousands of our fellow citizens immediately went to work to ensure the safety and security of our American citizens. Within a matter of hours on the day of the attacks, the Federal Aviation Administration directly or indirectly orchestrated the safe grounding of every single airplane flying within the United States. This quick response and cooperation from the entire airline industry ensured the safety and well-being of countless individuals.

But in the wake of the cowardly attacks on our Nation, scheduling cutbacks and the reductions in the number of flights have hit the industry hard. As Members of Congress know that full well. Already there have been over 80,000 airline-related layoffs with more expected. We must remember that this is not just an industry giant that is suffering. It is a critical component of our way of life and a vital segment of our national economy.

Our airlines move people and products across America and throughout the world. They serve not just business and tourism, quite literally, determine whether we are able to compete in a global economy. The rule is now before us.

Mr. SPRATT. Mr. Speaker, the federal government must come to the aid of the airlines, and help them quickly, or the repercussions will be felt from coast to coast, all over our economy. Before September 11, our economy was at the tipping point; if the airlines fail, the economy will surely move into a recession, and the downturn will be deeper and longer.

I also want to mention the tragedy, whether in the air or on the ground, deserve compensation, and most citizens will be pleased to know that this bill uses their tax dollars for that purpose. But in this case, where the liability of the airlines is unsettled, I do think there are limits to which victims compensation by the government should be provided. The Victims Compensation Fund, but does not specify the size of the fund or the maximum that any beneficiary can recover. Many of the victims in the World Trade Center earned many times the income of the firemen and police who died trying to protect them. Under this bill, the heirs of those victims will be eligible for many times more benefits than this bill will allow those brave firemen and police. Quite a few claimants will be able to show substantial incomes. The earning capacity of their decedents will run into millions of dollars. I do not doubt their losses, or the grief their survivors must feel, but I do think the compensation to which they are entitled under this bill should be subject to some fair and reasonable limit. At this point, no one has any idea what the government’s liability under the Victims’ Compensation Fund might be, and it may be substantial.

I wanted to propose that we set a fair and generous cap on the victims’ benefits paid by the government, and some of the money saved to help the thousands of airline workers who are being terminated or laid off, and are in a real sense, victims of the September 11 tragedy also. H. Resolution 244, the rule allowing this bill to come to the House floor, would not permit me to offer such an amendment, and for that reason, I voted against the rule. I will vote for the bill, but it would be a much better bill if such an amendment had been made.

Mr. BLUMENAUER. Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to the Rule. The rushed process by which this airline relief legislation has been brought to the Floor does not allow for full consideration of the critical elements that the public deserves to have addressed.

The rule does not allow Members to add provisions to this legislation that would provide a more fair and comprehensive relief package to protect and restore the entire aviation industry, including those who work for airlines and in other directly related industries. In this time of extreme tension and sense of urgency, we should be urgent about doing things right and not rushing to consider solutions that only address half of the problem.

Federal assistance to stabilize the industry is warranted. I cannot, however, support a rule that fails to consider all of the ripple effects to those people and businesses across the country who are directly impacted by last week’s tragic events.

Mr. OLVER. Mr. Speaker, every member of this house understands that the airline industry has been devastated by the terrorism of September 11th.

We must provide help to the airline industry. I am sure we will do that today. This bill today will alls to the airlines what they need. United, American, Delta, Northwest, and US Airways are laying off 20–25% of their workforce and cutting 25% of their routes.

But this bill provides no parallel aid for the nearly 500,000 employees who are losing their jobs. Furthermore, this bill does not even contemplate the spinoff losses of jobs in the travel and tourism industry, the hotels and restaurants, the resorts and travel services. This is a severe inequity.

Beyond that, this bill does absolutely nothing to assure the American public that they can travel safely in this new world that the terrorism of September 11th has imposed on us all.

Yesterday, in a joint hearing, the Senate and House Transportation Subcommittees on Appropriations heard powerful testimony by the FAA, GAO, and Inspector General documenting the utterly porous security systems operated by the airlines.

Both the GAO and IG have extensively tested the security systems and found that screeners frequently fail to detect guns, knives, and other threats at security check points. The IG repeatedly breached secure areas in a large percentage of their tests at major airports. Once they entered secure areas, they could easily board aircraft.

Why are the breaches of the security system so easy?

The GAO and IG cite: low wages and benefits of security personnel; little or no training of screeners; weak to no criminal checks on screeners; no uniform standards for screening; very rapid turnover (from 80% to over 200%).

In other words these are largely dead end jobs. DEAD END JOBS protecting the security of American travelers.

This bill does nothing to correct the obvious error of placing airline companies in a double conflict of interest that the present system creates. First, spending the necessary money to provide the security that Americans must have comes from the airline’s bottom line. Second, proper screening requires time and causes longer waits in line.

But Americans will not return to the airways unless they are convinced that travel is safe. So, we must professionalize the airport security system with the ultimate responsibility for that security system firmly federalized.

In conclusion, neither the plight of employees of airlines and the related travel and tourism industry nor the necessary security of the American public when they fly is considered in this bill. Both will have to be addressed very soon.

But today, we have a bill that deals with an important part of the airline industry problem. I urge this House to do that much, but then come back and finish the job before we adjourn this session of Congress.

Mr. REYNOLDS. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time, and I move the previous question on the resolution.

The previous question was ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. THORNBERY). The question is on the resolution.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present.

Mr. OLIVER. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently a quorum is not present.

The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 285, nays 130, not voting 16, as follows:

September 21, 2001
Mrs. MEEK of Florida, Mrs. McCARTHY of New York, Ms. RIVERS, and Mr. DOGGETT changed their vote from "yea" to "nay".

Ms. LOFGREN changed her vote from "nay" to "yea".

So the resolution was agreed to.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

COMMITMENT TO ADDRESS NEEDS OF WORKERS AFFECTED BY EVENTS OF SEPTEMBER 11

(Mr. GEPHARDT asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute.)

Mr. GEPHARDT. Mr. Speaker, as we work to address the problems affecting our airlines, we must not forget the men and women who have lost their jobs as a consequence of the tragic events of September 11. These workers are without income, without health care coverage for themselves and their families, and without a clear path right now to future employment opportunities. I had hoped that we would be able to include something in this package to meet the needs of these American workers and their families. In the event, it is not right, and it is not fair, for these families and their employers to be denied these fundamental necessities after having lost their jobs through no fault of their own because of this national disaster. Working families are the backbone of our economy and our greatness as a Nation. I would hope that we would not ignore their plight now. I would ask the Speaker, who has worked hard with us to produce this legislation, if he could commit to address this problem in the coming weeks.

Mr. HASTERT. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will yield, I agree with the minority leader that we need to ensure that the safety net is strong and secure for all working Americans. And it is. Displaced workers need access to financial assistance as they work to get back on their feet. They have it. They need to be able to maintain their current health coverage without being thrown into the individual insurance market. Under current law, they can keep their same coverage. And for those workers unlikely to make it back to their old jobs, we need to ensure that they have access to adequate training programs. And we have. As the leader knows, due to the bipartisan progress over the years in this Congress, those pledges are secure.

But that does not mean that we should not consider proposals to do even more. The leader and I have discussed ways to address the unique health care needs of these working Americans as they seek employment. The committees of jurisdiction have already been examining proposals to assist in this area. We will take a comprehensive look at the health care needs of these displaced workers and work together to bring an appropriate legislative response to the floor as soon as possible. In the meantime, working Americans should know that the safety net is there, it is strong, and it is working.

Mr. GEPHARDT. Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank the Speaker of the House. He has dealt with me through these difficult days in an honorable and very good way. I appreciate it. I know all the Members appreciate it on our side as well.

REMOVAL OF NAME OF MEMBER AS COSPONSOR OF H.R. 1266

Mr. HASTINGS of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that my name be removed as a cosponsor of H.R. 1266, the Secret Evidence Repeal Act of 2001.

This SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. THORNBERY). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Florida?
Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, pursuant to House Resolution 244, I call up the bill (H.R. 2926) to preserve the continued viability of the United States air transportation system, and ask for its consideration.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The text of H.R. 2926 is as follows:

H.R. 2926

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE. This Act may be cited as the “Air Transportation Safety and System Stabilization Act”.

TITLE I—AILRINE STABILIZATION

SECTION 2. AVIATION DISASTER RELIEF. (a) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the President shall take the following actions to compensate air carriers for losses incurred by the air carriers as a result of the terrorist attacks on the United States that occurred on September 11, 2001:

(1) Subject to such terms and conditions as the President determines necessary, issue Federal credit instruments to air carriers that do not, in the aggregate, exceed $10,000,000,000 and provide the subsidy amounts necessary for such instruments in accordance with the provisions of the Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990 (2 U.S.C. 661 et seq.).

(2) Compensate air carriers in an aggregate amount equal to $5,000,000,000 for:

(A) direct losses incurred beginning on September 11, 2001, by air carriers as a result of any Federal ground stop order issued by the Secretary of Transportation or any subsequent order which continues or renews such a stoppage; and

(B) the incremental losses incurred beginning September 11, 2001, and ending December 31, 2001, by air carriers as a direct result of such attacks.

(b) EMERGENCY DESIGNATION.—Congress designates the amount of new budget authority and outlays in all fiscal years resulting from this title as an emergency requirement pursuant to section 101(a)(1) of the Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985 (2 U.S.C. 901(e)). Such amount shall be available only to the extent that a request, that includes designation of such amount as an emergency requirement as defined in such Act, is transmitted by the President to Congress.

SEC. 102. AIR TRANSPORTATION STABILIZATION BOARD.

(a) DEFINITIONS.—In this section, the following definitions apply:

(1) BOARD.—The term “Board” means the Air Transportation Stabilization Board established under subsection (b).

(2) FINANCIAL OBLIGATION.—The term “financial obligation” means any note, bond, debenture, obligation issued by the Board, or its designee, or an obligor in connection with financing under this section and section 101(a)(1).

(3) LENDER.—The term “lender” means any non-Federal institutional buyer (as defined by section 230.144A(a) of title 17, Code of Federal Regulations (or any successor regulation)) known as Rule 144A(a) of the Securities and Exchange Commission and issued under the Security Act of 1933, including—

(A) a qualified retirement plan (as defined in section 497(c) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (26 U.S.C. 497(c))) that is a qualified institutional buyer; and

(B) a governmental plan (as defined in section 414(d) of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 (26 U.S.C. 414(d)) that is a qualified institutional buyer.

(c) FEDERAL CREDIT INSTRUMENTS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Board may enter into agreements with one or more obligors to issue Federal credit instruments under section 101(a)(1) if the Board determines, in its discretion, that—

(A) the obligor is an air carrier for which credit is not reasonably available at the time of the transaction;

(B) the intended obligation by the obligor is prudently incurred;

(2) TERMS AND LIMITATIONS.—

(A) FORMS; TERMS AND CONDITIONS.—A Federal credit instrument shall be issued under subsection (a) if the Board determines, after notice and comment, that the instrument has such terms and conditions and contains such covenants, representations, warranties, and requirements (including requirements for audits) as the Board determines appropriate.

(B) PROCEDURES.—Not later than 14 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Director of the Office of Management and Budget shall issue regulations setting forth procedures for application and minimum requirements, which may be supplemented by the Board in its discretion, for the issuance of Federal credit instruments under section 101(a)(1).

(d) FINANCIAL PROTECTION OF GOVERNMENT.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—To the extent feasible and practicable, the Board shall ensure that the Government is compensated for the risk assumed in making guarantees under this title.

(2) GUARANTEE AND楊 RATING OF CREDITS.—

To the extent to which any participating corporation accepts financial assistance, in the form of the proceeds of any loan guaranteed by the Government under this title, the Board is authorized to enter into contracts under which the Government, contingent on the financial success of the participating corporation, would participate in the gains of the participating corporation or its security holders through the use of such instruments as warrants, stock options, convertible preferred stock, or other appropriate equity instruments.

(3) DEPOSIT IN TREASURY.—All amounts collected by the Secretary of the Treasury under this subsection shall be deposited in the Treasury as miscellaneous receipts.

SEC. 103. SPECIAL RULES FOR COMPENSATION.

(a) DOCUMENTATION.—Subject to subsection (b), the amount of compensation payable to an air carrier under section 101(a)(2) may not exceed the amount of losses described in section 101(a)(2) that the air carrier demonstrates to the satisfaction of the President, using sworn financial statements or other appropriate data, that the air carrier incurred. The Secretary of Transportation and the Comptroller General of the United States may audit such statements and may request any information that the Secretary and the Comptroller General deems necessary to conduct such audit.

(b) MAXIMUM AMOUNT OF COMPENSATION PAYABLE PER AIR CARRIER.—The maximum total amount of compensation payable to an air carrier under section 101(a)(2) may not exceed the lesser of—

(1) the amount of such air carrier’s direct and incremental losses described in section 101(a)(2); or

(2) in the case of—

(A) flights involving passenger-only or combined passenger and cargo transportation, the product of—

(i) $4,500,000,000; and

(ii) the ratio of—

(I) the revenue ton miles or other auditable measure of the air carrier for the month of August 2001 as reported to the Secretary; to

(II) the total available seat miles of all such air carriers for such month as reported to the Secretary; and

(B) flights involving cargo-only transportation, the product of—

(i) $500,000,000; and

(ii) the ratio of—

(I) the revenue ton miles or other auditable measure of the air carrier for the latest quarter for which such data is available as reported to the Secretary; to

(II) the total revenue ton miles or other auditable measure of all such air carriers for such quarter as reported to the Secretary.

(c) PAYMENTS.—The President may provide compensation to air carriers under section 101(a)(2) in 1 or more payments up to the amount authorized by this title.

SEC. 104. LIMITATION ON CERTAIN EMPLOYEE COMPENSATION.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The President may only issue a Federal credit instrument under section 101(a)(1) to an air carrier after the air carrier enters into a legally binding agreement with the President that, during the 2-year period beginning September 11, 2001, and ending September 11, 2003, no officer or employee of the air carrier whose total compensation exceeded $300,000 in calendar year 2000 (other than an employee whose compensation is determined through an existing collective bargaining agreement) will receive from the air carrier severance pay or other benefits upon termination of employment.
of employment with the air carrier which exceeds twice the maximum total compensation received by the officer or employee from the air carrier in calendar year 2000.

(b) Total Compensation Defined.—In this section, the term "total compensation" includes salary, bonuses, awards of stock, and other financial benefits provided by an air carrier to an officer or employee of the air carrier.

SEC. 105. Continuation of Certain Air Service.

(a) Action of Secretary.—The Secretary of Transportation shall take appropriate action to ensure that all communities that had scheduled air service before September 11, 2001, continue to receive adequate air transportation service and that essential air service to small communities continues without interruption.

(b) Essential Air Service.—There is authorized to be appropriated to the Secretary to carry out the essential air service program under subchapter II of chapter 417 of title 44, United States Code, $120,000,000 for fiscal year 2002.

(c) Secretarial Oversight.—

(1) In General.—Notwithstanding any other provision of this title, the Secretary is authorized to require an air carrier receiving direct financial assistance under this Act to maintain scheduled air service to any point served by that carrier before September 11, 2001.

(2) Agreements.—In applying paragraph (1), the Secretary may require air carriers receiving direct financial assistance under this Act to enter into agreements which will ensure, to the maximum extent practicable, that all communities that had scheduled air service under the Act on September 10, 2001, continue to receive adequate air transportation service.

SEC. 106. Reports.

(a) Report.—Not later than February 1, 2002, the President shall transmit to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure, the Committee on Appropriations, and the Committee on the Budget of the Senate a report on the Budget of the United States Government for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2002, and the Committee on the Budget of the House of Representatives a report on the Budget of the United States Government for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2002.

(b) Effect of Report.—The Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure shall ensure that the report submitted under paragraph (1) is transmitted to the Committee on the Budget of the Senate, and the Committee on the Budget of the House of Representatives, no later than 60 days after the date on which the Report is submitted to the Senate or the House of Representatives.

SEC. 107. Definitions.

In this title, the following definitions apply:

(1) Air Carrier.—The term "air carrier" means any common carrier operating for hire by air.

(2) Federal Credit Instrument.—The term "Federal credit instrument" means any guarantee or other pledge by the Board issued under section 181(a)(1) to pledge the full faith and credit of the United States to pay all or any part of the principal of and interest on a loan or other debt obligation issued by an obligor and funded by a lender.

(3) Incremental Loss.—The term "incremental loss" does not include any loss that the President determines would have been incurred if the terrorist attacks on the United States that occurred on September 11, 2001, had not occurred.

Title II—Aviation Insurance

SEC. 201. Domestic Insurance and Reimbursement of Insurance Costs.

(a) In General.—Section 44302 of title 49, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subsection (a)(1)—

(A) by striking "subsection (b)" and inserting "subsection (a)"; and

(B) by striking "foreign-flag aircraft" and all that follows through the period at the end of subparagraph (B) and inserting "foreign air carriers";

(2) by redesignating subsections (b), (c), (d), and (e) as subsections (c), (d), and (e), respectively;

(3) by inserting after subsection (a) the following:

"(b) Reimbursement of Insurance Cost Increases.—

(1) In General.—The Secretary may reimburse an air carrier for the increase in the cost of insurance, with respect to a premium for coverage ending before October 1, 2002, against loss or damage arising out of any risk from the operation of an American aircraft over the insurance premium that was in effect for a comparable operation during the period beginning September 4, 2001, and ending September 10, 2001, as the Secretary may determine. Such reimbursement is subject to subsections (a)(2), (c), and (d) of this section and to subsections (c) and (d) of section 44305(b) of such title.

(2) Payment from Revolving Fund.—A reimbursement under this subsection shall be paid from the revolving fund established by section 44307.

(3) Further Conditions.—The Secretary may impose such further conditions on insurance for which the increase in premium is subject to reimbursement under this subsection as the Secretary may deem appropriate in the interest of air commerce.

(4) Termination of Authority.—The Secretary shall terminate reimbursement under this subsection before "enactment of this Act", if the Secretary determines that the disaster has ended.

(b) Coverages.—

(1) In General.—Section 44303 of such title is amended to read as follows:

"(3) Airliner-Related Deposit.—For purposes of this section, the term "airliner-related deposit" means any deposit referred to in section 205.5(b)(1) of title 14, Code of Federal Regulations, that exceed $100,000,000, in the aggregate, for all claims by such parties arising out of such act, and the Government shall be responsible for any liability above such amount. No punitive damages may be awarded against an air carrier for injury or damage or recovery of any property (including the Government's responsibility for an air carrier under this paragraph) under a cause of action arising out of such act.

(c) Reimbursement.—Section 44304 of such title is amended—

(1) by striking "the proposals referred to in..." and inserting "the proposals referred to in...".

(d) Premiums.—Section 44306 of such title is amended—

(1) by redesignating subsections (b) and (c) as subsections (c) and (d), respectively; and

(2) by inserting after subsection (b) the following:

"(b) Allowances in Setting Premium Rates for Reimbursement.—In setting premium rates for reimbursement, the Secretary may make allowances to the insurance carrier for expenses incurred in providing services and facilities that the Secretary determines are necessary to reimbursing an air carrier for payments by the air carrier for the stimulation or solicitation of insurance business.

(e) Conforming Amendment.—Section 44307 of such title is amended by striking "43402(b)") and inserting "43402(c)"

SEC. 202. Extension of Provisions to Vendors, Agents, and Subcontractors of Air Carriers.

Notwithstanding any other provision of this title, the Secretary may extend any provision of chapter 443 of title 49, United States Code, as amended by this title, and the provisions of this title, to vendors, agents, and subcontractors of air carriers. For the 180-day period beginning on the date the enactment of this Act, the Secretary may extend or amend any such provisions so as to ensure that the entities referred to in the preceding sentence are not responsible in cases of acts of terrorism for losses suffered by third parties that exceed the amount of such entities' liability coverage, as determined by the Secretary.

Title III—Tax Provisions

SEC. 301. Extension of Due Date for Excise Tax Deposits and Treatment of Loss Compensation.

(a) Extension of Due Date for Excise Tax Deposits.—

(1) In General.—In the case of an eligible air carrier, any airline-related deposit required under section 6302 of the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 to be made after September 10, 2001, and before November 15, 2001, shall be treated for purposes of such Code as timely made if such deposit is made on or before November 15, 2001, and before the Secretary of the Treasury so prescribes, the preceding sentence shall be applied by substituting for "November 15, 2001" each place it appears—

(A) "January 15, 2002";

(B) "February 15, 2002"; and

(C) "March 15, 2002".

(2) Eligible Air Carrier.—For purposes of this subsection, the term "eligible air carrier" means any air carrier engaged in the trade or business of transporting (for hire) persons by air if such transportation is available to the general public.

(b) Airliner-Related Deposit.—For purposes of this subsection, the term "airliner-related deposit" means any deposit referred to in chapter 103 of subchapter C of chapter 33 of such Code (relating to transportation by air), and

(1) by striking the last sentence and inserting the following:

"(B) taxes imposed by chapters 21, 22, and 23 with respect to employees engaged in a trade or business referred to in paragraph (2)."
(b) TREATMENT OF LOSS COMPENSATION.—Nothing in any provision of law shall be construed to exclude from gross income under the Internal Revenue Code of 1986 any compensation received under section 101(a)(2) of this Act.

TITLE IV—VICTIM COMPENSATION

SEC. 401. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the “September 11th Victim Compensation Fund of 2001”.

SEC. 402. DEFINITIONS.

In this title, the following definitions apply:

(1) AIR CARRIER.—The term “air carrier” means a citizen of the United States undertaking, by any means, directly or indirectly, to provide air transportation and includes employees and agents of such citizen.

(2) AIR TRANSPORTATION.—The term “air transportation” means foreign air transportation, interstate air transportation, or the transportation of mail by aircraft.

(3) CLAIMANT.—The term “claimant” means an individual filing a claim for compensation under this title; and

(4) COLLATERAL SOURCE.—The term “collateral source” means all collateral sources, including life insurance, pension funds, death benefits, insurance programs, and payments by Federal, State, or local governments related to the terrorist-related aircraft crashes of September 11, 2001.

(5) ECONOMIC LOSS.—The term “economic loss” means any pecuniary loss resulting from harm (including the loss of earnings or other benefits related to employment, medical expenses, funeral expenses, replacement services losses, loss due to death, burial costs, and loss of business or employment opportunities) to the extent recovery for such loss is allowed under applicable State law.

(6) ELIGIBLE INDIVIDUAL.—The term “eligible individual” means an individual determined to be eligible for compensation under section 404(c).

(7) NONECONOMIC LOSSES.—The term “noneconomic losses” means losses for physical and emotional pain, suffering, inconvenience, physical disfigurement, mental anguish, disfigurement, loss of enjoyment of life, loss of society and companionship, loss of consortium (other than loss of domestic service), hedonistic deprivation, and reputation, and all other noneconomic losses of any kind or nature.

(8) SPECIAL MASTER.—The term “Special Master” means a citizen of the United States appointed under section 404(a).

SEC. 403. PURPOSE.

It is the purpose of this title to provide compensation to any individual (or relatives of a deceased individual) who was physically injured or killed as a result of the terrorist-related aircraft crashes of September 11, 2001.

SEC. 404. ADMINISTRATION.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Attorney General, acting through a Special Master appointed by the Attorney General, shall—

(1) administer the compensation program established under this title;

(2) promulgate all procedural and substantive rules for the administration of this title; and

(3) employ and supervise hearing officers and other administrative personnel to perform the duties of the Special Master under this title.

(b) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to pay the administrative and support costs for the Special Master in carrying out this title.

SEC. 405. DETERMINATION OF ELIGIBILITY FOR COMPENSATION.

(a) FILING OF CLAIM.

(1) IN GENERAL.—A claimant may file a claim for compensation under this title with the Special Master. The claim shall be on a form developed under paragraph (2) and shall state the factual basis for eligibility for compensation and the amount of compensation sought.

(2) CLAIM FORM.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—The Special Master shall develop a claim form that claimants shall use when submitting claims under paragraph (1).

(ii) The Special Master shall ensure that such form can be filed electronically, if determined to be practicable.

(B) CONTENTS.—The form developed under paragraph (2) shall—

(i) information from the claimant concerning the physical harm that the claimant was suffering at the time of the claim under review on behalf of a decedent information concerning the decedent’s death, as a result of the terrorist-related aircraft crashes of September 11, 2001;

(ii) information from the claimant concerning any possible economic and noneconomic losses that the claimant suffered as a result of the crash orcrash at Shanksville, Pennsylvania at the time, or in the immediate aftermath, of the terrorist-related aircraft crashes of September 11, 2001; and

(iii) information regarding collateral sources of compensation the claimant has received or is entitled to receive as a result of such crashes.

(3) LIMITATION.—No claim may be filed under paragraph (1) after the date that is 2 years after the date on which regulations are promulgated under section 407.

(b) REVIEW AND DETERMINATION.—

(1) REVIEW.—The Special Master shall review a claim submitted under subsection (a) and determine—

(A) whether the claimant is an eligible individual under subsection (c); and

(B) with respect to a claimant determined to be an eligible individual—

(i) the extent of the harm to the claimant, including any economic and noneconomic losses; and

(ii) the amount of compensation to which the claimant is entitled based on the harm to the claimant and the circumstances of the claimant.

(ii) NEGLIGENCE.—With respect to a claimant, the Special Master shall not consider negligence or any other theory of liability.

(iii) DETERMINATION.—Not later than 120 days after that date on which a claim is filed under subsection (a), the Special Master shall complete a review, make a determination, and provide written notice to the claimant, with respect to the matters that were the subject of the claim under review. Such a determination shall be final and not subject to judicial review.

(iv) RIGHTS OF CLAIMANT.—A claimant in a review under paragraph (1) shall have—

(A) the right to be represented by an attorney;

(B) the right to present evidence, including the presentation of witnesses and documents; and

(C) any other due process rights determined appropriate by the Special Master.

(3) NO LIMITATION ON COLLECTOR.—The Special Master may not include amounts for punitive damages in any compensation paid under a claim under this title.

(b) EMERGENCY COMPENSATION.—The Special Master shall reduce the amount of compensation determined under paragraph (1)(B)(ii) by the amount of the collateral source compensation the claimant has received or is entitled to receive as a result of the terrorist-related aircraft crashes of September 11, 2001.

(c) ELIGIBILITY.—No person shall be eligible to receive compensation for any terrorist-related aircraft crashes of September 11, 2001.

(d) RELATION TO OTHER SOURCES OF COMPENSATION.—Nothing in any provision of law shall be construed to preclude the Special Master from taking by any means, directly or indirectly, money; or from accepting such amounts as may be authorized to be appropriated to the Special Master under this title.

SEC. 406. PAYMENTS TO ELIGIBLE INDIVIDUALS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 20 days after the date on which a determination is made by the Special Master regarding the amount of compensation due a claimant under this title, the Special Master shall authorize payment to such claimant of the amount determined with respect to the claimant.

(b) PAYMENT AUTHORITY.—This title constitutes budget authority in advance of appropriations Acts and the allocation of the Federal Government to provide for the payment of amounts for compensation under this title.

(c) ADDITIONAL FUNDS.—

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Attorney General is authorized to accept such amounts as may be contributed by individuals, business concerns, or other entities to carry out this title, under such terms and conditions as the Attorney General may impose.
(2) USE OF SEPARATE ACCOUNT.—In making payments under this section, amounts contained in any account containing funds provided under paragraph (1) shall be used prior to using appropriated amounts.

SEC. 407. REGULATIONS.

Not later than 30 days after the date of enactment of this Act, the Attorney General, in consultation with the Special Master, shall promulgate regulations to carry out this title, including regulations with respect to—

(1) forms to be used in submitting claims under this title;

(2) the information to be included in such forms;

(3) procedures for hearing and the presentation of evidence;

(4) procedures to assist an individual in filing and pursuing claims under this title; and

(5) other matters determined appropriate by the Attorney General.

SEC. 408. LIMITATION ON AIR CARRIER LIABILITY.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, liability for all claims, whether for compensatory or punitive damages, arising out of the terrorist-related aircraft crashes of September 11, 2001, against any air carrier shall not be in any amount greater than the limits of the liability coverage maintained by the air carrier.

(b) FEDERAL CAUSE OF ACTION.—

(1) AVAILABILITY OF ACTION.—There shall exist a Federal cause of action for damages arising out of the hijacking and subsequent crashes of American Airlines flights 11 and 77, and United Airlines flights 93 and 175, on September 11, 2001. Notwithstanding section 40120(c) of title 49, United States Code, this cause of action shall be the exclusive remedy for damages arising out of the hijacking and subsequent crashes of such flights.

(2) SUBSTANTIVE LAW.—The substantive law for decision in any such suit shall be derived from the law, including choice of law principles, of the State in which the crash occurred unless such law is inconsistent with or preempted by Federal law.

(3) JURISDICTION.—The United States District Court for the Southern District of New York shall have original and exclusive jurisdiction over all actions brought for any claim for compensatory or punitive damages, arising out of the hijacking and subsequent crashes of September 11, 2001.

(4) EXCLUSION.—Nothing in this section shall in any way limit any liability of any person who is a knowing participant in any conspiracy to hijack any aircraft or commit any terrorist act.

SEC. 409. RIGHT OF SUBROGATION.

The United States shall have the right of subrogation with respect to any claim paid by the United States under this title.

TITLE V—AIR TRANSPORTATION SAFETY

SEC. 501. INCREASED AIR TRANSPORTATION SAFETY.

Congress affirms the President’s decision to spend $3,000,000,000 on airline safety and security in conjunction with this Act in order to restore public confidence in the airline industry.

SEC. 502. CONGRESSIONAL COMMITMENT.

Congress is committed to act expeditiously, in consultation with the Secretary of Transportation, to strengthen airport security and take further measures to enhance the security of air travel.

TITLE VI—SEPARABILITY

SEC. 601. SEPARABILITY.

If any provision of this Act (including any amendment made by this Act) or the application thereof to any person or circumstance is held invalid, the remainder of this Act (including any amendment made by this Act) and the application thereof to other persons or circumstances shall not be affected thereby.

The SPEAKER pro tempore, Pursuant to House Resolution 244, the gentleman from Alaska (Mr. Young) and the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. Oberstar) each will control 30 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Alaska (Mr. Young).

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, I have been speaking with great interest to the debate on this legislation tonight. I commend those that brought up points that are not in this bill. But as I heard the Speaker say and the minority leader speak, this is just the beginning. I know there are those who want—those who want the American people to understand that and I would like to have had more in this bill, but I believe this is the best way we can do the job and get this problem solved tonight.

The gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. Oberstar) and I last week introduced a bill about this time on Friday night, and we had object to, and we are here tonight.

But if we do not do this, as I said then and I will say now, this airline industry is in serious trouble. We will have an opportunity to bring up a bill on security with the gentleman from Florida (Mr. Mica) who is already working on it. That will happen next week if everything goes all right, although it is a shortened week. We will have an opportunity to think about those workers that lost those jobs. But may I remind you, as it has been said today, that if we do not do anything, there will not be any jobs to come back to.

The security issue is one that has been talked about and thought about, discussed for many, many years. And now I think we are awakened and we shall take care of that.

Mr. Speaker, I will suggest that if we do not do this legislation tonight, the workers you are trying to protect, and which I am trying to protect, will have nowhere to go. This is just the beginning of a series of packages we hope that will come to the floor. I will do everything in my jurisdiction.

May I remind my colleagues, one of the problems we had in this legislation is we had different committees that had other jurisdictional problems than we were aware of. I kept saying, “If you don’t want us to do it, you do it.” Yet we had to step up, the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. Oberstar) and myself and the leadership of this House, to say we are going to do this and we did that.

We also had another effect. We had the other body. Working with the other body is sometimes a very tedious process. What we have here tonight is not perfect, but it will do the job. We will have an airline industry. We will protect the workers. We will save the liability provision in it. And this money is not going to be a bailout. It is going to make sure that this airline industry survives.

Mr. Speaker, may I suggest, and I hope all Members will consider voting “yes” on this legislation for the benefit of this country.

Mr. Speaker, we bring to the floor tonight a bill that will address the threat to the continued stability and viability of our U.S. air transportation system. It is the first critical step toward addressing the financial burdens that last week’s terrorist attacks put on our transportation and related industries and their employees.

The terrorists who attacked our country last week, were trying to destroy our way of life and our economy—we will not let them do that.

They have murdered thousands of innocent people, destroyed billions of dollars in property and have dealt a terrible blow to an air transportation system that is vital to the economic health of our country.

On September 11, 2001, the FAA grounded every airplane in this country within a two-hour period. This was necessary for the safety and protection of our country and of our people.

I want to commend the FAA and the air traffic controllers for their quick response and decisive action. I also want to commend the aviation industry for their cooperation and willingness to put the safety of others first.

Unfortunately, we are not facing a serious crisis in our air transportation system. The reductions in schedules and flights have started and layoffs are being implemented.

The capital markets are not coming to the aid of most of the airlines. We are seeing the ripple effect in our economy as layoffs occur in other related industries. Our economy is at risk. Our national security is also at risk.

Last week, my colleague, Jim Oberstar and I introduced H.R. 2891 to keep our U.S. air transportation system viable in the short term. Unfortunately, the House did not pass the bill last Friday when it had the chance. Since that time, we have conducted a hearing to document the needs and to fine-tune the bill. The bill before us today reflects much information that has been brought to light.

Mr. Speaker, today’s bill is not the end. In the coming weeks we intend to address other issues, including aviation security and the economic impacts on other affected businesses and their employees.

H.R. 2926 authorizes the President to provide direct compensation and loan guarantees to the air carriers.

This assistance is intended as a short term, emergency response to keep the air transportation system operating for the benefit of the American people.

We will soon take further action to address the vitally important issues of aviation security.

The bill before us today reflects much information that has been brought to light.

Mr. Speaker, today’s bill is not the end. In the coming weeks we intend to address other issues, including aviation security and the economic impacts on other affected businesses and their employees.
Mr. GEPPERTH. Mr. Speaker, this has been a very difficult process of putting this bill together. A lot of people, I assume, out in the public are asking why are we doing this for the airlines; there are a lot of other industries that have been affected.

I urge us all to understand that airlines were affected uniquely in this tragedy. Four planes were used as missiles of mass destruction; and because of that, the government of the United States ordered 2,200 planes that were in the air at the time to get on the ground as fast as they could, wherever they were, and that happened in about 2 hours.

When that happened and it persisted for the days after, the heart of our economy was affected. Air transportation affects everything that we do in our society. It affects every business and every enterprise and every activity. So a dagger was put into the heart of our economy as planes were put into these buildings.

So on this, because it is a national emergency, and what we acted on last week, we have tried to act with unity and together, as we should, as we must, as people expect us to. But I keep getting asked by people in the media and the press, how long will this bipartisan last? And the truth is, I do not know the answer.

Then, I am always happy to tell them something that I think a lot of our citizens and maybe even we tend to forget. We are here to disagree. That is what we do. We do that because we each represent a half a million people who all disagree most of the time. If we were not here disagreeing their heartfelt views, democracy would not work and we would not be doing our job. Disagreement is normal and healthy in our great, vibrant democracy. If we were agreeing all the time the way we were agreeing all the time, they would be abnormal and, in the long run, unhealthy.

Tonight, in my humble opinion, agreeing and acting to save this industry and keep it going forward is in the highest and best interest of all the people of our country.

There are good things in this bill, and I want the Members to know that it is not an airline bill. It is a bill to keep these airlines going. They are operating tonight at about 30 percent of the capacity that they had the day before. They are not helping their heart-felt views, democracy would not work and we would not be doing our job. Disagreement is normal and healthy in our great, vibrant democracy. If we were agreeing all the time the way we are tonight, that would be abnormal and, in the long run, unhealthy.

and evil, we, together with the American people, will demonstrate love and compassion and tolerance in everything that we do and say as we fight against this evil. At this time of incredible pain, we must be at our best, so that the army of terrorists and evil never, ever gains one more recruit. That is our mission, that is our responsibility, and we will prevail.

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. OXLEY), the chairman of the Committee on Financial Services, to engage in a colloquy.

Mr. OXLEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise to engage the gentleman from Alaska (Mr. YOUNG), the chairman of the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure, in a colloquy.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to applaud the gentleman for the legal protections that are in the bill to get our airlines back in the air. But I wanted to clarify that these protections are intended to limit liability to reasonable levels and not in any way allow their transfer to another deep pocket party.

Is this the gentleman’s understanding?

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. OXLEY. I yield to the gentleman from Alaska.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, that is my understanding.

Mr. OXLEY. Mr. Speaker, reclaiming my time, this bill also provides critical stopgap insurance assistance for the airlines. Is it the gentleman’s understanding that any assistance by the Secretary of Transportation is intended to be short term and focused on addressing the uncertainty about further losses from an act of terrorism or war, and that it is not intended to displace the private sector market or be a long-term general insurance program?

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will yield further, the gentleman from Ohio is correct on both accounts.

Mr. OXLEY. Mr. Speaker, also I am concerned about the thousands of passengers who have advance-purchased airline tickets on flights that have been canceled or rescheduled as a result of the tragic events on September 11, 2001. Airline passengers must not be left stranded when flights are canceled. This is why I support the inclusion of language in this legislation that would require airlines to honor tickets issued by other airlines to the extent practicable. My support would also direct airlines to make passengers whole for the price of tickets on flights that are canceled or rescheduled. I appreciate the gentleman’s commitment to work with me and other concerned members of the committee to address this problem with legislation, if necessary. In the meantime, I trust the Federal agencies will do everything possible to make sure that passengers get their refunds they are entitled to or the alternative flights they need.

I thank the gentleman profusely.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, if the gentleman will continue to yield, I can assure the gentleman that we will look into that. We will also contact the airlines and make sure they try to do this voluntarily. If they do not, we will make them do it in future legislation.

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Washington (Mr. McDERMOTT).

Mr. McDERMOTT. Mr. Speaker, I rise against the bill.

Mr. Speaker, today, Congress blew an ideal opportunity to continue the bipartisan unity it had so nobly demonstrated during the past ten days. This bill could have provided critical aid to an industry in crisis as well as to its laid-off workers. Instead, Congress is handing airline executives golden parachutes while over 90,000 American workers— to date—are left without so much as a safety net.

Congress may have blown an opportunity but the Republicans have demonstrated their opportunistic aims. They neatly wrapped this one-sided bill in a patriotic package, enveloped not by the American flag mind you, but with the American Airlines logo. There is no question that the airlines desperately need this bailout, but why should the government shoulder the brunt of the responsibility—to resuscitate an industry that has shown its true colors—how they feel about unemployment insurance, job training, health benefits for their displaced workforce and safety. Does anyone here seriously believe that the American public will seriously consider returning to the airways when they can’t really be sure that these planes are safe or even properly maintained.

There isn’t any money in this bill that ensures the future safety of our citizens. After all, isn’t this the very same administration that regated and abhors collective bargaining agreements. And now they are asking us to bail them out.

I cannot, in good conscience, vote in support of legislation that doesn’t include a package of worker relief benefits. It’s time our leadership got their priorities straight. They should have brought a more responsible bill to the floor for our consideration and not wasted this body’s precious time.

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentlewoman from Hawaii.

Mrs. MINK of Hawaii. Mr. Speaker, I rise today with grave concerns about this bill before the House today. We did not see this bill until just before it was brought to the floor for consideration. We were short a few days of what the industry needs to operate. People are not flying. Workers are being laid off. We must act quickly.

Mr. Speaker, we will not fly until the people feel safe. We can throw as much money as we want at the airlines to cover their losses, but the bottom line is that they will continue to lose money until public confidence in security is regained. There is not a single mention about security in this bill, except reference to a previously enacted relief bill Congress passed last week which gave the President authority to do what he wants.

America’s confidence has been shattered with the growing array of evidence that we have failed to adequately protect the flying public from hijackers. Unless we fix the problem, people will not get back on airplanes. The federal government must assume control of the airline passenger security. All safety personnel must be federal employees with training and adequate wages. Trained, armed marshals must be on board at all aircraft. Cockpit doors must be reconfigured to be secure and of solid construction. The cockpit must also have a camera view of the cabin area. All ground crews, baggage handlers, and all people with access to the cabin must be security-cleared before they enter.

I am committed to ensuring that the airlines function in the aftermath of the terrorist attack, but this is not the time to only pass a bill to bailout airlines whose financial problems are long term and predate September 11, 2001. This industry’s troubles were well before the tragic events of September 11th. The federal government’s role should be to get people to fly again; not just to bail out the airline industry.

This bill before us fails to take into account the workers who are being laid off nationwide at staggering rates. These people deserve protection. They should all be immediately eligible for 100% unemployment compensation. Their health care plans should be extended for the time being and their family. If we are going to take care of the airlines, we must also take care of the workers who have been laid off by the airlines because of this national crisis.

This bill needs to mention the federalization of airline passenger security. Public confidence must be restored if the airline industry is to recover. There must be a provision that states the federal government will give immediate and full unemployment compensation to laid off workers for a full year. If the airline executives are to have their compensation protected, they should all the airline employees who have been laid off. We must act quickly and deliberately to restore the public’s trust and get people back into skies.

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. LIPINSKI), the distinguished ranking member of the Subcommittee on Aviation, who has been a strong and supportive partner throughout this difficult process.

Mr. LIPINSKI. Mr. Speaker, first of all I want to thank the gentleman from Illinois (Speaker HASTERT); our leader, the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. GERHARDT); the gentleman from Alaska (Mr. YOUNG); and the ranking member, the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. OBERSTAR), for their leadership and cooperation in putting this legislation together. I know that they have done the best that they possibly could; but, unfortunately, I feel very strongly that I have to rise in opposition to this bill.

As ranking member of the Subcommittee on Aviation, I know how important the aviation industry is to the economy of this Nation. I do not want to see the planes stop flying. But let me tell Members, we do not have to pass this legislation tonight. The real deadline is this coming Wednesday, because Wednesday is the day when the airlines lose their insurance. So we could work on this bill Saturday, Sunday, Monday, Tuesday, and even Wednesday, to improve it and take care of many of the concerns that people have, and the planes will keep flying at least until then.

Now, the first way to improve this bill is by improving security. I do not care how much money one gives to the air carriers. I do not care how solvent one makes them. Unless we can get passengers back into those planes, they are not going to be making any money, and they could get people back into the planes is by proving to them that the planes are safe and secure.

So what we should be doing in this legislation is passing some dramatic safety improvements. We should be passing as quickly as possible cockpit impregnable; we should be passing the federalizing of the screeners; we should be passing not only an authorization, but an appropriation to pay for 1,200 sky marshals.

Nothing will deter terrorists more than sky marshals. We should be restricting carry-on luggage to one piece, thereby reducing by 50 percent what a screener has to watch. If we did something dramatic such as that, we would restore confidence in the minds of the American traveling public, and they would get back on these planes.

We could also take care of the 100,000 workers who have already lost their jobs in the aviation industry. We could be getting them extended unemployment benefits, but we could also be helping them health care; we could be doing retraining for them; but no, unfortunately, we are rushing this bill through tonight.

It is a shame; it is a mistake. I just hope and pray that the promises that have been made for the future in regards to safety, in regards to workers come to pass.

In closing, I would like to clear up one point that has been made on this floor on numerous occasions. It has been stated that there is a $300,000 cap on executives in the airline industry. That is totally incorrect. What it states in the bill is that anyone making over $300,000 cannot make any more than $150,000 in 2001. So if they made $10 million, $15 million, $20 million, they can still make that amount of money in 2001 and 2002. That only applies to people who take the low money, not people who get to direct $5 billion in cash. So I say to all my colleagues, we have time, if we really want a bill that takes care of all Americans and not only the aircraft CEOs and the air carriers, vote against this bill. We can pass a better bill by Wednesday.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. HAYES) for the purposes of a colloquy.

Mr. HAYES. Mr. Speaker, I rise to enter into a colloquy with the gentleman from Alaska on this bill and the future of general aviation.

Let me thank the chairman and ranking member, first of all, for the work they have done on this important piece of legislation. The country’s air carriers are not only a vital part of our transportation infrastructure, but they are of great importance to our national security. However, they are not the only part of the aviation industry that will be harmed by this. Following last week’s horrible attacks in New York and Washington. Many of those in general aviation suffer as well. For example, some 3,500 flight schools will have lost up to $245 million in revenue by this coming Tuesday due to the continued ban on VFR training.

Mr. Speaker, while I believe it is important to address the problems facing our air carriers, does the chairman of the committee also intend to address the financial difficulties of other components of general aviation in the near future?

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HAYES. I yield to the gentleman from Alaska.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from North Carolina for yielding.

General aviation is of vital importance to our Nation’s economy. In my home State of Alaska, general aviation airports are the only line in rural Alaska, that is, no commercial airline supplies to those living in remote areas, and we are experiencing our small communities. We are experiencing a shortage of pilots to fly those, and a failure of the flight school industry will cause severe economic hardship to not only those in Alaska, but to those living in remote areas of the U.S. Therefore, it is my intention to present this body by next week a bill, if possible, that will provide real economic relief to those in Alaska.

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. HAYES. I yield to the gentleman from Minnesota.

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, thank the gentleman for yielding. I share the views of the chairman, General aviation is a major sector of our economy. There are some 345,000 general aviation pilots. I have written the National Security Advisor, Condoleezza Rice, in an open letter, on VFR restrictions on VFR flights and boundaries of Class Bravo airspace and for flight school operations anywhere in the country.

For these and many other reasons, I join the chairman and will work with him to develop a relief package for those sectors of the aviation industry that are subject to the provisions of this bill.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 seconds to the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. PASCRELL).

Mr. PASCRELL. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this legislation, because I am voting “yes” for the 1.1 million workers still employed. If we do not do this tonight, that 1.1 million workers is going to be reduced accordingly. We cannot let them down. We will be back next week to do our job for those who are going to be laid off or have been laid off. With that, we will make another great step for America tonight. This can be a good vote; let us make it a positive vote. Let us walk out of this Chamber together.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this legislation, but urge my colleagues to remember that this is just a part of what we must do. It is clear that without some short-term assistance, our aviation industry will not survive the impact of last week’s disastrous attacks on our country. And as a critical part of our nation’s economy, we must act and act quickly. I’m voting for the workers still working.

The $5 billion in direct aid is extremely important to our country. And as a critical part of our nation’s economy, we must act and act quickly.

The $5 billion in direct aid is extremely important to our country. And as a critical part of our nation’s economy, we must act and act quickly.

We cannot and will not bail out the airlines for $3 billion in losses they would have sustained without the tragic events of September 11th. The safeguards are here to insure that. Even more critical in this bill is the $10 billion dollars in loan guarantees, so airlines such as Continental—so critical to our nation’s economy, we must act and act quickly. I’m voting for the workers still working.

Economic stability must go hand in hand with security. I thank the leadership of the Transportation Committee for their hard work on this important matter.

We need to ensure we are back on the floor soon to deal with security measures dealing with all airports, both large and small. We need to ensure we are back on the floor soon to provide assistance to the tens of thousands of workers out of a job, and tens of thousands of families without a source of income.

Only then can we ensure that the airlines will be on their way back to stability.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Kansas (Mr. TIAHRT) for the purposes of a colloquy.

Mr. TIAHRT. Mr. Speaker, our Nation faces a crisis; and today we are acting with appropriate speed in dealing with this crisis. But in doing so, we want to be sure that we are dealing with the entire air transportation infrastructure. A major objective of this bill should be to mitigate job loss with the air transportation industry and, therefore, preserve the infrastructure of this crucial element of our economy.

Many sectors of the air transportation industry would be subject to economic dislocation and potential bankruptcy if they were exposed to unlimited liability for the terrorist-related aircraft crashes of September 11. This is not a problem for just the traditional air carriers. This is a problem for the entire industry. For this reason, we provided for an expanded definition of air carriers in section 402 of the bill. That would also apply to section 408.

I wish to make it clear that it is my understanding that this expanded definition encompasses air transportation elements such as aircraft manufacturers and aircraft components and parts manufacturers. Mr. Speaker, is that the chairman's understanding also?

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TIAHRT. I yield to the gentleman from Alaska.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, in response to my colleague from Kansas, I too am greatly concerned about this issue of potential unlimited liability for the air transportation industry. It is always the intent of the majority leadership to ensure adequacy, liability and protection for all transport elements such as aircraft manufacturers and manufacturers of aircraft components and parts. I had hoped we could have this specifically addressed in this bill. But unless we act on the definition of "air carrier" in section 402 should include those elements of air transportation.

Mr. TIAHRT. Mr. Speaker, I thank the chairman. We cannot afford to risk irreparable harm to the air transportation industry, and subsequent economic impacts and job loss, by exposing the industry to the spectre of unlimited liability for a terrorist attack. I thank the chairman for his help in clarifying this important issue.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 seconds to the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. EDDIE BERNICE JOHNSON).

Ms. EDDIE BERNICE JOHNSON of Texas. Mr. Speaker, my 2 minutes has been reduced to 30 seconds, so I will turn in my remarks. Two wrongs simply do not make a right. I share Dallas/Fort Worth airport with the gentleman from Texas (Mr. BARTON), and I have three other airports. I know how many people were laid off, but that will be fourfold or more if we do not support the airlines tonight. It is for that reason that I rise in support of this bill, and I have been working to make sure that we come up with the other bill to support those persons who have already lost their jobs.

Mr. Speaker, although I have some misgivings regarding what has not been included in the bill, I rise in support of H.R. 2926 and urge its passage by the House.

In the aftermath of the terrorist attacks on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon, air carriers have reported sustaining nearly $1 billion in losses as a direct result of the Federal Government's order that flights be grounded. While service has been restored, passengers are still reluctant to fly. As a result, the airlines will certainly suffer further losses from reduced demand. On Monday, the financial markets responded predictably to this environment—the airlines lost about 40% of their market capitalization on that day alone, and Morgan Stanley wrote to the Treasury Secretary that the airline industry would not have access to private capital markets unless the Federal Government intervened.

H.R. 2926 is the intervention that the airlines need to stabilize their financial situation and to help them weather this crisis. Unless we act to pass H.R. 2926, some carriers face the very real possibility of bankruptcy. We cannot let that happen in this body, or in this country. The airline industry is an indispensable sector of the American economy, touching upon 10% of our gross domestic product. Without aviation, other important sectors such as aircraft manufacturing, hospitality, tourism, and countless others cannot function efficiently.

We already see a glimpse here in the Washington, DC metropolitan area how bankruptcies in the airline industry will affect businesses and communities. Washington National Airport located 3 miles from the White House has been reduced to a ghost town as commuter lines are unable to resume operations. As a result, the airport and other businesses dependent on passenger flows have laid off thousands of workers, and small businesses like restaurants and newsstands who cater to passengers are idle and in many instances closed. In my congressional district, airport and aircraft security because airlines' limited liability for a terrorist attack.

Indeed, I am most concerned about the individuals who work in the airline industry and their families. They include the 140,000 employees of American Airlines, whose head office and major hub operations are located at DFW International Airport in my district. I am also concerned about the 40,000 people who work at the airport and whose jobs depend on American's survival. Two days ago, American announced that they would lay off 21,000 of their workers, and I know what kind of hardship that must be going through right now.

I have heard some of my colleagues object to this bill because it does not contain language to provide relief to displaced workers. I too want to ensure that workers have enough money to pay their rent and mortgages, to buy food and clothes for their kids, and to keep their health benefits while they are unemployed. I understand that Majority Leader DASCHLE has promised to call up legislation regarding displaced airline workers in the Senate next week, and I intend to make sure that this legislation also passes the House. I also intend to work with my colleagues on legislation to restore the public's confidence in airport and aircraft security because airlines' long-term survival depends on their having paying passengers.

In the meantime, we must deal with the impending crisis. The employees of American and DFW Airport have flooded my phone lines in my district office with a loud and clear message—Congress' number 1 priority in this area is to pass legislation to help American Airlines ride out this storm. They, in their collective wisdom, know what's at stake. We have some time and leeway to help displaced workers, but unless we act now to help the airlines avert bankruptcy, they might not have jobs to return to.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. MICA), who is conducting hearings as of today and will have a bill on security, as I assured everybody last week—Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. MICA. Mr. Speaker, this is an extraordinary piece of legislation, and it is an extraordinary piece of legislation for an extraordinary time. Never before in the history of American aviation have we faced such a disaster as we now face. We cannot wait. We lost over 100,000 jobs since Tuesday, September 11. By next week, we will lose that many jobs again. This disaster is having a ripple effect across this Nation. There is not a community across this country that has not been touched by the devastation. If we do not act tonight and take this first step in trying to put our economy and our transportation system back together, we are telling our colleagues that the results will be disastrous.

Everything is not in this bill. The bill is not like the gentleman from Alaska would like to have it, it is not like the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. OBERSTAR) would like to have it; but the minority leader came before us and pledged so eloquently, pass this...
Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from Washington (Ms. DUNN), who has been deeply affected by this act of terrorism.

Ms. DUNN. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time.

There is no question that the Government’s decision to ground aircraft on September 11 was brilliant. It was the correct choice. The quick actions of the President, the Secretary of Transportation saved countless lives.

When the President spoke in this Chamber last night he said, “We will come together to take active steps that strengthen America’s economy and put our people back to work.” He was talking about the airline industry and all our Nation’s workers who are affected by this crisis.

But I am particularly concerned about how the impending Boeing layoff will affect the 25,000 Boeing employees I represent here on the floor of the House tonight.

Mr. Speaker, as the Speaker has said, we will address the various needs of our workers in next year’s legislation. This is the chance for us to help. This is the chance for us to work together, our committee, I know our colleagues, and the people in my district. I strongly urge all of my colleagues to vote for this bill.

Mr. Speaker, when I went home this weekend, I spoke to the people who live and work in my district. They are very worried about what has happened to our country, and they are very worried about what is going to happen to Las Vegas.

Before September 11th, Las Vegas had one of the strongest economies in the country. Now it is among the worst, and thousands of people are being laid off and losing their jobs. In Nevada, our economy, our jobs, our families, rely on the tourism industry. People in my district know that if the airplanes are not flying and people are not coming to Las Vegas, there is not going to be a Las Vegas.

Last year, 38 million people came to southern Nevada; approximately 46 percent arrived by air. Tourism is the lifeblood of my district, and the airline industry is a lifeline to my district. I know this is not a perfect bill; but, Mr. Speaker, this is an emergency. I need to protect the jobs in my district and the people in my district. I strongly urge all of my colleagues to vote for this bill.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. BARTON).

Mr. BARTON of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. BARTON).

Mr. BARTON. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Speaker, I hold accountable, and I believe that the leaders will bring the other bill about the workers next week. After hearings this week, hours and hours of hearings that we spent together, our committee, I know our aviation industry is literally on the brink of collapse and liquidation. The need for immediate governmental assistance cannot be overstated. A failure to act tonight would be like throwing an anvil to a drowning person.

The airlines have had their lines of credit cutoff, their assets devalued, and their insurance canceled. A catastrophe is staring them in the face.

The airlines have had their lines of credit cutoff, their assets devalued, and their insurance canceled. A catastrophe is staring them in the face.

Mr. Speaker, this is an emergency. I need to protect jobs in my district. I must protect the people in my district. I strongly urge all of my colleagues to vote for this bill.
package tonight, in the next week we may see some of that start to happen. I would beg every Member of this body, let us do what the other body has done: Let us pass this with almost no "no" votes, or perhaps even 435 to zero. Let us help the airline industry now so they can help the economy and keep these jobs growing, and keep our economy growing. I would urge a yes vote on this bill.

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 seconds to the distinguished gentleman from Maryland (Mr. CUMMINGS), a member of our committee.

Mr. CUMMINGS. Mr. Speaker, we have heard a plea for help from our airlines, and provided an immediate response to ensure that a key component of our economy, the airline industry, remains intact.

But I have also heard pleas for help from the many people and businesses that are critical to the efficient functioning of the aviation system: skycaps, cabbies, and the employees of airlines, and the variety of shops found in airports. Thousands of hard-working Americans have taken pay cuts or have lost their jobs but still have bills to pay.

Mr. Speaker, I urge Members, we have heard the airlines and we have quickly responded. I only urge us to hear the pleas of individual Americans and respond to them, also.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. SHADEGG).

Mr. SHADEGG. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of this bill. Make no mistake about it, it is not perfect, but it is a fair compromise worked out by members of both sides.

A week ago today, late at night, in the wee hours of the morning, I argued that it was essential that we get our airlines back in the air, and that we as Americans must respond. The terrorists who launched their vicious attack against America seek not just to destroy buildings, but to destroy our economy.

The airline industry comprises 10 percent of our gross domestic product. We in Congress and the American people must not let those terrorists destroy our economy, or the lives and jobs of the American people. Americans must resume their lives, and we must pass this bill. No additional American should lose his or her job, not an airline employee, not a tourist industry employee, not a baggage handler, no one. It is absolutely essential that we pass this bill tonight.

But I want to say this bill. This bill empowers a government board to pick winners and losers in the airline industry, and that is flat wrong. No bureaucrat should say, "This airline wins; that airline loses." How do we say to the family of a lost loved one, "We are terribly sorry, you are out of your job, but the employee of some other airline keeps his or hers?"

If an airline or its employees was injured by this outrageous attack, they should be eligible to be made whole. They should be put back in the position where they can get back into the skies and fly. And we cannot let this board, I urge Members not to allow this board to pick and choose winners, so the employees of one airline remain unemployed, the employees of another airline get to stay back at work. It is absolutely essential, and it would be outrageous if we allowed that to happen.

This legislation must pass tonight. It is critical for the economy of this Nation. Americans need to get back aboard our airlines and resume their lives, but the board must handle its power fairly.

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 5 seconds to express my appreciation for the gentleman from Arizona for his calm, reasoned intervention last Friday night when we were attempting to pass the first version of this bill.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 seconds to the gentleman from Tennessee (Mr. CLEMENT), a distinguished member of our committee.

Mr. CLEMENT. Mr. Speaker, I rise to support this legislation, even though I have serious reservations about it. In truth, while this bill helps to stabilize the industry and assist families who have lost loved ones, it is still incomplete. Simply put, it falls short of protecting the workers who have already lost their jobs or will lose them soon.

I will give some examples. It does not provide unemployment benefits to workers who have lost their jobs, or extend health care coverage to those employees, nor does it prohibit the airlines from abrogating their contracts with workers; and it mandates no job protections, or a system for rehiring employees. Nor does it provide for health care coverage to those employees; nor does it prohibit the airlines from abrogating their contracts with workers; and it mandates no job protections, or a system for rehiring employees.

We do have a national emergency. Let us pass the legislation, but let us help our workers.

Mr. Speaker and fellow Members of Congress, we find ourselves at a time of crucial action. Before us is the prospect of the collapse of one of our greatest industries. As a result of the stunning acts of terrorism committed against our Nation, portions of our aviation system are on the brink of failure. We can not let that happen. We will not hand another tragedy to terrorists.

Our country’s airlines are too important to all sectors of the economy. They are too important to all Americans. The terror attacks of New York and Washington were calculated to throw our Nation into economic and social turmoil, but we are not going to let that happen. Our Nation's air transportation system is essential to our economic well-being. It is our duty to preserve the full and continued operation of this vital airline network.

In doing so, let us not forget there are many other industries that depend on the airlines for their own livelihood, including travel agents, hotels, rental car agencies, and food services. Let us encourage any airlines receiving emergency financial support under this legislation to restructure their fee scales with travel agents to convey their solidarity.

I also encourage airlines to carefully review policies that may impact the food service industry that employs thousands around the country.

Our air transport system is the best in the world, but it now needs our help to get through this difficult period. We must continue to foster the means for the advancement of this industry in the next century.

Accordingly, I urge my colleagues to support this important legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 seconds to the distinguished gentleman from California (Mr. HONDA), a member of our committee.

Mr. HONDA. Mr. Speaker, this is not a perfect bill, but I do take heart in the fact that Members from both sides of the aisle (Chairman YOUNG), those of the subcommittee chair, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. MICA), and our leadership, that we will come back and address those issues. This is not a perfect bill, but after careful consideration, I have concluded that the common good must not be jeopardized in an effort for immediate perfection. Tonight, we will pass this bill. Tomorrow, we will renew our work to impose stringent new security standards and provide critical Federal assistance to the many sectors and individuals left out in this bill.
September 21, 2001

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE 17635

Mr. Speaker, I rise today to express my reluctant support for this important and time sensitive legislation.

Just minutes after the tragic events of last week, the Department of Transportation acted swiftly to ground our Nation's entire commercial aviation and general aviation fleet—an unprecedented action aimed at averting any additional harm to innocent Americans. As a result of the DOT's groundstop order and immediately, the airlines are hemorrhaging, many teetering on the verge of insolvency after losing billions of dollars in just days. The dire state of the airlines led to this week's downward spiral of the financial markets, moving our economy closer to recession. As a member of the House Transportation and Infrastructure Committee, I quickly took up the call for expeditious congressional action to provide our ailing airline industry with a cash infusion and loan guarantees. I argued that while our airliners wait at the gate, Congress must not.

Tonight, a week and a half after terrorism struck America, Congress considers a multi-billion dollar bill to aid the industry that has been most devastated. It is not a perfect bill. I am distressed that this bill fails to address the plight of over 100,000 airline employees who have or will soon be laid off. I am quite dismayed that this legislation provides no aid to the many related sectors that have been devastated by last week's attacks: the travel industry, flight academies, and aviation manufacturers.

I am disappointed that this bill fails to introduce substantive security measures to ensure the integrity of our nation's aviation infrastructure. The Nation's airlines will continue to lose money, so long as Americans lack confidence in the security of air travel.

However, after careful consideration, I have concluded that the common good must not be jeopardized in an effort for immediate perfection. Tonight, we will pass this bill. Tomorrow, we will renew our work to impose stringent new security standards and provide critical federal assistance to the many sectors and individuals left out in H.R. 2926.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from New York (Mr. Boehlert).

Mr. BOEHLERT. Mr. Speaker, yesterday afternoon, I was in the Capitol Building. I was standing in the hall when the gentleman from Illinois (Speaker Hastert) and the minority leader, the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. Gephardt), walked by. I applauded them. I applauded them because they are working very hard together under very difficult circumstances for this Nation. I stand in agreement with the eloquent remarks made by the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. Gephardt) in this well just a few minutes ago, and I applaud his outside treatment and leadership of our Speaker.

Of course, we have to be concerned with the people part of this equation. Tens of thousands of people have lost their livelihood, through no fault of their own. They need health care for their families. They need job training for new opportunities. They need extended unemployment compensation. That is going to be provided. We will not ignore their needs.

But for the task at hand, we listened as the gentleman from Alaska Chairman Young was in that chair for 7 hours to hear leaders from the business community, the labor community, the financial community, one after another. We must take immediate action to protect the viability of commercial aviation in America. We cannot lose a moment, and we are responding.

Safety is a concern that we all have. The gentleman from Florida Chairman Mica is responding. The Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure has a proud record of dealing in a forthright manner with sensitive issues. I am proud to serve with the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. Gephardt) and the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Hastert) in this hour of need for America. Pass this legislation.

Mr. DeFAZIO. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the House extend the time for debate on each side. We have more than 30 people on this side who would like to speak, and under this rule, those Members will be limited to 30 seconds or less.

I ask unanimous consent that we extend the time on both sides of the aisle. I am sure there are people on that side of the aisle who would like to speak at more length on this important legislation. I would suggest at least an additional 15 minutes on either side of the aisle for the debate.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. Thornberry). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Oregon? Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. I object, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Objection is heard. Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, I yield 12 minutes to the gentleman from Oregon (Mr. DeFazio).

Mr. DeFazio. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Speaker, we do not have to act in haste tonight with legislation that will be worth billions to a favored few and vague promises of future help to hundreds of thousands of others. We could work deliberately over the weekend, if we so chose, to create a shared burden and benefit.

The 100,000 workers have already lost their jobs. They have been thrown into the panic safety net, but they will get maybe something in the future. For the tens of thousands of people in related businesses, travel agents, car agencies, hotels, maybe we will do something in the future. Regional airlines, they need crumblenets, but they will get something in the future. For the 100,000 workers who have or will soon be laid off. I am quite dismayed that this legislation provides no aid to the many related sectors that have been devastated.

September 21, 2001

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE 17635
pay for the over 90,000 airline employees who have lost their jobs in the face of the economic hardship hitting the domestic airline industry, and we all know there is more to come.

Furthermore, this Congress needs to bolster airline security. If we really want to restore consumer confidence, we need to provide increased safety to the airlines. We need to make the American public feel safe when they fly.

I am not voting for this bill because I trust the airlines, and I am not voting for this bill because I trust airline executives. I am voting for this bill because I trust the American people. I know the American people will make this country strong again. My faith in their ability to rebuild our economy, if given the opportunity, is unwavering. I know this much is true. And I hope the American people show their faith by getting on an airplane to go to Disneyland, by visiting Las Vegas, by visiting our Nation’s capitol. But most importantly, I ask my colleagues’ constituents to revisit my city, New York, in their future.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume to note, in the bipartisan way that we have conducted ourselves, that the gentleman from New York (Mr. CROWLEY) has never voted with me on any piece of legislation in any committee. But this is a time we work together, and I thank the gentleman for his statement.

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, I yield 40 seconds to the distinguished gentleman from New York (Mr. NADLER), a member of the committee.

Mr. NADLER. Mr. Speaker, I rise in reluctant support of this legislation. We have to help the airline industry or we will face even more layoffs and economic downturn in the days ahead. But this bill does nothing to help the pilots, flight attendants, mechanics, reservists and other employees who make the aviation system work.

The bill contains no provisions extending unemployment benefits, health care coverage, job search assistance or any kind of relief to those who have lost their jobs as a result of the September 11 attacks. And it contains nothing about enhancing airline security, without which people will not fly the planes.

The bill is inadequate, and I am tempted to vote against it, but I fear that the defeat of this bill could result in the loss of many more jobs and negatively impact the one million employees still working in the industry. It is terrible we are forced to choose between an inadequate bill or no bill at all. But that is our choice, and so I have to exercise it. And I will vote “yes.”

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 seconds to the gentlewoman from Ohio (Mrs. JONES).

Mrs. JONES of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time. I support victims compensation. I support the airline industry. But crisis is no excuse for a stampede. The wagons have been circled around the industry but not around the people who make it work.

Crisis is no excuse for unjust compensation for the airlines. Crisis is no excuse to deny the workers the protection they need now.

My father was a sky cap, my sister works in the airport, my niece is a flight attendant, my brother-in-law is a sky cap. I come from a family of workers for airlines. They need protection like the airlines. Let us step up to the plate, my colleagues, and protect the workers too.

As last week’s tragedy continues to unfold, we, as Members of Congress are constantly challenged to find solutions to very complex issues. I believe that our American resolve and faith will carry us through these tough times. As a member of the Financial Services and Small Business Committees, I am compelled to speak because I realize the devastating effects this tragedy and its subsequent economic downturn has had on both our financial markets, insurance industry and small business. Companies are doing less—and in some cases no—business, workers are being laid-off and insurance claims are staggering. We must work together and hold to our resolve of building America back up. We are all doing our part to make sure this happens. We have put aside party differences and political wrangling and come together because we all know that, when it comes down to it, we are all one people. But we can’t let this spirit of togetherness cause us to run blindly forward into actions that, while they may seem reasonable in the heat of our desperation to deal with this problem, will result in serious consequences in the long run.

That is why I am speaking out against this bill. I stand today as a supporter of congressional funding and other legislative efforts that will help the airline industry, particularly, our financial markets, that are the envy of the world. With that, I wholeheartedly supported the $40 billion supplemental appropriation for military support and clean-up efforts stemming from last week’s tragedy. Our concerns, sadly enough, do not end there. Our financial markets, as well, face decline and other challenges to recovery. Today, we deal with an airline industry crisis. The airline industry facing staggering losses may face bankruptcy as a result. It was reported that during our national tragedy, flights were grounded, the airline industry lost about $330 million a day for each day that flights were grounded. No industry can recover from losses of that magnitude overnight.

I support our airline industry. I support direct aid and loan guarantees. I support $5 billion to the airlines. I also support $10 billion in loan guarantees that assists as large as well as small airline carriers that works to ensure the financial solvency of our airline industry and other affiliated jobs. However, I am troubled about some aspects of this bill. To stabilize the airline industry, we cannot forget workers. We cannot overlook thousands of dislocated skyscrapers, attendants, pilots, food service workers, maintenance workers and all of those other men and women employed in the airline service sector, who will receive absolutely nothing from this bill. We cannot simply save the plane and leave the people behind.

Second, liability protection. I cannot support a liability protection regime that is overly broad. To have the government as well the airline and insurance companies cover liability, could leave the government as the insurer of last resort. This aspect of the bill is too broad and overly complex.

Third negligence and damages. I am also concerned that this bill fails to consider any amounts for punitive damages and also reduces compensation if there is any collateral source compensation. While I support the stabilization of the airline industry, on one hand, I cannot remove all liability from the industry on the other.

In addition, this bill caps air carriers’ liability to limits of their coverage and reduces victims’ compensation for the airlines. It is paradoxical to fully support the airlines while reducing support for survivors who need to resume their lives. I cannot in good conscience support such a measure.

Lastly, security. This bill does not address the issue of increased security that must be employed by the airline industry. With a tragedy of this magnitude, we cannot sweep the issue of security under the rug. The airline industry must make operational changes in security at our nation’s airports in order to thwart future terrorist attacks.

In conclusion, I support the stabilization of the airline industry with direct aid and loan guarantees. Our airline industry serves as a major cog of our economic engine and also.

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 seconds to the gentleman from Washington (Mr. INSELL).

Mr. INSELL. Mr. Speaker, the firefighters in New York did not panic and neither should we. Tomorrow, when the sun comes up, Americans all over this country are going to ask this question: Why in this Chamber do the big dogs always eat first?

Twenty or thirty thousand Boeing laid-off workers who build the airplanes by their sweat of their brow are going to ask: Why are we using taxpayer money to help companies with CEOs who make $35 million a year, and for the machinists, they get zero?

Bipartisanship does not mean the whole thing for the corporation and not a part for the worker. Help airlines, but put the “no’s” up there to make sure we get a clean vote up there next week.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. THORNBERRY). The gentleman from Alaska (Mr. YOUNG) has 91⁄2 minutes remaining, and the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. OBERSTAR) has 161⁄2 minutes remaining.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 seconds to the gentlewoman from California (Mrs. DAVIS).

Mrs. DAVIS of California. Mr. Speaker, we have just begun, I believe, to
I do not want to cut off our noses to spite our faces. If we lose this airline industry, we lose all jobs. We have to save it to save jobs, and then come back here and convince my colleagues that we finish the job. It is indeed an incomplete job. We must finish the job, but we must not lose it all.

My heart goes out when I look at the New York skyline and not see our twin towers. And I think if the towers were still standing, we could repair it and we could keep jobs in the building. But my heart is lost because there is no longer any towers on the skyline, and we have lost all of those jobs. Let us not lose any more jobs.

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, I yield 40 seconds to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. TURNER).

Ms. ESCH. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, the aviation industry is in need of a lifeline, and we are all trying to find it. The bill today provides $15 billion in taxpayer dollars to give a bailout, but there is no reason why this legislation, or any included the real face of the aviation industry: the pilots, the mechanics, the baggage handlers, the fight attendants, and ticket agents. The airlines could not run without them.

This package contains nothing for the industry’s reportedly 100,000 displaced or soon-to-be-laid-off workers. This $15 billion package spends nothing for the greater safety in our airlines as well.

Mr. Speaker, I want to make clear that we need to support legislation granting much-needed relief to our beleaguered airlines; but without help for workers, without real money for enhanced security, without real guaranties for air service to small communities, I cannot support this.

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 seconds to the gentleman from New York (Mr. BECERRA).

Mr. BECERRA. Mr. Speaker, I am supporting this bill. I am supporting it because of jobs.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 seconds to the gentleman from California (Mr. BECERRA).

Mr. TURNER. Mr. Speaker, I want to address these remarks to the families of the victims, those who were injured on September 11.

One of the best provisions of this bill is that this Congress has provided a method whereby all those injured, the victims of those who have died, will have full recovery for their economic and noneconomic damages by the establishment of a special master. The Treasury of the United States has been opened by the Members of this Congress to ensure that every family will receive recognition.

It is one of the best provisions of the bill, and I urge my colleagues to support it.

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, I yield 30 seconds to the gentleman from California (Mr. BECERRA).

Mr. BECERRA. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. BECERRA. Mr. Speaker, I am supporting this bill. I am supporting it because of jobs.
economy would be in even greater danger. While I would have written a bill that protected the more than 100,000 airline industry workers who have been laid off or are at risk of getting pink slips, and we must address that, a vote against this bill will put all of the airline industry workers at risk, both those who have been let go and are hoping to be rehired, and the more than one million still on the job.

Mr. Speaker, not to vote for the bill means no job is secure. Most important, I cannot in good conscience vote against a bill that provides compensation to the more than 150 families in my district, and that number may sadly grow, who have been directly affected by this tragedy and who are in desperate need right now.

There is no time to wait and negotiate further for them. I agree with my colleagues who are here for airline travel security and worker protection, but we need to move now and move quickly.

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from California (Mr. GEORGE MILLER).

Mr. Speaker, no one is suggesting that we not help those airlines who as a result incurred costs and expenses of being ordered down by the Federal Government; but this legislation goes beyond that because it reimburses them for more than that cost, and that may turn out to be true in the future, but that is not true today in terms of what has been proven up.

Mr. Speaker, it does not deal with executive compensation. It allows people to continue on while workers are being laid off, while workers are losing their health insurance and wages.

The President talked to us about shared sacrifice, and that is not what this legislation is about. It is about the few and the powerful getting their hands on the $5 billion and on the loan agreements and not providing for the workers and for the families that are devastated by the loss and tragedies that have taken place.

I think at a minimum we could have provided the coverage for these individuals. The language was ready; it was simply not agreed to. It is not about time.

We could have also made very sure that we directed the Federal agency to take over and federalize the safety of these airplanes. People are not avoiding airplanes because of the financial conditions of the airlines; they are not flying because they do not feel safe on airplanes.

Mr. OBERSTAR. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, that cataclysmic event that occurred a week ago brought this Nation to its knees. And very, very deliberately that it tore us asunder. We are here tonight to attempt to thread together shattered pieces of our economy, the torn hearts and spirits of our fellow citizens. In the limited way that we can, with the limited tools at our disposal, I share the frustration of many of my colleagues on this side of the aisle who wanted to reach out beyond the provisions of this bill and extend help to those workers who were laid off in the immediate aftermath of last Tuesday.

I thought we could do that and that we should do that, but there were other voices and other pressures. Since we do not have the majority, we do not dictate the course of events.

The Speaker wanted to do more, and he was magnificent in his management of the competing forces in that session that concluded at two o'clock this morning in his office when the final shape of this bill was hammered out. His willingness to work with our side to address the needs and concerns of Members went on into today and into late afternoon.

Yes, I think we should have addressed security to a greater extent than we did in this bill. There is $3 billion to be used by the Secretary of Transportation for sky marshals, for strengthening flight deck doors and for other airport security provisions; and there will be more to come.

Many on my side have said if we do not put it all in this train that is leaving the station it will never get done, but I trust the Members of this body and the leadership and the Secretary of Transportation on their word. They have given their word that we will do a broader and more inclusive security provision.

With the gentleman from Alaska (Mr. YOUNG), we are going to start on Monday in our committee crafting that broader language for broader security to carry out the work that, frankly, I think a member of the Presidential Commission of Aviation Security and Terrorism in 1989 and 1990.

If all we have done and recommended had gotten enacted into law and fully carried out, we still would have gaps in security. That is why I asked for a review, a blue ribbon commission, in 1995 to come back and review aviation security from top to bottom; and it took a year for that to happen in the previous administration.

That panel that was called together by the President, the baseline review committee met, and I addressed them. It was July 17, a year later, 1996; and that night TWA 800 went down off Long Island, and then a year later we came back around to back aviation security once again; and did we it again last year in our committee. We are going to do it again until we get it right.

We have a lot of provisions in this bill with the demands of those who lost their lives on the ground and the families who survived them, just as we did in the aftermath of TWA 800 and Pan Am 103, and it pains me to be on this floor once again to be addressing these matters.

We are going to provide in this bill compensation of air service for small communities that feed into the hubs. We provide $120 million for essential air service for the very smallest markets in our country. We provide assistance to our air carriers with accountability, with limitations on executive pay. In the Chrysler package of 1979, there was a proposal to cap wages of UAW workers; and the Members on this side said no, and a good many on the Republican side said no; and the Congress refused to do it.

But in this bill we put caps. We put limitations. Maybe we should have limited their pay below what they were making last year; but we did what was doable, capped their pay at what it was in 1998 in order to get the $5 billion; so that there is some shared contribution.

I believe that we are going to move further ahead. The Speaker made a commitment tonight to the minority leader that beginning next week they will start on a comprehensive package of worker assistance. I hope it will include extended unemployment compensation in many provisions of the Trade Adjustment Assistance Act, and I will call upon the airlines of the United States to follow the example of Northwest Airlines, which voluntarily told its unemployed laidoff workers that it will continue their health insurance through the end of this year, fully paid, employer-employee portions by the airline, whatever its cost will be; and if the other airlines will do the same, there would be a greater sense of shared sacrifice. There would be greater confidence on this floor that they are doing the right thing.

I have asked the airlines to express their support for worker provisions, and they have done so in a letter, and for improved security provision that I know they have done so as well. They will stand with us next week and in the following days when we bring legislation to the House floor.

This is the best we can do, and it is the most important thing that we can do to get aviation back again moving people and goods and moving our economy. It is not just here at home. The International Air Transport Association reported earlier today that European airlines since last Friday have lost $5 billion. That is a greater percentage of loss for them than for our carriers. If we do not get American airlines back again, world aviation is going to collapse.

Yes, we want to do more for the workers who are laid off, but we have to do something to keep the jobs of those who are still working. There are 1.2 million workers in the airline industry; 100,000 are laid off. But that means 1.1 million are working, and this bill is to keep those jobs, to help them stay on their feet, help them continue contributing to the national economy. That is why we are gathered around here, to do what we can in the right way, at the right time, to the extent that we can.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 1½ minutes to the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON-LEE).

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. OBERSTAR) very much for yielding me the time, and I know my colleagues are eager to leave this place, but many of us believe this is important enough that we should stay here and work.

I frankly believe that we can have a meeting of the minds. I believe that the United States Government last week made a catastrophic decision to ground the airlines; and they were right, and so we should compensate them. The legislation also speaks to the tragedy and travesty of 6,000 dead; and I think we should compensate them as well.

But at the same time, I believe we should advocate for the sky caps and cabbies, suppliers, airline stewardesses, and pilots that may be laid off.

I want to thank the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. OBERSTAR), the ranking member; and I want to thank the gentleman from Alaska (Mr. YOUNG) for working this bill through. But I need to be able to carry the message home in a very clear manner. I know the leader and the Speaker have spoken, and I would like to yield to the distinguished ranking member because he did recount for us extensively where we might go in this next week.

I ask the gentleman from Minnesota, the plan for next week or moving into next week on working on ensuring that we have a plan for extended employment assistance for the ability to continue employment that may be laid off and the commitment of the airlines respectively not to file bankruptcy, and I know there are no definitive answers, but to work with us to rebuild the airlines, thereby rebuild employment, because what I hear is that people do want their jobs.

Do we have the ability and the capacity and the commitment to do that?

Mr. Speaker, the September 11, 2001 terrorist acts against America will never be forgotten. 6,333 people are missing and presumed dead, and 6,291 have been injured as a result of the terrorist attack on the World Trade Center in New York. The death toll at the Pentagon is 189 including the 64 people who died on American Airline Flight 77.

Last night, we heard from President Bush regarding the need for national and world unity as we embark upon the mission of eradicating terrorism. I am among the terrorist to swift justice. I agree with President Bush on this issue. I vote to give the President the authority to act appropriately to achieve this goal. Also, I voted to provide the $40 billion necessary to fund the rebuilding of New York City, the Pentagon and to fund the campaign to bring the perpetrators to justice.

Mr. Speaker, I yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. MORAN).

Mr. MORAN of Virginia. Mr. Speaker, if the gentlewoman will yield, that is not a matter I control. That is an agreement between the Speaker and the minority leader. They are certainly committed to working in the direction the gentlewoman has expressed.

Mr. Speaker, I yield my time to the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. MORAN).
6,000 lives. They cannot cause the loss of thousands of livelihoods.

I am going to vote for this, but I have the confidence we are going to do something for the workers, too, who work day to day and breathe life into the aircraft and the airline industry. But we cannot have employees without employers. We have got to pass this bill. But it is not enough.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

To the gentleman who just spoke, I happen to support reopening Reagan National Airport. He is another gentleman, by the way, that has never voted for anything I have ever wanted, and I do support opening that airport. It is the right thing to do. I want him to know that.

I would also suggest that for those who question it, this committee has jurisdiction over some parts of this bill which we are bringing up tonight, but as the gentleman from Minnesota has mentioned, we do not have total jurisdiction. But I am going to do everything in my power, as well as the gentleman from Minnesota’s, to make sure that the gentleman from Missouri’s, Mr. GEPHARDT and the Speaker’s commitment is followed through for the workers. But this bill tonight is so crucially important so that we can keep those jobs that remain viable and we get the airline industry back on track so they can be rehired as they have lost their jobs. And we will do that.

I would suggest one thing. I hope, and I know most of my colleagues have not read the bill; I say that sincerely because I am also a Member of this Congress.

“Documentation. Subject to subsection (b), the amount of compensation payable to an air carrier under section 101(a)(2) that the air carrier demonstrates to the satisfaction of the President, using sworn financial statements or other appropriate data, that the air carrier incurred, the Secretary of Transportation and the Comptroller General of the United States may audit such statements and may request any information that the Secretary and the Comptroller General deems necessary to conduct such audit.”

I am going to suggest that all losses must be documented and if they make false statements, they have committed a felony and it is a crime. Let us keep that in mind.

Other than that, Mr. Speaker, I would like at this time to thank the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. OBERSTAR) for the work he has done and the leadership he has shown on that side of the aisle with tremendous criticism from some of his Members. I did not face that on this side of the aisle at all. I also would like to thank the staffs on both sides. I may not name all of them because some of the names I may not know and I will not pronounce those I do not know. But the staffs put in yesterday, last night, today, last week, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday and they worked 48 hours sometimes, so I thank the staffs for the work they have done. It is crucially important.

We also had another player, or two players not in this body, in this bill that we need to work with. We had the administration. It is my administration, but I can tell you sometimes they can be very, very shortsighted. We also had the other body, and they can be equally shortsighted. But we had to bring this bill together so it can become a law.

I am asking my colleagues tonight to keep in mind, this is not a bailout. This is an attempt to keep a vital part of our economy working. This is, in fact, our nation’s transportation infrastructure and crippling the responsibility of the federal government to act otherwise, will be devastating to our national economy.

The situation the airline industry finds itself was not one of their making. Within hours of the tragedy, the federal government realized the difficult, yet crucial decision to ground all flights in the U.S. and divert others. It was the federal government’s correct choice to close the airlines’ doors for four days and it was this decision that also caused the industry to lose $200 million a day for each day their flights were grounded.

On the principle of fairness, it must also be the responsibility of the federal government to restore this industry’s economic solvency. To act otherwise, will be devastating to our national transportation infrastructure and crippling to our national economy.

Additionally, airlines will not become viable until the American people are convinced that they are secure. I commend Transportation Secretary Mineta for creating two task force teams to report and advise on airline and airport security. I also look forward to this Congress passing legislation to federalize the aviation security system. For far too long, these workers have been underpaid, overworked, and unappreciated. I am confident that the money we are going to give will create a credible and well-trained federal enforcement aviation security system as soon as possible.

Funds are included in this bill to give direct, prompt assistance to the airline industry. But the key requirements of the bill are: only airlines that purchase loans that will be repaid. Additionally, there is a provision in the bill that I strongly support, to limit CEO compensation by putting a cap on 7:10 p.m. Mr. GEPHARDT. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of the bill before us today. Some are asking why we need a bill specifically for the airlines, when so many other sectors of the economy need our help as well. The answer is simple—we have to.

September 11, 2001 changed everything in our world. Including the continuing instability and viability of the U.S. aviation system. The aviation industry normally constitutes 10 percent of our national gross domestic product. In my City of Philadelphia, the airline industry is a $7.4 billion economic engine. I cannot stress it enough that if we do not help this industry now, today, it will not be the same viable transportation system as we know it and layoffs will be even more staggering then we are currently witnessing.

Part of the aftermath of the tragedy our entire nation suffered on September 11 is that important industries in our nation’s economy have become vulnerable. One of the most visibly affected industries has been the airline industry. We know of 100,000 nationwide layoffs because airplanes were grounded for four days and because activity at our national airports which came to a halt, are only now slowly beginning to become active again.

As our nation recovers from this national tragedy, I believe that we must swiftly aid in this recovery. It is our obligation to help revive and ensure the viability of the airline industry by giving them the economic boost they require today.

Mr. Speaker, I vote for this bill for the traveling public, the aviation employees, the American people, and all other business that rely on or are affected by the aviation industry.

Again, I urge my colleagues to vote for this important and necessary piece of legislation.

Ms. LEE. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to support H.R. 2926, the Airline Stabilization Act, which will revitalize our economy and protect jobs in my district and around the country. I do so with the strong intention of supporting additional legislation, scheduled to be considered on the House floor next, that will provide relief for airport workers and those who have already lost their jobs in the airline industry. I also believe Congress needs to provide additional resources for airport security as soon as possible.

As our nation recovers from this national tragedy, I believe that we must swiftly aid in this recovery. It is our obligation to help revive and ensure the viability of the airline industry by giving them the economic boost they require today.

executive salaries over $300,000 for two years. While I am cognizant that this bill does not contain language that would provide relief for workers who have been affected, nor does it include language that would provide increased security measures, I do believe that this bill will help to ensure solvency for much of the airline industry and prevent further job losses.

I have stated since the tragedy last week that we must look for a multifaceted solution to this multifaceted problem. This bill is one small step toward restoring one facet—our economy—and for that reason I will support this bill.

Mr. UDALL of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, I am disappointed about the way the House has handled this legislation. I think legislation to help the airline industry is urgently needed, but I think this bill falls far short of doing everything that urgently needs to be done.

I voted against the rule because I thought we should be taking the time to do a better job before we go home for the weekend. And I voted for the motion to recommit because it would have made the bill better.

I wish that the outcome to those votes had been different, because I am not enthusiastic about this bill.

I am not enthusiastic about it because while it will help the airlines, it does not do enough for the airline employees who are facing unemployment.

I am not enthusiastic about it because it does not do enough to address the effects of the airlines’ problems on many other businesses.

And I am not enthusiastic about this bill because it does nothing to respond to the very urgent need to improve the safety and security of airline passengers and the American people—a need that I think nobody can deny after the tragic and criminal events of last week.

Still, while not enthusiastic about the bill I will vote for it because I think it is urgently needed.

And, above all else, I will vote for it because of the assurance of the Speaker and the leadership that the House will act quickly to address the problems of employees and the other things that should have been part of the legislation. On that basis, and that basis alone, I am prepared to support passage of this incomplete and unbalanced bill.

Ms. KILPATRICK. Mr. Speaker, by bringing this bill up without extensive debate or scrutiny and without the opportunity for amendment, we are being asked to buy a pig in a poke.

I want to assist the airline industry. The condition of the industry would endanger the air transport system. But in the wake of trying to pull together a bill that will bridge the industry until some normalization in the system is restored, we are forgetting about the rank and file employees. These are the baggage handlers, theskycaps, the flight attendants, the ticket agents and the victims of last week’s shutdown and who now find themselves out on the street. There is no provision in this bill that will help bridge them and their families until the air transport system is back on its feet.

The leadership has promised to bring legislation next Congress to compensate workers, families and victims adversely impacted by this tragic incident. My problem with this “promise” is that it does not have the united commitment of the leadership on the other side of the aisle. That’s why I am skeptical of supporting this bill on these terms, under these conditions.

More often than not, legislating quickly is legislating badly. Many Members in this chamber have cited the precedents of the Chrysler and New York City loan guarantees. Although I was not a Member of Congress when Congress acted on these proposals, I supported their passage and encouraged my representative in Congress to vote for their approval. The difference between those financial assistance packages and the one that is before us today is that the Chrysler and New York City relief bills were debated at length in committee, in private negotiations with the White House and industry executives, and on the floor of the House and the Senate. The legislative process worked deliberately and ultimately wisely.

Chrysler and New York City repaid their federal loans and the federal government actually earned a profit in the process.

But this case is different. We are being asked to pass a $15 billion assistance package to rescue the industry. According to one source, the $5 billion in direct aid is more than four times the amount of the actual losses actually experienced by the airline industry. I am not here to argue about the size of the package, although it does lead one to ask if we are buying a pig in a poke.

The problem is that it is a halfway measure. The bill provides no lifetime to the tens of thousands of workers who have just been laid off and to the low- and tipped-wage workers who were regulated out of their jobs for reasons of increased air security. I am not enthusiastic about this bill because it is not comprehensive and does not provide compensation to workers, families and victims adversely impacted by this tragic incident.

Mr. Speaker, last Friday we brought a stabilizing bill to the floor and failed to act on it. This week, the airlines announced thousands of layoffs. This Friday I will vote in support of this bill and urge my colleagues to support this bill because if we act today, I can only hope that we will be able to save some jobs next week.

Mr. COLLINS. Mr. Speaker, Congress is taking important steps today to provide real short-term relief for the industry. The Air Transportation System Stabilization Act (H.R. 2926) delivers on the commitment supported by Congress and stated firmly by President George Bush in his address to the nation last night—"We will come together to promote stability and keep our airlines flying with direct assistance during this emergency."

For several days last week the U.S. government closed down the domestic aviation industry—a decision that was vital to the interest and safety of our country in a crisis situation. Now that the industry is back online, it is equally vital to our nation that we take steps to ensure that the public continues to have access to viable, competitive aviation transportation.

Today we are asking the taxpayers to provide a huge injection into the arm of the aviation industry. But the cash infusion, the tax deferral and the financial guarantees from Congress are only one part of the formula. We have also heard about a lot of talk tonight about providing additional legislation which provides a whole slew of health, unemployment and other things to those that already exist under current law.

But rather than double dip from the taxpayers, the aviation industry should use the initial taxpayer assistance provided through H.R. 2926, to keep their employees on board and utilize these professionally-trained men and women.

In order to survive, airlines must focus on reestablishing confidence among the American consumer. The only way you are going to get people back on planes, is to assure them that air travel is 110 percent safe.

Airlines should consolidate flights and dedicate non-flying personnel to increased security inspections. Rather than laying off employees during this travel slowdown, why not utilize their professional training by putting them throughout airports to increase passenger security checks and baggage inspection.

It’s a fact that the elevated security status means that federal employees are already being pulled from non-aviation assignments throughout the government to meet the increased demand for security precautions in airports. At least on a temporary basis, airline employees should be utilized in the same capacity—to increase security of airports and provide the consumers with the confidence they need in order to return to the airways.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. Speaker, disintegration of the airline network of America is simply not a viable alternative for our nation. Therefore, I will vote for this bill. Defeating it would be a worse alternative than passing it. But passing it must not obscure the serious shortcomings of this bill. It fails to address the serious holes in key parts of the safety net to help hold up those who suffer as a result of the tragedy of September 11. There are severe gaps in our unemployment compensation system and in our retraining structure that must be addressed or else many, if not most, of the dislocated will be out in the cold economically. Many of these same persons will be left without health coverage.

We have been assured by the Speaker in a colloquy with the minority leader that the appropriate committees will turn their attention promptly to important outstanding issues, which must include those mentioned earlier. As a member of the Ways and Means Committee and the Subcommittee which has jurisdiction over unemployment compensation and some retraining programs, I intend to join in active efforts consistent with the assurances in the colloquy.

This Congress must also take far more vigorous steps to dramatically strengthen airline security, and I mean dramatically. This bill does not begin to do so. If the public does not retain confidence that they can fly safely, most will not fly and when nothing in this bill will safeguard the financial integrity of the airline industry.

The vote tonight must lead to further steps, and soon.

Ms. MCCARTHY of Missouri. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to express my support for H.R. 2925, the Air Transportation System Stabilization and Travel Assistance Act. I also must express my concerns for what is not contained in the legislation. While the assistance provided by this measure is absolutely essential to keep our airlines operating, the lack of provisions to address the needs of thousands of airline workers who were told by the government not to report to work and who will not be compensated for complying with that request is wrong. The bill lacks important provisions to increase security for pilots, crew and passenger that are needed to restore confidence in the industry that is so important to regaining the economic viability of the industry. At a time such as this, only the federal government can help restore that confidence, and I fear that this bill does not go far enough to accomplish this critical task.

These terrorist attacks were aimed at disrupting our economy and destroying our way of life. The destruction that followed has threatened not only the economic viability of the airline industry, but the livelihood of workers employed by air carriers, manufacturers, and the hospitality industry. Each day that flights are grounded resulted in a loss over $300 million a day for the industry. The airlines expect to lose $24 billion in the next year due to the aftermath of the attacks.

Without federal aid, many carriers may go bankrupt. I support the provisions in the bill that will help the industry remain economically viable, such as the $5 billion in direct aid and $10 billion in loan guarantees. However, none of this money goes towards helping the tens of thousands of hard working Americans who now have no assistance to help them while they search for new jobs or maintain their health insurance. We must address their concerns as well as the concerns of other industries tied in with the airline industry.

My home state of Missouri will be considerably affected if an economic recovery package is not enacted soon. Missouri is home to Vanguard Airlines, a regional, low-fare airline that serves the metropolitan Kansas City area by linking it with the 14 largest cities in the United States. The company employs nearly 1,000 residents in Missouri and Kansas and is an integral part of the state and regional transport economies. In addition, American Airlines has an enormous presence in the state. As part of its merger agreement with Trans World Airlines (TWA), American has incorporated TWA’s hub in St. Louis and its overhaul base in Kansas City. American Airlines employs almost 13,000 people and makes up a significant portion of Missouri’s workforce. A considerable curtailment of its operations or those of Vanguard Airlines would be devastating to the state’s economy.

This measure is only a first step towards putting the airline industry back on solid financial ground. It is incomplete. We must continue to work to bolster the security of the airlines, returning air marshals to skies and implementing the latest technologies available to ensure the traveling public that hijackings will not occur again. We cannot ignore the needs of the thousands of workers who have lost their jobs. If we do not provide the support needed, the temporary nature of the layoffs and furloughs will be harder to overcome and lengthen the effect. I strongly urge my colleagues to revisit this issue immediately and continue to be vigilant in addressing the needs of the industry’s employees and families, and do what is necessary to restore the confidence of the American people in this most vital of industries.

Ms. PRYCE of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this bill and ask that this letter be included in the RECORD.

ATLA agrees with you that extraordinary situations demand extraordinary responses. At least seven thousand families are hurting more than any of us can imagine. And, because the first priority of every American should be prompt and full justice for the thousands of families who now first-hand the unspeakable horror visited upon the world on September 11, 2001, members of ATLA will provide free legal services to any family wishing to pursue justice through the fund established by this unprecedented, humanitarian legislation.

ATLA believes that 100% of the compensation from the fund should go directly to these families. The officers and Executive Committee of ATLA have volunteered to be the first attorneys to provide legal services free of charge under this program.

Sincerely,

LEO V. BOYLE, President.
On behalf of the 60,000 men and women of ATLA.

Mr. LAFLINCE, Mr. Speaker, I rise in opposition to this legislation. Let me first acknowledge that this bill is much better than the bill we were asked to consider under unanimous consent one week ago. The fiduciary provisions associated with the bill’s $10 billion in loan guarantees are better in this bill, because they were non-existent in last Friday’s version. Today’s bill creates a loan guarantee board, which includes Treasury, the Fed, and GAO—all critical players in any loan guarantee package. There was no Board last week; the President had total discretion. It sets conditions for establishing the magnitude and source of financial losses prior to the extension of any guarantees, including the authority to conduct audits of corporate financial statements. And it provides a mechanism for the federal government to ultimately get the money back from the airlines, which so far has not been the case. It’s a fact that the elevated security status means that federal employees are already being pulled from non-aviation assignments throughout the government to meet the increased demand for security precautions in airports.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today to express my support for H.R. 2925, the Air Transportation System Stabilization and Travel Assistance Act.

On behalf of the 60,000 men and women of ATLA.
also critical that we extend the term of unemployment insurance, so that jobless Americans can count on adequate financial support throughout the duration of unemployment. Furthermore, we need to do more to provide health coverage for laid-off workers by expanding COBRA benefits, which are currently structured to effectively put health coverage out of reach for many of the unemployed. But again, none of these provisions are in the bill, and we have little reason to think that they will be forthcoming any time soon, if at all.

Third, while providing no support for rank and file workers, even as tens of thousands of these workers are being laid-off, the bill provides a windfall to CEOs. In fact, while the airline industry continues to reap the massive compensation packages they received in the year 2000. Telling a corporate executive that if he received $15 million last year he can receive no more than $15 million this year is not enough to assuage “shared sacrifice.”

It is little wonder that this bill does not have the support of labor unions. Any industry financial package must be based on the tenet of shared sacrifice, as we saw in the Chrysler support package—that package had the support of the unions. Clearly, the airlines see little evidence of shared sacrifice in this legislation, and they oppose it strongly. The AFL–CIO states, “members of Congress are poised to stiff airline industry workers in the bailout bill.”

Fourth, this bill distributes $5 billion in grants and $10 billion in loan guarantees according to the airlines’ passenger capacity, not their passenger load, during the month of August. This provides windfalls to airlines who were in weak financial straits prior to the September 11th tragic events. This is a fiscally irresponsible measure. Financial support should be distributed based on measures that would better reflect the financial condition of the airlines prior to September 11th.

Fifth, the victim’s compensation provisions in this bill create gross inequities by compensating for economic losses based solely on the deceased worker’s earnings. As a result, the family of a worker who earned millions of dollars a year will receive many multiples of that amount in compensation, while a deceased minimum wage worker’s family will receive much, much less.

Sixth, this bill does nothing to address the economic losses of the many businesses directly and indirectly associated with the airlines, especially the travel industry. Without any assurances that we can address those losses in other legislation, we must wonder about the level of support in this bill, $15 billion, for a single industry. These other businesses have a legitimate claim to federal support; yet, there is no assurance from the Administration or congressional leadership that further funding will be made readily available.

Seventh, I am concerned that limitations on the liability of the airline industry alone will merely shift lawsuits and losses from the airlines to other entities, setting off a chain of unintended consequences throughout the economy. The U.S. Chamber of Commerce opposes these provisions, saying that the provisions will have “dramatic and negative consequences on the entire business community.”

Eighth, the bill only allows for warrants and other means of compensating the taxpayers for this bailout as they pertain to the loan guarantees. There are no such mechanisms associated with the $5 billion cash infusion. Warrants should be extended as a condition of any aid.

Ninth, the cash infusion is not accompanied by any language that would seek to reimburse the taxpayers for insurance payments received by the airlines under business interruption or physical disaster insurance policies. The airlines will receive payments from these policies, and they should return any cash assistance to the government that is offset by such payments.

Finally, I must ask, why are we rushing through a bill that includes all of these deficiencies tonight? Why can’t we have a few more days, with more input from Members, to craft a package that makes sense in its entirety? Let me remind my colleagues that we will have no opportunity to improve this bill during a conference committee, because no conference will consider this specific bill, but I remain eager to come back and craft a new, much better package.

Mr. REYES. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong support of H.R. 2629, the Air Transportation System Stabilization Act. As our nation begins the hearing process in the aftermath of last week’s attacks, we must focus our efforts toward getting back to the important business of our nation. I appreciate the hard work of Chairman Young, Ranking Member OBERSTAR and all of the Members on the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure, for crafting this legislative relief package for the airline industry. We as a Congress and a nation need to continue to unite during this tragedy, set aside partisanship, and focus on issues that protect our way of life. We need to pass this important bill.

Addressing the immediate situation confronting the airline industry must be one of our top priorities. The airline industry provides an essential public service and is an integral component of the United States national transportation infrastructure. For example, during the last week’s attacks, the airline industry’s employees served approximately 670 million passengers traveling over 700 billion miles and provided over 25 billion ton miles of freight delivery.

The terrorist attacks have had a grave and dramatic effect on the airline industry. As we are a nation comes to grips with the vulnerability of our transportation systems to terrorist attacks, more resources will need to be allocated to assure the safety and security of everyone who travels by air. This will cost a tremendous amount of money, which should not be borne solely by the airline industry.

The effect is not only being felt with airlines, but also in travel agencies and other businesses associated with the travel industry. As a Congress, we need to do everything in our power to assist our fellow citizens across our country who have businesses that have been adversely affected due to the dramatically reduced demand for air service. Airlines are reducing flight schedules and are expected to announce the layoff of 100,000 employees in the near future. Without federal aid, the airlines is an important first step, however, assistance must also be provided to our businesses that are dependent on the airlines.

There are many businesses in my district and districts across the country who are facing severe layoffs. Travel agencies, which are losing $26 billion per day, restaurants, hotels, cruise lines and many, many others are experiencing great hardship. We need to make sure that we address their issues.

Without immediate and significant U.S. government financial support, many U.S. airlines will go bankrupt, severely threatening our way of life. It is estimated that the overall impact on the airline industry alone from the September 11th attack will be $24 billion based on anticipated revenue declines and cost increases. H.R. 2629 goes a long way toward stabilizing the airlines by providing $5 billion in direct grants and an additional $10 billion in loan guarantees.

Safe and efficient air travel must remain a national priority. A strong airline industry is vital to our economy and the security of our country. I pledge my support for this important piece of legislation and urge my colleagues to vote in favor of it.

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of this important and needed legislation to preserve the continued viability of our country’s air transportation system. The financial condition of our nation’s commercial airline industry in the aftermath of the catastrophic events that occurred on September 11 is of the utmost importance. Stability and service continuity within the industry is desperately needed as it affects not only the airline industry itself, but also our entire economy and marketplace, from manufacturing, to travel and tourism, to the transportation of goods and services, to mail delivery. These industries are on the verge of facing a crisis and they will not survive if we do not act now.

This relief package is particularly vital to Guam and the territories, whose geographical isolation and distance from the U.S. mainland makes air service costly and challenging to begin with and that much more vulnerable to cutbacks and downsizing in times of difficulty.

If this legislation is not passed soon and quickly, then places like Guam and other U.S. Pacific Islands, will face enormous and disproportionate economic and social repercussions. These areas are significantly dependent upon the industry, much more so than other areas in our country where alternative modes of transportation are available.

Guam, which is seven hours flying time from Hawaii and nineteen flying hours from Washington, D.C., is the furthest U.S. jurisdiction from our nation’s capital. For years, Continental Micronesia has provided Guam with excellent air and cargo service. Without their continued and unimpaired service, the people of Guam are essentially left with no viable and reliable air service to Hawaii and the U.S. mainland via U.S. routes. Air service, both domestic and international, is vital to our economic development and tourism industry.

The recent announcement by Continental Airlines of a system-wide reduction of flights by 20 percent and a lay off of 12,000 people or about 20% of its parent company work force underscores the even more immediate need for this legislation. Continental Micronesia is the largest private employer on Guam and is the only commercial airline that flies between Guam and Hawaii. Hawaii is a required stop for travelers between Guam and the U.S. mainland, unless individuals travel to Guam via Asia on Northwest or international air carriers. Due to Guam’s close proximity to Asia, Guam has been more impacted than most U.S. jurisdictions from the Asian financial crisis, particularly in Japan, for the last several years. With an unemployment rate of over 15% and the anticipated decrease in tourism, this legislation becomes extremely urgent. The economic impact that a single commercial airline’s cutbacks may have on an isolated jurisdiction like Guam is potentially devastating. Continental Micronesia employs near 2,000 workers. Apart from being the only commercial passenger carrier between Hawaii and Guam, Continental Micronesia provides a key role in the delivery of mail and cargo service, including medical specimens and commercial goods. Their ability to sustain these services is essential. They are in dire need of our support.

Air carriers have dropped 40 percent since last week and everyday more and more airport, airline, and tourism employees have been furloughed or laid off. The Guam International Airport has done all it can to mitigate the financial burden on our airlines, including reducing passenger fees, but they cannot solve the recovery problem alone. I believe that consideration should be given to the impact on our nation’s airports by providing assistance in the implementation of heightened security requirements. Requiring improved screening devices and other security functions, while significant, is a successful implementation of and compliance with these new standards necessitates federal financial support.

I strongly support this commercial airline relief package and urge its expeditious consideration and passage. This legislation is good for our nation, good for our economy, and good for our future. We should take all the necessary steps to safeguard our airline industry from crumbling in the midst of catastrophic circumstances. I thank the Transportation and Infrastructure Committee Chairman, Mr. Young, and the Ranking Member, Mr. Oberstar, for their leadership and concern.

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this bill to stabilize the airline industry. Since the September 11 tragedy, the airlines have lost $5 billion. There is fear in the industry that we could lose a payable 100,000 jobs. This includes pilots, flight attendants, mechanics, sky caps, and other airport-related jobs like firefighters and food service workers.

This bill will save these workers from layoffs. Hawaii has seen many Continental employees who have been displaced by this heinous crime. Mrs. McCarthy of New York. Mr. Speaker, the tragic events of last week have left the airline industry in complete disarray. The significant reductions in service, caused by poor consumer confidence, has led to significant job loss within the airline industry. The ripple effect is already seen throughout our economy with substantial declines in the stock market, significant reductions in restaurant patronage, and an overall decline in consumer spending. Because of these factors, this stabilization package is needed to prevent further job loss, not only within the airline community, but also businesses dependent upon the prosperity of this industry.

Although I believe this bailout package is needed, the bill is not without its shortcomings. The absence of a provision to protect workers is extremely troublesome. Thousands of displaced workers are forced to rely upon substantially reduced unemployment benefits without health benefits. This is not the response that anyone should be forced to endure. I understand the fact that labor is the airline industry’s largest expense, and is contingent upon the number of airplanes and customers in the air. However, I believe the federal government should have adequately addressed the numerous layoffs within this legislation.

My disappointment over the lack of worker protections is countered by a need to preserve the jobs we still have within the airline industry. Allowing the complete decimation of this industry benefits no one. It is my hope this bailout package assists the airline industry in a manner that allows it to, someday, rehire the workers it was forced to lay off. Nonetheless, my support for this legislation has not deterred my desire to assist workers that are displaced because of this terrible tragedy. The need to preserve the airline industry should not drown out the need to preserve its workforce. I urge the leadership in both parties to address their needs in the same expedient fashion.

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong support of the Air Transportation System Stabilization Act, legislation that would provide immediate financial assistance to our nation’s airlines. As the representative for William P. Hobby Airport, in Houston, Texas, and many Continental Airline employees who have been adversely impacted by last week’s events, I strongly believe that we must assist our airlines.

Last week the government in response to the terrorist attacks, required that all airplanes be grounded for an extended period. This unprecedented event has caused financial harm to our airlines and we need to support them to ensure that they may continue to operate. It is estimated that for every directly employed airline employee, there are six ancillary jobs which are connected to these jobs. Our economy and our transportation infrastructure depend upon the airline industry to be operating at its full capacity.

This legislation would provide two forms of financial assistance, including $5 billion in direct reimbursement to reimburse airlines for the cost of grounding their planes last week. This direct payment would also help airlines to cover the cost of reduced trips and ridership during the month of September. In order to protect taxpayer funds, this direct compensation program requires that the Comptroller General of the General Accounting Office (GAO) as well as the Secretary of Transportation audit financial statements to justify the eligibility for compensation.

Second, this bill would provide $10 billion in loan guarantees so the airlines can have access to our capital markets. Earlier this week, we learned that the capital markets have evaluated the risks and have decided to decline to offer credit and capital to our airlines. This is due in part to the recent terrorist attacks. By providing federal government loan guarantees, we will help the airline industry to get the liquidity it needs to rebuild ridership. Our nation’s transportation is the envy of the world. However, with the immediate grounding of all airplanes, we have caused serious financial hardship for these companies. I am pleased that the final package includes critically important changes which will strengthen this loan guarantee program. First, this legislation now requires that any loans or guarantees that are determined and overseen by a board which would be made up of the Chairman of the Federal Reserve, the Secretary of the Treasury and the Secretary of Transportation as well as the Comptroller General. I believe it is my duty as an elected official that the loans will be made in a reasonable, fair manner and will not jeopardize taxpayer funds. This Board will determine the terms and conditions under CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE September 21, 2001 which airlines can apply for these loans. In addition, borrowers from these loans will be required to provide collateral where feasible in order to ensure that there will be an incentive for airlines to repay the federal government and taxpayers.

This comprehensive package also includes provisions to help the airline industry with the immediate problem of cost-prohibitive liability insurance. Since the terrorists attacks, many insurance companies have either dramatically revised premiums or refused to renew such necessary insurance. Without such insurance, the capital markets have indicated that they will not provide liquidity to airlines, which is a capital-intensive industry. This liability section would require the federal government to cover the cost of liability insurance for 180 days after these attacks if carriers cannot obtain it. This section does not preclude any claims which individuals may wish to bring against the airline industry.

Another important provision in this legislation would require the President to spend $3 billion on airline safety and security in order to restore public confidence in the airline industry. This $3 billion would come from the $40 billion that Congress has already provided to the President in order to recover from this devastating attack. This bill could have been more specific on security measures and we should press hard that the Transportation Department provide new rules very soon.

This bill would also establish a voluntary Victims Compensation fund so that victims of terrorist-related attacks of September 11 could seek compensation. This Fund would be administered by a Special Master appointed by the Attorney General. Air carrier liability is capped at the carriers’ insurance company limit. Any additional liability would be assumed by the federal government. The federal government will provide compensation above this carrier liability. If victims elect to use this compensation program, they would be required to provide that they were damaged by these attacks. For victims who seek compensation through the courts, they would also be required to prove that the airlines were negligent and had caused them damage. However, I believe it is important that families ultimately still have the right to seek higher compensation through a legal case.

I agree with my colleagues that this bill is deficient in providing necessary assistance to those airline employees who have been or will be laid off as a result of the attack on America on September 11, 2001. Such provisions addressing unemployment compensation, job training and extended COBRA health benefits could have very easily been added to this bill and I regret that they were not. We have received a commitment from the leadership that a bill addressing these concerns will be brought up next week, and it should.

I strongly believe now is the time to provide confidence in our airport system. I urge my colleagues to support this legislation. Mr. DELAHUNT. Mr. Speaker, I share the serious misgivings which others have expressed about this legislation. But I intend to support it. After thinking about it, I believe it is needed to preserve the viability of an entire industry—an industry which is at risk of collapse if we do not act now.

And second, because it will provide swift compensation to the victims and their families. They deserve everything we can do for them. The bill will give these families a way to obtain compensation without the expense, uncertainty, and pain of protracted litigation.

My chief concern is that the bill fails to provide any relief for the tens of thousands of airline workers who have been displaced as a result of the events of September 11. These workers are the heart and soul of the industry. It cannot function without them.

Were the need for this legislation any less acute, this issue alone would have caused me to oppose the measure until it could be addressed. But under the circumstances, I feel it would be even more unjust to hold these victims hostage. Again.

We have been assured that this matter will be taken up separately. If that promise is not kept we will bring shame on the House.

Finally, I want to express my appreciation to some people who get precious little praise in this institution. I wish to insert in the RECORD a letter to the Speaker from Mr. Leo Boyle, President of the Association of Trial Lawyers of America, pledging that members of his organization will provide free legal services to any family wishing to participate in the compensation fund. This means that claimants will be able to keep 100 percent of the proceeds.

This is just another example of the selflessness with which people from every walk of life have come together in our common cause.

Hon. Dennis Hastert, Speaker and Hon. Richard Gephardt, Democratic Leader

U.S. House of Representatives

Washington, DC.

Dear Mr. Speaker and Mr. Leader:
The Association of Trial Lawyers of America (ATLA) commends the United States Congress and President Bush for their leadership and decision to put families victimized by our national tragedy first and to ease their pain through the September 11th Compensation Act of 2001.

ATLA agrees with you that extraordinary situations demand extraordinary responses. At least seven thousand families are hurting more than any of us can imagine. And, because the first priority of every American should be prompt and full justice for the thousands of families who know first-hand the unspeakable horror visited upon the world on September 11, 2001, members of ATLA will provide free legal services to any family wishing to pursue justice through the “September 11th Compensation Act of 2001.”

ATLA believes that 100 percent of the compensation from the fund should go directly to these families.

The officers and Executive Committee of ATLA have resolved to be the first attorneys to provide legal services free of charge under this program.

God Bless America.

Sincerely,

Leo V. Boyle, President

On behalf of the 60,000 men and women of ATLA.

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, I have a number of procedural and substantive concerns regarding the legislation before us.

In short, there has been almost no semblance of fair or deliberate procedure on the legislation. We had no committee markup. We had no committee hearings on the bill. The bill itself, as drafted in the dead of night, has not been available to most members until a few hours before the vote. This is not the way we should legislate on a minor piece of legislation, let alone a major bill that impacts our entire airline industry.

It is true, it is so important, why are we voting so late this Friday evening, without time to review or consider these serious measures? Why not take the time to read this legislation carefully? In our desperation to help our fellow citizens, I fear we are pushing to judgment without recognizing the complexity or importance of these issues.

In terms of substance, I also have grave concerns about the dollar amount we are giving to airline carriers, $15 billion—$5 billion in direct aid and $10 billion in loan guarantees. First, we have no idea how the Members reached this dollar amount.

Second, we all know that the industry has and will face massive layoffs. More than 100,000 will be laid off in the industry, and Northwest announced 10,000 today. Yet the bill does not guarantee that a single employee will be rehired or will not be laid off.

Third, the bill does nothing to rehire the workers from the ancillary impacted industries—the airport workers, the hotel workers and the like. And what about the skycaps who work at substandard wages? The new security requirements mean they are totally out of this jobs. What does this bill do for them? Nothing.

I support the airline industry—but its needs must be balanced against all of our other priorities. Certainly, the air carriers need assistance but do they need it at the cost of Medicare and social security? As much as we think this legislation is needed, we must balance it will all of our priorities, and not sacrifice all of our priorities for the sake of one.

Finally, I would like to speak to the liability provisions of the bill. As Ranking Member of the Airline Industry Committee, I was intimately involved in the crafting of Title IV, and I am happy to report that I can support this aspect of the legislation.

The key provision creates a victim compensation plan, which provides individuals, present during the September 11, 2001 terrorist-related aircraft crashes at the World Trade Center, the Pentagon, or site of the aircraft crash in Shanksville, Pennsylvania, or the passengers and crews of aircrafts involved in terrorist-related aircraft crashes, with due compensation. The legislation would provide compensation to any individual who was physically injured or killed as a result of the terrorist-related aircraft crashes of September 11, 2001. Specifically, the legislation authorizes a Special Master, appointed by the Attorney General, to review or consider these serious measures?

These claims would include notice of the death of the deceased or the harms suffered by the claimant, where the claim is filed on the behalf of a decedent, information of the claimant, the nature of the injury, death, or loss, and information regarding collateral sources of compensation the claimant has received or could receive. The submission of this claim would allow the claimants and relatives of the deceased to be compensated. By submitting a claim, the claimant waives the right to file or be a party to a civil action for damages that would result from the events on September 11, 2001. If an individual is a party to or has filed a civil action, that action must be withdrawn 90 days after the regulations regarding this Title are promulgated. 90 days after the date of enactment, the Attorney General, in consultation with the Secretary of Transportation, will promulgate regulations to carry out this compensation plan.

The Special Master may not include amounts for punitive damages in any compensation package. In addition, the Special Master will not consider negligence or any other theory of liability. Only one claim may be filed and no claim may be filed two years after the date of enactment. Twenty days after the Special Master makes a determination of the amount of compensation due, the payment is authorized.

Finally, Section 409(b) of the legislation creates a Federal cause of action for damages arising out of the hijacking and subsequent crashes of September 11, 2001. Thus, individuals who elect not to file a claim are entitled to compensation under this legislation. This Federal cause of action to claim damages. Of course, the availability of this new Federal action. In no way supersedes recourse to the victim compensation fund, if the claimant so elects.

To help in the effort of aiding victims in receiving compensation, the Association of Trial Lawyers of America, has volunteered to provide legal services of its members, free of charge, to the eligible claimants. I am attaching a copy of the letter to my statement. I commend the association for their extraordinary response to this extraordinary situation.

Mr. KIND. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this legislation. In this time of crisis, it is essential that our nation maintain a strong economy for the upcoming challenges we will inevitably face. Having a viable, healthy airline industry is an essential component of a strong American economy.

There are, however, certain flaws in this bill. For instance, there is no language providing for the many thousands of airline employees and their families who have been laid off. In addition, the provisions allowing for CEO compensation are questionable. How these currently unemployed workers receive nothing in this bill while CEO’s are specifically allowed continued compensation based on the previous year is unacceptable. That is not my idea of shared sacrifice to get us through this difficult period. I am forward to debating legislation that provides relief to the airline workers in the upcoming weeks ahead.

Further, there are no specific provisions addressing air transportation safety concerns, that would bolster passenger confidence, and revitalize the industry.

My support for this bill is based on my understanding that an agreement between Minority Leader GEPHARDT and Speaker HASTERT has been made, ensuring Congress will address the important issues in the near future. These issues must be addressed and based on the Speaker’s word, will be addressed.

Therefore, for the purposes of bipartisan unity, and based on the promise of future action on issues that will help those most hurt by this tragedy, I will support the legislation for the benefit of our Nation. A catch—employees may charge employees the full premium, plus an additional 2 percent. Lay-off airline workers thus face a Hobson’s choice between making ends meet and protecting their families against the risks of high healthcare bills. This legislation does nothing to save them from having to make that awful choice. At a minimum, we should ensure that part of this generous gift to the industry go toward guaranteeing these workers and their families continued health insurance coverage. I wish that my colleagues would develop the kind of compassion for working people that they have for corporations.

The Joint Economic Committee reports that the airline industry has lost $1 billion since this national crisis began. Yet, Congress plans to give the industry $5 billion to cover the incremental losses. This is an extra $4 billion in taxpayer funds that don’t need to be repaid and that don’t cover losses from last Tuesday’s catastrophe. We must also hold airlines accountable for any mismanagement they engaged in prior to these attacks. The bill before us does not ensure U.S. taxpayers that this is the case. Instead, it asks the Comptroller General Accounting Office to look at the funding allocation after Congress has already given them $20 billion. It will take a subsequent act of Congress to recover any overpayments to the airline industry. We must act responsibly now. We must hold the airlines accountable for their own shortcomings. More importantly, however, we must address the needs of airline employees first. These employees provide the foundation of the airline industry and must be taken into consideration before any CEO walks away with more than his fair share.

Votes on the Air Transportation System Stabilization Act.

Mrs. CHRISTENSEN. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the Air Transportation System Stabilization Act. While it doesn’t include everything I would have liked to have included in the bill, I nonetheless support its passage because I strongly agree that without immediate government financial support, many U.S. airlines will go bankrupt as a result of the September 11th attack.

As someone who represents a district, which is singularly dependent upon tourism to fuel our local economy, the lack of airline service has been devastating to us. As of September 18, 2001, after four days of virtually no check-ins and a severe drop in hotel room occupancy because of last week’s terrorist attack, layoffs and dramatic cutbacks have already hit hotels in the Virgin Islands. I believe Mr. Speaker that if we assist the airlines and keep the planes flying much of our economy will recover. We cannot afford to do otherwise or we will suffer even more.

As a member of the standing conference of the Travel and Tourism Caucus, I am particularly aware of the importance of the airline industry to tourism and to our overall economy. Like it or not, air transportation is the engine that drives our nation’s economy and it is essential in order to recover. We must ensure that we return to work and to normalcy. The staggering losses on Wall Street we saw this week illustrates the need for us to act and to act now.

We must also help those workers that will be and have been displaced because of last Tuesday’s attack. This body must pass legislation to provide additional unemployment compensation to laid-off workers and to extend their health insurance coverage.
The leadership in both the House and the Senate has pledged to address this issue very soon and I intend to do all I can to hold them to their word.

If we are to get the public flying again, however, we must address the security at our airports.

I call upon the President to call out the National Guard and the Reserve to have them man security at our airports until such time that we can create, or bring about, or create a federal airport security force, to as much as is possible, guarantee the safety of the flying public.

Is this a perfect bill? No it is not. Should we be assisting laid-off workers and other segments of our economy such as the hotel industry? Yes we most certainly should. But it is necessary that we act on this bill now, if we are to prevent a critical component of our economy from going out of business. Without the airlines flying there will be no guest to fill the hotels on St. Thomas and St. Croix. Nor cruise ship passengers to buy the gifts and products in our shops. Let us pass this bill and then also pass legislation to take care of our workers and provide for the safety of all passengers.

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. THORNBERRY). All time for debate has expired.

Pursuant to House Resolution 244, the bill is considered read for amendment, and the previous question is ordered.

The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the bill.

The bill was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was read the third time.

MOTION TO RECOMMIT OFFERED BY MR. DEFAZIO

Mr. DeFAZIO. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion to recommit.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is the gentleman opposed to the bill?

Mr. DEFAZIO. Mr. Speaker, I offer the motion to recommit.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is the gentleman opposed to the bill?

Mr. DeFAZIO. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself 1 minute and 15 seconds.

This does two simple things: I know I am going to hear, "The Senate didn’t include this. We can’t do it."

We can do it. We are the United States House of Representatives. We are the House of the people. We can add these simple provisions, these necessary provisions to this bill and the Senate, when they come back to town on Monday, can add them and we still beat the deadline the airlines have said they have of Wednesday.

It does two things: One, it says any airline that takes billions, or hundreds of millions, of dollars under this bill will have to carry the health insurance of employees they lay off for 18 months. I do not think that is too much to ask. That is the first provision.

The second provision says, and the airline CEOs who seem to be getting a lot here tonight agree with this, they said in committee they think screening should be federalized immediately; they just do not want to pay for it. I remove the provision that paid for it, so we would just in this bill federalize the screening, as the airline CEOs, the security experts, the FAA, all the experts say we need to do to get control.

Knives were taken through by a BATF agent in Miami this week. This week, were smuggled through. The screening is still not working. We need Federal control.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 45 seconds to the gentleman from California (Mr. G. MILLER).

Mr. GEORGE MILLER of California. I thank the gentleman for yielding time.

Mr. Speaker, this motion to recommit does two things: It deals with the health security of those workers who have been laid off, who are traumatized by the collateral damage through the horror we have witnessed. Secondly, it deals with what the American public wants us to deal. They are not flying. They want law enforcement officials there. They want law enforcement officials going by the system all of the time. They want it federalized, they want law enforcement officials there, and we ought to direct the FAA tonight to do it. Then we will start to see people get back on the airplanes.

We can talk about it. We can have commissions. We can have studies. This Congress ought to direct the FAA to do this, to federalize this air safety system in this country. Then people will fly again.

Mr. DeFAZIO. Mr. Speaker, I yield 45 seconds to the gentleman from Washington (Mr. INSLEE).

Mr. INSLEE. Mr. Speaker, I have tremendous respect for Speaker HASTERT whom I believe has done a great job showing a unified stand to the world in the last week. But I represent 20 to 30,000 Boeing employees. The one thing I can tell them is you just cannot ask them to eat good intentions. We cannot be sure that we are going to get anything out of this House except this vote tonight.

To my friends on this side of the aisle, let me suggest to you this to think about when you vote for this motion.

This does two things: It deals with the safety of the airline employees who are traumatized by the collateral damage through the horror we have witnessed. Secondly, it deals with what the American public wants us to do. They are not flying. They want law enforcement officials there. They want law enforcement officials going by the system all of the time. They want it federalized, they want law enforcement officials going by the system all of the time. They want it federalized, they want law enforcement officials there.

Mr. DeFAZIO. Mr. Speaker, I yield 45 seconds to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. DOGGETT).

Mr. DOGGETT. Let us face it, folks, the gentleman from Washington made a very good point. The motion to recommit leaves the whole question of security for the traveling public in a holding pattern. It is time to get it out of the holding pattern and bring it down to Earth. Because when you ask the American people tonight what their concerns are, it is, is it safe? Is it secure? Will somebody else be sneaking by the minimum wage employees that are out at the airport something that is unsafe?

This is the first measure considered on this floor that does something to address that concern. It will not hold this bill up a bit. Let us approve it and answer the basic concern of the American people. Flying is safe, it can be safe, if we are assured we have the security there and it is not somebody who is concerned with our most basic security who could not get a job somewhere else.

Mr. DeFazio. Mr. Speaker, I yield 45 seconds to the gentlewoman from Ohio (Mrs. Jones).

Mrs. Jones of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding time. In fact, we are talking about security for the people who ride on the planes and security as well for the workers who have been working for the airline industry for the past years. It is not much to ask to provide them some health care for 18 months. We have given the industry dollars, or we are giving the industry dollars to continue. It is not a lot to ask for security for the fliers and riders on the airplanes who are entrusting their lives and their families to the airline industry.

I ask my colleagues to vote with us on this motion to recommit. I ask them to vote for health care insurance for the workers. Vote for security for the fliers. Put it in the hands of the FAA.

Mr. DeFazio. Mr. Speaker, I yield 45 seconds to the gentleman from Washington (Mr. McDermott).

Mr. McDermott. Mr. Speaker, Las Vegas is offering tickets for $1 to come to Las Vegas, and nobody is taking them. Now, even the gamblers know that the planes are not safe; and we ought to do something, as we are doing with this motion to recommit. At a much more important than that, imagine what you would be like if you had a $15,000 or a $20,000 or $30,000 job and you suddenly lost your health insurance, and you had a kid who had some problems, or you had cancer, or you had a husband who had some problems, and you had no way in your unemployment insurance to pay for your COBRA.

When I left the State Department to run for Congress, I had to pick up my own under COBRA. Suddenly you have health insurance benefits and they cost $750 a month. You cannot do that on unemployment.

Vote for the resolution. Mr. DeFazio. Mr. Speaker, I yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Thornberry). The time of the gentleman from Oregon (Mr. DeFazio) has expired.

Does the gentleman from Alaska (Mr. Young) rise in opposition to the motion to recommit?

Mr. Young of Alaska. Absolutely, Mr. Speaker.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Alaska is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. Young of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, I yield 15 seconds to the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Weldon).

Mr. Weldon of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me time.

Mr. Speaker, we have just witnessed a very difficult, trying time in Washington. I know we cannot speak to the gallery, but tonight I hope our colleagues will join with me in recognizing one of our Urban Search and Rescue Teams from New Mexico, who are here observing our proceedings, for the great job they did at the Pentagon this past week.

Mr. Young of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to my good friend, the gentleman from California (Mr. Hunter), the chairman of the Committee on Ways and Means.

Mr. Thomas. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me time.

Mr. Speaker, first of all, this motion to recommit does have consequences. The unanimous consent under which the Senate took up the bill said that they would vote on the House bill if the House bill was identical to the Senate bill. The Senate has finished its deliberations under the assumption that the House bill will be identical to the Senate bill. This motion to recommit will negate the unanimous consent agreement.

I find it ironic that less than 24 hours after the President of the United States came here in a joint session and said this was a battle of freedom versus tyranny, we have just heard from a number of Members on the other side in arguing for this measure was fear.

I also find it ironic that a number of Members are upset that we are prolonging this debate because they want to catch planes to go home, and they are catching those planes because they believe they are safe, and they are going to fly, and they are going to fly back here for the next session, just as other people should. If, in fact, the attempt to pass a motion to recommit is based upon fear, they are wrong; and this motion should be defeated.

Secondly, the gentleman from Washington has made an urgent appeal that there are a number of people who are being laid off, and they should be taken care of in terms of their health care. This motion to recommit does not apply to a single Boeing employee. It refers very narrowly to any airline that takes a loan.

I hope to tell the gentleman from Washington and the gentleman from Oregon that we are working today to make sure that not just the airline employees who have suffered and are being laid off, but every American who is laid off, should have the ability to get assistance on their health insurance. It is true that under current law they have to pay the full cost of that, and what we are going to do is mitigate that cost, not just for the airline employees, but, beyond that, anyone else in the secondary industry or other aspects that get laid off. That is the least we should do. It is not in this bill, but we are going to do it.

Just let me say, Mr. Speaker, that this bill is not perfect. There are a number of flaws in it, and we are going to have to deal with amendments as they come down the pike. But putting this motion to recommit in this bill makes it a fatal flaw; one, in terms of the Senate’s unanimous consent agreement, but, secondly, why in the world are airline employees who are out of a job of any higher value than any other American who loses their job because of the consequences that we face?

Let us deal with this on a broad-based basis, and not on this motion to recommit.

Mr. Young of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, I yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. Mica), the chairman of the Subcommittee on Aviation.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Florida is recognized for 2 minutes.

Mr. Mica. Mr. Speaker, tonight we have to deal with facts. The provision in this bill of screening of passengers and properties is a smoke screen. This does not address the problem. Turning this responsibility over to somewhere between 18,000 and 27,000 new Federal aviation employees is not the answer, I can assure you.

What happened on September 11, we had turned over the responsibility to the Federal Aviation Administration. They did not have in place a rule or regulation or directive that stopped box-cutting knives or small knives to be on board airplanes.

The Speaker. Mr. Young would make a so-called go out of the screens. The screening process has been in limbo since we passed, in 1996, legislation directing FAA who they want to turn this over to, to get a rule out. It has taken 6 years, and today we have bill that does not have a certification of screens; and that is who they want to turn this responsibility over to.
The airlines, yes, they want to give up this responsibility, but they testified yesterday that they would continue to pay for that. They do not want the responsibility; but, yes, they will pay for it. So that is a bogus argument.

We are working on legislation. We are trying to craft legislation that will make the right decision, not knee-jerk decision, spending billions, like they did after the TWA 800 crash when they spent billions. And we heard testimony of equipment ordered by the Congress is sitting in warehouses not doing the job. So do not make the same mistake. Defeat the motion to recommit.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. All time for debate on the motion to recommit has expired.

Without objection, the previous question is ordered on the motion to recommit.

There was no objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 9 of rule XX, the Chair will reduce to 5 minutes the minimum time for any electronic vote on the question of final passage of the bill.

Mr. DeFazio. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the previous question, the motion to recommit was rejected.

Mr. Ortiz and Mr. Visclosky charged the vote from "aye" to "nay.

Mrs. Johnson of Connecticut. Mr. Delaney, Mr. Cramer, and Mrs. Northup changed their vote from "yay" to "nay.

So the motion to recommit was rejected.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. Thornberry). The question is on the passage of the bill.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. Young of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, on that I demand the yeas and nays.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 174, nays 28, not voting 17, as follows:

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE September 21, 2001

H. R. 2510. An Act to extend the expiration date of the Defense Production Act of 1950, and for other purposes.

LEGISLATIVE PROGRAM

(Mr. BONIOR asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Speaker, I would inquire of the distinguished majority leader the schedule for the remainder of the evening and next week.

Mr. ARMLEY. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. BONIOR. I yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. ARMLEY. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to announce that the House has completed its legislative business for the week. Let me say that again, Mr. Speaker: I am so very pleased that the House has completed its legislative business for the week.

The House will next meet for morning business on Monday, September 24, at 12:30 p.m. and 2 o'clock p.m. for legislative business. The House will consider a number of measures under suspension of the rules, and a continuing resolution.

On Monday, no recorded votes are expected before 6 o'clock p.m.

Mr. Speaker, on Tuesday and Wednesday, the House will consider the District of Columbia Appropriations Act, and I am also hopeful that the House will be able to complete consideration of H.R. 2586, the National Defense Authorization Act for fiscal year 2002.

On Wednesday, only if it is necessary for the House to be in session, we will complete the business for the week. No votes are expected past 2 o'clock p.m. on Wednesday.

Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Speaker, I thank my colleague for his information this evening. I would ask him two questions:

Number one, I gather from his remarks that we had a whole week of business on Monday. We had to work all day Monday. We want to give them every opportunity to get an early start on the West Coast. We want to give them every opportunity to work on the West Coast, so that if we finish the business of the House Tuesday, that we will be finished, so Members who need to get back for religious holidays will be able to do so.

Mr. ARMLEY. If the gentleman will continue to yield, Mr. Speaker, we are going to work as hard as we can, and in full cooperation, I am sure, with all the Members to try to complete our work on Tuesday night. Members need to be home by sundown, and sometimes that is California or someplace else on the West Coast. We want to give them every opportunity to get an early start in the morning so they can accomplish that.

Mr. BONIOR. I thank my colleague.

Finally, I would ask my friend, the gentleman from Texas, we had a

MESSAGES FROM THE SENATE

A message from the Senate by Mr. Monahan, one of its clerks, announced that the Senate has passed with amendments in which the concurrence of the House is requested, bills of the House of the following titles:

H. R. 2500. An Act making appropriations for the Departments of Commerce, Justice, and State, the Judiciary, and related agencies for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2002, and for other purposes.

The message also announced the Senate insists upon its amendment to the bill (H. R. 2500) “An Act making appropriations for the Departments of Commerce, Justice, and State, the Judiciary, and related agencies for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2002, and for other purposes” requests a conference with the House on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses thereon, and appoints Mr. HOLLINGS, Mr. INOUYE, Ms. MIKULSKI, Mr. LEAHY, Mr. KOHL, Mrs. BOND, Mr. REED, Mr. BYRD, Mr. GREGG, Mr. STEVENS, Mr. DOMENICI, Mr. MCCONNELL, Mrs. HUTCHISON, Mr. CAMPBELL, and Mr. COCHRAN, be the conferees on the part of the Senate.

The message also announced that the Senate has passed with an amendment in which the concurrence of the House is requested a bill of the House of the following title:

ANSWERED “PRESENT”—2

NOT VOTING—18

DeGette Kaptur
DeBenedetti Holden
Berman Dingell Issa
Buyer Fusuella Judd
Carson (IN) Gilmor Frye (OH)
Conyers Haley Schaffer
Cox Hobson Towns

□ 2306

So the bill was passed.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Stated for:

Mr. BUYER. Mr. Speaker, on rollcall number 348, the vote we just had, I inserted my card, pushed “yea” and left the Chamber only to learn from a colleague that I had not voted. I believed that I had voted. I came back in, and the record was closed. I would like for the record to indicate that I would have voted “yea” on rollcall number 348. I was present.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. YOUNG of Alaska. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks and to include extraneous material on H.R. 2925, the bill just passed. The SPEAKER pro tempore, Mr. THORNBERRY. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Alaska? There was no objection.

MOTION TO PROCEED TO GENERAL EXPERIENCE

Mr. ARMLEY. Mr. Speaker, I move that we proceed to the consideration of H.R. 2925, an act making appropriations for the Departments of Commerce, Justice, and State, the Judiciary, and related agencies for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2002, and for other purposes.

Do the agree?

The Bill was agreed to.

MOTION TO ALLOW DEBATE

Mr. ARMLEY. Mr. Speaker, I move that we allow debate on the amendment.

Mr. Speaker, I would ask unanimous consent that all Members be accorded 30 minutes for debate on the amendment. The Speaker would be authorized to arrange the order of debate.

Mr. Speaker, I understand that the gentleman from Texas, Mr. LANDSBERGER, has a statement which he asked to be placed in the Record.

Mr. Speaker, I would ask unanimous consent that all Members be accorded 30 minutes for debate on the amendment. The Speaker would be authorized to arrange the order of debate.

There was no objection.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.
September 21, 2001

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE 17651

lengthy debate today on the airline bill, and a good piece of that debate centered over the Speaker's commitment to the membership of this body on the benefits for workers that have lost their jobs from the airline disaster, and the airline industry's economic problems.

I am just interested, if the gentleman from Texas could enlighten us, and I do not expect they can have a complete answer here, given the fact that this was just done today, but when in fact we might expect action on legislation that was discussed on the floor in the colloquy between the Speaker and the leader.

Mr. ARMEY. If the gentleman will continue to yield, I thank the gentleman for the question, and just to be clear, while I took exact words earlier this evening were, and I quote, the committees of jurisdiction have already been examining proposals to assist in this area. We will take a comprehensive look at the health care needs of these displaced workers and work together to bring an appropriate legislative response to the floor as soon as possible.

It is my interpretation that by that the Speaker meant the committees of jurisdiction are working; and at whatever point they can report legislation, we would make the floor available for that legislation. I simply cannot speak for the committees' work.

Mr. BONIOR. I thank my colleague for that. I just want to encourage the gentleman from Texas and the rest of the leadership on the Republican side of the aisle to help expedite the hearing process and the committee process on this legislation. As I think the gentleman from Texas is aware, regrettably the numbers of laid-off workers have increased dramatically, especially, of course, in the airline industry; and we are probably going to see a fallout in some ancillary industries and other industries. I think it would be prudent, wise, and just to expect that we will move with some alacrity on these issues of health care, unemployment compensation, and, of course, training, when necessary.

It is not as if this is a difficult thing to do. It is pretty standard when we enter these economic downturns. And moving with some degree of speed on this would, I think, be appreciated, especially given the nature of the situation our country finds itself in today. So I will continue to raise this issue on a regular basis with respect, with urgency and with some passion. And I just want the gentleman to know that this is an issue that will be before us on many occasions as we go through these next weeks.

Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding.

I do have an inquiry of the majority leader. I do join the gentleman in the fervent hope we can complete our business for the week by Tuesday night. In the event that it was necessary for us to convene on Wednesday morning, could we convene at 9 a.m., in the hope that we could wrap up our business on Wednesday morning and not continue into Wednesday afternoon?

Mr. ARMEY. If the gentleman from Texas will yield.

Mr. BONIOR. Yield to the gentleman from Texas.

Mr. ARMEY. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for the inquiry. The gentleman makes a very good point, and I have to say, I think in full confidence, that as a matter of respect for our colleagues, should we have to proceed and to do such an unanimous consent request, I would guess that the gentleman would hear a resounding silence when asked if there were any objections. I appreciate the question.

Mr. SHERMAN. I thank the majority leader for doing everything possible to accommodate us.

ADJOURNMENT TO MONDAY. SEPTEMBER 24, 2001

Mr. ARMEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that the House adjourn for 5 minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker's announcement of policy of January 3, 2001, and under a previous order of the House, the following Members will be recognized for 5 minutes each.

AMERICANS FACING UGLY THREATS AT HOME

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. BONIOR) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Speaker, as America mourns its dead and ponders a day of sporting a global war on terrorism, some Americans are facing additional ugly threats here on the home front, and they are not from foreign terrorists but, regrettably, they are from fellow citizens.

Since the attacks on New York and Washington last week, many Arab Americans, Muslim Americans, Sikhs, and other Americans of South Asian heritage have become the targets of xenophobia and violence based solely on their faith, their heritage, or their choice of traditional clothing.

Mr. COOKSEY. Mr. Speaker, I was recently quoted as saying something that Sikhs, Muslims, and other Americans facing harassment and violence in this country took as offensive. I am sorry for any distress my statement caused, and I want them to know that I do not approve of any harassment or violence against any American. All I intended to say was that if a person fits the established profile of a terrorist, that person should expect to be looked at closely by airport security, given the atrocity of September 11.

Many Sikhs are being subjected to harassment due to their beards and turbaned heads, which are part of their religion. Americans of the Muslim faith are also receiving harassment. Sikhism is an independent, monothestic, revered religion. It is not part of any other religion, although Sikhs are sometimes mistaken for Muslims or Hindus. There are 21 million Sikhs in the world, most of whom live in the Punjab state of India. Approximately 500,000 live in the United States, and most are naturalized or American-born citizens. Most have contributed to all walks of life. Most of the people who wear turbans in this country are Sikhs.

There are many reasons Sikhs come to America, but mainly they come seeking freedom. To persecute them only weakens American unity at a time when our country is under attack.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to let the Sikhs, Muslims, and other Americans who are facing harassment and violence know that I do not condone such acts, that I stand shoulder to shoulder with them, and that I am on their side.

SPECIAL ORDERS

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. PLATTS). Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 3, 2001, and under a previous order of the House, the following Members will be recognized for 5 minutes each.
World Trade Center, and one a convenience store owner named Balbir Singh Sodhi was shot dead last week in Phoenix by an angry gunman calling himself a white supremacist. Sikhs are facing harassment and humiliation in our airports, and every American should deplore this backlash. It is morally repugnant.

Sadly, Mr. Speaker, Indian and Pakistani Americans died in the attacks; too; and they have become targets of retaliation in the aftermaths. In Dallas, a Pakistani Muslim grocer named Waqar Hassan was shot dead in a hate crime on Saturday.

In New Jersey, businesses owned by Indian Americans have been spray painted with crude epithets, warning them to leave town. Such intimidation is reminiscent of the KKK or Nazi Germany. It has no place in modern America, and we must stand with our neighbors in the face of such ignorance and hatred.

I am reminded of the remarks that were made on the floor of the House last Saturday morning between 12:45 and 2 a.m. in the morning when the gentlewoman from Illinois (Ms. SCHAKOWSKY) said on this floor in a comment or remarks that she made on the resolution, we had to condemn this kind of bigotry, that she was locking arms that weekend with religious leaders in the Chicagoland community, rabbis, ministers, priests, imams and others, and walking through the streets of her community in solidarity against this kind of repression and intimidation.

Mr. Speaker, mosques and temples have been vandalized, business owners shot and killed, school children taunted, and women attacked with stones and knives. As we have just heard from the gentlewoman from Louisiana (Ms. TAYLOR), there is a direct correlation between the violence that Sikhs face and the rhetoric that we hear. As we have just heard from Mr. TAYLOR, we have to stand strong.

Mr. Speaker, this runs directly against the very ideals that make our country great. It runs against the ideals of equality of tolerance of diversity and, yes, our own democracy. We are a Nation built by immigrants, a Nation that is greater, not weaker for the many people and cultures who proudly call it home, and we must stand united as one people in this difficult time and this time of crisis.

So I say to my friends and colleagues here in this Chamber, let us all stand united, join with your brothers and sisters of different faiths and races and nationalities and ethnicities and bind together and show your support for those who have been singled out unjustly.

America will prevail against terrorism, and we will prevail not just through the strength and the courage of our military but through the enduring strength of our most cherished principles. Only if we stand by our ideals and our neighbors will we successfully defend the Nation that we love.

HEALTH CARE FOR MILITARY RETIREES

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Mississippi (Mr. TAYLOR) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. TAYLOR of Mississippi. Mr. Speaker, I want to thank you for the opportunity to speak to the people tonight about the terrible tragedy that occurred a week ago Tuesday, about the terrible loss of life for not only people who serve in the military at the Pentagon, the folks that worked at the World Trade Center, the people on those airplanes, but the firefighters who lost their lives trying to save the lives of others. I think it has caused us all to reflect and hopefully appreciate more those people who work every day to look out for us.

It also brings to the mind the importance of rewarding those people who serve us, treating them well, paying them well, giving them the best possible equipment because as the President spoke last night, they will be called upon in the very near future.

One of the promises that has been made to those people for decades, certainly since World War II and in the Army recruiting those years all the way up to 1991, was a promise of free lifetime health care if they served their country honorably for 20 years or more in the military.

Mr. Speaker, I regret to inform my fellow citizens that because of the failure of an agreement between the Department of Defense and Medicare, those military retirees who were hoping to take that benefit to a military treatment facility will probably be turned away on October 1.

I say I regret that because, as we probably know, more than half of our Nation's military retirees have chosen to retire near a military treatment facility. That is their family. We as a Nation asked them to leave their parents, leave their loved ones to go to places like Vietnam, Persian Gulf, Panama. We are getting ready to ask them to go to places like Afghanistan.

In doing so, for many of them, they lose the ability to maintain their nuclear family, so their family becomes the Air Force, the Marines, the Army, the Navy.

Since they were 18 years old, they were told they could go to a military treatment facility; but now because of the draw-down in the Department of Defense, there are not as many doctors as there used to be, and because the defense budget is tight, the Department of Defense made the decision that for those who have reached the age of 65, you cannot go to the base hospital anymore. You have got to find a private sector doctor. You have got to leave the country, I think it is tragic.

Again, over half of our Nation's military retirees intentionally bought a home near a base so they could use that base hospital, and now the same Nation that can provide $16 billion in foreign aid, the same Nation that can waive the budget rules to bail out the airlines, give their corporate executives 20 and $30 million a year to run those companies into the ground, the same Nation that can spend money left and right, waiving the rules anytime they feel like it for those who really have not earned it to this extent are going to tell our Nation's military retirees that because you do not fit quite right into the budget we cannot find the money for you.

Mr. Speaker, I am asking for an amendment that has already passed this House overwhelmingly about a year ago right now. There were 406 of my colleagues who voted to say to our Nation's military retirees that they could continue to use that base hospital and that Medicare is going to reimbursement that base hospital for their care. After all, the sailors, the soldiers, the Marines, the airmen paid their Medicare taxes just like everybody else; and if it is their choice to go to a military treatment facility, then that is where they ought to be able to go.

Unfortunately, the law now blocks them from doing so. We sent that bill over to the Senate; and unfortunately the Senate chose to take our language that says they have to do it and said to Medicare, they may do it, they can reach an agreement if they feel like it. Well, the bureaucrats at Medicare did not feel like it; and so now our soldiers, our sailors, our airmen, our coast guardsmen, they are the ones that have to suffer.

Mr. Speaker, I am asking for a real simple thing on the defense authorization bill next week. I am asking for an opportunity for this House to speak in favor of fulfilling the promise of lifetime health care to our Nation's military retirees and a Nation that is going to find $320 billion to defend itself that just last week spent an additional $40 billion on defense, one would think we could find a hundred million or so to do that for our Nation's military retirees.

I am particularly disturbed, Mr. Speaker, that you have put the word out that if I so much as ask for this amendment, that the Speaker of the House says he will not allow that bill to take place at all.
Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for 2 additional minutes.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair cannot entertain that request.

Mr. TAYLOR of Mississippi. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

HEALTH CARE FOR MILITARY RETIREES

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. PLATTS). Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Hawaii (Mr. ABERCROMBIE) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. ABERCROMBIE. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Mississippi.

Mr. TAYLOR of Mississippi. I would like to thank my colleagues from Hawaii and my other colleagues for bearing with me.

Mr. Speaker, the point I want to make is, I wish this Member had the power to keep some bills from coming to the House floor. I wish I could have kept NAFTA from coming to the floor because it has lost so many jobs for my fellow Mississippians and every American. I wish I could have kept portions of that tax bill that saw to it that half of the $1.2 trillion in benefits went to the wealthiest fat cats in America, not the average Joes.

Mr. Speaker, if you can find the time and waive the rules to give the fat cats a tax break, you can find the time and you can waive the rules to let our military retirees go to the base hospitals. I am asking for an up or down vote. Be a decent human being and give us that vote.

Mr. ABERCROMBIE. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

REGARDING ASPECTS OF SEPTEMBER 11 EVENTS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from California (Mr. SHERMAN) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. SHERMAN. Mr. Speaker, I thank my colleagues. I am due on a TV broadcast that starts rather soon. I know some recent reports. But he only wondered how much worse it would be in any other country in the world for any other minority group. And, in fact, in our own country in the 1940s, we did not act with the same level of respect and tolerance that we are showing today.

Let us remember that America is not anti-Muslim and not anti-Islam. In fact, the last three military engagements of the United States were for the purpose of defending Muslim people. We restored the independence of Kuwait. We then went on to save the Bosnian Muslims from genocide. And then we bombed a Christian country, Serbia, because of what Serbia tried to do to its Albanian minority. And, now, American and NATO troops are engaged in Macedonia for the purpose of achieving a just result for the Albanian Muslims who are a minority in that country. So let us not only condemn every act of intolerance, but let us applaud an overwhelming majority of Americans who are acting with tolerance even at a time when emotions run high.

Let me comment on those who suggest that we modify our foreign policy in the Middle East in order to placate Osama bin Laden, the Taliban, and other extremists. These calls do no honor to the greatest generation and its response to Pearl Harbor. After Pearl Harbor, there were some who suggested that we would have to do was change our foreign policy in the Far East, allow Japan to conquer all of China, and then we could avoid conflict. Instead, the greatest generation made the greatest sacrifices to win the greatest victory. It would be a dishonor to that generation for us to act any differently now that we have suffered the greatest loss of American life on American soil since our Civil War, a loss of life two to three times what we suffered at Pearl Harbor.

But not only is appeasement dishonorable, it is also, in this case, impossible. Because what motivated Osama bin Laden was a hatred for the fact that American troops are somehow "defiling" the soil of Arabia by being stationed there in defense of the Saudi and Kuwaiti regimes. Remember that if those soldiers were not there, Saddam Hussein would control not only Kuwait but also Saudi Arabia, also the Emirate states, and 70 percent of the world's oil reserves. But even a withdrawal of American soldiers from the Arabian peninsula would not be enough. It would just whet the appetite of Osama bin Laden, who will not rest until we have done even more. So a moderately pro-American is displaced and killed, including the entire Saudi royal family.

But even that would not placate bin Laden, who would demand what Arafat is demanding with regard to Palestinian-Israeli relations but the total destruction of 5 million Israelis. But even that would only whet his appetite. Bin Laden will not rest until every girl in every part of the world is kicked out of school, until the concept of female illiteracy is enshrined worldwide. I do not think that appeasement of bin Laden is possible. But even if it were, if you can change American foreign policy in the Mideast by an act of great terror, then what about those who disagree with our policy in Colombia or Kosovo, Macedonia, Sumatra, Sri Lanka or Taiwan? If we establish the policy that terrorists can change our foreign policy, then every terrorist will try to control the only superpower by an act of super terror.

We must stand by our friends in the Middle East and show that we cannot be controlled by terrorists.

ASSISTING AIRLINES AND AIRLINE EMPLOYEES

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. PLATTS). Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON-LEE) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Speaker, many times the legislative process proceeds as the American people watch, and there is sometimes much confusion. There is no obligation for any of us to take the added time that this House sometimes does not allow to be able to discuss a very important subject.

Because I come from an area that is heavily impacted, as I would imagine most of my colleagues, by the legislation that we have just passed, I believe it is important to discuss extensively in the brief time that I have, or at least broadly, the legislation that dealt with the Air Transportation System Stabilization Act that was debated today.

For the first time it appeared, since the heinous acts of September 11, 2001, that many Americans might say they were back to business as usual. There was a divided debate, I consider it a healthy debate, on the approach that we should take for something that all of us agreed with, that is, to provide assistance to the airline industry pursuant to the Federal actions that were taken on September 11, 2001, heinous terrorist actions.

We, the United States Government, grounded the airlines of America. Certainly we have the responsibility to compensate them for Federal actions that resulted in large losses of revenue. At the same time, let me say to the American people that that grounding also took into account the safety of

Asking for Common Sense and Reason

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentlewoman from Georgia (Ms. MCKINNEY) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Ms. MCKINNEY. Mr. Speaker, our Armed Forces are poised to conduct military strikes in foreign lands. My own State of Georgia is contributing significantly to our overseas forces, with troops being committed from the 116th Bomber Wing, the 117th Air Control Squadron, the 239th MP Company from Fort Stewart in Augusta, and the 224th Joint Communications Support Squadron, the 117th Air Refueling Wing, and the 224th Civil Engineer Battalion from Fort Benning.

And I have no doubt that men of the elite 75th Ranger Battalion from Fort Benning are currently or soon will be deploying overseas.

Our Nation suffered a terrible injury last week with the attacks in New York, Washington, D.C., and Pennsylvania. Many thousands of our innocent civilians were unjustly taken from their families and loved ones, and we as a Nation must now respond. But just how we should do that, both internationally and domestically, is now giving rise to considerable debate.

We have heard the Bush Administration's call to arms to fight the first war of the 21st century. I understand that our military resources are soon to be turned against not just the terrorists responsible for last week's attack, but international terrorism generally. Our intelligence agencies have allegedly identified terrorist cells in some 60 countries, and that whether or not Afghanistan actually surrenders Osama bin Laden, the alleged mastermind of last week's attacks, our military intends on fighting a long and bitter worldwide campaign against international terrorism in more than 60 countries, or, as Secretary of Defense Rumsfeld has done this week, we intend to drain the swamp.

I understand a draft bill, which is the first of a far larger package of anti-terror legislation, is now circulating on Capitol Hill, and I am told it proposes giving law enforcement the power to detain non-U.S. citizens for indefinite periods without charge, giving immigration authorities greater and accelerated powers to deport non-U.S. citizens, and, at the same time, curtailing rights of non-U.S. citizens to judicial review and appeal.

Many of these reforms that the Bush Administration is now proposing are the very same types of state powers that we routinely criticize other nations for possessing. The Department's annual Human Rights Report. I am greatly concerned that we are about to engage in an extremely hazardous military campaign of unknown duration with unrealistic objectives and perhaps with ultimately harmful long-term consequences for our Nation.

Already, there is disquiet in the Muslim world that the U.S. is poised to turn its terrorist campaign into a war against Islam. The Bush Administration has already had to change the name of the military mission once when it used term “crusade,” and now it has got to change the name again, because it used the term “Infinite Justice,” and that is offensive to our Muslim communities.

All of these gaffs feed the growing Muslim fear that the expanding U.S. military action could become a broader campaign against them.

Mr. Speaker, I know I do not need to address the impending catastrophe should large sections of the world’s 1.2 billion Muslims unify and turn against the United States. It would be ironic indeed if we as a Nation destroyed democracy in the name of saving democracy. But before we grant more powers and massive resources to our law enforcement, military and intelligence communities, we should be examining why they did not detect the threat of these and other attacks, especially since we have been told that the attacks last week were sophisticated, involved many people over a considerable period of time, and maybe even involved the assistance of a foreign government.

We should know or should have known that bin Laden was capable of attacking our major cities. Just 7 months ago, during the trial of suspect, accused of involvement in bombings in Africa, Federal prosecutors detailed the bin Laden network in open court. Details of bin Laden’s business... and financial history, his international terror network, as well as his hatred for America, were all systematically disected by Federal prosecutors.

Given these revelations, it was clear, or it should have been clear, that our Nation and our citizens were in grave danger. I do not understand how intelligence services have the ability to penetrate, analyze and publicly distribute in Laden's alleged cellular phone traffic in the hours immediately after the bombings. From these conversations, we learned of bin Laden's alleged celebrations with supporters. But in stark contrast, over the same period of months, they were not able to intercept bin Laden's planning or preparations for the attacks. I am also deeply concerned that recent reports in the press of specific, credible and quite extraordinary warnings of terrorist attacks on our citizens, which were ignored by our government, and some of these warnings directly referred to the use of hijacked aircraft attacking the World Trade Center.

For example, the L.A. Times reported on September 20, 2001, that Mossad, the Israeli intelligence service, had warned the FBI and the CIA that a major terrorist force of some 200 individuals were entering the U.S.

The Guardian Newspaper from the Murdoch Group reported on Monday, September 17, that a man in the Cayman Islands wrote to U.S. authorities on August 29 and warned them that he had overheard three Afghan men in a bar talking about impending attacks on the United States. The CIA is said to have followed up on the attack, but apparently did not take it any further. Then it is also reported that a week later, an Iranian in Hamburg, Germany, contacted police and warned them about impending terrorist attacks against the United States using hijacked planes.

Tragically, I am forced to say, this does not appear to be the first time our intelligence services have been caught flat-footed. Earlier this year, Jamal Ahmed al-Fadl, a former aid to Osama bin Laden, while testifying in New York about the 1998 bombings of the U.S. embassies in Kenya and Tanzania, said that he told U.S. officials that bin Laden's group was trying to make a war on the United States. Similarly, Prudence Bushnell, the U.S. Ambassador in Nairobi, warned the State Department of the poor security of her embassy in Nairobi. Regrettably, these warnings were initially ignored. Not surprisingly, our government now finds itself subject to civil actions by survivors and family representatives of those killed in the U.S. embassy bombings in Africa.

Despite the combined assets of our Nation's law enforcement, military intelligence agencies charged with fighting terrorism over the last 10 to 15 years, and we have budgets worth billions and billions of dollars, space-age technology that most countries would just dream of having; and despite our ability to sustain the terrible attacks upon our military, our cities, our warships, our embassies.

In my view, the problem is not one of resources, but of a failure of implementation on a scale that should shame us. But what frustrates me most is that no one in a position of leadership in our Nation has yet to seriously ask why our Nation has been attacked in this way. Why have our cities, our embassies and our military forces been systematically targeted by terrorist organizations? Why is it that our Nation and its people are being attacked in these ways? Our politicians and political observers have, for years, been willing to analyze and discuss about the IRA in England, the Shining Path in Peru, the Red Brigade in Italy; but now that it has come home, all of a sudden, we failed to analyze and ask the question, why did it happen.

Secretary of State Colin Powell is absolutely right. We must give diplomacy a chance. We must honestly ask ourselves, what is the root cause of this war being waged on our people and our country? I suspect that we will need to look at altering some of our foreign policy positions. Unless we do this, I fear that a military campaign, unsupported by sound foreign policy strategies, will only cause immeasurable civilian suffering throughout the world and may well actually lead to more terrifying attacks upon our cities and our citizens.

I would ask our President to sidestep those Rambo's in the Pentagon who are talking about using nuclear weapons. Now is not the time for us to be talking about using nuclear weapons. We need to free our Secretary of State to do his job, and I know he can do it.

Finally, I pray that common sense and reason will prevail.

AMENDMENTS

Under clause 8 of rule XVIII, proposed amendments were submitted as follows:

[Omitted from the Record of September 20, 2001]

H. R. 2891

OFFERED BY: Mr. ANDREWS

AMENDMENT No. 1: At the end of title I of the bill, add the following:

SEC. ___. ASSISTANCE FOR CHAUFFEURED GROUND TRANSPORTATION COMPANIES.

(a) In General.—Before providing assistance to air carriers under section 101, the President may set aside a portion of the sums made available to provide such assistance for providing assistance to chauffeured ground transportation companies that incurred losses as a result of the terrorist attacks on the United States that occurred on September 11, 2001.

(b) Eligibility.—A chauffeured ground transportation company shall be eligible for assistance under subsection (a) if, in the 3-year period ending on the date of enactment of this Act, the company derived at least 50 percent of its revenues from providing transportation to or from an airport.

(c) Types of Assistance.—In providing assistance under this section, the President is authorized—

(1) to subject to such terms and conditions as the President deems necessary, to extend lines of credit and make guarantees and loans to chauffeured ground transportation companies; and

(2) to compensate chauffeured ground transportation companies for losses incurred by the companies as a direct result of the attacks.

(d) Chauffeured Ground Transportation Company Defined.—In this section, the term “chauffeured ground transportation company” means a company that provides transportation reliant upon a motor vehicle used in the business of carrying passengers for hire to provide prearranged passenger transportation at a premium fare on a dedicated, nonscheduled, charter basis that is not conducted on a regular route and with a seating capacity in no event more than 15 passengers, including the driver. This shall not include taxicabs, hotel, or airport shuttles and buses.

H. R. 2926

OFFERED BY: Mr. HASTINGS OF FLORIDA

AMENDMENT No. 1: At the end of the bill, add the following new title:

TITLE V—ANCILLARY AIRLINE INDUSTRIES

SEC. 501. RELIEF FROM LOSSES RESULTING FROM TERRORIST ATTACKS.

(a) In General.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the President shall take the following actions to compensate business concerns in the ancillary airline industry for incremental losses incurred by the business concerns as a result of the terrorist attacks on the United States that occurred on September 11, 2001.

(b) Compensation.—Under subsection (a), the President shall compensate business concerns in an aggregate amount equal to $4,000,000,000 for incremental losses incurred beginning September 11, 2001, and ending December 31, 2001, by the business concerns as a direct result of such attacks.

(c) Emergency Designation.—Congress designates the amount of new budget authority and outlays in all fiscal years resulting from this title as an emergency requirement pursuant to section 252(e) of the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985 (2 U.S.C. 901(e)). Such amount shall be available only to the extent that a request, that includes designation of such amount as an emergency requirement as defined in such Act, is transmitted by the President to Congress.

SEC. 502. SPECIAL RULES FOR COMPENSATION.

(a) Documentation.—The amount of compensation payable to a business concern in the ancillary airline industry under section 501 may not exceed the amount of losses described in section 501 that the business concern demonstrates to the satisfaction of the President, using sworn financial statements or other appropriate data, that the business concern incurred.

(b) Payments.—The President may provide compensation to business concerns under section 501 in 1 or more payments up to the amount authorized by this title.

SEC. 503. REPORTS.

(a) Report.—Not later than February 1, 2001, the President shall transmit to the Committee on Transportation and Infrastructure, the Committee on Appropriations, and the Committee on the Budget of the House of Representatives and the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation, the Committee on Appropriations, and the Committee on the Budget of the Senate a report on the financial status of the ancillary airline industry and the amounts of assistance provided under this title to business concerns.

(b) Update.—Not later than the last day of the 7-month period following the date of enactment of this Act, the President shall update and transmit the report to the Committees.

SEC. 504. DEFINITIONS.

In this title, the following definitions apply:

(1) Ancillary Airline Industry.—The term “ancillary airline industry” means business concerns whose ability to derive revenues are directly affected by the airline industry, including travel agencies, car rental companies operating at airports, and other business concerns identified by the President, in consultation with the Secretary of Transportation.

(2) Incremental Loss.—The term “incremental loss” does not include any loss that the President determines would have been incurred if the terrorist attacks on the United States that occurred on September 11, 2001, had not occurred.

[Omitted from the Record of September 20, 2001]

SEC. ___. No funds appropriated in this Act may be made available to any person or entity that violates the Buy American Act (41 U.S.C. 10a–10c).
PAYING TRIBUTE TO MICHAEL REYELTS

HON. SCOTT McINNIS
OF COLORADO
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, September 21, 2001

Mr. McINNIS. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity and pay tribute to Michael Reyelts for his significant contributions to our educational system. Mr. Reyelts teaches English as a second language to students at the Colorado Mountain College in Rifle, Colorado. Through his lessons, he not only teaches English, but he also educates students on how to adapt to American society. He has been a positive influence on many members of our community.

Mr. Reyelts studied Spanish while attending high school and mastered the language while on a two-year church mission to Argentina, where he worked both in cities and in remote areas. Upon returning from Argentina, he attended Brigham Young University where he studied secondary education and English as a second language. In 1999, Michael received his masters in education with an emphasis in English as a second language.

Dozens of students attend his classes three nights a week. Michael has adopted a style of teaching that has proven to be very successful. He creates a comfortable atmosphere within the classroom by joking around with his students and making them feel at ease in what can be a stressful situation. His instruction certainly contains grammar lessons but Michael also tries to stress a practical understanding of the English language that his students will hear in every day life. Michael Reyelts does not stop simply at teaching the English language. He also relates current events to his students as a means of providing examples for understanding the English language.

Mr. Speaker, Michael Reyelts truly cares about his students and provides them with the valuable skills that increase their confidence and provide them more opportunities to reach their goals. I would like to thank him for his commitment to such an important cause and congratulate him on his achievements.

TO HONOR MS. LINDA MAZON-GUTIERREZ AS A RECIPIENT OF THE 12TH ANNUAL PROFILES OF SUCCESS HISPANIC LEADERSHIP AWARD

HON. ED PASTOR
OF ARIZONA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, September 21, 2001

Mr. PASTOR. Mr. Speaker, I rise before you today to recognize a special individual who was honored for her leadership qualities and service to her community. On September 5th, Ms. Linda Mazon-Gutierrez was honored by her peers at the Annual Profiles of Success Hispanic Leadership Awards presentation in Phoenix, Arizona. This event, coordinated by Valle del Sol, a local non-profit community based organization, kicks off National Hispanic Heritage Month in Arizona and is now in its twelfth year of honoring worthy individuals.

Honored in the category of Exemplary Leadership, Ms. Mazon-Gutierrez, of Tucson, Arizona, was recognized for her dedication to advancing the growth and development of the Hispanic community through her work in various national and community organizations. She is a long time health care official currently serving as the Intergovernmental Administrator for the Arizona Health Care Cost Containment System (AHCCCS). In addition, she chairs the Board of Directors for the National Hispana Leadership Institute (NHLI) and is president of the Arizona Hispanic Women's Corporation. She is also a member of the Arizona Mexico Commission, the Arizona Children's Alliance Advisory Board, and the Tucson Chicanos Por La Causa Advisory Board.

Through her dedicated work in these organizations she improves the lives of her fellow Arizonans and Latinos. Mr. Speaker, please join me in recognizing Ms. Linda Mazon-Gutierrez, who truly serves as a role model and inspiration to those dedicated to serving their community.

TRIBUTE TO MARVIN WESTMORE AND THE WESTMORE ACADEMY OF COSMETIC ARTS

HON. GARY G. MILLER
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, September 21, 2001

Mr. MILLER of California. Mr. Speaker, I rise to pay tribute and honor the accomplishments of Marvin Westmore and the Westmore Academy of Cosmetic Arts.

Marvin Westmore, founder of the Westmore Academy of Cosmetic Arts, is a long-time supporter of numerous community programs such as the Boy Scouts of America, Avon breast cancer research, Starlight Children's Foundation, Golden Acres Adult Day Health Center, Beautiful People Awards for the Boys and Girls Clubs of America, local community high school fund raising programs, Grossman Burn Center and many other worthy endeavors.

Mr. Westmore, a pioneer in the field of medical cosmetics, has used his expertise to develop special make-up products and application techniques. He has trained thousands of students to help disfigured patients normalize their appearance and regain their self-confidence. Students in need of financial assistance are awarded full scholarships and given supplies at the finest make-up artists schools in the world, enabling them to realize their lifelong dream of becoming professional make-up artists.

I salute the outstanding efforts of Mr. Westmore and sincerely thank him for the vital and compassionate service which he has provided for those less fortunate in his community.

IN HONOR OF CAROL MAHLER, RECIPIENT OF UNITED WAY’S CONGRESSWOMAN MARY T. NORTON MEMORIAL AWARD

HON. ROBERT MENENDEZ
OF NEW JERSEY
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, September 21, 2001

Mr. MENENDEZ. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to congratulate Carol Mahler, a recipient of United Way’s Congresswoman Mary T. Norton Memorial Award. The award, which was created by the United Way of Hudson County in 1990, pays tribute to women who demonstrate an unwavering commitment to community service as exemplified by Congresswoman Norton during her 13 terms in the U.S. House of Representatives (1925–1950). Ms. Mahler will receive this award of Tuesday, September 25, 2001, at the Meadowlands Crowne Plaza Hotel in Secaucus, New Jersey.

Carol Mahler currently serves as Executive Director of the Visiting Homemaker Service of Hudson County (VHS). As Executive Director of this organization, she manages three facilities in Hudson County that provide nursing supervision and social services to individuals in need of short- or long-term health care assistance. In supervising the operations and activities of VHS of Hudson County, she is dedicated to ensuring that the elderly and those in need of nursing supervision are provided with quality health care services.

Ms. Mahler has an extensive and comprehensive background in providing nursing services. A 24-year veteran of the VHS staff, she holds nursing degrees from New York University, where she received the Dean’s Award for Leadership.

Outside of her commitments to VHS, Carol Mahler is an active participant in numerous health associations. She serves as Vice President of the Board of Directors for the Home Heath Assembly of New Jersey and is a Member of the Commission on Accreditation for Home Care University, a subsidiary of the National Association for Home Care in Washington, D.C. In addition, she is a Member of the Board for the Hudson Prenatal Consortium.

Mr. Speaker, I ask my colleagues to join me in honoring Carol Mahler for the outstanding... health care services that she has provided to the people of Hudson County. Through her efforts, the quality of life for many New Jersey residents has vastly improved.

RECOGNITION OF DORA MENCHACA-DORSEY’S DEATH

HON. HILDA L. SOLIS
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, September 21, 2001

Ms. SOLIS. Mr. Speaker, I join Congressman HENRY WAXMAN to acknowledge the death of Dora Menchaca-Dorsey. Her death has brought great sorrow to family members in both of our districts.

Dora Menchaca-Dorsey, was an unfortunate victim of American Airlines Flight 77 which crashed into the Pentagon on September 11, 2001. Had Dora Menchaca-Dorsey taken the later flight on which she was scheduled, she would have returned safely home to her husband, Earle Dorsey and 5-year-old son. Her daughter, Imani, was away at college in Oregon. Due to the airport shutdowns at the time, Imani Dorsey, drove from Portland to Los Angeles to be with her family. Ms. Menchaca-Dorsey also leaves behind a brother in San Gabriel.

Sadly, Dora Menchaca-Dorsey’s life was cut short while she was working to save the lives of others. Ms. Menchaca-Dorsey was in Washington, DC attending a briefing with the Food and Drug Administration on medical developments for patients with prostate cancer. She was a dedicated scientist who worked tirelessly to find a cure for some of today’s deadliest diseases. Ironically, amidst such death, her co-workers remember her laughter and energy. She could also be maternal towards others, urging them to get regular health-care check-ups. Her husband, Earle Dorsey says he owns his life to his wife. Because of her insistence, his prostate cancer was diagnosed at an early stage.

She also gave back to the community. Proud of her Mexican-American heritage, Dora Menchaca-Dorsey often visited schools to encourage students, especially minorities and girls, to pursue careers in the sciences. That is how we should all remember her.

Menchaca-Dorsey was an energetic and dedicated individual who believed in and lived to find a cure for the diseases plaguing society. She was also a giving and loving wife and mother to her two children. Let us celebrate her memory.

REGARDING THE DEATH OF JULIAN HESTER

HON. BOB BARR
OF GEORGIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, September 21, 2001

Mr. BARR of Georgia. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize and pay tribute to Julian Hester, CEO, Community Bankers Association of Georgia, who passed away on September 4, 2001 after a long battle with cancer.

Julian was a native of Washington, Georgia. Upon graduation from Washington High School, he received a scholarship and attended the University of Georgia where he earned a bachelor’s degree in business administration. Following graduation in 1955, he began his long and illustrious banking career with Farmers and Merchants Bank in his hometown of Washington. While at the bank, Julian graduated from the University of Georgia School of Banking. Later, in 1979, he served a term as president of the Community Bankers Association of Georgia. After serving more than 15 years with Farmers and Merchants Bank, he became president of Habersham Bank in Clarksville, Georgia, where he served for nearly 12 years.

During the early 1980’s Julian worked for a large Southeastern correspondent bank, and recognized the need for a correspondent bank in Georgia. In 1984, he organized the Georgia Bankers Bank which currently serves more than 800 community financial institutions across the Southeast. The following year, he began lobbying for the Community Bankers Association of Georgia, and in 1986 joined the staff as Executive Director/CEO.

As a well-respected lobbyist for more than two decades, Julian expanded the Association to include important services for its member banks, such as educational programs, group services and a strong system of inter-bank networking. Currently, the Association has more than 200 associate members and 330 community bank members statewide.

In addition to his incredible dedication and commitment to community banking, Julian was also very active in several business and civic organizations, and served in many leadership positions. He was a past president of the Independent Bankers Association of America’s National Association of State Independent Banking Association Executives, and the Northeast Georgia Chapter of the Bankers Administration Institute. He also served as vice-president, treasurer and president of his local Georgia Jaycees chapter, and president of the Rotary Club of Habersham County. He was an active member and a deacon of Bethlehem Baptist Church in Clarksville.

TO HONOR ELIÁS AND CECILIA ESQUER, RECIPIENTS OF THE 12TH ANNUAL PROFILES OF SUCCESS HISPANIC LEADERSHIP AWARD

HON. ED PASTOR
OF ARIZONA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, September 21, 2001

Mr. PASTOR. Mr. Speaker, I rise before you today to recognize two outstanding citizens who have been honored for their leadership qualities and service to their community. On September 5th, Elías and Cecilia Esquer were honored by their peers at the Annual Profiles of Success Hispanic Leadership Awards presentation in Phoenix, Arizona. This event, coordinated by Valle del Sol, a local non-profit community based organization, kicks off National Hispanic Heritage Month in Arizona and is now in its twelfth year of honoring worthy individuals.

Honored in the Hall of Fame category, Mr. and Mrs. Esquer were recognized for their extensive civic involvement and service to their community. Together, they have served on various federal, state and local boards and commissions supporting educational, legal, and artistic advancement. They have been instrumental in creating the Arizona Association of Chicano in Higher Education and the Hispanic Convocation at Arizona State University. Their work has been instrumental in creating various educational programs and they have dedicated countless hours towards mentoring students, staff and faculty members at colleges and universities throughout Arizona.

Mr. Speaker, please join me in recognizing these outstanding citizens for their fine work and dedication. Through their work they have earned the respect and admiration of their community and peers.

POEM BY BRITTNI BATES
HON. JOHN J. DUNCAN, JR. OF TENNESSEE
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Friday, September 21, 2001

Mr. DUNCAN. Mr. Speaker, I am amazed at the many heroic and kind deeds that we have seen since the horrible terrorist attacks of September 11.

The Nation has developed a unity of spirit and patriotism such as I have never seen in my lifetime.

This spirit has been captured in a beautiful way in a poem written by one of my constituents, Brittni Bates. This poem, entitled “United We Stand,” is even more impressive, considering it was written by a 13-year-old middle school student.

This Nation would be a much better place if we had more young people like Brittni Bates, and I would like to call her poem to the attention of my colleagues and other readers of the Congressional Record.

United We Stand
Blood was shed for this land, many men took a stand. Now, again we unite. Now . . . again we must fight.
We will protect our nation, and protect our civilization. Freedom was won with a heavy price. Now again we must roll the dice.
United we stand for our land. So now we come to pray, to our Lord and nation, we will obey. The deaths of those were pointless and cruel. United we stand to protect our land. To banish hate and not discriminate. And reclaim the declaration to our nation.

Terrorists beware! You have gone too far! For United We Stand To Protect Our Land.
God Bless America, Home of the Brave.
—by Brittni N. Bates, age 13, Holston Middle School

JUVENILE JUSTICE AND DELINQUENCY PREVENTION ACT OF 2001

SPEECH OF HON. BENJAMIN A. GILMAN OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Thursday, September 20, 2001

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of H.R. 1900, the Juvenile Crime Control and Delinquency Prevention Act of 2001 which amends current juvenile crime policy and provides quality prevention and accountability programs relating to juvenile delinquency.

Regrettably, juvenile crime is a growing problem in our country. Today’s teenagers account for the largest portion of all violent crimes; offenders under the age of 18 commit more than one-fifth of all violent crime. Furthermore, the Federal Bureau of Investigations (FBI) estimates that murders committed by juveniles will increase by 145%, forcible rapes by 66%, and aggravated assaults by 129% by the year 2010 as the number of juveniles increases dramatically.

In the wake of the rash of school shootings which our nation has endured over the past few years, I believe it is more important than ever to protect our children and communities from violence. Accordingly, H.R. 1900 will expand existing after-school programs for at-risk youngsters as well as providing innovative treatment for juvenile offenders.

H.R. 1900 will also fund programs related to the organization and maintenance of school violence hotlines and programs designed to reduce the unlawful acquisition and illegal use of guns by juveniles. This program directs much-needed resources to a social issue in which all Americans have a stake. Our children are the future of our country. Let us give them the tools and guidance to resist criminal activity and to improve their lives. Accordingly, I urge my colleagues to support H.R. 1900.

TRIBUTE TO JOHN N. HARDEE
HON. JAMES E. CLYBURN OF SOUTH CAROLINA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Friday, September 21, 2001

Mr. CLYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to John N. Hardee of South Carolina, who is a respected member of the South Carolina Transportation Commission for the 2nd Congressional District. He has been a member of the Transportation Commission since 1997. Mr. Hardee’s career achievements and accomplishments exemplify his extraordinary contributions to the state of South Carolina.

Currently, Mr. Hardee is the Director of Governmental Affairs at Lamar Advertising. He has served as the President of the Outdoor Advertising Association of South Carolina since 1989.

In 1995, Mr. Hardee was appointed to represent South Carolina on the Scenic Highways Committee. As a member of the committee, he assisted in the drafting of regulations that established the necessary criteria for Scenic Highways. Mr. Hardee has served as the Chairman of this valuable committee since its inception. Mr. Hardee was awarded the Order of the Palmetto, the State’s highest honor, in 1998, in recognition of his dedication to the field of transportation through his service to the Transportation Commission and Scenic Highways Committee.

At the request of the Central Midlands Council of Governments, the South Carolina Transportation Commission voted to name the proposed seven-mile airport connector road between I–20 and I–95 as the John N. Hardee Airport Expressway, in recognition of his efforts to obtain funds to support the project.

Along with Mr. Hardee’s service to the field of transportation, comes his service to the community.

As a member of the First Baptist Church in Florence, South Carolina, he served on the Board of Deacons from 1985–1988 and 1990–1992, and was chairman of the Board in 1988. He organized the first prayer breakfast in Florence, as well. As a member of the First Baptist Church in Columbia, South Carolina since 1993, he has served on the Board of Deacons and Stewardship Planning in 1994.

He has served as a member of the Florence Chamber of Commerce from 1973–1992 and served as president in 1985. He was a member of the Florence County Economic Development Commission from 1988 to 1992, and was the chairman from 1990 to 1991. He was also a member of the Florence Planning Commission from 1981 to 1992, and chairman for almost five years.

Mr. Hardee has also served as a member of the Florence Lion’s Club, and as its president in 1984. From 1980 to 1992 he served as a member of the Salvation Army Advisory Board, and as chairman from 1983 to 1986. He is currently a member of the Five Points Rotary Club and is a Paul Harris Fellow.

Mr. Speaker, I ask you to join me today in honoring Mr. John N. Hardee for the incredible service he has provided for the residents of South Carolina. I sincerely thank Mr. John Hardee for the outstanding contributions he has given to the state of South Carolina through his distinguished service to the field of transportation. I congratulate him on his recent accomplishment of having the airport expressway named on his behalf and wish him the best in all of his future endeavors.

HONORING JANICE LEE ROHLF
HON. FELIX J. GRUCCI, JR. OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Friday, September 21, 2001

Mr. GRUCCI. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in honor of the 60th birthday of Janice Lee Rohlf.

On September 18, 1941, Janice Lee Rohlf (nee Janice Smith) was born and raised in a remote, rural area in Northeast Pennsylvania. A high school teacher/guidance counselor encouraged Janice to attend college; he even gave her the $15.00 to apply to what was then the East Stroudsburg State Teachers College. Janice was the first in her family to attend college, majoring in mathematics, with a minor in social studies.

Upon graduation, Janice came to LI to teach in the Islip school district. After one year, she married and began raising a family. Janice has three wonderful children, Justin, Jason and Janine. Janice divorced and returned to work, starting in Suffolk County Government. During this time, Janice also earned a Master’s Degree in Public Administration at Stony Brook University, and moved through four positions in three years in Suffolk County: Investigator in the Child Support Enforcement Bureau, Labor Technician in the Department of Labor, Administrative Assistant in Medicaid, Legislative Aide in the County Legislature and, finally, an Administrative Assistant in the County Executive’s Office. While in her last position in the Suffolk County Government Janice began work on a Master’s Degree in Social Work at Stony Brook University, which she completed in December of 1989. Janice currently has a small, part-time psychiatric social work practice.

Following a change in leadership in Suffolk County, Janice then worked for the Long Island Chapter of the New York State Head Injury Association. Then, in September of 1987, an opportunity arose at Stony Brook University, albeit temporary and part-time, in the University Affairs office as the Director of Public Affairs, which Janice accepted. Needless to say, Janice has worked in this part-time capacity ever since 1988 and has been the Director of Governmental Relations at Stony Brook University.

In November of 1998 Janice married F. James Rohlf, a Professor in the Department of Ecology and Evolution at Stony Brook. They travel extensively, most recently to South Africa, Chile and Australia. Janice and Jim reside in Port Jefferson, with their cat, Tigger.

TRIBUTE TO GEORGE BLOCH

HON. GARY G. MILLER

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Friday, September 21, 2001

Mr. GARY G. MILLER of California. Mr. Speaker, it is with great pleasure that I rise to honor George Bloch, Ed.D., who has been named California Administrator of the Year in the Superintendent Category by the Association of California Administrators.

Dr. Bloch began his educational career in 1964. Over the years, he has achieved an impressive record of academic and civic accomplishments, and, in doing so, has earned the admiration and respect of those who have had the privilege of working with him. I would like to congratulate him and sincerely thank him for his outstanding and dedicated service to the Chino Valley Unified School District.

IN HONOR OF PATRICIA DONNELLY, RECIPIENT OF UNITED WAY’S CONGRESSWOMAN MARY T. NORTON MEMORIAL AWARD

HON. ROBERT MENENDEZ

OF NEW JERSEY

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Friday, September 21, 2001

Mr. MENENDEZ. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor Patricia Donnelly for winning United Way's Congresswoman Mary T. Norton Memorial Award. This prestigious award is bestowed annually to women who have made exceptional contributions to the success of communities throughout the nation. Ms. Donnelly will be presented with the award on Tuesday, September 25, 2001, at the Meadowlands Crowne Plaza Hotel in Secaucus, New Jersey.

Patricia Donnelly has enjoyed an extensive and impressive career in journalism that has spanned over three decades. During her career, she has initiated and overseen the operations of several small businesses, including the Gold Coast magazine and the Jersey Journal's Spanish-language weekly, El Nuevo Hudson. In addition, she has served as editor for the Jersey Journal's Hudson Dispatch and the Hoboken Reporter.

Throughout her career, Ms. Donnelly has impressively balanced her demanding professional commitments with her desire to help promote community service initiatives that improve the quality of life for families living in New Jersey. She has consistently assisted the United Way and other non-profit organizations, by helping them advance and broadcast their message to thousands of New Jersey residents.

Ms. Donnelly is a native of Jersey City, New Jersey, and an alumnus of Marywood College in Scranton, Pennsylvania. Currently, she resides in Hoboken, New Jersey, and serves on the Board of Directors for the Hoboken-North Hudson YMCA. Furthermore, she is an active member of the Parish Council at St. Francis Church in Hoboken.

Patricia Donnelly is happily married to Arturo Martinez, her husband of 25 years. Patricia and Arturo are the proud parents of Nora and Peter.

Mr. Speaker, I ask my colleagues to join me in honoring Patricia Donnelly for her commitment and dedication in helping foster and promote community service initiatives that have assisted countless families in New Jersey.

HONORING THE SERVICE OF MARC HOLTZMAN TO THE STATE OF COLORADO

HON. SCOTT McINNIS

OF COLORADO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Friday, September 21, 2001

Mr. McINNIS. Mr. Speaker, technology has become an important tool today in terms of nearly every facet of our lives—from legislation to the completion of daily routines. It has been used to reinvent many systems and increase ties between people. Marc Holtzman, the first Secretary of Technology in the State of Colorado, has accepted this new and transformational role to merge technology with government, economics and education. I would like to recognize the work of this honorable man and all that he has done, and will continue to do, for the great State of Colorado.

Following his graduation from Leigh University, Marc founded an investment firm called MeesPierson EuAmerica, which was later sold to become the 11th largest bank in the world. His time in Europe has allowed him to become an authority on political development. Now, he serves in the cabinet-level position for Governor Owens while earning only $1 per year. During the week, Marc resides in Denver, but during the weekend he travels to his house in the Roaring Fork Valley—a great opportunity to enjoy the mountain environment amidst his horses and dogs.

Colorado is home to many high-tech industries and Marc plays a crucial role in securing a successful future for these companies, along with creating an environment conducive to attracting new businesses. Furthermore, Marc has been instrumental in creating quasi-charter schools that aim to build a bridge across the technological divide with the support of Microsoft’s Bill Gates. Throughout all of his projects, Marc has proven to be a valuable contributor to Colorado and has a high success rate in all that he does.

Mr. Speaker, at a time when technology is becoming such an important part of our world, the convergence of technology and government is inevitable. Marc is ensuring that we implement this technology and in return, benefit the people of Colorado. Additionally, his charismatic leadership has led to many innovative experiments and successes. He is truly navigating Colorado through this remarkable revolution. I would like to honor his contributions and recognize the importance of his service to the State of Colorado. I extend my warmest regards to him and wish him the best in years to come.

RECOGNITION OF MR. ADEL KARAS’ DEATH

HON. BOB BARR

OF GEORGIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Friday, September 21, 2001

Ms. SOLIS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to acknowledge one of my constituents who was lost to us this past weekend in a tragic shooting.

Mr. Adel Karas, a resident of Arcadia, was shot in his grocery store in San Gabriel on September 15, 2001 in an attempted robbery that the FBI is now investigating as a hate crime. Mr. Karas had owned and operated the International Market in San Gabriel for two decades. As a Coptic Christian, Mr. Karas fled his native Egypt in the 1970’s to escape religious persecution. It is difficult to think that despite living in the United States for 20 years, he may have lost his life because the perpetrators targeted him based on his race.

We will remember him as a warm and loving man who gave his best to his family and to his community. His family mourns his death and remembers him as a loving father to his sons and a good husband to his wife, Ronda Karas. Mr. Karas was also a care giver to his elderly parents, calling every day to check on their well-being. Furthermore, Mr. Karas was a respected businessman and appreciated by friends and neighbors. Our community mourns the loss of one of our own as is evident by the memorial filled with heart-felt cards and hundreds of flowers that has been created outside his storefront.

I am saddened by the loss of such a fine member of our community and wish his family and loved ones my greatest sympathies by acknowledging him today. Let us remember Adel Karas as a genuine, kind, and loving son, father, husband, and American.

RECOGNIZING COUNTY COMMISSIONER BILLY CROKER, POLK COUNTY, GEORGIA

HON. HILDA L. SOLIS

OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Friday, September 21, 2001

Mr. BARR OF Georgia. Mr. Speaker, Mr. Billy Croker of Polk County, Georgia is one county commissioner who consistently goes above and beyond the call of duty. In addition to being instrumental in bringing Our House for battered women and children and the Boys and Girls Club to Cedartown, Georgia, Mr. Croker has been very active in the Coosa Valley Regional Planning Commission, and he has recently been elected to a new position on the Board of Managers of the Association of County Commissioners of Georgia (ACCG). He represents the first ACCG district, which includes 15 counties in northwest Georgia.

The ACCG is a nonprofit agency assisting Georgia’s county governments. Formed in 1914, ACCG serves as the consensus-building, training, and legislative organization for all 159 county governments in the state.

Billy had previously been an at-large representative to the Board of Managers. As a board member of the statewide association, he plays a prominent role in shaping ACCG’s yearly policy objectives and in directing activities taken on by the Association to help counties meet the increasingly complex demands facing today’s local governments.

Billy is recognized as an active participant and exceptional leader in the Association, and by his peers throughout Georgia. He always shows a committed interest in the welfare of the entire state, not just Polk County. He is a true and valued servant of the people of Georgia, and it is an honor to represent him in the U.S. House of Representatives.

CITIZENSHIP DAY AND CONSTITUTION WEEK

HON. JOHN J. DUNCAN, JR.
OF TENNESSEE
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, September 21, 2001

Mr. DUNCAN. Mr. Speaker, although we were not in regular session this past Monday, I would like to remind my Colleagues that September 17 was Citizenship Day and that this week is Constitution Week. The tragic events of the past week should remind us just how important our Citizenship and our Constitution are and what they mean to each and everyone of us.

This year’s observances of Citizenship Day and Constitution Week come as we mourn for those who lost their lives in the terrorist attack of September 11th. The National Conference on Citizenship urges every American to honor the victims by working constructively within our democratic process, so the United States will remain the world’s foremost defender of freedom and a beacon of tolerance toward all men and women of good will.

The National Conference of Citizenship was founded in 1946 to sustain the unity of purpose that had bound together all Americans during World War II. In 1953, Congress granted this Conference a Charter that charged the organization “To encourage ever more effective participation in citizenship activities and to promote a spirit of cooperation on the part of all citizens.”

Given the events of the past week, let us re-commit ourselves to this purpose. We are about to enter a period of our history that will perhaps be as important to our freedom as were the trials and tribulations of World War II. Over the past few days, we have seen how all our lives are bound together. Today, let all Americans continue to express this newfound sense of unity of purpose that we have not seen since World War II and remember that we are a nation of laws and principle.

POW/MIA DAY 2001

HON. BENJAMIN A. GILMAN
OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, September 21, 2001

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I rise to bring to my colleague’s attention that tomorrow has been designated as National POW/MIA Day for 2001. This is an annual commemoration, designated by the President, for Americans to remember and honor the service of those individuals who served in the military, were captured, and remain missing.

Our nation fought four major conflicts in the 20th century. In those wars, over 142,000 Americans were taken prisoner-of-war. Those servicemen and women experienced numerous hardships and treatment which could often be described only as barbaric during the course of captivity. Those Americans imprisoned by the Japanese during World War II faced the worst possible conditions in captivity and were, for the most part, without medical care. A large number of war prisoners were not known to be alive in captivity.

See page 13 for extensions of remarks.

EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

HON. BENJAMIN A. GILMAN
OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, September 21, 2001

Mr. Speaker, in ceremonies I have participated in hearings on recovery efforts with little, if any, of the families of MIA’s who did not return home, especially with those who were last known to be alive in captivity.

From 1975–77, I served as a member of the Montgomery Select Committee on Missing Persons in Southeast Asia, a body which held numerous hearings on the issue of whether live Americans were left behind in our Exodus from Vietnam. Subsequent to this, I co-chaired the House Select task force on this issue with my former colleague from Virginia, Lester Wolf. During this time, I made numerous trips to Southeast Asia, beginning with a trip to Hanoi in 1975.

In 1995, I introduced H.R. 945, The Missing Service Personnel Act of 1995, which was eventually incorporated into the Defense Authorization Act for FY ’96. Included in this legislation is language where the Secretary of Defense to centralize the responsibilities for search and rescue operations under one office; instruct the Secretary to establish procedures for dealing with the families of missing persons by protecting the interests of the families; and provide a means by which the families of MIA’s can express their concerns and questions about the missing family member. It also called for greater consultation between DOD and family members, and incorporated provisions create accountability and punishment for those in DOD who refuse to follow the law in this area.

Many of the good provisions in the bill were stripped out at the request of DOD in the House/Senate conference on the following year’s authorization bill. The bulk of these, however, were overwhelmingly restored by the House in the FY 98 Defense Authorization bill.

Two years ago, I introduced legislation to declassify all of the classified documents from these hearings that were in the possession of the national archives. This resolution, which the House adopted unanimously, made available to family members and academic researchers the opportunity to review previously unavailable material, which might eventually help with securing a final resolution for some MIA cases.

Permit me to focus special recognition on those POW/MIA’s from Korea and Vietnam. Despite the prior administration’s best assurances to the contrary, many of us in Congress remained unconvinced that the governments of North Korea and Vietnam have been fully cooperating with the United States on this issue. Regrettably, by normalizing relations with Vietnam, I believe that we have withdrawn our leverage over the Vietnamese government on this issue.

It bears noting that we have made some progress in Southeast Asia. Since the end of the war, 586 sets of remains have been returned from Vietnam, with 285 returned since 1991. However, despite an official position to the contrary, U.S. government efforts on the POW/MIA issue have traditionally focused on remains recovery, not on providing closure to the families of MIA’s who did not return home. In fact, in answers to questions I posed in hearings on recovery efforts back in 1996, Clinton administration officials admitted that the discussion of live American prisoners was not even on the agenda when U.S. officials met with their North Korean, Vietnamese, or Laotian counterparts. Rather, they preferred to focus solely on the issue of remains recovery as a measurement of cooperation on the MIA issue from those countries.

The U.S. government, particularly the last administration, has often appeared to equate activity on recovery efforts, regardless of any subsequent results, with progress on the issue. This is not an insignificant point, the Defense Department has expended a substantial amount of money on remains recovery over the past decade, which begins the following question. Are North Korea, Vietnam and Laos, truly interested in bilateral cooperation on this issue, or are they using it as a source of badly needed hard currency?

This is especially pertinent concerning the case of North Korea. According to the Congressional Research Service, 298 sets of remains were repatriated from North Korea between 1990–96, and 107 sets since 1996 when joint exhumation efforts began. During the period of 1990–96, the United States paid North Korea $967,000 for their unilateral retrieval efforts. By 1996, the price tag sharply increased—we paid $6.3 million for the 77 sets of remains exhumed through November of last year.

Given that only eight sets of remains have been identified as U.S. soldiers, although ten more are expected to be so, we have in effect been paying the North Koreans $400,000 per body, an outrageous sum and certainly not evidence of North Korean “cooperation.”

While the Vietnamese were not quite so brazen in their profiteering on the MIA issue, there is considerable evidence that they maintained a mortuary storehouse of sorts of U.S. remains, and doled these out over time. Most analysts, including those at the Library of Congress, agree that if this did occur, the supply of stored bodies was depleted in the early 1990s.

Regrettably, in its rush to normalize relations with Vietnam, the Clinton administration decided to overlook any evidence that Hanoi was holding thousands of American prisoners of war and using it to profit from it. This pattern was later repeated when the administration sought the establishment of trade relations. The opportunity to use trade and recognition as leverage to improve the situation of those countries and their people was not even on the agenda when the administration sought the opportunity to return home before they die.

It is my hope that our bilateral relations can improve and will lead to a further clarification regarding the safe return of any living POW's who may still be in captivity in Korea or elsewhere.

Americans should always remember the love of country that America's veterans have shown as well as their personal sacrifices, courage, convictions, and dedication to freedom that these individuals have exhibited.

To quote a portion of President Abraham Lincoln's letter to a mother who lost five sons on the battlefield: "I cannot refrain from tendering to you the thanks of the Republic they died to save. I pray that our heavenly father may assuage the anguish of your bereavement, and leave you only the cherished memory of the loved and lost, and the solemn pride that must be yours to have laid so costly a sacrifice upon the altar of freedom."

May it be of some solace to the families and loved ones of our missing and POW's that Americans are coming together to a furthering of care and compassion deserve our recognition and the contributions of an extremely important member of our community. Ms. Marti Duprey has spent the majority of her life caring for and helping others. She has continuously put the well being of others ahead of her own.

Ms. Duprey, a Catholic nun, moved to Glenwood Springs, Colorado in 1973 after having spent eighteen years working with the Rev. Jesse Jackson's “Operation Breadbasket” in Chicago. Her education, consisting of Bachelor's Degrees in education and social work and a Master's Degree in counseling, provided her with the proper tools for her work with the community of Glenwood Springs ever since.

She provides three very important functions for the residents of Glenwood Springs. Whether it is her involvement in the Defiance Community Theatre, her counseling in the Helping Hands Grief Group, or as Program Manager for Mountain Valley Weavers, she selflessly helps others find ways of expressing themselves in a more self-reliant manner and provides them with outlets that will increase their confidence and happiness.

Marti Duprey provides very important services for the grieving, the disabled, and many other members of her community. Her compassion for others makes her a truly valuable member of the Glenwood Springs community.

I would like to recognize Ms. Marti Duprey for her wonderful efforts and contributions that have touched the lives of so many. Her acts of care and compassion deserve our recognition and I would like to extend my best wishes and warm regards to her for many years to come.

HONORING MARTI DUPREY
HON. JAMES E. CLYBURN OF SOUTH CAROLINA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, September 21, 2001

Mr. CLYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to Dr. Ronald T. Farrar of South Carolina, on the occasion of his retirement from the College of Journalism and Mass Communications at the University of South Carolina. Dr. Farrar is the epitome of what a college professor should be, and he is respected and loved by faculty and students alike.

In 1986, Dr. Farrar became a professor of history, media law and introduction to journalism at the University of South Carolina, until assuming the position of interim dean in July of 1999. Dr. Farrar’s career achievements speak for his dedicated service as an extraordinary college professor, teacher, administrator, mentor, and respected member of the media.

After earning his Ph.D. in Journalism History from the University of Missouri in 1965, Dr. Farrar went on to serve as a professor/chairman in the journalism departments of Indiana University South Bend and the University of Missouri, before returning to South Carolina. Dr. Farrar is the epitome of what a college professor should be, and he is respected and loved by faculty and students alike.

While the Vietnamese were not quite so brazen in their profiteering on the MIA issue, there is considerable evidence that they maintained a mortuary storehouse of sorts of U.S. remains, and doled these out over time. Along with the many articles Dr. Farrar has authored and published, he has written such books as “Reluctant Servant” (Missouri, 1968); “Mass Media and the National Experience”, with John A. Stevens (Harper & Row, 1971); “College 101” (Peterson’s Guides), 1985, 1988; “Mass Communication: An Introduction to the Field” (West, 1988; Brown, 1995); “The Ultimate College Profession: Walter Williams, Journalist to the World” (Missouri, 1996).

Dr. Farrar is deeply respected in the field of journalism and academics. His expertise and talent have earned him commissions to write numerous articles and conduct national studies. He has been awarded various grants and certificates of achievement, including the Distinguished Service Medal for Research in Journalism in 1969 by the Society of Professional Journalists for Reluctant Servant; The Story of Charles G. Ross. From 1971 to 1973, he was a consultant for continuing study of television audiences for the Public Broadcasting System. Faculties for the US government, private sectors and journalistic associations have been privileged to have him serve on their boards.

His long career achievements include award research grants from the Kaltenborn Foundation, U.S. Steel Foundation, Harry S. Truman Library Institute, Indiana Research Foundation, Kentucky Press Association, Kentucky Humanities council, National Endowment for the Humanities, Sigma Delta Chi Foundation, University of Kentucky Research Foundation, University of South Carolina Research Foundation, Southern Regional Education Board, and Freedom forum.

Dr. Farrar was appointed the Reynolds-Faunt memorial Professor in 1986 and held that professorship until his retirement. He will now be recognized as Professor Emeritus. Mr. Speaker, I ask you and my colleagues to join me today in honoring Dr. Ronald T. Farrar for the incredible service he has provided through a lifetime in the academic community. I sincerely thank him for his outstanding contributions, congratulate him on his recent retirement, and wish him good luck and Godspeed in his future endeavors.

HONORING FIREFIGHTER ROBERT STEPHEN BOUDREAU

HON. FELIX J. GRUCCI, JR.
OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, September 21, 2001

Mr. GRUCCI. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in honor of the retirement of a fine New York City Firefighter, Robert Stephen Boudreau.

On April 11, 1942, in the small village of Gaytons, New Brunswick, Canada, Robert Stephen Boudreau was born to Mary and Joseph. He was the youngest of four sons. Bob grew up in Canada and came to the United States in the early 1960’s. From 1964–1966 he served as a Military Policeman in the Continental Headquarters Command of the United States Army. On September 24, 1967, Judy Weider and Bob were married.

A year later, November 30, 1968, Bob became a proud member of the New York City Fire Department. His first assignment was Ladder Company 47 in the Bronx and then College Point in Queens. Bob was promoted to Lieutenant on April 2, 1983 and was a commander one year in Battalion 34 in the Bedford-Stuyvesant area of Brooklyn. From there, Engine Company 238 in Greenpoint became his permanent assignment. On October 31, 1989, Bob was promoted to Captain, where he was on sorting assignments in District five to become a member of Engine 270 in Richmond Hill. Prior to his retirement, Bob served at Engine 302 and Ladder 155 in South Ozone Park, Queens. Although his love for the Fire Department will never waiver, Bob officially retired on July 8, 2001, after spending close to 33 years on the department.

Today, September 22, 2001, members of every firehouse Bob has served in come together to celebrate his accomplishments and to cheer him on to his retirement. During their marriage, Bob and Judy were blessed with three beautiful daughters: Kimberly Anne, Denise Marie, and on Valentine’s Day 1976, Danielle Valerie joined their family. After raising three daughters, Bob became the grandfather of Evan James on March 15, 1999, and twins, Dylan Thomas and Ryan Gerald on July 19, 2001, and he and Judy look forward to yet another grandchild in February. Bob’s greatest loves are his family and friends, and the time he has spent serving as a New York City Firefighter.

COMMENDING THE STUDENTS, TEACHERS, PARENTS AND SUPPORT STAFF OF SUZANNE MIDDLE SCHOOL

HON. GARY G. MILLER
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, September 21, 2001

Mr. GARY G. MILLER of California. Mr. Speaker, I rise to commend the students, teachers, parents, and support staff of Suzanne Middle School on being named a 2001 California Distinguished School.

Suzanne Middle School, located in Walnut, California, is part of the Walnut Valley School District. Home to 1,300 sixth, seventh, and eighth-graders, its student body is representative of California’s diverse culture. But despite the various backgrounds represented, each student is expected to contribute a learning environment which demands high expectations.

The teachers and staff of this school are committed to giving “whatever it takes” to meet the needs of their students. This goal frequently requires involving the parents and community in school activities.

The combination of high expectations for students, dedication of the staff, and parental involvement has made Suzanne Middle School one of America’s Distinguished Schools.

HONORING THE SERVICE OF LEE SPERRY

HON. SCOTT MCNINIS
OF COLORADO
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, September 21, 2001

Mr. McNINIS. Mr. Speaker, the State of Colorado is growing at a tremendous pace and it requires sincere dedication and knowledge to help manage such expansion. After sixteen years of service to the people of Delta County as a member of the Planning Commission, Lee Sperry has decided to hand in his resignation. I would like to take this opportunity to recognize the important contributions that Lee has made and thank him for his years of service.

A lot has changed since Lee first joined the Planning Commission. Ideas of unbridled growth have been tempered with concerns of open land preservation. Throughout this fundamental change, Lee has always attempted to maintain a balanced perspective between the county’s master plan and the desires of the public seeking to live out their goals and dreams. Lee has a keen interest in ensuring that the common person is not overlooked in deliberations.

Mr. Speaker, as we wrestle with the issue of growth in Colorado, Lee Sperry has done an outstanding job shepherding that process for over sixteen years. He has truly helped to preserve the heritage of Colorado while allowing it to progress into the future judiciously. It is with great appreciation that I recognize Lee today and I extend my warmest regards to him upon his retirement and wish him many happy years to come.

HON. FRANK A. LoBIONDO
OF NEW JERSEY
HON. ROBERT E. ANDREWS
OF NEW JERSEY
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, September 21, 2001

Mr. SAXTON, Mr. Speaker, I rise today with my colleagues to recognize the Catholic-Jewish Commission of Southern New Jersey as among the first in the nation to create a formal Agreement of Understanding and Cooperation between their faith communities.

The Roman Catholic Diocese of Camden, Jewish Federation of Southern New Jersey, the Jewish Community Relations Council, and the Tri-County Board of Rabbis have committed themselves to eliminating all forms of anti-Semitism, anti-Catholicism, racism and religious intolerance, and in promoting mutual understanding.

In the spirit of their respective traditions, this Agreement affirms the continuing commitment of these two communities to uphold and observe the right of every human being to freedom of religion and conscience.

We believe this Agreement is a shining example of a sound and lasting basis for continuing development of interfaith cooperation. We join the members of both the Catholic and Jewish communities worldwide in expressing appreciation to the efforts of the Catholic-Jewish Commission to build a bridge of faith and peace.

Mr. Speaker, please join us in congratulating the Catholic-Jewish Commission of Southern New Jersey on their historic achievements and the signing of their interfaith Agreement of Understanding and Cooperation.
Mr. Speaker, Joseph Jurkulak will certainly be missed by his family and community. He dedicated his retired life to bringing smiles to youngsters throughout Glenwood Springs. I extend my deepest regrets and warmest regards to Joseph’s family and friends during this time of mourning.

JUVENILE JUSTICE AND DELINQUENCY PREVENTION ACT OF 2001

SPEECH OF
HON. CAROLYN McCARTHY
OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 20, 2001

Mrs. McCARTHY of New York. Mr. Speaker, I would like to thank Mr. HOEKSTRA, Mr. GREENWOOD, Mr. ROEMER, Mr. HOLT, and Mr. SCOTT for their hard work and willingness to work together to find a common ground on the Juvenile Justice Bill which includes an important crime study provision.

The crime study provision, which I offered during subcommittee mark-up, directs the National Institute of Justice to conduct a crime study on gun violence-related injuries and deaths by youth in schools and communities. This study focuses on the relationship between victims and violent youth; the criminal act and location; and details about the firearm used in the crime.

The purpose of this provision is to examine this data and develop new ways to prevent violence in our schools.

Today school violence is reported simply as an act of violence. There is not a focus on what kind of firearm was used; or if there was a relationship between the victim and the culprit.

Let’s be honest here, when kids are killing kids—we should be doing everything we can to prevent it. We should be figuring out the links between violent acts so we can put measures in place to stop them. A very real and easy way to prevent these tragedies is to see what is happening where and when.

If we continue to turn a blind eye to violence in our schools we will never be able to put an end to their violence. Our children need and deserve to feel safe in their schools. Let’s work together and give them back their schools.

Mr. Speaker, I am proud to have this important provision as part of the Juvenile Justice bill and I urge all my colleagues to support the overall bill.

THE TRUE AMERICA

HON. STEVE ISRAEL
OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, September 21, 2001

Mr. ISRAEL. Mr. Speaker, last week, our country, this community, was struck by tragedy. We lost family and friends, firefighters and police, loved ones and heroes. For our families, we offer our prayers. For President Bush, Major Giuliani, and Governor Pataki, we offer our thanks. For the cowards who committed these atrocities, we submit our resolve. On Friday, the President asked me to join with him at ground zero. In the wreckage of the World Trade Center, we saw a place of war . . . but also a place of great hope.

We saw, we smelled, we heard the signs of war: twisted metal . . . shattered windows . . . acid, smoking ruins. As our Air Force jet passed the clouds were low, and smoke billowed from the wreckage below, casting a gray shroud over lower Manhattan.

But amidst the devastation, we also saw the signs of the true America.

As our motorcade drove slowly down the west side highway, the clouds broke, and the sun shined brightly on the Statue of Liberty, reflecting the very best of our country.

Amidst the devastation, rescue workers planted small American flags, in their battered helmets.

They were weary from digging to save lives for three days, yet still able to raise their arms high and shout, “USA, USA, USA” when our President arrived.

I met our neighbors—one from East Islip, the other from Huntington Station—who had been working in that rubble since the calamity struck, defiantly insisting on hope with every brick they moved. I salute them and all of our unsung heroes who continue to provide comfort in a time of tragedy and save lives in a time of war.

Ladies and gentlemen, that is the America that was in my mind last that night, after I returned to Washington, and voted to give our President the authority he needs to protect the freedoms we hold so dear, the freedoms our Constitution offers us in its very first words, the Preamble: “To establish justice, insure domestic tranquility, provide for the common defense, promote the general welfare, and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity.”

We didn’t choose this fight. It chose us. And now we have no choice but to respond for the lives lost . . . and to preserve a uniquely American way of life: “Americans saw blood . . . and then lined up for hours to give it.”

We saw disaster . . . but not defeat. We felt fear . . . but now we join together in faith.

Our American democracy built by Washington, Adams, Jefferson, and Lincoln will not be weakened by cowardly terrorists.

As Alexis de Tocqueville said over a century ago: “Americans are great—because they are good.” And we know well that good always triumphs over evil.

Ladies and gentlemen, that night, when I cast my vote on the Floor of the House to authorize the use of force, I was conscious of all these things.

And I was aware of the fact that sixty years before, from that very same place, President Roosevelt summoned America into a monumental crusade against evil. We remember his speech, calling that day one of “infamy.” But I want to leave you with other words he proclaimed in the very same speech: “With our industrial and military forces—with unbending determination of our people, we will gain the inevitable triumph, so help us God.”
We triumphed then. We will triumph now. So help us God.

SEPTEMBER 11TH, 2001 TRAGEDY IN AMERICA

HON. SANDER M. LEVIN
OF MICHIGAN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Friday, September 21, 2001

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. Speaker, since September 11, we are solemnly reminded each day what it means to be a firefighter. Like so many others in public life they serve the community, but they do so at great risk of peril to their own health and lives.

So I am particularly pleased and proud to rise today in recognition of the careers of two distinguished firefighters from Sterling Heights, Michigan upon their retirement and as they embark upon a new phase of their lives.

Captain Kerry Wol gast began his firefighting career in Sterling heights in 1979. Since then, he has obtained numerous certifications ranging from Hazardous Materials First Responder to Terrorism Awareness. He was promoted to Lieutenant in 1994, and then to Captain in January of this year. He retired on September 17, 2001.

Fire Inspector Andy Wallace began his career in Sterling Heights in 1980. Inspector Wallace has also obtained numerous certifications ranging from Criminal Justice Training to Fire and Arson investigation. He was promoted to Lieutenant in 1995 and Fire Inspector in 1997. He will retire on January 16, 2002.

We are grateful for the service Captain Wol gast and Inspector Wallace have provided the community and citizens of Sterling Heights over their long careers. Both have served the public well and have received letters of thanks and commendation from the community in response.

I send to them and to their families my best wishes for a healthy, happy and productive retirement.

IN COMMEMORATION OF THE TENTH ANNIVERSARY OF ARMENIA'S INDEPENDENCE

HON. JOE KNOLLENBERG
OF MICHIGAN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Friday, September 21, 2001

Mr. KNOLLENBERG. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to commemorate the 10th anniversary of Armenia’s independence from the Soviet Union. This anniversary marks an important turning point for Armenia and an opportunity to highlight the U.S.-Armenian relationship. As our country continues to mourn the victims of last Tuesday’s tragic attacks, so too do the Armenian people. Armenian President Robert Kocharyan expressed his condolences to President Bush along with an offer to send experienced rescue workers to help the relief efforts in New York and at the Pentagon.

The government of Armenia also pledged to support America’s anti-terrorist campaign.

Since the dawn of history, Armenians have fought and died for their freedom. I am confident that the strong and natural bonds that exist between our two countries will continue to grow and become everlasting.

So help us God.

SEPTEMBER 21, 2001

HON. RANDY “DUKE” CUNNINGHAM
OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Friday, September 21, 2001

Mr. CUNNINGHAM. Mr. Speaker, I rise to commend the citizens of the Commonwealth of the Mariana Islands (CNMI) for their support of the United States Armed Forces. In particular, I want to thank the members of the House of Representatives of the CNMI and their Speaker, Ben Fitial. Recently, that body passed a resolution, authored by Speaker Fitial, calling for the U.S. Navy’s continued use of Farallon de Medinilla Island for essential training exercises.

Of all the targets in the Western Pacific available to forward-deployed U.S. units, only Farallon de Medinilla offers the target fidelity, access and maneuver space required to maintain the Navy’s war-fighting capabilities. Rear Admiral Tom S. Fellin of the U.S. Navy has said that “Farallonde Medinilla . . . plays a special and unique role in national defense. Its location provides access frequency that supports established training requirements. In addition, the air and sea space in the Farallon provides sufficient room for the many different attack profiles necessary to replicate training opportunities in the CNMI.”

The men and women in our military need places like Farallon de Medinilla in order to keep our forces the most effective in the world. Shutting them down will cost lives. But Puerto Rico’s highly publicized and successful effort to end Navy training on its Vieques Island has inspired activists elsewhere to press for an end to military training in their backyard. Small groups of military extremists are now targeting operations at Farallon de Medinilla Island and in Okinawa. Not only am I concerned about the implications of those efforts for our military readiness, but I am concerned that if successful, these efforts will ultimately encourage domestic pressure for removal of military operations which in any way inconvenience nearby residents. At this time of national crisis, we simply cannot afford to lose our most critical military training sites.

Unlike the situation in Puerto Rico, though, the overwhelming majority of residents and indeed the leaders of CNMI have not jumped on the political bandwagon to force the U.S. out. They are standing up to those fringe elements, because they recognize that freedom isn’t free, and that with the benefits of being part of the U.S. territories come some responsibilities.

The tragic terrorist events in New York and Washington, D.C., show us once again, that we cannot just turn our military on like a light switch. To ensure peace, our military must always be prepared for the horrible reality of war. They must always maintain the people, the equipment and most important, the training to ensure that they prevail when a challenge arises. We thank Speaker Fitch for taking the initiative in confirming the commitment of the CNMI people to our fighting forces and all the citizens of the United States. As we enter the battle against terrorism around the world, it is heartening to have the CNMI people standing by our side. They have been there in times of peace, and they will be with us in the new war against terrorism.

DR. FREDERICK G. SAMPSON II CELEBRATES 50TH YEAR AS A MINISTER

HON. JOHN CONYERS, JR.
OF MICHIGAN
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, September 21, 2001

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, today I rise to commend Dr. Frederick G. Sampson II, pastor of Tabernacle Missionary Baptist Church, as he marks two very important milestones in his illustrious career. In addition to celebrating his 50th year in ministry, Dr. Sampson recently celebrated his 30th anniversary as pastor of Tabernacle Missionary Baptist Church.

Dr. Sampson has an extensive educational background, holding degrees in both Behavioral Science and the Theological Sciences. Dr. Sampson, an avid lecturer at colleges and universities throughout our country, is also the annual keynote speaker for various Congresses, Fellowships, Conventions, Councils, Coalitions, Advisory Boards, and Community Outreach Programs all over this country. During his career, Dr. Sampson has pastored various congregations all over the country, and has served on commissions and boards with the aim of fighting crime, improving education, and bringing a higher level of consciousness to our community.

Dr. Sampson’s many endeavors to enrich life at all levels of society have also led him to teaching, preaching, and studying mission all over the world. Dr. Sampson deserves praise for his rich, multi-national service record, including his leadership and participation in the Human Rights struggle. Once again, I urge my colleagues to join me in commending Dr. Sampson on his outstanding achievements.

JUVENILE JUSTICE AND DELINQUENCY PREVENTION ACT OF 2001

SPREECH OF
HON. RUSH D. HOLT
OF NEW JERSEY
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 20, 2001

Mr. HOLT. Mr. Speaker, yesterday we passed H.R. 1900, the Juvenile Justice Delinquency and Prevention Authorization Act, which I support and am pleased to have a hand in shaping.

According to government statistics, juveniles accounted for 17% of all arrests and 16% of all violent crime arrests in 1999. Moreover, in that same year, 2.5 million children under the age of 18 were arrested.

We must not be complacent about these figures. Too many young people get involved in criminal activity, and we must do all we can to prevent juveniles from engaging in such activities.

H.R. 1900 is a bipartisan effort to improve the juvenile justice system and give maximum flexibility to states and local communities in preventing and reducing juvenile crime. I applaud Representative Greenwood and Representative Scott for putting together a bill that has garnered such wide bipartisan support.

I am particularly pleased, that because of an amendment I successfully offered in committee, this bill keeps research and statistical analysis within the National Institute of Juvenile Justice. It is imperative that we not lose our focus on early prevention and this is best accomplished by committing this work to a separate agency.

I am also pleased that an amendment Representative McCarthy and I offered in committee requiring a study be conducted on gun violence-related injuries and deaths by youth in schools and communities was later incorporated in this bill as well.

This study will focus on the relationship between victims and violent youth; the criminal act and location; and the types of weapons being used. By learning the source of the problem, we can find and develop ways to prevent future violence.

There is much more that we can do to prevent juvenile crime. However, this bill represents a good start and I am happy to support it. I urge all of my colleagues to support this important bill.

IN RECOGNITION OF FIRST AND SECOND GRADERS AT CHICAGO’S JOSEFA ORTIZ DE DOMINGUEZ ELEMENTARY SCHOOL

HON. LUIS V. GUTIERREZ
OF ILLINOIS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, September 21, 2001

Mr. GUTIERREZ. Mr. Speaker, I am honored to recognize the 2000–2001 first and second grade classes of the Josefa Ortiz de Dominguez Elementary School in Chicago, Illinois.

I am proud to say that these young students are award-winning scientists. Earlier this year, they earned the Unisys Prize for their outstanding use of the Internet as a tool in science investigation. Their project was entitled, “El Agua Trabaja! How Water Benefits Quality of Life in Chicago’s Little Village.”

In collaboration with the Chicago Academy of Sciences and the Chicago River, 2000–2001 first and second grade students of Josefa Ortiz de Dominguez Elementary School explored how the science of water benefits their Chicago neighborhood of Little Village. Specifically, these young scientists studied the water cycle, the three principal forms of water and ways to filter water to better understand how water and the Chicago River benefit their community. Using the Internet as their primary tool, the students shared what they learned by posting their scientific findings, personal journals, watercolor pictures and poetry on the Web.

I applaud the 2000–2001 first and second grade students of Josefa Ortiz de Dominguez Elementary School for their creativity and innovation while executing their scientific investigation. I believe these students benefited greatly from the guidance of their teachers and the support of their families when they were awarded with such an outstanding science award, “El Agua Trabaja!” or “Water Works!” is now a bilingual web site explaining the experiments, facts and figures associated with the importance of water in everyday lives.

I am pleased to recognize the 2000–2001 first and second grade students who took part in this endeavor. The students in Ms. Nilda LaLuz’s class include Jaime Aguilar, Jenesia Avelar, Raul Cordova, Roxana Delgado, Juan Deluna, Alejandro Galvan, Amairan Galvan, Luis Garcia, Rosio Garcia, Keli Hernandez, Erick Martinez, Diego Nava, Israel Navarro, Jose Pena, Jorge Ramirez, Denisse Ruiz, Erwin Gutierrez, Emilly Sanchez, Maria Sosa, Sergio Vega, Samantha Vera, Jacob Villegas and Maria Zaval.

The students in Ms. Claudia Torres’s first grade class were Jose Aguirre, Christina Avila, Adrian Barraza, Guillermo Barriga, Fernando Cahuana, Kelsie Cantu, Autumn Carrera, Chris Contreras, Yngrid Delacruz, Javier Deleon, Michael Gamez, Fernando Garcia, George Garcia, Francisco Gutierrez, Brenda Hernandez, Daniel Hernandez, Alejandro Ledezma, Genesis Lopez, Sarah Michiel, Marcos Osario, Jose Perez, Alexander Reyes, Christina Salazar, Yasmeen Salazar, Nadia Santiago, Alejandro Vazquez, Jesus Vera, Esmerada Vergara and Ruby Zuno.

First grade students in Ms. Gloria Carrareo’s class were Maria Alcantar, Javier Flores, Bryan Gomez, Christopher Gomez, Miguel Gonzalez, Jose Granados, Gustavo Hernandez, Andrea Labra, Karina Lara, Gilberto Laureano, Nallei Luna, Alejandro Macias, Victor Majos, Lizett Mata, Crystal Medina, Beda Mendoza, Jose Mendoza, Luis Navarrete, Leonel Palaez, Bianca Paredes, Carmen Peraza, Perla Quiroz, Alejandro Rojas, Cristina Rojas, Vicente Salamanca, Leobardo Solis and Ixel Zavala.

First and second grade students in Ms. Jennifer Myer’s class were Guadalupe Alcaza, Yahir Barreto, Joe Carrasco, Alejandro Dunesa, Cristian Garcia, Juan Garcia, Marco Garcia, Maria Garcia, Melissa Garcia, Valentino Gonzalez, Monica Hernandez,

EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

JOYCE MORALLES, BRENDA NAVA, LUIS PALMA, JOE RAMEY, MARIA RESENDIZ, DAISY RUBIO, AND FLAVIO TATOFY.

I wish all of these students, their teachers and parents continued success in their endeavors and I thank them for supporting and promoting the interest of young minds in science and technology.

NATIONAL DEFENSE AUTHORIZATION ACT FOR FISCAL YEAR 2002

SPEECH OF
HON. ROBERT A. UNDERWOOD OF GUAM
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Thursday, September 20, 2001

The House in Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union had under consideration the bill (H.R. 2586) to authorize appropriations for fiscal year 2002 for military activities of the Department of Defense, to prescribe military personnel strengths for fiscal year 2002, and for other purposes:

Mr. UNDERWOOD. Mr. Chairman, this amendment would extend the opportunity to vote in the November 2002 federal elections through the electronic voting system proposed by this bill to uniformed services personnel from the U.S. territories and the District of Columbia. These voters are from Guam, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, the U.S. Virgin Islands, American Samoa, and the District of Columbia who are currently serving away from their homes as active duty military personnel.

The Department of Defense estimates that nearly 15,000 uniformed services personnel would become eligible to participate in the system as a result of this amendment. In addition, it would grant spouses and eligible dependents of these uniformed services personnel the ability to participate as well.

The voting system under this bill is intended to facilitate and demonstrate a more efficient and convenient system that would increase voter participation among U.S. military service personnel stationed around the world. My amendment would grant spouses and eligible dependents of these uniformed services personnel the ability to participate as well.

Mr. Speaker, young men from all walks of life make up the Cardinal Hayes student body. These young men learn, work, play, and worship with one another while providing mutual support and comradeship as well. I take pride in saying that my son, Jose, graduated from Cardinal Hayes and remembers his high school alma mater fondly.

I am very proud to acknowledge this learning institution that has produced so many upstanding men that have, no doubt, gone on to standing men that have, no doubt, gone on to

TRIBUTE TO CARDINAL HAYES HIGH SCHOOL

HON. JOSÉ E. SERRANO
OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, September 21, 2001

Mr. SERRANO. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to Cardinal Hayes High School, a treasured Bronx learning institution that celebrated its 60th anniversary September 23, 2001.

Cardinal Hayes High School was built and organized by His Eminence Francis Cardinal Spellman beginning September of 1940 and September of 1941. Its original student body consisted of over 3000 students who attended this institution in the original building, now deemed the Main Building on the small, elegant campus.

Mr. Speaker, Cardinal Hayes High School has consistently provided exceptional academic and religious guidance for generations of young men from the Bronx and Manhattan. This unique school has been staffed since its beginning by Archdiocesan Priests, Irish Christian Brothers, De La Salle Brothers, Francischan Brothers and Priests, Marist Brothers, Xavier brothers, Religious Sisters and scores of dedicated laymen and laywomen. Current members of this devoted staff are responsible for a 99 percent graduation rate. 96 percent of all Cardinal Hayes High School students go on to study at a college or university.

It must be noted also that Cardinal Hayes High School is one of a just few schools in the New York metropolitan area operating as a Cisco Networking Academy. This accreditation allows the school to provide a two-year course of study that prepares students for CCNA certification. CCNA (Cisco Certified Network Associate) is a highly-regarded certification of networking and internetworking skills.

Mr. Speaker, young men from all walks of life make up the Cardinal Hayes student body. These young men learn, work, play, and worship with one another while providing mutual support and comradeship as well. I take pride in saying that my son, Jose, graduated from Cardinal Hayes and remembers his high school alma mater fondly.

I am very proud to acknowledge this learning institution that has produced so many upstanding men that have, no doubt, gone on to benefit society. I ask my colleagues to please join me in celebrating 60 years of first-rate academic, social, and spiritual instruction in the heart of the Bronx at CHHS.

Ms. CRIPE has been active in FWI since 1979, serving as President on the local and state levels before accepting positions at the international level. Aside from her work with the association, Ms. Cripe, is currently President and Director of OMNIBANK, N.A., where under her leadership the bank has grown rapidly to become one of the largest locally owned banks in Houston. Ms. Cripe has worked closely with the development of Small Business Administration loans at OMNIBANK, most recently closing a $25 million dollar loan on a chemical plant in Sherman, Texas.

Along with serving as President and Director of OMNIBANK, N.A., Ms. Cripe has been very active in the Texas Bankers Association and the American Banking Association, particularly serving on the legislative and education committees. Presently, Ms. Cripe serves on the Board of the Education Foundation for the American Banking Association, and was an excellent spokesperson for the home equity bill.

Ms. Cripe has been an exceptional leader in the community, earning the respect of her peers and associates in the business and civic communities. She has contributed to the betterment of the Houston area, by serving on committees at St. John the Divine Episcopal Church, M. D. Anderson Cancer Research Center, and the March of Dimes.

Again, I would like to take this time to congratulate Ms. Julie Ann Cripe on becoming Chairman of the Board of Financial Women International and wish her continued success.

HONORING CHRISTIAN HEALTH CARE CENTER’S 90TH ANNIVERSARY

HON. MARGE ROUKEMA
OF NEW JERSEY
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, September 21, 2001

Mrs. ROUKEMA. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to extend my sincerest congratulations to the Christian Health Care Center for its 90th anniversary of service and care to northern New Jersey. The Christian Health Care Center, located in the town of Wyckoff, offers care for the elderly as well as short and long-term mental health services. All of this is done in a wonderful environment, led by Christian principles. Founded in 1911 and currently under the outstanding leadership of President and CEO Doug Struyk, the Center has evolved into dynamic and caring organization with state-of-the-art facilities, serving the surrounding community for generations. This weekend, the Center will have the opportunity to celebrate its accomplishments and stories of the past 90 years.

The mission of the Christian Health Care Center speaks to the good work done at this facility. The Center provides a wide range of high quality services consistent with the Christian principles on which the institution was founded. Long term care and mental health care are offered, as well as residential living in a compassionate loving environment. The Center consists of a 251 bed nursing home, a 40 unit supportive senior housing complex, a residential living facility and a psychiatric hospital. Recently, construction was... completed on an on-site day care center for the Center’s care-providers. The Longview assisted living facility was also newly finished, which allowed the residential community to welcome an additional 90 residents to these state-of-the-art facilities. Such a tremendous number of lives are touched through the Christian Health Care Center.

This number also includes the friends and families of residents, for they can rest assured that their loved ones are in good hands with complete care. If you meet even one member of the staff at the Center or hear even one story from a resident, you will understand that the staff here is truly doing God’s work-everyday. The philosophy by which the Center operates further testifies to this caring Christian spirit of the community: “the staff of nurses, doctors, program directors, aides and all others at the Center give unselfishly so that all of our residents and patients know that they are cared for and loved.” Their personal touch in caring for the elderly has moved many.

I speak from personal experience. My beloved mother, Margaret Scafati, was cared for with compassion and professionalism of the highest caliber at the Center. For this I am truly grateful.

Under the excellent guidance of Mr. Struyk and the caring of the wonderful employees, the Christian Health Care Center will continue to shine as one of the finest care facilities of its kind in our nation. This weekend we celebrate 90 years of excellence and look forward to many more. Our hearts and prayers are with those involved with this wonderful center.

TRIBUTE TO DAVID FREEMYER
HON. JAMES V. HANSEN
OF UTAH
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, September 21, 2001

Mr. HANSEN. Mr. Speaker, today I would like to share with the House and America, a statement from my friend David Freemyer. David is 9 years old and sent me the following statement by my friend David.

I hope all Americans can somehow show their patriotism like my friend David.

TRIBUTE TO GEORGE EICHLER
HON. CHARLES A. GONZALEZ
OF TEXAS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, September 21, 2001

Mr. GONZALEZ. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor a great man, George Eichler. Regrettably, George Eichler passed away on Friday, August 17, 2001, but he leaves us with a myriad of memories and lessons derived from his history of service and a legacy of championing important issues.

George was a life-long Democrat and a long-time labor leader in San Antonio. His tireless work on behalf of Democrats and in support of San Antonio working men and women well recognized and respected within the Democratic Party. George’s dedication to service and his commitment to family and to fatherhood is a shining example of the life we should all aspire to.

His daughter, Vanessa Eichler, said of him “He was the perfect father. Everyone knows him for what he did for labor and the Democratic Party, but he taught us to enjoy life.” I believe that through his actions George taught us all a little bit about life and the need to help others.

George Eichler’s involvement in the labor movement saw its beginnings in 1949, when George went to work as a bottle washer at the Pearl Brewery in San Antonio, Texas. Soon after beginning his work there, George joined the International Association of Brewery Workers, and quickly moved up the union leadership ranks to become the Associate Business Agent in 1960. In 1967, the International Association of Brewery Workers joined the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, and George continued his leadership efforts, holding various local, State, and national position within the Teamsters organization throughout his career.

It was through his work as a labor leader that George also became well-known for his charitable contributions, selflessly dedicating his time and service to charitable organizations like Goodwill Industries and the United Way. From 1965 through 1974, George continued his commitment to service as Chair of the San Antonio AFL–CIO Council Pines Housing Trust, a program whose outstanding efforts in housing the handicapped was recognized by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development. These local elderly and handicapped independent living programs are recognized as precursors to national handicapped housing initiatives.

George’s work over the years also benefitted the Democratic Party and countless Democratic candidates, as he campaigned tirelessly during each campaign year. He also served as Democratic Precinct Chair, and as such attended many State and National Democratic Conventions.

I am proud to count myself among those who have had the opportunity to know and learn from George Eichler. I know his family will receive some comfort in the knowledge that George’s memory will endure among all those he touched throughout his life.

HONORING BERINGER VINEYARDS ON ITS 125TH ANNIVERSARY
HON. MIKE THOMPSON
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, September 21, 2001

Mr. THOMPSON of California. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in recognition of the 125th anniversary of Beringer Vineyards, located in St. Helena, Napa Valley, California.

Beringer Vineyards was founded in 1876, when Jacob Beringer and his brother, Frederick purchased a twenty-eight acre vineyard for $14,500. One hundred and twenty-five years later, the winery is worth in excess of $1.5 billion and is the oldest continuously operating winery in Napa Valley.

Beringer was not only a pioneer in the California wine industry, it is also a significant factor in the Napa Valley’s emergence as one of the world’s premier wine-growing regions. Today, Beringer Vineyards continues its extraordinary tradition of viticulture innovation and winemaking expertise to consistently produce the highest quality wines.

Mr. Speaker, Beringer Vineyards not only produces outstanding wines, but its generosity in the community is unsurpassed. Beringer supports numerous important charities, including civic organizations and youth groups throughout Napa Valley and the State of California. This year, the majority of its donations are being made to Napa Valley Health Charities, which provides critically needed health care services to low-income persons.

To commemorate this important occasion, Winemaker Ed Sbragia, who is celebrating his 25th year as Winemaker at Beringer, has produced a very special 1997 Napa Valley Cabernet Sauvignon from the original “Home Vineyard.” As evidence of Beringer’s continued tradition of excellence, Mr. Sbragia is the world’s only winemaker to have both a red and a white wine named as Wine Spectator magazine’s “#1 Wine of the Year.”

Mr. Speaker, Beringer was where I worked as a young man and I am particularly proud of this tremendous organization. At this time, it is appropriate that we honor and congratulate Beringer Vineyards for its many successes and contributions to our Napa Valley community for the past 125 years.

RECOGNIZING HEAR O’ ISRAEL INTERNATIONAL INC.
HON. KEN BENTSEN
OF TEXAS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, September 21, 2001

Mr. BENTSEN. Mr. Speaker, in light of the tragedy that struck our nation September 11, 2001, I believe it’s fitting to recognize a valued organization within the Houston community, Hear O’ Israel International Inc., which is currently sponsoring its National Mercy, Love and Compassion Month. This month long event is being conducted in conjunction with their on-going campaign, "Listen to the Cries of the Children." Hear O’ Israel works to make a difference in the lives of the physically challenged, the neglected, battered children, and battered women across Houston. They work to give these men and women a stronger sense of self-worth and instill in them the need to treat others with compassion and respect. National Mercy, Love and Compassion Month has been endorsed by Houston Mayor Lee Brown and every member of the City Council, which further demonstrates the high regard for Hear O’ Israel in our community.

Hear O’ Israel International Inc., a non-profit, non-denominational organization works to increase public awareness of those that are less fortunate. "Listen to the Cries of the Children" is designed to strengthen unity amongst families and further public awareness of the negative consequences that drug abuse, family violence, child abuse, and gang activity have on children.

"Listen to the Cries of the Children" is designed to strengthen unity amongst families and further public awareness of the negative consequences that drug abuse, family violence, child abuse, and gang activity have on children.

Mr. PAYNE. Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask my colleagues here in the U.S. House of Representatives to join me in paying tribute to Beth Israel Medical Center in Newark, New Jersey as staff and supporters celebrate 100 years of service to our community. Newark Beth Israel experienced its humble beginning a century ago, when a small group of women known as the Daughters of Israel raised $4,000 to open Beth Israel Hospital on the corner of Kinney and High Streets in Newark.

The Beth quickly outgrew its original quarters and moved to its present location in 1928. In the ensuing decades Newark Beth Israel grew and changed in order to adapt to the community’s needs, and was the site of numerous medical breakthroughs. During a Founders Day celebration which officially marked the 100th anniversary of the signing of the hospital’s original charter, employees and physicians were joined by Paul A. Metz, Executive Director; Robert Marks, Chairman of the Board of Trustees; and Lester M. Bornstein, former President of The Beth in signing replicas of the original charter, Victor Parsonnet, M.D., signed a replica of the original charter next to the name of his grandfather, Victor Parsonnet, M.D., Dr. Parsonnet’s two grandfathers (the other is Max Danzis, M.D., were among the founders of Newark Beth Israel Hospital in 1901. Lester Bornstein, former President of Newark Beth Israel who served the medical center for 36 years, also signed the charter. The charter is being displayed in the lobby during the Centennial events.

Throughout this year, there will be numerous events scheduled to celebrate the Centennial, including monthly historical displays; a parade in the center’s Annual Fall Health Fair; a commemorative quilt with the theme “A Century of Caring”; in-hospital theme days, held once a month to celebrate each decade of the 20th century; group outings and contests for employees and physicians and an Alumni Day to welcome back retired and former employees of the Medical Center. The Centennial celebration will also include several major events: Visionaries in Medicine Science: A Series of Symposia Celebrating the Centennial of Newark Beth Israel Medical Center presenting on the topics “Healthcare and Cultural Diversity,” “Cardiovascular Disorders,” “Dentistry,” “Nursing,” “Renal Medicine” and “Genetics and Molecular Biology.”

Mr. Speaker, in celebration of the important role that The Beth has played in our community throughout the decades, there will be a Centennial Gala at the New Jersey Performing Arts Center on Saturday, October 6, 2001. Let us join in offering our congratulations and best wishes for continued success to the entire Newark Beth Israel community—the medical and nursing staffs, the ancillary services and administration, the Auxiliary and of course, the many dedicated volunteers who give so generously of their time and talent.

TRIBUTE TO AURELIO VALDEZ

HON. SOLOMON P. ORTIZ

OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Friday, September 21, 2001

Mr. ORTIZ. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to Aurelio Valdez for over a decade’s worth of hard work and community service. For 27 years, Aurelio Valdez strove to improve the lives of an often overlooked segment of our American society, the mentally handicapped.

As the Superintendent of the Corpus Christi State School, Mr. Valdez labored to reconnect the Texas citizenry with the lives of the mentally impaired residents of the school. For 12 years, Mr. Valdez worked as the Superintendent of the Corpus Christi State School, and during that time, he helped to provide normalized living conditions for the school’s three hundred eighty-seven resident students.

By helping to change people’s perceptions of those suffering from mental illness, Aurelio became not only a respected educator and healer, but an architect of a unified Corpus Christi community.

Aurelio joined the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation in 1974, and has received constant praise for his contributions to the improvements in care for those suffering from mental retardation and mental disease. He is noted around the State School as an innovator and a leader. Ray is one of those special people who sees what he is doing less as a job, and more as a labor of love.

A hero in the shadows, Aurelio urged his employees to step into the limelight and take credit for the work he encouraged from them. This life-long caregiver retires not only with the respect and admiration of his colleagues, but with a vow that he will continue to assist those suffering from mental retardation and mental disease. He is noted around the State School as an innovator and a leader. Ray is one of those special people who sees what he is doing less as a job, and more as a labor of love.

THE AMARONE FAMILY

HON. ROSA L. DeLAURO OF CONNECTICUT

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Friday, September 21, 2001

Ms. DeLAURO. Mr. Speaker, is my great honor to rise today to pay tribute to a truly amazing family of my hometown neighborhood: the Amarones of New Haven, Connecticut. Now over two hundred strong, the Amarones have long been a legend in the Wooster Square neighborhood and have held the distinction of having the largest family in New Haven since 1938.

Their story begins in 1911 when twenty-one year old Josephine arrived in the United States and met Andrew Amarone on Wooster Street. It was there that they were married and there that they made their home. It was also where their seventeen children were born and where two of their children died. Twenty-two years separate oldest son John from their youngest son Nicolo and one can only imagine the schedule Josephine and Andrew kept.

Raising seventeen children through the hardest of economic times, I am still amazed at all they were able to accomplish living on the wages Andrew received as a polisher at Sargent's, an architectural hardware factory where many immigrants were employed—averaging between fourteen and twenty-five dollars a week.

Throughout this last century, the Amarones have lost a number of their loved ones like Benny who was killed in Iwo Jima for which he was posthumously awarded the Silver Star. Many others will be remembered this weekend when New Haven will be host to an Amarone family reunion where over one hundred and twenty family members from across the United States are expected to attend.

The Amarones are an incredible family with a rich history and a reflection of times past. Generations to come will continue in their strong traditions and will be a bright beacon for the future. In a time when family values are under close scrutiny, it is families like the Amarones that we look to for inspiration. It is my honor and privilege to recognize the Amarone family as they gather to celebrate their first family reunion and to extend my very best wishes to them all.

IN APPRECIATION OF THE VETERANS OF NEW YORK'S SECOND CONGRESSIONAL DISTRICT

HON. STEVE ISRAEL
OF NEW YORK

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Friday, September 21, 2001

Mr. ISRAEL. Mr. Speaker, on September 17, as the smoke still rose above the site of a terrorist attack on America, I convened a meeting of veterans throughout New York's Second Congressional District. I wanted to hear from them, firsthand, how our Nation should respond at this fateful moment in our history.

I asked for their opinions because these are the men and women who have already served in battle. They have already responded to America's call. They have already paid a price for freedom . . . and many saw their comrades pay an eternal price.

Mr. Speaker, this group of veterans was unified on two essential points which I share with my colleagues in Congress today.

First, the American people, the Congress, and the administration must provide our armed forces with the sustained support they will need to ensure that no terrorist has the capability of inflicting damage on America ever again. Not at any time. Not in any place. Never again. That means pursuing justice until we clean every cave, every tunnel, and every training base where terrorists threaten our country.

Second, we must understand our obligation to our armed forces as we send them into battle . . . and after they return home. There's been a lot of talk about postponing America's domestic agenda. And I agree that we must focus on our national and economic security. But as we send American troops into conflict, now is not the time to cut veterans benefits. Now is not the time to reduce services at our veterans hospitals. Now is not the time to cut health security or income security for our veterans. We must send a strong message to our armed forces that when they take care of America in battle, America will take care of them in peace. The maxim of battle is “leave no soldier behind.” When the battle is over, let us leave no veteran behind.

Mr. Speaker, no group of people can provide more valuable insight about the struggle to come than those who have bravely served in struggles before. I appreciate the counsel the veterans of New York's Second Congressional District have provided.

IN SUPPORT OF CONGRESSWOMAN BARBARA LEE

HON. JOHN CONYERS, JR.
OF MICHIGAN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Friday, September 21, 2001

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, I rise to show my support for our colleague, Congresswoman BARBARA LEE. I am concerned about recent reports that violent threats have been directed at Ms. Lee following her vote against H.J. Res 64, which authorized the use of military force in response to the attacks of September 11.

While many of us may not agree with Congresswoman LEE’s decision to vote against the authorization of the use of force, we must stand united to defend her right to vote her conscience as a Member of the United States House of Representatives. A Member’s duty is to vote on behalf of their constituents and to vote with their conscience. We must rise in support of this intrinsic component of our democracy.

As just the acts of September 11th can destroy us from within, they can also destroy us from within. As Members of Congress we must call on America to check our inflamed passions and national anger so as not to risk destroying our national unity. In recent days we have seen a spate of hate crimes against Muslims, Arab-Americans, and south Asian Americans. Such hate and intolerance threatens to slowly destroy the foundation of our democracy.

During this very difficult time in America, we must demonstrate to the American people that we are strong and united beyond party lines and ideologies. Today, I ask my colleagues to join me in denouncing these acts against Congresswoman LEE and supporting our democratic process.

NEW THREATS READINESS

HON. ROY BLUNT
OF MISSOURI

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Friday, September 21, 2001

Mr. BLUNT. Mr. Speaker, reflection on the attacks at the World Trade Center and the Pentagon leads us to the inescapable conclusion that the United States must ever be ready to meet new threats that face us, regardless of their source.

During our district work period, former Congressman James W. Symington of Missouri spoke at Wilson's Creek National Battlefield for the groundbreaking of the new library at the Battlefield's visitors center. Mr. Symington's father, Senator Stuart Symington, spoke at the dedication of the National Battlefield forty years earlier. Jim Symington is now an attorney in Washington, D.C.

Mr. Symington challenged those at the dedication to consider that threats today could be met by “preventative diplomacy, the maintenance of traditional alliances, the forging of new ones, state-of-the-art intelligence capability, and sufficient countermeasures.” As we deliberate our response as a nation to the events of September 11, I urge my colleagues to consider the comments made by Mr. Symington.

UNION, RECONCILIATION, READINESS

In the words of a beloved hymn: "Time, like an ever-rolling stream, bears all its sons away. They vanish lightly as a dream fades at the break of day."

Has it really been forty years since my father stood here to dedicate this hard-won parksite as a memorial, in his words, "to a high point of valor" in our nation's history? It was a Missouri moment, just as it was a century earlier when Missourians in concert with units from neighboring states, contested and made sacred this ground in the same time frame as Bull Run in Virginia and with consequences no less significant. This morning we share another Missouri moment—seven score years from the very day this hallowed ground became the resting place of so many gallant young Americans. The legacy of their combined valor, that proud legacy, is what brings us together, and requests that we reflect on its meaning. To my mind its meaning is three-fold: Union, Reconciliation, and Readiness.

First, it signifies our precious Union; its bonds re-forged by that historic battle and so many like it over the ensuing four years. Again, in my father's words, "As we dedicate this ground, let us join our hearts and minds in prayer that this be a battlefield of the last joint sacrifice—just as my Mother, also at the age of nine, had attended the dedication in 1914 of a monument at Gettysburg to her great-grandfather. Mr. DAVIS of New York, Wadsworth has fought in that battle and many others, against my father's granddad, Captain Stuart Symington, young aide-de-camp to General Grant. Wadsworth survived the war. But the 56-year-old Wadsworth was later killed at the Battle of Wilderness. His remains were returned to his widow by a young Virginia farmer whose life he has spared in an earlier encounter. Little did the two soldiers know that their families would one day be united in that ultimate reconciliation. Family, a union to which I have my family including nine-year-old twins, are indelibly in his mind the significance of that historic battlefield. Springhill, Illinois: "From where", he said, "should we journey to the rescue he confirmed the spirit he had already seeded with the appeal he made in his First Inaugural Address. "We are not enemies, but friends. We must not straggle, our bonds have strained, it must not break, our bonds of affection."

Reconciliation—the second lesson of Wilson's Creek. Answered, this appeal long before Appomattox. Last spring my wife and I journeyed down the Mississippi on the Delta Queen. Stopping at Vicksburg, we visited the historic battlefield, and particularly the monument to fallen Missourians. I had not known until then that Missouri was the only state that fielded troops on both sides in the Civil War. We visited the field, and particularly the monument to fallen Missourians. I had not known until then that Missouri was the only state that fielded troops on both sides in the Civil War. We were given a heart-rending reminder that blood is thicker than politics. In the shadow of that graceful Missouri monument we were told by our escort that during a lull in the battle a young Confederate soldier, learning that his brother was in the opposing ranks, wrote him a letter telling him their mother was ill and in need of some food. The brother sent word, "of course", and they arranged to meet between the lines. Seeing this, their comrades on both sides laid down their rifles with the distinct thought the day's battle hardly yet settled—in an area of no-man's-land that become known as the "crystalline place". For there, during interludes in the daily battle, the traders, toffees, tobacco, baccy and beans, reminiscent, and reminded of home families and mutual friends before reluctantly rising and returning of their posts.

Those of you who may have seen the Ken Burns public television documentary on the Civil War will recall, I'm sure, that poignant moment, recorded on scratchy black and white movie film in 1913, the Fiftieth Anniversary of Gettysburg. The lame, white haired old survivors of that bloodletting squared off again in reenactment of Pickett's charge. After the Confederate veterans, giving their now feeble rebel yell, struggled up the incline to the Union parapets where they were met not by gunfire, but the cheers and welcoming arms of their former foes. Shedding unshed tears, they embraced, and held one another close. Had the veterans of Wilson's Creek enjoyed a similar chance to meet, the brothers may have been on the same side. As it is we must assume their spirits mingle kindly together and hove approvingly over us today.

Accompanying my father at the 1961 dedication was his nine-year-old grandson, my nephew, Stuart Symington IV, now a career diplomat. Dad wanted him here to implant indelibly in his mind the significance of that joint sacrifice—just as my Mother, also at the age of nine, had attended the dedication in 1914 of a monument at Gettysburg to her great-grandfather. Debbie will definitely be sorely missed, but she will never be forgotten. Her actions will live on as an example for all Americans.

I know I speak for myself and my colleagues, when I say, "Thank you, Debbie. For everything."

HONORING TODD BEAMER

HON. RUSH D. HOLT
OF NEW JERSEY
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, September 21, 2001

Mr. HOLT. Mr. Speaker, America has found a hero in Todd Beamer, one of the passengers on the hijacked Flight 93 who gave their lives to deny the vicious hijackers their deadly mission. We all mourn the loss of Todd Beamer and the others on that flight and our hearts and prayers go out to Lisa Beamer, their two fine children, and to all the other families of the people on that plane. We also hold up the memory of Mr. Beamer as one who represents what is good about America.

For two centuries observers around the world from Alexis de Toqueville to Winston Churchill, have spoken about the marvelous ability of Americans to rise to meet a challenging situation, the ability of individual Americans to step from their ordinary lives to do extraordinary things.

I attended the memorial service for Todd Beamer at the church in Plainsboro, New Jersey where the Beamer family worships. From the remembrances delivered lovingly by friends and family I learned a lot about the character of this national hero. He was an outstanding athlete and inspired his teammates. He was a fine businessman who stood out in a national company. He was an involved and loving father who was looking forward to the upcoming birth of his third child. Especially, I learned that he was a man of deep religious faith, a faith that allowed him to look past death to act so courageously on a heroic mission. We all believe that band of passengers who fought the hijackers—Todd’s father called them freedom fighters—saved hundreds, perhaps thousands of lives that would have been taken if that plane has made its fiery descent into the Atlantic.

The people of Armenia have endured adversities and tragedies. Earlier in this century, in one of history’s most horrible crimes against humanity, 1.5 million Armenian men, women and children were slaughtered by the Ottoman Turkish Empire. We must continue to remind the world that this genocide is an historic fact—despite the efforts of so-called “revisionists,” many of them funded by the Turkish government, to deny the truth—and to make sure that our nation, the world community, and especially the Turkish nation come to terms with and appropriately commemorate this historic fact.

Mr. Speaker, it was the collapse of the Soviet Union in 1991 that allowed the Armenian people to re-establish a state and a nation, to create a society where their language, culture, religion and other institutions would prosper. The people of Armenia have endeavored to build a free and proud nation, based on the principles of democracy and a market economy.

The tiny, landlocked Republic of Armenia is strategically located Caucasus region and in international interest in bringing about stability in the region. Armenia has a fundamental national interest in bringing about stability in the strategically located Caucasus region and in supporting those emerging nations like Armenia that share our values. Given the horrific events of September 11th, it becomes even more important to ensure that the countries in the Caucasus move forward together—economically and politically. We must redouble our efforts to ensure that the tensions in the region subside and that the long-standing differences that divide the countries of the region are resolved. Winners and losers in the Caucasus will only foster greater insecurity and instability at a time when we need to bring everyone together to combat terrorism.

Mr. Speaker, the story of the Armenian people is an unforgettable story of triumph over adversity and tragedy. Despite the efforts of so-called “revisionists,” many of them funded by the Turkish government, to deny the truth—and to make sure that our nation, the world community, and especially the Turkish nation come to terms with and appropriately commemorate this historic fact.

Mr. Speaker, I hope that as we mark future Independence Days of the Republic of Armenia, we can look back with pride on building peace and prosperity in the entire Trans-Caucasus region, so that the people of Armenia and their neighbors can enjoy a stable and hopeful future. I hope that the Republics of Turkey and Azerbaijan will respond positively to Armenia’s repeated offers to normalize relations. The tiny, landlocked Republic of Armenia is surrounded by hostile neighbors, who have imposed blockades halting the delivery of basic necessities and greatly hindering economic development. Despite the dual blockades, Armenia continues to implement economic and democratic reforms. During the first six months of this year, Armenia’s Gross Domestic Product (GDP) increased by 6.4 percent over last year’s level. And during the last year, both the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank have publicly noted Armenia’s economic progress.

Despite this progress, I would like to say that the economic reality of daily life for the people of the Republic of Armenia continues to be extremely hard.

Finally, I wish the Armenian people well on the occasion of their independence day, and, more important, in their ongoing effort to establish good relations with its neighbors and build a vibrant democracy so that their children may prosper in the homeland of their ancestors.

PRESIDENT OF THE REPUBLIC OF ARMENIA,
His Excellency GEORGE W. BUSH, President of the United States of America, Washington, DC.

Dear Mr. President, I have learned with utter shock the news about the terrorist attacks on The World Trade Center in New York and the Pentagon building in Washington, which resulted in human loss and massive destruction. The evil of terrorism has shown its ugly face and should be confronted with determination and resolve. Armenia joins the world in condemning this most deplorable and inhuman act of violence. On behalf of the people of Armenia and myself personally, I express our most heartfelt condolences to the people of America and to the bereaved families. We share your grief and wish you strength and patience.

A TRIBUTE TO BRIGADIER GENERAL WILLIE RAY JOHNSON AND COLONEL ROGER FISHER HALL, JR.

HON. MIKE McINTYRE OF NORTH CAROLINA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, September 21, 2001

Mr. McIntyre. Mr. Speaker, today I rise to pay tribute to two of North Carolina’s finest gentlemen, Brigadier General Willie Ray Johnson and Colonel Roger Fisher Hall, Jr., on their service to and retirement from the North Carolina National Guard.

Theodore Roosevelt, our Nation’s 25th president and a member of the National Guard, once said, “It is not the critic who counts; not the man who points out how the strong man stumbled, or where the doer of deeds could have done them better. The credit belongs to the man who is actually in the arena, whose face is marred by dust and sweat and blood; who strives valiantly; who, knowing the great enthusiasm, the great devotions; who spends himself in a worthy cause; who, knowing in the end the triumph of high achievement.” For a combined 68 years, General Johnson and Colonel Hall have been in the arena as part of our Nation’s military force and our State’s emergency response and community support. And they have served us well.

Since joining the Guard at age 17, General Johnson has served in a variety of assignments and been awarded many decorations. From Supply Officer to Platoon Leader to Maintenance Battalion Commander to Deputy Adjutant General, Ray has served his State and country with distinction and devotion. This service has led to many awards including the Bronze Star Medal, National Defense Service Medal, and the North Carolina Meritorious Unit Citation. In addition to his National Guard service, General Johnson has been an integral part of civic activities in Sampson County including president of the Roseboro Area Economic Development Commission and member of the Sampson County Shrine Club and a member of the Trustee Board of Sampson Regional Medical Center.

Enlisting in the Guard just prior to his 20th birthday, Colonel Hall has also served in several capacities and received numerous decorations. From Transportation Officer to Motor Officer to Headquarters Commandant to Command Colonel, Hall has served with characteristic and commitment. His work has been honored by receipt of the Bronze Star Medal, the Army Achievement Medal, the Armed Forces Reserve Medal, and the Meritorious Service Medal. Colonel Hall is a member of the Board of Directors of BB&T Bank, has been named Business Person of the Year in Hope Mills, has served as past president of the Cumberland County Democratic Party, and serves as an officer of the Seventeenth Congressional District Military & Veterans Affairs Committee.

Mr. Speaker, the North Carolina National Guard is one of the most respected and reliable guard forces in the world. General Johnson and Colonel Hall have been an integral part of their success, and on behalf of the citizens of southeastern North Carolina, I thank them for the service they have given to our State and Nation. May God’s strength, peace, and joy be with both of them always.

HON. DANNY K. DAVIS
OF ILLINOIS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, September 21, 2001

Mr. Davis of Illinois. Mr. Speaker, in these times of stress, as we unite and come together as a Nation, we look for leadership and for example to those who have preached unity, who have practiced organization—the bringing together of the diverse people of America for the common good.

Mr. Speaker, last month we lost a great American who spent her life bringing people together. This potential can be unlocked because it began a life-long interest in the question of how we work to fully develop human potential and in the dynamics of leadership.

Her drive for empowerment and organization over time grew and evolved into a national organization known as the National Training and Information Center.

Mr. Speaker, during her lifetime, Gale was recognized for her advocacy with many honors and positions including a seat on the City of Chicago Commission on Women, a Chicago Commission on Human Rights Award and a “Woman of the Year” award from Ms. magazine.

But these awards only served to deepen her commitment to the community.

Mr. Speaker, we deeply mourn the passing of a tireless crusader for people’s empowerment, Gale Cincotta.

We will miss her, we will miss her energy, we will miss her guidance. But we are resolved to carry on. That would be what Gale expected from us. That is what this great American experiment in democracy is all about. That is what we are resolved to do.

HONORING THE PARTICIPANTS OF LEADERSHIP 2001

HON. MARK UDALL
OF COLORADO
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, September 21, 2001

Mr. Udall of Colorado. Mr. Speaker, as some of my colleagues in this body know, before I was elected to Congress I was an instructor and later executive director of Colorado’s Outward Bound School. While Outward Bound gave me unparalleled opportunities to satisfy a passion for mountain climbing and other experiences in the outdoors, I believe my participation and involvement in Outward Bound may have been most rewarding for me because it began a life-long interest in the question of how we work to fully develop human potential and in the dynamics of leadership.

The credo of Outward Bound is that every human being has the inner potential to become a leader. This potential can be unlocked in many ways. Wildelfs can face a 14,000 foot mountain climb, beginning a trek across miles of desert and wilderness, working with a group of inner city school children, building a shelter for those who are homeless, or comforting a person in need.

How leadership is awakened is less important than acknowledging the diversity of ways in which each one of us faces deep challenges, whether it is physical, emotional or as part of a collaborative venture with others.
Earlier this year, a group of Coloradans came together to celebrate the individual and collective challenge of leadership in the lesbian, gay, bisexual and transgender community. These Coloradans were participants in an exhaustive and comprehensive national initiative called “Leadership Challenge 2001: Connecting, Communicating, Collaborating” sponsored by the Lundy Foundation, in partnership with the Gill Foundation and 40 other non-profit and corporate supporters.

Over the course of three years, 41 participants spent 56 days in intensive training sessions, addressing fundamental issues of trust, race, socioeconomic status, diversity and other challenges in building collaborative leadership within the LGBT community.

By vigorously addressing their own individual and communal issues, the participants in this innovative leadership training project also enhanced the potential of Colorado’s LGBT community to address the needs and concerns of a much broader community, namely, the community we call “America.”

As an enthusiast of leadership theory, I am very pleased to bring this initiative to the attention of my colleagues in this body, and to commend the project coordinators and the 32 participants who graduated from this program.

Their commitment and perseverance is admirable, and worthy of acknowledgement.

Please join me in recognizing their achievement today.

EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

NEED TO REBUILD OUR ECONOMY

HON. ROY BLUNT

OF MISSOURI

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Friday, September 21, 2001

Mr. BLUNT. Mr. Speaker, as brave firemen, police construction workers and other citizens continue to clear away the physical rubble of destroyed buildings, we also are surveying the damage done to our economy.

It is not too soon to begin plans to rebuild the Pentagon and the World Trade Center. It is also not too soon to begin thinking about what we can do to rebuild our economy.

World trade is an essential part in the engine of our economy, but a part that hasn’t been working fully. The United States has been excluded from too many agreements in the past years because we couldn’t move fast enough. It’s time to make a change.

I urge my colleagues to read the following article from the September 9, 2001 issue of the Springfield News Leader by United States Trade Ambassador Robert Zoellick.

STATE NEEDS OPEN MARKETS TO PROSPER

It’s critical for Congress to give President Bush a fast-track authority on trade pacts.

On a recent trip to the Springfield area, I visited the headquarters of five local companies engaged in foreign trade at the invitation of Congressman Roy Blunt, a legislative leader and partner. The performance of businesses such as Leggett & Platt, King Press and the Loren Cook Co. reinforced my belief that trade and open markets are critical to the economic well-being of America’s manufacturers and farmers.

President Bush has been pressing to open markets to help U.S. businesses and families. Yet, this effort has been hampered because the president lacks U.S. Trade Promotion Authority that must be granted by Congress. This authority to negotiate market-opening agreements subject to an up-or-down vote by Congress expired in 1994.

Consider the following: There are 130 free-trade agreements worldwide; the United States is a party to only two. There are 30 free-trade agreements in the Western Hemisphere; the United States is a party to only one. The European Union has 27 special bilateral trade agreements, with 15 more in progress—Mexico has forged ahead with eight agreements, with 32 countries.

So what is the loss to the United States? Consider the story of Caterpillar Inc. with just one country; Chile. Caterpillar’s motor graders made for export to Chile face nearly $15,000 in tariffs. When Caterpillar manufacturers motor graders in Brazil for export to Chile, the tariff is just $3,700. And when Caterpillar’s competitors produce a similar (but not as good) product in Canada, it can be exported to Chile free of tariffs because of the Canada-Chile free-trade agreement.

But if we are going to correct problems such as that one and open markets around the world, President Bush and I need Congress to enact U.S. Trade Promotion Authority this autumn. This trade authority will help us launch a new round of global trade negotiations in November. And this new round is critical if we are going to reduce the world’s trade barriers to an array of U.S. products.

Some people want to turn back the clock on trade, embracing isolationism and protectionism at a time of global interdependence. During my Springfield trip, I saw the region’s companies appreciate that open markets create job opportunities in Missouri and throughout the United States.

Today, exports support 152,000 jobs in Missouri—in industries such as chemicals, agriculture and industrial machinery. More than 75,000 of Missouri’s manufacturing jobs are tied to exports, as are more than 16,000 of the state’s agriculture jobs. These dry numbers mean new jobs and improved prospects for companies and families throughout the Springfield region.

I toured the Paul Mueller Co., where exports—to countries ranging from Canada and Mexico to Japan and Brazil—accounted for 19 percent of its total sales last year, up approximately 42 percent since 1995. International Dehydrated Foods in Monett was Missouri’s Agriculture Exporter of the Year in 1998 and has customers throughout Latin America and Asia.

Missouri’s farmers, manufacturers and consumers need open markets to prosper. The Bush administration is committed to working with the Congress and our trading partners to clear the way. We have a historic opportunity to make free trade a defining feature of the 21st century. It is an opportunity and indeed necessity that America cannot afford to miss.
HOUCE OF REPRESENTATIVES—Monday, September 24, 2001

The House met at 12:30 p.m. and was called to order by the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. Pence).

DESIGNATION OF THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following communication from the Speaker:

WASHINGTON, DC, September 24, 2001.

I hereby appoint the Honorable Mike Pence to act as Speaker pro tempore on this day.

J. DENNIS HASTERT, Speaker of the House of Representatives.

MORNING HOUR DEBATES

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the order of the House of January 3, 2001, the Chair will now recognize Members from lists submitted by the majority and minority leaders for morning hour debates. The Chair will alternate recognition between the parties, with each party limited to not to exceed 30 minutes, and each Member except the majority leader, the minority leader or the minority whip limited to not to exceed 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Oregon (Mr. DeFazio) for 5 minutes.

AIRLINE SECURITY

Mr. DeFAZIO. Mr. Speaker, last Friday night, Congress rushed through a $15 billion airline bailout, and I am not going to revisit all of the problems with that legislation here this morning, with one exception. That legislation failed to allocate one cent toward additional airline security or mandate an iota of change in a system that we know has failed.

Now, the failings of aviation security were well documented before the terrorist attack. I introduced my first bill, to enhance screening at airports and checking of baggage in 1987. Many other Members of Congress have introduced legislation in those intervening 15 years and even before that, but they were always opposed by the Air Transportation Association acting on behalf of a number of their member airlines successfully and even in those few cases where we were able to mandate enhanced measures such as credentialing and standards for training and background checks for the screening companies.

The ATA and member airlines and the private security industry itself fought tooth and nail to delay the implementation of those regulations for 5 years. Amazingly, on the floor on Friday night, some of my colleagues on that side of the aisle said we need to privatize the system that failed us.

It took them so long to get out these regulations. It took so long because the private industry, the private security companies fought it. There was not one single airline passenger in there objecting to these regulations, raising concerns, threatening to sue and making comments, except favorable comments, on these improvements.

In 1999, Ms. Hallett, the head of the Air Transport Association, in testimony to the White House commission said it has been suggested by some that we must radically alter our Nation’s air transportation system in order to make it secure. Based upon our understanding of the threat presented, this is not the case. The measured and deliberate steps to enhance security which we have put forward are responsive to the need. They then began to fight the recommendations of that commission.

It has always been driven by costs. We had the best system of security you could get by pinching pennies and always, always hiring the lowest bidder to provide the screening at the airports.

A year and a half ago in a hearing I said, and this is what I think has prevailed among the American public for a long time, I have got to tell you, when I am flying, I doubt that I could ever find one person in the plane who would say, gee, I would be really upset if I had to pay one-half of 1 percent more for my ticket to know that the person who screened me was not convicted of various felonies and at high risk of allowing something to happen on this plane. It is just extraordinary to me that we would let this system continue in this way, the lowest bidder.

Tragically, we have. In fact, last week, amazingly, after the tragedy, the CEO of Alaska Airlines told me directly in response to my suggestion that we levy a $3 surcharge on tickets for security, he said no one would ever fly again if I was successful in getting that $3 security surcharge. He said there is only one thing people respond to, quote, “people do not respond to anything other than total price.” I guess he probably flew out here on his own executive jet, and he was not too worried about security. That is how out of touch this industry is.

Then last week at Miami International, a Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms agent acting on his own, having notified authorities, attempted to smuggle at one time on his person three knives through security. He was successful. He even stopped and said to the people, is there anything wrong here, did something go off? And they said, oh, go, go, go. So he had given them an extra chance to ask him some questions.

Now, this same firm had been fined $110,000 in fines and restitution for failing to do background checks on at least 22 employees and then lying about it to Federal regulators, sentenced to 2 years’ probation, but they are still providing security at that airport; and their manager was sentenced to 5 years in Federal prison, and they are still providing security at MIA. This is the system we get with privatized air security.

Security at airports needs to be and is a legitimate function of the Federal Government of the United States, a security function, a law enforcement function. We should no longer resist that on some sort of ideological bias or an attempt to buy security on the cheap. The administration has convened a task force on kind of a slow timeline; they are proposing to come forward on October 1.

We know what we need to do. Let us not delay another day. I am amazed that this body rejected my motion last Friday night to begin the federalization process now to begin to put firms like this one in Miami International convicted of violating the law and leave them in charge. We need to take charge and make flying safer.

COMMENTING ON LETTERS FROM CONSTITUENTS AFTER THE EVENTS OF SEPTEMBER 11, 2001

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker’s announced policy of January 3, 2001, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. Foley) is recognized during morning hour debates for 5 minutes.

Mr. FOLEY. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the Speaker’s recognition. Certainly the people of Indiana are proud to see him in the chair, and we are delighted to be reconvening this Monday morning.

Let me just thank, as chairman of the travel and tourism caucus, my colleagues for working quickly on Friday to bring about some financial stability to the airline industry. And of course today, as I speak, the market, the Dow Jones Industrial Average is up some 350 points, and so we hope we have turned the corner on pessimism; and I know there is still opportunity to review and reflect on what the gentleman from Oregon (Mr. DeFazio) just spoke of.
We can certainly be Monday-morning quarterbacks and look back and see what we could have done differently. I hope prospectively we now start reviewing all the safety measures affecting our traveling public. We have to ensure stability in the marketplace. We have to make certain that airlines, of course, work on safety precautions, but the Government has to be a partner.

On Friday, some of our colleagues on the other side of the aisle objected to any bailout, suggesting somehow that that was unfair to the industry. I can assure you today we would be seeing a lot more massive economic downturn and a lot more jobs lost had we not acted.

Today, I wanted to spend a moment on two things: one, a constituent of mine, Dino Laudati, wrote this the morning of the tragedy, and he calls it "Eternal Flame of America."

"As the horror and grief as the towers of the World Trade Center burned, I cried in pain and disbelief. As I wiped the tears from my eyes and removed my hands from my face, I had a vision."

"In front of me the burning towers turned into burning torches, torches of hope, torches of courage and strength, torches of unity and love, torches that will guide us into the darkness to seek and defeat our enemy. The same enemy that ignited that fire, believing he could bring us to our knees."

"Torch that will engulf our hearts with love and tenacity, torches that will always burn, for the freedom that America stands for and that every American will fight for and would rather die than succumb to defeat or submission."

"Torch that will always remind us that we are all equal no matter what religion, race or background and we stand together in peace, brotherhood and love. We believe that God is the only one who is above us. He enables us to carry within us the fire of the burning towers as torches of eternal light."

"To remind us that America is freedom and freedom is America. Our forefathers established it, our fathers believed in it, we will fight for it and our children will keep it forever."

"Dino Laudati, September 11, 2001."

Dianne Robbins from my district office sent this along. Her daughter sent it to her, Beth Horner.

"On Monday we e-mailed jokes. On Tuesday we did not. On Monday we thought that we were secure. On Tuesday we learned better. On Monday we were talking about heroes being athletes. On Tuesday we relearned who our heroes are. On Monday we were irritated that our rebate checks had not arrived. On Tuesday we gave money away to people we had never met. On Monday there were people fighting against praying in schools."

On Tuesday you would have been hard pressed to find a school where someone was not praying. On Monday people argued with their kids about playing in their room. On Tuesday the same people could not get home fast enough to hug their kids. On Monday people were upset that they had to wait two minutes in a fast food drive-through line. On Tuesday people didn't care about waiting up to 6 hours to give blood for the dying.

On Monday we waved our flags signifying our cultural diversity. On Tuesday we waved only the American flag. On Monday there were people trying to separate each other by race, sex, color and creed. On Tuesday they were all holding hands.

On Monday we were men or women, black or white, old or young, rich or poor, gay or straight, Christian or non-Christian. On Monday we were all Americans. On Monday politicians argued about budget surpluses. On Tuesday, grief stricken, they sang 'God Bless America.'

On Monday the President was going to Florida to read to children. On Tuesday he returned to Washington to protect our children. On Monday we had families. On Tuesday we had orphans. On Monday people went to work as usual. On Tuesday they died. On Monday people were fighting the 10 Commandments on government property. On Tuesday the same people all said 'God help us all' while thinking 'Thou shall not kill.'"

It is sadly ironic how it takes horror and grief to make us think of the things we have taken for granted, the things that have been forgotten or overlooked, hopefully will never be forgotten again.

These are messages from our community and our constituents. I am certain every Member in Congress probably has similar that they have received. The outpouring of support for our Commander in Chief, the President of the United States, has been wonderful.

In Palm Beach County, a county I come from, a typical blood bank volume is 500 pints a week. Last week when I visited Palm Beach County that same blood bank, and I will use the phrase used then by George Bush, the President, the President's father, a thousand points of light. Well, last week in Palm Beach County there were 7,000 pints of life supporting New York and Washington.

I commend my community. I commend this Congress. I am proud to be an American. I thank all who have witnessed and watched us work together on behalf of the American people.
Resolved. That I Mina'Bente Sais Na Liheslaturan Gua˚han does hereby, on behalf of the People of Guam, condemn the hijack- ing of American commercial passenger air- liners by terrorist forces and the attack and bombing of the New York City World Trade Center Twin Towers and the Pentagon as cowardly acts of war perpetrated upon the United States of America and its People; and be it further

Resolved. That I Mina'Bente Sais Na Liheslaturan Gua˚han does hereby, on behalf of the People of Guam, wholeheartedly and resolutely support the promise and deter- mination of President George W. Bush to "hunt down and bring to justice" those who plan and perpetrate such acts of war against any freedom loving people and nation, as well as those who harbor or provide refuge to such perpetrators and mass murderers; and be it further

Resolved. That I Mina'Bente Sais Na Liheslaturan Gua˚han does hereby, on behalf of the People of Guam, wholeheartedly support President George W. Bush’s stern intent and resolve to capture, arrest and prosecute all involved in this breach of peace and vio- lation of human rights, and his declaration of and resolution that the search, capture and prosecution of these mass murderers is a top priority of the United States government and its law enforcement agencies; and be it further

Resolved. That I Mina'Bente Sais Na Liheslaturan Gua˚han does hereby, on behalf of the People of Guam, extend to the Honor- able George Pataki, Governor of New York; the Honorable Rudolph Giuliani, Mayor of New York City; the People of New York City, especially the families of those who were injured or who perished as a result of the cowardly attacks upon the World Trade Center Twin Towers; the People of Washington, D.C., especially the families of those who were injured or who perished as a result of the cowardly attacks upon the Pentagon; and the crash of the hijacked plane in Som- erse t County, Pennsylvania the sympathy, condolences and prayers of all the People of Guam; and be it further

Resolved. That the Speaker certify and Legislative Secretary attest to the adoption hereof of the same be sub- mitted to the Honorable George W. Bush, President of the United States of America; to the Honorable Richard B. Cheney, Vice President of the United States of America and President of the U.S. Senate; to the Hon- orable J. Dennis Hastert, Speaker of the U.S. House of Representatives; to the Honorable George Pataki, Governor of the State of New York; Honorable Rudolph Giuliani, Mayor of New York City; to the Honorable Tom Ridge, Governor of Pennsylvania; to Mr. Jim Good- win, President and Chief Executive Officer of United Airlines, Ltd.; to Mr. Donald J. Carty, President and Chief Executive Officer of American Airlines; to the Honorable Rob- ert A. Underwood, Guaman’s Delegate to the U.S. House of Representatives; and to the Honorable Carl T. Gutierrez, I Maga’lahen Guahan (Governor of Guam).

But at the same time that we stand in solidarity with the rest of America, we as the People of Guam face the greatest economic challenge that it has faced since World War II when Guam was devastated as the only American territory occupied by an enemy during the entire 20th Century.

Guam’s economy is fueled primarily by tourism, most of it from Japan. Even prior to this attack, Guam was experiencing a 15 percent unemployment rate, because our economy is tied so much to Japan’s, which was three times the national average. Guam was experiencing a $40 million shortfall in revenues for the Government of Guam, roughly 10 percent of its entire budget, and for months my office, along with other political leaders on Guam and business leaders, have since tried to figure out various economic strategies of recovery.

But since the attack, the results have even been worse. The economic picture that we face is even worse. Because of international uncertainty and safety concerns, and perhaps a little bit out of deference to a Nation in mourning, many international tourists have canceled their plans to come to Guam. This is devastating to my home island.

Continental Micronesia, which is the major airline of Guam, has laid off hundreds of workers. Hotels, restaurants and shops are empty; hundreds have been sent home or had their hours cut back dramatically. The rip- ple effect on ancillary economic activ- ities and on Government of Guam reve- nues is immediate and dramatic. 25,000 Japanese tourists have canceled their plans to visit Guam this month, and it estimated that there will be a 25 to 30 percent decline in the coming months in the number of tourists from Japan.

The people of Guam are no strangers to tough economic times. Time and time again, the people of Guam have weathered the storm and persevered during economic hardship. Whether it was rebuilding the economy after a Supertyphoon, like Omar in 1992 and Paka in 1997, or an earthquake, like the 8.1 on the Richter scale we experi- enced in 1993, or following World War II, or the Gulf War, the people of Guam have always fought back, remained pa- tient but determined, and eventually overcame the economic difficulty.

Recovery from the Asian financial crisis, the downsizing of the military following the Cold War, and now the re- cent terrorist attacks, presents an ongoing challenge. In this hour of na- tional crisis, Guam will do its part, as Guam’s economy is fueled primarily by tourism, most of it from Japan. Even prior to this attack, Guam was experiencing a 15 percent unemployment rate, because our economy is tied so much to Japan’s, which was three times the national average. Guam was experiencing a $40 million shortfall in revenues for the Government of Guam, roughly 10 percent of its entire budget, and for months my office, along with other political leaders on Guam and business leaders, have since tried to figure out various economic strategies of recovery.

But since the attack, the results have even been worse. The economic picture that we face is even worse. Because of international uncertainty and safety concerns, and perhaps a little bit out of deference to a Nation in mourning, many international tourists have canceled their plans to come to Guam. This is devastating to my home island.

The Chaplain, the Reverend Daniel P. Coughlin, offered the following prayer:

"LORD God of time and eternity, our national story is rooted in faith in You. Motivated by religious senti- ments, the chapters of our history turn on pages of prayerful trust during times of crisis. Be with us at this present hour, dur- ing our evolving crisis. We are on the way, O Lord. Our flag flies at full mast as our planes once again reach for the sky and our ships cross the mighty shoulders of the seas. From memorial services, America struggles from her knees and comes to full stature again, poised for the next move. Be with us, Lord, in our next step. The distant display of military on the horizon and the powerful workforce engaged by Monday’s routine are united here on the floor of Congress and motivate us to pray. Be with all of us, Lord, about our daily tasks as Americans. Ready to defend what we love, alert to alarms and setbacks, yet compas- sionate to all human limitation and suffering, we are on our way, Lord, to confront the evils of our time. With clear vision and good judgment, inspire us in only just desires. Be with us, Lord, now and forever. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair has examined the Journal of the Congression last day’s proceedings and announces to the House his approval thereof. Pursuant to clause 1, rule 1, the Journal stands approved.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Will the gentlewoman from California (Ms. Solis) come forward and lead the House in the Pledge of Allegiance. Ms. SOLIS: I lead the Pledge of Allegiance as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

COMMUNICATION FROM THE CLERK OF THE HOUSE

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following communication from the Clerk of the House of Representatives:

OFFICE OF THE CLERK, HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Hon. J. Dennis Hastert,
Speaker, House of Representatives,
Washington, DC.
