Dear Mr. Speaker: Pursuant to the permission granted in Clause 2(b) of Rule II of the Rules of the U.S. House of Representatives, the Clerk received the following message from the Secretary of the Senate on September 21, 2001 at 11:30 p.m.:

The Senate passed without amendment H.R. 2926.

With best wishes,

Sincerely,

Jeff Trandahl,
Clerk of the House.

PUTTING THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT IN CHARGE OF AIRPORT SECURITY

(Mr. DeFazio asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. DEFAZIO. Mr. Speaker, last Friday, the House of Representatives passed a $15 billion airline bailout bill with not one penny in that bill for enhanced aviation security; no mandate for a change in aviation security. The administration tells us we will have to wait till October 1 to get their recommendations.

It has been 14 years since I introduced my first bill to enhance screening at airports and checking of baggage. Many other Members introduced bills before I did, but for years, we have been thwarted by the Air Transport Association and member airlines, and they gave us the system we have today, a mish-mash of private security firms, some of whom are on probation for violating the rules, one whose manager is in jail, still providing security at our airports, lowest bidding firms for screening, uncoordinated local, State or Port Authority police on the airstide.

It is time to put the Federal Government in charge of airport security.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 4 of rule I, the Speaker signed the following enrolled bill on Friday, September 21, 2001: H.R. 2926, to preserve the continued viability of the United States air transportation system.

A SALUTE TO THE MEMBERS OF THE NEVADA AIR NATIONAL GUARD

(Mr. Gibbons asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GIBBONS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to salute members of the Nevada Air National Guard in the State of Nevada who have been authorized and called to active duty in support of Operation Infinite Justice.

Eighty-three brave and dedicated personnel from the 152nd Intelligence Squadron, based in Reno, Nevada, are ready and eager to support this Nation against the war on terrorism.

All across this country, reservists and guardsmen are rearranging their lives to answer the call to duty. Many families in Nevada, and indeed throughout America, will require the military’s assistance in many ways. Everything from child care to changes in family benefits will be required to see that we can provide the most adequate care and peace of mind that our fighting men and women deserve.

Mr. Speaker, as we prepare to fight this war against terrorism, let us speak in one voice, a unified voice, in support of our military men and women.

Let us not forget that while we send our brave men and women off to defend freedom itself, that we, here at home, must lend support to their families throughout their time of need.

I know that these men and women will make America proud. I know that they will bring justice to America.

EXPRESSING SENSE OF CONGRESS REGARDING ESTABLISHMENT OF NATIONAL CHARACTER COUNTS WEEK

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and agree to the concurrent resolution (H. Con. Res. 204) expressing the sense of Congress regarding the establishment of National Character Counts Week.

The Clerk reads as follows:

H. CON. RES. 204

Whereas the well-being of the Nation requires that the young people of the United States become an involved, caring citizenry with good character;

Whereas the character education of children has become more urgent as violence by and against youth increasingly threatens the physical and psychological well-being of the people of the United States;

Whereas more than ever, children need strong and constructive guidance from their families and their communities, including schools, youth organizations, religious institutions, and civic groups;

Whereas the character of a nation is only as strong as the character of its individual citizens;

Whereas the public good is advanced when young people are taught the importance of good character and the positive effects that good character can have in personal relationships, in school, and in the workplace;

Whereas scholars and educators agree that people do not automatically develop good character and that, therefore, conscientious efforts must be made by institutions and individuals that influence young people; that help young people develop the essential traits and characteristics that comprise good character;

Whereas, although character development is, first and foremost, an obligation of families, the efforts of faith communities, schools, and youth, civic, and human service organizations also play an important role in fostering and promoting good character;

Whereas Congress encourages students, teachers, parents, youth, and community leaders to recognize the importance of character education in preparing young people to play their role in determining the future of the Nation;

Whereas effective character education is based on core ethical values which form the foundation of democratic society; whereas examples of character are trustworthiness, respect, responsibility, fairness, caring, citizenship, and honesty;

Whereas elements of character transcend cultural, religious, and socioeconomic differences;

Whereas the character and conduct of our youth reflect the character and conduct of society; therefore, every adult has the responsibility to teach and model ethical values and every social institution has the responsibility to promote the development of good character;

Whereas Congress encourages individuals and organizations, especially those who have an interest in the education and training of the young people of the United States, to adopt the elements of character as intrinsic to their mission of promoting the well-being of individuals, communities, and society;

Whereas many schools in the United States recognize the need, and have taken steps, to integrate the values of our communities into their teaching activities;

Whereas the establishment of National Character Counts Week, during which individuals, families, schools, youth organizations, religious institutions, civic groups, and other organizations would focus on character education, would be of great benefit to the Nation.

Whereas the week beginning October 15, 2001, and the week beginning October 14, 2002, are appropriate weeks to establish as National Character Counts Week: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That it is the sense of Congress that a National Character Counts Week should be established to promote character education; and

That the President should issue a proclamation calling upon the people of the United States to—

(A) embrace the elements of character identified by their local schools and communities, such as trustworthiness, respect, responsibility, fairness, caring, citizenship, and honesty; and

(B) observe such a week with appropriate ceremonies, programs, and activities.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Kentucky (Mr. FLETCHER) and the gentleman from California (Ms. SOLIS) each wishes to make a statement of 3 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Kentucky (Mr. FLETCHER).

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks on the concurrent resolution now under consideration, H. Con. Res. 204.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Kentucky?

There was no objection.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of House Concurrent Resolution 204, expressing the sense of Congress regarding the establishment of National Character Counts Week and would like to thank the gentleman from Texas (Mr. SMITH) and the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. SCOTT) for introducing this resolution and in their efforts regarding character education.

With the growing concern for the safety of students and teachers, many have looked to character education in the schools as a solution. Making appropriate and good choices in life relies upon strong character, yet some children do not get much guidance or support for character development. Supporting the ethical, social and emotional development of children will help to create better schools and a more compassionate and responsible society.

In the past, those who have helped our children, neighbors, coaches, teachers, guidance counselors, and many others would not necessarily have recognized their role as a character educator. It was just something that friends and family did to foster a sense of community among its youngest members. Unfortunately, in an increasingly transient society, where both parents often work, this traditional model has been abandoned. As a result, it now seems that some children lack the basic values that would not only help them avoid such things as unwanted pregnancies, drugs, school violence, and alcohol problems, but also teach them the importance of being respectful and honest.

Today, every teacher and every student can articulate the consequences of this neglect. The recent rash of school shootings is one example, but so is the low voter turnout among young people and their lack of involvement in community organizations. As a result, many Americans are looking to character education as one possible solution to the problems that plague our classrooms and our communities.

Research indicates that character education can improve behavior as well as academic achievement.

A University of Illinois study of four schools using the “Positive Action” character development program found that the average number of disciplinary incidents requiring referral dropped by 74 percent after one year, and achievement scores improved by an average of 28 percentage points.

Standardized test scores of students exposed to the “Responsive Classroom” program, which emphasizes good character, increased 22 percent on average, versus just three percent for students not participating in the program.

A 1997 study demonstrated that students trained in the Violence Prevention Training Program found that the average number of violent aggression, and in engaged in more pro-social interactions than peers who were not exposed to the character curriculum.

I applaud the efforts of President Bush to improve the academic achievement of our Nation’s youth and his plan or improving our students’ character. As Governor Bush noted in 1999, yes, we want our children to be smart and successful, but even more, we want them to be good and kind and decent. Yes, our children must learn how to make a living, but even more, they must learn how to live and what to love. “Intelligence is not enough,” said Martin Luther King, Jr. “Intelligence plus character, that is a true goal of education.”

To continue the President’s focus on character education, this resolution expresses the sense of Congress regarding the establishment of National Character Counts Week. This resolution is simply another step forward. It expresses the sense of Congress that a National Character Counts Week should be established to promote character education; and, two, the President should issue a proclamation calling upon the people of the United States to embrace the elements of character identified by their local schools and communities, such as trustworthiness, respect, responsibility, fairness, caring, citizenship, and honesty; and observe such a week with appropriate ceremonies, programs, and activities.

I urge all my colleagues to support House Concurrent Resolution 204.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. SOLIS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to join the gentleman from Texas (Mr. SMITH) and the many other bipartisans of House Concurrent Resolution 204 in urging our Members to support this important resolution today.

Character education can play a vital role in shaping the lives and values of our children. However, character education is not a substitute for good parenting or meant to take the place of good parenting. It is simply another tool our communities and schools can use to facilitate the development of our young person’s moral character.

Many schools in the Los Angeles County area have recently taken up the cause of character education. Schools in my district are placing new emphasis on teaching young people about respect, responsibility, caring, citizenship and honesty.

Recent incidents remind us about the need for character education among our young people. Unfortunately, in the last few weeks, in my own community, in the City of San Gabriel, a shopkeeper who had been a store owner there for over 20 years and a pillar of the community was shot to death at 3 p.m. in the afternoon by some young individuals.

People have attacked and harassed individuals who look to be different or speak a different language, or share a different religious belief. Young women in my district attending a local community college were recently harassed because they attended college wearing a Muslim scarf of over their head.

And even before the tragedies of September 11, the City of Azusa, also in my district, attending a local community college were recently harassed because they attended college wearing a Muslim scarf of over their head.

This has gone on for too long. I hope that further emphasis on responsibility, good citizenship, tolerance, and understanding will help to stem the tide of hate crimes in this country.

House Concurrent Resolution 204 expresses the sense of Congress that a National Character Counts Week should be established and that the President should issue a proclamation on the topic of character education.

The establishment of a National Character Counts Week will provide family members, children, parents, students, community-based organizations, and civic groups the ability to focus on character education and its many benefits.

In closing, I want to thank the gentleman from Texas (Mr. SMITH) for his leadership on this issue and urge the Members to support this resolution.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.
CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE
September 24, 2001

Mr. SMITH of Texas. First, Mr. Speaker, I want to thank the gentleman from Kentucky (Mr. FLETCHER) for yielding me this time, and I also want to thank him for his help in passing this resolution, which I introduced last July.

Mr. Speaker, a good definition of character is summed up in the old saying “Character is what you do when no one is looking.”

Men and women of character are guided by standards of right and wrong. They do not look to others for approval or bend to peer pressure.

National polls indicate that moral concerns and family decline are some of the most important problems facing the country today. Too many of our children grow up in a culture that acknowledges no right or wrong.

Americans are concerned about the quality of their children’s education. They are also troubled about the decline in our Nation’s values and its effect on our children. Although parents should be the primary developers of character, educators play an increasingly important role. Communities across the Nation recognize that character education is an integral part of a well-rounded curriculum.

Our Nation’s teachers are aware that character education can establish standards for behavior.

President Bush has made character education an important component of his education reform bill. By allocating funds to character education, States, local education agencies, parents, and students will have an opportunity to promote character and values. This resolution will encourage schools to embrace character education. It designates the third week of October of this year and 2002 as “National Character Counts Week.”

I hope children across the Nation will participate in character-building activities in their schools. It is imperative that we teach our children the values that strengthen their character and make our country strong. To reap the rewards of a virtuous society, we must first sow the seeds of character when educating our children.

Ms. SOLIS. Mr. Speaker, I would like to just reiterate that this is a good bill and ask my colleagues to support it.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, let me just close before I yield back the remainder of my time.

In light of the recent events, it seems even more appropriate to quote Dr. Martin Luther King. Let me read his quote. “The function of education, therefore, is to teach one to think intensively and to think critically. But education which stops with efficiency may prove the greatest menace to society. The most dangerous criminal may be the man gifted with reason and no morals. We must remember that intelligence is not enough. Intelligence plus character, that is the goal of true education.”

Mr. BUYER. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this Resolution, House Concurrent Resolution 204, legislation establishing a national “Character Counts Week” sponsored by my friend from Texas, Mr. LAMAR SMITH.

Today, the vast majority of Americans share a respect for fundamental traits of character: honesty, compassion, justice, courage, and perseverance. Yet, in today’s world, all children face great uncertainties in a complex and sometimes troubled society.

Positive character traits are not always readily apparent and easy for them to grasp or learn. When children are young, it can be dif-cult to decipher between what is right and what is wrong. Therefore, our challenge is to provide youths with the self-esteem, stamina, and support they need to survive, be successful, and develop into strong, competent, caring, and responsible citizens.

This resolution encourages the establishment of a “Character Counts” week, geared towards educators, students and communities to become more involved in the development of positive character traits.

Life consists of a series of choices. Every choice you make helps to define the kind of person you choose to be. Good character requires doing the right thing even when it is costly, risky, or when no one is looking. With all the pressures youths face today, how can we, as lawmakers, encourage our children to do the right thing, while so many elements in our culture say the complete opposite?

That is why it is so important for Congress to pass this resolution. Character education is about celebrating what is right with young people while encouraging and enabling them to develop knowledge and life skills for enhancing ethical and responsible behavior. I urge my colleagues to join with me in support of this measure.

Ms. CARSON of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, “character.”

Webster’s New World Dictionary, Third colege Edition defines “character” as “moral strength, self-discipline, fortitude.”

The pillars which guide ethical decision-making, which make up character are: Trustworthiness, respect, responsibility, fairness, caring, citizenship.

Trustworthiness includes morality, honesty, truthfulness, sincerity, candor, loyalty and integrity.

Respect includes civility, courtesy and decency.

Being responsible means being in charge of our choices and, thus, our lives. It means being accountable for what we do and who we are.

Fairness involves issues of equality, impartiality, proportionality and openness.

Caring is ultimately about our responsibilities toward other people. A person who really cares feels an emotional response to both the pain and pleasure of others.

The concept of citizenship includes civic virtues and duties that prescribe how we ought to behave as part of a community. The good citizen gives more than he or she takes.

As leaders of this great nation, especially at this time, we must be examples of strong, moral unblemished character and encourage the young people of this nation to replicate these attributes in all their ways and conduct.

Mr. FLETCHER. Mr. Speaker, I have no further request for time, and I yield back the remainder of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MILLER of Florida). The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Kentucky (Mr. FLETCHER) that the House suspend the rules and agree to the concurrent resolution, H. Con. Res. 204.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the concurrent resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

A message in writing from the President of the United States was communicated to the House by Ms. Wanda Evans, one of his secretaries.

SMALL BUSINESS TECHNOLOGY TRANSFER PROGRAM REAUTHORIZATION ACT OF 2001

Mr. MANZULLO. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 1860) to reauthorize the Small Business Technology Transfer Program, and for other purposes, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 1860.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE. This Act may be cited as the “Small Business Technology Transfer Program Reauthorization Act of 2001”.

SEC. 2. EXTENSION OF PROGRAM AND EXPENDI-TURE AMOUNTS.

(a) In GENERAL.—Section 9(n)(1) of the Small Business Act (15 U.S.C. 638(n)(1)) is amended to read as follows:

“(1) REQUIRED EXPENDITURE AMOUNTS.—

“(A) In GENERAL.—With respect to each fistical year through fiscal year 2009, each Federal agency that has an extramural budget in excess of $1,000,000,000 for that fiscal year, shall expend with small business concerns not less than the percentage of that extramural budget specified in subparagraph (B), specifically in connection with STTR programs that meet the requirements of this section and any policy directives and regulations issued under this section.

“(B) EXPENDITURE AMOUNTS.—The percentage of the extramural budget required to be expended by an agency in accordance with subparagraph (A) shall be:

“(i) 0.15 percent for each fiscal year through fiscal year 2003; and

“(ii) 0.3 percent for fiscal year 2004 and each fiscal year thereafter.”

(b) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 9 of the Small Business Act (15 U.S.C. 638) is amended in subsections (b)(4) and (e)(6), by striking “pilot” each place it appears.

SEC. 3. INCREASE IN AUTHORIZED PHASE II AWA-RDS.

SEC. 4. AGENCY OUTREACH.

Section 9(o) of the Small Business Act (15 U.S.C. 638(o)) is amended—

(B) in subparagraph (C), by striking “and” at the end;

(b) SIMPLIFIED REPORTING REQUIREMENTS.

Section 9(o)(11) of the Small Business Act (15 U.S.C. 638(o)(11)) is amended by striking “and STTR” after “SBIR” each place it appears.

(c) IN GENERAL.—The Administrator shall provide to affected small businesses, research institutions, and other interested parties the opportunity to comment on draft model agreements.

(d) OPPORTUNITY FOR COMMENT.—In promulgating regulations under paragraph (1), the Administrator shall provide to affected agencies, small business concerns, research institutions, and other interested parties the opportunity to comment on draft model agreements.

(e) ADOPTION OF MODEL AGREEMENT BY FEDERAL AGENCIES.—Section 9(o)(11) of the Small Business Act (15 U.S.C. 638(o)(11)) is amended by striking “and STTR” after “SBIR” each place it appears.

(f) FAST PROGRAM DATA COLLECTION.

SEC. 5. POLICY DIRECTIVE MODIFICATIONS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—Section 9(o) of the Small Business Act (15 U.S.C. 638(o)) is amended—

(B) in subparagraph (C), by striking “and” at the end;

(c) IN GENERAL.—The Administrator shall promulgate regulations establishing a single model agreement for use in the STTR program that allocates between small business concerns and research institutions intellectual property rights, if any, to carry out follow-on research, development, or commercialization.

(ii) OPPORTUNITY FOR COMMENT.—In promulgating regulations under paragraph (1), the Administrator shall provide to affected agencies, small business concerns, research institutions, and other interested parties the opportunity to comment on draft model agreements.

(iii) ADOPTION OF MODEL AGREEMENT BY FEDERAL AGENCIES.—Section 9(o)(11) of the Small Business Act (15 U.S.C. 638(o)(11)) is amended by striking “and STTR” after “SBIR” each place it appears.

SEC. 6. SMALL BUSINESS CONCERNS AND CONCERNS LOCATED IN AREAS NOT SELECTED TO PARTICIPATE IN THE SBIR AND STTR PROGRAM.

(a) SELECTION CONSIDERATION.—Section 34(c)(2)(B) of the Small Business Act (15 U.S.C. 657d(c)(2)(B)) is amended—

(A) by striking “or an STTR program”; and

(b) SIMPLIFIED REPORTING REQUIREMENTS.—

Section 9(v) of the Small Business Act (15 U.S.C. 638(v)) is amended by inserting “or an STTR program” after “SBIR” each place it appears.

(c) IN GENERAL.—The Administrator shall provide to affected agencies, small business concerns, research institutions, and other interested parties the opportunity to comment on draft model agreements.

(d) OPPORTUNITY FOR COMMENT.—In promulgating regulations under paragraph (1), the Administrator shall provide to affected agencies, small business concerns, research institutions, and other interested parties the opportunity to comment on draft model agreements.

Mr. MANZULLO. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

The purpose of H.R. 1860 is to amend the Small Business Act to extend the Small Business Technology Transfer Program, more familiarly known as the STTR Program, through the end of September 2009.

Under present law, the STTR program will terminate on September 30, 2001. The STTR program requires a cooperative venture between a for-profit small business and either a university, federal lab, or a nonprofit research institute for the purpose of meeting particular needs or developing commercially viable products from ideas spawned in a laboratory environment.

This program builds on the well-established reputation that small businesses have for innovation and job creation to the benefit of the economy, generally, and specifically those who participate in the program. It also benefits the vast wealth of scientific knowledge that is available in this Nation’s research institutions that employ approximately one-fourth of the scientists and engineers in the country.

Together small business concerns and the research community have proved a successful vehicle for moving ideas from academic environments to the practical, useful commercial world to the benefit of U.S. economy and workers.

For a Federal agency to participate in the program, it must have a contracted-out research and development budget that exceeds $1 billion in any fiscal year. Currently there are five Federal agencies that meet the funding requirement: the Department of Defense, the Department of Energy, the Department of Health and Human Services, NASA, and the National Science Foundation.

No new funding is required to reauthorize this program since the program is funded as a percentage of the contracted-out research and development funds annually appropriated by Congress to those federal agencies meeting the funding threshold.

Beginning in fiscal year 2004, the percentage of the R&D budget required to be spent for small high tech firms from a university, federal lab, or nonprofit research institute for the purpose of meeting particular needs or developing commercially viable products from ideas spawned in a laboratory environment.

Beginning in fiscal year 2004, the amount that a small business can receive for Phase II award is increased from $500,000 to $750,000 in line with Phase II awards made under the SBIR program.
Participating agencies are directed in this bill to implement an outreach program to research institutions and small business concerns for the purpose of enhancing outreach in conjunction with any such outreach done for purposes of SBIR program.

The bill is important to foster the development of small high technology firms. I commend my Committee on Science, for the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. EHLERS) and the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. BARCIA), in bringing this bill to the floor.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. GONZALEZ. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, today we stand and take the final step toward reauthorizing the Small Business Technology Transfer Program and upgrading it from its current pilot program status.

We began this initiative in 1992 with a unique goal, to help the small business and research communities work together to bring innovative new technologies to the marketplace. It is impossible to overstate the impact that technological innovation has had on the economy and on our lives. Computer and telecommunications innovation, biotechnology and chemical engineering have fueled a boom and profoundly changed the way we work and live. Some technologies were exotic or even unheard of just 10 years ago. Today, they have become commonplace.

Mr. Speaker, the Small Business Technology Transfer Program has helped to spur some of this remarkable creativity and growth. Between 1994 and 1998 alone, STTR awarded 864 Federal grants for research through 5 Federal departments and agencies. STTR has led to inventions emerging in high-technology enterprises, including advancements in vaccine applications and biotechnology research.

With the passage of today’s legislation, we will continue to support small technology firms across this country by extending the life of STTR through the year 2009, while expanding the program from its previous pilot program status.

In particular, we will expand the program’s reach by increasing the percentage of Federal research grants reserved for small businesses from 0.15 to 0.30 percent, doubling the amount of research dollars going to small businesses. This will go a long way towards increasing the role small firms play in developing new technology.

In addition to increasing the number of opportunities for small businesses, we are increasing the amount of Phase II grants from $500,000 to $750,000 so that those already successful small businesses will have an even better chance of product commercialization.

We are also directing the SBA to develop a streamlined model agreement so that small businesses can spend more time developing technology and less time on bureaucratic paperwork.

But that is not enough. The Committee on Small Business recognizes this technology can be the driving equalizer in underserved communities and has positioned STTR to play a far larger role. For example, of the 864 contracts awarded, only 1.5 percent of those went to women-owned small businesses, and only 2.8 percent were awarded to minority businesses. This defeats one of the core missions of STTR, to help small businesses that otherwise do not have access to the tools and advice they need to take their ideas from the laboratory drawing board to the marketplace.

The committee has also directed the Small Business Administration to begin tracking awards to low-income communities. This will give a measurement of the level of support that STTR is providing to these areas.

Finally, we are redirecting the Federal and State Technological Partnership to further emphasize the importance of outreach to low-income communities in spreading and increasing the benefits of technological innovation. We created this program last year to encourage technology development in areas that had limited growth and success in the past.

An important component of this was supposed to be outreach to low-income communities. Unfortunately, the implementing regulation failed to focus on low-income communities. In consultation with the Senate, the committee changed the statutory language specifically to increase STTR and Small Business Innovation Research awards to low-income communities.

With this bill, we expanded the language to focus awards on businesses owned by women and socially and economically disadvantaged individuals within each State, as well as small businesses in regions that have been previously overlooked by STTR and SBIR awards.

I want to make it absolutely clear that outreach is a critical component to technology development. The enhancements included in this bill will begin to open access to technology for businesses located in low-income communities and other underserved regions, and we will measure the success of this outreach by tracking the number of those awards in those particular communities.

During the past decade, we saw enormous growth in small business and technological innovation. The benefits are many, but the gap between communities who benefit from the economic beneficials to entrepreneurs and those who are left behind is too wide. STTR is instrumental in helping more researchers and small businesses build the next new thing while at the same time bridging the digital divide.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to support this measure.
This program, which is the subject of this bill, stimulates technology transfer from research institutions to small businesses by awarding grants for collaborative research between small businesses and nonprofit research institutions. This award process has three phases. Phase one is a testing stage to determine the scientific, technical, and commercial merit and feasibility of a proposed R&D effort. Grants are limited to $100,000 during this stage. Projects that successfully complete phase one may be further developed in phase two, with additional funding up to $500,000. Phase three is designed for final R&D efforts and for commercialization of the idea. However, no Federal STTR funding is allowed for this stage. At that point it becomes the responsibility of the company.

This program is currently funded through a set-aside of 0.15 percent of Federal R&D budgets that exceed the threshold of $1 billion. Currently, five agencies participate in STTR: Department of Defense; National Aeronautics and Space Administration; Department of Health and Human Services, primarily through the National Institutes of Health; the Department of Energy; and the National Science Foundation.

The General Accounting Office evaluated STTR in 2000-2001 and found that companies receiving phase one grants felt that both the company and research counterpart contributed significantly to the expertise and implementation of the project. They reported a variety of outcomes, ranging from product sales to project discontinuation. And 99 percent of the grant recipients surveyed believed the STTR program should continue.

In addition to that, they did a survey of the companies involved to see what the effects were, and they discovered that the initial return on investment. Just the six most successful projects alone accounted for sales of $132 million. That almost covers the cost of the entire STTR program during the first few years.

In addition, the top two projects had $115 million of sales. Now, recognize, these sales go on and on for years. These are just the sales for the first year or two. So it clearly is a program that works. It is successful and does improve our economy, which is a goal.

This current bill, which I am offering, H.R. 1860, does several things to improve the program. First, the legislation reauthorizes the program through fiscal year 2009 and raises the set-aside percentage from 0.15 percent to 0.3 percent, which will increase the annual awards by approximately $60 million overall. Second, it increases the ceiling on the phase two award from $500,000 to $750,000. This simply reflects the rising costs of doing business since the program’s inception in 1992.

Finally, H.R. 1860 will, among other things, strengthen the data collection and reporting requirements of the agencies and small businesses participating in STTR and standardize intellectual property rights agreements between the companies and the business partners.

That last aspect is very important, because the participants reported a significant amount of their time, money, and effort had gone into developing the property rights agreements between the companies and the business partners. This bill standardizes that process and will save a considerable amount of time and money, particularly in attorneys’ fees and the time of the participants.

This bill is a cooperative effort between the House Committee on Science, the House Committee on Small Business and the Senate Small Business Committee. The three committees have worked in a bipartisan, bicameral effort to ensure this important program is not lost. In fact, the manager’s amendment reflects that cooperation by inserting the text of Senate bill 856, which is almost identical to our bill, as the manager’s amendment.

I would like to thank the leadership of these committees, Chairman Boehner, ranking member Hall, Chairman Manzullo and ranking member Velázquez, for their efforts in bringing this bill to the floor. This is a good bill that will improve upon an already successful small business program. It will strengthen R&D partnerships between research institutions and small businesses. It will help America’s economy by encouraging new small business ventures, which are a key component of fueling economic growth.

And it will demonstrate the importance of funding Federal research efforts by bringing technology developed in research institutions into the marketplace and creating jobs.

Mr. Speaker, I urge Members to support the bill.

Mr. GONZALEZ. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from New Mexico (Mr. UDALL).

Mr. UDALL of New Mexico. Mr. Speaker, the small business technology transfer program has been a valuable tool to promote useful technological innovation since it was first authorized in 1992. Today, we take the final step toward extending and expanding STTR for the future. I hope that, if we see the same kind of development in the next 10 years as we have seen in the past decade, many more wonders will follow to change our lives and bolster our economy, which clearly needs it at this time.

The Subcommittee on Rural Enterprises, Agriculture, and Technology, on which I serve, held a hearing on this program on June 20, 2001. The STTR program is designed to address the lack of capital that small business research and development firms experience when getting started. Another unique aspect of the program is that small businesses can partner for research projects with research institutions, federally funded research and development centers, or nonprofit organizations.

By supporting this legislation, we are taking a big step to strengthen and improve the STTR program and its delivery program to women-owned, minority-owned and those companies located in low-income communities. This program is a valuable tool to assist small business owners who focus on research and development initiatives.

We have expanded the STTR in a number of ways. We raised the percentage of Federal agencies’ research budgets reserved for STTR from 1.5 percent to 3 percent. We also increased the amount of phase two awards from $500,000 to $750,000 to help more innovations get to market. To help small research and institutions, within a blizzard of different standardized agreements, we are asking the Small Business Administration to develop a single, standardized model agreement.

And we are asking SBA to make a concerted effort to reach out to underserved areas of the country with grants for those communities. We will see how well the agency does by tracking where and to whom STTR and SBIR grants are awarded. Technology can be the great economic equalizer, but the digital divide must be bridged first.

In my district in New Mexico, I have a rural area. Issues of the digital divide are profound. In fact, one young student recently won a computer in a school contest but did not have a telephone line to hook up the computer. We need an aggressive effort at digital inclusion. The small business technology transfer program will help bridge this gap through a grant program.

I would like to thank all my colleagues on the Committee on Small Business for their hard work and support. I would like to thank the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. MANZULLO). I know that he brings to this committee a bipartisan approach. We have been very successful at working together. I congratulate him for all his hard work and leadership on this bill.

Mr. GONZALEZ. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself the balance of my time.

The Committee on Small Business, Mr. Speaker, has always been recognized as a true model of bipartisanship. I commend the chairman of the committee today for upholding that tradition. I want to commend both the chairman of the committee and the ranking member for being really the guiding light in this as in many other pieces of legislation that will expand that business universe to all the small business men and women in this Nation.
H.R. 1860 today presents a greater opportunity than ever before. It is not only an expansion but it is a monitoring; and it really is an accountably designed to make sure that the legislation that we pass when it gets down on the ground, in our communities, actually is doing what it is supposed to.

Again, I comment the chairman and the ranking member for their fine work. I would ask that all my colleagues join us today in passage of this fine piece of legislation.

Mr. MANZULLO. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself the balance of my time.

I would urge my colleagues to vote in favor of this bill. We had a very interesting full committee hearing in New Mexico with regard to the Los Alamos lab in the district of the gentleman from New Mexico (Mr. UDALL). It became quite apparent that there has to be some way to make at least that lab come to the table and to include more local businesses and people involved in technology as part of their program. If this program is reauthorized, which I hope it will be, we will stay on top of the progress at Los Alamos and the other labs in this country to make sure the taxpayers' dollars that are being given are used wisely and that the portion that is set aside for small businessespeople is done exactly for that purpose.

I would urge my colleagues to vote for the bill.

Ms. VELÁZQUEZ. Mr. Speaker, as an original co-sponsor of H.R. 1860, I rise in support of this important legislation to not only reauthorize, but to make permanent the Small Business Administration's Small Business Technology Transfer (STTR) Program.

As the Ranking Democratic Member on the Committee on Small Business, I am well aware of the important role that technology plays in not only developing small businesses, but in the growth of our Nation's economy. The economic boom of the 1990's—the longest period of economic strength in our Nation's history—was fueled by small businesses and, especially high-tech firms. The strength of the economy, for such an unprecedented time period, was directly related to the success of the high-tech sector.

It might surprise my colleagues to know that small businesses are the leading source of innovations and that small firms produce twice as many innovations per employee as large firms. In fact, small businesses were responsible for most of the important innovations in the twentieth century, including items ranging from such practical consumer products and services as over-night delivery services and quick-frozen food to high-tech items such as the personal computer and the high-resolution x-ray microscope.

The STTR Program that we are authorizing today increases small business participation in the high-tech industry. Established in 1992, the STTR Program works by allowing small businesses to partner with universities, non-profit organizations, and research institutions. These research partners bring important capabilities that small businesses might not possess on their own. The partnership submits a proposal for necessary Federal research requirements.

With the reauthorization legislation, we have removed the pilot status of the STTR Program, and have extended the Program through fiscal year 2009.

We have also taken important steps to increase the amount of Federal research that will be performed by small businesses by increasing the percentage of agency's extramural research budgets to be devoted to the STTR Program from .15 percent to .3 percent beginning in fiscal year 2004. This action doubles the amount of research that the government will be able to support.

We have increased the grant amount of Phase I awards from the current $500,000 to $750,000. This provision allows smaller businesses more fund with which to conduct their research, thereby increasing the likelihood that their research will result in useful items that will make it to the marketplace.

Additionally, the bill contains provisions that will assist with the assessment of the STTR program, by requiring the collection and maintaining of pertinent data, that can later be used to evaluate the program's strengths and weaknesses.

Democratic Members included three important provisions to this reauthorization to encourage the growth of high-tech businesses. These changes include developing an STTR Program-wide model agreement, increasing awards to low-income areas, and tracking low income awards.

The partnership between small businesses and research institutions is a cornerstone of the STTR Program. The formalization of these teams, is the development of an agreement outlining the rights and responsibilities of each partner, and addressing the intellectual property rights and rights to carry out follow-on research, development or commercialization, if any, that are assigned to each partner.

It has come to the Committee's attention that each participating agency has a model agreement, and many universities and non-profits have model agreements. The result is an exercise in which the small business and its research partner must come to an agreement, and have that agreement parallel the agency's agreement. The scenario often occurs wherein a small business doing work for the same agency, but with multiple research partners, must have multiple agreements, none of which are standard. Ultimately, this results in time devoted to developing partnership agreements when that time would be more effectively used to actually conduct research.

Therefore, Committee Democrats have included language that requires the Small Business Administration (SBA) to go through a rule-making process to develop a single model agreement that can be accepted by all small businesses, agencies, and research partners. It is intended that this rule-making process will be performed in a way that accepts the input of agencies, small business owners, research institutions, and other interested parties. The resulting model agreement shall be used by all agencies as their model agreement so that small research firms can devote their time to that which they do best—research.

During last year's reauthorization of the Small Business Innovation Research (SBIR) Program—the sister program to the STTR Program—important language was included to increase awards to businesses located in low-income areas. Language was included in this Fast and Small Technology and Research Partnership Program by House Democrats on the Committee on Small Business that allows a 50 cents private for each federal dollar for assistance directed to low-income areas—even if the state is a high-volume state as far as SBIR dollars. We were concerned when this language was included, that it would not be implemented properly, and that not enough emphasis would be placed on this issue. This has become a reality in that the SBA did not include any reference to low-income area assistance under the FAST Program in its recent Policy Directive.

As a result of the SBA not being able to properly implement the low-income area assistance of the FAST Program in accordance with our intent, Committee Democrats included language in the STTR reauthorization legislation to require that a separate evaluation criteria for FAST proposals be developed to ensure that these proposals address how they are going to increase STTR and SBIR awards to businesses located in low-income areas. When we consulted with the Senate Small Business Committee on this language, they expressed concern that states not having substantive amounts of low-income areas could be penalized in an evaluation criteria totally devoted to increasing opportunities in these areas. Therefore, compromise language was developed to establish an evaluation criteria to ensure that proposals address how they are going to increase STTR and SBIR awards to (1) businesses owned and controlled by women, (2) businesses owned by minorities, and (3) businesses located in areas of high unemployment and low-income—all of which have historically not participated in the SBIR and STTR Programs. It is our intent that the SBA go through a rule-making process to determine the weight that this criteria should have compared to other criteria, and to determine the standards by which these proposals shall be evaluated. It is our understanding that the term “minorities” will encompass all socially and economically disadvantaged individuals.

This important change to the FAST Program will address the grim reality that of the 864 STTR awards from 1994 through 1998, only 1.5 percent went to women-owned businesses and only 2.8 percent went to minority owned businesses. Lastly, we included language in the STTR reauthorization to require that the SBA report to Congress, on an annual basis, on the number of SBIR and STTR awards made to small businesses located in the SBIR’s “Historically Underutilized” Zones are specifically defined as areas of high unemployment and low income. These locations have been out of the mainstream of economic growth that the nation has experienced over the past 20 years, and, as such, we benefit greatly from the economy’s strength in this technology provides to a community. Further, tracking awards made to these businesses will assist in evaluating the success of the FAST Program.

To conclude, I join my colleagues on the Committee on Small Business who are committed to ensuring that small businesses... across the country are able to grow and expand their technology capabilities. We know that not only do small businesses, in general, employ more than half of the non-farm workforce, but small businesses account for 38 percent of the private sector workforce in the high tech industry. We believe the STTR and SBIR Programs are critical to increasing the capacity of small business technology companies, and that these Programs should continue to be reauthorized and evaluated, and given appropriate resources to ensure their continued success.

Mr. BOEHLERT. Mr. Speaker, I support the Small Business Technology Transfer Program Reauthorization Act of 2001.

The Small Business Technology Transfer Program (STTR) was created in 1992 as an offshoot of the larger Small Business Innovation Research Program (SBIR). Both programs are designed to tap into the innovation of high technology small businesses and foster the commercialization of their research capabilities.

Specifically, the STTR program funds cooperative research projects between a small business and a non-profit research institution, such as a university or Federally funded laboratory. There are currently five participating agencies: Department of Defense, Department of Energy, National Aeronautics and Space Administration, Department of Health and Human Services, and the National Science Foundation. These agencies make R&D awards to the small business collaboration in the hopes of bringing technology or technology that may have been “on the shelf” of a research institution into the marketplace.

Since its inception, the STTR program has made approximately $300 million in awards to small businesses and research institutions. As GAO recently reported, the return on our investment has been more than satisfactory. Out of the 102 responses from companies participating in the STTR program from fiscal years 1995-97, $132 million in sales and $53 million in additional development funding was reported. In addition, future sales for those projects are expected to be about $900 million in additional development funding was reported. H.R. 1860 will continue this successful R&D program by reauthorizing it through fiscal year 2009, and doubling the set-aside of the participating agencies to .3 percent. The bill also makes important improvements to the program. One of those is the establishment of an electronic database that will better enable the Small Business Administration to evaluate the program’s progress.

Finally Mr. Speaker, I would like to commend the bipartisan effort to ensure this important program continues its successful efforts of technology transfer and innovation. I would like to thank Mr. EHLERS, Chairman of the Subcommittee on Environment, Technology and Standards, the Ranking Member of that Subcommittee Mr. BARRA´ZON, the Chairman of the House Small Business Committee Mr. MANZULLO, and the Ranking Members Ms. VELAZQUEZ for their efforts in crafting the legislation before the House.

H.R. 1860 will strengthen this country’s research and development community by investing in our nation’s innovative small businesses and I ask all Members to support its passage.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MILLER of Florida). The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. MANZULLO) that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 1860, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rule was suspended and the bill, as amended, was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

LIMITATION ON PER COUNTRY SHARE OF ASSESSMENTS FOR UNITED NATIONS PEACEKEEPING OPERATIONS

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the Senate bill (S. 248) to amend the Admiral James W. Nance and Meg Donavan Foreign Relations Authorization Act, Fiscal Years 2000 and 2001, to adjust a condition on the payment of arrearages to the United Nations that sets the maximum share of United Nations peacekeeping operation’s budget that may be assessed of any country.

S. 248

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION I. LIMITATION ON THE PER COUNTRY SHARE OF ASSESSMENTS FOR UNITED NATIONS PEACEKEEPING OPERATIONS.

(a) In General.—Section 311(b)(2) of the Admiral James W. Nance and Meg Donavan Foreign Relations Authorization Act, Fiscal Years 2000 and 2001 (as enacted by section 1000(a)(7) of Public Law 106-113 and contained in appendix A to H.R. 1000) is amended by striking “25 percent” and inserting “28.15 percent”.

(b) Conforming Amendment.—The redesignated paragraphed heading “ARREARAGE PAYMENTS” in title IV of the Departments of Commerce, Justice, and State, the Judiciary, and Related Agencies Appropriations Acts, 1998 (as contained in section 101(b) of division A of the Omnibus Consolidated and Emergency Supplemental Appropriations Act, 1999; 112 Stat. 2681-96) is amended by striking “25 percent” and inserting “28.15 percent”.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. HYDE) and the gentleman from California (Mr. LANTOS) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chairman recognizes the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. HYDE).

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may extend their remarks and include extraneous material on the Senate bill under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Illinois?

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

I rise in strong support of S. 248, a measure urgently requested by the administration. Its enactment will help to ensure that we can pay the second installment of our arrearages to the United Nations in return for continued progress in lowering our assessment ceilings for the U.N. regular budget and for U.N. peacekeeping operations.

Our actions on this measure are all the more important in light of the events of September 11. Meeting our financial obligations to the United Nations will help to ensure that our policymakers can keep the focus on broad policies that unite the members of the security council in the fight against global terrorism.

Its enactment revises one of the provisions of the underlying U.N. reform legislation, known as the Helms-Biden law, ensuring that we do not accumulate any additional arrears and that our assessed share for the United Nations peacekeeping operations will drop from close to 32 percent to 28 percent.

In December of 2000, the U.N. put in place a 6-year plan to reduce our share of U.N. peacekeeping costs, with the result that in 2002, our assessment ceiling will drop to 26.5 percent, with further reductions until it reaches 25 percent in 2006.

Our adoption of S. 248 will also ensure that our assessment ceiling for the U.N. regular budget will go from 25 percent to 22 percent, and that other long-term U.N. reform measures are fully implemented. Over the next 10 years, these lower payment ceilings will provide more than $2 billion of savings to the American taxpayer.

Enacted in the 106th Congress, the Helms-Biden law authorized a total of $819 million in arrearage payments to the U.N., including $100 million in fiscal year 1998 funds, $475 million in fiscal year 1999 funds, and $244 million in fiscal year 2000. The legislation also allowed an additional $107 million in debt relief of monies owed to the U.S. by the U.N.

These payments are only made upon specified certifications by the Department of State that the U.N. has implemented reform benchmarks upon each tranche of funds. Among the certifications for release of the first $100 million authorized under the Helms-Biden legislation are stipulations that the U.N. would not implement any measure violating our Constitution, ceding sovereignty, taxing Americans, creating a standing army, charging the U.S. interest on arrears or exercising control of any U.S. park, monument or property.

In December of 1999, this certification was made, and $100 million of fiscal year 1998 funds were paid to the U.N. This legislation would enable the Department of State to pay the second tranche of $475 million, together with the $107 million in debt relief foregone.
to the U.S., for a total of $582 million, conditional upon a similar certification that our U.N. assessment ceilings are being reduced.

I urge the adoption of this measure.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of this legislation.

First, Mr. Speaker, I want to commend my good friend, the distinguished chairman of the Committee on International Relations, the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. HYDE), for his outstanding work in bringing this legislation before the House.

I wish to take this opportunity to discuss the recent terrorist attacks and explain why, in light of these tragic events, it is all the more important that we pay our arrears to the United Nations.

Two weeks ago, Mr. Speaker, our Nation lost its innocence, but it found a new sense of unity and purpose. This new sense of unity comes from the sudden realization that our open and free and democratic way of life is under attack, and it must be and will be defended. We must learn from this tragic experience and we must be able to take intelligent, thoughtful and swift action.

But the United States, Mr. Speaker, cannot act alone and expect to prevail in this long-term painful struggle against international terrorism. All Americans deeply appreciate the many expressions of sympathy and support from our friends and allies, and some who do not fall into either category, but it will require actions, not simply words, to defeat global terrorist organizations and the nations which give them support and safe harbor.

As President Bush and our Nation’s diplomatic corps begin to secure concrete commitments required to wage this battle against international terrorism, we must take advantage of every forum available to reach out to the nations of the world.

The United Nations is clearly the world’s premier forum, and it will be one of the primary theaters for the United States to act diplomatically on this matter.

Within 48 hours of the September 11 outrage, the U.N. Security Council and the General Assembly of the United Nations condemned the violence and voted to support actions taken against those who are responsible and against those who aid them.

On Friday of that week, U.N. Secretary General Kofi Annan wrote an op-ed piece in the New York Times, and he said the following:

The international communities is defined not only by what it is for, but by what and whom it is against. The United Nations must have the courage to recognize that just as there are common aims, there are common enemies. To defeat them, all nations must join forces in an effort encompassing every aspect of the open, free global system, so wickedly and viciously exploited by the perpetrators of these outrages.

The United Nations is uniquely positioned to advance this effort.

Mr. Speaker, United Nations conventions already provide a legal framework for many of the concrete actions which must be taken by nations to eradicate terrorism. These conventions provide for the extradition and prosecution of terrorists and the suppression of money laundering. Nations that are serious about joining the United States in our battle against global terrorism must ratify these important conventions.

The United Nations can also help to ensure that the new battle against global terrorism does not slip to the back burner. Last Thursday President Bush said, “Even grief recedes with time and grace, but our resolve must not pass.”

By helping to focus the international community on the scourge of terrorism, the United Nations can help us turn our collective grief into concrete victories against the new enemy of the 21st century, international terrorism.

Aside from the battle against terrorism, the United Nations continues to play an invaluable role in promoting international peace and stability. Since its inception over half a century ago, the U.N. has negotiated 172 peaceful settlements to conflicts around the globe, helping to end the civil war in El Salvador and the Iran-Iraq war. Its peacekeeping operations have assisted to uphold ceasefire, conduct free and fair elections, deter violence and create free and democratic nations.

Even today, the U.N. is giving birth to a free and independent East Timor. Since the East Timorese voted in 1999 for independence from Indonesia and suffered enormous human and economic costs as a result of the violence following that vote, the United Nations has taken charge of this fledgling country, which just completed its first free and fair elections.

Now, Mr. Speaker, we cannot ask the United Nations to bring freedom to dif- ficulties possessed people, battle terrorism, resolve international conflicts and conduct extensive peacekeeping operations, and yet fail to pay our dues. The Helms-Biden United Nations package enacted in 1999 provided for the payment of American back-dues over a 3-year period, and our former United Nations ambassador, Richard Holbrooke, performed exceptionally well in successfully negotiating the type of U.N. reforms called by the Helms-Biden Act.

The legislation before our body today brings the U.N. arrears package into line with the far-reaching U.N. reform plan engineered by Ambassador Holbrooke and ensures that the $582 million can move forward expeditiously. I am very pleased that the United Nations arrears legislation enjoys such strong bipartisan support, and again, I wish to commend my friend, the gentleman from Illinois (Chairman HYDE), for his exemplary leadership on this bill.

I would note, however, that we are not bound by a side agreement between the White House and the House Republican leadership on the International Court of Criminals that must be related to this legislation moving forward.

Mr. Speaker, the American people passionately support the common goal, punishment of those who conducted the September 11 attacks, and an end to global terrorism. The United Nations can help achieve that goal if we meet our commitments. I strongly urge all of my colleagues to support this important bill.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to yield 3 minutes to the learned gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. SMITH). Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the chairman yielding me time.

Mr. Speaker, as the prime sponsor of the Admiral James W. Nance and Meg Donovan Foreign Relations Authorization Act, fiscal years 2000 and 2001, H.R. 3427, signed by President Clinton on November 29, 1999, I rise in very strong support of this legislation, S. 248, legislation that alters that Act and provides additional flexibility in pursuing our goals of reforming the operations of the United Nations, unleashing our efforts to build a coalition against this terrorist threat that we all face.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 3427, which authorized appropriations for the Department of State, contained dozens of reforms for our State Department, refugee protection, freedom broadcasting and a host of other things. As a matter of fact, the embassy security portion of it provided $5.5 billion over 5 years to try to beef up our efforts and to mitigate the threats against terrorists abroad. It also contained what is commonly referred to as the Helms-Biden provisions. Title IX, which contained specific reforms for the U.N. in exchange for payment of U.S. arrearages.

In the first year, the new law required that before arrearages were to be made, the Secretary of State had to make a number of certifications concerning U.S. sovereignty. That satisfied the arrears payments were released. In the second year, which is the focus of this legislation we are considering today, the Secretary of State is required to make certifications requiring reductions in assessments as mandated by law. Specifically, our legislation required that the assessment of the U.N.’s regular budget be lowered from 25 percent to 22 percent, and the U.S. share of any peacekeeping operations be reduced to no greater than 25 percent of the total cost.

In December of last year, as my colleagues, the gentleman from Illinois...

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE 17693

(Mr. HYDE) and the gentleman from California (Mr. LANTOS) have pointed out, following negotiations with the U.S. Representative to the U.N., the General Assembly agreed to lower the assessment for the regular budget to 22 percent, as required.

In addition, an agreement was reached to lower the peacekeeping share borne by the U.S., although at a more gradual pace than envisioned. Under the negotiated agreement, the U.S. share would drop from approximately 31 percent to 28.15 percent beginning in January of 2001. Subsequently, the rate would drop from 27.5 percent on July 1, then to 26.5 in 2002, and further reductions are anticipated, until we get down to the 25 percent within a 6-year time period.

Mr. Speaker, while this reduction is not as great as we had called for in the legislation, it represents a significant reform of the United Nations, and will save American taxpayers about $2 billion over the next 10 years.

Furthermore, Mr. Speaker, by accepting this negotiated settlement, we provide a clear signal to the world community that the United States is serious about acting together with our nations for the world.

Mr. Speaker, S. 248 will amend our law to fall in line with the negotiated reductions. I think it is a good bill and it deserves, I believe, the unanimous backing, especially during this time of crisis, of every Member of this Chamber.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, we continue to reserve our time.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. SHAYS).

Mr. SHAYS. Mr. Speaker, as chairman of the Committee on Government Reform Subcommittee on National Security, Veterans’ Affairs, and International Relations, I rise in strong support of repaying our debt to the United Nations.

Make no mistake about it. While this bill is being considered on the suspension calendar, it is one of the most important foreign policy decisions Congress will make this year.

Since the brutal terrorist attacks of September 11, our Nation has been working as never before to build an international coalition for the war against terrorism. Yet, at this same time, the administration is reaching out to nations from every corner of the globe, the United States remains the biggest debtor nation at the U.N. This is not only unacceptable. It is a galling impediment to our diplomatic efforts and clearly endangers our national security.

Mr. Speaker, S. 248 is necessary because the 1999 Helms-Biden agreement, which I supported, authorized the repayment of our Nation’s $826 million debt to the U.N., but contained a number of benchmarks the U.N. was required to meet. Last December, Ambassador Richard Holbrooke reached a landmark agreement with our U.N. member nations on reductions in regular and peacekeeping contributions by the United States. The agreement received the subsequent endorsement of Senators Jesse Helms and Joseph Biden who drafted this legislation to adjust certain statutory requirements so they would conform with this agreement and permit the long overdue payment of the U.S. arrears to the U.N.

The Cold War is over, but on September 11, we saw in very plain terms that the world is a far more dangerous place.

Today, there is considerable uncertainty, both at home and abroad, about the period we are entering and how we will wage the war against terrorists. Only by clearly defined global politics, will we, must, increasingly rely on the United Nations as a forum for resolving the varied interests of autonomous nations. Yet, every day we fail to pay our debts to the U.N., we make our work far more difficult.

Countries all over the world are looking to the United States for leadership, yet what they see is a very powerful and wealthy country refusing to live up to its international commitments. Why, as a nation, would we want to unnecessarily complicate our diplomatic efforts at a time when we need every ounce of leverage?

I want to conclude by stating that S. 248 enjoys broad bipartisan support. It passed the Senate earlier this year by a vote of 99 to 0, and Secretary of State Colin Powell has called it a needed step in repaying our arrears. I commend the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Hastert), and the Speaker of the House, the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. Hyde), the chairman of the Committee on International Relations, and the gentleman from California (Mr. Lantos), the ranking member of the committee, for bringing this legislation to the floor in a way that will allow us to avoid a protracted conference with the Senate.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to support S. 248 so we can get it to the President’s desk immediately.

Mr. LANTOS. Mr. Speaker, we have no additional requests for time; and I yield back the balance of our time.

Mr. HALL of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of S. 248 which will authorize repayment of United States back dues to the United Nations. Great nations pay their bills. It is time the United States met its obligations to this critical international organization.

This legislation will release the second installment of $582 million to pay off our back dues. As of today, the United States has the largest arrears of any Member State of the United Nations. It is the time the United States meets its obligations to this critical international organization.

This legislation will release the second installment of $582 million to pay off our back dues. As of today, the United States has the largest arrears of any Member State of the United Nations. It is the time the United States met its obligations to this critical international organization.

Mr. Speaker, the U.S. Congress needs to live up to our commitments. In 1999, we told the U.N. that if it made certain reforms, we would pay our back dues through the Helms-Biden legislation. The U.N. has kept its end of the bargain and now it is time for Congress to keep ours. Former U.S. Ambassador to the U.N. Richard Holbrooke deserves credit and thanks for negotiating this agreement with the United Nations.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, I want to commend the leadership word to pay for bringing this important measure to the floor today. Now is the time for action. I would urge my colleagues to vote in favor of this legislation.

Mr. GIROFALCO. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the tax relief proposals S. 248, the United Nations Dues Payment Act, which will allow the payment of $582 million that has already been authorized and in light of recent and ongoing reforms at the United Nations. This would give the United Nations increased leverage in pursuing its policies at the United Nations, particularly in forming a worldwide anti-terror coalition.

Today the United Nations, and the international community as a whole, is at a watershed. As we analyze our current situation, we must bear in mind where we have been. The United Nations was born out of the ashes of the most terrible, costly war of the 20th century. A strong U.N. might have prevented it.

Today, the U.N. must seize a role in unraveling the international community’s long-term efforts to defeat today’s challenge: the scourge of international terrorism.

At the same time, the U.N. must abandon its unhealthy practice of placing an excessive dependence on a single contributor. Under S. 248, our assessed share for peacekeeping operations will drop immediately from 32 to 28 percent. Furthermore, further reductions in the percentage of the U.N. budget paid by the U.S. for U.N. peacekeeping operations will take place on a sliding scale, reaching 25 percent by 2006 from 30 percent today.

The fact remains that as a member of the U.N. and having voted in favor of peacekeeping missions in the Security Council, we need to make good on our obligations to pay the current arrearage of $582 million. Failure to do so jeopardizes our efforts to establish a multilateral, multifacted coalition to combat international terrorism.

Accordingly, it is fitting that we agree to this legislation.

Mr. HYDE. Mr. Speaker, I have no additional requests for time; and other than to thank my colleague, the gentleman from California (Mr. Lantos), for his usual expedition through out of complicated matters, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. MILLER of Florida). The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from California (Mr. Lantos), for his usual expedition through out of complicated matters, I yield back the balance of my time.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the Senate bill was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.
Mr. KERNS. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 1583) to designate the Federal building and United States courthouse located at 121 West Spring Street in New Albany, Indiana, as the “Lee H. Hamilton Federal Building and United States Courthouse.”

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 1583

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. DESIGNATION.
The Federal building and United States courthouse located at 121 West Spring Street in New Albany, Indiana, shall be known and designated as the “Lee H. Hamilton Federal Building and United States Courthouse.”

SEC. 2. REFERENCES.
Any reference in a law, map, regulation, document, paper, or other record of the United States to the Federal building and United States courthouse referred to in section 1 shall be deemed to be a reference to the “Lee H. Hamilton Federal Building and United States Courthouse.”

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the rule, the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. KERNS) and the gentleman from Illinois (Mr. COSTELLO) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. KERNS).

Mr. KERNS. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 1583 designates the Federal building and United States Courthouse at 121 West Spring Street in New Albany, Indiana as the “Lee H. Hamilton Federal Building and United States Courthouse.” I would first like to note that this legislation has the strong bipartisan support of the entire Indiana delegation. I am very pleased to be a cosponsor of this important legislation.

Lee Hamilton is an extraordinary individual who represented the Ninth Congressional District in Indiana for 34 years. Congressman Hamilton was born in Daytona Beach, Florida and moved to Evansville, Indiana in 1944 where he attended public schools. Of course, we in Indiana love our basketball; and as a high school athlete, Lee Hamilton led the Evansville Central Golden Bears to the Indiana high school basketball championship. Many believe that if the future congressman had not been injured during the game, the Golden Bears would have won.

Lee went on to graduate from DePauw University in Greencastle, Indiana and then graduated from Indiana University Law School in 1956. Congressman Hamilton was admitted to the State bar in 1957. He entered private law practice in Chicago, but returned shortly thereafter to Columbus, Indiana where he continued private law practice until seeking election to the U.S. House of Representatives in 1954. He was first elected to serve in the 89th Congress and was reelected to 16 consecutive terms.

While in the House, Congressman Hamilton was a leader with an excellent appreciation for working with both sides of the aisle. He served as chairman of the House Committee on Intelligence from 1985 until 1987, and as chairman of the Joint Economic Committee in 1990, and as co-chairman of the Committee on International Relations from 1993 until 1995.

Congressman Hamilton was always a strong advocate for diplomatic international solutions. In the post-Cold War, he believed weapons proliferation was a major international concern. He also believed that protecting the environment and the fight against disease and hunger were important major foreign policy goals. Upon his retirement from Congress, Mr. Hamilton continues to serve the public and bridge that important gap between academia and foreign policy.

Today, I serve on the House Committee on International Relations; and during this most difficult time, I draw on the example he set throughout his career. Although he is no longer a member of this legislative body, I know its Members respect his opinion and seek his input on the challenges this crisis presents.

On a more personal note, Congressman Hamilton served with my father-in-law, John Myers, for 30 years in Congress; and, although they are different political parties, they would find common ground and work together on issues to benefit the people in Indiana and our Nation.

As a fellow Hoosier, I take great pride in Congressman Hamilton’s accomplishments and service to Indiana and the Nation. This naming bill is a fitting tribute to a distinguished former Member of the House. I support this bill, and I urge my colleagues to join me in my support.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. KERNS. Mr. Speaker, I yield the balance of my time.

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 1583 is a bill to designate the Federal building in New Albany, Indiana as the “Lee H. Hamilton Federal Building and United States Courthouse.” Lee Hamilton is a former colleague who represented the Ninth District of Indiana for 34 years. The gentleman from Indiana (Mr. HILL) currently holds that seat and is the ranking member of the Committee on Appropriations.

Mr. OBÉY. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, let me simply say that I have had the privilege of the years of my service here to serve with the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. Hamilton); and, in my view, he is one of the most distinguished persons ever to occupy this body. He has a solid understanding of the economy. He served this House for years on the Joint Economic Committee and served as chair of that committee.

He is without question, in my view, the wisest member of this body in dealing with foreign affairs of any Member I have ever served with. Whether he was talking about Central America or the Middle East or the Soviet Union or its successor states, Lee Hamilton at all times came to his positions on the basis of facts, not on the basis of ideology.

He continues to serve this country well today in this time of crisis as the Director of the Woodrow Wilson Center at the Smithsonian. He has served the people of Indiana with incredible distinction, and he has done great honor to the people of the United States in foreign affairs and domestic economic policy. He served on the Committee on Foreign Affairs, the Select Committee on Intelligence, the Iran Contra Committee, and the Joint Economic Committee. He had a front row seat for many historic events, including the fall of the Berlin Wall and the Gulf War. As a follower of economic issues, Lee Hamilton was a champion of global free trade and encouraged economic development.

During his government service, Lee Hamilton received numerous awards and honors. These include the Knight Commander Cross of the Order of Merit from the Government of Germany, the Paul Nitze Award for Distinguished Authority On National Security Affairs in 1999, and the Edmund Muskie Award for outstanding public service in 1997.

Congressman Hamilton, although a recognized and powerful figure in Washington, D.C. Washington, D.C. did not lose his sense of humility. He has retained his sense of humor, his grass roots “Hoosier” values, and remained a source of advice and counsel even today to his colleagues. Lee Hamilton is currently the director of the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars here in Washington, D.C.

Mr. Speaker, I strongly support H.R. 1583, and I urge my colleagues to support this bill.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. KERNS. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. HILL), my colleague and friend to the south, for his great leadership on this legislation.

Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlemen from Indiana, Mr. HILL and Mr. ROEMER, and the other prominent Members around here from Indiana today, for producing this legislation and permitting me to be part of it. I would also like to thank Senators BAYH and LUGAR for introducing the bill in the Senate.

Mr. Speaker, as a boy growing up in Columbus, Indiana, when I was the age of the little boy sitting on my office floor right now, my Congressman was Lee Hamilton; and that famous crew cut, that confident stride of a basketball player, was a frequent image on the streets of Columbus, Indiana.
I had the honor of following his career and unsuccessfully applying for a job in his office at one point in my early career. For 34 years, I watched as he served not only Indiana but all of Indiana with humility and distinction. Upon his retirement from the House of Representatives in 1998, Congressman Hamilton left a blueprint in public service here in the halls of the Capitol. His accessibility to his constituents, already commented on eloquently today, is an inspiration for his role.

Congressman Hamilton was most respected and best known for his role as chairman of the House Committee on Foreign Affairs. His broad knowledge of foreign policy recently earned him the honor of serving as the director of the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars.

Congressman Hamilton’s influence is ongoing in the world of foreign affairs as most Americans know, in the wake of the tragic events of 2 weeks ago. The President recently established in this very hall the Office of Homeland Security. What they may not know is that was a direct result of the vision and the purpose and the leadership which Indiana’s own Lee Hamilton provided as a member of the now-famous Commission on Terrorism.

Mr. Speaker, on Wednesday, as I traveled to Europe to participate in a conference on terrorism, I will carry with me many things. I will carry with me notes to study on the issues about which I will comment; but I will, more than anything else, carry the image of Lee Hamilton, who presented not only the image of a gentleman Hoosier into the foreign scene, but also what it truly is to be an American of principle in the world.

I join my fellow Hoosier delegates in designating the building at 121 West Spring Street as the Lee H. Hamilton in New Albany, Indiana.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.
Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to join with my colleagues in designating the Lee H. Hamilton Federal Building and United States Courthouse in New Albany, Indiana.

I had the pleasure of serving in the House of Representatives for over twenty-two years with Lee Hamilton.

Lee’s lifetime commitment to public service, under the administrations of seven Presidents from both parties, never faltered. His enormous and lasting testament to a remarkable life of selfless duty and an unstinting commitment to the peace and prosperity of the people of Indiana, our Nation and to peoples living in every corner of the world.

Lee Hamilton was known in this House for his unimpeachable integrity, his gentle voice of reason, and professionalism; all for which I had the great fortune from which to benefit.

Lee Hamilton arrived in Washington to begin his long tenure in the House during the Lyndon Johnson administration. As those times demanded, he was present for the creation of such legislation as the Elementary and Secondary and Higher Education Acts, helping assure an educated citizenry so that the socio-economic needs of this country might be met. He also presided over the enactment of legislation to assist those living at or below poverty—especially the children—as Johnson’s War on Poverty began, and the President’s Great Society began to take shape.

There was much going on in this House when Lee Hamilton arrived from Jeffersonville, Indiana to begin his service as the representative of the Ninth District of that great state, and aside from domestic issues, Lee was soon to become deeply involved in international issues as well.

As Lee Hamilton’s distinguished service grew and flourished on behalf of those who needed federal support in order to obtain an education, food, shelter and health care, he quietly became our most able leader in international affairs. As he chaired and served as ranking member of the International Relations Committee for many years Lee devoted himself to duty throughout upon an ever-growing war, helping bring about the fall of the Berlin Wall and the dissolution of the former Soviet Union; and then seeking to strengthen the development of new democracies.

Over the years I was able to look to him for assistance with concerns I have had over events in the Middle East, and especially in the land of my grandparents, Lebanon. His deep understanding of the culture, history and traditions of the Middle Eastern countries is enormous. I know there were many times over the years when, at my request and no matter how busy he was, he took the time to share with me and my colleagues his remarkable insight into how best to address events in a troubled area in times of great distress.

Lee Hamilton continued his distinguished career in foreign relations when he left the House to become Director of the Woodrow Wilson Center for Scholars and Director of the Center on Congress at Indiana University. His unmatched experience in both of these realms continues a distinguished career in advancing America’s leadership on the world stage.

During this tragic time for the United States we need the steadying hand and influence of such honorable leaders as Lee Hamilton to guide our nation in her fight against terrorism. I can think of none better to contribute than this most accomplished statesman.

And so it is with the highest regard, highest esteem and deepest appreciation that I join my colleagues in designating the Lee Hamilton Federal Building and United States Courthouse in New Albany, Indiana.

Mr. BERreur. Mr. Speaker, this Member rises in strong support of H.R. 1583, a bill designating the Federal Building and U.S. Courthouse in New Albany, Indiana, as the “Lee H. Hamilton Federal Building and United States Courthouse.”

Our colleague, former Congressman Lee Hamilton possessed all attributes that a very distinguished public servant should possess—sound and well-reasoned judgment, unswerving integrity, unfailing courtesy, and intellect. Throughout his 34-year congressional career, while a strong legislative leader, he also consistently sought constructive ways to forge a bipartisan consensus where possible. Also, he certainly knew and represented his Indiana constituents very well.

The people of Indiana’s 9th Congressional District were exceedingly well-served by Representative Lee Hamilton during his service not only by his close attention to domestic issues and District concerns, but as Americans through his vast and respected foreign policy expertise and his leadership by his service as Chairman of the House Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence, and as Chairman and later as Ranking Minority Member of the House International Relations Committee. Indeed, Lee represented all Americans by rationally and insistently approaching foreign policy with U.S. national interests in mind, not simply those of special interest groups. Additionally, people world-wide have benefitted from his dedication to food aid projects, to democracy-building projects in Russia and the former Soviet Union, and to many other international projects too numerous to mention.

Mr. Speaker, this Member served with Lee on the House International Relations Committee from 1983 through 1996 and remains particularly grateful for the informed, insightful assistance and counsel that Lee provided when this Member was a junior member of the Committee’s minority. Regrettably, this Member did not have the opportunity to serve with Lee on the House Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence but, as current Vice-Chairman of the Committee and having served earlier for six years, this Member certainly does appreciate Representative Hamilton’s contributions to the Intelligence Committee.

We would all be well-advised to follow his example of setting aside emotion and irrationality from intricate, complex challenges and inserting common sense and careful analysis.

Mr. Sepaker, this Member has served in this body for 23 years and without any hyperbole would say that Lee Hamilton is one of the three or four most distinguished legislators with whom this Member has had the privilege to serve. Naming the New Albany, Indiana, Federal Building and U.S. Courthouse after Representative Hamilton is an appropriate tribute to a man who served Indiana and his country so extraordinarily well. This Member urges his colleagues to vote in favor of H.R. 1583.

Mrs. MINK of Hawaii. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to speak in support of H.R. 1583, which designates the Federal building and United States courthouse located at 121 West Spring Street in New Albany, Indiana, as the “Lee Hamilton Federal Building and United States Courthouse.”

Lee Hamilton and I were members of the same freshman class in Congress—we both began our service in the 89th Congress in 1965. I was sorry when my friend a valued colleague decided to retire at the end of the 105th Congress in 1998 after 17 terms in the House of Representatives. Lee currently serves as director of the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars and the Center for Congress at Indiana University.

Lee Hamilton is remembered by his colleagues for his skilled and principled service as chair and ranking member on the House Committee on International Affairs. His achievements and deep knowledge of foreign affairs and national security issues have been recognized by numerous awards, including the 1999 Paul H. Nitze Award for Distinguished Authority on National Security Affairs, the Philip C. Habib Award for Distinguished Public Service, the Indiana Humanities Council Lifetime Achievement Award, and the U.S. Association of Former Members of Congress Statesmanship Award.

It is indeed fitting that the people of Indiana have a federal building and courthouse named after Lee Hamilton. His vast knowledge, keen intellect, and deeply held principles have been of great service to the people of Indiana and of the United States.

Mr. HASTINGS of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of H.R. 1583, a bill designating the federal building and courthouse in Albany, Indiana, after my good friend Lee Hamilton. I am proud to stand before this body to honor my friend Lee Hamilton for the hard work and dedication to the people of this country.

Born in Daytona Beach, Florida, in 1931, Lee Hamilton is first and foremost an American. He is a Floridian as well, having left a long and impressive record to the people of Daytona Beach and throughout Florida.

Mr. Speaker, it is a pleasure to stand before you today to recognize a man that I admire professionally and consider a close and genuine friend. Having followed his career successfully and admired his accomplishments of becoming one of the most honored members of Congress, I had the pleasure of following in Lee’s footsteps on serving on both the House Committee on International Relations and later on House Permanent Select Committee on Intelligence upon which he was distinguished Chair.

What stands out about Lee and compels me to rise before you today, is not merely his accomplishments and political gains, but the fact that he distinguished himself over 34 years in Congress as a dedicated public servant and leader who worked to embrace that integrity at the highest levels.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today to salute my close friend, Lee Hamilton for his significant contributions, hard work and dedication to promoting democracy. I urge my colleagues to support of H.R. 1583 designating the federal building and courthouse in Indiana after my praiseworthy friend Lee Hamilton.
Mr. BURTON of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, it is with great pleasure that I rise today in full support of H.R. 1583, a bill designating the Federal building and United States courthouse located at 121 West Spring Street in New Albany, Indiana as the “Lee H. Hamilton Federal Building and United States Courthouse.”

Lee Hamilton is a proud “Hoosier” through and through, and to this day he continues to work for the people of Indiana. Lee was the star of his high school and college basketball teams and earned induction into the Indiana Basketball Hall of Fame. He attended Evansville Central High School, where he excelled both in the classroom and on the basketball court. As a senior, he led his team to the final game of the Indiana state basketball tournament and received the prestigious Trester award for scholarship and athletics. After graduation, Lee attended Depauw University where he studied history. Lee graduated with honors in 1952 and was awarded the Walker Cup, given to the most outstanding member of the senior class. He went on to study and earn a degree in post-war Germany at Goethe University before returning to law school at Indiana University, from which he graduated in 1956.

While representing Indiana’s 9th Congressional District in the U.S. House of Representatives, Lee Hamilton earned a reputation as a leader in international affairs, serving as Chairman of the House Foreign Relations Committee, the House Intelligence Committee, and the Iran-Contra Investigation Committee. During his tenure in Congress, Lee Hamilton established a broad record of expertise and influence in foreign affairs. He focused substantial attention on promoting democracy and market reforms in the former Soviet Union and Eastern Europe; advancing peace and stability in the Middle East; expanding U.S. markets overseas; and overhauling U.S. foreign aid.

In addition to his impressive record on foreign affairs, Congressman Hamilton also played an important role in reforming the institution of Congress itself. He co-chaired the Joint Committee on the Organization of Congress where he worked to develop ideas like the Sunshine Act, strengthening lobbying restrictions, and applying workplace laws to the United States Congress.

In 1999, after serving in the House of Representatives for 34 years, Lee Hamilton assumed the positions of Director of the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars in Washington, D.C., and the Director of the Center on Congress at Indiana University. The non-partisan Center on Congress at Indiana University aims to educate citizens about the operations and importance of the U.S. Congress, and it includes a special outreach program to the people of Indiana.

I join my colleagues in honoring Lee by designating the New Albany Federal building and courthouse as the “Lee H. Hamilton Federal Building and United States Courthouse.”

Former Congressman Lee Hamilton retired in 1998 after 34 years of service in the U.S. House of Representatives. Lee Hamilton represented the Ohio River counties of the State of Indiana and was first elected in 1964. Before retiring he served as Chairman of the House International Relations Committee.

While Chairman, I had the pleasure of working with Lee as the Ranking Republican Member, where I learned of his extensive knowledge and capacity for hard work in addition to his sense of moral imperative. It is at this time that I have learned of his willingness to bring back the pre-World War II era of bipartisan foreign policy.

Lee Hamilton was born in Daytona Beach, Volusia County, Fla., on April 20, 1931 and moved with his parents to Evansville, Ind., in 1944. He graduated from Indiana University School of Law in 1956 and was admitted to the bar in 1957. He began the practice of law in 1958 in Columbus, Ind. In 1968 he was first elected to the Eighty-ninth Congress and to the sixteen succeeding Congresses (January 3, 1965 through January 3, 1999).

While a Member of the House, Lee Hamilton earned a reputation as foreign policy expert. With the recent tragic events that have struck our country, Lee Hamilton’s advise and counsel are again being sought. He served for 34 years in this body before retiring in 1999. While his primary committee focus was in foreign policy, he also served as Chairman of the Joint Economic Committee and on temporary panels to address standards of conduct and Congressional operations and organization.

Still although having a love of foreign policy, he never forgot his constituents in Indiana. He worked hard for the well-being of his constituents and reached across the aisle on many issues for the betterment of the Hooiser State.

Finally, it must be noted here, that perhaps one of his greatest accomplishments, came not on the House floor or in committee, but on the basketball court. He was a star player on his high school and college teams and has been inducted into the Indiana Basketball Hall of Fame.

I support H.R. 1583 and urge its adoption.

Mr. BUYER, Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of H.R. 1583, which recognizes our former colleague from Indiana, the Honorable Lee H. Hamilton, by naming in his honor a Federal Building and U.S. Courthouse in New Albany, Indiana.

Mr. Speaker, ever since I was elected to the U.S. Congress in 1989, I have served as a member of the House Foreign Affairs/International Relations Committee. In that capacity, it was my distinct pleasure and honor to serve with and get to know our distinguished colleague, the former Chairman and Ranking Democratic Member, Lee Hamilton.

Over the decade that I worked with Mr. Hamilton, he was always looked to by Committee members for bipartisan leadership, wise insight and steady guidance in crafting America’s foreign policy.

Mr. Hamilton’s voice was one marked by moderation, thoughtfulness and balance, and he had the vision to look beyond momentary international crises to see and preserve the long-term interests of our Nation.

In a distinguished career in Congress which spanned 34 years, Mr. Hamilton, in particular, provided exceptional leadership in efforts to promote democratic reforms in the former Soviet Union and Soviet bloc nations, as well his strong support of balanced peace initiatives in the Middle East. Mr. Hamilton was also a major instrumental force in revamping our Nation’s foreign aid and export policies, while championing the expansion of overseas markets for U.S. products.

Mr. Speaker, all of us in Congress greatly miss our former colleague, Mr. Hamilton. We note, however, that he continues his tremendous contributions to our Nation’s foreign policy by serving as the Director of the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars, the respected international and world affairs think tank.

Mr. Speaker, I urge our colleagues to adopt the legislation before us, which fittingly honors and pays tribute to a great American and one of the most respected leaders in our Nation’s capital.

Mr. COSTELLO. Mr. Speaker, I urge passage of this legislation. I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. KERNS. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. KERNS) that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 1583.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. KERNS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous materials on H.R. 1583.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Indiana?

There was no objection.

SENIOR HOUSING COMMISSION EXTENSION ACT OF 2001

Mr. GREEN of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 1850) to extend the Commission on Affordable Housing and Health Facility Needs for Seniors in the 21st Century and to make technical corrections to the law governing the Commission.

The Clerk reads as follows:

H. R. 1850
Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, SECTION 1. TITLE.

This Act may be cited as the “Senior Housing Commission Extension Act of 2001”.

SEC. 2. EXTENSION OF SENIORS HOUSING AND HEALTH CARE NEEDS COMMISSION AND TECHNICAL CORRECTIONS.
Section 525 of the Department of Veterans Affairs and Housing and Urban Development, and Independent Agencies Appropriations Act, 2000 (42 U.S.C. 12701 note) is amended—

(1) in subsection (d)(4), by striking “reimbursable” and inserting “non-reimbursable”;

(2) in the first sentence of subsection (f)—

(A) by striking “Banking and”; and

(B) by inserting “Department of Commerce,” after “Commerce,”;

(3) in subsection (g), by striking “June 30, 2002” and inserting “March 31, 2003”;

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the rule, the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. Green) and the gentleman from Indiana (Ms. Carson) each will control 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. Green).

Mr. Green of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks and include extraneous material on H.R. 1850.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Wisconsin?

There was no objection.

Mr. Green of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

The purpose of H.R. 1850, the Senior Housing Commission Extension Act, is to extend for 1 year the Commission on Affordable Housing and Health Care Facility Needs of Senior Citizens. In 1999, Congress created this Commission to develop a comprehensive strategy for dealing with the growing needs associated with senior housing.

This extension is necessary because the appointment of commission members was delayed for more than 1 year after the passage on October 29, 1999, with commission member appointments not occurring until January 2, 2001. Given that more than 1 year passed before commission co-chairpersons, members and a staff could be appointed, the Commission requested an extension of the report deadline from December 31, 2001, to March 30, 2003.

This legislation merely makes technical corrections to allow the Commission to do the job that Congress originally intended. H.R. 1850 extends the dates authorizing the Commission’s reporting date, termination date and authority to use agency employees on a non-reimbursable basis. The Congressional Budget Office estimates that this bill will require no additional spending.

This country is facing a serious housing crisis for low and moderate income families and individuals. In no other segment of our population is this crisis more evident than in our senior population. According to the Department of Commerce, Bureau of the Census, in July 1999 there were more than 35.5 million Americans over 65 years of age, and the Bureau projects that by the year 2075, more than 55.7 million, or one in eight, Americans will be over 65 years in age.

HUD statistics indicate that only one-third of the low income senior citizens in need of affordable housing actually receives assistance. Appropriate senior housing is only part of the problem. Along with the senior housing, seniors need supportive services. Over the years, non-profits and faith-based organizations have worked with HUD to develop creative ways to meet the needs of this vulnerable group, but as our population continues to age, we must seek new ways to address this growing problem.

The commission is charged with developing a comprehensive strategy to address the issues that are inherent to America’s aging population by reviewing existing programs and exploring new ideas and partnerships. H.R. 1850 will provide the Commission with the time that Congress originally intended that it have to complete this task.

I urge my colleagues’ support and I urge adoption of this measure.

Ms. Carson of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. Carson of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume. I think the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. Green) has done a yeoman’s job in detailing the needs of this legislation.

Let me reinforce a part of his message, and that is, the dire need for affordable, decent, safe housing for our aging population. Since I am probably one of them, this is probably a conflict of interest as I speak.

I rise in support of this bipartisan legislation, which extends the life of the “Commission on Affordable Housing and Health Facility Needs for Seniors in the 21st Century,” commonly referred to as the Seniors Commission.

The Seniors Commission was established on a bipartisan basis in the last Congress. It is charged with studying and proposing recommendations dealing with the challenges of developing aging in place strategies for the housing and health care needs of our Nation’s senior citizens.

Originally, the commission was charged with issuing a report by December 31 of this year, and with wrapping up all business by June 30 of next year. However, more than a year passed after the bill’s enactment before commissioners were actually named. This makes meeting the original statutory deadlines unrealistic. Without a change in deadlines, the commission simply cannot do a thorough job of completing the tasks they are charged with.

Therefore, this legislation provides a 1 year extension on the report deadline, to December 31 of next year, and a 9-month extension on the commission’s termination, to March 31 of 2003.

In addition, the bill authorizes the detailing of Federal personnel to the commission on non-reimbursable basis. Currently, such detailing can only be done on a reimbursable basis.

This is a noncontroversial bill, and I urge its adoption.

Mr. Speaker, I encourage all my colleagues to give their enthusiastic support in extending the life of the commission.

Mr. Oxley. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 1850—the “Senior Housing Commission Extension Act of 2001.”

The Committee voted unanimously to support this legislation on June 27, 2001 and reported [House Report 107–147] the bill to the House on July 19, 2001. This legislation makes certain technical corrections to legislation enacted in October 1999 creating the Commission on Affordable Housing and Health Care Facility Needs in the 21st Century. As I understand it, it took one year longer than anticipated for Congress to appoint Commission members. As a result, we are extending the Commission’s reporting deadline and termination date by one year. We also clarify the Commission’s authority to use agency employees as details on a non-reimbursable basis.

As many of you know, our population is aging, particularly for low- and moderate-income families and individuals. According to the Department of Commerce, Bureau of the Census, in July 1999 there were more than 35.5 million Americans over 65 years of age, and the Bureau projects that by the year 2075, more than 55.7 million, one in eight Americans, will be over 65 years of age.

These are purely technical corrections worked-out between the majority and minority staffs along with the Commission’s Executive Director—Gerard Holder—that will empower the Commission to provide the type of report and recommendations necessary to assist Congress in addressing elderly housing issues.

Mr. Speaker, I urge passage of this legislation.

Mr. Green of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Ms. Carson of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

September 24, 2001 CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE 17699
MARK-TO-MARKET EXTENSION ACT OF 2001

Mr. GREEN of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (S 2589) to amend the Multifamily Assisted Housing Reform and Affordability Act of 1997 to reauthorize the Office of Multifamily Housing Assistance Restructuring, and for other purposes, as amended.

The Clerk read as follows:

H. R. 2589

(b) APPLICATION.—The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply to any vacancy in the position of Director of the Department of Housing and Urban Development which occurs or exists after the date of the enactment of this Act.”
the bill now under consideration.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Wisconsin?

There was no objection.

Mr. GREEN of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

The legislation we are considering today represents a House-Senate consensus. H.R. 2589 extends the Office of Multifamily Housing Assistance Restructuring (OMHAR), and the mark-to-market program for restructuring Section 8 based properties with FHA-insured mortgages. The mark-to-market program provides the tools necessary for HUD to restructure the insured Section 8 multifamily housing projects by lowering their rents to market levels when their current Section 8 contracts expire, and also by re-structuring their mortgage debt, if such action is necessary, for the property to continue to have a positive cash flow.

In addition to extending OMHAR and the authority of the mark-to-market program, H.R. 2589 simplifies issues of jurisdiction and coordination by requiring the program director to report directly to the Federal Housing Commissioner instead of the Secretary of HUD. At present, the Office of Housing is responsible for Section 8 subsidy payments and the management of insurance contracts while at the same time OMHAR is responsible for restructur- ing them for the future. The same projects are under the jurisdiction of two separate equal offices, each report- ing to the Secretary simultaneously. Having OMHAR report to the Commissioner will simplify these issues of co-ordination and jurisdiction.

Mr. Speaker, I will be submitting for the record a section-by-section analysis of the bill and also several support letters for this legislation, letters from the National Association of Home Builders, the National Leased Housing Association, the National Affordable Housing Management Association.
Hon. MARGE ROUKEMA,
Chair, House of Representatives Subcommittee on Housing and Community Opportunity, Rayburn House Office Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR Chairwoman Roukema: On behalf of the 205,000 members of the National Association of Home Builders, I write to express our support for H.R. 2589, the Office of Multifamily Housing Assistance Restructuring Act of 2001.”

Timely passage of the reauthorizing legislation is critical to the continuation of the Department of Housing and Urban Development’s (HUD) authority to restructure mortgages on multifamily properties insured by FHA and enhanced by Section 8 rental assistance. This program ensures the continued viability of affordable multifamily properties and ultimately saves the federal government money. Because the program is due to expire on October 1, 2001, I respectfully request your swift passage of H.R. 2589 which extends the program for another five years.

NAHB urges you to support passage of H.R. 2589, as amended. Thank you in advance for your consideration of views important to the housing industry.

Sincerely,
KATHERINE E. DODDRIDGE,
Acting Senior Staff Vice President.

NATIONAL HOUSING TRUST,
Chair, Committee on Housing & Community Opportunity, Rayburn House Office Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR Chairwoman Roukema: I am writing on behalf of the National Leased Housing Association (NLHA) in support of H.R. 2589 as revised. The bill includes the necessary reauthorization of the mark to market program while making numerous non-controversial programmatic revisions that will improve processing under the program.

The bill will present a disruption of mortgage cash flow that the OMHA pipeline will provide a measure of stability for future properties that will benefit from the technical provisions impacting contributions to rehabilitation, length of second mortgages, and the eligibility of HUD-held loans for certain mortgage processing. The bill also ensures the adequate distribution of technical assistance funding and corrects several inconsistent provisions in current law.

We are grateful for your leadership in crafting a compromise with the Senate to eliminate the controversial provisions in S. 1254. NLHA recently joined with a number of industry groups to express our concern with several provisions contained in the original S. 1254. Including the National Association of Home Builders, the National Multi Housing Council, the National Association of Realtors, the National Apartment Association, the Mortgage Bankers Association, the Council for Affordable and Rural Housing, the National Affordable Housing Management Association, the National Trust for Affordable Housing Preservation, and the Coalition for Affordable Housing Preservation. We appreciate your efforts to address and mitigate those concerns.

As a supporter of your leadership in promoting the preservation of the affordable housing stock.

Sincerely,
DENISE B. MURA,
Executive Director.

HR 2589 makes a technical change permitting subordinate debt to be assumable by a nonprofit organization interested in preserving the housing as affordable;

HR 2589 permits HUD to consider for Mark to Market certain properties for sales to nonprofits and tenant groups which had previously not been permitted in the program;

HR 2589 requires the Secretary to include, for partially assisted projects owned by nonprofit organizations, budget based costs related to the project as a whole, including costs incurred with respect to units not covered by the contract for assistance; and HR 2589 permits Section 226(a)(4)(B), a HUD insurance program ideally suited for Mark to Market projects, more useful for Mark to Market financing.

Thank you for your leadership on this important issue.

Very truly yours,
MICHAEL BODAKEY,
Executive Director.

NATIONAL HOUSING TRUST,
Chair, Committee on Housing & Community Opportunity, Rayburn House Office Building, Washington, DC.

DEAR Chairwoman Roukema: Formed in 1986, the National Housing Trust is a not-for-profit organization, located in Washington, D.C. The Trust is dedicated to the preservation of existing affordable housing. It’s board of directors is comprised of nationally recognized authorities and practitioners in the housing and community development field.

The Trust is a multi-faceted organization, with expertise in the financial, regulatory, tax and legal aspects of existing, federal assisted, multifamily affordable housing. It performs a path-finding role in the area through a unique mix of public policy development, technical assistance and transactional activity.

The Trust plays a leading role in providing information and technical assistance to various stakeholders concerning various HUD programs relating to mortgage restructuring and subsidy renewal for nearly 1.3 million units of federally assisted and insured housing stock. The Trust has testified numerous times before Congress on this issue, developed policy papers concerning various proposals and developed a unique database for these apartments, noting term of contract expiration, and the relationship of the current contract rent level to local rents. The Trust also trains and helps explain to residents their rights under HUD programs, including HUD’s “Mark to Market” program.

The September 30, 2001 sunset date for the Market to Market legislative authority provided Congress a unique opportunity to both review the existing program, analyze its progress and remedy any perceived problems with the current law. On September 25, 2001, the House of Representatives passed H.R. 2589 is a significant bipartisan response to the need for continued Mark to Market legislation.

The program of marking HUD rents down to comparable market levels has been successful at both saving the taxpayers unnecessary expense to overleveraged HUD properties. At the same time, experience has shown that many Mark to Market assets provide necessary shelter for very low income families. Although we have been disappointed at times by the slow implementation of the mark-to-market program and by some of its short-comings, we believe that reauthorization of the program presents the best opportunity for an orderly restructuring process that protects the interests of owners, residents, communities and the public.

We want to thank you and your staff for considering the needs of the multifamily housing industry in the development of this latest version of H.R. 2589. As currently drafted the bill makes a number of improvements in the current mark to market program and its administration. We believe that H.R. 2589 will increase the confidence of all stakeholders in the mark-to-market process.

Again, NAHMA thanks you for your leadership on this issue.

Sincerely,
GEORGE C. CARUSO,
Executive Director.

HR 2589 makes the technical change permitting subordinate debt to be assumable by a nonprofit organization interested in preserving the housing as affordable;
OMHAR continues to focus on the portfolio of properties eligible for restructuring; (6) that these properties are tracked on an ongoing basis; (7) to ensure that tenant groups, nonprofit organizations, and public entities continue to have the resources to address the problems while ensuring consistent outcomes around the country.

SEC. 3. EFFECTIVE DATE

Except for sections 106(a)(2) and 303(b), this Act and its amendments take effect on the date of enactment.

Title I—Multifamily Housing Mortgage and Assistance Restructuring and Section 8 Contract Renewal

SEC. 101. DEFINITIONS

This section makes some technical changes to section 512 of the Multifamily Assisted Housing Reform and Affordability Act of 1997 (42 U.S.C. 1437f) designating ‘‘office’’ as OMHAR.

SEC. 102. MARK-TO-MARKET PROGRAM AMENDMENTS

(1) This section amends 514(f)(3) of the Act by requiring HUD to give restructuring grants to tenant groups, tenant-endorsed community-based nonprofits, and public entities for tenant services in projects undergoing restructuring. These grants are available over a two-year period.

514(g)(2) of the Act—Except—Requests is amended by striking ‘‘restructured mortgages in any fiscal year’’ and inserting ‘‘portfolio restructuring agreements’’.

515(c) is amended to require section 8 tenants, living in projects that will no longer receive assistance, to be notified at the time of a rejection that a project will no longer participate in the program, and subject to the availability of appropriations, tenants of the project will be given enhanced vouchers and above market-level moving expense.

524(e) is amended by adding that if the owner or a property assisted under the Emergency Low Income Housing Preservation and Residential Rehabilitation Act of 1992 (42 U.S.C. 466) requests HUD to participate in the restructuring program in order to facilitate the sale or transfer of the property.

517(b)—Restructuring Tools—adds that if a participating administrative entity (PAE) determines that major additions (air-conditioning, elevators, etc.) are required for a property in the mortgage restructuring program, the owner contribution may not exceed 25% of the amount of rehabilitation assistance for this purpose. This applies to all eligible multifamily projects except those that worked out a restructuring plan with HUD before the enactment of this Act. All owners are still required to obtain at least 25% of the rehabilitation costs.

Repayment of subordinate mortgage receivables

The Office shall be under the management of a Director, who shall be appointed by the President. The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply to the first Director of OMHAR to appoint a Director of OMHAR within 60 days after the position becomes vacant.

SEC. 202. APPOINTMENT OF DIRECTOR

Section 573(b) is amended by requiring the Director of OMHAR to report semi-annually to Congress on restructuring activities and regarding his activities, actions and determinations, rather than to the Secretary of HUD.

SEC. 302. USE OF SECTION 8 ENHANCED VOUCHERS FOR PREPAYMENTS

This Act extends the Office of Multifamily Housing Assistance Restructuring for three years and restructuring authority for an additional two years. Section 579 of the Multifamily Assisted Housing Reform and Affordability Act of 1997 is amended by repealing Subtitle A, the Mark-to-Market program, (except for section 524) effective October 1, 2004. Subtitle D, OMHAR, is repealed effective October 1, 2004 (except for this section).

Repealing Subtitle A in 2006 terminates HUD’s authority to restructure mortgages after 5 years, though excluding section 524 allows HUD to continue to renew section 8 contracts indefinitely. Repealing Subtitle D in 2004 terminates OMHAR after 3 years.

Vacancy in position of director

The Office shall be under the management of a Director, who shall be appointed by the President. The amendment made by subsection (a) shall apply to the first Director of OMHAR to appoint a Director of OMHAR within 60 days after the position becomes vacant.

SEC. 303. EXTENSION OF CBDB PUBLIC SERVICES CAP EXCEPTION

Section 583(a)(4)(b) is amended by striking ‘‘through 2001’’ and inserting ‘‘through 2003’’.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. CARSON of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this bipartisan legislation which extends HUD’s authority to reduce above-market rents on expiring section 8 projects and to restructure federally insured mortgages on these properties which the lower rents can no longer support.

The bill before us differs somewhat from the bill passed by voice vote in the Committee on Financial Services in July. However, the changes represent informal bipartisan, bicameral discussions that have taken place over the last few months. The final product is a good consensus bill with bipartisan support; and, certainly, therefore, I urge my colleagues to adopt it.

H.R. 2589 extends for 5 years HUD’s authority to conduct ‘‘mark-to-market’’ activities and extends for three years the Office of Multi-Family Housing Assistance Restructuring also known as OMHAR. This extends HUD’s authority to continue the carry out mark-to-market activities. The purpose of market-to-markets is to reduce the level of project based section 8 rental assistance for affordable housing projects to rent levels commensurate with local market rents.

The end result is that this process saves money for the Federal tax payers...
by reducing our section 8 expenditures. However, the statutory authority for mark-to-market activities and for OMHAR is set to expire at the end of this month. As I aspire to do, the GAO report shows that 1,588 properties have entered the mark-to-market program but only 500 of these properties have completed rent reductions. Thus, over 1,000 properties have yet to have their rents reduced. As more contracts expire, there will be additional properties that need to go through rent restructuring.

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, it is essential to extend the program at this time. I would note that this legislation is estimated to save over $300 million through the reduction of rents. I would also note that since this bill saves money, there is a reasonable possibility that it will later be attached to the VA/HUD appropriations conference report in order to receive a credit from the savings from this bill. If that occurs, we would urge appropriators to reinvest these savings in affordable housing programs instead of being diverted to other programs as is often the case.

With respect to the specific provisions of the bill, we have struck a balance between giving OMHAR the tools it needs while retaining accountability. We have also included a number of good provisions to further housing affordability including providing technical assistance to tenant groups and increasing flexibility for nonprofits to operate.

So in conclusion of my remarks, Mr. Speaker, I am heartened by the bipartisan way we have developed the first major piece of housing legislation in this Congress. I am urging a “yes” vote.

Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. Frank), a very distinguished, capable, articulate and dynamic friend of mine.

Mr. FRANK. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentlewoman for yielding me this time. I am currently in the Committee on the Judiciary having hearings on the important question of the anti-terrorism legislation. The gentlewoman from Indiana (Ms. Carston) graciously agreed to come down and has done a very good job of explaining the bill.

I simply want to note that the gentlewoman is correct. This is bipartisan. It is bicameral. We have worked it out in conjunction with the other party. It is important to note what I think is a duality of these issues. When it comes to how best to use existing resources to preserve housing, we are able to work together.

There continues to be differences between the parties on how much we should be putting in additional resources for housing. But once we have come to an agreement by whatever process as to what resources are there, I am very pleased we have been able to work in agreement because I think we are committed to the principle that for the Federal Government to have put money into subsidized housing, to have invited people to come in and live there, it then is our responsibility to make economics to drive them out of what have become their homes is simply unacceptable.

We need to have this ongoing commitment to do this. This is part of that ongoing commitment, we can make adjustments that will save government money as well as require in other instances, not in this bill, increases. So I am grateful for this. I do note it, but I note that it does not do away from what I believe and I know what the gentlewoman from Indiana (Ms. Carston) believes, is the need to put additional resources in this very rich country into the area of housing.

Let me ask the indulgence to say because I know the other bill will be coming. That given the Housing Commission. I also want to express my gratitude to the gentleman from New York (Mr. Walsh), the chairman of the Subcommittee on VA, HUD and Independent Agencies of the Committee on Appropriations because he was helpful in working that out. I am glad we are able to work out the extension and the appropriate staffing.

With that, I will take my leave and let us be guided by the gentlewoman from Indiana, and I will go back to the hearing of the Committee on the Judiciary.

Mr. OXLEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of H.R. 2589—the Mark-to-Market Extension Act of 2001.

The Committee on Financial Services approved unanimously this legislation on July 25, 2001 and reported [House Report 107–196] to the House on September 5, 2001. The Senate Committee on Banking, Housing and Urban Affairs considered a similar bill on August 1, 2001. H.R. 2589 will extend authorization of the Office of Multifamily Housing Assistance Restructuring, also known as OMHAR, which is currently a separate office within the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD). The authority would extend by three years the office through FY 2004 and extend the Secretary’s authority to provide mark-to-market services through FY 2006. We believe that HUD will be provided the special tools necessary to restructure developments that receive both project-based rental section 8 payments and Federal Housing Administration mortgage insurance.

As I understand, the original Act was enacted in 1997 and was designed to curtail ex-ploding section 8 rental costs for units renting at far above the prevailing market rates. With out this Act, section 8 contract renewals could top $7 billion per year, which, for as much as one-third of HUD’s future budgets. Because the authorization for this office sunsets September 30th of this year, it is necessary that this bill pass the House today.

The Committee majority and minority staff worked with our Senate counterparts to agree on a legislatively solution. Moreover, this Committee worked with the Administration and the Department of Housing and Urban Development to accommodate their concerns. According to the Congressional Budget Office, this compromise language will result in savings of over $207 million dollars.

Mr. Speaker, this is a good bill and deserves favorable House consideration. Housing Subcommittee Chairwoman Margaret Roukema and Ranking Member Barney Frank are to be commended for their leadership on this issue.

Mr. GREEN of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Ms. CARSTON of Indiana. Mr. Speaker, I have no further requests for time, and I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 8 of rule XX and the Chair’s prior announcement, further proceedings on this motion will be postponed.

MUSCULAR DYSTROPHY COMMUNITY ASSISTANCE, RESEARCH AND EDUCATION AMENDMENTS OF 2001

Mr. BLIRAKIS. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 717) to amend the Public Health Service Act to provide for research and services with respect to Duchenne muscular dystrophy, as amended.

The Clerk reads as follows:

H.R. 717
Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.
This Act may be cited as the “Muscular Dystrophy Community Assistance, Research and Education Amendments of 2001”, or the “MD-CARE Act”.

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.
Congress makes the following findings:
(1) Of the childhood muscular dystrophies, Duchenne Muscular Dystrophy (DMD) is the world’s most common and catastrophic form of genetic childhood disease, and is characterized by a rapidly progressive muscle weakness that almost always results in death, usually by 20 years of age.
(2) Duchenne muscular dystrophy is genetically linked, and without an intervention carriers in approximately 70 percent of all cases.
(3) If a female is a carrier of the dystrophin gene, there is a 50 percent chance per birth that her male offspring will have Duchenne muscular dystrophy, and a 50 percent chance per birth that her female offspring will be carriers.
(4) Duchennes is the most common lethal genetic disorder of childhood worldwide, affecting approximately 1 in every 3,500 boys worldwide.
(5) Children with muscular dystrophy exhibit extreme symptoms of weakness, delay in walking, waddling gait, difficulty in climbing stairs, and progressive mobility problems often in combination with muscle hypertrophy.

(7) Myotonic muscular dystrophy (also known as Steinert’s disease and dystrophia myotónica) is the second most prominent form of muscular dystrophy, affecting most commonly found in adults. Unlike any of the other muscular dystrophies, the muscle weakness is accompanied by myotonia (delayed relaxation of muscles after contraction) and by a variety of abnormalities in addition to those of muscle.

(8) Facioscapulohumeral muscular dystrophy (referred to in this section as “FSHD”) is a neuromuscular disorder that is inherited genetically and has an estimated frequency of 1 in 20,000. FSHD, affecting between 15,000 to 40,000 persons, causes a progressive and severe loss of skeletal muscle gradually bringing weakness and reduced mobility. Many persons with FSHD become severely physically disabled and spend many decades in a wheelchair.

(9) Facioscapulohumeral muscular dystrophy is a novel genetic phenomenon resulting from a crossovers of subtelomeric DNA and may be the only human disease caused by a deletion-mutation.

(10) Other muscular dystrophies, though distinct in progressivity and severity of symptoms, have a devastating impact on tens of thousands of children and adults throughout the United States and worldwide and impose severe physical and economic burdens on those affected.

(11) Muscular dystrophies have a significant impact on quality of life—not only for the individual who experiences its painful symptoms and resulting disability, but also for family members and caregivers.

(12) Developmental therapies for these disorders, while realistic with recent advances in research, is likely to require costly investments and infrastructure to support gene and other therapies.

(13) There is a shortage of qualified researchers in the field of neuromuscular research.

(14) Many patients and health care professionals lack the knowledge and resources to detect and properly diagnose the disease as early as possible, thus exacerbating the progressive symptoms in cases that go undetected or misdiagnosed.

(15) There is a need for efficient mechanisms to translate clinically relevant findings in muscular dystrophy research from basic science to applied work.

(16) Educating the public and health care community throughout the country about this devastating disease is of paramount importance and is in every respect in the public interest and to the benefit of all communities.

SEC. 3. EXPANSION, INTENSIFICATION, AND COORDINATION OF ACTIVITIES OF NATIONAL INSTITUTES OF HEALTH WITH RESPECT TO RESEARCH ON MUSCULAR DYSTROPHY

Part A of title IV of the Public Health Service Act (42 U.S.C. 281 et seq.) is amended by adding at the end the following:

SEC. 404. MUSCULAR DYSTROPHY; INITIATIVE THROUGH DIRECTOR OF NATIONAL INSTITUTES OF HEALTH.

(a) Expansion, intensification, and coordination of activities of national institutes of health—

(1) In general.—The Director of NIH, in coordination with the Directors of the National Institute of Neurological Disorders and Stroke, the National Institute of Arthritis, and Musculoskeletal and Skin Diseases, the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development, and the other national research institutes as appropriate, shall expand and intensify programs of such Institutes with respect to research and related activities concerning various forms of muscular dystrophy, including Duchenne, congenital, peripheral, and neuromuscular muscular dystrophy (referred to in this section as ‘‘FSHD’’) and other forms of muscular dystrophy.

(2) Coordination.—The Directors referred to in paragraph (1) shall, with respect to each center and with other Federal health programs and activities relating to the various forms of muscular dystrophy.

(3) Allocation by Director of NIH.—The Director of NIH shall allocate the amounts appropriated to carry out the plans referred to in paragraph (1) to the various Institutes of Health.

(4) Centers of excellence.—The Director of NIH, with the advice of the National Institute of Neurological Disorders and Stroke, the National Institute of Arthritis, and Musculoskeletal and Skin Diseases, shall establish a center of excellence to conduct research and to provide for the following as appropriate:

(A) Research to determine the reasons underlying the incidence and prevalence of various forms of muscular dystrophy.

(B) Basic research concerning the etiology and genetic links of the disease and potential causes of mutations.

(C) Development of improved screening techniques.

(D) Basic research and clinical research for the development and evaluation of new treatments, including new biological agents.

(E) Development and implementation of education programs for health care professionals and the public.

(5) Reports to Congress.—The coordinating committee shall biennially submit to the President, the Secretary of Health and Human Services, the Chairmen of the Committees on Appropriations of the House of Representatives, and the Committee on Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions of the Senate, a report that describes the research, therapies, and technologies in muscular dystrophy being conducted or supported through muscular dystrophy and representatives of all other Federal departments and agencies whose programs involve health care activities or responsibilities relevant to such diseases, including the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, the Health Resources and Services Administration, and representatives of other governmental agencies that serve children with muscular dystrophy, such as the Department of Education; and

(6) In general.—With respect to muscular dystrophy, the Chair of the Coordinating Committee shall serve as the principal advisor to the Secretary, the Assistant Secretary for Health, and the Director of NIH, and shall provide advice to the Director of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, the Commissioner of Food and Drug Administration, and the representatives of other relevant agencies. The Coordinating Committee shall select the Chair for a term not to exceed 2 years.

(7) Appointment.—The Chair of the Coordinating Committee shall be appointed by and be directly responsible to the Secretary.

(8) Plan for hhs activities.—

(A) In general.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this section, the Coordinating Committee shall develop a plan for coordinating and supporting research and education on muscular dystrophy through the national research institutes and shall periodically review and revise the plan. The plan shall—

(B) Provide for a balance of research and education activities relating to biomedical, epidemiological, psychosocial, and rehabilitative issues, including studies of the impact of such diseases in rural and underserved communities;

(C) Identify priorities among the programs and activities of the National Institutes of Health regarding such diseases;

(D) Reflect input from a broad range of scientists, patients, and advocacy groups.

(B) Certain elements of plan.—The plan under paragraph (1) shall, with respect to each form of muscular dystrophy, provide for the following as appropriate:

(A) Research to determine the reasons underlying the incidence and prevalence of various forms of muscular dystrophy.

(B) Basic research concerning the etiology and genetic links of the disease and potential causes of mutations.

(C) Development of improved screening techniques.

(D) Basic research and clinical research for the development and evaluation of new treatments, including new biological agents.

(E) Development and implementation of education programs for health care professionals and the public.

September 24, 2001
(a) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary of Health and Human Services, by any award under this section (the "Secretary") shall establish and implement a program to provide information and education on muscular dystrophy to health professionals and the general public, and to provide for continuing education through programs for scientists, physicians, medical students, and other health professionals who provide care for patients with muscular dystrophy.

(b) STIPENDS.—The Secretary may use amounts made available under this section to provide stipends for health professionals who are enrolled in training programs under this section.

(c) AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There are authorized to be appropriated such sums as may be necessary to carry out this section.

SEC. 6. REPORT TO CONGRESS.

Not later than January 1, 2003, and each January 1 thereafter, the Secretary shall prepare and submit to the appropriate committees of Congress a report concerning the implementation of this Act and the amendments made by this Act.

The SPEAKER pro tempore.

Mr. BILLIKAS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may be granted time to review and extend their remarks and insert extraneous material on H.R. 717.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the unanimous consent, the Member from Florida (Mr. BILLIKAS) is granted time to extend remarks on H.R. 717, the Duchenne Muscular Dystrophy Childhood Assistance Research and Education Act of 2001 which will help find cures for all forms of muscular dystrophy; and I commend at the outset the gentleman from Mississippi (Mr. WICKER) for writing this bill and for continuing to push for its movement through the process.

Mr. Speaker, the Subcommittee on Health of the Committee on Energy and Commerce held an important hearing on this issue where Ed McMahon spoke in favor of the legislation. I believe that every dollar invested in medical research will yield untold benefits for all Americans in years to come. Indeed, our own lives might some day depend on the efforts of scientists and doctors currently at work in our Nation’s laboratories.

Medical research represents a powerful weapon against diseases such as muscular dystrophy.

While we live in a modern world, children with DMD are powerless. Boys develop weakness, and by 8 to 10 years, the disease may be inherited within families, or it may be caused by a spontaneous mutation in individuals. In fact, one-third of Duchenne cases are not inherited but are caused by gene mutation.

Children who are born with DMD follow a predictable clinical course. Young children develop difficulties walking and begin falling due to muscle weakness, and by 8 to 10 years, the disease has progressed to the point where most children must rely on wheelchairs. By late teens, most DMD children have succumbed to their disease, usually as victims of respiratory failure. The diagnosis is accompanied by a lifetime of progressive loss of function, loss of independence, dependence on family caregivers, and extraordinary physical, mental, psychological, spiritual, and financial burdens for the family and for society.

As you know, this bill takes significant steps towards increasing Federal research efforts to find a cure for Duchenne and other forms of muscular dystrophy. Specifically, H.R. 717 takes four key steps toward improving the Federal commitment to muscular dystrophy:

First, increased coordination. Building on title 23 of the Children’s Health Act of 2000, H.R. 717 expands, intensifies, and coordinates research activities related to muscular dystrophy by establishing the Muscular Dystrophy Interagency Coordinating Committee.

Secondly, it creates Centers of Excellence at NIH in order to ensure a focused research effort of muscular dystrophy. H.R. 717 establishes Centers of Excellence at NIH to support and expand clinical research on various forms of muscular dystrophy.

Thirdly, it provides grants and special allocations to public and nonprivate entities to carry out research and development activities related to muscular dystrophy. H.R. 717 establishes grants and special allocations to public and nonprivate entities for the purpose of carrying out research and development activities related to muscular dystrophy.

Finally, it establishes a national muscular dystrophy surveillance program which will allow for dissemination of education to medical professionals and promotion of public awareness.

Mr. Speaker, the advances made over the course of the last century cannot have been made by the most farsighted observers. It is equally difficult to anticipate the significant gains from further medical research, particularly in the area of muscular dystrophy.
Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. STRICKLAND. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this bill. I am glad that the House is considering Muscular Dystrophy Community Assistance, Research and Education Amendments of 2001, and I would like to thank the gentleman from Mississippi (Mr. WICKER) and my other colleagues on the Committee on Energy and Commerce for their strong bipartisan efforts to work in the passage of this legislation. My understanding is there are currently over 300 cosponsors in the House.

Mr. Speaker, the muscular dystrophies are a group of genetic diseases that cause the progressive weakness of skeletal muscles. Duchenne muscular dystrophy is the most common of the childhood muscular dystrophies, and is the world’s most lethal genetic childhood disease.

The disease is characterized by rapidly progressive and painful muscle weakness that almost always results in death, usually by 20 years of age. Duchenne muscular dystrophy primarily affects boys with one in every 3,500 boys worldwide affected.

A woman who is a genetic carrier of the disease has a 50 percent chance of passing it on to her son, and a 50 percent chance that her daughter will also be a carrier. Currently there are no specific treatments, although therapies to improve the quality of life of those suffering from muscular dystrophy can be used.

Scientists are working to seek ways to increase understanding of muscular dystrophy and its causes, develop better therapies, and ultimately find ways to prevent and cure the disorder. However, research into muscular dystrophy is expensive, and requires an investment in gene therapies.

H.R. 717 will focus funding within the National Institutes of Health’s Muscular Dystrophy, expanding research programs, and creating Centers of Excellence that will conduct basic and clinical research into Duchenne and other muscular dystrophies. H.R. 717 also directs the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention to collect, analyze, and to report data about Duchenne and other types of muscular dystrophy. This type of close surveillance and research is critical if we are to truly understand this terrible disease and how we can best treat it or even cure it.

In addition, the funding for the CDC will help to coordinate the Institutes of Health and CDC’s research efforts.

Mr. Speaker, through the work of NIH and CDC, the Federal Government has given hope to millions of Americans who suffer from a wide variety of diseases, such as cardiovascular disease, diabetes and arthritis. The research done at NIH and sponsored by NIH at universities across America is on the cutting edge of modern science. This is an arena where the Government must play an important role to ensure that the cures of tomorrow are available to all. Along with many of my colleagues, I have been proud to support the increases which are necessary to double the funding of NIH over a period of 5 years.

However, not all who suffer from disease have been able to realize the promise of NIH research. Duchenne muscular dystrophy, as the chairman pointed out, is the most common and most lethal childhood genetic disorder. Of those over 3,500 boys worldwide affected by the disease, only 1 in 310 can expect to live past the age of 10. Each year, about 150 boys die of Duchenne muscular dystrophy.

Mr. Speaker, during the August recess, while I was traveling across my district like so many of my colleagues, I met Walter and Inez Ewing of Prairie, Mississippi, who have lost five of their eight children to this disease. Each of these boys died at a young age, devastating the family and friends in Monroe County, Mississippi. It is my hope that through the enactment of this legislation and with continued increased appropriations for the NIH and CDC, we can make great strides against this killer of our children and we can give more hope to the children and their parents who suffer from its effects.

I urge my colleagues to support this legislation.

Mrs. BIGGERT. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong support of H.R. 717, the Duchenne Muscular Dystrophy Childhood Assistance, Research and Education Amendments Act. This legislation will provide much needed resources for research on this terrible disease.

Duchenne Muscular Dystrophy primarily affects boys, and is usually discovered during their toddler or preschool years. Nearly all children with DMD lose the ability to walk sometime between the ages of 7 and 12.

DMD is a truly devastating disease for those who have to live with it, like the DeGrenier family in my District. Their son has this horrible disease, and they have been tireless in their fight to gain exposure for this issue.

The most tragic part of DMD is that there is so little known about the disease and no known treatment for it. Treatment has traditionally been aimed at managing the symptoms in an effort to optimize the quality of life. The medication required just to treat the symptoms is often too expensive for families to handle.

Research is what is desperately needed to fight this deadly disease. This bill will provide a significant step in addressing the lack of knowledge about DMD. By expanding the programs at the National Institute of Neurological Disorders and Stroke, as well as establishing research centers of excellence and authorizing research grants, we can start to find out more about DMD and give hope to families like the DeGreniers.

I urge my Colleagues to support this important legislation. Mr. EHRlich. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong support of H.R. 717, the Duchenne Muscular Dystrophy (DMD) Childhood Assistance, Research, and Education (CARE) Act. As a cosponsor of H.R. 717, I am extremely pleased this bill, which focuses federal resources on researching DMD, is being considered by the House of Representatives today.

DMD is the most common form of genetic childhood disease, affecting approximately one in every 3,500 boys worldwide. As the disease progresses, muscle deterioration in the back and chest exerts pressure against the lungs, making it difficult to breathe. By age 10, children born with DMD will lose the ability to walk. The deterioration process continues until it ultimately takes the boy’s life, typically by the late teens or early twenties.

Although the gene that causes DMD was successfully identified and isolated by medical researchers in 1987, federal research devoted to potential treatment options or a cure since this initiative was first proposed has been minimal. Of the $20.3 billion allocated for the National Institutes of Health (NIH) during FY 2001, only a few million dollars are invested in medical research specific to DMD. This limited federal support has resulted in minimal treatment options aimed at managing the symptoms, not treating the disease.

I want to commend my colleagues, ROGER WICKER and COLIN PETERSON, for introducing H.R. 717, the CARE Act. This legislation will increase the funding available for researching DMD, direct NIH’s attention to solving this problem, and better educate the public on this tragic disease.

Further, I want to thank the leadership of the Energy and Commerce Committee and its Health Subcommittee for expediting this matter to ensure that the federal government acts quickly as possible to combat DMD. Finally, I want to recognize Parent Project, an important organization for families of sufferers of DMD, and thank them for their continued efforts to significantly increase research at the federal level.

Mr. UPTON. Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased that you have called for our consideration this evening H.R. 717, the Muscular Dystrophy Community Assistance, Research, and Education Amendments of 2001. I am an original cosponsor of this legislation designed to substantially strengthen support at the national Institutes of Health for research on Duchenne and several other types of muscular dystrophy, coordinate that research across federal agencies, and translate discoveries in the lab into improved patient care.

I have seen the human face of Duchenne muscular dystrophy and the toll that it takes on children and families. Some time ago, I had the opportunity to visit with Don and Joyce Carpenter of Kalamazoo, Michigan, and their courageous son Ben, who suffers from Duchenne muscular dystrophy. From them, I learned that Duchenne muscular dystrophy is the most common and the most catastrophic form of genetic childhood disease. Sadly, it generally kills its victims in their late teens or early 20s. For decades, the only drug treatment known to somewhat alter the course of the disease is the use of steroids—whose serious side effects are well known. We’ve simply got to do better.

We have to find a way to prevent this devastating disorder in the first place—perhaps through the promise of gene therapy. And until we learn how to prevent it, we’ve got to learn how to treat it more effectively.

This legislation has strong bipartisan support. It has 310 cosponsors and was unanimously approved by both the Health Subcommittee and the full Energy and Commerce Committee.

I call on my colleagues to join me in supporting this legislation. What we are doing here this evening is giving hope to Don and Joyce and Ben Carpenter and many others who suffer from Duchenne and other devastating forms of muscular dystrophy in this nation and across the world. We can work miracles when we really try.

Mr. PETERSON of Minnesota. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of H.R. 717, the Muscular Dystrophy Community Assistance, Research and Education Act.

Representative WICKER and I introduced H.R. 717, after being inspired by testimonies from our constituents. I am inspired by an extraordinary 9-year-old boy, Jacob, who has Duchenne Muscular Dystrophy.

For those of you who don’t know about Duchenne Muscular Dystrophy: Duchenne is typically diagnosed in boys between the ages of 3 and 5 years; the disease is characterized by progressive weakness, with a gradual deterioration of muscle capacity, first in the legs, then in the arms, back, lungs, and heart; and children affected by Duchenne typically do not live to see their 20s.

Currently, Jacob uses a motorized scooter to get around, but soon he will need a ventilator to breathe. There is no treatment for Duchenne Muscular Dystrophy. The life expectancy of a child with Duchenne has not changed since 1859 when it was first identified.

It is time for us to focus our efforts and target funds to Muscular Dystrophy research at NIH and CDC.

H.R. 717, will fight childhood muscular dystrophy by boosting research funding and raising public awareness. Less than 1/2000 of the NIH budget is focused on research linked to Muscular Dystrophy. Time is running out.

I asked Jacob, if he could trade places with anyone in the world who would he be; I expected him to say a famous athlete or movie star, but he simply answered his older brother, so he can play football with his friends. You see his biggest wish is to be a regular boy.

Today, lets do what we can to help this little boy grow up to play football with his friends. I hope all of you are as inspired as I am by the courage of Jacob and other children who suffer from this terrible disease.

I urge you to support H.R. 717.
CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE
September 24, 2001

APPOINTMENT OF CONFEREES ON H.R. 2500, DEPARTMENTS OF COMMERCE, JUSTICE, AND STATE, THE JUDICIARY, AND RELATED AGENCIES APPROPRIATIONS ACT, 2002

Mr. WOLF. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker's table the bill (H.R. 2500) making appropriations for the Departments of Commerce, Justice, and State, the Judiciary, and related agencies for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2002, and for other purposes, with a Senate amendment thereto, disagree to the Senate amendment, and agree to the conference asked by the Senate.

There was no objection.

MAKING IN ORDER AT ANY TIME CONSIDERATION OF H.J. RES. 65, CONTINUING APPROPRIATIONS, FISCAL YEAR 2002

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that it be in order at any time without intervention of any point of order to consider in the House the joint resolution (H.J. Res. 65) making continuing appropriations for the fiscal year 2002, and for other purposes; that the joint resolution be considered as read for amendment; the joint resolution shall be debatable for 1 hour equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking member of the Committee on Appropriations; and the previous question shall be considered as ordered on the joint resolution to final passage without intervening motion except one motion to recommit.

The Speaker pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Florida? There was no objection.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days in which to revise and extend their remarks (H.J. Res. 65) and that I may include tabular and extraneous material.

The Speaker pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Florida? There was no objection.

CONTINUING APPROPRIATIONS, FISCAL YEAR 2002

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Mr. Speaker, pursuant to the order of the House of section 101 shall be used to initiate or resumes any project or activity for which appropriations are made or authority were not available during fiscal year 2001.

Sec. 105. No provision which is included in any appropriations Act listed in section 101(a) but which was included in the applicable appropriations Act for fiscal year 2001 and which by its terms is applicable to more than one appropriation, fund, or authority shall be applicable to any appropriation, fund, or authority provided in this joint reso-

Sec. 106. Appropriations made and authority granted pursuant to this joint resolution shall cover all obligations or expenditures incurred for any program, project, or activity during the period for which funds or authority for such project or activity are available under this joint resolution.

Sec. 107. Unless otherwise provided for in this joint resolution or in the applicable appropriation, fund, or authority, funds made available and authority granted pursuant to this joint resolution shall be available until (a) enactment into law of an appropriation, fund, or authority in this joint resolution, or (b) enactment into law of the applicable appropriations Act by both Houses without any provision for such purpose, or (c) October 15, 2001, whichever first occurs.

Sec. 108. Expenditures made pursuant to this joint resolution shall be charged to, and shall be applicable to, the appropriation, fund, or authority whenever a bill in which such applicable appropriation, fund, or authority is contained is enacted into law.

Sec. 109. No provision in any appropriations Act for fiscal year 2001 listed in section 101(a) that makes the availability of any appropriation, fund, or authority dependent upon provisions in this joint resolution, or (b) the enactment into law of the applicable appropriations Act by both Houses without any provision for such purpose, or (c) October 15, 2001, whichever first occurs.

Sec. 110. Appropriations and funds made available by or authority granted pursuant to this joint resolution may be used without regard to any prior approval, submission, or action in connection with the enactment of additional authorizing or other legislation unless otherwise provided for in this joint resolution.

Sec. 111. This joint resolution shall be implemented so that only the most limited funding action of that permitted in the joint resolution shall be taken in order to provide for continuation of projects and activities.

Sec. 112. Notwithstanding any other provision of this joint resolution, except section 107, for those programs that had high initial funding requests against collecting "other fees" as authorized by section 4(i) and 4(k) of the Federal Reserve Act (12 U.S.C. 362a and section 202 of Public Law 91-373), may continue through the date specified in section 107(c) of this joint resolution.

Sec. 113. All programs and activities authorized by subsection (f) of section 403 of Public Law 103-356 may continue through the date specified in section 107(c) of this joint resolution.

Sec. 114. Notwithstanding any other provision of this joint resolution, except section 107, the Library of Congress may temporarily transfer funds made available in this joint resolution or in the applicable appropriation, fund, or authority prior to October 1, 2001, to any other appropriation, fund, or authority in order to further the purposes of this joint resolution.

Sec. 115. Of amounts provided by section 101(a) of this joint resolution, for projects and activities that would be funded under the heading "International Organizations and Conferences, Contributions to International Organizations" in the Departments of Commerce, Justice, and State, and the Judiciary, and Related Agencies Appropriations, 2001, $100,000,000 may be made available only pur-

Sec. 116. Appropriations made and authority granted pursuant to the enactment of this Act to increase funding for any United Nations program without identifying an offsetting decrease elsewhere in the United States budget and cause the United Nations to exceed the budget for the biennium 2000-2001 of $2,035,700,000.

Sec. 117. Activities authorized by subsection (f) of section 324 of the Department of the Interior, Environment, and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 2001, may continue through the date specified in section 107(c) of this joint resolution.

Sec. 118. All programs and activities authorized by subsection (f) of section 324 of the Department of the Interior, Environment, and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, 2001, may continue through the date specified in section 107(c) of this joint resolution.

Sec. 119. Of amounts provided by section 101(a) of this joint resolution, for projects and activities that would be funded under the heading "International Operations and Related Programs", may continue through the date specified in section 107(c) of this joint resolution.

Sec. 120. Notwithstanding any other provisection 107, the Library of Congress may temporarily transfer funds made available in this joint resolution or in the applicable appropriation, fund, or authority prior to October 1, 2001, to any other appropriation, fund, or authority in order to further the purposes of this joint resolution.

Sec. 121. Collection and use of maintenance fees are authorized and payable on the Federal Insecticide, Fungicide, and Rodenticide Act (7 U.S.C. §136a-1(i) and (k)) may continue through the date specified in section 107(c) of this joint resolution. Prohib-

Sec. 122. Notwithstanding section 106 of this joint resolution, funds made available in Public Law 107-38 are not limited by the terms and conditions of this joint resolution.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to the order of the House of today, the previous question is ordered. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the joint resolution.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was read the third time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the passage of the joint resolution.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 8, rule XX, further proceedings on this question will be postponed.

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. All time for debate has expired.

The joint resolution is considered as read for amendment.

Pursuant to the order of the House of today, the previous question is ordered. The question is on the engrossment and third reading of the joint resolution.

The joint resolution was ordered to be engrossed and read a third time, and was read the third time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The question is on the passage of the joint resolution.

The question was taken; and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 8, rule XX, further proceedings on this question will be postponed.

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Recess
AFTER RECESS

The recess having expired, the House was called to order by the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. FOLEY) at 6 p.m.

VACATING ORDERING OF YEAS AND NAYS ON H.R. 2589, MARK-TO-MARKET EXTENSION ACT OF 2001

Mr. HEFLEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to vacate the ordering of the yeas and nays on the motion to suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 2589, as amended, to the end that the Chair put the question on the motion de novo.

The Speaker pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Colorado?

There was no objection. The Speaker pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. GREEN) that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 2589, as amended.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill, as amended, was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The Speaker pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 8 of rule XX, the Chair will now put the question on the motion to suspend the rules on which further proceedings were postponed earlier today, and the question on passage of House Joint Resolution 65.

Votes will be taken in the following order:

H.R. 117, by the yeas and nays, and H.J. Res. 65, de novo.

The Chair will reduce to 5 minutes the time for any electronic vote after the first such vote in this series.

MUSCULAR DYSTROPHY COMMUNITY ASSISTANCE, RESEARCH AND EDUCATION AMENDMENTS OF 2001

The Speaker pro tempore. The pending business is the question of suspending the rules and passing the bill, H.R. 717, as amended.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The Speaker pro tempore. The question is on the motion offered by the gentleman from Florida (Mr. BILLIKEN) that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 717, as amended, on which the yeas and nays are ordered.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 383, nays 0, not voting 47, as follows:

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.
A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION
Mr. PORTMAN. Mr. Speaker, due to the severe weather conditions in the Washington D.C. area, my airplane was not able to land before the votes occurred on H.R. 717, the Duchenne Muscular Dystrophy Childhood Assistance, Research and Education Amendments of 2001, and H.J. Res. 65, the FY 2002 Continuing Resolution.
Had I been present, I would have voted “yea” on each of these bills.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION
Mrs. MALONEY of New York. Mr. Speaker, on September 24, 2001, I was unavoidably detained the train broke down—and I missed rollcall votes numbered 349 and 350. Rollcall vote 349 was on the motion to suspend the rules and pass HR 717, to provide for reconsideration in the House of the concurrent resolution, H.R. Res. 96, to support the goals of Red Ribbon Week in promoting drug-free communities.
Had I been present I would have voted “yea” on both H.R. 717 and H.J. Res. 65.

SUPPORTING THE GOALS OF RED RIBBON WEEK IN PROMOTING DRUG-FREE COMMUNITIES
Mr. BILIRAKIS. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent for immediate consideration in the House of the concurrent resolution (H.R. Con. Res. 96) supporting the goals of Red Ribbon Week in promoting drug-free communities.
The Clerk read the title of the concurrent resolution.
The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. FOLEY). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Florida (Mr. BILIRAKIS).
Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, reverting the right to object, I would like a brief explanation from the gentleman from Florida (Mr. BILIRAKIS).
Mr. BILIRAKIS. Mr. Speaker, will the gentleman yield?
Mr. BROWN of Ohio. I yield to the gentleman from Florida.
Mr. BILIRAKIS. Mr. Speaker, this resolution calls for increased awareness of drug abuse and promotes drug-free communities.
Red Ribbon Week began in 1985 following the death of Enrique “Kiki” Camarena, a drug enforcement agent who was close to uncovering identities of key members of a Mexican drug cartel. Saddened by his death and concerned by the destruction caused by drugs in America, his friends and family in his hometown of Calexico, California began wearing red ribbons in his honor to raise the consciousness of communities throughout the Imperial Valley.
Today the red ribbon has become the national symbol for drug prevention across America. Red Ribbon Week activities make a positive impact in communities nationwide. The program focuses on identifying resources for parents and collaborating with local community stakeholders to provide primary prevention and education to strengthen healthy families.

I support the goals of this resolution, Mr. Speaker; and I believe it is a critical tool through which local communities learn, educate, and act to ensure a healthier future for our children. I ask my colleagues to support the fight against drugs and to help us pass H. Con. Res. 84, supporting the goals of Red Ribbon Week and promoting drug-free communities.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Further reserving the right to object, Mr. Speaker, I yield to my colleague, the gentleman from California (Mr. BACA).

Mr. BACA. Mr. Speaker, I stand here today in support of House Concurrent Resolution 84. This bill expresses a sense of Congress supporting the goals of Red Ribbon Week and preventing drug use. We must focus on awareness and prevention.

The battle against drugs is being fought in our homes, in our living rooms with real human beings and with our children, our brothers, our sisters, our parents, our neighbors, our friends, our relatives and our communities. In California, I have worked hard to recognize Red Ribbon Week, as you can see by the red ribbon that I am wearing now. And as it was stated earlier before, it originally started in 1985 in Imperial Valley; and we have celebrated in San Bernardino, throughout the last 7 or 8 years, Red Ribbon Week. We have a parade.

I think it is important for our communities to know that drugs kill our children. We must be aware. We must do everything possible to prevent the use of drugs and of course of the abuse of drugs, and getting a child to go in a positive direction is good for our children. Let them know that we will say no to drugs. Drugs are bad, bad for our children, bad for our community, bad for our society, whatever we can do to promote that awareness and involvement in our neighborhoods.

We have got our communities involved. We have schools that are involved. We have businesses that are involved. We have neighborhoods that are involved. We have youth and families that participate because we know what it means and what a disaster it is to a family who is involved in drugs.

It is also a savings in taxpayer dollars to us as well. When we look at a child or someone who is into drugs, it costs us for that particular child to rehabilitate them. It is a lot better to do the prevention and awareness to save the child and save a life.

I believe we have to do everything possible to make sure our communities are drug free. We participate with law enforcement in our communities. We participate with the fire department. We participate with our neighbors. We want healthy and productive and drug-free life society. By all of us being involved and coming together, we are touching the lives and saving the lives of many individuals in our community.

Today we are committed in this movement and we will continue to do this. This is a Red Ribbon Week; and hopefully, everybody will display the red ribbon that I have here along, of course, the flag that we carry in our lapel for many Americans right now. As we look at what has happened right now, as many as on the ground who died there, we want to demonstrate to those individuals who have sacrificed their lives to save a life, it is that life for many other individuals and possibly those children that lost their lives there and many of the children we have to save as well.

Mr. Speaker, I ask everybody to recognize we must save the lives of our children.

Mr. BROWN of Ohio. Mr. Speaker, I support passage of the concurrent resolution, and I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Florida?

There was no objection.

The Clerk read the concurrent resolution, as follows:

H. CON. RES. 84

Whereas the National Family Partnership, Governors, Children, Parents, Teachers, and Associations, and over 100 other organizations throughout the United States annually cosponsor October 23 through October 31 as Red Ribbon Week; and Whereas the objective of Red Ribbon Week is to promote drug-free communities through drug prevention efforts, education, parental involvement, and community-wide support; and Whereas drug abuse is one of the major challenges our Nation faces in securing a safe and healthy future for our children; and Whereas drug abuse is a major challenge for the Nation demonstrates their commitment to drug-free, healthy lifestyles by wearing and displaying red ribbons during this weekend celebration: Now, therefore, be it

Resolved by the House of Representatives (the Senate concurring), That the Congress—

(1) supports the goals of Red Ribbon Week; and

(2) encourages all Americans to promote drug-free communities and to participate in drug prevention activities to show support for healthy, productive, drug-free lifestyles.

The concurrent resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Florida?

There was no objection.

The Speaker pro tempore laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States; which was read and, together with the accompanying papers, without objection, referred to the Committee on International Relations and ordered to be printed:

TO THE CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES:

WHEREAS drug abuse is one of the major challenges our Nation faces in securing a safe and healthy future for our children; and

WHEREAS drug abuse is a major challenge of the Nation as it continues to increase in effect beyond the anniversary date. In accordance with this provision, I have sent the enclosed notice, stating that the emergency declared for the automatic termination of a national emergency unless, prior to the anniversary date of its declaration, the President publishes in the Federal Register and transmits to the Congress a declaration on September 26, 1993, of a national emergency unless, prior to the anniversary date of its declaration, the President publishes in the Federal Register and transmits to the Congress a notice stating that the emergency is to continue in effect beyond the anniversary date. In accordance with this provision, I have sent the enclosed notice, stating that the emergency declared with respect to the National Union for the Total Independence of Angola (UNITA) is to continue in effect beyond September 24, 2001.

The circumstances that led to the declaration on September 26, 1993, of a national emergency have not been resolved. The actions and policies of UNITA pose a continuing unusual and extraordinary threat to the foreign policy of the United States. United Nations Security Council Resolutions 864 (1993), 1127 (1997), and 1173 (1998) continue to oblige all member states to maintain sanctions. Discontinuation of the sanctions would have a prejudicial effect on the prospects for peace in Angola. For these reasons, I have determined that it is necessary to maintain in force the broad authorities necessary to apply economic pressure on UNITA to reduce its ability to pursue its military operations.

GEORGE W. BUSH.

REPORT ON NATIONAL EMERGENCY WITH RESPECT TO NATIONAL UNION FOR THE TOTAL INDEPENDENCE OF ANGOLA (UNITA)—MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES (H. DOC. NO. 107–125)

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States, which was read and, together with the accompanying papers, without objection, referred to the Committee on International Relations and ordered to be printed:

To the Congress of the United States:

As required by section 401(c) of the National Emergencies Act, 50 U.S.C. 1641(c), and section 1204(c) of the National Emergency Economic Powers Act, 50 U.S.C. 1703(c), I transmit hereewith a 6-month periodic report on the national emergency with respect to the National Union for the Total Independence of Angola (UNITA) that was declared in Executive Order 12963 of September 26, 1993.

GEORGE W. BUSH

BLOCKING PROPERTY AND PROHIBITING TRANSACTIONS WITH PERSONS WHO COMMIT, THREATEN, OR SUPPORT TERRORISM—MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES (H. DOC. NO. 107–126)

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following message from the President of the United States, which was read and, together with the accompanying papers, without objection, referred to the Committee on International Relations and ordered to be printed:

To the Congress of the United States:

Pursuant to section 204(b) of the International Emergency Economic Powers Act, 50 U.S.C. 1705(b) (IEEPA), and section 301 of the National Emergencies Act, 50 U.S.C. 1631, I hereby report that I have exercised my statutory authority to declare a national emergency in response to the unusual and extraordinary threat to the national security, foreign policy, and economy of the United States by grave acts of terrorism and threats of terrorism committed by foreign terrorists, including the September 11, 2001, terrorist attacks at the World Trade Center, New York, and in Pennsylvania. I have also issued an Executive Order to help deal with this threat by giving the United States more powerful tools to reach the means by which terrorists and terrorist networks finance themselves and to encourage greater cooperation by foreign financial institutions and other entities that may have access to foreign property belonging to terrorists or terrorist organizations. The attacks of September 11, 2001, highlighted in the most tragic way the threat posed to the security and national interests of the United States by terrorists who have abandoned any regard for humanity, decency, morality, or honor. These terrorist networks operate across international borders and derive their financing from sources in many nations. Often, terrorist property and financial assets lie outside the jurisdiction of the United States. Our efforts to disrupt and destroy the financial underpinnings of global terrorism must therefore be broad, and not only provide powerful sanctions against the U.S. property of terrorists and their supporters, but also encourage multilateral cooperation in identifying and freezing property and assets located elsewhere.

This Executive Order is part of our national commitment to lead the international effort to bring a halt to the evil of terrorist activity. In general terms, it permits means by which to disrupt the financial support network for terrorist organizations by blocking the U.S. assets not only of foreign persons or entities who commit or pose a significant risk of committing acts of terrorism, but also by blocking the assets of their subsidiaries, front organizations, agents, and associates, and any other entities that provide services or assistance to them. Although the blocking powers enumerated in the order are broad, my Administration is committed to exercising them responsibly, with due regard for the culpability or the persons and entities potentially covered by the order, and in consultation with other countries.

The specific terms of the Executive Order provide for the blocking of the property and interests in property, including bank deposits, of foreign persons designated in the order or pursuant thereto, when such property is held, used, controlled, or possessed by the designated person; or interests in property if such lesser action is deemed consistent with the national interests of the United States. Such designations are made after consultation with the Secretary of the Treasury and the Attorney General, to take lesser action than the complete blocking of property or interests in property if such lesser action is deemed consistent with the national interests of the United States. Such consultation may include requests to foreign governments to seek, in accordance with international law and their domestic laws, information from financial institutions regarding terrorist property and to take action to deny terrorists the use of such property. The order also provides broad authority, with respect to the latter two categories, for the Secretary of the Treasury, in his discretion, and in consultation with the Secretary of State and the Attorney General, to take lesser action than the complete blocking of property or interests in property if such lesser action is deemed consistent with the national interests of the United States. Some of the factors that may be considered in deciding whether a lesser action against a foreign person is consistent with the national interests of the United States include:

- The impact of blocking on the U.S. or international financial system;
- The extent to which the foreign person has cooperated with U.S. authorities;
- The degree of knowledge the foreign person had of the terrorist-related activity described in the designated person; and
- The impact of blocking or other measures on the foreign person.

The Executive Order also directs the Secretary of State, the Secretary of the Treasury, and other agencies to
CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE

September 24, 2001

Mr. RAMSTAD. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to a true American hero. America owes Tom Burnett, Jr., a deep debt of gratitude for his bravery on September 11. Indeed, the Members of this very body may owe their very lives to Tom Burnett, Jr.

Mr. Speaker, Tom Burnett, who grew up in Bloomington, Minnesota in the Third Congressional District, which I am privileged to represent, was aboard United Flight 93 on that darkest of days for our Nation. Tom was among the small group of passengers who confronted the hijackers that fateful morning. Department officials believe Flight 93 was headed for a target here in Washington, most likely the White House or the Capitol. Tom was able to reach his wife, Desena, on his cell phone, the plane. She told him that other hijacked planes had crashed into the World Trade Center towers and the Pentagon.

Mr. Speaker, that is exactly what Tom Burnett did. His courage and sacrifice foiled the hijackers' plans of mass destruction. Without regard to his own safety, Tom helped save countless lives.

In recent days, after listening to the tape from the black box, law enforcement officials have described a desperate struggle aboard the plane. As FBI Director Mueller said after being briefed on the contents of the tape, and I am quoting, “We believe those passengers were absolute heroes, and their actions during this flight were heroic.”

Mr. Speaker, Tom Burnett, Jr. has shown this kind of selfless leadership many times before. As a quarterback at Thomas Jefferson High School in Bloomington, Minnesota, Tom’s inspired play led his team to the conference championship game in 1980, the only game they lost that season. The team that beat them won the State title, in fact. He was also a leader in his remarkable business career, as chief operating officer for a medical device manufacturer in California.

No one who knew Tom Burnett is surprised at his heroism. His football coach in high school, Bruno Waldner, said, “Tom, if anybody, would have the type of character to do that. He didn’t hesitate. He took everybody up another level. He was on an average football team that took everybody up another level. He was an average football player, but he was a fantastic player.”

Another business associate said: “Tom was a man of action. If he knew that he could have any potential beneficial effect and he knew what the odds were, he would have taken action.” Another business associate said: “This was very much in character for Tom Burnett. It’s just the type of man he was.”

Mr. Speaker, it is my privilege to present the Congressional Gold Medal to commemorate the 40th anniversary of the Peace Corps. I do this with my personal Gold Medal resolution for Sargent Shriver.

I rise today to introduce a Congressional Gold Medal resolution for Sargent Shriver who was the first director of the Peace Corps. I do this with my co-sponsors, former members of the United States Peace Corps, myself, the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. SHAYES), the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. HALL), the gentleman from New York (Mr. WALSH), the gentleman from California (Mr. HONDA), and the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. PETRI).

I also do it on behalf of the 163,000 volunteers who have served the United States Government in over 135 countries. I also do this based on what I did Saturday which was to celebrate the 40th anniversary of the Peace Corps here in Washington, but then on Sunday I went to the World Trade Center, ground zero in New York City, so I saw peace on Saturday and war on Sunday.

I view the destruction with a renewed resolve to operate the Peace Corps in order to better understand the world cultures, the world languages and the world differences.

Mr. Speaker, what better way than to authorize the President to present Sargent Shriver with a Congressional Gold Medal to commemorate the 40th anniversary of the Peace Corps in recognition of its founding father.

SPECIAL ORDERS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker’s announced policy of January 3, 2001, and under a previous order of the House, the following Members will be recognized for 5 minutes each.

Mr. FARR of California. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to a true American hero. America owes Tom Burnett, Jr., a deep debt of gratitude for his bravery on September 11. Indeed, the Members of this very body may owe their very lives to Tom Burnett, Jr.

Mr. Speaker, I am enclosing a copy of the Executive Order I have issued, This order is effective at 12:01 a.m. eastern daylight time on September 24, 2001.

RECOGNIZING SARGENT SHRIVER WITH CONGRESSIONAL GOLD MEDAL

(Mr. FARR of California asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. FARR of California, Mr. Speaker. I rise today to introduce a Congressional Gold Medal resolution for Sargent Shriver who was the first director of the Peace Corps. SPECIAL ORDERS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker’s announced policy of January 3, 2001, and under a previous order of the House, the following Members will be recognized for 5 minutes each.

Mr. RAMSTAD. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to a true American hero. America owes Tom Burnett, Jr., a deep debt of gratitude for his bravery on September 11. Indeed, the Members of this very body may owe their very lives to Tom Burnett, Jr.

Mr. Speaker, such moving testimonials to this great and courageous man have literally come in floods of words and tears in recent days back in Minnesota. At a memorial service last Tuesday night at St. Edward’s Catholic Church in Bloomington, I was among the 1,200 mourners who attended and heard many such moving tributes. The streets and parking lot of that church were lined with many other people who could not get into the packed church. Many waved American flags of all sizes. It was very sad. And it was very uplifting.

Mr. Speaker, many people claim America has suffered from a lack of heroes in recent years. Not anymore. Not with Tom Burnett, Jr. to look up to. Like so many heroes of September 11 who gave their lives to help others, from Tom and his fellow passengers on Flight 93, to the police, rescue personnel and firefighters in New York who rushed into those doomed towers and so many others, America has real heroes to remember and to cherish. We must never forget their ultimate sacrifice.

Mr. Speaker, our thoughts and prayers are with Tom’s wonderful family, his loving wife, Deena, their daughters Madison, Halley and Anna-Clair, his parents Thomas Sr. and Beverly of Bloomington, and his sisters Martha O’Brien and Mary Margaret Burnett.

May God bless Tom Burnett and his family. And may God bless America and all the heroes and heroines like Tom Burnett who gave their lives to save others on September 11.

INTRODUCTION OF RESOLUTION IN SUPPORT OF RECOVERY AND RETURN OF LUDWIG KOONS

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Ms. HART). Under a previous order of the House (H RES 873), a resolution from Texas (Mr. LAMPSON) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. LAMPSON. Madam Speaker, today I rise to let my colleagues know of my introduction of a concurrent resolution in support of the United States Government’s becoming actively involved in the recovery and return of Ludwig Koons, a boy who was abducted to Italy by his mother.

Ludwig, son of Jeffrey Koons, an award-winning, internationally renowned artist, was abducted to Italy by his mother, Ilona Staller, on June 9, 1994. Pending a final decision by the New York Supreme Court, the father in the United States as established by the judgment of divorce in the Supreme Court of New York of December 9, 1994. Pending a final decision by the Republic of Italy regarding the permanent return of Ludwig Maximillian Koons to the custody of the father in the United States as established by the judgment of divorce in the Supreme Court of New York of December 9, 1994. Pending a final decision by the Republic of Italy regarding the permanent return of Ludwig to the United States, the United States should also request that Italy authorize Ludwig to visit his father in his New York residence on a temporary basis.

As an American citizen, Ludwig has a right to preserve his identity, his nationality, and his family relations and to be raised by the parent who can best assure him a sound and healthy environment.

OD SAY CAN WE SEE?

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Minnesota (Mr. GUTFNECHT) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. GUTFNECHT. Madam Speaker, lying aboard a British warship in Baltimore Harbor, Francis Scott Key listened to the cheers for the British lightly rained down on Fort McHenry. The small, understaffed garrison suddenly found itself under the attack of the greatest Navy in the world. One thousand American soldiers were charged with the daunting task of defending Fort McHenry against 30 British warships and thousands of enemy ground troops. The bombs fell for 25 straight hours. Many hit their target. Others burst overhead, raining shrapnel on the soldiers below. When the rocket explosions illuminated the sky, the American flags shone defiantly over that battered fort. The Americans had achieved the unthinkable. They had bravely held their position against all odds. The magnificent sight moved Key to pen the words that have stirred American hearts ever since, the Star-Spangled Banner.

Two weeks ago, 187 years after the defense of Fort McHenry, our Nation stared in horror at the smoke hanging over New York City and Washington, D.C. We looked on in disbelief as the towers of the World Trade Center crumbled before our very eyes. Yet out of the destruction shone a beacon of hope. Wiping tears from our eyes, we watched modern heroes, New York’s firefighters, raising the Stars and Stripes atop the mountain of rubble. The comparison to Iwo Jima is inescapable.

Madam Speaker, the attack on America was not an attempt to defeat our Army. It was an organized plan to destroy the lives of innocent Americans. It was a direct assault on the American spirit. The terrorists succeeded in killing thousands of our fellow citizens, but they can never kill the American spirit.

Napoleon once said, “The great soldiers run to the sound of the guns.” Consider the heroism of the passengers aboard United Flight 93 who attacked their hijackers. They saved thousands of lives on the ground and perhaps the most precious symbols of our Nation. We must never forget the passengers who gave their lives when they courageously rushed into the burning towers as others streamed out. Now we see the quiet heroism of rescue workers who continue to dig tirelessly through the rubble, in hopes of finding just one survivor. These Americans stand on the shoulders of the defenders of Fort McHenry.

Throughout our history, many adversaries have underestimated the steely resolve of the American spirit. They underestimated us now. We have been called to action, to demonstrate the virtues that make this a great Nation. At a similar hour, Winston Churchill said, “Do not let us speak of darker days. Let us speak, rather, of sterner necessities have underestimated the steely resolve of the American spirit.

Madam Speaker, as we declare war on terrorism around the world, the American flag will inspire us just as it inspired Francis Scott Key. It will serve as a notice to our adversaries. Though bruised and bloodied, we remain unbowed. The authors of terror may never understand the words of our national anthem, but they will come to understand the spirit that it embodies. We will turn our rage into moral outrage. When the dust of battle clears, America will remain the land of the free and the home of the brave.

Madam Speaker, to victory. May God bless America.

GENERAL PROVISIONS
H.R. 2944
OFFERED BY: Ms. Norton
OFFERED BY: Ms. Norton
AMENDMENT No. 4: In lieu of the matter proposed to be inserted by the amendment, insert the following new section:
SEC. 134. None of the funds contained in this Act may be used to infringe upon any right of association, guaranteed by the first amendment to the Constitution, of any non-profit, voluntary membership organization, including the Boy Scouts of America.
The Senate met at 12 noon and was called to order by the President pro tempore [Mr. BYRD].

PRAYER

The Chaplain, Dr. Lloyd John Ogilvie, offered the following prayer:

Gracious Father, source of all our blessings, we are amazed as we check the balance in our spiritual bank account. We begin this new week realizing that You have made an immense deposit of grace, strength, wisdom, and courage in our hearts. And what’s exciting is that You constantly will replenish our depleted resources throughout this week. Your love has no limits. Your spiritual resiliency has no energy crisis. Your hope has no restrictions, and Your power has no ending.

Free us from the false assumption that we are adequate for life’s challenges on our own. You promise to go before us. We will encounter no problem for which You have not prepared a solution; we will deal with no person whom You have not prepared to receive a blessing from You through us; we will face no challenge for which You will not make us capable for courageous leadership.

Now, dear God, help the Senators use the abundant blessings You have lavished on them because You have placed them in leadership to get Your work done for our beloved Nation and the welfare of the world. You are our Lord and Saviour. Amen.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The PRESIDENT pro tempore led the Pledge of Allegiance, as follows:

I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

RESERVATION OF LEADER TIME

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, the leadership time is reserved.

RECOGNITION OF THE ACTING MAJORITY LEADER

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Nevada is recognized.

SCHEDULE

Mr. REID. Mr. President, today there will be 2 hours of debate on the Jordan Free Trade Area Implementation Act. We are going to have our first rollcall vote at or near 2 p.m. today on the nomination of Kirk Van Tine to be the general counsel at the Department of Transportation.

Following that, the Senate is going to resume consideration of the Department of Defense authorization bill. I have had a number of conversations this morning with the chairman of the committee and the majority leader, Senator DASCHEL and Senator LIVVIN. Although I have not spoken to Senator WARNER, I am confident he also believes we should complete this legislation as quickly as possible. It is the intent of the leader to finish this legislation tomorrow. There are a number of amendments that need to be brought forward, one of which deals with base closings, and we would hope that could be done as quickly as possible.

Also, Mr. President, the two managers of the bill will ask for a time for disposing of the amendments, either a finite list or something that would give the managers of the bill some idea of what amendments Members are wanting to offer. Also, because of this very short week which is going to end Wednesday at 2 o’clock because of the Jewish holiday, Yom Kippur, it is important we complete the continuing resolution to get us through the first couple weeks of next month so we can go forward working on appropriations bills.

I am happy to report to the membership that the House has appointed a number of conference committees on the appropriations bills, and that is a good sign that we can move forward in the usual process. I hope by the time we have run out of time on the continuing resolution, we will have made great progress in our appropriations bills. We would ask cooperation of all Members. This is going to be a very long process. This leadership has indicated there may be other things he wishes to bring up in addition to the CR and the Defense bill.

MEASURE PLACED ON CALENDAR—S. 1447

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I understand that S. 1447 is now at the desk and due for its second reading.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator is correct.

Mr. REID. I would ask that S. 1447 be read for a second time and then, Mr. President, I would object to any further proceedings on the legislation at this time.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. The clerk will read the title for the second time.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill [S. 1447] to improve aviation security, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. There being no objection to any further proceedings, the bill will go on the calendar.

UNITED STATES-JORDAN FREE TRADE AREA IMPLEMENTATION ACT

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, the Finance Committee will now be discharged from further consideration of H.R. 2603, and the Senate will now proceed to its consideration.

The clerk will report the bill by title. The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill [H.R. 2603] to implement the agreement establishing a United States-Jordan free trade area.

The PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, there will now be 2 hours of debate on the bill with 1 hour under the control of the Senator from Texas, Mr. GRAMM, and 1 hour under the control of the Senator from Montana, Mr. BAUCUS, or his designee.

What is the will of the Senate? Time is running.

The Senator from Montana, Mr. BAUCUS.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I rise to urge the adoption of H.R. 2603. That is a bill to implement the United States-Jordan Free Trade Agreement. The House passed the bill by a voice vote just before the August recess. The Finance Committee reported a virtually identical bill, also immediately before the August recess. Only two Members dissented when the Finance Committee reported that bill out.

I have advocated the approval of this agreement since it was negotiated by the Clinton administration last year. Finally, after a number of hitches, a number of setbacks, the administration and Congress appear poised to give final approval to the United States-Jordan Free Trade Agreement.

This implementing bill sends an unmistakable signal of support for an important friend, an important ally in the Middle East. That signal was important when the agreement was signed last October. It is even more important now. Jordan has been a steadfast friend in its support for the United States’ efforts to bring peace to the Middle East. We all remember the critical role played by King Hussein a few years ago. King Abdullah has maintained that support.

As we all know, Jordan has been steadfast in its support for America in the face of the terrorist attacks against us. In a September 12 letter to President Bush, the King condemned the attacks and pledged Jordan’s support in our fight against terrorism. As

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE 17727

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, in order to avoid dead time in the Senate while we are waiting for other Senators to speak, I would like to read into the Record the two letters. One is from the United States Trade Representative, Ambassador Robert Zoellick, to Jordan’s Ambassador to the United States, and the other by Ambassador Muasher to USTR Zoellick. The letters are identified in the following manner.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, in order to avoid dead time in the Senate while we are waiting for other Senators to speak, I would like to read into the Record the two letters. One is from the United States Trade Representative, Ambassador Robert Zoellick, to Jordan’s Ambassador to the United States, and the other by Ambassador Muasher to USTR Zoellick. The letters are identified in the following manner.

By implementing the free trade agreement, the United States and Jordan will set a precedent that is not only good for Jordan but it should pass the implementing bill. To support. By implementing the free trade agreement, the United States and Jordan will set a precedent that is not only good for Jordan but it should pass the implementing bill. To support.

Second, it must be beyond the bounds of the reasonable exercise of discretion in such matters.

Further, no arbitrator can order the United States to change its practices pursuant to the agreement.

Under the agreement, dispute settlement will be based on nonbinding mediation—not arbitration but nonbinding mediation. That is very important.

To my mind, the approach to labor and environment in the Jordan agreement makes perfect sense. Consider the alternative. Would we really want to enter into a trade agreement with a country intent on weakening enforcement of its labor and environmental laws in order to gain a trade advantage? I don’t think so. Yet the opponents of the labor and environmental provisions would permit precisely that result. That is not just bad policy, it is bad environmental policy, it is bad labor policy, and bad trade policy. Indeed, I hope that by including labor and environmental provisions in the Jordan agreement we will set a precedent for the future.

In conclusion, let me stress that getting the United States-Jordan agreement off the ground would be essential even if we were not currently mobilizing support for a global campaign against terrorism. The agreement represents an important expression of American support for a key partner in the Middle East as well as a model of a progressive free trade agreement. I hope the President will sign it immediately so the benefits to both the United States and Jordan can begin to flow.

Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The President pro tempore. The President pro tempore.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent the order for the quorum call be dispensed with.

Mr. President, again, this is an exchange of letters between Ambassador Zoellick and the Ambassador representing Jordan.

I ask unanimous consent to have those letters printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Dear Mr. Ambassador:

I wish to share my Government’s views on implementation of the dispute settlement procedures in the Agreement between the United States of America and the Hashemite Kingdom of Jordan in the Establishment of a Free Trade Area, signed on October 24, 2000.

Given the close working relationship between our two Governments, the volume of trade between our two countries, and the clear rules of the Agreement, I would expect few if any differences to arise between our two Governments over the interpretation or application of the Agreement. Should any differences arise under the Agreement, my Government will make every effort to resolve them without recourse to formal dispute settlement procedures.

In particular, my Government would not expect or intend to apply the Agreement’s dispute settlement enforcement procedures to bona fide disputes that result from blocking trade. In light of the wide range of our bilateral ties and the spirit of collaboration that characterizes our relations, my Government considers that appropriate mechanisms, that will help to secure compliance without recourse to traditional trade sanctions.

Sincerely,

Robert B. Zoellick. U.S. Trade Representative.
Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I want to say a few words about these letters, since many have referred to them as the U.S.-Jordan Agreement has moved through the Congress.

First, this exchange of letters should not have been necessary. We should have passed this legislation months ago, with the exchange of letters.

Second, the exchange of letters does not change the U.S.-Jordan Agreement one jot. It simply reflects the views of the current Administration and the Government of Jordan. It is not an amendment to the Agreement. Indeed, it is not even binding on future Administrations.

Clearly, the number of disputes between our two countries will be few, if any. In the unlikely event we do go to formal dispute settlement, we should avoid resorting to sanctions, whatever the subject of the dispute. The exchange of letters expresses that view.

However, if in a particular case a future Administration should decide that sanctions are appropriate, it will be free to act accordingly. Nothing in this exchange of letters changes that.

Mr. President, I now would like to read to you an article from the agreement, pertaining to the environment.

2. Recognizing the right of each Party to establish its own levels of domestic environmental protection and to continue to improve its levels of environmental protection and shall strive to continue to improve those laws.

(a) The Agreement shall not include any statutes or regulations, or provision thereof, the enforcement of which may have a significant effect on the environment, or the prevention of a danger to human, animal, or plant life or health, through:

(a) the prevention, abatement or control of the release, dilution, transport, or exposure to the environment of pollutants or environmental contaminants;
(b) the control of environmentally hazardous or toxic chemicals, substances, materials and wastes, and the dissemination of information related thereto; or
(c) the protection or conservation of wild flora or fauna, including endangered species, their habitat, and specially protected natural areas in the Party’s territory, but does not include any statutes or regulations, or provision thereof, directly related to worker health, health, or safety.

Again, to summarize, Mr. President, the labor and environmental provisions are somewhat contentious. They are framed in such a way that I think that is not much of an argument against the agreement. First, it intrudes upon American sovereignty.

The argument against this provision is that it intrudes upon American sovereignty, that it commits the United States to at least listen to a mediator, and at least consult with Jordan on labor and environmental matters.

I think that is not much of an argument against the agreement, because I think that the U.S.-Jordan Agreement has moved through the Congress.

First, a measure must constitute a sustained or recurring action or inaction. It can’t be just a single act by the President or by the Congress. It has to be a pattern of sustained or recurring action in order for a labor or environmental provision to be deemed trade distorting.

Second, it must affect trade. An environmental action or labor action which may have a significant effect on the United States but does not affect trade is not actionable.

Third, it must be beyond the bounds of a reasonable exercise of discretion.

There are certain matters that may slightly distort trade, but they are arguable to be sustained or recurring. If the action is within the bounds of a reasonable exercise of discretion by the United States, then no action is permissible.

Even if those tests are met, we move to the question of what sort of dispute settlement is provided for in this agreement. In this agreement there is no binding dispute settlement. There is consultation, but that is it. There is no arbitration in this agreement. There is no tribunal. Rather, under this agreement, if one country thinks each of the three conditions is met, it may request non-binding mediation, and not arbitration. If a mediator finds that an action is inappropriate under this agreement, that finding is non-binding.

The parties will then move toward consultation, trying to work out what seems to make the most sense. Even if the mediator finds against the United States, the United States cannot be forced to follow the recommendation of the mediator.

The argument against this provision is that it intrudes upon American sovereignty, that it commits the United States to at least listen to a mediator, and at least consult with Jordan on labor and environmental matters.

I think that is not much of an argument against the agreement, because I think that the U.S.-Jordan Agreement has moved through the Congress.

Let’s say in this case that Jordan implements a labor or environmental action that is trade distorting. Absent the provisions of the agreement, it would be totally within bounds of Jordan to do so. But at least here we would have the opportunity to discuss the matter with Jordan. Consider what would happen if the United States had non-binding mediation or no arbitration. It is a recognition that as the United States and Jordan continue to improve those laws, each Party shall strive to ensure that its laws provide for high levels of environmental protection.
Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

Mr. DORGAN. Ten minutes.

Mr. BAUCUS. Ten minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. DORGAN. Ten minutes.

Mr. President, I yield to my friend from North Dakota for—how many minutes?

Mr. DORGAN. Ten minutes.

Mr. BAUCUS. Ten minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. DORGAN. Ten minutes.

Mr. President, I have come to this Senate Chamber to support the trade agreement that is brought to the floor today. I believe it will be approved by the Senate by unanimous consent. Perhaps not, but I am told that it will be approved by the Senate, in any event.

I have been a critic of our trade policies. I have been a critic and have voted against a fair number of trade agreements. This trade agreement, it seems to me, is a reasonable agreement. It is with an abiding friend, Jordan, that has been a very helpful country to us. We have had a long and good friendship with the country of Jordan. This trade agreement includes in it some provisions dealing with the environment and labor. I think this is a breakthrough and a step in the right direction.

While trade relations between the United States and Jordan are important, the size of our trade is not very extensive. As a trading partner, Jordan ranks 98th.

While I do not think the U.S.-Jordan Free Trade Agreement is going to, in one way or another, affect our country’s balance, I want to say that at this time and place our country needs to worry about its trade policies on a much broader context.

I have brought a chart with me that shows our country’s ballooning trade deficit. For years, we have seen relentless growth in it. At the same time, there has been a systematic lack of concern among policymakers about it. It’s as if they say: Well, it is happening, so let it happen.

It injures this country to have this kind of relentlessly growing trade deficit. Last year the merchandise deficit was $452 billion. Our deficit with China was $84 billion; with Japan, $81 billion; and with the European Union, $35 billion. That is almost $1.25 billion a day. Every single day, 7 days a week, we are buying more from abroad than we are exporting.

Now, what does that have to do with the current circumstances in the United States? Given the issues of national security, it is important for us to understand and that we long remain a strong country unless it has a strong, vibrant manufacturing base. We are eroding the manufacturing base of this country.

One thing that is not in this trade agreement and it has never been in any trade agreement that I am aware of—is something that deals with currency fluctuations.

Our manufacturing sector has now discovered that when it tries to sell abroad, it is much more difficult. Due to currency fluctuations, it is 30 percent--more expensive to sell a product abroad than it was 5 years ago. This increase has nothing at all to do with the cost of manufacturing the product. It is solely due to the value of our currency. The current circumstances in the manufacturing base in this country is being hurt very substantially. There are some who say: Well, the doctrine of comparative advantage ought to determine how we trade, and we ought not worry about whether we retain a strong manufacturing sector in this country. I strongly disagree with that belief.

No country can remain strong unless it has a very vibrant manufacturing base. Yet, due to currency fluctuations that have not been accounted for in our trade agreements, our manufacturing base has been undercut.

We need to negotiate currency fluctuation mechanisms into our trade agreements. We may sign trade agreements that lead to reductions in tariffs. But if the currency fluctuates, and we don’t have any mechanisms in place, U.S. exports may end up being more expensive, and U.S. imports may be less expensive.

Currency has fluctuated dramatically over the last few years. The U.S. dollar has risen about 40 percent against the Canadian dollar in the last 10 years. Generally speaking, the U.S. dollar has had a 30-percent increase in value versus 5 years ago. It is worth 10 percent more just a year ago.

On the television news people talk about the “strong dollar.” That is the wrong term. They should be saying, the “Expensive dollar”. The dollar is more expensive today relative to other currencies. When our dollar is more expensive relative to other currencies, it means our manufacturers are at a disadvantage when competing against the rest of the world.

My point is very simple: In these days, we are all very concerned about national security. And we should be. We are concerned about what is going to happen around the world with respect to terrorism and our aggressive approach in trying to deal with it. All of us want to speak as one; we want America to have one voice. With relentless determination, we want to take on terrorists and do what is necessary. Part of national security is in the area of international trade. It is important that we strengthen our manufacturing base in the area of defense, in which our country is facing a threat from without and a threat from within. Mergers are not necessarily a threat to employment or the competitiveness of our companies. But for the people of the United States, the threat to our competitiveness is a threat to our future. It is a threat to our job security. It is a threat to our ability to compete in the world.

I met with the president of one of the largest steel companies in this country, and he told me that he had just spent $1 billion to ensure that his company would remain competitive. The American steel industry has had the worst economic downturn in its history, and it has been the worst economic downturn in the world. It is not just that the American steel industry is facing a threat from abroad, it is that the American steel industry is facing a threat from within. The American steel industry is facing a threat from within because of the technology that we allow them to be. We don't make state-of-the-art robotics. There is no manufacturing plant that is more high tech or more modern than the one used by our company.

Yet, the company has discovered that, when trying to sell their product around the rest of the world, it has become more and more difficult. It is not because their product can't compete, but, rather, it is because the fluctuation of currency has made their product more expensive relative to the similar products manufactured in other countries. The president of this company said: The value of the dollar is hurting our company badly. And it is not just his company. It is true all over America.

Jerry Jasinowski, president of the National Association of Manufacturers, recently remarked that the dollar is overvalued and that its strong value has led U.S. manufacturers to have little pricing power. In its annual report, the Association noted that: "The dollar has reached a point at which it is pricing many U.S. goods out of world markets and making it harder to compete against imports here at home." That was from the National Association of Manufacturers.

My only point is this: I am going to support this trade agreement with Jordan because at this point in time it is the right thing to do. Right now, we are not talking about trade policy. With respect to trade policy, I have been a constant critic and will remain so. I voted against the North American Free Trade Agreement. I voted against GATT. Had I had a chance to vote against the bilateral agreement with China, I would have voted against it in an instant.

If I might, as an aside, just point out, our negotiators, after long negotiations, agreed to allow China to have a tariff on U.S. automobiles that is 10 times higher than our tariff on Chinese automobiles sold in the United States. We agreed to a 2.5-percent tariff on Chinese automobiles, while they have a 25-percent tariff on U.S. automobiles. This is just a small example of what has happened to us in every trade agreement of consequence.

It is long past time for our country to pay attention. The trade deficit is injuring the United States. Our trade agreement with Jordan will have almost no impact on the deficit and I will support it. It is the first agreement I have supported in a long time.

The job in international trade is to bring NAFTA back and renegotiate it. We need to get rid of those bilateral agreements in which our country has a disadvantage. We recently lost in the Chinese bilateral agreement. And we lost in the agreements we have had on GATT. People say: That is just the way things are. I say: It is not the way things are. It is the way we allow them to be. We don't have the backbone, the nerve, or the will to stand up and begin to say: We negotiate on behalf of the United States of America and we demand fair trade.

If I could have just another minute, let me go through a couple of examples, lest people think this is all rhetoric.

How much time do I have remaining?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Thirty-five seconds.

Mr. DORGAN. I assume the Senator from Montana is delighted I am supporting the bill and probably not happy that I would talk about other trade problems. Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I will let the Senator speak for a few more minutes. Progress is progress. This is the first time the Senator has supported a trade agreement. I know in the future he will support others. I very much appreciate his taking the time to support this agreement. I yield the Senator another couple minutes.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I am overwhelmed by the additional minutes.

I have a couple of examples, if I might, on trade issues. Ask those who are working on these issues in the U.S. Trade Representative's office, in the Commerce Department, and those in Congress to try to address these issues with us.

Motor Vehicles in Korea. Last year, we had about 570,000 vehicles shipped into the United States from Korea. Do you know how many vehicles we shipped to Korea? Seventeen hundred. Five hundred seventy thousand vehicles this way, 1,700 that way. Why? Because of the tariff and taxes, it raises substantially the price of American cars in Korea. And it doesn't just price them. There are other difficulties too in selling foreign vehicles in Korea. Standards and perceptions also play roles. The result is, we are not shipping cars to Korea. They are flooding our markets with theirs.

Canada and Stuffed Molasses. Go to Canada and watch them load up Brazilian sugar on top of liquid molasses so they can ship it down here in the form of stuffed molasses. Then they take the sugar out and send the molasses back. Why? To violate U.S. trade laws.

Japan and Steak. Go to Tokyo and have a T-bone steak and understand, if it came from the United States, it had a 38.5-percent tariff on it, 12 years after the last beef agreement.

People think this is all humorous and interesting. The fact is, it all represents the failure of this country to stand up for its producers. This country ought not to be bashful about standing up for its producers, its manufacturers, American men and women and American businesses, who only demand the opportunity to compete fairly. It is not fair when currency fluctuations make our products 40 percent more expensive in foreign countries. We say that doesn't matter. It is not fair. Unfairness matters. We should and must be willing to compete in international trade, but the competition ought to be fair.

I thank my colleague from Montana. I will support this trade agreement. It is a small one, not much of a trade consequence to us, in my judgment. It is written marginally better than previous agreements because it has labor and environmental issues in it.

There is a big job ahead of us. We need to try and deal with the ballooning trade deficit. We need to try to convince the American people that what we are doing represents their best interests. We need to expand trade but it must be done in a manner that is fair to them.

I will have more to say about international trade at some future point in time. I yield the floor.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I thank my good friend from North Dakota. He read the very good book, Currency, currency, currency fluctuations certainly in the short term distorts trade almost to the magnitude which he suggested, a 30 to 40 percent differential.

It is also true that, as imperfect as markets are in the long-term, the relative economic strength of countries tends to reflect the value of a country's currency—not entirely but tends to. There have been times when the dollar is low; there are times when the dollar is high. It is very difficult to write into an agreement how to manage currency fluctuations, extremely difficult, particularly with larger countries such as the United States, Japan, the EU, with a single-currency market.

If the United States were to peg exchange rates versus those other countries, it would be difficult for those countries to agree. I doubt that they would. Japan tends to like a low yen. It kind of likes the United States having a high dollar. I doubt that Japan would want to address exchange rates in a trade agreement. Could we force them to in a trade agreement? I don’t know. It would be difficult. The same applies to the EU.

Let’s say we were able to peg an exchange rate. Let’s say it happened that the country is alched. Let’s say that one of the country’s economies deteriorates, for example, the United States or Japan or some other one. If the currencies are pegged, then it is going to be harder for that country to retain its economic strength, at least with respect to trade.

There will be other distortions. It is like a balloon. If we stop natural competitive pressures worldwide from operating through exchange rates, the problem is going to pop up somewhere else. I don’t know that we have fully thought through where the “someplace else” might be in any rational discussion of exchange rates to include an attempt to address that consideration.

I might add that, to some degree, this is an external matter. It is much more complicated than what meets the eye. The U.S. Government, in many administrations, tends not to discourage a high dollar policy. Why is that? The reason is because the U.S. Government tends to be worried about inflation, as well as other considerations, in addition to the trade imbalance, the current imbalances.

As my friend from North Dakota said—and he is right—trade deficits have been burgeoning, and it is a problem. To say that currency exchange provisions will solve the problem, I think, doesn’t quite do it. The U.S. tends to be a country with a favored currency. We are perceived to be strong and to be dynamic, even in the wake of the events in the last several weeks. Investors worldwide tend to like dollars as opposed to other currencies. That tends to drive up the value of the dollar.

There are a lot of factors to be considered here. Having said all that, I do agree with the Senator that at least an attempt should be made. We should at least have a more open discussion of these issues. I don’t think our Treasury Secretary, or our President, or anybody else of stature in the executive branch, or the Chairman of the Federal Reserve should have an open discussion of these matters, for fear of people misinterpreting what they may be saying. But I do think it is important for the Congress, in the appropriate setting and in the appropriate situation, to begin to examine all the ramifications of exchange rates. It is extremely complicated. In smaller countries we can deal with it, but in larger countries, as in Japan, and with the EU beginning next January, it is going to be difficult.

Mr. DORGAN. Will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. BAUCUS. I am happy to yield.

Mr. DORGAN. Let me say that it was not my intent to say that solving the issue of fluctuating currencies would solve the trade problem. You cannot solve the trade problem without addressing the fluctuation of currency values. There are many other issues—although the fluctuating value of currencies is a 500-pound gorilla issue, it is not the only issue. I don’t mean to suggest that if you solve that, you solve the problems. There are more.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I reserve 10 minutes. How much time is remaining?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Twelve minutes.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I reserve myself 5 minutes. I reserve the majority leader 5 minutes when he wishes to speak on the bill. I yield to my good friend from Virginia who I think wants to speak on the bill. Can the Senator take 5 minutes?

Mr. ALLEN. I say to the Senator from Montana that I will try to say what I believe in support of this measure in 5 minutes.

Mr. BAUCUS. I yield the Senator from Virginia, Mr. ALLEN, 5 minutes.

Mr. ALLEN. Mr. President, I rise in support of the United States-Jordan Free Trade Agreement. First, I congratulate Chairman BAUCUS and Senator GRASSLEY for their work in producing this very important legislation, which is a significant step forward in making Jordan a world partner with the United States.

Most of the debate on this matter is centered on the new ground which this measure makes in including multiple worker rights provisions in the body of the U.S. trade agreement, rather than as a side agreement, for the first time. The volume of the bilateral trade between the United States and Jordan throughout the 1990s was consistently modest. Therefore, it is thought, this agreement is unlikely to have any great immediate or dramatic impact on the volume of bilateral trade.

However, I wish to share with my colleagues what this agreement means to the Commonwealth of Virginia and, particularly, to the Albemarle Corporation, headquartered in Richmond, VA.

Albemarle is a worldwide manufacturer and marketer of specialty chemicals, such as bulk ibuprofen, biocide products, and flame retardants. Nearly 50 percent of the corporation’s revenues are derived from products that are sold outside the United States.

Several years ago, Albemarle Corporation began negotiations with the Arab Potash Company to create a joint venture company that will process boron and bromine derivatives from the Dead Sea. The agreement will allow Albemarle to bring the bromine into the United States tariff free. It will be actually shipped to Albemarle’s facility in Magnolia, AR, for final processing.

This will represent a multimillion-dollar investment and it will be used for a variety of products, such as flame retardants for TVs and computers, and other products, and it obviously will provide Albemarle with increased marketing opportunities globally for these products.

It is anticipated that the capital outlay for this joint venture will be $150 million. This outlay makes this joint venture the largest U.S.-Jordanian private venture in Jordan to date. At full operation, they will bring over 200 new jobs at the plant near Safi and its main Amman office.

I congratulate King Abdullah and his government for their efforts leading to Jordan’s accession to the World Trade Organization. Acceptance by the World Trade Organization, combined with Jordan’s economic reforms, are significant steps forward to making Jordan a world partner with the United States. These developments also make Albemarle more excited about conducting business with its Jordanian partners.

This free trade agreement is another step toward solidifying our relationship and placing Virginia products on the same tariff footing as products from other countries.

I believe fair and free trade is the best way to increase trade, encourage economic development, and improve investment opportunities for all involved. It is important that the achievements made by King Abdullah and the signing of this free trade agreement be recognized and ratified by the Senate. For that reason, I urge my colleagues to support this measure.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas is recognized.

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, how much time do I have?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. One hour.

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, I rise today to support the Jordanian free trade agreement, but I support it with reservations. I am determined that the adoption of this agreement not set a precedent for the future. What I would like to try do, even though I know it may take a little bit of time to do so, is explain to my colleagues the problems with this agreement, the problem that we have when we bring non-trade matters into fast track, and the very real sovereignty questions that are raised by this small and seemingly insignificant trade agreement.

I would like to try to explain the logic of fast track and its history and, within that context, make it clear that, in the current international crisis in which we find ourselves, I have decided to withdraw my opposition to this agreement and, in the process, see the benefits it will bring our law. In withdrawing that opposition in a moment of crisis, where we need to reconfirm our bond of friendship with Jordan, I wish to make it very clear that in doing this we are not setting a precedent for the future.

Now, having outlined all that, let me start at the beginning and try to explain the logic of fast track and the problems we are going to have to address. The plain truth is that no one wants to address these issues, but they are there whether we like them or not.
Therefore, at some point, we are going to have to come to grips with them when we adopt a bill that will provide what we used to call fast-track authority and now call trade promotion authority.
Let me begin at the beginning. America, in the postwar period, immediately following World War II, recognized that world trade was a powerful engine for creating wealth and democracy and, in essence, remaking the world in our image.
We had an incredible bipartisan consensus on trade: that neither party would try to use trade to politically benefit itself in the American electoral process because trade was too important in promoting prosperity and democracy and binding together the postwar world.
In that context, we adopted what was then called fast-track trade authority, which gave the Executive some remarkable powers. Under fast track, a President could negotiate a trade agreement which, when it came before Congress, would be unamendable, and all of the Senate rules related to unlimited debate and unlimited amendment would be waived; further, there would be a time limit for consideration, and Congress would then simply have the ability to vote yes or no.
That made sense in the following context: No. 1, Presidents argued, and I believe persuasively, that if you are going to negotiate a trade agreement where both sides give and take, you cannot then have that agreement be subject to further change, by Congress, after the fact. That is a persuasive arument, in my opinion.
The second argument was that we were living in an era of limitation of the constitutions prerogatives of Congress under article I of the Constitution, and we had agreed to limit those powers because we were talking about only external matters, such as protective tariffs. We were not making domestic law, but were simply setting out trade agreements that involved external pricing of American and foreign products but did not make law in America that would govern the well-being of our people.
With those two very strong arguments, we adopted fast-track authority, and let me say, the evidence is overwhelming that we were successful.
When the Berlin Wall came down, it came down in part because we had the resolution to stand in front of the other side and say, we are strong enough to deter a war, and our program of peace through strength worked. But what happened that really tore the wall down was that the growth of world trade generated a wealth-creating engine that created massive economies in places such as South Korea and Taiwan where those economic engines had never existed. It rebuilt Japan. It rebuilt Europe. The sheer power of that wealth-creating machine destroyed the Soviet Union.

Therefore, I am committed to it, it is free trade. I take a back seat to no one in Congress in my defense of trade, and I make no excuses, such as talk about “fair trade.” I do not engage in fair trade with a grocery store that sells me nothing. But what I am in favor of is trade. Not going to the grocery store might eliminate unfair trade with them, but it would mean I might go hungry, so I choose to go to the grocery store.
One might wonder what is it about the Jordanian “free trade” agreement that I am unhappy about, especially my colleagues who have listened to me before talk about trade, knowing I am committed to it and have defended it unfailingly through all the years, and the other is a loss of American soveignity, and they are both bad things.
When you allow the President to negotiate labor and environmental laws, and labor and environmental standards, under fast-track authority, where the agreement cannot be debated and cannot be amended, what you are literally doing is giving the President of the United States a unilateral power to write domestic law under fast-track authority.
Under fast-track authority, where the President has this power to write labor and environmental standards into trade agreements, which then become the law of the land when we adopt them, President Clinton, for instance, in a fast trade agreement could literally have included the Kyoto Environmental Treaty. It would have come to the Senate. It would have been unamendable and undebatable, and we would have had a dramatic loss in our lawmaking powers. A substantial diminution in the effectiveness of fast-track had the Senate been forced to reject the agreement because non-trade matters been included.
If we had a President who wanted to change environmental or labor law, and do it in a way to limit congressional power and authority, he could do it unilaterally through fast track, through negotiations of trade agreements. We never, ever contemplated such an extension of power when we were fast track. Never did we contemplate the Executive would make domestic law in these trade agreements. They were about tariffs. They were not about laws that would govern America and Americans in our daily livings.
The second problem with allowing labor and environmental provisions in trade agreements that have expedited consideration is they represent a ceding of American sovereignty. In my opinion, they are unconstitutional.
Let me explain how this would work in the context of a bilateral agreement

and then in the context of GATT. I’ll start with GATT. Using fast-track authority where labor and environmental issues can be included, let us say that we entered into a GATT agreement where we agreed—as we do in this agreement, and I will talk about it in particular in a minute—on labor and environment provisions. Now, while we have to give the Clinton administration some leeway in writing all kinds of boilerplate protections for congressional authority, in the end they could not protect what the provision is about.

Under this bill, we agree with Jordan that we will not take any actions with regard to our labor or environmental laws that would advantage us in our trading with Jordan. Now, let me take those provisions and apply it to GATT and the World Trade Organization. Let us say this became the norm for trade agreements. If some change in environmental law affects our competitive position with our trading partner? Who decides whether a change in regulation was made to benefit us in trade or because it was made through the Executive power of the President basically to promote the general well-being of the country? Is it not true, at least to a small degree, every change in environmental law and every change in labor law or regulation has a trade effect, making us more or less competitive?

If we had the Jordanian free trade agreement as part of GATT, it is literally true, if we decided under the Clean Air Act to grant a clean air waiver to Atlanta, GA, which we have done in the past and to Dallas, TX, which we are doing today, or Houston, which we are doing today, literally if this agreement were in existence as part of GATT a question would arise as to whether granting this waiver under the Clean Air Act would violate the United States commitment under GATT. In the case of GATT the judgment would be made by the World Trade Organization—a third party, a world organization, determining whether or not we are enforcing the Clean Air Act to benefit us in trade and, therefore, whether we should be penalized with protective tariffs against American products that put Americans out of work.

If we had the provisions of this Jordanian free trade agreement in effect through GATT, and we then opened up ANWR to produce oil, the World Trade Organization and its decisionmaking body, which we are minority members of, could determine that by opening ANWR we have had degradation in environmental quality that would have violated the trade agreement. If we had violated the trade agreement, and we would then be subject to reparation, and that reparation is something that would never have become the law of the land. I am willing, today, to step aside and vote for it because it sets no dangerous actions with the World Trade Organization, if these provisions were in force worldwide, that we had violated the trade agreement, and we would then be subject to reparation, and that reparation is something that would never have become the law of the land.

If we adopted provisions that gave workers flexibility to work 60 hours one week and 20 hours the next week by changing our antiquated wage and hour laws, flex-time/comp-time we call it; that we have benefited in trade and, therefore, we are subject to reprisal. Whether or not we had granted the Jordanian free trade agreement, and as we go to fast-track authority and as this becomes part of our world trading system, I ask my colleagues, are we ready to give to the President of the United States unilateral authority to write domestic law we cannot amend and cannot debate? I am not ready to do that. I love our President. I do not think any Member of the Senate feels closer to our current President than I do, but I am not willing to give that authority to anybody. I do not know who is going to be President in the future. Are we willing, through a free trade agreement and through trade promotion authority, to put ourselves in a situation where the World Trade Organization can determine that by giving a waiver to Atlanta, GA, under the Clean Air Act, we are violating our international trade agreements and, therefore, protective tariffs can be imposed on American products to punish us for exercising our authority under the Constitution?

Is that not a loss of sovereignty that would be virtually unimaginable by the Founding Fathers? I think the answer is clearly yes.

So the first point I wanted to make today is I have decided, just as one Member, to step aside and allow this Jordanian free trade agreement to become law, but not because I think these are good provisions. I think inclusion of these matters is one of the most dangerous actions we have taken since I have been a Member of the Senate. I am doing this today because we have a crisis in the world. We need to reaffirm our relationship with Jordan, a critical country in a very important region of the world, so that the very moment beginning to look toward a war with terrorism. So our relationship with Jordan is important.

I do it also because our trade with Jordan is relatively insignificant. It is important to Jordan, of course, and we are grateful for it. We want to trade 1,000 times as much with them, but relatively speaking, we are not talking about any significant amount of trade.

Finally, I am willing to do it, making it clear that this sets no precedent for the future. If it is clearly in this current crisis, this trade agreement negotiated by the Clinton administration would never have become the law of the land. I am willing, today, to step aside and vote for it because it sets no dangerous actions with the World Trade Organization and to the American economy.

And if we adopted provisions that gave workers flexibility to work 60 hours one week and 20 hours the next week by changing our antiquated wage and hour laws, flex-time/comp-time we call it; that we have benefited in trade and, therefore, we are subject to reprisal.

However, I want my colleagues to understand that any efforts to take this process forward would entail giving the President unilateral powers to make domestic law in the labor and the environmental area without Congress having the ability to amend it or to extensively debate it. I am adamantly opposed to that, and I believe the American people would be opposed to it if they were ever test.

Second, if we go forward and embody the same provisions in major trade agreements, we are ceding sovereignty to the World Trade Organization and to dispute resolution organizations where we will literally have third parties casting the deciding votes as to whether we can grant waivers under the Clean Air Act, or open up ANWR, or change our wage and hour standards, or repeal Davis-Bacon, or do other things that make eminently good public policy. That is a ceding of sovereignty that has no popular support in this country, and it cannot be allowed to go forward.

I turn to the Jordanian free trade agreement. First, if I could pick up this pen today and sign a free trade agreement with the world, I would do it. I am in favor of free trade. I believe free trade promotes freedom; I am for freedom. It promotes prosperity; I am for prosperity. My concern about the Jordanian free trade agreement is the international trade provisions. It has two provisions that may very well never be used in our trade with Jordan but they are extraordinarily dangerous.

The first provision is related to the environment. It says, despite all the boilerplate efforts of the Clinton administration, that if either country—Jordan or the United States—did anything to change its environmental laws that improved its competitiveness with the other country, that would violate the trade agreement. Under the rules of world trade, there would then be a dispute resolution that would ultimately include a United States representative, a Jordanian representative, and a third party, which would determine whether and how much we would be subject to penalties.

I understand the dollar value of our trade with Jordan is less than the combined budgets of the two great universities in my State. It is not significant in terms of the global picture. But principles are significant. And bad principles are set often in little, insigificant bills. This provision literally puts us in a position where an international dispute resolution could determine our ability to enforce our own environmental and labor laws, not as a result of the passage of this bill, but because of an international agreement that would impose labor and environmental standards on our trading partners.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, how much time is remaining?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. With that, I reserve the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas has 24 minutes and the Senator from Montana has 8.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I yield to the Senator from Nebraska, 4 or 5 minutes?

Mr. HAGEL. Let's try 5 minutes. I appreciate that.

Mr. BAUCUS. I yield 5 minutes with the recognition there is only 3 minutes left after the 5 minutes are used.

Mr. HAGEL. Mr. President, I rise today to support the Jordanian free trade agreement.

Mr. HAGEL. Look at the application that Atlanta, GA, or Dallas, TX, or Houston, TX, submitted, asking for a waiver of the Clean Air Act. That application is full of the dire impacts that are going to be harmed by the proposed trade agreement.

Mr. HAGEL. If we expand this logic into the World Trade Organization, does anybody really support the remarks just given by the distinguished senior Senator from Texas, Mr. GRAMM. In my opinion, he has framed this right. He has made poignant remarks about issues that are most important to this debate today but a continued debate on trade this body was negotiated in the previous administration that has a very severe problem. If this agreement were with another country at another time, I do not know if we would have to make it today, facing a war with terrorism and given that this is with Jordan and given that the amount of trade involved is insignificant, from the United States point of view, I for one am willing to step aside and to look at this bill. But I want to make it clear that any fast track or trade promotion authority that would transfer the making of domestic law to the President, limiting—in this case elimi-ating—our power to amend or debate, or any future trade promotion agreement that would grant to a world decisionmaking authority the right to de-terminate whether we have exercised our article I rights under the Constitution of the United States properly, where a trade promotion authority is given the determination as to whether our people are going to be put out of work because we amended labor and environmental laws in conformity with our rights under article I of the Constitution, that is something that I never, ever intend to support and never, ever within the ability to debate it and to fight it intend to see it accepted.

We have to come to grips with these issues. We are putting them off today because this bill needs to pass. But these are matters that are going to have to be understood. They are going to have to be debated as we deal with fast-track authority, or as we now call it, trade promotion authority. To this point, everybody has tried to hide from these issues. But they are very real.
They represent an assault on our separation of powers, they represent an assault on national sovereignty, and they do not belong in a fast-track or trade promotion agreement.

With that, I reserve the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. HAGEL. Mr. President, I rise
today to support the Jordanian free trade agreement.

Mr. HAGEL. That our competition will take the application for a waiver of the Clean Air Act from Atlanta or Houston that is full of arguments, as it should be, about American competitiveness and say “not only did they not enforce their law by granting this waiver, but if you read the application from Housonton, TX, it is full of the logic that is going to hurt them competitively if they don't grant a waiver”?

Do we really want the World Trade Organization or an international dispute resolution system that will impose labor and environmental standards on us in deal with this issue, he has calibrated this exactly right. He has framed it right. He has made poignant remarks about issues that are most important to this debate this day but a
must have, a debate which will take us, I hope, at some point in the near future, to the question of granting to the President of the United States what has been called as fast-track authority but now is referred to as trade promotion authority. September 11 highlighted why we need to strengthen our relations with the rest of the world. Tools that will be required to defeat terrorism include more than just military power. I think most of us recognize that terrorism is not about human destruction; it is about holding nations and societies and peoples captive, hostage to the fear of terror.

Terrorists are best able to harness the fears and prejudices of impoverished people to gain support for terrorist acts such as those that occurred on September 11. These areas are the breeding grounds of terrorism: the impoverished and oppressed people of the world with little or no hope.

To combat terrorism and the support of terrorists, we need to broaden the understanding of what America stands for and to continue to help improve the lives of these impoverished people around the world. I believe trade helps do that. Trade also helps develop market economies and strengthens democracies. What does that mean? It is not an end unto itself but to stabilize regions of the world, stabilize governments, and help maintain responsible governments and relationships and standards of living and accountability and responsible action. That is what trade can do and has done.

At our Banking Committee hearing last week, Chairman Greenspan stated that global economics relies on the movement of people and goods. The openness of economies is critical to that growth. We are talking about one small, interconnected universe where trade today. But nonetheless, it is an important part of this debate.

The New York Times article by Tom Friedman last week pointed out that through all of the instability in the Middle East, Jordan last year grew in real numbers at about 4 percent. And as we are able to encourage and participate with Jordan through these bilateral trade agreements, we will continue to help Jordan grow, which helps, again, stabilize a very important region of the world.

As Senator Gramm has pointed out, this agreement is far from perfect. In my opinion, sanctions should never be part of a market-opening trade agreement for many of the same reasons Senator Gramm has identified and delineated with precision. Sanctions do not address the root of environmental or labor problems or other such problems. These are currently much better handled at other international organizations such as the United Nations and international labor organizations in other areas. I shall not go back and deal with the same area about which Senator Gramm talked. But sanctions will actually harm countries and will limit the much-needed capital they receive from exporting to the United States.

For the reasons that have been stated before, the economy is a fundamental dynamic influencing a country’s political stability, hence world peace.

Trade contributes to a country’s security for two reasons: It establishes relationships and understandings between two nations, and it raises the standard of living for nations and encourages that stability.

In my opinion, this debate is a good beginning to address a comprehensive trade agenda this Congress must have.

This Congress must ultimately grant President Bush trade promotion authority. TPA is in the clear and vital interests of this country, and security and economic interests are interconnected and dependent on each other.

Today, I encourage my colleagues to vote for this agreement, as flawed as it may be. But I consider it a good opening for the bigger trade debate issues that must come from this Congress. It is a good beginning. But we are far from the kind of finish that will be required not only for the trade interests of this country but the security interests of America and the world.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Miller). Who yields time?

Mr. Baucus. Mr. President, I understand that we only have 2½ minutes.

Mr. Gramm. I yield the distinguished ranking member those 2½ minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Iowa is recognized.

Mr. Grassley. Mr. President, I am not going to bring up the same issues the Senator from Texas brought up. But I had a chance to listen to his remarks. I share many of the concerns that he has.

Although I have been an enthusiastic supporter of this agreement from day 1 and have not found all of the considerations that he has to specific parts of it, I have reservations about those parts, particularly as they deal with labor and the environment, but to appeal to some extent through an exchange of letters that these issues have been taken care of at least enough to satisfy my concerns to move forward with this legislation.

I speak in favor of the United States-Jordan Free Trade Agreement. I urge my colleagues to support it. But before we move forward, I would like to put this agreement in context—not a context different than other speakers have but to emphasize some things that have already been said.

First of all, this agreement is very important between two countries that have been friends for a long time and that want to maintain that friendship. It has been almost a year since President Clinton and King Abdullah signed the U.S.-Jordan Free Trade Agreement. By all accounts the agreement should have passed Congress with little controversy.

The Kingdom of Jordan and King Abdullah are good friends of the United States. The agreement itself is a good agreement. It opens up new markets for U.S. exports to Jordan. And it enhances Jordan’s access to our markets. But there is one part of the agreement that caused problems.

These are controversial labor and environment provisions that were put in the U.S.-Jordan Free Trade Agreement. It is these labor and environment provisions that slowed passage of an agreement that should have passed both Houses of Congress quickly.

In the Senate legislation was introduced by Max Baucus on March 28, 2001 to implement the agreement. On July 17 the Finance Committee began to debate the bill.

During debate many Members expressed concern about the labor and environment provisions in the Jordan agreement.

Many others pushed hard for an amendment to the agreement which would give the President trade negotiating authority, which was supported very eloquently by the Senator from Nebraska.

Unfortunately, this amendment was withdrawn because of the chairman’s opposition.

These important letters clarified that neither government intends to apply the labor and environment provisions in a way which blocks trade.

The exchange of letters was an important development.

After all, the purpose of a free trade agreement is to facilitate trade.

After all, we are talking about an agreement that has the purpose of facilitating trade. That is pretty clear with the term “free trade agreement”—not to deal with a bunch of social and environmental issues.

While these commitments did not resolve every Senator’s concern with the agreement, it was an important step forward.

And because of these letters the Finance Committee was able to complete consideration of the bill on July 26, 2001.

Unfortunately, some tend to characterize the labor and environment provisions as a precedent for future trade legislation.

I want it understood very clearly that I do not accept that, and I want to say that loudly and clearly. This should not be considered as a precedent.

It does not mean that the Jordan free trade agreement in other ways does not
The United States will not negotiate their differences, each respecting their conditions on these negotiations. People because we do not put a lot of pressure on for long period of time. And this is done in a partisan way that it has been done over time. We ought to give the President of the United States the power to negotiate trade agreements with our friends and our allies, and even with countries that we might not consider our friends and allies, if they are in the World Trade Organization.

The Finance Committee has quite a history of bipartisanship in this area, to give the President what used to be called fast-track trade negotiating authority, now called trade promotion authority.

This type of legislation, over a long period of time, has passed with broad bipartisan support. We in the Senate generally have not waited for others to act. We have seized the reins of leadership and have moved ahead. Today, we need to be doing that as well. I hope I can help move that process along. I hope the bill today helps do that as well. There is bipartisan legislation that is already introduced that would be a good bill for this committee to consider.

At a time when the world economy is slowing, we must act. We must put aside our partisan preconditions and excuses to trade and show the world that the United States is ready, willing, and able to lead.

I thank the Chair and reserve the remainder of what time I did not use for Senator Gramm.

Mr. BINGAMAN. Mr. President, I rise today in very strong support of H.R. 2823, United States-Jordan Free Trade Area implementing bill. There is a very limited time for debate available to my colleagues today on this legislation, so I will keep my comments short.

First, let me say that the timing for the consideration of this legislation could not be more propitious given the horrific events that have just occurred in our country. As we consider this bill, let us not lose sight of the geo-political interests within which we now conduct international affairs. Trade negotiations between the U.S. and Jordan were initiated for one reason alone, that being that government officials felt it would substantially increase economic interaction between the two countries and thus significantly enhance political stability in the Middle East as a whole. Although the immediate economic gains from the agreement will, no doubt, be modest, the long-term political benefits will be considerable. Of particular importance are the opportunities the agreement potentially provides Palestinians living in Jordan and operating in qualified industrial zones. For these individuals, nearly all of whom at present live below the poverty line, the chance to improve their lives, this agreement changes the equation and offers real hope. Significantly, it offers a tangible alternative to violence, and I need not emphasize how important a different path like this might be to young individuals, and the strategic interests of the United States, at this time.

I understand the concern of certain colleagues about national sovereignty as it relates to the dispute resolution provisions in the agreement. But clearly this concern centers on this agreement in particular threatens our sovereignty—from my perspective it does not and it will not, but rather because of the apprehension that this agreement establishes a precedent for future negotiations not concerned with trade, this agreement could be a "model." Once this trade agreement is passed, others will certainly look much the same.

To this criticism I respond by saying that each agreement negotiated by our country is unique and based on the issues that concern the parties at the time. There is no reason to assume that every agreement will contain similar language to that which is contained in this agreement. Indeed, there is no real reason to doubt that will. Clearly, there is a balance that must be found between having an agreement and having ways to ensure that the provisions that are in an agreement are implemented. In this particular case, I think a very appropriate arrangement has been created.

But I want to emphasize today that I do intend to be very cognizant of how we establish dispute resolution mechanisms down the road. And I say this simply because we have reached a point in international trade relations where we have to ask if we are prepared to change the ideas and institutions that form the foundation of our political economic system to attain a trade agreement. That is the essence of the debate at hand, and if we have learned anything at all from NAFTA, it is that this is not something to be taken lightly.

All this said, this legislation must be passed today, and it deserves to be passed today. It serves the people of Jordan that while they are already our political friends and ally, the time has come that they also become our economic partner. I look forward to the benefits, short and long-term, that will come as a result of this historic free trade area agreement. I would like to take this opportunity to compliment the Clinton and Bush Administrations for recognizing its significance and pushing the agreement forward.

Mr. DURBING. Mr. President, I rise today in support of this trade agreement between the U.S. and Jordan. It is important in terms of national security. Jordan is important in the quest for peace and security in the Middle East, which couldn't come at a more appropriate time. It is important economically—without a healthy Jordanian economy, they will not be able to play a constructive role in the Middle East.

For me, it is important because it recognizes that included in the economic relationship between the U.S. and Jordan are labor and environmental standards. It goes without saying that domestic labor markets and environmental standards are relevant to competition between a nation and between nations. Both the U.S. and Jordan have strong practices in the areas of labor and the environment.

Some critics of this historic legislation could argue that just because one country fails to meet its commitments, enforcement of these or other provision of the agreement, they do not expect or intend to use traditional enforcement mechanisms to enforce them. This kind of talk is nonsense. To say that regardless of the violations in a trade agreement, enforcement mechanisms will not be used is irresponsible. Trade sanctions are always a last resort.

I should remind critics of this legislation that the agreement carefully sets up a framework for various consultation and negotiation over a period of time before either party could use sanctions only after recurring violations affecting trade and only with appropriate and commensurate measures. This is clear. Cutting corners on the important issues of labor and environmental standards in trade agreements is a step backwards for future constructive action on trade.

I support this agreement because of the importance of our relationship, because the timing couldn’t be more important. I support this agreement because we need to support our friends in the Middle East. By passing this legislation today, the United States Senate sends a clear signal of support to our major trading partner in the Middle East and other world leaders need to know that partnering with the United States is a good partner. King Abdullah and other world leaders need to know that partnering with the United States can result in tangible benefits to their citizens.

I urge my colleagues to vote for this measure.

Mr. MURKOWSKI. Mr. President, the U.S.-Jordan Free Trade Agreement is an important acknowledgment of our long-standing friendship with the Hashemite Kingdom of Jordan, which has been a stalwart ally in pursuing peace and prosperity in the Middle East. Opening our markets to free trade with one another is appropriate, not simply in order to foster the opportunities free trade can bring between our two economies, but to draw our countries closer together in the struggle for peace.

I have been an advocate of this free trade agreement since the prospect of its negotiation was first raised some years ago. I believe strongly in the power of trade to eliminate poverty, encourage political transparency and draw nations closer together. I also believe that free trade is one of the best manifestations of mutual understanding, trust and congruent interests.

While I know that there may be some in the Senate who would like, for proper but misguided motivations, to attempt to raise the standard of living in the developing world through the implementation of non-trade aspects in trade legislation. But we must not confuse trade negotiations with social engineering. Our chief goal in trade negotiations must focus on benefitting American consumers and American workers.

We must remember that what is good for the goose is good for the gander. If we try to impose our views on labor and environment on our trading partners, we should not be surprised if one day, they try to impose their views on us. We should never let it be said that our food safety laws are insufficient, our air pollution levels too high, and our minimum wage too low.

Even prior to the terrorist attacks two weeks ago, the economy was losing steam. It seems to me and I am sure to many other members of the Senate, that one good way to help revive and stimulate our economy is to pass trade promotion authority legislation. Fast track can help put our country back on the right path to economic recovery and growth.

While it is my hope that we can work on a bi-partisan basis to pass TPA legislation, I have been an advocate of this free trade agreement since the prospect of its negotiation was first raised some years ago. I believe strongly in the opportunities free trade can bring between the U.S. and other countries around the world that the United States is a good partner. King Abdullah and other world leaders need to know that partnering with the United States can result in tangible benefits to their citizens.

I urge my colleagues to vote for this measure.
Those of us who understand the overwhelming economic and social benefits of expanded trade are rightly concerned, therefore, with the inclusion of environmental and labor provisions in trade agreements. Even seemingly innocuous provisions such as those slipped in, almost mischievously, by the previous Administration into the U.S.-Jordan Free Trade Agreement are designed as poison pills by the interest groups which championed them. They are invitations for mischief-making on a grand scale.

There is no doubt that opening markets to new economic activity places new pressures on labor and environmental concerns. Attention to easing such impacts is thoroughly appropriate in implementing new trade agreements. To condition trade on prescribed labor and environmental standards is, however, to do the work of the opposition. When, in the case of the Jordan Free Trade Agreement, we establish an open-ended and vague linkage between trade and non-trade standards, we ransom our long-term policy interests for short-term political gain.

Jordan is not, happily, a model for future trade agreements. Our interests in pursuing a free trade agreement with Jordan are unparalleled and unique. An attempt to draw parallels between the negotiated Jordan agreement and negotiations toward a new WTO Round, a Free Trade Agreement with the Americas, or even new bi-lateral agreements with other countries is fool’s errand. The reasons pro-trade Americans support the agreement with Jordan have few echoes in our support for other more clearly economically-based trade negotiations. Jordan is the exception that proves the rule: trade agreements must stand on their own, or they will not stand.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I am pleased to support passage of S. 643, the U.S.-Jordan Free Trade Area Implementation Act. Two weeks ago, a proud symbol of global free trade was destroyed by terrorists in New York City. The terrorists who struck the World Trade Center meant harm not only to the United States, but to the entire civilized world. In this new era, our attention turns increasingly to defending against this catastrophic threat, and to pursuing policies that advance our interests overseas and reflect the values of our people.

Strengthening our strategic relations with our friends in the Middle East has become an urgent priority of American policy. This free trade agreement marks an important benchmark in U.S.-Jordanian relations. The agreement and the new U.S.-Jordanian intelligence cooperation will be helpful to our efforts to crack down on terrorism at its source. That Congress has made ratification of this bilateral trade agreement a priority as we wind down the current session while sorting through the pressing obligations ahead reflects its meaning to our people, and our mutual interests.

The U.S.-Jordan Free Trade Area represents the first free trade agreement the United States has negotiated with an Arab nation. Liberalized trade with Jordan will benefit both our economies. Although various Jordanian and American industries already enjoy duty-free status or low tariff rates, this free trade area will ensure that Jordanian and American consumers enjoy an expansion of commercial choice and value. Both nations will also benefit from greater foreign direct investment and trade-related job creation.

I remain concerned about the hostility this Congress has shown towards free trade. Many important new trade agreements enabling the expansion of bilateral and regional trade have not moved through the legislative process this year. Existing laws, such as the Andean Trade Preference Act and the Generalized System of Preferences, are set to expire shortly but have received little if any attention from Congress. This summer, we struggled as a body to determine whether or not we would honor our Nation’s solemn commitments to NAFTA, an invaluable trade agreement with our neighbors and largest trading partners.

Indeed, it has seemed as though free trade is no longer a priority of this body. In addition to the strategic significance of this legislation to U.S.-Jordanian relations, it is my hope that passage of this bill represents a change in the direction this Congress will take toward a policy of free trade that has upheld our prosperity and advanced our values around the world.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, the U.S.-Jordan Free Trade Area Implementation Act is an important benchmark in U.S.-Jordanian relations and I am pleased the Senate has agreed to pass it by unanimous consent today. The agreement will provide a closer economic relationship with the Hashemite Kingdom of Jordan, which has proven itself to be an important strategic ally in the Middle East. Importantly, this agreement also represents the first free trade agreement to include in the core text, binding provisions recognizing the trade impacts of labor and environmental standards. The agreement sets a precedent that future trade agreements should follow.

Some in the Senate have opposed the agreement because of the labor and environmental provisions. The Administration responded to this opposition by working closely with the Government of Jordan indicating that neither country expected or intended to use trade sanctions to enforce the agreement. These letters do not specify how much time is available to each side? The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

Mr. REID. Just to alert everyone, the two leaders may wish to speak on this legislation. If they do, they will use leader time and extend the time until we vote a little more. If that is the case, they can come and take care of that themselves. So the vote, as I understand it, will occur at approximately 2:15, 2:16, something like that.

Mr. REID. The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

Who yields time?

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, as a consequence of the recent change in time, will the Presiding Officer indicate how much time is available to each side?

Mr. BAUCUS. I thank the Chair.

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, it may very well be that the distinguished chairman of the Finance Committee would like to end the debate. I will afford him that courtesy.
September 24, 2001  CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE  17739

the world. I am in favor of world free trade. Obviously, I am in favor of free trade with any individual nation.

There are very real problems when you bring law into domestic law. When you bring trade agreements, and I have outlined today the two problems you have in trying to inject, in this case, domestic labor law, domestic environmental law, and then the enforcement of those laws throughout the world. And if you bring them into trade agreements, you create two very real problems: First, you give an extraordinary grant of power to the executive branch of Government to write domestic laws in a context where Congress' powers to debate and amend are severely limited; and, second, you pass decisionmaking authority, as to America's intent and as to the impact of the making of domestic law, to an international decisionmaking unit. And you create a situation where literally popular support with the best of intentions, with the goal of promoting the well-being of our people—and the only legitimate objective of American Government is to promote the well-being of its people—we could find ourselves in a situation where a change in a labor or an environmental law was judged by an international decisionmaking body or dispute resolution mechanism to benefit us in trade, and I would hope that would be one of our objectives in passing law. But by judging it in those terms, we could literally have tariffs imposed on any American product sold on the world market, and the net result would be severe limits on our national sovereignty.

These are very real issues. They are not easy to fix. If you are going to extend trade-promotion authority into the area of domestic law—in this case, labor and environment—my own preference would be, knowing that trade promotion authority, knowing that trade promotes labor rights by promoting competition, the ultimate right of a worker comes down to their ability to quit and go get another job. That is the ultimate worker right: I do not have to worry about somebody protecting my rights and treating me well when I can go across the street.

Trade promotes that kind of competition. But there are two sides to every story, I know the distinguished chairman has very different views, at least on what he hopes to achieve with labor and environmental provisions.

I conclude by saying I am willing to try to work with him to come up with a way of finding a solution to this problem so that we can give the President the promotion authority at a time when we desperately need it, at a time when we need to be promoting world prosperity, and at a time when we need to be promoting democracy and capitalism, because democracy and capitalism do not give rise to the kind of hate that endangers us and our people and our future and our happiness. I do think it is important that we work this out. But these are very real issues, very tough issues.

Let me conclude by saying that in having listened to all my colleagues today, this is a decision that was made based on the necessity of approving this agreement now as we are looking at a long and difficult war on terrorism, a trade agreement that in the best of circumstances is not very important, but the country with which we are entering into this agreement is a critical country, critical for American interests in the Middle East. And it is in the Middle East that many of our problems with world terrorism are focused. Without settling a precedent for this labor and environmental extension into trade or loss of sovereignty or violating the separation of powers, I intend to support the agreement.

I reiterate, in conclusion, that I am willing to work with anybody to try to find a way to get trade promotion authority for the President. It would be a great tragedy if we adjourn this year without the President having this authority. It is an arrow in his quiver, and he needs to fight this war. We are not going to win this war just with bullets, though we need some bullets and we need them properly delivered. However many we need, I am willing to buy. That alone will not win this war. Trade and the mutual respect it creates will be important tools, as important as bullets in winning this war.

This trade-promotion authority is very important, but to deal with it, we have to come to grips with these issues.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. BAYH). The Senator from Montana.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I yield myself the remainder of the time.

Mr. BAYH. The Chairmen, Mr. Bayh, the very able U.S. Trade Representative who negotiated this agreement, and also President Bush and his administration. They have been very far-sighted in urging the Congress to pass this legislation for all the reasons I and others have mentioned.

I also thank my colleague and good friend from Iowa, Senator Grassley, ranking member of the committee, for his steadfast support for this agreement.

This agreement was signed by both countries last October. The implementing legislation was passed by the House before the August recess. A virtually identical bill was reported out of the Finance Committee with only two dissenting votes, again before the August recess.

The point being, there was immense support for this agreement even before the disastrous events of September 11. Certainly, the events of September 11 make it all the more important now that we pass the bill to implement this agreement.

I also thank Senator Gramm for allowing this bill to come to the floor. He had earlier expressed his disagreement with the bill to the point where its passage, a little bit trade and non-trade issues are just not valid. We have a whole plethora of domestic issues routinely included in trade agreements, whether patents or copyrights or trade marks, names of geographical areas on labels, farm till practices. That gets pretty domestic. You can't get more domestic than farming. We address farm till practices in our discussions of trade. They are now very much in discussion between the European Union and ourselves with respect to which practices are included as trade-distorting subsidies and which are not. There are a lot of domestic issues that are included in trade agreements.

Second, the statement has been made that this agreement impinges upon American sovereignty. It is important to remind ourselves that any agreement the U.S. Government enters into with another country to some degree breaches sovereignty. Arms control, for example, the Montreal Protocol restricting chlorofluorocarbons, tax treaties, all have consequences for American sovereignty. International agreements are not a free lunch. They are bargained-for agreements that have consequences and have effects on each country's sovereignty.

Also, it is important to remember that a lot of traditional economic provisions included in trade agreements have some effect on our sovereignty. For example, in the GATT, we have mutually agreed to reduce tariffs. If we didn't agree to reduce our tariffs, we would never get other countries to reduce theirs. The issue of intellectual property rights is another example. Agreements in this area have consequences to one degree or another on actions that this country may or may not take.

The main point I wish to make is that the agreement before us does not infringe on U.S. sovereignty because, under the agreement, neither country is required to change its laws. And there has been a lot of talk about international dispute settlement mechanisms. There is no binding international dispute settlement mechanism in this agreement. If there is a dispute, as I mentioned previously, three conditions have to be met for either side to request international review. I don't think we're going to go through those conditions again, because time is limited. But even if a party claims that the three conditions are met, the next step is to go to mediation, not arbitration. There is mediation, and it is non-binding. A mediator might suggest to the United States or to Jordan, let's say the United States, that the United States has done something untoward. The United States can accept it or not accept it. There is no requirement whatsoever that the United States accept what a non-binding mediation panel—one panelist named by the United States, the other by Jordan, a third selected between them—might suggest. Again, it is non-binding.

Finally, I might say that I do believe this agreement does set a precedent, by definition, because it is the first of its kind. That is a precedent. I hope that all future trade agreements will now, after the passage of this agreement, include proper, reasonable labor and environmental provisions, because that is where we are in the world today.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator's time has expired.

Who yields time? The Senator from Texas?

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, I think I have pretty well said everything I came to say. Let me yield back my time and then if someone else wants to speak, they can come speak. If not, we can just remain in a quorum call until we are ready to vote. With that, let me yield back the remainder of my time, seeing the distinguished majority leader.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority leader.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I thank the distinguished Senator from Texas. Especially I thank the chair of the Senate Finance Committee and the ranking member for their work in getting us to this point.

I simply wanted to come to the floor before the end of the debate to express my strong support for the Jordan Free Trade Area Implementation Act. This is the first-ever U.S. free trade agreement with an Arab country. I think at these very tenuous and challenging times, there could be no stronger statement for us to make than to pass this legislation. I appreciate very much the work by all of those involved to see that it is done.

I note this agreement was negotiated before the events of September 11. We are moving ahead today because forging this agreement is the right thing to do for the people of the United States. It is also the right thing to do for the people of Jordan. It serves as a statement that our enemy is terrorism, not the Muslim world.

More than a year ago, President Clinton and King Abdullah began discussions about how we could more closely link the United States and Jordan, which, as everyone knows, is an increasingly important and strategic friend in the Middle East. This act is the result of those efforts, an important step in deepening that bond. When President Clinton and King Abdullah signed the United States-Jordan Free Trade Agreement a year ago, they expressed their concern about the impact of trade on workers and the environment. I share that concern today.

I am pleased that written into the text for the first time ever are several provisions to protect the environment and the rights of workers.

I see this as not only an important bilateral agreement but hopefully a template for future trade agreements as well.

I recognize, as others have noted, that several of my colleagues have concerns about the agreement. It is structured, and I thank them for saving this debate for another day and allowing us to move forward on this important legislation.

Our disagreements on this bill are far outweighed by our areas of agreement. We all agree on the strategic importance and good friendship of the Kingdom of Jordan.

Bordering Israel, Syria, Iraq, and Saudi Arabia, Jordan sits in the middle of a wide range of critical U.S. national interests—geographically and politically.

This centrality has been bolstered by Jordan’s supportive orientation toward U.S. interests. This agreement should stand as a strong symbol of the importance we attach to our relations with Jordan.

The Jordanians have taken admirable steps to improve relations with Israel, including the 1994 peace treaty that helped to advance the Middle East peace process.

This trade agreement, as the foreign assistance and debt relief before it, is a signal to Jordan that we appreciate its efforts at peace in the Middle East and that we hope for more.

That view is held by Israeli Prime Minister Sharon, who, on his first visit to Washington as Prime Minister, urged Congress to pass this historic trade agreement.

This trade agreement is also a signal to King Abdullah that we support his efforts at economic modernization. He and his team have instituted a series of significant economic reforms in order to restore growth.

We understand those reforms, while necessary, are painful. With this vote today, we are telling the Jordanians their reform and austerity will pay dividends.

Lastly, and most importantly, this agreement signals that the United States is not the enemy of the Arab and Muslim world.

Osama bin Laden and his associate extremists argue that the West is waging a war on Islam. Nothing could be further from the truth. We are waging a war on terrorism.

Jordan's participation in this international coalition against terror will only hasten our triumph and isolate the extremists and criminals who attacked America 2 weeks ago.

By further solidifying our important relationship at this critical time, the United States-Jordan Free Trade Area Implementation Act will give further impetus to the international coalition against terrorism and advance vital U.S. national security interests as well.

For these reasons, I come to the floor in support of H.R. 2603 and hope that all my colleagues will do the same.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. All time has expired. The bill is before the Senate and open to amendment. If there be no amendment to be offered, the question is on the third reading and passage of the bill.

The bill (H.R. 2603) was ordered to a third reading and was read the third time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The bill having been read the third time, the question is, Shall the bill pass?

The bill (H.R. 2603) was passed.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. GRAMM. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

EXECUTIVE SESSION

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE September 24, 2001

NOMINATION OF KIRK VAN TINE, OF VIRGINIA, TO BE GENERAL COUNSEL OF THE DEPARTMENT OF TRANSPORTATION

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senate will now go into executive session and proceed to vote on Executive Calendar No. 385, which the clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read the nomination of Kirk Van Tine, of Virginia, to be General Counsel of the Department of Transportation.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The yeas and nays have been ordered.

The clerk will call the roll.

The assistant legislative clerk called the roll.

Mr. REID. I announce that the Senator from Vermont (Mr. JEFFORDS) is necessarily absent.

Mr. NICKLES. I announce that the Senator from Pennsylvania (Mr. SANTORUM and the Senator from Nevada (Mr. ENSIGN) are necessarily absent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are there any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

The result was announced—yeas 97, nays 0, as follows:

LEGISLATIVE SESSION
The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate will now return to legislative session.

NATIONAL DEFENSE AUTHORIZATION ACT FOR FISCAL YEAR 2002
The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate will resume consideration of S. 1438, which the clerk will report by title.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (S. 1438) to authorize appropriations for fiscal year 2002 for military activities of the Department of Defense, for military construction and certain defense activities of the Department of Energy, to prescribe personnel strengths for such fiscal year for the Armed Forces, and for other purposes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. WARNER. I do not think we have the time to consider this bill.

Mr. DOMENICI. I say to the distinguished chairman, I understand there is an amendment from the Senator from Kentucky which to chart our course, night and day, between now and Wednesday afternoon, and recognize that we have to set aside time for the CR when it comes.

Mr. LEVIN. I wonder if it is agreeable with my friend from Virginia we would have a finite list of amendments. Is that agreeable?

Mr. WARNER. I agree.

Mr. DOMENICI. I say to the distinguished chairman, I understand there is an amendment from the Senator from Kentucky which to chart our course, night and day, between now and Wednesday afternoon, and recognize that we have to set aside time for the CR when it comes.

Mr. LEVIN. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. WARNER. I do not think we have the time to consider this bill.

Mr. DOMENICI. Of course. And I ask it be in order that after the first amendment offered by the Senator from Kentucky, I offer an amendment on behalf of Senator BINGMAN.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, we have to clear that. I wonder if we could withhold that for a moment.

Mr. DOMENICI. Sure.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I think it is hard to hear. I would like to know what kind of agreement we are coming to concerning amendments.

Mr. WARNER. I do not think we have reached any agreement. We have just come to the floor for the purpose of starting consideration of the bill. I defer to my chairman. As I understand, we have colleagues waiting to move ahead. I am prepared to try to do what we can, subject to his concurrence.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, if we could recognize Senator REED, who is waiting to make an opening statement, and while he is giving that statement, we will try to line up the order of amendments. Is that agreeable?

Mr. WARNER. Operationg.

Mr. SESSIONS. I would like to have a chance for opening comments, perhaps 10 minutes for that, whenever it is appropriate.

Mr. LEVIN. I ask that the Chair recognize Senator REED, then Senator SESSIONS, and at that point, after opening statements, we hope to have at least one or two amendments lined up in terms of order of recognition.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the request of the Senator from Michigan regarding the order of speakers?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Rhode Island.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I thank the Senators from Michigan and Virginia for their gracious offer of the opportunity to speak this afternoon but also for their work as chairman and ranking member of this committee. I thank Chairman LEVIN and Senator WARNER for their leadership.

I only wish to support in support of this authorization bill for the Department of Defense for the year 2002. It comes at a critical time in history where we have to prepare for a series of threats, both anticipated before September 11 and now understood very well after September 11.

I also speak specifically with respect to my responsibility as chairman of the Strategic Subcommittee of the Armed Services Committee. In that regard, I first thank and commend Senator WYNN ALLARD of Colorado, the ranking member. Senator ALLARD did a tremendous amount of work, and his perseverance, diligence, his good humor, and his cooperation were essential to the legislation we are contemplating and considering today. He has truly done a remarkable job. It was a distinct pleasure and honor working with him. I thank him for his activities.

The jurisdiction of the Strategic Subcommittee has a very wide swath, including space and space systems, strategic programs, intelligence, reconnaissance and surveillance programs, ballistic missile defense programs, and Defense-funded programs at the Department of Energy.

The Strategic Subcommittee held hearings on all of the matters of jurisdiction, including reports of the Space Commission and the National Reconnaissance Organization Commission. We had extensive hearings, particularly on the ballistic missile defense program. We had a 5-hour hearing on their plans and programs for this year. We also had a very useful and instructive hearing on the status of our long-range bomber force. Even though we had a compressed timeframe to consider these issues because of the late submission of the budget, the Strategic Subcommittee conducted extensive hearings.

The result is the legislation we have before the Senate, a product of these hearings, and of hard work, particularly the staff. I commend and compliment the staff for their intense effort and their thorough analysis of the requests made to the committee.

Based upon these hearings and this extensive analysis, we were able to identify numerous critical authorization for programs. In providing additional funds for these programs, we were guided by the recommendations of the military services themselves. We were very attentive to the unfunded requests outlined and identified by the Departments of the Air Force, Army, Navy, and Marine Corps, their so-called wish lists. That gave us a sense of where we had to apply additional resources. We tried to do that.

Now, with respect to space and space systems, including those B–1B bombers that are among those assets that have been identified and notified for possible forward deployment in support of our antiterrorist operations. As we move forward and in the future place increased reliance on our bomber fleet, not only have we dealt with the B–1B bomber force, we have also added an additional $125 million for much needed upgrades to the B–2 bomber and the B–52 bomber. We have all watched recently as those B–52s left Barksdale Air Force Base in support, again, of our antiterrorist operations, so it is essential to support these Air Force aircraft also.

In the intelligence surveillance and reconnaissance area, we have continued the emphasis started by Senator WARNER on transforming our military forces by promoting unmanned aerial vehicles. This bill includes an additional $14.2 million for unmanned aerial vehicles. As we improve the capability of these vehicles, we will rely on them for a growing list of missions. Once again, in any type of counterterrorism operation where we need relatively low-level, nonobservable, we hope, observation from the sky and where we are unwilling to risk plots, these vehicles are terribly useful.

Last year we sponsored a demonstration for the Global Hawk system in an air surveillance role. This bill includes funding for a signals intelligence demonstration project using the Global Hawk UAV. We think it is an important addition to our repertoire of overhead reconnaissance.

Another responsibility of the Strategic Subcommittee is the defense-funded programs at the Department of Energy with the exception of the nonproliferation programs. These DOE programs include environmental cleanup programs, the Stockpile Stewardship Program, and intelligence and counter-intelligence programs.

This bill would add approximately $855 million for these important programs. The budget request for these programs was not sufficient to cover all the needs for DOE to comply with its cleanup agreements or to improve the conditions of the production complex or to complete stockpile life extension programs. Additional resources are needed to not only maintain weapon reliability and our ability to safely manage the weapons but also to continue our responsibility to clean up sites that have been polluted by nuclear processes in the past.

We recognize that more money may be needed but this is a substantial downward payment on cleanup and stockpile security programs. The additional funding included $422 million for the DOE environmental programs and $500 million for the National Nuclear Security Administration.

In addition to the extra funding for DOE programs, we have included legislative provisions to streamline the DOE polygraph program and help the National Nuclear Security Administration complete its reorganization. As we all know, the initial response prompting these programs, the polygraph program and the creation of NNSA, was the situation of security breaches in our nuclear laboratories. We hope and believe that is a thing of the past because of our streamlined security procedures and a more rational, robust, and efficient NNSA.

One of the most controversial elements of our deliberations involve ballistic missile defense. Let me say initially that there is a consensus on the committee that we need robust research and development of ballistic missile defense and immediate deployment of theater missile defenses to counter the threat. But it turned out that when you come to national missile defense there are two schools of thought. There are those who might say it will never work and those who say we don't care if it works, we need it. The reality is somewhere in between. We have a strong obligation to test and develop national missile defenses so we can bring, we hope, that technology to bear to defend the country. That is why we have tried not to deploy something that will not work. That is what we have attempted to do in this legislation, to provide a counter to immediate threats but also ensure that we spend money wisely, with the ultimate goal of producing a technology that works, not fielding a technology that doesn't work.

Let me first discuss the threat that we face before us immediately. It is most easily divided into the theater threats, short-range, less than 1,000 kilometers, and medium range, 1,000 to 3,000 kilometers, and then those national threats, ICBMs that can travel more than 5,500 kilometers.

You can see there is a large number of countries that have theater missile capability, and it is growing each and every day. These are the threats that immediately challenge our troops in the field, that immediately involve American interests through our forces and our allies throughout the world.

When you go to the area of national missile defense, we know the Russians have thousands of missiles, the Chinese approximately 20, and then it is uncertain, frankly. As we all know, there is a strong suspicion that the North Koreans have this capability. There is certainly an indication other countries want this capability. It is clear to us, and it should be clear to the American public, that the great, immediate threat that should prompt our immediate response is in the area of theater missile defense. This authorization responds to that grave theater missile defense threat.

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE

It responds also to the national missile defense threat by continuing to support robust funding for research and development.

Let me give an overview of the funding levels that we have recommended for the ballistic missile defense program. It is good, I think, to begin with our baseline, which is last year’s authorization: $5.1 billion overall—national missile defense and theater missile defense, as indicated on this bar graph. The “other” category simply refers to other nonspecific BMDO-wide activities such as program operation and other generally supporting programs. The request by the administration was $8.3 billion, about a 60-percent increase, the largest request for any particular category in this DOD authorization. In this chart, you can see roughly the breakout between “other,” national missile defense, and theater missile defense.

After very careful consideration of each and every program, after hours of hearings and discussions with the officers in charge of BMD, and other officials, we made adjustments unrelated to the debate about the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty, related simply to several principles that are important. Avoid contingency deployments—avoid deploying equipment that has not been tested and we are not quite sure will work. Do not fund activities that cannot be executed this year. We have scarce resources. We are about to mount a worldwide campaign against terrorists and we cannot afford another war with terrorists that struck us and to fund things this year that cannot be performed when we have other glaring needs, to me is not the way to spend our money wisely and to support our troops adequately.

Also, to avoid excessive nonspecific funding, requests for large amounts of money without any real plan to spend it—the sense I got from listening to the Administration is that they will figure out what they are doing on the run. That is not the way to develop a system that is going to protect the United States.

Finally, avoid an undue program growth rate—programs that have been moving along with good progress and suddenly are going to be accelerated without justification for the acceleration.

Those are the principles we used to decide program-by-program adjustments we would be making.

The effect was to reduce the overall budget to $7 billion, almost $2 billion more than last year’s authorization; specifically, to increase theater missile defense from $600 million, the immediate threat, while reducing the administration’s request for national missile defense yet still increasing that budget by $1.1 billion. This was a robust authorization for ballistic missile defense.

The committee decisions have been impacted, of course, by what we did last week. In the manager’s amendment, we added back the $1.3 billion we had cut. But we have given the President the opportunity to use this money for either national defense or for antiterrorism activity.

I hope he will look at what we have done, and while looking at the ability to deploy systems that aren’t ready and activities that can’t really be executed, the Administration wisely spend that $1.3 billion for antiterrorism in the conduct of this campaign that threatens America today. If he does that, we will still be on the path to a strong national defense, and a strong national missile defense, but we will be able to affect the immediate crisis we face with more resources. I hope he makes that choice. The legislation we presented him after last week’s amendment will give him that choice.

Let me try to go into some detail about the recommendations.

Again, I hope the President and DOD will take our work and use it to form their views with respect to the additional $1.3 billion.

As I mentioned, we have increased theater missile defense by $526 million. We have tried to identify with surety well-defined programs such as the PAC-3 Program, which is just ready for deployment, and to fund them robustly. We have also tried to increase resources for the Navy Area Defense Program and the Airborne Laser to resolve emerging technical problems to keep them on schedule.

In addition to these programs, we have added $76 million to the administration’s request for the Arrow Missile System. The Arrow is a joint Israeli-United States project. These funds will help make Arrow interoperable with our forces. It is an essential part of the development. Today that is one of the few theater missile defense systems that is fielded and operational.

We have also gone ahead and looked at some of these ill-advised contingency deployments.

We save $390 million by not funding untested THAAD missiles, Navy Theater-Wide missiles, premature THAAD radar, and Airborne Laser components.

We save over $200 million by rationalizing the Navy Theater-Wide test and radar development programs while funding tests for Block 1 missiles and asking the Secretary of Defense for future plans on Navy Theater-Wide.

When it comes to national missile defense, I also pointed out that we have increased last year’s authorization by a total of $1.1 billion. It would fund a new midcourse test bed. It would provide one percent more for NMD, but it would save over $500 million by moderating growth in the NMD system and reducing funding for nonexecutable programs—those programs which we think, after careful analysis, cannot be completed in this year’s authorization.

We also have saved over $300 million by reducing excessive funding for activities not associated with specific programs—essentially large categories of money with very little justification. All of this money can now be used, pursuant to the amendment of last week, for counterterrorism operations, all the things we know we have to do today, and I hope we do today.

We have also funded the request by the administration for a test bed in Alaska. Even though there is a great deal of controversy about the efficacy of this test bed to test missiles, even though there is a suggestion that it could be used for deployment which would raise issues under the ABM Treaty, we have tried to give the administration the benefit of the doubt by not only significantly increasing resources but also assuming that they are working very diligently not to arbitrarily move away from the treaty but to comply with it until they are forced otherwise.

This approach of giving the administration not only permission but authority to establish their test bed is again another commitment to do everything we can to promote research and development of a national missile defense system. As we go forward, we hope we can continue working closely with the administration.

Let me also point out that our response to the proposal by the administration for missile defense was prompted not by an ideological approach to BMD but by a desire to see a program that works. We tried to base our judgments on the experience of these programs before.

One of the most influential aspects of our review was considering the report of General Welch, the former Chief of Staff of the U.S. Air Force, who conducted a thorough study of the THAAD system, the theater high-altitude system. A few years ago, this system was going nowhere, with after a test failure. General Welch was asked to come in and look at the program, analyze its faults, and point out whether it could be saved and how it could be saved. His conclusions were very instructive to our deliberations.

First of all, the Welch panel, set up by the BMD office to look at the failure in this theater high-altitude program, concluded that the THAAD program’s “rush-to-failure” was caused in part by the decision to buy operational missiles early. That was the key factor in the difficulties of this program. Until they got back to careful, thorough development with requirements and objectives, this program was in danger of failing. If it failed, it would cost us a great deal.

The same logic was echoed by GEN Kadish, director of BMD, when he testified that “emergency deployments are disruptive and can set back normal development programs by years.” That is precisely what the administration was urging us to do in this authorization—to accelerate deployment before we had done the testing, to buy missiles that were untested, to rush to failure.

I argue very strenuously that if the program adopted by the administration is to simply take this $1.3 billion back and plug it right back into this program, it will be a rush to failure, and it will defeat what we all want to see—the immediate deployment of effective theater missile defenses and the deployment, subject to considerations of international law and treaties at this point, of an effective national missile defense.

Until we have the testing and the development completed, deployment is something that is both premature and ultimately harmful to the program development. The program should be careful and deliberate, and we hope ultimately successful. As the Welch report concluded, attempting to deploy minimal capabilities now in hard capability is “is unlikely to be productive for programs of this complexity. The drive for early capability is proving to be counterproductive.”

I hope the administration takes these words to heart. Much of what we suggested in terms of funding reductions was based upon this logic—the logic of seasoned professionals who looked closely at this program and who want these programs to succeed but understand that they have to be done thoroughly and carefully, and not rushed to failure.

As we go forward, we will, I am sure, continue this debate about national missile defense and ballistic missile defense, and a host of other issues. I hope and I know the full Senate has the same type of very constructive and very helpful debate that the members of my subcommittee and the members of the full committee had because I think it is important to have this type of discussion as we go forward about issues. We have tried to do this, and we have tried to do it thoroughly. I believe we have produced, at the subcommittee level, and the full committee, a thoughtful and very logical and very defensible product.

Today we are in this Chamber presenting the administration with the opportunity to use these resources to counter terrorism or to go back and invest in programs of dubious immediate efficacy and efficiency and worth for the national defense. Again, I hope that the administration does this.

Let me just make brief comments about the situation with respect to the ABM treaty which, I point out, was separated from the logic of this discussion.

Regardless of the existence of an ABM treaty, our responsibility is to look closely at every one of these programs and to conclude which ones have real value for national defense and which ones are simply not worth the effort in terms of the resources committed this year. We did that—regardless of the existence of the ABM treaty. But the ABM treaty is a factor that has to be considered when you talk about national missile defense.

The point I make is that many things changed on September 11. One thing that changed is the appreciation, I believe, by all of us and the administration that we need the help and the cooperation of the world community to beat the terrorists, to root out these networks out and destroy them.

In that context, I suggest and advise that it would be very counterproductive for immediate and unilateral departure from the ABM treaty, because of the consequences it would produce. That advice, I hope, is taken to heart by the President.

The President clearly has the authority today to withdraw from a treaty. We attempted—and we continue to attempt—to provide a forum for this Senate at least to consider a proposed departure from the ABM treaty. But until that other legislation is considered, and perhaps passed, it is clear that the President has this right.

But today, as we assemble a world coalition to fight people who have harmed us— grievously—I would think that he would be very careful not to withdraw because we need the support of many nations. I think it is particularly inappropriate and premature to do that since I believe we do not have the technology today that will, in fact, be capable of deployment within the next few months, perhaps the next few years.

While we are developing the technology, we should be very careful about undermining the stability of international relations, particularly at a time when we are reaching out to nations across the globe, including our European allies, including China, asking them all to stand with us and to trust our judgment and our leadership as we go forth to counter and destroy the common enemy, the terrorists in the world.

So I believe among the many things that have changed on September 11 is the attitude that was demonstrable in the administration that we can go it alone, that we don’t need many other people; it is our way or the highway. We are now on a common path, we hope, to overcome and defeat the terrorists. This is not time to debate the language that was embodied in the original version of the bill which passed the committee. I do hope there is a more appropriate time soon.

We accept that today at a momentous time in our history. All of us are committed to giving our Department of Defense every resource it needs to defend this country and, most specifically, to destroy those who attacked us and attempted to destroy us. It is in that spirit we continue these deliberations. It is in that spirit we will pass this legislation. And it is in that spirit we will triumph and prevail.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. CARPER). Under the previous order, the Senator from Alabama is recognized.

Mr. WARNER. I ask my colleague to defer for a moment so that I can recognize the valuable contribution of the Senator from Rhode Island.

Mr. SESSIONS. I defer to the ranking member.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Virginia.

Mr. WARNER. I thank the Senator. We recognize the Senator from Alabama is next to be recognized for an opening statement.

I commend our colleague from Rhode Island first for his hard work throughout the years on the committee on which he has served from the first day he came to the Senate, and most particularly at a time when he has been the chairman of the subcommittee, which is a very important subcommittee dealing with many issues. I thank him for his work with Senator LEVIN and myself as we worked our way through the resolution of some issues that were very important to him. I thank the Senator very much.

Mr. President, I will keep on my desk, as will the distinguished chairman, a list of the amendments which are now coming in. I am pleased to say we are down to where there is a single person who is examining the possibility of the UC request shortly to be proposed on the question of putting in the amendments for consideration by a certain time today, so we can hopefully complete this bill tomorrow night.

My understanding is that at the conclusion of the remarks of the Senator from Alabama, we will turn to amendments; and in all probability, our distinguished colleague from Kentucky will ask for recognition at that time.

Mr. LEVIN. Will the Senator from Alabama yield for just an additional minute without losing his order for recognition?

Mr. SESSIONS. I am pleased to yield.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Michigan.

Mr. LEVIN. I thank the Senator from Rhode Island for not just his opening statement, which is always extraordinary and thoughtful, but also for his magnificent work as the chairman of the Strategic Subcommittee. They are both invaluable. I thank him very much for that.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, may I say what a privilege it is working with Chairman LEVIN and the ranking member, Senator WARNER. The Senators have led this Senate with great distinction.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senator from Alabama is recognized.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, I am pleased to express my appreciation to Senator LEVIN and Senator WARNER. and to all others who have worked very hard to make sure we complete our work in this Chamber in a bipartisan way. We were very close to doing that on almost every issue that has come before us. But one issue did divide us; that was national missile defense. And Senator REED is one of the most knowledgeable and articulate spokesmen before us. But one issue did divide us; that was national missile defense. And Senator REED is one of the most knowledgeable and articulate spokesmen concerning that issue.

In my capacity as the ranking member, of which I am ranking member, I think Senator KENNEDY and I were able to reach an agreement on issues pertinent to seapower that both of us felt good about. It was not perfect; it was not what we would like; but with the money that we were allocated to spend on seapower, I think we did a good job. Our problems simply were the lack of money and resources. And, indeed, I will mention a few things that we were missing as a result of that.

President Bush campaigned that he would improve the situation for our defense people and our defense budget and do some things that needed to be done. If you look at his budget, it represents an historic improvement and increase in defense. This appropriation bill we are voting out today totals $328 billion. Last year, we were at $296 billion. That is a $30 billion increase, plus a $6 billion supplemental we passed. It means a $38 billion increase in defense this year over last year.

That is the biggest increase in probably 15 years in defense. It represents a long overdue step. It was done before we had these terrorist attacks. And it represented a consensus by the administration and their representation to the Congress on the needs of our defense budget. So we made a big step forward, and we are happy about that.

We spent a good deal of that money on a number of things, such as a 5-percent pay raise for personnel and members in uniform, which is tacked on to last year’s increase—well above the inflation rate; 6- to 10-percent pay raises for people in critical positions; a $232 million increase in the housing allowance for families—increased funding for housing—an increase for national missile defense, and a number of other increases.

So we are proud of those things. We are proud of the overall increase in the defense budget. However, our defense budget still, as a percentage of our GDP—our total gross domestic product—is far less than it was in the 1980s. At a time when we are seeing increased threats to our ability to function in the world as a result of terrorists and rogue nations, we are going to have to increase the budget in the years to come.

The biggest thing we were not able to do in this budget—and the American people need to understand it—we did not make enough progress in recapitalization, replacing old and worn-out equipment such as tanks, aircraft, and ships; nor did we do enough in research and development of new equipment for the future. We did not make enough progress despite a very significant increase in that beginning this year.

We are going to have—we approved the other day—an additional $20 billion for defense, most of which—virtually all of which will be spent for the terrorist problem we are now facing. With some of that decision to strengthen our Defense Department for other issues, but most of it, indeed, will go to a terrorist response. That is not going to leave us in a significantly stronger position.

If you count that, we are looking at a $38 billion increase over last year. From a financial point of view, we did pretty well. From a procurement point of view, most of us are somewhat concerned.

For example, in the Seapower Subcommittee, of which I am ranking member, we were wrestling with a Navy that now has about 315 ships afloat out there. At one point in this country not too long ago, we were talking about a 600-ship Navy. Along with everything else, we have had a steady reduction in funding for ships. In this budget, we are going to have six new ships approved, which is good—they are expensive, every one of them—but that will not stop the decline. Our estimates from our Navy people are it takes eight to ten ships a year to maintain the current level of 315 ships. So we are still on a downward slope for ships.

At some point, you just have to have a ship on the sea to be able to project American power in areas around the globe. You have to have a certain number. Many of them have to be in home port to be repaired. The sailors need to be home at various times. They need to respond to various crises in different places. It does not leave you that many ships to be at a certain place at a given time when they are needed. Seapower is a good example of our inability to be as effective in procuring capital assets for our defense as we would like to be. I wish I had a more positive story to tell there, but I don’t.

One defense official recently said that it was like a bow wave in front of a ship, this procurement need. We are just pushing it in front of us. Sooner or later, we will have to confront it. Another defense official in the Clinton administration said we are in a death spiral. What he meant by that was, we are trying to keep afloat and keep operating equipment and airplanes and ships that need constant repair, and they are getting older and older. We need out of a system that is not feasible, that won’t work. We have to get started on building it. A $3 billion increase in national missile defense spending is a reasonable increase when that is the one gap we saw in our defense strategy. Indeed, Assistant Secretary of Defense Paul Wolfowitz, in his testimony, talked about the Gulf War. He said: If you look at the Gulf War, you could see that in many ways we overestimated our enemy's capability. And, in fact, we overestimated our capability in virtually every area except one. The one we did not consider enough was his ability to launch missiles, Scud missiles, if you remember, into our military bases and troops out in the field and into Israel and perhaps even in virtualizing our relationship with Israel and causing consternation in our defense effort. So we rushed in the Patriot missile. It actually succeeded in knocking some of those Scuds down, but it was not designed for that and had not been ready to be deployed for that. It was rushed out as an emergency, and it worked to a degree.

Since then, we realize we do have the capability to knock down an incoming missile. Some people almost think it is Star Wars. Why don't we do it? We have had hearing after hearing after hearing on that subject. Both sides of the aisle agree it is technologically something that can be done. We have the ability to do it. It is just the question of when it ought to be deployed, I suppose; that is our disagreement.

The American people need to realize that if, by 2005, Iran or Pakistan, any nation, Iraq, or North Korea continues their development or their purchase of missiles, they could have the ability to reach us with a missile, and we have no defense to that whatsoever.

You say we have theater missile defense, but it cannot be deployed around this country in a way that would protect us as a national missile defense.

It is that, under present circumstances? The reason for that is, in 1972 we entered into an ABM treaty, Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty, with the Soviets.

At that time, we both had the capability to destroy each other many times over with our missiles. Both of us, in the 1970s, were thinking about a national missile defense program. So somebody finally, I guess, got our nations to start thinking that this is really not good for either one of us. Why should we invest billions of dollars in a system that will not really protect us from the overwhelming force of the other. So we signed the treaty. It, flat out, said that we will not deploy a national missile defense. The treaty is not but two or three pages.

The first article says: We will not build a national missile defense. People have said we don't need to get out of this treaty. Well, if we are going to build a national missile defense, we do have the cost. What if the Russians don't agree? We are threatened now from a multitude of nations. We want to have a friendly relationship with Russia. I pray we don't have a threat from Russia. I hope that our relationship will get even better with Russia, but we have a bunch of nations out there—and if anybody had any doubts about it, they didn't after September 11—who wish us ill. If they had the capability of launching missiles and hitting Los Angeles, New York, or other American cities and can kill millions of American people, then we are not safe in this world.

We have the ability to do this, and it is time for us to get busy about it. No great nation ought to leave itself vulnerable, as I have been saying, and in his interview, the architect of the ABM Treaty, was quoted. He talked about the new circumstances we are in. He said:

I have never heard of a nation whose policy it is to keep itself vulnerable to attack.

That is what we are basically talking about. We are having a policy by trying to adhere to a treaty with a dead em- pire, the Soviet Union—it wasn't even with the Russia of today. Many legal scholars say we are not even required to abide by it because it is not with a national military defense. The Europeans, after initially being opposed, have warmed up to it. They say, you know, that is fine. About the only place left that we are having problems with is the U.S. Senate. The House is on board with this, but we are still having some problems here. So there was language in this bill—and the reason I and others voted against it when it came out of committee—which said that if the Russians didn't agree to allow us to build a national missile defense, the President could not go forward, but had to come back to Congress and ask for a new treaty. Whereas, under the ABM treaty, the President has personal unilateral power to wipe out the treaty. But if they did agree, the President could go forward. To me, that is an odd thing for the Congress to do—to cede our power to build a national missile defense system to the Russians, to have them have a veto over whether or not we have a missile system deployed. I don't think that was good.

I am glad that this compromise language came out. I am very, very happy that it came out. It is something I don't think we should have done.

As a former Federal lawyer, I think about the legal situation here. The treaty prohibits us from deploying a system which would include deploying the radar systems, perhaps, out there that support one. It prohibits us from developing or testing a sea-based or mobile system of any kind, which is precisely what we need to be doing now. As a lawyer, it seems to me that when the Senate votes 97-3 to deploy a national missile defense system, the President of the United States at that time, President Clinton, signed that legislation, and the President of the United States today has been pushing forward with developing and deploying one, and we are funding the money to carry one out, we ought to be honest enough to say we are moving to contradiction of the treaty, if we have not already.

We have the intent to deploy a national missile defense system, which is contrary to the treaty. So the President either has to get out of it, or the Russians need to agree to that. Hopefully, they will agree. If not, we need to move on because we have to protect ourselves. We can't let a 1972 treaty with an empire that no longer exists prohibit us from protecting ourselves from other nations around this world who have the ability to launch missiles that could hit us. It is just that simple. We need to believe in the language that is in the bill. I salute those who worked hard to make it acceptable.

I will just mention a couple of things in general about this legislation. Secretary Rumsfeld is committed to transforming our military. Certainly, the events of September 11 should make us doubly committed to that goal. The old system of defending against a Soviet attack on the planes of Europe is not what our threat is today. We need a transformation that has more mobility, the ability to move our equipment, to disembark it around the globe. This is what the transformation plan was about that he has pushed, which was in discussion and agreement, really, by all of us before September 11. It was that we be more mobile, have more agility, that the weapons systems and equipment we use have more abilities to perform different functions. It would be more lethal with the smart bombs and other kinds of things. A single round, a single bomb, could be much more directed and effective in its attack.

We needed better surveillance and reconnaissance and intelligence information, and we need a modernized command and control system. Those were the goals of transformation. I believe this legislation supports that, although perhaps not as much as I would like. I would like to believe that the quadren- nial defense review coming out of the Department of Defense within a few weeks, and Secretary Rumsfeld's own internal review, will further push our services to go forward to a transformation to a world that is quite different than the one we have had—partic- ularly with respect to terrorists.

I am concerned that we may not have enough money in this budget for smart weapons of all kinds—the kinds we saw in Kosovo that could go in the window of a building. We need an adequate sup- ply of those weapons, but the new fund- ing—the $20 billion we approved—should be able to fill those needs. But

I will go further into this aspect in a moment, but right now I, and many others, have a bigger concern with future BRAC rounds, and it unfortunately stems from the terrorist attacks on September 11. Now more than ever, we should hold off further downsizing of our military infrastructure as we analyze how to fight the first war of the 21st century. I want to commend the President for his comments in his letter of September 21. I want to ask my colleagues to support this amendment.

The President has warned us that victory is not going to come quickly and it is not going to come without pain. We need to consider how much more we have to do during the course of the markup on the missile defense system. He has been a keen observer and a strong contributor to America's ability to prepare for another attack. I thank the Senator.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Virginia.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I wish to commend our distinguished colleague from Alabama. He is a tireless worker on our committee and a great watchman of taxpayers' dollars. I especially thank him for his reference to the work done by the full committee, and indeed others subsequent thereto, to resolve such issues as we had during the course of the markup on the missile defense system. He has been a keen observer and a strong contributor to America's ability to prepare itself against a limited attack. I thank the Senator.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kentucky is recognized.

AMENDMENT NO. 1622

Mr. BUNNING. Mr. President, I send an amendment to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will read as follows:

The Senator from Kentucky [Mr. BUNNING] for himself, Mr. LOTT, Mr. DOMENICI, Mr. RINGAMAN, Mr. CRAIG, Mr. BURNS, Mr. Hutchison, Mr. INHOFE, Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire, Ms. SNOWE, Mr. BAUCUS, Mr. COCHRAN, Mr. CONRAD, Mrs. HUTCHISON, Mr. STEVENS, and Mrs. CLINTON, proposes an amendment.

(Purpose: To strike title XXIX, relating to defense base closure and realignment)

Strike title XXIX, relating to defense base closure and realignment.

Mr. BUNNING. Mr. President, I thank the chairman and ranking member of the full committee for giving me an opportunity to offer this amendment on behalf of 20 cosponsors. This amendment is a straightforward amendment.

The underlying bill authorizes a base closure realignment in the year 2003. This amendment simply strikes that language, that provision.

There are a number of good reasons why we should not move ahead with another BRAC at this time. Most important, there has always been the uncertainty as to whether or not previous rounds of BRAC have actually saved the military and the taxpayers any money. This has always been my main concern with proposals for future BRACs.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Virginia.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Virginia.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I thank our distinguished colleague from Kentucky for his remarks. He is a very valuable member of our committee, and he straightforwardly told us from the very first he would be in opposition to the BRAC procedure. The opposition he indicated preceded indeed the crisis we now face as a consequence of the tragedies of September 11. It is fresh in the minds of those Senators and others following this important debate. He read from a letter, and I shall put the letter in the RECORD. It is addressed to me from the Secretary of Defense and I will read it in its entirety momentarily. But he quoted:

While our future needs as to base structure are uncertain and are strategy dependent, we must simply have the freedom to maximize the efficient use of our resources.

Freedom, in a sense, goes directly to what I believe. The bill very carefully and simply puts in place, in the hands of the Secretary of Defense, the authority to go forward with such legislation if he deems it necessary at some future date. So the Senate will be asked to make a decision of deleting this provision or sustaining the committee report and bill and thereby just putting in place the authority for the Secretary to do the following: If the President does not transmit to Congress the nomination for appointment to the commission on or before the date specified for 1993 in clause 2 of subparagraph B, for 1995 in clause 3 of that paragraph, or for 2003 in section 4, the process by which the military installations may be selected for closure realignment under this part with respect to that year shall be terminated.

So what we are doing, in a sense, putting aside all of that technical language, is simply giving the Secretary of Defense the authority to proceed. I supported it from the committee, and I support it now.

I say to my good friend, after discussion with him and others, I thought as to whether or not we should proceed to put in place on a standby basis the authority for the Secretary of Defense and I reiterated these arguments to him. I think it was not more than a day or two after September 11, because I have had an opportunity to visit with him on a number of occasions—and Deputy Secretary Wolfowitz—and I laid before them the fact we are calling up people, we are augmenting our forces, there is uncertainty, and the last thing we need is instability in those communities which provide a home for the men and women of the military.

So I said I would like to have you send a letter to me, if it is your desire that the Senate proceed to ask for a vote in favor of the bill as now written, and he wrote me on September 21.

I will read it because it is very important.

Dear Senator Warner: I write to underscore the importance we place on the Senate’s approval of authority for a single round of base closures and realignments. Indeed, in the wake of the events of September 11, the imperative to convert excess capacity into warfighting ability is enhanced, not diminished. The base realignment and closure process has provided additional billions of tax payers’ funds to the department. We owe it to all Americans, particularly those service members on whom our responsibility depends, to seek every efficiency in the application of those funds on behalf of our warfighters.

Our installations are the platform from which we will deploy the forces needed for the sustained campaign the President outlined last night. While our future needs as to the structures and facilities are strategy dependent, we simply must have the freedom to maximize the efficient use of our resources. The authority to realign and close bases and facilities is a major component of ensuring the right mix of bases and forces within our warfighting strategy. No one relishes the prospect of closing a military facility. But, as we are seeking the authority to do so, but as the President said last evening, ‘We face new and sudden national challenges,’ and those challenges will force us to confront many difficult choices. In that spirit, I am hopeful that Congress will approve our request for authority to close and realign our military base facilities. Thank you for the opportunity to provide our views in this important matter.

Other Senators are anxious to address this matter, and I may reenter the debate subsequently before we proceed to a vote, but I assure the Senate this Senator deliberated long and carefully, and I do continue my support. I have given the request by the Secretary simply to put in place the necessary authorization to proceed. If it is his judgment and that of the President to do so some months ahead, then I think it is important we do proceed because we have an obligation to the American taxpayers that those dollars that are authorized and appropriated for the Department of Defense be spent very wisely.

Subsequently, I will address the question of savings, but my calculation is, the 152 major closures and realignments resulting from the BRAC procedures of 1988 through 1995 will save the Department $14.5 billion by 2001—that fiscal year is about to end—and $5.7 billion every year thereafter. There is additional information on the savings which will be placed into the RECORD.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maine, Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, before I speak to the pending amendment, I want to commend the two leaders of our committee. I joined this committee in January, and they have worked very hard in the last week to come up with a bill that would unify this body. So I want to commend both Senator LEVIN and Senator WARNER for their tremendous efforts in producing a bill that will help bring us together and ensure we are providing the resources and the authority for the important task before us. I praise them and thank them for their efforts.

I commend the Senator from Kentucky for his amendment. I rise in strong opposition to the provisions in our bill known as the base realignment and closure, or BRAC, proposal. I opposed this proposal in committee, and I continue to oppose it today. In fact, I think the reasons for opposition are even more compelling than they were at the time of our committee markup. After the September 11 attacks on America, I question, with even more... certainty, the decision to proceed with additional cuts in our base infrastructure. As the result of the first 4 BRAC rounds, 97 military bases in the United States have been or are in the process of being closed, degrading our defense readiness according to some military experts.

In light of the recent terrorist attacks on our homeland, and based on the testimony provided by the Chief of Naval Operations before the Senate Armed Services Committee when Admiral Clark recently cautioned that the Navy’s infrastructure is already at barebones, now is simply not the time, it is simply not in our country’s best interests, to initiate yet another round of base closures.

At a time when our Commander in Chief has warned of a long and sustained military operation, we should be preserving, not eroding, our facilities and infrastructure, so that they are fully available for our Armed Forces both at home and abroad. It is the responsibility of this Congress to ensure that these installations are not placed at risk without careful, prudent consideration of the additional military requirements, particularly with regard to homeland defense, that are evolving as a result of the recent horrific attacks on our Nation. It is also clear that our ongoing peacekeeping and humanitarian missions require a greater force structure than had been expected. Our war on terrorism will most likely be a long and sustained effort. As the result of the first 4 BRAC rounds, we ought to be doing a better job of environmental cleanup at our bases, whether they are open or closed. However, we cannot ignore these significant costs. These are considerable costs which only continue to grow, often not counted as costs associated with closing bases.

There is another more fundamental reason I oppose the BRAC language in this bill. Simply put, BRAC is the wrong process for identifying bases for closure. If the Pentagon believes certain bases are no longer needed, those installations should be identified and included in DOD’s budget submission. There is no need to cast a cloud of uncertainty over every base in virtually every community hosting a base all across this great Nation.

Senator Snowe and I can testify personally that BRAC is not the clinical, impartial process it is often made out to be. Rather, the BRAC process in the past has been highly politicized and it remains susceptible to political pressure in its current form in this bill. While I recognize the need to reduce proven excess capacity, the BRAC procedures have been unfair in the past. It has not produced the savings anticipated by past rounds of closures, and it could at a critical time result in degraded readiness for our Armed Forces.

I will continue, therefore, to voice my strong opposition to another round of base closures. I will continue to work to ensure that critical assets and training capabilities provided by our existing force structure and infrastructure are not lost.

Now is certainly not the time to create chaos, concern, in every community that has proudly hosted a military installation. Now is certainly not the time to embark on another round of base closures, when all of the energies of our civilian and military leaders must be focused on the overriding goal of crushing the global network of terrorists intent on harming our great Nation and its citizens.

I urge support for the amendment of the Senator from Kentucky.

I yield.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. Durbin). The Senator from Arizona.

Mr. MCCAIN. I intend to speak at greater length later on on this issue. It is very clear, the opinion of Members of this body, including those just articulated by the Senator from Maine who, among other things, said there has been no savings, when we have ample documentation that they have achieved net savings of $15 billion by the end of this fiscal year from the previous base closure rounds, with another $6 billion in savings each and every year thereafter.

What we are really talking about is an opinion held in the Senate, which I respect, for which I have admiration, and I have great respect for the individuals who are opposing the base closing round. The fact is, at a time when we rally around the President of the United States and the Secretary of Defense and the men and women in the armed services, we are going in direct contravention to the views of the President of the United States, the Secretary of Defense, and our military and civilian leadership. It is that clear.

That is really what this debate is all about.

As the Secretary of Defense wrote on September 21, to Senator Carl Levin and Senator John Warner:

"We owe it to all Americans—particularly those who risk their lives in uniform, that our response will depend—to seek every efficiency in the application of those funds on behalf of our warfighters. Our installations are the platforms from which we will deploy the forces needed for the sustained campaign the President outlined last night. While our future needs as to base structure are uncertain and our strategy dependent, we simply must have the freedom to maximize the efficient use of our resources.

Why is that? Earlier this year there was testimony before the Armed Services Committee by the people who are responsible for our installations. Do you know what they are saying?

"We are in a slow death spiral," said Air Force MG Earnest Robbins II, the civil engineer for his service, who predicted the 2002 defense budget will include enough money only to handle the most pressing priorities.

The services have argued that the poor conditions of many facilities and the shortage of money to fix them are proof they must close unneeded bases.

What is going on here is, because we have so many bases, we don’t have the funds to maintain not only their capabilities but the quality of life. The quality of life deteriorates when we do not maintain these facilities. Therefore, there is a requirement to close the unnecessary ones.

By the way, we will get into this argument about how did it and whether it is politicized. I will submit for the Record and discuss, over time, clearly the fact that there is no other way to close bases. We went for many years until we came up with the Base Closure Commissions.

But if you go out to any military facility, you will see that people have aging, not only installations at which they work but aging installations in which they live. It is because we simply have not enough money to go around to maintain all of these facilities.
So what does that translate into? Difficulties in recruiting, difficulties in retention. According to a study last year, the U.S. Army has had the greatest exodus of captains they have had in their history. What do they say? They say they do not put us in conditions in which we can live. We have men and women in the military living in barracks that were constructed in World War II. STAR TAC is a prime example. Structural deterioration of the barracks has forced access restrictions that allow only emergency vehicles to park near the ships. Military COL Michael Lehnert, assistant deputy commandant for installations and logistics, says his service does not even have enough money to assess problems at its bases. Assess problems at its bases? We are doing the right thing; we just aren't doing it fast enough.

At Camp Pendleton, the base sewer system, which spilled 3 million gallons of sewage into the Santa Margarita River last year, needs to be replaced. But that would cost $179 million—more than the entire $173 million construction budget proposed by the Marine Corps for 2002.

"The effects of underfunding only get worse as our facilities age," Army MG Robert Van Antwerp, Jr. said. He noted that the backlog has grown to $18.4 billion, a $600 million increase in 1 year.

We are asking these men and women to live and work in facilities that are, at best, substandard, in some cases absolutely abysmal, because we have too many of them. We have too many of them.

I will challenge the proponents of this amendment to find one military expert, active-duty or retired, who would not say we need to close unnecessary bases. I would like for the Senator from Maine to talk to GEN Schwarzkopf. He is a fairly well-repected individual. I would like for her to hear all the former Chairmen of the Joints Chiefs of Staff. I would like for her to hear from all the experts on military readiness. All these people unanimously, without exception, will say we have too many bases and we need to reduce those numbers of bases so we can be more efficient, but also we can take the limited assets that we have and put them into the bases that remain so the people there would have the support of their family and friends, both recreationally, and living-wise, that would give them the standard of living of most Americans outside the military.

That is all we are asking. The President of the United States needs the flexibility to be able to do that. I know the President feels strongly about this. I know the Secretary of Defense feels strongly about it. I know how the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff feels about it. But do you know who feels most strongly about it? The squadron commanders and base commanders at these installations where they see their men and women subjected to less than satisfactory. It is not satisfactory. They know it, I know it, and everybody else knows it.

I believe if we take this base closing amendment out of this bill, we will send a message to the Secretary of Defense that is: It is business as usual in the U.S. Congress. It is business as usual. We are not prepared to make the necessary sacrifices—even if it affects our State; a base closing commission can clearly affect what we have that is necessary to fight this war on terrorism.

The opening signal is business as usual, my friends. We will not even approve giving the Secretary of Defense the authority, through a base closing commission, which can clearly affect what we have that is necessary to fight this war on terrorism.

I admit there were some politics around the base closing. We have fixed this. Senator Levin and I have fixed this with this amendment so that is not possible today. I believe there can be any other process to eliminate these bases, then obviously the history of how we tried to do this in the past shows it doesn't work.

So I say this is a very important vote. It is even more important than whether we are going to have a base closing commission. This vote is really all about whether we are going to do business as usual and preserve our bases in our States, whether they are necessary or not, or whether we are going to have a base closing commission so we can have the most efficient military machine to fight this long, protracted struggle, the opening salvo of which was fired on Tuesday, September 11.

This is a very important vote.

I am glad to see the Secretary of Defense has made such a very strong statement, a very strong statement in support of this base closing commission. I hope the Members of this body will pass legislation that will pass legislation that will pass as the views of the uniformed and civilian leadership of the U.S. military, including the President of the United States of America.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Rhode Island.

Mr. REED. Mr. President, I rise to support the language in this legislation that would authorize another round of base closings. I do so, as we all do, knowing full well there are perhaps facilities in my home State that might be considered. I am confident and hopeful that, because of their critical role, they will continue to be vital parts of the Department of Defense. But every Senator is a bit nerous when we authorize a round of base closings.

Simply stated, we have too many facilities. We have a cold-war base structure. We have a post-cold-war Department of Defense. We have to reconcile the two.

I associate myself with the comments of the Senator from Arizona. The bottom line here, the effect that is most obvious from too many bases, is the deteriorating quality of life of the troops who serve in our Armed Forces.

In 12 years in the Army, from 1967 to 1979. There were facilities back then, in the 1970s, which the Army desired to close. Some are still open. There were facilities back then that were inadequate or barely adequate, they remain on the books of the Army. Troops are using them for their barracks. Family housing is being used. Base closure is just common sense. When you have the demands of training, operations, new readiness, integrating new equipment, and then family housing, troop housing, and community facilities on Army posts and Navy bases or an Air Force base, something has to give. What typically gives are those quality-of-life items: the community center, the child care center, the library, family housing, and troop housing.

That is multiplied and amplified when you have just too many bases.

About 3 weeks ago, I traveled to Fort Bragg, NC, to watch the 82nd Airborne Division conduct live fire exercise for their division readiness brigade. Those soldiers are today on orders and on alert to go out and be the tip of the spear. I talked to the brigade commander, the division commander, the battalion commander, and the troops.

The one thing they said is they are proud to be in this division, and that one of the reasons they are is because the commanding officer, the division commander, the battalion commander, and the troops.

If we want to be efficient and effective, we have to reconcile our infra-we have serious threats before us. Those real estate they need.

Yes, we have an imperfect structure in terms of base closing conditions. Nothing that there isn't in bases that some people thought would never be closed in our lifetime, or several lifetimes. So it has worked.

There are other arguments that no savings have been realized. As the Sen-orator from Arizona pointed out, between $15 billion and $16 billion will have been realized by the end of fiscal year 2001 on these base closures. It is projected going forward that we will ac-ruce an annual savings of approximately $2.2 billion. That is real money that has been saved and will be saved. It was suggested that we have already saved anywhere between $7.5 billion to $8 bil-ion, and that going forward we might expect to save another $3 billion each year.

What would we do with that money? There are plenty of things to spend it on in this Defense authorization bill. I will just mention a few of them: Fighter aircraft that we are anxious to build;
military airlift capability; cargo aircraft—either anxious to build or upgrade and improve—helicopters that need to be replaced, and ships.

Earlier we heard from the Senator from Alabama that 315 Navy ships continue to diminish. We need to build ships to replace those that are being decommissioned. We need to build submarines as well.

The President and others support the idea of developing and deploying a national missile defense system which will cost tens of billions of dollars. But even if we set aside those weapons systems and simply consider the aircraft and the ships that stay on the ground, with the helicopters that stay on the ground that are used just for cannibalization—we steal their spare parts to keep other ships and other aircraft and other helicopters flying, the ships that aren’t going to sea simply because they lack the spare parts that enable them to carry out their missions.

It has been suggested that in the wake of the tragedies in the last 2 weeks—the terrorist attacks in New York and Virginia—somehow keeping military bases that are unutilized or underutilized open will enable us to be more vigilant against our enemies. I do not just see it. I just do not see it that way.

The language in the legislation before us today does not mandate the establishment of a base realignment commission. It provides the discretion to the President and to our Secretary of Defense, if they see fit, to appoint the members to serve on a commission.
As Senator MCCAIN has suggested, the language in this legislation is crafted in a way to take the politics out of whatever might be done with respect to base realignment.

If the President and if the Secretary of Defense elected to use the discretion provided for them in this legislation, they would ultimately establish the commission, and that commission would ultimately come back to us in this Senate and in the House of Representatives in order to have the final say, the final word, as to whether or not the bases recommended for closure will be closed. We have the final word.

I believe it is prudent for us, in a day and age when we do have substantial needs for additional weapons systems—upgraded weapons systems, and to make the ones we already have workable—to look for some opportunities to save not just a few dollars but a substantial number of dollars. The potential in this bill, with this approach, is very real.

With that, Mr. President, I urge my colleagues to support the language the committee has reported out, and also to support our President and our Secretary of Defense, as well as our military leaders, who have sought just this kind of authorization.

I yield back my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. REID. Will the Senator from North Carolina allow me to propound a unanimous consent request without you losing your right to the floor?

Mr. DORGAN. I have no idea what the Senator from North Carolina would say, but the Senator from North Dakota are to yield.

Mr. REID. I am so sorry.

Mr. DORGAN. They both start with “North.”

Mr. REID. That is why they should change the name to “Dakota.”

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, first of all, I am going to propound a unanimous consent request. We have been talking now for a couple days about having a final cutoff time for amendments, telling Senators that they have to give both Cloakrooms amendments so we know how many. We need a finite list of amendments. We have been going back and forth on this. We want to move this along. This is the country’s bill. The President is very interested in getting this passed as quickly as possible. Unless we work out something on these amendments, we will never finish this bill. So this is the purpose of this unanimous consent request.

I ask unanimous consent that the list I will send to the desk be the only first-degree amendments remaining in order to S. 1438, the Department of Defense authorization bill; that these amendments be subject to relevant second-degree amendments; that upon disposition of all amendments the bill be read a third time and the Senate vote on passage of the bill, with no intervening action or debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. ALLARD. I object. Mr. President, I might explain.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

Mr. ALLARD. I understand there are a couple Members yet on our side who are interested in joining me. I am not sure whether we have those issues resolved or not. As soon as Senator WARNER returns to this Chamber, we might be able to get a final agreement on that.

Mr. REID. Mr. President. I would say we are losing ground. A little while ago we only had one Member who was concerned; now we have two. This has been going on literally all this day. I repeat, I certainly understand the point by my friend from Colorado, but the fact is, we need to move this legislation. This does not prevent anyone from offering an amendment. They can offer amendments to their heart’s content. But we need a list of finite amendments so the managers can work on these amendments to move this legislation forward. I think it is really too bad that we can’t get a final list of these amendments. Senator WARNER and Senator LEVIN have worked very hard on this legislation. It is important—I repeat—to this institution and to the country to get this legislation passed.

So I am very disappointed we were not able to do this. I hope we can do it at some subsequent time. And I hope that subsequent time is not far in the future.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be ordered to be printed this day of September, 2001, in the Senate. If unanimous consent is granted, the Senate shall then consider the bill at 9:30 a.m. tomorrow, Tuesday, September 25, following the usual opening activities, the Senate resume consideration of S. 1438, the Department of Defense authorization bill; that there be 15 minutes remaining for debate prior to a motion to table the Bunning amendment, with the time equally divided and controlled in the usual form, provided no second-degree amendments be in order prior to the vote.

I would say, before I put this to the Chair in final form, that the managers of the bill are being very gracious in doing this. People tonight can debate this amendment as long as they wish. Either manager, or any anyone else, of course, could move to table at any time. So I think this is certainly generous on behalf of the two managers. People would have all night tonight to debate. We would come in tomorrow morning and have a vote on a motion to table. So I propound this request.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection?

Mr. BUNNING. I object. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I again—Mr. BUNNING. May I state my objection?

Mr. REID. Of course.

Mr. BUNNING. I really have not had a chance to talk to the minority leader.

Mr. REID. OK.

Mr. BUNNING. As soon as I speak with him, I will get back to you.

Mr. REID. I express my appreciation to the Senator from Kentucky.

Mr. BUNNING. Thank you.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from North Dakota.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, this amendment deals with an issue that is not new to any of us. We have long debated the issue of base closures and the establishment of a BRAC commission for the purpose of base closures. In fact, we have had previous base closure rounds in 1988, 1991, 1993, and 1995. In those rounds, 451 installations, including 97 major installations, were ordered closed or realigned by the year 2001. And the last two big installations, Kunsan and McClellan, Air Force Bases, were closed this past summer.

Now even though most of those installations have been closed or realigned, only 41 percent of the unneeded base property has, in fact, been transferred. Those base closures, over all of that period of time, only 41 percent of the unneeded base property has been transferred.

It takes years to dispose of this property. And, principally, the reason for that is the strict environmental cleanup standards which are very costly and very expensive. In fact, I find it interesting, according to pages 118 and 119 of the Department of Defense’s 1998 Report on Base Realignment and Closure, the first several years after a base closure, the additional costs to the government, not savings.

For the 1993 BRAC round, a net cost to the Federal Government—not a net savings—a net cost was incurred for the first 3 years beginning in the year 1994.

If you take a look at the 1995 BRAC round, you find exactly the same thing. The BRAC-related costs exceeded savings by $1.5 billion for five years from fiscal year 1996 to 2000.

One might make the case, if you skip over the next 3–5 years you will find some savings from a new round of base closures. Maybe so, although lying out there is the disposal of almost 40 percent of all the property that has not yet been disposed of because of the environmental cleanup costs. So one wonders exactly what these savings are. They are certainly not in the next 3–5 years.

Those who make the point that there is an urgency to close these bases, at a time when we desperately need investment in the Department of Defense, are probably going to end up costing the Department of Defense additional money through base closures if we, in fact, decide to approve another round.

I support this amendment to strike the base closure provisions from the underlying bill for two reasons. One is military, and the other is economic. First, the military side of things.

We do not know what the force structure is going to be in the Department of Defense. There is a quadrennial review that is going on, but at this point no one in this Chamber knows what the force structure is going to be. If you do not know what the force structure is going to be, how do you know what the base structure should be? How do you know what kind of facilities for military operations you need if you do not know what kind of military force you are going to have?

Will this military force change as a result of the tragedies that occurred on September 11? Probably. Will we—when we see now a renewed attention to homeland security and homeland defense—will we be more concerned about the issue of bases in this country? Where they are located? Whether they are strong in & strong? Whether they are needed or not needed? Will all that change? I think it will.

But the main point is this: If you do not know what your force structure is, how can you be talking about your base structure? The Department of Defense is already saying our base structure is way out of line, even though they don't know their force structure.

I deeply respect the men and women in uniform. God bless them. I want to give them everything they need to do their job in preserving liberty and fighting for freedom. But we don't need a new BRAC round to find savings in the Pentagon. We all know there are areas of inefficiency in the Pentagon. I won't add dozens of communities, all you one instance I have dealt with in the last 6 months, just as an example. I say this only to say that if there are worries about efficiency, let's go find where money is being wasted hand over foot.

We have 5,700 trailers that were manufactured for the U.S. Army. They had a problem with the brake actuator. The result is, they put 5,700 trailers in storage facilities, and they were there for years. It turns out in fact, in addition to a brake actuator that didn't work on the hitch, the bumpers on the Humvees that were supposed to pull the trailers weren't strong enough. They hooked these things up to the Humvee, and it broke the Humvee. You talk about waste. There is a lot of waste, a lot of inefficiency. I think we ought to go at that. I don't think it ought to be business as usual with respect to the waste of the taxpayers' money.

With respect to the question of which bases are strong in the future of this country, which bases might be important with respect to homeland security, I don't think we know the answer to that at this point. We certainly don't know what the force structure is, so how on Earth would we know what the base structure should be?

Economic circumstances have really changed with respect to this country's economy. We had a very soft economy prior to the tragedy on September 11. That economy has turned more than years from now if that base is ordered closed. From a military standpoint and economic standpoint, I think this is a very inappropriate and unwise judgment. That is what will happen if we approve the base closure provision in this bill.

The amendment I support simply says, let's strip that provision out.

My point remains: How can you realign and create a base structure before you know what your force structure is? And we don't know that. No one in the Senate, no one in the Congress and, for that matter, no one in the Pentagon yet understands what our force structure is going to be.

It might very well be the case—I suspect it will—following the tragedy of September 11, we might have a very different view of the base structure in this country relating to homeland security and homeland defense. If that is the case, it will change the views of Congress and the Pentagon about what our missions ought to be and where they ought to be placed. At this point I believe strongly that we ought to do the right thing, and the right thing is to take this out of the bill. Pass this amendment.

My colleague, for whom I have great affection, said that, if we strip this out of the bill, we will be sending a signal that it is business as usual in the Congress. It is not that, with due respect. It is not that. Business as usual is the way we used to think. Everyone in this Chamber and in the Congress ought to be prepared to think differently about these issues. We have a quadrennial review commission that will evaluate whether any and every base in this country shall be a candidate for closure. That makes no sense to me.

Let me make a couple of additional points. The term they are now using to create a BRAC is "efficient facilities initiative," which as an acronym is pronounced "iffy." I really don't like acronyms very much. This particular one I don't like a lot. "Iffy" probably describes the difficulty, the serious difficulty, virtually every community in this country that hosts a military installation will have with respect to its future and the consequences of this Congress unleashing another round of base closures.

One of my colleagues said: This doesn't really create a round, it just authorizes a round. On its face it creates a round. There is no difference between authorization and creating one. If we don't pass this amendment and it strip out the base closure provision, we will have a new round of base closures. And if we have a base closing round, I am certain it will have significant consequences on this country's economy, beginning immediately. The minute the Congress enacts legislation and it is signed, every single community in this country that hosts a military installation is going to see its investment deteriorate. It is the worst possible result for this country's economy.

Aside from that, as I said, the issue is not just economics, and should not be. The issue is also military. Given the circumstances with our new needs in homeland defense and given the fact that we don't know what the military force structure is going to be, this Congress should not at this point. I am going to go right back to the same old cry on the floor of the Senate that we need to unleash a base closing commission that will evaluate whether any and every base in this country shall be a candidate for closure. That makes no sense to me.

I ask unanimous consent that at 9:30 a.m. on Tuesday, September 25, following the usual opening activities, the that the administration has authority in this discussion; that is, the point ways thought got too little attention going to be as we move ahead. We may military facilities, not knowing pre-recent weeks, it strikes me as incon-quality of life for the people in uniform accommodate them at that time. It is that would require that personnel and equipment and their families be brought home, and we may well need the various facilities in this country to accommodate them at that time. It is another aspect of the uncertainty that we face in going forward. Clearly, there are other aspects of that uncertainty that we also need to take into account.
Let me also raise the obvious issue about the impact that closing bases and realigning bases has on morale and quality of life for the people in uniform
To do a lot of it that advancing and locating that goes on when you are in the military. I think we have all observed that, and we see that in our own States. But that relocating is added to very substantially when you go through this process of doing a major realignment and closure of a whole raft of bases. So that needs to be taken into account in determining whether this is the right time to be pursuing this course of action.
Among those who support setting up a new commission on realignment and closure, we hear a lot about savings.
They say the reason we are doing this is that this will give us extra money in the defense budget to meet these urgent needs. Several Senators have already made these savings are fairly illusory when you get down to looking at them. The costs of closing bases and realigning bases can be very substantial. When the Department of Defense was closing bases in the 1990s, there were expenditures—identifiable expenditures—of over $3 billion during 1994, 1995, and 1996. The Congressional Budget Office cited the Department of Defense estimates that an average round of base realignment and closure could average costing more than $1 billion each year in the first 3 years after that process begins.
I think what people are not focusing on is that these extra costs—if we approve this provision as it comes to the Senate floor, these extra costs that can be incurred if going forward with this issue are not in the budgets we have been given by the Department of De-Fense so far. If the Congress approves another round of base realignment and closure, those upfront additional costs have to come out of another portion of funds that are identified for the Department of Defense. It could be procurement of weaponry, it could be readiness, and it could be research and it could be for involvement in our force structure in the future. Those choices, which are already hard to make, become even harder if we lay these additional billions of dollars of expense on the defense budget. So the upfront cost problem is a very real problem and needs to be taken into account.
Supporters of BRAC, as I mentioned before, refer to the billion dollars in savings; there will be savings and I recognize that. But the problem is that long time in the future. According to the Department of Defense estimates, the Department did not begin to show overall net savings for the first four rounds of base realignment and closure until at least 10 years after the first round of the base realignment and closure was approved in 1988. So there may be savings, but we need to recognize that those are far in the future, and that for the next several years will be added on top of the military, which they will have to take out of some other activity in which they are engaged. I believe the timing is wrong for this issue.
From a national security standpoint, it does not make sense to me to commit ourselves to reducing our base infrastucture, with all of the uncertainty we have about what that base infrastructure ought to be as we move forward. It also doesn’t make sense to undertake significant new spending that is not currently in the Department of Defense budget when future budgets promise to be tighter and our economy clearly is more fragile than we thought it was several months ago.
All of this we are doing, or proposing to do, in the hope we will have savings in the far distant future.
In my view, that is not an adequate justification for going forward with another base realignment and closure commission. I hope the Senate will support the amendment Senator LOTT and Senator BUNNING have put forward on this issue. I yield the floor.
Mr. NELSON of Florida, Mr. President, I rise to oppose the amendment and to support our chairman, Senator Levin, and our ranking member, Senator Warner, and to support our Secretary of Defense, Donald Rumsfeld, who has written a very clear letter to all of us, which Senator Warner has already read into the RECORD, setting forth his reasons why we need to consider realignment and closure of some bases.

We have close to 400 bases in the United States. With a reorganization of the force structure, it is very clearly stated by the Secretary of Defense that we don’t need all of those bases, and that there would be substantial savings from closing some of them.

Now, is any Senator up here going to want any base closed in his or her particular State? Of course not.

Are all of us, with such a recommendation for closure, going to fight like the dickens to keep that base open in your particular State? Of course we are. But we are judging a question not within the myopic lens of just the interest of our own States but, rather, from the view as Senators looking at protection and providing for the common defense of the country.

I have heard a number of our colleagues talk about this very sad tragedy of September 11 as a justification for not closing bases. It seems to me it is a justification for exactly the opposite: that it is a justification for recognizing that we need to be smart in how we are going to allocate the funds that are clearly going to be needed for the defense of this country, and that we best utilize and direct those funds in combating this terrible plague that has now beset not only us but the entire world, and that is this plague of terrorism.

I wanted to add my voice to perhaps what is an unpopular point of view. Indeed, if one of our bases ends up on the closure list, I will be making the pitch, if one of our bases ends up on the closure list, I will be making the pitch, that is in the best interest of our country in the allocation of the dollars that are appropriated for the Department of Defense. If we can save some that can be allocated more to the prosecution of this war against terrorism, then, in this Senator’s judgment, that is in the best interest of our country.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Arizona.

Mr. McCain. Mr. President, I thank my colleague from Florida. He is a man who has served his country in a variety of capacities and understands the military, the men and women in the military, better than any other Senator. None of us who have a significant number of bases—such as is the case in the State of Florida, as is the case in the State of Arizona—that are very important to the economy of our States enjoy this exercise. I respect the views of those who are supporters of the amendment, including the sponsor himself, who is an experienced individual having served in the House and now in the Senate and has been involved in these issues of national security.

We have an honest difference of opinion. I believe this is a good debate to have. I respect—I repeat, I respect—the views articulated by those who are supporters of the amendment. But I do think this is a defining vote. The President of the United States has clearly asked for the authority to close unnecessary bases. The Secretary of Defense has spoken in the strongest terms. Our civilian and military leaders of the services have spoken in the strongest terms. Every objective observer recognizes that we need to have a base closing process.

There are several arguments that are being made in behalf of the amendment of the Senator from Kentucky. One is we can’t afford it, and the argument is that those who support closure, going to the State of Kentucky, hold the sickle to the most vital hospital. We know we have excess infrastructure. An April 1998 report from the Department of Defense on base closure required by the Congress found that the Department still maintains excess capacity that should be eliminated.

We know having more facilities to run costs more money, and having fewer facilities to run costs less. Excess infrastructure is a drain on resources and the military services are struggling. I quoted earlier from testimony given to the House Armed Services Committee by the people who are responsible for these installations.

Some of the conditions at these bases are deplorable. None of us would want to live and work under the conditions which they presently have, and this does have an effect on morale, which then does have an effect on retention of good men and women in the military. That is why we need them. Now more than any time perhaps since December 7, 1941.

We know the Base Closure Commission used to reduce that excess in an impartial way not only works well but is considered a model for others to follow. Many times I hear we ought to have a commission on Social Security along the lines of the Base Closure Commission so Congress can vote up or down. It has been a model.

We know the military has unmet needs that have higher priority than preserving our current base structure. The fact is DOD has excess facilities; that closing bases saves money; that the military has other pressing needs for those savings, and BRAC is the fair way to know how to reduce the excess. I point out, I do not think it is totally fair. As long as you have human beings making these decisions, it will not be a totally fair process. There will be some subjectivity, but for me, some one has to come up with a more objective way. The only way I know is crank all the information into a computer, and I do not think we are quite ready for that process.

People keep saying: We don’t know if closing bases really saves money. The Department of Defense says they will have achieved a net savings of $15 billion by the end of this fiscal year from the previous base closure rounds, with another $6 billion in savings each and every year thereafter. The things that costs money that was not anticipated was the environmental cleanup costs. We found out that on these bases, particularly those that were built during World War II and before, in some cases there were enormous environmental problems. Those were additional costs associated with closing those facilities.

My response to that is, no, we did not anticipate that, but should we want to leave these environmental problems alone? Shouldn’t we have cleaned them up already? Were we asking our active duty military men and women to work in places that were environmental hazards, perhaps even to their health? These measures should have been taken while the bases were still open.

We do not save money. We do not know there are environmental costs, but I would argue those environmental steps should be taken on every base in America whether they are open or closed. Why should we expect a military base to put up with an environmental situation which is not acceptable off the military base? Some people say DOD has not proved that is the right number. This is because the BRAC savings costs you avoid does not mean the savings are not real. The more bases you have, the more you have to spend. We know that.

We have to wait for Secretary Rumsfeld to finish all his strategy reviews before we authorize any new base closures. The fact is, we are now under-manned, under-serviced, and we have to go from here. The President himself, who is an experienced individual having served in the House and now in the Senate and has been involved in these issues of national security. I believe this is a good debate to have. I respect—I repeat, I respect—the views articulated by those who are supporters of the amendment. But I do think this is a defining vote. leave. That is basically the kind of military we need to meet the challenges and win the first war of the 21st century.

So, yes, there is restructure in the military; yes, we need more high-tech equipment; yes, we need more of some kinds of equipment. We need less of others. But no one believes we will go back to a military of the size that would create the number of the bases we have today.

I do not believe the Secretary of Defense would have written the letter he did yesterday that says I want to underscore the importance we place on the Senate’s approval of authority for a single round of base closures and alignments. Indeed, in the wake of the terrible events of September 11, the imperative to convert excess capacity and warfighting ability is enhanced, not diminished.

I repeat, the imperative to convert excess capacity into warfighting ability is enhanced, not diminished.

I want to bring up another issue that is kind of important, although perhaps from a national security standpoint it is not too important, but that is the economic impact it has on the local communities. There is the belief it devastates the local community. If a base is closed, it can go well, and it can go badly. There are many cases where the local communities put together a good reuse plan and they are as well off or even better off after the closure of an installation.

The Congress and the Defense Department have taken steps, since the last base closure round, to speed up the disposal of property for any future rounds.

In the majority of bases that were closed, there has been an increase both of employment as well as revenues into the local communities. Why is that? One reason is that in a lot of cases you have a nice runway, and an air facility is readily available then for usage; in the case of Williams Air Force Base, in the case of many others. Another reason is, you have recreational facilities, such as a golf course. You have buildings. You have an infrastructure there that businesses, education, and others have chosen to move into.

There is another argument that it is not fair to put every community with a base through all the anxiety of BRAC when we only need to close some of them, so we ought to change the process and take some bases we know we will not want to close off the list, certain bases that will not be closed under any circumstances.

On the surface it sounds like a good idea. Anybody could name 20 bases we would not want to see closed. But who decides which 20 bases cannot even be looked at, what criteria would be used, and how do you put 20 bases on the list and say no to the 21st or the 40th or the 100th?

I have every confidence the Norfolk naval base will not be closed. I do not see how the Navy could exist without it. Could Luke Air Force Base be closed? It is the only place where F-16 pilots are trained today. I am not so sure. Should Luke Air Force Base be in the top 20? I hope so. But maybe not. Maybe this BRAC could figure they could consolidate F-16 and F-15 training together in one base. So that is not, I believe, a procedure that could delay us. So I support it.

There is another issue that is important: Closing bases will deprive military retirees of access to health care, and that happens. Not only health care but commissary facilities and others. That is one of the reasons we induce people to join the military because they will receive benefits and have access to military bases after they are retired. They have reduced retiree health care options, but the TRICARE For Life Program enacted in the fiscal year 2001 Defense authorization will address this issue by providing a quality benefit package that allows military retirees to get care from civilian doctors. This was a big step forward. It also allows the services in the Base Closure Commission to focus fully on the military value of each base.

I know if Luke Air Force Base were closed, a lot of retirees who use the commissary, use the other facilities, would be deprived. I feel very bad about that, but at least we have taken care to some degree, of their most important needs, and that is health care they would otherwise get at these installations.

So we have been through this debate for years. We have been through this debate since I came to the Congress in 1983. We had a series of base closures, and unneeded and unwanted and unnecessary bases were closed. If we had not gone through that process and left a number of bases open that had been closed through the BRAC process, I cannot imagine the costs that would be entailed today.

I note with some interest the Secretary of Defense is asking for one more round. Perhaps we are getting close to the point where we will not need any more rounds of base closings, but every study, every objective observer, every person I know of—and there may be some who do not, but I do not know of any who are military experts who are admired and respected by the people of this country who think we need another round of BRAC.

Again, I want to point out—and this is a very important point—it is very difficult for us to recruit and maintain a quality military force if they are living in facilities that are inadequate and sometimes unsatisfactory. I mentioned the issue of environmental cleanup. It is obvious now, because of the base closure process, that many of the men and women in the military were working and living in areas that were environmentally unsafe, if not hazardous. So the quality of life does have a significant impact on the efficiency of our military.

We will be asking men and women in the military to go out and fight and perhaps sacrifice their lives. It seems to me the least we can do is make sure their quality of life, both at home and overseas, is at a level we would want for all of us, our families and our friends and particularly those brave young Americans who are going to ask to serve and sacrifice in the future.

Is this a life-or-death issue? No, it is not a life-or-death issue. We will muddle through if the Bunning amendment is passed. As I said earlier, I think this sends a signal that could be very wrong, and that is that on a major issue, according to the Secretary of Defense and our uniformed and civilian leaders, we do need a base closing commission, we are not prepared to do otherwise. I think that would be a very serious error on our part.

So I hope we will defeat the Bunning amendment.

I want to thank Senator Levin, the distinguished chairman of the committee, for his unstinting and unrelenting support of this issue. He and I have tried to get this done for a number of years now, and our track record, like mine on several other issues, has not been exemplary, but I think we now have an opportunity.

I thank Senator Levin again for his leadership and his willingness to be involved in this issue. I am aware in the State of Michigan there are bases that could be closed, as there are in any State.

I thank all of those who support this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I hope I did not cause the Senator from Arizona to go back and rewrite his argument prior to when he planned to. I did not mean to do that.

Senator Daschle has asked me to announce there will be no more rollcall votes tonight. We also hope, if there is a lull in the debate regarding this base closing issue that Senators offer amendments on other matters, and we would arrange a time to vote on those tomorrow.

We are going to renew our request for a finite list of amendments. We had great difficulty getting that. We are sorry the minority has objected to that. This is a bill that is of the utmost importance, and it appears now there are people who do not want this legislation to go forward, which I think sends a terrible message to the American people.

Mr. LEVIN. Will the Senator from Nevada yield for a question?

Mr. REID. Yes.

Mr. LEVIN. If Senators come forward tonight with other amendments, if the BRAC debate ends at a reasonable hour, would it be possible for those amendments not agreed to, to have votes on those amendments, stacked immediately after the BRAC motion to table tomorrow morning?

Mr. REID. It may be difficult because the Army has said it is coming before the Judiciary Committee at 10 o'clock. It is a very important meeting. With all he has on his plate, we should not keep him waiting. We will work to arrange the votes as quickly as possible. Mr. McCaskill is the Senate yield?

Mr. REID. I am happy to yield.

Mr. McCAIN. I was prepared and I think Senator LEVIN was prepared to offer a motion to table very shortly. Is that out of the question at this time?

Mr. REID. I say to my friend from Arizona, we have a vote scheduled at 9:45 in the morning. People said they wanted more time to debate this. Although, as I announced prior to entering into that consent agreement, anyone at any time can move to table, but in consideration of the importance of this issue, we thought it would be best that everyone have everything they have to say tonight.

Mr. McCAIN. I thank the Senator.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. ROCKEFELLER). The Senator from New York.

Mrs. CLINTON. Mr. President, I, too, thank the chairman and ranking member and a number of our distinguished colleagues who have risen to support and oppose the Bunning amendment. I believe many Members in this Chamber either had no well-informed or formed opinion prior to September 11, or, perhaps, were inclined to support a new round of base realignment closings. It is with some regret that I rise in support of the amendment from the Senator from Kentucky. I believe after September 11, it is imperative we have more information available than we currently have.

There are many arguments that have already been made on the floor; very good ones, from our colleagues from Arizona, Rhode Island, Delaware, and Florida, as to what efficiency issues should take precedence. I agree we need to constantly be evaluating our defense budget and expenditures, to become as efficient as possible. Yet I also believe there are serious security concerns we are only beginning to address. I take very seriously the Secretary's letter which has been referred to and which has been read into the Record;

I believe my colleague from New Mexico, Senator BINGAMAN, is correct in saying the President and the Secretary have inherent power to realign, depending upon the needs we face in any kind of strategic or emergency situation.

We are about to engage in a broad-scale reevaluation of our homeland defense and security. We are going to be asking ourselves some very tough questions about our readiness, about the proper intersection between our domestic policing agencies and functions and our military.

At this point, I think there are several factors that have to be addressed in addition to the request of the Department of Defense and the recommendation of the Department of Homeland Security. Committee before many Members would be comfortable voting for a new round. I am not sure the new round, if it is only a Defense Department review, will adequately look at some of these other broader issues that the Army may have implications for both physical infrastructure and force deployment.

Some have said the QDR, which is expected by the end of this month, is out of date now. I don't believe that is the case, at least from what I am told and read in the paper; that the quadrennial review that the Department has been undertaking will have some very significant recommendations that should be digested and taken into account with respect to moving forward on another round of base realignments and closings.

It is important we integrate our domestic and military capacities in a way we have never had to think about before. Many were deeply concerned when we read reports of the short time, but nevertheless, unfortunately delayed time, that it took to scramble fighters into the air to try to deal with the impending threat and the potential threat that might have still been out there from additional hijackers.

I don't know that the BRAC round has the substantive understanding or impact that we have had in years past, given the new threats we have so tragically suffered. I would be very confident and supportive of our chairman and ranking member and members of the Armed Services Committee, working with the administration, coming up with a proposal that does make some sense.

I listened very carefully to the comments of the Senator from Arizona—maybe certain bases should be taken off the table. Maybe they should. That is something we have never talked about before, but in the context of the new threats we face, I think we have to think differently. It may be we may have a BRAC round where some bases would be off the table, some of the assets that we have would be put to one side and we say they are essential to homeland security and they are essential to our projection of force abroad.

Therefore, any BRAC round would not look at those. That might be an idea worth considering because I think everything changed on September 11. A threat that was not understood as being so deadly and imminent has caused such terrible destruction and tragedy.

I, for one, will support the Bunning amendment at this time because I think we have to reevaluate what we mean when we think about closing bases and realigning our forces. No one should argue about the efficiency measures that need to be taken, so that we do, No. 1, get the most effective use of our dollars; and, No. 2, provide the kind of infrastructure and resources that our all-volunteer military needs.

I am concerned at this point we may not be ready for the "son of" BRAC. There may be the need to rethink how we get to the level of bases that are required. I think perhaps for the first time we have to seriously take into account the new mission that the President has given for homeland security, to make sure there is, if necessary, the kind of integration that will make us safe at home as well as abroad in terms of America's values, interests, and security.

I rise with some regret because I have the greatest of respect for our chairman, our ranking member, and those who support this request. Another round. I probably will very much end up supporting it, but only after we give the kind of thought I think is required today, to take into account the new threats and perhaps do it differently than we have done it before after we carefully evaluate what kind of presence we need, taking into account homeland security. I would support that kind of approach. That is not what is being proposed at this time. I urge my colleagues to support the Bunning amendment.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas.

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, I think it is important we go back and outline how the base-closing commission works. In listening to this debate, we get the idea that by continuing a process of having a base-closing commission, that the commission simply takes on its own head and imposes the closing of bases without regard to the thinking of the President, without regard to the wishes of the Secretary of Defense.

Let me remind my colleagues how the process works. How the process works is, you set up a structure and nothing happens until the President and the Secretary of Defense come forward and say, we believe for these reasons that these bases should be realigned, closed, restructured, merged, et cetera.

Nothing happens until the President makes the proposal.

Look, I understand base closings. We have closed bases in my State. I have a lot of bases. I am proud of every one of them. I love every one of them. And nothing is harder than watching communities that sacrificed and supported the military and helped win the cold war, and then through base closing and realignment we end up closing the base and imposing a very heavy burden on the community. I understand that. I identify with it. I have seen it in flesh and blood in my State.

But the bottom line is we have 20 to 25 percent excessive capacity in military bases in America today. I was for... the Base Closing Commission process before the 11th, but I am stronger for it now. The arguments for it today are stronger than they were then because we now see why resources moved into areas where they can support the defense of the American people and into nontraditional areas.

The first proposal the new Secretary of Defense made as part of his military realignment and restructuring was the renewal of the Base Closing Commission process that we had under a Democrat and a Republican President. If we come in now and simply say we forbid them from undertaking this process—we forbid the President and the Secretary of Defense from looking at our new situation and saying that based on where we were before the 11th, based on what happened on the 11th, based on the challenge we face today, we need to close or realign these bases and we want Congress to have to have this evaluated and to have Congress vote up or down, yes or no in response to that evaluation—if we come in and take the first proposal the Secretary of Defense has made and say no, we are not going to do it, it seems to me we are basically saying we do not want to restructure the military and we are going to look at our interests in our States and we are going to say those interests supersede the national security interests of the United States.

There are two sides of every argument. I know there are good arguments on the other side, and they are going to be made persuasively. But let me just sum up.

We have 20 to 25 percent excessive capacity in military bases, and I cannot foresee or imagine a circumstance under which that will not grow as a result of the conflict that started on the 11th. No base could be considered for base closing by the Commission unless it meets the needs of the Korean conflict, but the needs of the military today. In the end, if we do not agree with the process, if after we go through their recommendation and the outside evaluation of people who are appointed to the Commission, confirmed by the Senate, evaluated independently—if we disagree with it, we can reject it.

But I think it is very important that we not reject the only reform proposal that has come before the Congress since the new administration took office. I accept this amendment today basically to say to them: Forget about this reform because the first one you proposed, we say no to.

I hope this amendment will be rejected. I am not sure that it will be, but I hope it will be.

I would also like to say, while I have Senator Levin here in the Chamber, I thank him for his leadership on this issue. I would like to make a plea to him.

He and I, out of the best of intentions, have for the last half dozen years engaged in a battle about the Prison Industries. I am not going to give a long speech on it today. I will have plenty of opportunities if we do not work something out to do that. But for the first half dozen years we have had a running debate. I believe people in prison ought to work. I think the evidence of decline in recidivism of people who are in Prison Industries is overwhelming. No less an authority than de Tocqueville, when he came to America in the 1830s to study American prisons, commented on the importance of prison labor and prison industry.

Senator Levin and I have had a running debate about this issue. I want to preserve the prison industry system. He wants to—I would say “kill it,” but I will say “dramatically change it,” in this new spirit of bipartisanship. It is an important issue. It is one that deserves to be debated. There are two sides of the issue. Strong arguments can be made on both sides.

But my plea to Senator Levin is, this is not the year or the time or the bill, it seems to me, on which to have this debate. I hope we can set aside this divisive issue on which the Senate has been roughly evenly divided. I think in the 6 years or so we have debated this issue, Prison Industries has survived by a handful of votes in each and every one of those years.

I hope we can wait and debate this next year or the year after. We do not have to debate it this year. I think this is an impediment to seeing this important bill pass.

I would just call on the better angels of his heart to let us set this issue aside with a guarantee that next year or the year after we will have a hot debate on it and we will each present our side of the argument and we can decide then on prison labor and prison industries in the Defense Department. But I think, with all we have gone on, with all the major issues, this is not a good use of our time.

So being here to support the chair on this issue of base closing, I simply wanted to make my appeal that we put off this divisive issue of prison labor for another day. Next year we will do another Defense authorization bill. We can debate this divisive issue then. Hopefully this war will be well underway and we will be in the process of restructuring. If he and I would do that, this Member would greatly appreciate it. All the prisoners who are working would appreciate it. But I would appreciate it if we would eliminate this divisive issue and speed up the process of moving ahead with this bill.

I yield the floor.
Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, I know there are a lot of other people who want to talk. One of the compromises that I would be satisfied with is to have us deal with the Defense Department on procuring—competition with Prison Industries but let prison labor within the constraints of not selling locally, which could disrupt the local economy, and not glut the markets, if it were an insurance and sell things in the private sector.

If we could generate that, the problem is the practical impact of the policy that we have. 1.2 million people in jail—almost all of them males in their prime, productive period—and the net result of the amendment is that the relatively few who are working won’t be working. So they can’t sell in the private sector. If you take away from them the right to sell to the largest Government customer, then there is no prisoner labor.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I will correct my friend. This is not a question of a right to sell to the customer. They have been right to sell to the customer.

Mr. GRAMM. The right to sell in the private sector.

Mr. LEVIN. That is what we tell China—that we don’t want China to use prison labor to make products to sell to us and that compete with us. We tell China that we don’t want prison labor to make products that come into this country and compete with us. But my friend from Texas wants us to use domestic prison labor.

Mr. GRAMM. Absolutely I do. Why shouldn’t prisoners be paid to work?

Mr. LEVIN. They are being paid about 35 cents an hour. No one in the private sector can compete for a job if he has to compete with prison labor on that basis.

Let me say that I fundamentally disagree with the Senator from Texas on that issue. I think it is important that language in this bill. The issue in the language in this bill has to do with simply allowing the private sector to compete. This is one of those cases where the AFL-CIO and the U.S. Chamber of Commerce and the NFIB are in total agreement. We can debate this later. It is not often that you get those organizations together. But in this case they are because the issue is so fundamental. Will our private sector be allowed to bid on Government purchases or can the Federal Prison Industries have a monopoly on some items even though they are charging the Government more despite their 50-cents-an-hour payment on labor—whatever they pay—despite the fact they make benefit payments to the prisoners. Despite all of that, in many cases they still are charging the Government more than the private sector can charge the Government. Let the private sector, for heaven’s sake, bid on items which their own Government is buying. It is unthinkable to me.

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, I am little unsure where we are. I am not sure on the issue. However, I and many of us here worked very hard to pass a fair bill last year to allow for the private sector to bid and compete for Government business rather than doing it by outsourcing. I think there are a lot of other things that we can charge the Government. Let the private sector do to continue to work. This is matter of competition.

I ask the Senator from Michigan: Did the Senator from Texas agree to pull his amendment? What is the agreement?

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I am happy that is not quite the way I heard him at this time. Perhaps we will be able to figure out some approach where this matter can be resolved.

I emphasize that the right to compete with the private sector is in the bill. The amendment which will be offered would have to be written with language that allows competition in the bill.

Mr. THOMAS. We are prepared to talk about that.

Mr. SESSIONS. Mr. President, I ask the distinguished chairman: But it does change current law to provide for additional competitive strictures on the Federal prison system. Is that correct?

Mr. LEVIN. No. It allows competition where there is none now. The Federal prison system now can declare a monopoly for something, and declare that no private sector can bid on an item that it wants to supply to the Federal Government. That prevents the private sector from bidding. We would say that is not right. Let the private sector bid, and if the Prison Industries folks can produce it cheaper or better, fine. But if they can’t, and the private sector can produce it cheaper or better, then the private sector ought to be allowed to compete.

Mr. SESSIONS. But it would alter current law. Under current law, the plan has been for Prison Industries to produce products for sale to the Federal Government thereby improving prison conditions and receiving some financial benefit to the prison.

Mr. LEVIN. That part doesn’t change. They can still produce what they want but they wouldn’t be allowed to declare a monopoly so nobody else could compete for that product.

Mr. SESSIONS. I remember not too many years ago that I met an individual who I had prosecuted as a Federal prosecutor. He served a number of years in the federal system, and he said to me: If you need a witness, call me because I have been in prison where prisoners work, and I have been in prisons where they don’t work. And it is a lot better where they are working. It is when you go to the chow line at 6 o’clock in the afternoon, there are no fights, and no shoving or pushing. People are tired and want to get their food and go to the cell and go to bed.

Mr. LEVIN. I have a tough call for me because I believe in competition. And I am wrestling with this vote. I understand the Senator’s concern about it. But I believe deeply that we have to ensure that prisoners work. There are forces out there that want to shut it off at every angle. But at some point we need these prisoners working, for their benefit and for America’s benefit. I don’t know how they can’t be competitive with the advantages they have. That is why I am thinking to support the Senator’s amendment on the theory that they would probably tighten things up and get competitive if it passed. But they certainly need to work.

I thank the Senator from Michigan.

for the DD-21 Zumwalt land attack destroyer program is also included in this bill. This is particularly important in light of the House’s unfortunate decision to cut the DD-21 authorization for the coming fiscal year.

DD-21 will be vital to assure and sustain access to areas of U.S. interests overseas. It will do so very efficiently, with a target crew size of less than 100 and other design innovations that result in significant life-cycle cost reductions over the current destroyer program. The U.S. security strategy to defeat adversaries that seek to deny us access to littoral regions of the world will be critically dependent on U.S. ships that are harder to target and attack, and on weapons systems that can deliver combat power ashore.

The Seapower Subcommittee also allocated substantial resources to strengthen aviation assets in the areas of airlift, as well as for patrol, reconnaissance and surveillance platforms. The bill authorizes nearly $90 million in additional funding to sustain readiness for C-17 maintenance trainers and improved shipboard navigation radars, among other items. Additionally, the bill provides more than $170 million to improve the ability of U.S. forces to operate in littoral environments. These modifications to the P-3 aircraft will ensure that the aging P-3 aircraft can continue to respond relevant to the changing threat and operational environment.

The Subcommittee on Emerging Threats and Capabilities has spent a great deal of time this year analyzing the military’s ability to meet non-traditional threats. This bill continues to improve the ability of U.S. forces to deter and defend against a very real, asymmetrical and growing terrorist threat. Tragically, we have learned just how real the threat has become. The threat is not “emerging”; unfortunately, it is real and present.

In light of the recent terrorist attacks and testimony of the military regional Commanders-in-Chief, I believe that we must do more in the areas of force protection, antiterrorism, counter-terrorism training, and research and development in order to protect U.S. forces against weapons of mass destruction, and to help them support domestic efforts to manage the deadly consequences of terrorist attacks on our homeland.

The awful events of September 11th should highlight the urgency of ensuring that this area receives the attention it deserves. In this new “war” against terrorism, such programs are our front lines.

The Emerging Threats and Capabilities Subcommittee sought to improve capabilities to meet non-traditional threats by encouraging the development of technology for the detection, identification, and measurement of weapons of mass destruction agents, investing in research initiatives that will detect biological and chemical weapons, and funding the terrorism readiness initiatives of the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

This bill demonstrates our commitment to reexamine and bolster our efforts to combat terrorism and to extend the Defense Department’s emphasis on non-traditional threats overseas to include better protection at home as well. One of the first hearings held by the Senate Armed Services Committee this year, for example, focused on “lessons learned” from the attack upon the destroyer USS Cole, which had killed 17 sailors. Tragically, we will now have many more lessons to learn.

The Subcommittee on Emerging Threats also has been examining the role of civil support teams in dealing with terrorist attacks and upon broad-based training to prepare for “homeland defense.” This work has been eye-opening, and the tragic events of the past few days underscore, as perhaps nothing else could, how important it is to support the Defense Department’s efforts in these areas.

I am pleased with the work of our Personnel Subcommittee as well. The bill we are considering fully funds the Tricare for Life, TFL, initiative authorized in the FY 2001 National Defense Authorization Act, while also improving the compensation and quality of life of U.S. forces and families. The committee added $700 million to the budget request to improve compensation and quality of life, including additional funds to reduce service members’ out-of-pocket housing costs, to increase higher education opportunities, and to provide personal gear to improve the safety and comfort of U.S. forces in the field.

Effective January 1, 2002, every service member will receive a pay raise of at least 5 percent, and personnel in certain pay grades will receive targeted pay raises ranging between 6 and 10 percent. These will be the largest increases in military pay since 1982. Pursuant, the bill supports the budget request of $17.9 billion for the Defense Health Program, which represents a significant increase in order to meet rising costs of medical care and increased benefits for military retirees.

While it is our responsibility to exercise our best judgment regarding the security of our Nation, we must do so while considering the administration’s current priorities, as well as the emergent needs of our sailors, soldiers, airmen, and marines. In this time of conflicting pressures, any and every initiative needs to be carefully considered in the wake of traditional and non-traditional threats.

With that said, it is my belief that we in Congress, and this administration, have some very tough choices to make, not only in the areas of missile defense and the new war on terrorism, but also in developing a integrated national security strategy, force structure, and future investments critical to our armed forces. Such fundamental questions should be made first, and we should move forward to the evaluation of where and how our force structure should be supported.

While the debate continues on how to transform our armed forces, and the committee takes action to support our armed forces and the administration’s priorities, I would like to take this opportunity to acknowledge and thank Chairman Levin and Senator Warner for their tireless efforts to tackle these very tough issues and produce an authorization bill that funds a number of critical priorities and provides support for the men and women of our armed forces. I wish to make a few points in response to the speech given by my distinguished colleague from Arizona earlier today on the issue of base closures.

Many of us have made the argument that this makes far more sense to determine our force structure, particularly in light of the new emphasis that must be placed on homeland defense before we proceed with closing installations that may well prove to be needed later on.

But it isn’t just those of us serving in the Senate who support Senator Bunning’s amendment who feel that way. Let me quote from an answer that our Secretary of Defense, Mr. Rumsfeld, gave to a question regarding base closures put to him by Senator Dorgan at a hearing before the Defense Appropriations Subcommittee in June. Senator Dorgan gave an excellent speech on this issue earlier. Secretary Rumsfeld said:

I think that the cart’s a little before the horse. The first thing we have to nail down is what the national military strategy is . . . in accordance with the QDR process. That’s step one.

Step two is sizing the force against the strategy, and that will flow out of the exercises currently ongoing.

And the third step will be what’s the most efficient basing for that force, and only at that stage of the game, when we try to figure out the most efficient way to base the force and to support it from a business perspective, will we get into which infrastructure is excess or not. This has got to be a strategy driven exercise.

Ironically, Secretary Rumsfeld, in arguing for base closures, also makes the point that:

Our future needs as to base structure are uncertain and strategy dependent.

This is the wrong time. We face tremendous challenges. We should not be embarking on a whole new round of closing and downsizing base installations until we know what our needs are. And then, Mr. President, what should not be using the discredited BRAC process.

My colleague from Maine, Senator Snowe, and I have extensive experience with the BRAC process. We have found it to be unfair. We have found it to be inconsistent in its application.
If the Pentagon identifies bases that are truly excess, that are not needed—and I recognize there is excess capacity—then the Pentagon should identify those bases and let it in the budget. Why should we put every community across this country that hosts a base through the uncertainty, the worry, and the expense of hiring consultants to make the case for the retention of their base? That just does not make sense.

We are experiencing this right now in Maine the Pentagon’s closure of a base in Winter Harbor. We wish that this Navy installation, which has been there for more than 70 years, were going to remain open. But, unfortunately, its mission has become obsolete. What the Maine congressional delegation is doing is working with the local communities, with the Park Service, and with DOD, on a transition plan so it can be effectively reused. We do not need to endure the uncertainties of a politicized BRAC system.

Finally, I want to respond to the comments made by the Senator from Arizona about the need for improved housing for our troops. I could not agree with him more. I have visited our troops stationed in the DMZ in Korea. I was shocked and appalled at how bad the housing was for our brave men and women who are serving there on the front lines. We do have to do better. But that is a completely separate issue from the issue of whether now is the time to embark on base closures.

Now is not the time—now is the worst possible time—to divert the energies of the civilian and military leaders of the Pentagon into an exercise of closing bases that may well prove to be needed later. Now is certainly not the time to create concern and chaos and confusion in every community that has proudly hosted a military installation and is home to men and women in uniform. Now is certainly not the time to embark on another round of base closures when all of our energies must be focused on the overriding goal of crushing the international network of terrorist organizations that have so harmed our Nation and its citizens.

I urge support for the amendment offered by the Senator from Kentucky. Thank you, Mr. President. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, first, I would like to make an inquiry and then I have a couple comments to make.

When are we going to be taking up amendments that have been on the list for quite some time? Has that been decided yet? Or may I ask the manager of the bill, are we going to be disposing of the Bunning amendment before we go to other amendments? Is that going to be the order?

Mr. LEVIN. We are going to be disposing of the Bunning amendment tomorrow morning at 9:15. What we are hoping for is that other people with amendments—if debate ends early enough tonight on the Bunning amendment, we could get on with their amendments so we can debate those amendments and then set votes on those amendments tomorrow.

Mr. INHOFE. Yes.

Mr. LEVIN. Senator REID is here so we will leave that conversation for him.

Mr. REID. The manager of the bill is absolutely right. We are certainly willing tonight to take up any amendments that need to be offered. I say to my friend from Oklahoma, as I have said several times throughout the day, this is a very important amendment, the one now before the Senate. We are going to dispose of it in the morning, more than likely, at 9:45.

But the problem we have, I say to my friend from Alabama, is if we cannot get your side to agree on a list of amendments. We are not saying eliminate amendments. We are not saying you cannot offer amendments. We are saying offering anything you want, but let’s have the managers have a finite list of amendments.

And I don’t know what the majority leader is going to do, but if this goes on tomorrow, I think the majority leader would have to think seriously about going to some other legislation because we cannot go on with each hour that goes by with more amendments coming in. We need a cutoff period of some kind.

So I say to my friend from Alabama, if there is some way you can prevail on the people on your side of the aisle to allow us to have this unanimous consent request agreed to—what the consent agreement says is that—I offered it already, and I will just tell you what is in it again—in fact, I will propound it, right in front of the Senator from Oklahoma. I will ask and we will vote and then we can to see this bill move. I hope we can reach an agreement soon.

Mr. REID. I say to my friend from Alabama, this unanimous consent request that I have propounded does not in any way limit debate. In fact, it will allow unlimited debate on each amendment. We are not saying don’t talk more than an hour on an amendment. We are saying just tell us what you want to talk about so that the managers can determine if they can be accepted as part of a manager’s agreement or if they want to try to work out time agreements on these amendments, or if they want to basically accept some of them.

The way it is now, under the Senate rules we will never, ever finish this legislation unless there is a finite list of amendments. And we can’t do it.

Mr. SESSIONS. I understand there are those who wish to continue debate and who have not been prepared to agree to that on this side—maybe somebody on this side. We have had this frustration ever since I have been in the Senate. We have been on the other side as the majority. But maybe we can get this thing moving. I certainly would like to see this bill move. I would not personally object. I am objecting for others who, I understand, have a right to object and have asked that I do so. I certainly will do what I can to see this bill move. I hope we can reach an agreement soon.

Mr. REID. I say to my friend, if he...
Let me make a couple comments on some of the debate that has been going on. As far as prison labor is concerned, I assure the Senator from Alabama, who has been concerned about it, expressing his desire to have prisoners work, I can assure him that prisoners can work.

I can also assure him that the language, in my opinion—I have been on this committee since 1994, and I have heard this debate every year since 1994—in the bill is good language. We need to be able to have quality work done on the work we are talking about in conjunction with this prison labor debate.

Let me assure the Senator from Alabama that we can go ahead and keep the language that is in our bill and still have a lot for the prisoners to do. I know a lot about this. I was mayor of Tulsa for three, four terms. During that time, it was prostitution that hit Oklahoma and hit my city of Tulsa. It was a very serious problem. Of course, we would throw them in jail. They would get out about 10 minutes later, when their attorneys would come up. What I did was, instead of putting them in jail and incarcerating them, I put them in work details.

We had them out there—it worked out really well—cleaning up our parks. Because they had spiked heels, they could kind of go out there and pick up the trash, and it worked out very well. That program actually stopped that ring. It was because it was hard work. They didn’t want to do it.

I can remember once I got a call from someone from Sydney, Australia, on a live radio show. I don’t know what time it was there, but it was the middle of the night in Tulsa.

He said: Mr. Mayor, how cruel can you be, making those poor women go out and work hard in the hot sun and do all this? I said: I’ll tell what you will do. We will just package them all up and send them to Sydney, and then it will be your problem.

Then he said: By jove, I think you have a good program there.

There is a lot of work that can be done by prisoners. Anyone who has worked in this area, which I have in Oklahoma with our State penitentiary, knows that can happen. That is not the issue. There is going to be work. They are going to get work anyway that is not as enjoyable as the work we are talking about. I support the language in the bill.

Under the debate right now, we have been talking about the proposed fifth round of base realignments and closure rounds. I have to say this: I am opposed to it, but for a different reason than the Senator from Maine who spoke before me. It is not that I don’t believe in the process.

I was elected to the House of Representatives in 1986. DICK ARMEY put out this problem. He said: As it is, we are never going to be able to close installations and get rid of infrastructure that is no longer something we need if we leave it up to the political process. What I prefer is base realignments. There is not one person, not a Member of the House or the Senate who is not going to protect his own turf.

That has been true. So I strongly supported DICK ARMEY, and in 1987 we passed a base realignment bill. Then we went through four rounds. Until the last round came up, it worked beautifully. It wasn’t to everyone’s satisfaction. A lot of people were mad about it. But a lot of bases, in New York and other places, were closed down and everyone cooperated.

In the fourth round, politics entered into it. It was a partisan thing because it was Democrats and Republicans who did it. That has taken care of where it can’t happen again.

The system is good. I far prefer the system of having BRAC rounds over the system that we used before then. Here is why I am opposed to it. It is a totally different reason. I heard Senator HUNTING ask: Can anyone show me the amount of money that has been saved? We all have opinions as to what is projected into the future. I will say this: One thing we know for sure, we have closed 97 installations. I would suggest we wouldn’t have closed one of them if it had not been for this process. We closed them. And in that time that we actually closed those, there wasn’t one that didn’t lose money for the first 3 or 4 years afterwards.

I think there probably is infrastructure out there that we are going to have to address at some time. We have two things that are going on right now: No. 1, we are bleeding. Everything is hemorrhaging right now. We know we are having problems in our force structure, problems with retention, problems with modernization. We need to have a missile defense system. All these things have top priority in the bill, and I agree that they should be done. So if we postpone the consideration—I know it doesn’t take place until 2003—if we postpone it until a later date, then we will not have to forgo that money that it is going to cost to close bases at a time that we need to go into rebuilding our defense structure. We are repeating something that hit Oklahoma and hit my city of Tulsa. It was a very serious problem.

The second reason is this: We know we are going to have to address at some time. We have a hollow force. So this is not the time. I might seriously consider it later on.

The third reason is this: We know we are going to change the force structure back up. As we do it, we may be needing some of the infrastructure that right now, if it were looked at by a committee that were appointed now or next year, they might think is not necessary.

Let’s wait. To artificially lower the infrastructure down to here, when our force structure is too low and we are going to have to raise it up—we don’t know what we are going to be needing at the time. The time is not right. The time is not right.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Ms. STABENOW). The Senator from Ohio.

Mr. VOINOVICH. Madam President, I rise today to indicate my strong opposition to amendment No. 1622, which would strip a provision authorizing a round of base closures in fiscal year 2003 from the fiscal year 2002 Defense authorization bill, and differ from some of my colleagues who would like to do that.

As one who voted for base closing last year, I understand how important this provision is to our national security. As many of my colleagues are aware, our military now finds itself with an infrastructure base that is no longer proportionate to its force structure. It is estimated we now support an infrastructure out there of bases; there is 25 percent more than what we really need. I believe rather than continuing to pay for unneeded facilities, our defense dollars can and should be better spent on the most pressing needs of our armed services.

I stand behind Chairman LEVIN, Senator WARNER, and other members of the Armed Services Committee who supported the inclusion of this provision in the fiscal year 2002 Defense authorization bill.

As the committee noted in its report accompanying the bill, our top civilian and uniformed military leaders have requested this authority. For the last 5 years, they have been asking for it. I believe we should trust their guidance and act to grant the Defense Department this much-needed authority. Too often I have noticed in this body that we do not support the recommendations of the people we charged with the responsibility to get the job done. We know more about it than they do.

In this case, we have charged these people with the responsibility to secure our nation from and the most pressing needs of our armed services.

In this case, we have charged these people with the responsibility to secure our nation from and the most pressing needs of our armed services.

We should listen to them. I am so glad the Armed Services Committee did so in this case.

The committee said:

The committee believes that the argument for allowing the Secretary of Defense to proceed with the closure round of additional facilities is clear and compelling. The department has excess facilities. Closing bases saves money, and the military services have higher priority uses that could be funded with those savings.
As our Nation prepares to engage in a new battle to combat terrorist threats against the United States and the Free World at large, it is critical that these excesses be used to meet the most pressing defense needs.

I respectfully disagree with the argument that we should not act on this initiative as our country prepares to take on those who commit acts of terrorism against our Nation. On the contrary, I believe that now, more than ever before, we need these resources for more important endeavors.

As the Secretary of Defense noted in a letter to Chairman Levin, dated September 21, 2001—I want to make the point that I have heard several people say on the floor of the Senate that they can’t do it, they are too busy with other things, and don’t have the time or resources to properly do the overview that they need to determine which bases are best suited to be closed. It seems to me that they have a better idea of what their capacity is than we have.

In this letter from the Secretary of Defense, dated September 21—that is pretty near—he said:

Indeed, in the wake of the terrible events of September 11, the imperative to convert excess capacity into war-fighting ability is enhanced, not diminished.

Basically, they say we can handle the job. Give us the permission so we can move on with it. We made hard decisions regarding the size of force structure during the past decade and we can continue to do more to make corresponding choices regarding the size and configuration of our military installations. Some of the words I have heard were that we have had base closings and they have been wonderful in terms of cost savings. The cost savings associated with past base realignment and closures, including several from my State of Ohio, is considerable.

That is the other thing. So often when these things come up, people are thinking of their own bases and they don’t want to lose the bases. I didn’t want to lose the bases in Ohio that went through the "BRAC" process: I thought it was fair and above board. They did close down bases. In other instances, we were able to convince them that the bases should remain open. But the fact is, as a result of these base closings, the Department of Defense has a cost savings of nearly $14 billion because of these initiatives. Given the fact we still have a military infrastructure that is in excess of more than 20 percent, we can continue to generate even more savings with an additional round of BRAC.

The Secretary of Defense estimates that with an additional round of base closures, in fiscal year 2003, our taxpayers are going to save $3.5 billion annually. In this particular case, I don’t think the savings are going to be there. We will take the savings and put them to use by taking care of this war-dealing with terrorism. Given these savings, there should be little doubt that additional rounds of closures will do a much better job of directing expenditures where it is most needed.

As I have long advocated during my time in public office, I believe we should work harder and smarter and do more with less. That is what we are asked to do. Keeping excess and unneeded military installations up and running takes scarce and critical resources from meeting important priorities in light of our new war. It just doesn’t make sense.

How can we ask the American people to increase our defense budget by $18.4 billion and, at the same time, know that by closing these bases we can save another $3.5 billion annually? Again, that is $3.5 billion annually. I believe the base closures are essential to allowing our men and women in uniform the means to protect our national security interests of the United States.

I strongly oppose any amendment that would remove the much needed provision from the fiscal year 2002 Defense Authorization Act.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New York is recognized.

Mr. SCHUMER. Thank you. Madam President, I will be brief. I rise in reluctant support of this amendment.

There have been many who have talked about doing something for this—that since September 11 we are in a brave new world; that we may need reassessment, and we probably do; that we probably should not rush to judgment.

Those are good arguments. But I want to talk about the particular issues that affect my State because we are all looking at our States here. I supported BRAC while I was in the House consistently. I knew that it might affect bases in my State. But my mouth was only the last BRAC that I cannot support it again. It is not simply that my State suffered dramatically of our large bases—three out of the four were closed—it is rather that the process, by just about all accounts, was highly politicized—at least in the instance of my State.

While the BRAC Commission did recommend the closing of Griffiss Air Force Base, and they did recommend the closing of the Seneca Army Depot, they did not recommend the closing of Plattsburgh Air Force Base. It was a state-of-the-art base, one of the few bases east of the Mississippi that dealt with long-range bombers and tankers. Plattsburgh was a state-of-the-art facility with a huge landing runway, but the concern that their infrastructure that was being built; and, with good reason, the Commission did not recommend Plattsburgh.

Perhaps because the chairman of the Commission came from another State—a fact that may or may not have had an effect on this situation’s ultimate outcome—at the last minute Plattsburgh was put on the closing list and McGuire Air Force Base in the middle of the New York/Philadelphia skyway was used to replace it. The devastation in Plattsburgh was enormous.

The BRAC Commission does not take into account areas where, when bases are closed, people will never find jobs again because they are shrinking areas. We are having the same problem in Utica, New York. I was downtown that I cannot support this amendment unless steps are taken to avoid the kind of politicization that occurred. I was not in the Senate then. I would have filibustered or done whatever I could to stop it because it was unfair.

Now we have only really two large non-Guard facilities left in New York State. They are: Fort Drum, a state-of-the-art 10th Mountain Division, a highly trained and mobile unit, the soldiers have served nobly in the Bosnian and the Arab/Iraqi arena. We have Rome Labs, which is an information center for the Air Force. These days, as the tragedy of September 11 showed us, military intelligence, information, and communication is the key.

If I had faith that the decision would be made on the merits, I believe that neither of these bases would be on the list. They are both outstanding and important to our security and unique. Those are good arguments. But I think New York should take another hit, especially with two such outstanding bases like Fort Drum and Rome Labs.

So, as I said, I will reluctantly vote for this amendment. I would like to see some safeguards put in, and that we take into account areas that are shrinking in terms of population and in terms of jobs.

Most important, I would like to see the process insulated from the kind of last-minute political horse trading that occurred and unfairly closed Griffiss and put McGuire in its place.

I appreciate the work of my colleague to our security and unique. But until that time, given, again, the bitter and unfair experience of our State, I cannot.
Thank you, Madam President. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Maine.

Ms. SULLIVAN-BEACH. Thank you, Madam President.

I rise today in strong support of the amendment that has been offered by the Senator from Kentucky to strike the base closing provisions within the DOD authorization bill.

We all recognize that this is not business as usual. We also recognize how we will have to reevaluate many of the considerations that are included in the Defense authorization bill, many of the ways in which we viewed our military and our force structure prior to September 11.

Even before the horrific attacks of September 11, I, along with many of my colleagues, had serious questions about the integrity of the base closing process itself, as well as the actual benefits realized. Now, with acts of war committed against the United States, with the President addressing a joint session of Congress that justice will be done, with our Reservists being called up and our troops being deployed and the unpredictability of the mission ahead, of the asymmetric threats, I do not believe this is the time to be considering the closure of additional bases.

Indeed, now more than at any other time in recent history, I believe it is absolutely critical that this Nation not sacrifice valuable defense infrastructure when we have just committed ourselves to a new war on terrorism.

This challenge will require a new overarching military doctrine, one, indeed, that has yet to be developed. One of the central goals of this administration has been to overhaul the military doctrine which has been in place since the cold war, requiring that the United States must be able to be engaged in and to respond to major theater wars at the same time.

Until a new doctrine has been determined, we cannot decide what the military infrastructure should be. Now with the announcement by the President of a Cabinet-level position responsible for homeland defense, we certainly do not know essentially what our requirements at home will be to provide for our national security interests. Until there is an assessment and cataloging of those needs, we simply cannot afford to determine what additional bases should be closed.

I look at the Northeast, and in all the four previous rounds the Northeast has lost 49 bases, roughly 50 percent of what we had prior to the BRAC process; 75 percent, or just under 35 percent of the installations on the East coast, were closed during the previous four rounds.

Although the Office of Homeland Security will not take the place of the Department of Defense, it obviously will be coordinating many of the law enforcement responsibilities of the myriad agencies across the Federal Government, and all of our military installations will no doubt play a critical and prominent role in our homeland security.

Moreover, the war on terrorism will be a long-term challenge, as the President has said repeatedly. This will require a sustained resolve and effort on the part of the United States. It will rely on U.S. military, intelligence, and law enforcement personnel and resources. These forces will require the support of our domestic and overseas installations. This is all in addition to our national defense deployments and peacekeeping operations that we have in Bosnia and Kosovo and, of course, our logistical support in Macedonia.

Instead of chasing elusive savings, I believe the Department of Defense needs to proactively develop a comprehensive plan that identifies the operational and maintenance infrastructure required to support the services' national security requirements. We all know that once the property is relinquished, it is permanently lost as a military asset for all practical purposes.

Proponents of additional base closure rounds are quick to point out that reducing infrastructure has not kept pace with post-cold-war military force reductions. They say bases must be downsized proportionate to the reduction in total force strength. However, the fact of the matter is, there is no simple linearity between the size of our forces and the infrastructure required to support them. Belief that there is disturbs me. I heard it repeatedly when I served on the Senate Armed Services Committee and chaired the Seapower Subcommittee. I was in House Ways and Means when the Base Closure process began. I think about it in terms of the 1997 QDR, the Quadrennial Defense Review process.

Since the end of the cold war, we have reduced the military force structure by 36 percent and have reduced the Defense budget by 40 percent, but now I ask you: How much are we employing that force? Although the size of our armed service has decreased, the number of contingency operations that our service members, our men and women who are in the military, have been called upon to respond to in recent years has dramatically increased.

As I said, I chaired the Seapower Subcommittee of the Senate Armed Services Committee in the last Congress. Guess what. The Navy and Marine Corps team alone responded to 58 contingent missions between 1980 and 1989—58 between 1980 and 1989—and between 1990 and 1999 they responded to 475, a remarkable increase.

Between 1980 and 1989, they responded to 58 contingencies. But from 1990 to 1999, that was just for the Navy and Marine Corps alone.

During the cold war, the U.S. National Security Council rarely approved the creation of peace operations. In fact, it was a relatively rare event. I served on the Foreign Affairs Committee in the House of Representatives, and I was on the subcommittee on International Operations. We rarely had such contingency operations. In fact, the U.N. implemented only 13 peace operations between 1948 and 1978 and none—none—between 1979 and 1988. Through last year, by contrast, there were 38 peace operations, nearly 3 times as many during the previous 40 years.

Madam President, as a former member of the Senate Armed Services Committee, and chair of the Seapower Subcommittee, I can attest that the Armed Services Committee has listened to our leaders in uniform testify that our current military forces have been stretched too thin, and that estimate predicted in the 1997 QDR underestimated how much the United States would be using its military. Clearly, the benefits of the peace dividend were never truly realized. So, we are seeing first hand that the 1997 QDR force levels underestimated how much our military force was intended to be used, that our military force is being called upon now more than what military strategies estimated, and that our forces are being stretched to cover a wide range of operations.

Keep in mind, Mr. President, that force levels may have to be revisited once again in light of the new anti-terror mission our military faces, and may well require an increase. So would we then go and buy back property that we have given up in future base closure rounds to build new bases—I think not.

Madam President, the Department of Defense contends there is 20 to 25 percent excess infrastructure today. Before we legislate defense-wide policy to reduce the number of training areas critical to our force readiness, the Department of Defense ought to be able to tell us, through a comprehensive plan, the level of operational and maintenance infrastructure required to support our shifting national security requirements. Congress, instead, is being pressed to authorize base closures essentially in the dark, without the upcoming Quadrennial Defense Review or Future Years Defense Plan. We will have a preliminary QDR in the near future, but it will have to be revised in light of the new threat facing this nation. How can we make fundamental decisions about our infrastructure needs before we even have any guidance from the QDR?

I ask you to look carefully at the full committee hearings and the subcommittee hearings that the Armed Services Committee held during the 106th Congress—where I sat on the committee, and chaired the Seapower Subcommittee—the Chief of Naval Operations and fleet commanders testified that the QDR-established force levels were not sufficient to support their operational requirements. A report by the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff concluded that the submarine force levels needed to be raised from the 1997 Quadrennial Defense Review and I anticipate that the next QDR will support an increase in the Navy force as well.

We simply must not take the risk of losing critical infrastructure at this time. We only have arbitrary comparison of personnel and infrastructure levels never been the basis for military force structure changes. Not only has a direct correlation between force and facility level yet to be established, but the Department of Defense has said that the primary criteria for base closure will be military value tied to the forthcoming QDR. But this begs the question as to the validity of the QDR numbers—the 1997 QDR has been heavily criticized for getting the numbers wrong with respect to the Navy and Naval fleet size. It could be premature and costly to predicate base closure decisions even on the 2001 QDR, until we know for certain what our needs will be as we confront the new terrorist threat.

Critical assets such as water-front property, airspace, and bombing ranges would be far more difficult and expensive to replace than troops, ships, and tanks.

Proponents argue that the administration’s approach will be based upon military value and removes parochial and political factors from the process, but in reality, the administration’s Efficient Facilities Initiative is more similar to past BRAC rounds than one might think. Much has been made of the de-politicization of the process by including “military value” and the other criteria in the legislation. However, review of the last process reveals that these criteria are nearly identical to those used in the 1995 round. This is because the decision in many cases, the past BRAC rounds were not fair or equitable, and were not based solely on military value. I have been through BRAC before. And I have to say, I know how the criteria can be twisted to the advantage or disadvantage of a given facility. In fact, we had not one but two Air Force generals defending the former Loring Air Force Base before a past BRAC commission; yet the Air Force claimed its facilities were “well below average”—and this despite the fact that $900 million had been spent there over a ten year period to replace our upgrade nearly everything on the base and it ended up being closed on so-called “quality of life” issues even though that was never supposed to be part of the criteria.

I strongly believe Congress must also consider the economic impact of base closures on communities in light of the uncertainty regarding the nation’s economy in the wake of the September 11 terrorist attacks. Prior to that date, it was clear that the economy was slowing, perhaps even entering a recession. Today, there is a great deal of uncertainty about the state of the economy in the quarters to come.

In August 2001, GAO issued an overview of the status of economic recovery, land transfers, and environmental cleanup in communities that have lost bases during previous BRAC rounds. GAO found that the short term impact of a base closure was traumatic for the surrounding community and that economic recovery was dependent on several factors including the strength of the national economy, federal assistance programs totaling more than $1.2 billion, and an area’s natural resources and economic diversity.

Keep in mind, Mr. President, this assessment was done during a time of unprecedented economic growth and as GAO stated, the health of the national economy was critical to the ability of communities to adjust: “Local officials have stressed the importance of having a strong national economy and local industries that could soften the impact of job losses from a base closure.”

With the slow-down of the economy, and the uncertainty brought about by the recent tragedy, it is doubtful that communities will be able to rebound even to the extent they have in previous years. Indeed, it is vital to note that not every community affected by base closures has fared so well in the past—those in rural areas still experienced above average unemployment and below average per capita incomes.

In this vein, I would like to discuss for a moment the issue of the up-front costs involved in the base closure process. This appears to be noticeably absent from the discussion, but there are, in fact, billions of dollars in costs incurred to close a base.

These costs include over $1.2 billion in federal financial assistance provided to each affected community—a cost paid by the federal government, not through base closure budget accounts, and therefore not counted in the estimates. And more significantly, there is at least a $7 billion environmental cleanup bill so far as a result of the first four BRAC rounds—a conservative figure that will continue to grow, according to a December 1998 GAO report.

Indeed, the Department of Defense has admitted that savings would not be immediate; that approximately $10 billion would be needed for up-front environmental cleanup. This figure was in line with the 1997 Defense Reform Initiative that proposed similar initiatives and efficiency improvements. The new administration has proposed similar initiatives and efficiency improvements that could generate substantial savings.

Madam President, I want to protect the military’s critical readiness and operational assets. I want to protect the home port berthing for our ships and submarines, the airspace that our aircraft fly in and the training areas and ranges that our armed forces require to support and defend our Nation and its interests. I want to protect the economic viability of communities in every state. And I want to make absolutely certain that the so-called QDR does not result in cuts that undermine the military infrastructure it will need in the years to come to support the war on terrorism. We must not degrade the readiness of our armed forces by closing more bases, certainly not at this time. Certainly not without information on our future defense needs that we do not have.
Madam President, we say that we are going to have a Quadrennial Defense Review, and at least the preliminary report is expected to be forthcoming this summer. It will duplicate our infrastructure and our national security requirements on that report, and I know, having been a member of the Senate Armed Services Committee, we listened to our leaders in uniform testify that our current military forces have been stretched too thin and that the estimates in that 1997 QDR, in fact, underestimated how much the United States would be using its military, how much our men and women would be called upon to be involved in contingency operations abroad.

They have multiplied. So now we are seeing firsthand, even before September 11, that the forces established in the 1997 QDR underestimated how much our military force was intended to be because military forces are being called upon now more than what the military strategies estimated, and that our forces are being stretched to cover a wide range of operations.

We know our force levels obviously may have to be revisited once again in light of the new antiterrorism our military faces. The threat that is represented to the United States and our security interests may well require an increase. How do we know exactly what infrastructure we need and where we need it? In hearing after hearing, I implored the Pentagon and the previous administration: Give us your plan, tell us what you think our infrastructure requirements will be, and based on what threats, that we will need to have so many installations and so many locations around the country. That is something we have never received.

Now they say they base it on the 1997 QDR report. Well, we know that underestimated the utilization of our military forces. Why would we want to put in place another base commission closing process, set it on an automatic path, when we have yet to receive the new Quadrennial Defense Review, and how that will have to be re-evaluated in light of the threat we now face with terrorism? It really does not make any sense.

I know the Department of Defense has indicated there is a 20-25 percent excess of infrastructure, but I do not know how we have arrived at that excess of this 20 to 25 percent because we have never had a plan. I know this is a new administration, and it is beginning to evaluate it, and obviously an enormous burden has been placed upon it as a result of September 11.

Those of us who have been through the experience of this last decade with contingency operation upon contingency operation that has stretched our forces to the maximum—that has had a tremendous impact on their abilities, and they have performed in such a professional and skilled way, even in spite of all of the pressures as a result of doing so much more with less.

So I say we have to really draw back. We cannot afford to put this process in an automatic motion for some course in the year 2003 because we have to go back and reexamine exactly what we need and why we need it.

What message does it send to those of us who are unfortunate who are about to deploy, that somehow we are going to be downsizing at home? We might need those bases. I know the Senator from New York mentioned Plattsburgh, that it was a state-of-the-art facility. So too was Loring Air Force Base. It was on the base closing list and was closed in 1991, and we spent a total of $300 million providing every upgrade in that facility. It happened to be a base that was the closest base to Europe, to the Middle East, to Africa, to Russia, but we were told we are in a new era where it is no longer required.

How do we really know, when we see the threat that occurred and the tragedy and the enormity of the impact of that attack on September 11? No one could have fully anticipated what has affected the United States and the civilized world.

So I think it would be prudent on our part to recede from this predication that somehow we have excess infrastructure because we really do not know. It is an uncertainty. It is as uncertain as the asymmetric threats that are now prevalent in the world today.

So I hope the Senate will support this amendment to strike these provisions because we really do have to re-examine many of the issues that are now prevailing in our world of today. We do not know the validity of what numbers, from which report, will now be applicable in today's world with this threat that we face from our own experience, not only with the four previous rounds and the base closing process, but also in terms of underestimating the number of times our men and women would be deployed in other parts of the world, and I know firsthand from the testimony that was provided to my subcommittee when I chaired the Seapower Subcommittee, that our forces were stretched too thin, that we could no longer absorb the demands being placed on us because we were being asked to do so much in so many places around the world.

So now, in view of September 11, it is all the more prudent that we begin to examine what we need in America today to provide for our security, an energy, attention, and focus to our energy, attention, and focus to these installations. They have to use their energy, attention, and focus to begin to prepare for the arduous, comp,
Now are know that it is almost impossible to assess the real damages, savings, or benefits from these previous base closings. We have seen this time and time again. For instance, we have made decisions that certain bases would be closed and there would be certain savings. Yet, we have found that it is very difficult to move toward closing these bases and getting the savings for which they were designed. There is a negative environmental problem in cleaning up those bases before they can be turned over to the private sector or the local communities. To this day, many of the recommendations from previous BRAC’s have not been completed. We are still operating bases, facilities, or depots that supposedly were going to be closed. Today, they are still not closed.

Finally, the objective of BRAC is to match base infrastructure with force requirements. Yet today, the Department of Defense is working on their plan to transform our Armed Forces. In light of current events, I think we all agree that a new threat has emerged and a new type of war will be fought. I have to ask, what will be the force structure of the future? And, where will we need bases for operating, training, and maintaining this force? These are just a few of the questions that must be answered before we make a large-scale commitment to change our defense infrastructure.

Secretary Rumsfeld is still working on his Strategic Reviews to define the environment for the future and to make recommendations on force structure changes. He has stated that the fiscal year 2003 Defense budget submission will be his first opportunity to implement these transformational ideas.

DOD is also currently executing the Congressionally mandated Quadrennial Defense Review (QDR), and was scheduled to issue its report to Congress later this month on the results. I have no doubt this report will be delayed due to the terrorist attack on the Pentagon. This body has been patient, and continues to wait anxiously for these reviews because we know their importance to the future of our military.

Why, then, would we make such an important decision as closing certain bases before these long awaited reports are even available?

Without these key assessments, how do we define the base requirements for our future force? We have yet to decide not only what that force should be, but where it should be based. Now is not the time to get the proverbial “cart in front of the horse.” Another round of base closings should not be considered until all of the studies and reviews have been completed and the President is given the appropriate time to update the National Security Strategy.

So without having had an opportunity or a means to assess the changes in our infrastructure, and without having the opportunity to get previously identified bases closed and savings realized, and without even identifying the future force structure of our military, we now have to confront the statement that we should have yet another round of base closures. As a result of all these factors, CBO observed that additional base closures “should follow an interval during which DOD and independent analysis examine the actual impact of the measure that have been taken.”

I agree. Before we go forward, we need to take a look at what we have already done, evaluate it, and make sure we understand the cost savings and the costs that have been expended—both in financial terms and in terms of our military capabilities. Only after this review can we make an informed decision about whether or not to have another round. To go forward and blindly close more bases when we are not even sure what President Bush granted the authority to do, just does not seem like good policy.

I have stated to the President, the Secretary of Defense, and all the Service Chiefs of Staffs that if they desire another round I could only support a round that focuses on those areas identified with large excess capacity. This focused round would provide savings but not reduce infrastructure below what might be required by the future force.

One area is overseas bases and facilities. The 1990 BRAC legislation outlines the sense of Congress that closure of military installations outside the United States should be accomplished at the discretion of the Secretary of Defense at the earliest opportunity.

Yet today, we have over 700 activities in Europe and Asia alone. Europe has 523 activities with 115,650 active duty personnel. We invested $572 million in military construction in Europe from 1997 to 2001. That equates to an average annual investment of $114.5 million per year. In Asia we have 188 activities with 129,462 active duty personnel. There are more troops in Asia than Europe but 60 percent less activities. The United States invested $653.8 million in military construction in Asia from 1997 to 2001. That equates to an average annual investment of $121 million per year.

In a recent meeting with Secretary of the Army Tom White, he mentioned the possibility of moving 10,000 troops from the European theater to the Pacific theater. During a separate meeting, Deputy Secretary Paul Wolfowitz mentioned transferring 10,000 troops from Europe back to the United States.

Just last week on Friday, September 14, President Clinton authorized the Secretary to mobilize 50,000 reserve personnel for Homeland Defense. How will these large-scale troop realignments affect our infrastructure requirements of the future?

Why are we continuing to close installations in the United States when there are so many facilities overseas that we continue to sink large amounts of funds into year after year? In light of the events of September 11, I believe we need to consolidate overseas installations, therefore providing a more secure environment as well as improving the quality of life for our service-members and their families.

These are some of the questions we need answered before we authorize another round of BRAC. If after the President’s initial Strategic Reviews and the QDR, the required force structure supports further base closures, then I think DOD should identify bases they no longer feel are necessary and submit their finding to Congress. I have full faith that this body is capable of looking objectively at our defense needs and determining whether a base has outlived its usefulness.

Given what we already know about BRAC, the ongoing reviews, and more missions in the United States, I cannot support and vigorously oppose the Department of Defense’s request for another round of base closure.

For that and many other reasons, I offer these amendments, one to strike and one to modify section 29 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2002. I hope my colleagues will support me on this important issue.

I support and am a principal cosponsor of the amendment to strike section 29 of the national authorization act of 2002. That section provides authority to carry out the base closure round of 2003.

As this body considers yet another round of base closure hearings and proceedings, I think it is important we pause and reflect on where we have been and examine where we are, and particularly, today, where we plan to be in the future with our force structure. I believe this is a viable question we have witnessed in the last 2 weeks.

I have said many times before we have been down this old BRAC road—actually, four times—and there are pros and cons about whether we should do it.

This time I have listened to the arguments of the Pentagon, and the Secretary of Defense and I have weighed it very carefully. I still oppose the process. I still think this is an abdication of responsibility, to turn decisions of this nature over to this Base Closure Commission. I have always taken that position. Some people, say, well, how did you plan to do it? How did we do it before? We started this process in the 1980s. The Pentagon would make declarations of excess capacity. If they did not, missions that were not necessary or could not be consolidated, and they sent a recommendation to the Congress. And the Congress would take it under advisement, sometimes accept the recommendation, sometimes reject it. In many instances, bases were closed in the late 1940s and 1950s and 1960s. I know of at least four bases in my immediate region that were closed, including one I believe in the 1970s, Brookley Air Force Base in Mobile, AL, bases around my State.

Congress faced up to it. If it could be justified, if it can be, and we can be assured it will leave us the capacity to do what we need to do, I think Congress will step up to it. Some will say this is the way to get politics out of it. How many think politics did not come into play the last time we had a base closure round? It clearly did. That is why many Democrats and Republicans in the Senate have opposed another BRAC process over the last 2 years.

Some would have said 3 weeks ago that it is time we give it another chance, and we do have duplication and excess capacity. In my meetings with the Secretary of Defense and the service secretaries and representatives of the Office of Management and Budget, I have indicated I would do one round, not two, but also if it would be targeted to those places where we know we have redundancy or excess capacity; or, to put it conversely, where we know we are not going to close bases, then say it will not apply in these areas.

By the way, one of the key questions I want to ask in my remarks: What about bases in other places of the world? We have given the Pentagon the authority to consolidate missions and close bases in Europe and other parts of the world, but they have done very little of it. In fact, I think one of the most interesting statistics I have come across anywhere is this: We have over 700 activities in Europe and Asia alone. Europe has 523 activities with 115,650 active-duty personnel. We have invested $572 million in military construction in Europe from 1997 to 2001. That equates to an average annual investment of $114.5 million per year. We look at the redundancy or excess capacity in Europe before we start closing bases and facilities we may need at home?

Now I support and understand the need for having some Air Force bases in Europe, such as at Rhein-Main, and we need naval bases so we can project force. But when you look at the number of missions, where the missions are, what we are doing in Europe, you cannot help but realize they are snickering at us. They view it as economic development and jobs activity.

I would like to make sure in fact something is going to be done in Europe before we start down this track of another base closure round in the United States. We have already had those opportunities and they work. The Deputy Under Secretary of Defense for Installations and Environment was quoted as saying maybe we would want to accommodate bases by relocating some operations from congested areas to sparsely populated regions, even talking of moving bases from one region to another. I understand there is some denial of that or apology for it. Maybe it shows some of the thinking.

We have also had the suggestion from the Pentagon that they were going to be considering a variety of options, including mothballing some bases, or mothballing part of a base and keeping the rest open or closing only part of that base. What that means is, even the surrounding community will be prevented from using the abandoned bases. That might be the worst of all worlds. We will not say yes or no. We will say, well, we might want to keep part of it, not this part, maybe mothball it, we will not turn it over to the county, community, the State, for them to do something else with it.

I don’t think this has been thought out. I don’t think there is a plan of how this would work.

We know for certain that the BRAC process severely disrupts local economies of communities across this Nation. If we have another BRAC, every community in America is about to be affected by this, and the next 2 years will have to hire some high-priced, high-powered consultants and lobbyists to tell them what to do. You are not talking about cheap money, you are talking about $200,000 a year, a quarter of a million a year. Everybody will get on their war footing to try to satisfy the anxieties. And, by the way, in many instances where they are not even going to be considered—or where they might be considered, but clearly in the end it will not happen. But let me tell you, that is what will happen.

Here is one thing that worries me. I had this feeling basically before 2 weeks ago, but think about it now. Think about it today. Our National Guard units are being activated. Tankers from Meridian, MS, are flying overhead to keep our jets flying. Our Air Guard unit that has the C-141 aircraft, they are going to be involved. You can be sure of that. We have already had reservists called up, medical equipment, aircraft, they are going to be involved. Where will we need bases for operating, training, and maintaining this force?

Just this past weekend I heard an Air Force general talking about how our jets and our mission had always been set up and planned from the beginning, looking out to stop attack. Now we have to change that thinking. We have to think about how we have protection inward. It is going to be fundamentally different. We have to now think about, if we have to scramble planes, where would they have to come from to get to New York? Where would they have to come from to get to Chicago? Where would they have to come from to get to Boston? I understand we did have some planes scrambled out of Massachusetts. But we have to look anew at how we have this force structure and where these aircraft will come from, what type of forces we will need, what type of training will we need for our men and women.

Secretary Rumsfeld is still working on his strategic review to define the environment for the future and to make recommendations of force structure changes. He stated that the fiscal year 2003 defense budget submission will be his first opportunity to implement these transformational ideas. If that is the case, shouldn’t we at least wait until we know that before we move toward another base closure round?

I have never supported a BRAC, but I have also never said I would not someday if I could be convinced there was a plan, that there was a force structure, that we knew what we were going to need and we could be shown there is duplication and redundancy and overlapping, things we did not need because of changes in plans for the future, and it would be aimed at those areas, not just a broad brush at every base.

I think that was basically what the congressionally mandated Quadrennial Defense Review and was scheduled to report to Congress later this month on the results. I have no doubt this report will be delayed due to the terrorist attack.

So I think I have made my point here. This could be done, but I think it would have to be done with more planning, with more indication of what our needs are going to be, what we want in the future, and with some targeting. But that is not what we have here.

I say again, I think we need to take a look when we do it, not just at what we have here in America but what we have around the world. We are going to have this new homeland defense position. Would we like to see how that is going to be formed and what their recommendations would be, before we start down this trail?

I think that would be the responsible thing to do. This is an administration that I am very proud of. I have had a long relationship with Secretary Rumsfeld. I have listened to Secretary Cohen, my personal friend—I sat next to him on the Armed Services Committee—the Secretary of Defense with President Clinton; I have listened to the Pentagon officials this time around. I think they are the experts, but I think we have a responsibility to ask the tough questions.

This time, the toughest question is, Are we ready? Do we know what we are doing, or is this just the knowledge that maybe we have some activities that we can do without? But is that the case today as it was 2 weeks ago? I don’t think we know.

So I hope we will move on this amendment to strike. I appreciate the effort that has been made by the chairman and the ranking member to come with this bill. Concessions were made. Senator Daschle and I kept encouraging them to keep working and they did. They did a great job.

I hate to stand up and speak on behalf of an amendment to strike anything out of this bill. I hoped basically we could just come together and get it done. I still think we can. There is no reason why we should not be able to get a list of amendments agreed to and complete this legislation tomorrow or Wednesday morning. I think what would be another important sign of how we are working together. We are doing the right thing for the defense of our country and our efforts to help the economy and help deal with the threats this country faces.

The American people are saying they like seeing us do that. I think we... should do it on this bill. But for now, I think we should do it without this section. I thank my colleagues for their patience and I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nevada.

Mr. REID. I ask unanimous consent the list I shortly will send to the desk be the only first-degree amendments remaining in order to S. 1438, the Defense Authorization bill, and that those amendments be subject to relevant second-degree amendments; upon disposition of all amendments, the bill be read a third time, and the Senate vote on passage of the bill with no intervening action or debate.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection? The Senator from Texas.

Mr. GRAMM. Reserving the right to object, I was over here trying to do my reading homework. I am not sure I heard. Is the Senator asking that we limit amendments to the bill at this point?

Mr. REID. Yes. The unanimous consent agreement I proposed just now, for the third or fourth time, is that we would have a finite list of amendments, not limiting the amendments but that the two managers would be able to sort through the amendments, find out which ones they agree with, those they want in the managers' amendment. Anyway, they would have a list of amendments.

If we do not do that, I say to my friend from Texas, we will never finish the bill. This doesn't limit debate on any amendment. It doesn't limit the number of amendments that people would want to offer. But it would bring some finality to the list of amendments.

Mr. GRAMM. Further reserving the right to object, I am hoping something can be worked out on a nondefense issue which has found its way into the bill. I believe everything I can to expedite that, to get that issue out of the way. I think we can save time by working that out, if we can.

On that basis I have to object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

Mr. REID. I say to my friend, I know there are other items that need to be worked on tonight. I say to my friend from Texas, we are arriving at a point in this legislation where I simply do not think it works to have us on this bill. There are many other important issues we need to finish before Wednesday at 2 o'clock.

One of the things we wanted to finish was this bill. The majority leader badly wanted to finish this bill. The Senate badly wanted the bill. It is important for this institution and it is important for the country, but unless the managers get a list of amendments, we are not going to finish this bill.

I suggest perhaps to the leader that tomorrow maybe we should go to some of the other legislation that has to be done before we get out of here on Wednesday. I know the Senator from Texas feels strongly about a matter that is in the bill. But I would suggest to him that he should offer an amendment, debate it, and let the cards fall where they may.

But, as I said, the unanimous consent request that has been propounded does not limit debate or amendments in any way.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Ohio.

Mr. VOINOVICH. Mr. President, I rise to speak in opposition to the motion to strike BRAC from the Defense Authorization bill and to speak on behalf of amendments that would put the money that we would save to better use in terms of our national security.

We just elected a new President of the United States. He selected an outstanding management team: Colin Powell, Secretary of State; Donald Rumsfeld, Defense; people who are well seasoned in terms of our national security interests. It seems to me if that team we are entrusting the security of the United States of America to believes the BRAC process would be well taken in the best interests of the United States of America and would serve our national security needs that we ought to follow their leadership in that regard.

If we have confidence in them moving forward with all the other aspects of securing our national defense, we ought to also give them some recognition and approval in terms of what they want to do in terms of our infrastructure and our bases in the United States and throughout the world.

I hope the Members of the Senate will consider their recommendations.

As recently as September 21 after the national tragedy on the 11th, Secretary Rumsfeld came back and said to the Armed Services Committee: We want to do one thing. We are giving to us. I urge my colleagues to pay attention to the folks to whom we have entrusted our security.

Almost two weeks ago, the American people watched in horror as the terrorist attack on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon unfolded before our very eyes.

As the nation slowly recovers, the image that no one will forget is that of Fire, Police and emergency service personnel running towards the flames and destruction while terrified individuals ran the other way.

These brave men and women knew they were racing into obvious danger, risking their own lives in order to save others, but each one knew—and accepted—the fact—that it was their job to do so.

Just three days after the attack on the Pentagon, I got an opportunity to see the devastation at that familiar landmark first-hand.

I was struck by the looks of quiet determination on the faces of the rescue personnel, each knowing the serious business they faced, and contemplating the serious business they have yet to do.

Last Thursday, I was in New York City with 40 of my colleagues to tour the World Trade Center site. Standing at "ground zero," seeing that devastation first hand, has sealed my resolve to do whatever I can to make sure that such terrorism is never again used upon the United States of America.

It is important for the future of our nation—our children and grandchildren—that we support the President. The President was absolutely right in his speech to the nation last Thursday evening when he said "Americans should not expect one battle, but a lengthy campaign unlike any other we have ever seen."

As I said on the floor of the Senate the day after this heinous attack, "our actions must be ongoing, relentless, and be dedicated to excising the cancer of terrorism wherever it raises its ugly head."

And if we expect to win this war, we will need the resources necessary to do so. And the one resource we need above all others is human capital.

The American people have demanded—and rightly so—that we make our airports and commercial aircraft safer.

They want this government to turn the full force of the FBI towards conducting investigations and pursuing terrorism suspects.

They have urged us to beef-up our border patrols and strengthen our immigrations and customers enforcement.

And most of all, they want this nation to use the full force of its intelligence, law enforcement and military apparatus to root out and squash every terrorist organization in the world.

To ask their government to do these things is the right of every American, but these will not be easy tasks to accomplish, Mr. President.

And they will not be easy because at this moment, the federal government faces a human capital crisis; we are losing the very people we need to run our government—and their valuable experience—with each passing month.

And as they retire, we are not doing enough to replace them with the "best and the brightest:" the individuals who will carry-on the important work of our nation.

The human capital crisis saps our strength as a nation, and at this critical time in our history, we cannot afford to be vulnerable.

Since I was elected to the Senate, I have devoted a great deal of my time to examining this crisis in the Federal workforce and how we can address it.

I can tell you that we need a unified strategy to rebuild the federal civil service in light of the challenges it confronts—especially in the aftermath of the attack on our nation on September 11.
The human capital crisis extends not just to our security and law enforcement agencies, but it includes virtually every department, agency, and office in the Federal Government.

While the entire Federal Government is in need of a massive infusion of high quality human capital, I am most concerned about the workforce of the national security establishment, because national security is the most important responsibility of the Federal Government.

The Commission, which was chartered by former Defense Secretary William Cohen in 1998 and chaired by former Senators Warren Rudman and Gary Hart, undertook a comprehensive evaluation of our national security strategy and structure.

The final report of the Commission, “Road Map for National Security: Imperative for Change,” was released this past February. It includes 50 recommendations on such areas as recapitalizing America’s strengths in science and education, institutional redesign of critical national security agencies, the human requirements for national security, and securing the national homeland.

On this latter point, I am pleased that the President has taken quick action to establish an Office of Homeland Security. The head of that office, Governor Tom Ridge is a friend of mine, and I know that he is more than able to face this challenge.

Regarding human capital, the Commission’s final report concludes:

As it enters the 21st century, the United States finds itself on the brink of an unprecedented crisis of competence in government. The maintenance of American power in the world depends on the quality of U.S. government personnel, civic and military, at all levels. We must take immediate action in the personnel area to ensure that the United States can meet future challenges.

The report went on the state that: . . . it is the Commission’s view that fixing the personnel problem is a precondition for fixing virtually everything else that needs repair in the institutional edifice of U.S. national security policy.

The General Accounting Office’s Comptroller General, David Walker, also pointed to the human capital crisis as a growing problem in our national security establishment, stating at a hearing I held in February that:

At the Department of Defense, where a Defense Science Board task force found that “there is no overarching framework” for planning DOD’s future workforce, civilian downsizing has led to skills and experience imbalances that are jeopardizing acquisition and logistics. In addition, the State Department is having difficulty recruiting and retaining Foreign Service Officers. . . .

In fact, we have less people today applying to the Foreign Service. And of those people who we are finding those very high standards, less of them are going in the Foreign Service than ever before.

I believe Secretary Schlesinger and Comptroller General Walker hit it right on the head when it comes to human capital.

Consider that we are currently making preparations to take on Osama bin Laden and his Taliban protectors and we don’t have enough people who speak their language.

Consider that the investigation that is underway by the FBI is hampered by a lack of language specialists.

Indeed, the Washington Post reported on September 17 that . . . although investigators are receiving large quantities of data from documents and wiretaps, two well-placed former law enforcement officials said the FBI suffers a lack of Arabic linguists and analysts.

In fact, the situation is such that, the United States is now advertising for anyone who speaks Farsi or Arabic to come forward and help out as translators in the aftermath of the September 11 tragedies.

I do not know how many people in the national security establishment actually speak Farsi, but it is apparent that we do not have enough.

And while I believe we need a full scale assault on human capital crisis in the Federal Government, again, the first and foremost obligation of the Nation is to ensure the defense of its citizens.

For the last 2 1/2 years, I have been working on a targeted piece of the human capital needs of the civilian defense workforce.

I remind my colleagues that during the 1990s, over 280,000 Defense Department civilian positions were eliminated with little or no regard for work force planning. On top of that, new hiring was severely restricted.

Taken together, these two factors have inhibited the development of midlevel career, civilian professionals—the men and women who serve a vital role in the management and development of our Nation’s military.

To help remedy this, Senator DeWine and I amended last year’s defense authorization bill and provided the Department with a special authority to reshape its workforce after a decade of significant downsizing.

The authority provided to the Department last year allowed it to offer 1,000 voluntary separation incentive payments in fiscal year 2001, and 8,000 total incentive payments and voluntary early retirements—4,000 in fiscal year 2002 and 4,000 in fiscal year 2003—for the purpose of reshaping that workforce. Last year’s defense authorization bill required these authorities to be reauthorized this year.

Human capital is the Federal Government’s most valuable resource, and this program is only a downpayment on the changes and authorities the U.S. will need to enact and implement to revitalize the civilian side of our defense establishment.

The amendment Senator DeWine and I are offering to section 1113 of this bill is simple: it reauthorizes these important workforce reshaping proposals for both fiscal years 2002 and 2003.

Wright-Patterson Air Force Base in Dayton, Ohio, is an excellent example of the challenge facing military installations across the country. Wright-Patterson is the headquarters of the Air Force Materiel Command, employing 10,900 civilian Federal workers.

By 2005, 40 percent of the workforce will be age 55 or older and another 10 percent will be between 50 and 54 years of age. Thirty-three percent will be in their forties. Only 6 percent will be age 35 to 39, and less than 2 percent will be under the age of 34.

According to these numbers, by 2005—only 4 years from now—60 percent of Wright-Patterson’s civilian employees will be eligible for either early or regular retirement.

There is a legitimate concern that when significant portions of the civilian workforce at Wright-Patterson and other military bases retire, including hundreds of key leaders and employees with crucial expertise, the remaining workforce could be left without experienced leadership and most important institutional knowledge.

Military base leaders—indeed, the entire Defense establishment—need to be given the flexibility to hire new employees so they can begin to develop another generation of civilian leaders and employees who will be able to provide critical support to our men and women in uniform.

I thank Chairman Levin and Senator Warner for their support on this amendment.

Incredibly, with a human capital crisis facing our Nation and the report on the vulnerability of U.S. security in the year 2000, it seems that the House of Representatives may not reauthorize the workforce reshaping program that Congress passed last year. We should be very, very concerned about this.

If the provisions of our amendment are not included in the House bill, I would urge the House conferees to join in support of this amendment as the final version of the Defense Authorization Act is being debated.

Let me state again that this amendment does not address all of the human capital needs of the Defense Department. It is just a small down payment.

Additional action needs to be taken to help ensure that the Department of Defense recruits and retains a quality workforce so that our Armed Forces may remain the best in the world and be able to keep the world secure in the 21st century.

I will continue to work towards that goal, and I will be introducing a more comprehensive bill that not only responds to the human capital crisis in the U.S. security establishment, but in the entire Federal Government as well. In the wake of these attacks, our men and women in Government all across the Nation have a renewed sense of purpose—to keep America safe and preserve our freedoms. I have never seen more determination and patriotism in my entire life.

Right now, law enforcement and military personnel are standing vigilant to watch over America. The Border Patrol, the Customs Service, and the Immigration and Naturalization Service are closely monitoring who is coming into the United States and who is leaving. The Navy and Coast Guard are guarding our ports and patrolling our waters. Tens of thousands of reservists have been called up to assist in these activities. At this moment, troops are being deployed in Southwest and Central Asia.

In the days and weeks and months ahead, our brave soldiers, sailors, airmen and Marines will be called upon to risk their lives and, in some cases, give their lives in an effort to rid the world of the evil scourge of terrorism. Still, Mr. President, as much as we are asking our military personnel and our Government employees to do what we are asking them to do right now, more is going to be asked of them. More will be asked of them.

We are asking the future generations of this Nation to give the Federal Government the tools it needs to help retain and attract the best and the brightest. I believe our amendment is a good first start towards getting that job done.

I think all of us know, if we want to win the World Series or we want to win the Super Bowl, we need the best and the brightest. That is what we need. And the best and the brightest have not been coming to the Federal Government. In fact, I have talked to the dean of Harvard’s John F. Kennedy School, Dean Nye. He is very concerned about the fact that 10 years ago, 70 percent of their brightest people would be going into Government; today it is around 40 percent. So we have a long way to go.

I hope with this amendment we will be able to attract some of those people to our civilian defense establishment.

Mr. BAUCUS. Mr. President, I rise today to join my colleagues, Senator Bunning in strong support of Amendment 1622. This important provision would prevent military base closures through 2003.

In the light of the recent, tragic events, implementing another round of base closures could be a dangerous decision. We are entering a new phase of heightened national security in our great Nation. And President Bush has correctly warned of the continued threat to the security of the United States from terrorist groups and rogue states. I believe that base closures would not be in our country’s best interest any time in the near future.

While the defense budget can be increased in a matter of days for increased intelligence efforts or readiness assistance, the same is not true of the force structure or the base structure. Once property is converted to civilian use, as it would be under another round of Base Closures, it is, for all practical purposes, permanently lost as a military asset.

I would like to draw attention to Malmstrom Air Force Base in my home State of Montana. After two weeks of rigorous evaluations, the 31st Space Wing’s operations, security, maintenance, communications personnel, and equipment were recently given an “excellent” overall rating for Combat Capability Assessment. A very high mark! I’d like to congratulate them on a job well done.

It would take months or even years to reach this state of effectiveness if we had to start from scratch to re-engage the base. To lose this asset in moments of heightened national security could permanently scar our force capability to respond.

While protection of our national security and military readiness is enough of a reason to halt base closures, there are additional concerns to address, as well: first, while reducing spending is the main motivation behind base closures, studies have shown that the additional funds are never realized. The majority of savings comes from reduction of personnel, which is not directly tied to base closures. And reduction of personnel shouldn’t be an option given the current circumstances. Second, there is no procedure for selecting which bases are closed. And that is very troubling. “Military value” is only the definition currently used and is open to interpretation. A concrete set of criteria must be developed before any further base closures are conducted.

Since September 11, we have seen that our economic security is clearly tied to our national security. In order to have both our military and our economy, we must maintain strength in our military.

We do not have months or years to wait while our bases are refurbished with military personnel, equipment and missions. If additional bases were closed, we would waste valuable resources as we scrambled to reinstate a base during a time of high security. Now is not the time to limit our military’s ability to respond. I urge my colleagues to vote against further base closures and support amendment 1622.

Mr. HATCH. Mr. President, I rise in support of this amendment to the Defense Authorization Bill. I must tell you that I have thought long and hard on the subject of base closings. The arguments for and against initiating another process which might lead to additional base closures have weighed heavily on my mind. I have the deepest respect for Defense Secretary Rumsfeld and I know how hard he is working to find efficiencies and economies within the Department of Defense. I know he believes that the time money spent preparing for base closings will contribute to this effort. Military bases and the military establishment need to be focused on the war effort. Our military leaders and base commanders throughout the country do not need to be worrying about justifying their installations’ existence. The communities around the bases do not need to be worrying about their future economic well-being. At a time when we, as a Nation, face a future, we need not take on a process that is rife with uncertainty and turmoil and which distracts from our national goals.

Additionally, we do not yet know what force structure will be required to accomplish all the missions associated with this new 21st century warfare. I believe it will take some time to determine what our military should look like. Why would we start a base closure process when we have no idea what shape or size our forces will take? Equally important, we do not know which bases will be key to our efforts in building an effective homeland security network.

There is great debate about how much base closings cost and how much base closings save. In a time of economic uncertainty, I do not believe it is wise to spend millions of dollars on a base closure process. I am not willing to sacrifice the readiness of our armed forces for theoretical savings.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. LEVIN. Will the Senator from Nebraska yield for an inquiry?

Mr. NELSON of Nebraska. I am happy to yield.
Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I am wondering if my friend from Oklahoma would agree with me on the following procedure, that after Senator Nelson speaks—I understand that is going to be on the BRAC amendment, I want to speak on the BRAC amendment—that unless others notify our Cloakrooms that they wish to speak on the BRAC amendment, at that point we would be done with that debate. We would then move to the amendments offered by the Senator from Oklahoma. I don’t want to put that in the form of a UC, but I will state that would be my intention. I am wondering whether or not the Senator will concur.

Mr. INHOFE. I do concur in that. In fact, I will go along with a UC to that effect, whatever the Senator wishes.

Mr. LEVIN. We are not sure yet if anyone else wants to speak on BRAC. I would ask if any of our colleagues want to speak on an amended QDR that they let our Cloakrooms know so we would then be able to accommodate those Senators before we move to the Senator’s two amendments. I thank my friend from Nebraska.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Nebraska.

Mr. NELSON of Nebraska. Mr. President, I rise in support of the amendment of the Senator from Kentucky to strike the BRAC language from the fiscal year 2002 Defense authorization bill.

Senator DORGAN referred to Secretary Rumsfeld’s label for BRAC, the Efficient Facilities Initiative, as “iffy.” I have to agree with him. I think it is iffy in terms of cost, iffy in terms of our present force structure, and would be iffy to the morale of our troop force.

On Tuesday, September 11, the strategic environment in which the United States operates was completely changed, certainly, as it relates to the military as well. Many issues that crowded our plate disappeared, and we have all begun to focus on the current crisis. I believe that change in environment involves base closures.

I said at the time we were debating this issue during the Defense authorization bill that we should wait on the QDR before we voted to give the administration the ability to close bases. That point of view was not shared by every member of the Armed Services Committee, and accordingly the BRAC language was included in the authorization bill.

We are now told that the Department of Defense will submit an on-time QDR to the Congress and that DOD has indicated publicly that QDR to us just as soon as they can at a later date to address the current crisis.

Authorizing another round of BRAC without first reviewing the QDR and without first admitting that our strategic environment has shifted dramatically is a classical case of putting the cart before the horse. I didn’t think that BRAC was right before September 11, and I don’t think our military knows if it is right now.

We know, for example, as a result of the September 11 events, our fighter jets are flying over cover major U.S. cities. Those jets need bases from which to fly in and out. It strikes me as a rather odd time to be closing bases.

Now that we are in the process of creating a homeland defense office, what role will our bases play in the protection of our major cities? Will we need increased ground defenses which are located at bases which could otherwise be closed? What role will bases play in our new security structure? Again, we haven’t had the opportunity to think this through and, therefore, we must, in fact, set aside the BRAC authorization at this time.

Some say that BRAC will provide us significant cost savings. Certainly, I am for cost savings. Over the long term it may be possible, but no one disagrees that in the short run, BRAC costs money. Right now we need every bit of our resources, financial and otherwise, to address our significant force protection concerns.

Finally, this sends a mixed message to the men and women who are now preparing to engage a new and terrible enemy. How can we be united as a country if we are adversely affecting morale? Now is the time to focus on reducing the threat of terrorism, not on relocating and uprooting families from bases. It would be inopportune to include this language in the Defense authorization bill, certainly at this time.

Until I am presented with more persuasive evidence regarding this matter, I simply cannot support an initiative that could hamstring our homeland defense. And in my opinion, it might. Certainly I believe others share that view.

Clearly, it would be prudent to strike the language in the best interest of our country and our military personnel at this time. Let us consider BRAC under less threatening circumstances, when we will have more information at our disposal and when we will know what the QDR expects from our military. Let us not act prematurely. Instead, let’s exercise prudence and do the right thing for the right reason.

I yield.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas.

Mrs. HUTCHISON. Mr. President, I rise to speak on behalf of the Bunning amendment because I don’t think we are ready to make the decisions about the QDR at this time. We didn’t know before September 11 exactly what our troop strength was going to be in the future because we didn’t have the reviews in place yet from the new administration.

Today we know even less about our troop strength, and we certainly need to know how many we are going to have in our component organizations—the Army, Navy, Air Force, and Marines—before we make the decision on which bases we will need for the future. Also we need to know how we are going to do our training. What is the best place to do the training? I have visited bases overseas where we have training facilities, but we have limited airspace in some of those. We have limited missile range in some of those places.

Is it better to do the training there or is it better perhaps to do it at a U.S. base where we have better facilities and more control over the airspace and the ground space? I don’t know the answer to those questions. I know we should have the answer before we make a decision on whether we start closing bases.

I have seen us do two things in previous base closings. I have seen us close some bases before we knew what we could do with them in the future. The Air Force has said that we should have kept some of the training bases in the United States opened, but they were already closed. It was too late to do anything about it.

Secondly, I have not seen us estimate anywhere close to the true cost of closing a base. If I could get real numbers that showed that closing a base really saves money, I would consider having another round of base closings. But until we know what the environmental cleanup is, what the hazards are in each of these bases and what it is going to cost to clean up that base to put it in order for the base to either be sold or given back to the community, depending on what the arrangement is, there is no way I would support a base-closing commission.

I think we are spending more closing these bases than we have keeping them open. I am the ranking member of the Military Construction Subcommittee. We have $150 million going to come to the floor in the next few weeks, $150 million for environmental cleanup that was not anticipated in base closings.

That is not the way we ought to do business. I don’t think we ought to say that environmental cleanup is going to be $15 million and then all of a sudden we have a bill for $150 million and say that is an efficient use of our assets. We have not done our homework yet.

I yield.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I am not saying I am never going to be for a base closing. I will be for a base closing, if I see what our troop strength is projected to be for the next 25 years or even 10 years, if I see that training is going to be done either in America or overseas, but we have studied this wrong so far. In fact, I would support a study that would prepare us for a base-closing round. But I will not support another round of base closings until we have done our homework, until we have a study, until we know how this new war that we have just determined we must wage for the freedom of our country is going to be waged and how long it is going to take and where the bases might be needed. We probably will have more overseas bases. But are they going to be in the same places they are now? Maybe not. Maybe we will have to build new bases in other sites.

So I don’t think we ought to be talking about closing things until we know what is needed in the future. I am not against base closings; I am just against doing it too soon, because I think we are throwing good money after bad if we don't have our ducks in a row and know exactly what our needs will be from the military construction standpoint.

On the Military Construction Subcommittee, I did not like having to spend money on environmental clean-up, when I would have liked to have spent that money building better housing for our service members building more facilities to do the job that we know we must do. Yet we are still cleaning up bases that were closed 10 years ago. I don’t think that is the way we ought to operate. We ought to operate with good business sense. We ought to decide what our troop strength is going to be, where we can best do the training, what our needs are going to be with this new war that we now know we must fight—and we know it is going to be tough. We are going to support the President and give him the resources he needs to make sure we win because freedom is at stake.

The idea that we would have a premature round of base closings is a bad idea whose time has not come. So I appreciate the work of everyone here. I know we have legitimate disagreements on this issue. But I am going to support the Bunning amendment. I hope we can set it aside for this year. I hope we have the will to do something that is not easy. This is not easy for any Member for a variety of reasons. But I think we know that. That is why facilities were not closed until we had commissions that were in place. We make a recommendation to the President, and the President would then have a right under our approach to either say yes or no to the entire list. If he says yes, Congress has the right to say yes or no to the entire list.

This does not abdicate responsibility to a base-closing commission. What it does do is permit us to take the excess infrastructure that is costing us billions, that is detracting from the ability of our warfighters to fight a war, because it means billions of dollars which should go into that effort that are instead being spent to maintain structure that is no longer needed.

We would not put excess baggage on a warfighter. We would not tell that warfighter you have to carry a larger load than is necessary. By keeping bases open, that is exactly what we are doing. We are denying the warfighter the resources that would otherwise go into what is needed in the Defense Department.

That is the issue. The issue, if anything, it seems to me, is sharper since 9-11. More than ever, we must avoid waste. More than ever, we must have the will to do something that is not easy. This is not easy for any Member for a variety of reasons. But I think we know that. That is why facilities were not closed until we had commissions that were in place. Congressional Record—Senate about 21 percent of our domestic sites. They do not need authority legislatively to close overseas facilities. They have that without our action, and they have those 59 percent of the overseas sites. That is quite a difference from what they have closed in this country. So I do not think that argument works either.

Then we have been told as well that we should know what we want in our force structure before we move for some additional flexibility on our base structure. We ought to know what our force structure is going to be, and there is no doubt about that. Before the base structure is concluded, surely we must know, or should know, what the force structure is going to look like. That is why in this bill we require that “the Secretary shall carry out a comprehensive review of the military installations of the Department of Defense inside the United States based on the force structure plan submitted under section A(2).” And that plan is very specific. That is part of the budget justification documents submitted to Congress in support of the budget request of the Department of Defense for fiscal year 2003: The Secretary shall include a force structure plan for the Armed Forces based on the assessment of the Secretary in the Quadrennial Defense Review under another section.

The force structure plan is required by our law. We have heard many times this afternoon and this evening, and correctly, that we ought to base our base structure on our force structure and we do not know what that force structure is going to be.

The answer is we know that the force structure must be determined prior to the base structure recommendations that go to the Base Closure Commission and then from them to us. It is a required piece of the savings.

The Senators who have made this point are right; we should know our force structure before we know our base structure, but the inaccuracy is in their argument that we will not know our force structure before we know our base structure. We have heard many savings, starting in 1990 for each round of base closures.

They have come up with net savings to date of approximately $16 billion. Total savings, and I am rounding this off, is $37 billion. That is gross savings. Those are total costs of about $21 billion—again I am rounding that off— with the savings to date of $16 billion.

Recurring savings from those rounds each year are now about $6 billion per year. That is what we are saving because we are closing excess capacity to walk down this road, and believe me, I know it takes courage. It is not an easy vote. I have been through a few. We have lost our strategic air command bases. We have some other bases, other facilities that are very nervous about the possibility that maybe in the next round they will be caught. So this is not an easy vote, but it is a cost-effective vote. It is a vote that the President, his Secretary of Defense, the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of this unique military leader we have ever had in front of our committee, civilian or uniformed, is pleading with us to make.

The plea, it seems to me, is more eloquent than ever after September 11 because it is so critically important that we not load down our defense with unneeded infrastructure anywhere than we would load down a soldier with unneeded baggage. They are related.

I hope that tomorrow we will cast this vote. The country will be looking at us, the Nation will be looking at us, whether we are willing to do some tough things that our uniform and our civilian leadership in the Defense Department and our President are calling upon us to do. I cannot think of any way more likely to state this cause, other than to read from a letter of August 30 from Secretary Rumsfeld and General Shelton. I expect we will be hearing from the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs on this same issue tomorrow.

This letter, which I will make part of the RECORD, makes a very potent case for saving the money. I ask unanimous consent that the letter be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

HON. CARL LEVIN, Chairman, Committee on Armed Services, United States Senate, Washington, DC.

Dear Mr. Chairman and Senator Warner: We are writing to underscore how critically important it is that Congress authorize the Department to conduct another round of base closures and realignments. The Department must reshape and restructure its installations to serve the country's national security in the 21st century. Currently, our installations do not match and therefore do not address the current and projected force structure. Underutilized facilities, estimated to be 23 percent of DoD's gross, are a waste of public resources and an impediment to our efforts to protect our national security. Because current law makes it virtually impossible for the Department to make prudent decisions in managing its facilities, we can only rectify these problems through a Congressionally authorized round of base closures and realignments in 2003. Drawing on the process from past rounds, the Efficient Facilities Initiative is an objective way to rationalize an infrastructure on the basis of military value, verified by an independent commission. In addition, both the General Accounting Office and the Congressional Budget Office confirm DoD’s savings estimates from prior rounds.

The Department is committed to accomplishing the necessary reshaping and restructuring in a single round of base closures and realignments to minimize the difficulty these efforts pose to communities surrounding our bases. While the process may be hard, the record from our previous rounds indicates that the majority of affected communities actually emerge in a better economic condition than prior to the closure or realignment. As before, the Department will work closely with these communities in fostering economic reuse.

We know you share our concerns that additional base closures are a necessity to provide resources necessary to meet essential national security requirements. We simply must take action. Please do not hesitate to call on us in your efforts to secure passage of this important legislation.

Sincerely,

GENERAL HENRY H. SHELTON, USA,
Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

DONALD H. RUMSFELD,
Secretary of Defense.

Mr. LEVIN. I thank the Chair, and I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Virginia.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I commend my colleague for his strong stance on base closure. He and Senator MCCAIN have worked for a number of years on this issue.

I do not know how many years ago it was I joined on that legislation, and then, of course, we had a problem with the previous administration. Anyway, I was with them up until that problem arrived. So it is indeed long overdue.

Even though I am proud to say my State has a very significant share of military installations, I stand with my colleagues and the vote of the Senate Armed Services Committee because I think that is what it should be, an efficiency that should be given to the Secretary of Defense. We need these savings. We need them desperately.

Mr. President, I believe that concludes the remarks on base closure. I see the Senator from Oklahoma, one of our valued members of the committee. He wishes to, as I understand it, lay down two amendments for tonight, and then the chairman and I will proceed to... do a number of cleared amendments. Am I correct?

Mr. LEVIN. The Senator is correct. We now hopefully will turn to our friends from Oklahoma to offer two amendments. I think one of them we may be able to accept, although I am not sure if that is true, on both sides. If that is true, and I think the Senator knows which one that is, he can offer that one first.

Mr. WARNER. That would be—

Mr. INHOFE. The amendment on the waiver process.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma.

AMENDMENT NO. 1594

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, in an effort to try to get this bill through, which America desperately needs now, I had about 16 amendments on which I worked out arrangements and understandings with other people so that I am down to only three amendments. Of these three amendments, as suggested by the Senator from Michigan, one is without controversy, I thought, until about 5 minutes ago.

My understanding is one Republican Senator is going to object to it. That being the case, we will have to have a rollover on that amendment.

I would like to explain that amendment and hopefully that one Senator would be available and tell us if she is not going to object to it.

Mr. President, for quite a number of years we have had a debate, when we do our defense authorization bills, on an issue that is in place in order to keep an internal ability to handle depot maintenance in areas where it might be considered to be core maintenance; in other words, areas where it is necessary to have that ability in order to fight a war. The concern has been this: With the decreasing number of defense contractors and the decreasing numbers of people who are able to form certain maintenance functions, if we are in a war, we would not want to be held hostage by a single contractor who would be able to keep us from being able to do it internally.

For that reason, some time ago we passed a law that said under that 50/50 bill, which is now 50/50 in our statute, simply this, that 50 percent of the maintenance has to be performed in-house by a depot capable of doing it without outside help. For that reason, and I agree with those who disagree with the 50/50 concept, that this is merely an arbitrary figure, but there has to be some type of a figure and we have not been able to come up with anything since then that is any better than this 50/50. We now say that 50 percent of the maintenance has to be done internally by a public depot.

There is a way they have been able to get around 50/50, and that is if any of the service secretaries say that within their service they could declare there is a national security reason that for 1 year or one period of time we are not going to be able to do 50 percent of the maintenance work in a public depot, if they do that, they do not have to give any reason for it, but they merely say this is for national security.

This has happened a few times so we have gone back to the service secretaries and we have said to them: Tell us why it is as much as 50 percent of the maintenance in a public depot. We have never gotten any good answers, and then we have also asked them afterwards: What are you going to do to ensure that we are going to be able to meet this 50 percent in the next fiscal year? And we have not been able to do that.

I am not saying this critically of any particular service secretary. We need to know why, if we are going to find a loophole around one of our existing laws, this being the 50/50, it is necessary, and what we are going to do in the future to prevent that from being invoked.

So my amendment does simply two things: One, it takes that jurisdiction away from the service secretary and puts it with the President of the United States. He then can delegate it back to the Secretary of Defense. If he is going to say that there is a national security reason that we cannot do 50 percent of the work at a public depot, he has to say why that is and what they are planning to do to correct that in the next fiscal year. That is all it does.

So if people are opposed to the 50/50 concept, fine. Let us pass a bill or try to pass a bill to do away with 50/50. That is not the issue. The issue is if we are going to use a national security waiver to waive 50/50 for a given year, we need to make sure we know why we are doing it and what can be done for the next year to keep from having to do that. So that is simply it.

I was hoping we might have a note from the Senator. We do, and there will be apparently one vote against this.

So that is an explanation, and I am going to ask that this be voted on tomorrow.

I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment has not been sent up yet.

Mr. INHOFE. Yes, the amendment is at the desk. It has been there since last week.

Mr. LEVIN. Will the Senator yield for a minute?

Mr. INHOFE. Yes.

Mr. LEVIN. Will the Senator call up his amendment so it will be pending immediately after the disposition of the Bunning amendment?

Mr. INHOFE. I call up amendment No. 1594 and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the pending amendment is set aside. The clerk will report.

The bill clerk read as follows:

Senator from Oklahoma [Mr. INHOFE] proposes an amendment numbered 1594.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To authorize the President to waive a limitation on performance of depot-level maintenance by non-Federal Government personnel)

At the end of subsection D of title III, add the following:

SEC. 335. REVISION OF AUTHORITY TO WAIVE LIMITATION ON PERFORMANCE OF DEPOT-LEVEL MAINTENANCE.

Section 2466(c) of title 10, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"(c) WAIVER OF LIMITATION.—(1) The President may waive the limitation in subsection (a) for a fiscal year if—

"(A) the President determines that—

"(i) the waiver is necessary for reasons of national security; and

"(ii) compliance with the limitation cannot be achieved through effective management of depot operations consistent with those reasons; and

"(B) the President submits to Congress a notification of the waiver together with—

"(i) a discussion of the reasons for the waiver; and

"(ii) the plan for terminating the waiver and complying with the limitation within two years after the date of the first exercise of the waiver authority under this subsection.

"(2) The President may delegate only to the Secretary of Defense authority to exercise the waiver authority of the President under paragraph (1)."

Mr. WARNER. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the yeas and nays be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. INHOFE. I ask for the yeas and nays.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there a sufficient second? There appears to be a sufficient second.

The yeas and nays were ordered.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, then there would be additional debate available on this amendment because there has been no time agreement relative to this amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator is correct.

Mr. LEVIN. As I understand—perhaps the Chair can confirm—after disposition of the Bunning amendment at approximately 9:45 a.m. or 10 a.m. tomorrow, the debate on the first amendment from the Senator from Oklahoma would recur; is that correct?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. That would then be the pending question, the Senator is correct.

Mr. LEVIN. I ask unanimous consent, so that we can sequence amendments, if the Senator from Oklahoma is willing, that we now set aside the pending amendment and the underlying amendment to allow the Senator from Oklahoma to offer an additional amendment, and then part of that unanimous

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, I send Senate amendment No. 1596 to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The pending amendment will be set aside.

AMENDMENT NO. 1596

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment as follows:

(Purpose: To revise requirements relating to closure of Vieques Naval Training Range)

On page 380, after line 15, insert the following:

SEC. 1066. CLOSURE OF VIEQUES NAVAL TRAINING RANGE.

The Secretary of the Navy may close the Vieques Naval Training Range on the island of Vieques, Puerto Rico, and discontinue live-fire training at that range only if the Chief of Naval Operations and the Commandant of the Marine Corps jointly certify that the training range is no longer needed for the training of units of the Navy and the Marine Corps stationed or deployed in the eastern property.

(b) ACTIONS RELATED TO CLOSURE.—(1) Section 1056 of such Act (114 Stat. 1654A–333) is amended—

(i) by striking subsection (a) and inserting the following:

“(a) Time for Taking Actions.—The actions required or authorized under this section may only be taken upon the closure of the Vieques Naval Training Range by the Secretary of the Navy;”;

(ii) in subsection (b)(1), by striking “Not later than May 1, 2003, the:” and inserting “The:”;

(iii) in subsection (d)(1), by striking “pend- ing the enactment of a law that addresses the disposition of such properties”;

(iv) in subsection (e)(2), “the referendum under section 1933” and all that follows and inserting “the referendum under section 1503 of the Wild Impact Area Act”;

(v) by adding at the end the following new subsection:

“(D) Transfer Authorized.—Training of the Armed Forces may be conducted in the Live Impact Area while the property is under the administrative jurisdiction of the Secretary of the Navy pursuant to a transfer made in accordance with subsection (d).”;

(vi) by striking “paragraph (b)” and inserting “paragraph (c)”; and

(vii) by striking “paragraph (d)” and inserting “paragraph (e)”.

SEC. 1065. ACTIONS UPON CLOSURE OF THE VIEQUES NAVAL TRAINING RANGE.

(a) CONDITIONAL AUTHORITY.—Title XV of the Floyd D. Spence National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2001 (as enacted by Public Law 106–398; 114 Stat. 349–386) is amended by striking sections 1503 and 1504 and inserting the following new sections:

SEC. 1503. RETURN OF PROPERTY TO SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR.

Upon a declaration of war or national emergency necessitating the transfer of administrative jurisdiction of the Live Impact Area to the Secretary of the Interior, who shall assume responsibility for the property and administer the property in accordance with subsection (d).”.

(b) The heading of such section is amended to read as follows:

(c) CONFORMING AMENDMENT.—Section 1507(c) of such Act is amended by striking the issuance of a proclamation described in section 1504(a) or:

Mr. INHOFE. This amendment is one further that there may be some opposition to and it is going to require the years and may well briefly say what we are doing with this. The issue of the Vieques training range has been a contentious one now for a number of years. We did resolve this in such a way that there would be a referendum that would take place on November 6, where the eligible voters among the population of 9,300 people on the island of Vieques would vote as to whether or not the Navy should continue naval training operations on the range.

A lot of things have happened since then. I agreed with that. That was my language in the Defense authorization bill last year. However, since that time we have found we are deploying east coast deployments to the Persian Gulf. A lot of the battle groups have not been able to have adequate training. Since that time we had the war declared upon us by the terrorists on the 11th of September. That has changed everything.

Since that time we have had Puerto Rico come and say they want to support the training of our troops. We currently have, being debated now, a resolution in the legislature in Puerto Rico that is going to say: “We Puerto Ricans, as proud American citizens with the same responsibilities as our brethren in the continental United States, have the obligation of contributing to this fight, allowing and supporting military training and exercises on the island municipality of Vieques.”

Vieques is a municipality of Puerto Rico.

What we believe is a solution to this now and should be put on this bill as an amendment is language that would eliminate the requirement in Section 1503 of the Floyd D. Spence National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2001, requiring a referendum among the Vieques electorate as to whether the Department approves or disapproves of the continuation of training beyond May 1, 2003. Consistent with the commitments made by both the President and the Department of Defense, the Navy is actively planning to discontinue training operations on the island of Vieques in May of 2003 and is committed to identifying a geographical and technological standpoint to provide effective military training. Consequently, a referendum regarding continuation of training past this point is no longer necessary. I still believe that conducting a local referendum on issues critical to the Department of Defense sets a bad precedent and strikes at the heart of military readiness. Enacting legislation that
The amendment (No. 1660) was agreed to. Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, once again, I thank my distinguished colleague. He and I went out there to the Department of Defense just a matter of a few hours following that attack to join the Secretary of Defense. I think it is important we adopt this amendment, so I urge the adoption of the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there is no further debate, the question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 1660) was agreed to.

AMENDMENTS NOS. 1661 THROUGH 1670, EN BLOC

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I send to the desk now 10 amendments and ask they be considered and agreed to en bloc and any statements relating to the amendments be printed in the RECORD.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Michigan (Mr. LEVIN), for himself and Mr. WARNER, proposes amendments numbered 1661 through 1670, en bloc.

Mr. WARNER. The chairman has correctly represented to the Senate the status of this bloc of amendments. We concur, of course.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered. The clerk will report.

The amendments Nos. 1661 through 1670 were agreed to, en bloc, as follows:

AMENDMENT NO. 1661

(Purpose: To authorize emergency supplemental appropriations made for fiscal year 2001)

At the end of subtitle A of title X, add the following:

SEC. 2842. REPEAL OF LIMITATION ON COST OF RENOVATION OF PENTAGON RESERVATION.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, we support Senator WARNER’s amendment. It is obvious the circumstances have changed in a massive way. Senator WARNER knows, probably more than anybody I know of, first-hand, what the necessity is out there. We certainly support his amendment.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, once again, I thank my distinguished colleague. He and I went out there to the Department of Defense just a matter of a few hours following that attack to join the Secretary of Defense. I think it is important we adopt this amendment, so I urge the adoption of the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there is no further debate, the question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 1660) was agreed to.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. LEVIN. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

AMENDMENT NO. 1661

(Purpose: To authorize emergency supplemental appropriations made for fiscal year 2001)

At the end of subtitle A of title X, add the following:

SEC. 1009. AUTHORIZATION OF 2001 EMERGENCY SUPPLEMENTAL APPROPRIATIONS ACT FOR RECOVERY FROM AND RESPONSE TO TERRORIST ATTACKS ON THE UNITED STATES.

(a) AUTHORIZATION.—Amounts authorized to be appropriated to the Department of Defense for fiscal year 2001 in the Floyd D. Spence National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2001 (as enacted into law by Public Law 106–398) are hereby adjusted by the amounts of appropriations made available to the Department of Defense pursuant to

We will become 60-percent dependent upon foreign sources for our ability to flight a war.

I remember a few years ago Don Hodel, Secretary of the Interior, and I used to go to consumption states and make speeches as to how the outcome of every war—back to and including the First World War—has been who controlled the energy supplies. We have gone through the 1990 war, the Persian Gulf war. In 1991, we remember the words of Saddam Hussein who said, ‘‘if we had waited for 10 years to go into Kuwait, the Americans would not have intervened because we would have a missile we could shoot over at them. And now we are dependent upon the Iraqis for our imported oil.

It is very much an issue. There has been a lot of things floating around, including letters saying they are saying this has to do with ANWR. It doesn’t. I only say it’s a issue that should be addressed on this bill, and sometime tomorrow or the next day I will debate this and call for a vote on this.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Virginia [Mr. WARNER], is recognized.

Mr. WARNER. I offer an amendment on behalf of myself and my distinguished colleague, the chairman, Mr. LEVIN. This amendment would eliminate the cap costs that the Congress very wisely and appropriately placed on the costs of the overall renovation of the Department of Defense. Given the tragic attack on September 11—and, coincidentally, that attack was directed at a portion of the building which was the subject of the very contract on which this cap rests—we think it is wise, now, the chairman and I, that the cost of repairing this area of the Department of Defense just would not enable us to work within this cap as now established in current law.

This amendment has been cleared by the chairman on his side. I believe we are ready to proceed on it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Virginia (Mr. WARNER), for himself and Mr. LEVIN, proposes an amendment numbered 1660.

Mr. WARNER. I ask unanimous consent the reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

AMENDMENT NO. 1660

(Purpose: To repeal the limitation on the cost of renovation of the Pentagon Reservation)

Strike section 2842, relating to a limitation on availability of funds for renovation of the Pentagon Reservation, and insert the following:

This section be in appropria... to the 2001 Emergency Supplemental Appropriations Act for Recovery from and Response to Terrorist Attacks on the United States.

(b) QUARTERLY REPORT.—(1) Promptly after the end of each quarter of a fiscal year, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the Committees on Armed Services of the Senate and the House of Representatives a report on the use of funds made available to the Department of Defense pursuant to the 2001 Emergency Supplemental Appropriations Act for Recovery from and Response to Terrorist Attacks on the United States.

(2) The first report under paragraph (1) shall be submitted not later than January 2, 2002.

(c) PROPOSED ALLOCATION AND PLAN.—The Secretary of Defense shall submit to the Committees on Armed Services of the Senate and the House of Representatives, not later than 15 days after the date on which the Director of the Office of Management and Budget submits to the Committees on Appropriations of the Senate and House of Representatives the proposed allocation and plan required by the 2001 Emergency Supplemental Appropriations Act for Recovery from and Response to Terrorist Attacks on the United States, a proposed allocation and plan for the use of the funds made available to the Department of Defense pursuant to that Act.

AMENDMENT NO. 1662

(Purpose: To authorize the use of contractors to provide logistical support to the Multinational Force and Observers)

At the end of subtitle B of title XII, add the following:

SEC. 1217. ACQUISITION OF LOGISTICAL SUPPORT FOR SECURITY FORCES.

Section 5 of the Multinational Force and Observers Participation Resolution (22 U.S.C. 3424) is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

“(d)(1) The United States may use contractors to provide logistical support to the Multinational Force and Observers under this section in lieu of providing such support through support units to the Multinational Force and Observers of members of the United States Armed Forces.

“(2) Notwithstanding subsections (a) and (b) and section 7(b), support by a contractor under this subsection may be provided without reimbursement whenever the President determines that such action enhances or supports the national security interests of the United States.”

AMENDMENT NO. 1663

(Purpose: To clarify the use of State Department authority to contract for personal services in support of activities of the Department of Defense and other departments and agencies of the United States)

At the end of subtitle B of title XII, add the following:

SEC. 1217. PERSONAL SERVICES CONTRACTS TO BE PERFORMED BY INDIVIDUALS OR ORGANIZATIONS ABROAD.

Section 2 of the State Department Basic Authorities Act of 2000 (22 U.S.C. 2620) is amended by adding at the end the following:

“(n) exercise the authority provided in subsection (c), upon the request of the Secretary of Defense, for the head of any other department or agency of the United States, to enter into personal service contracts with individuals to perform services in support of the Department of Defense or such other department or agency, as the case may be.”

AMENDMENT NO. 1664

(Purpose: To provide SBP eligibility for survivors of retirement-ineligible members of the uniformed services who die while on active duty)

At the end of subtitle D of title VI, add the following:

SEC. 652. SBP ELIGIBILITY OF SURVIVORS OF RETIREMENT-INELIGIBLE MEMBERS OF THE UNIFORMED SERVICES WHO DIE WHILE ON ACTIVE DUTY.

(a) SURVIVING SPOUSE ANNUITY.—Section 1448(d) of title 10, United States Code, is amended by striking paragraph (1) and inserting the following:

“(1) SURVIVING SPOUSE ANNUITY.—The Secretary concerned shall pay an annuity under this subchapter to the surviving spouse of—

“(A) a member who dies while on active duty after—

“(i) becoming eligible to receive retired pay;

“(ii) qualifying for retired pay except that the member has not applied for or been granted that pay;

“(iii) completing 20 years of active service before the member is eligible to retire as a commissioned officer because the member has not completed 10 years of active commissioned service;

“(B) a member not described in subparagraph (A) who dies in line of duty while on active duty.

(b) COMPUTATION OF SURVIVOR ANNUITY.—Section 1451(c)(1) of title 10, United States Code, is amended—

“(1) SURVIVING SPOUSE ANNUITY.—The Secretary concerned shall pay an annuity under section 1448(d) of title 10 to a surviving spouse of a member becoming eligible to receive retired pay under—

“(A) section 1448(d)(1)(A) of title 10, United States Code, based upon the following:

“(i) becoming eligible to receive retired pay;

“(ii) qualifying for retired pay except that the member has not applied for or been granted that pay;

“(iii) completing 20 years of active service before the member is eligible to retire as a commissioned officer because the member has not completed 10 years of active commissioned service;

“(B) a member not described in subparagraph (A) who dies in line of duty while on active duty.

(c) FUND TREATMENT.—Section 1451(c)(2) of title 10, United States Code, is amended—

“(1) SURVIVING SPOUSE ANNUITY.—The fund may, at the election of the Secretary, enter into personal service contracts with individuals to perform the operations of the Fund or its component funds, including—

“(A) the United States Army Heritage and Education Center at Carlisle Barracks, Pennsylvania; “(B) the United States Army Heritage and Education Center at Fort DeRussy, Hawaii.

(d) PLAN.—(1) The Secretary of Defense shall submit to the Committees on Armed Services of the Senate and the House of Representatives a report on the use of funds made available to the Department of Defense pursuant to the 2001 Emergency Supplemental Appropriations Act for Recovery from and Response to Terrorist Attacks on the United States.

(e) EFFECTIVE DATE AND APPLICABILITY.—This section and the amendments made by this section shall take effect as of September 24, 2001, and shall apply with respect to deaths of members of the Armed Forces occurring on or after that date.

AMENDMENT NO. 1665

(Purpose: To provide for the construction of a parking garage at Fort DeRussy, Hawaii)

At the end of subtitle D of title XXVIII, add the following:

SEC. 2844. CONSTRUCTION OF PARKING GARAGE AT FORT DERUSSY, HAWAII.

(a) AUTHORITY TO ENTER INTO AGREEMENT FOR CONSTRUCTION.—The Secretary of the Army may authorize the Army Morale, Welfare, and Recreation Fund, a non-appropriated fund instrumentality of the Department of Defense (in this section referred to as the “Fund”), to enter into an agreement with a governmental, quasi-governmental, or commercial entity for the construction of a parking garage at Fort DeRussy, Hawaii.

(b) FORM OF AGREEMENT.—The agreement under subsection (a) may take the form of a non-appropriated fund contract, conditional gift, or other agreement determined by the Fund to be appropriate for purposes of construction of the parking garage.

(c) USE OF PARKING GARAGE BY PUBLIC.—The agreement under subsection (a) may permit the use by the general public of the parking garage constructed under the agreement if the Fund determines that the use of the parking garage by the general public will be advantageous to the Fund.

SEC. 2845. TREATMENT OF REVENUES OF FUND PARKING GARAGES AT FORT DERUSSY, HAWAII.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, amounts received by the Fund by reason of the operation of parking garages at Fort DeRussy, including the parking garage constructed under the agreement under subsection (a), shall be treated as non-appropriated funds and shall accrue to the benefit of the Fund or its component funds, including the Armed Forces Recreation Center—Hawaii (Hale Koa Hotel).

AMENDMENT NO. 1666

(Purpose: To modify the authority for the development of the United States Army Heritage and Education Center at Carlisle Barracks, Pennsylvania)

Strike section 2841, relating to the development of the United States Army Heritage and Education Center at Carlisle Barracks, Pennsylvania, and insert the following:

SEC. 2841. DEVELOPMENT OF UNITED STATES ARMY HERITAGE AND EDUCATION CENTER AT CARLISLE BARRACKS, PENNSYLVANIA.

(a) AUTHORITY TO ENTER INTO AGREEMENT.—(1) The Secretary of the Army may enter into an agreement with the Military Heritage Foundation, a not-for-profit organization, for the design, construction, and operation of a facility for the United States Army Heritage and Education Center at Carlisle Barracks, Pennsylvania.

(2) The facility referred to in paragraph (1) shall be used to store and display of artfacts, research facilities, classrooms, and offices, and for education and other activities, agreed to by the Secretary, relating to the heritage of the Army. The facility may also be used to support such education and training as the Secretary considers appropriate.

(b) DESIGN AND CONSTRUCTION.—The Secretary may, at the election of the Secretary—
(1) accept funds from the Military Heritage Foundation for the design and construction of the facility referred to in subsection (a); or
(2) permit the Military Heritage Foundation to contract for the design and construction of the facility referred to in subsection (a).

(e) ACCEPTANCE OF FACILITY.—(1) Upon satisfactory completion, as determined by the Secretary, of the facility referred to in subsection (a), the Secretary may accept the facility from the Military Heritage Foundation, and all right, title, and interest in and to the facility shall vest in the United States.
(2) Upon becoming property of the United States, the facility shall be under the jurisdiction of the Secretary.

(d) USE OF CERTAIN GIFTS.—(1) Under regulations prescribed by the Secretary, the Comptroller General of the United States may accept gifts for the purpose of the United States Army Heritage and Education Center or for the development and construction of a blended use, multicare facility at the Naval Home.
(2) The Secretary may pay or authorize the payment of any reasonable and necessary expenses in connection with the conveyance or transfer of a gift, devise, or bequest under this subsection.

(e) ADDITIONAL TERMS AND CONDITIONS.—The Secretary shall require such additional terms and conditions in connection with the agreement authorized to be entered into by subsection (a) as the Secretary considers appropriate to protect the interest of the United States.

AMENDMENT NO. 1698

(Purpose: To require a study and report on the interconnectivity of National Guard Distributive Training Technology Project networks and related public and private networks)

At the end of subtitle C of title XI, add the following:

SEC. 1027. C OMPROLLER GENERAL STUDY AND REPORT ON INTERCONNECTIVITY OF NATIONAL GUARD DISTRIBUTIVE TRAINING TECHNOLOGY PROJECT NETWORKS AND RELATED PUBLIC AND PRIVATE NETWORKS.

(a) STUDY.—The Comptroller General of the United States shall conduct a study of the interconnectivity between the voice, data, and video networks of the National Guard Distributive Training Technology Project (DTTP) and other Department of Defense, Federal, State, and private voice, data, and video networks, including the real-time transfer of training project of the Army known as Classroom XXI, networks of public and private institutions of higher education, and networks of the Federal Emergency Management Agency and other Federal, State, and local emergency preparedness and response agencies.

(b) Purposes.—The purposes of the study under subsection (a) are as follows:
(1) To identify existing capabilities, and future requirements, involving all aspects of voice, data, and video for purposes of operational support of disaster response, homeland defense, command and control of mobilization of military personnel, training of first responders, and shared use of the networks of the Distributive Training Technology Project by government and members of the networks.
(2) To identify appropriate connections between the networks of the Distributive Training Technology Project and networks of the Federal Emergency Management Agency, State emergency management agencies, and other Federal and State agencies having disaster response functions.
(3) To identify requirements for connectivity between the networks of the Distributive Training Technology Project and the other Department of Defense, Federal, State, and private networks referred to in subsection (a) in the event of a significant disruption of providers of public services.
(4) To identify means of protecting the networks of the Distributive Training Technology Project from outside intrusion, including an assessment of the manner in which so protecting the networks facilitates the mission of the National Guard and homeland defense.
(5) To identify impediments to interconnectivity between the networks of the Distributive Training Technology Project and such other networks.
(6) To identify means of improving interconnectivity between the networks of the Distributive Training Technology Project and such other networks.

(c) PARTICULAR MATTERS.—In conducting the study, the Comptroller General shall:
(1) whether, and to what extent, national security concerns impede interconnectivity between the networks of the Distributive Training Technology Project and such other networks.
(2) whether, and to what extent, limitations on the technological capabilities of the Department of Defense impede interconnectivity between the networks of the Distributive Training Technology Project and such other networks.
(3) whether, and to what extent, other concerns or limitations impede interconnectivity between the networks of the Distributive Training Technology Project and such other networks.
(4) whether, and to what extent, any national security, technological, or other concerns justify limitations on interconnectivity between the networks of the Distributive Training Technology Project and such other networks.
(5) potential improvements to National Guard or other Department technologies in order to improve interconnectivity between the networks of the Distributive Training Technology Project and such other networks.

(d) REPORT.—Not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Comptroller General shall submit to the Committees on Armed Services of the Senate and the House of Representatives a report on the study conducted under subsection (a). The report shall contain the results of the study, and include any recommendations that the Comptroller General considers appropriate in light of the study.
jointly with the private sector and other interested parties. There are major Federal savings and national security improvements that can result from them, because they are both efficient and effective. I am proud to be joined by Senator Santorum in this effort. I thank my colleagues for their support for this technical amendment.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. LEVIN. I move to lay the motion to reconsider on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

Mr. KENNEDY. Mr. President, the aftermath of the despicable terrorist attacks continue to weigh heavily on our hearts, and I again express my deepest sympathy to those lost and injured in the attacks, as well as their families. We will do everything in our power to bring all of those responsible to justice and I am confident that our military, intelligence, and law enforcement will stand ready to act in response to act. Congress will see that they are given all they need to accomplish the missions they are given.

This bill increases defense spending. It focuses on improving readiness, and also improving service member quality of life. It contains the largest defense spending increase in many years. At $329 billion, a $33 billion increase over last year, this bill represents a significant new investment in service members and the nation’s security.

As chairman of the Seapower Subcommittee, I have strongly advocated strengthening Navy, Marine Corps and Strategic Lift forces. The worldwide presence of our armed forces requires us to be a stone ship. The Navy is facing a serious shortfall in the numbers of ships available to meet the Nation’s future security needs. This bill fully funded the President’s request for most major programs, including the Virginia-class attack submarine, the DDG-51 AEGIS Destroyer, research and development for the DD-21 land attack destroyer, and 13 additional C-17 airlift aircraft.

The bill also supports a series of transformation initiatives, especially the Trident submarine conversion. The Navy’s budget called for converting only two of these submarines. The bill includes an increase of $307 million to reserve the option of converting all four submarines. I believe that these converted submarines can make a significant contribution to the Navy in the future.

The committee also considered the V-22 Osprey program and the future role of this aircraft. We agree that the product is ready to ramp up and we have authorized the minimum sustaining production of nine aircraft. It is the committee’s belief that the minimum sustaining rate is nine rather than twelve aircraft. This reduced number of aircraft will also limit future retrofit costs that the existing V-22 aircraft will require. The committee also recommended the program for the Air Force V-22 version, the CV-22, be restructured by removing the funding for acquisition, but supporting research and development.

Our Armed Forces continue to operate and train at a more robust level than at any other time during this Nation’s history. At this moment, service members are being mobilized for possible action in the current crisis. They are already risking their lives daily by actively enforcing the no-fly zones over Iraq and patrolling the Arabian Gulf for oil smugglers. Our men and women in uniform are overseas providing stability in Kosovo, and they are now involved in bringing peace to Macedonia. They are also monitoring the demilitarized zone in Korea, and they are assisting in the battle against drugs in Central and South America. These activities are in addition to the daily exercises and training activities that we support service members and their families overseas to maintain the readiness of our forces.

All of America’s men and women in uniform put our Nation’s interests above their own. When called upon, they risk their lives for our freedom. As a nation, we often take this sacrifice for granted, until we are reminded of it again by tragic events such as the vicious attack on the Pentagon.

They face constant risks in training for the many missions that they are called upon to carry out. This past year, seven Army personnel lost their lives when their helicopters crashed in a night training exercise in Hawaii. Two Marine AV-8B pilots died in a training flight in North Carolina. We lost 21 National Guardsmen when their transport plane went down in Florida. The cost of training in the name of peace and security is high, and we are very proud of the brave men and women who go to extremes to defend our Nation and our ideals.

In this bill, we continue the efforts to support service members and their families. The bill grants a minimum of a 5 percent pay raise, with personnel in certain pay grades receiving raises between 6 and 10 percent. This raise is the largest since 1982, and the third straight year that the committee has authorized a significant pay raise above the rate of inflation.

The committee also recognizes the importance of providing service members with decent housing and work conditions. The bill provides $451 million above the budget request for military family housing and facilities.

The bill also expedites the timeline for the gradual reduction to zero of the out-of-pocket housing costs for service members living off base, from 2005 to 2003. We also provide additional funding to cover the costs of military health care for service members and their families. These are important quality of life improvements that our dedicated, well-trained men and women deserve, and they are important steps in retaining them in the armed forces.

The bill also allows the transferability of GI bill benefits. Senator Cleland’s amendment to this bill includes the authorization of $30 million to allow the transfer of up to 18 months of unused G.I. Bill education benefits to a family member, in return for a commitment of four more years of service. These benefits are important, because the health care system did not adequately meet his family’s needs. In order to continue his eligibility for Medicaid, he could not accept a promotion to a higher rank.

No member of the Armed Forces should ever be put in the position of having to choose between health care for their disabled child and serving our country. These families should not have to rely on Medicaid to obtain health care that works.

The Tricare Modernization Act has been endorsed by The Military Coalition, a consortium of armed forces and veterans’ organizations representing 5.5 million current and former members of the military and their families. We need to correct the injustices that这些 families have suffered by integrating services for disabled dependents into the basic military health benefits program, so that no medically necessary services are denied.

Last year, the Armed Services Committee meeded the needs of our military retirees, and addressed their number-one priority—the cost of prescription drugs. This benefit, which began in April, lets all men and women in uniform know that we care about their service.

The bill also provides an additional $217 million for protection of our forces against terrorism, for counter-terrorism training, research and development to protect our forces against attacks by weapons of mass destruction, and to help the services in their efforts to support civilian agencies in the battle against terrorism.

The bill also recognizes the very real threat we face from biological weapons. It addresses these threats with significant investments in science and technology to support chemical and biological defense and medical counter-measures. These additional investments will support needed research on chemical and biological detection technology and decontamination. It will also support lifesaving research on medical treatments, vaccines, anti-toxins, and advanced diagnostic technology.
In addition, the cyber threat to national security is very real, and our armed forces must be better prepared to deal with this threat and to protect their information systems. The bill adds $5 million to the $7.9 million requested to address this serious and growing threat.

The bill also takes an important stand to begin the process of cleaning up unexploded ordnance. At many active and closed military bases, UXO is a major challenge. The bill addresses these hazards by including a major provision requiring the Department of Defense to establish specific accounts to fund the cleanup of UXO at military bases across the country, which clearly poses a hazard to civilians, military personnel, the environment, and the safe use of live-fire ranges necessary for a high state of military readiness. These new accounts are essential to demonstrate the Department’s commitment to safety, the environment, and responsible use of its facilities.

Finally, on the issue of ballistic missile defense, the committee responsibly cut back the President’s $8.3 billion request for research, development and testing of a ballistic missile defense system by $1.3 billion. The administration’s request was clearly in excess of what the Ballistic Missile Defense Office could have reasonably allocated in the coming year, and the committee was right to give priority to other military programs. The committee also took a strong stand against testing that would violate the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty.

It makes no sense to rush forward prematurely with tests that will violate the treaty, or with deployment of a missile defense system, when there are serious doubts about whether it will work. Our European allies and Russia continue to be skeptical about our commitment to the ABM Treaty and deploying a missile defense system. We should work with our allies and continue consultations with Russia, not act unilaterally or establish arbitrary deadlines.

It is disappointing that these important ballistic missile defense provisions were removed from the bill we are currently considering. These issues are, and will continue to be, very important.

I commend my colleagues on the Armed Services Committee for their leadership in dealing with the many challenges facing our nation on national and homeland defense. This bill keeps the faith with the 2.2 million men and women who make up our active duty, guard, and reserve forces. It keeps the faith with the 2.2 million men and women who make up our active duty, guard, and reserve forces. And not say quit ’till peace has won.—Ira Somers.

As we all know, the threat of attacks on our national and defense information systems seem to grow daily. Last year, Senator WARNER proposed an innovative scholarship program to encourage young people to pursue careers with the Federal Government in the information assurance area. I am gratified that our collective efforts this year have increased support for this innovative program, as well as other Departmental efforts to enhance the security of our critical information systems. However, I am concerned that the funding level included in the bill for the scholarship program may not be sufficient.

Since the creation of the Emerging Threats and Capabilities Subcommittee in 1999, I have worked hard to ensure that our nonproliferation and threat reduction programs in Russia are fulfilling their national security objectives. This year I have worked hard to incorporate the kind of oversight I believe is essential if these nonproliferation programs are going to produce the desired results.

This committee has a long history of supporting a strong and stable science and technology program and I was pleased to see the administration’s budget request of $8.8 billion in this important area. This $1.2 billion increase over last year’s request is the first step towards achieving the Secretary’s goal of having science and technology programs make up 3 percent of the overall defense budget. It remains critical that we continue our support of a vibrant science and technology base.

I strongly urge the rapid adoption of this important legislation. Our Nation is faced with a daunting task ahead and now is the time to show our strong support for the men and women in the armed services who so proudly and bravely serve our Nation.

LOCAL LAW ENFORCEMENT ACT OF 2001

Mr. SMITH of Oregon. Mr. President, I rise today to speak about hate crimes legislation I introduced with Senator KENNEDY in March of this year. The Local Law Enforcement Act of 2001 would add new categories to current hate crimes legislation sending a signal that violence of any kind is unacceptable in our society.

I would like to describe a terrible crime that occurred in Walla Walla, WA. A man believed to be gay was sexually assaulted with a stick, struck by the assailant’s truck and abandoned in a remote area. Todd I. Kievgard, 27, was charged with felony assault.

I believe that Government’s first duty is to defend its citizens, to defend...
Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, there is a great sense of unity across the Nation as we begin to recover from the events of September 11. The President's speech last week gave both comfort and strength to the American people and to people around the globe.

I have been heartened by the bipartisan unity demonstrated by Congress as it acts to respond to the human and economic devastation, and we will need to maintain that unity as we ask for the sacrifices necessary to end this business.

Given all that has happened and all that will happen, it is all the more inappropriate for Congress to accept a $4,900 backdoor pay raise.

Of course, I believe the automatic pay raise is never appropriate. As my colleagues are aware, it is an unusual thing to have the power to raise our own pay. Few people have that ability. Most of our constituencies do not have that power. And that this power is so unusual is good reason for the Congress to exercise that power openly, and to exercise it subject to regular procedures that include debate, amendment, and a vote on the RECORD.

This process of pay raises without accountability must end. It is offensive. It is wrong. And it is unconstitutional.

In August of 1789, as part of the package of 12 amendments advocated by James Madison that included what has become our Bill of Rights, the House of Representatives passed an amendment to the Constitution providing that Congress could not raise its pay without an intervening election. Almost exactly 212 years ago, on September 9, 1789, the Senate passed that amendment. In late September of 1789, Congress submitted the amendments to the States.

Although the amendment on pay raises languished for two centuries, in the 1980s, a campaign began to lift it. While I was a member of the Wisconsin State Senate, I was proud to help ratify the amendment. Its approval by the Michigan legislature on May 7, 1992, gave it the needed approval by three-fourths of the States.

The 27th amendment to the Constitution now states: "No law, varying the compensation for the services of the Senators and Representatives, shall take effect, until an election of Representatives shall have intervened." I try to honor that limitation in my own practices. In my own case, throughout my 6-year term, I accept only the rate of pay that Senators receive on the date on which I was sworn in as a Senator. And I return to the Treasury any additional income Senators get, whether from a cost-of-living adjustment or a pay raise we vote for ourselves. I don't take a raise until my bosses, the people of Wisconsin, give me one at the ballot box. That is the spirit of the 27th amendment.

This practice must end, and earlier this year I reintroduced legislation to end the automatic cost-of-living adjustment for congressional pay.

But we should not wait to enact that law to say "no" to the $4,900 pay raise that will go into effect beginning next year.

To that end, I call upon the leadership of both parties to work together, in the spirit of the bipartisan unity we have seen flourish in recent days, to stop the pay raise that is scheduled to go into effect in 2002.

I very much hope it will not be necessary to issue out on the floor of the Senate. I have an amendment prepared to stop this backdoor pay raise, and am willing to offer it if that becomes necessary, but I want to give our leadership the opportunity to respond to the American people.

We are spending the hard-earned tax dollars of millions of Americans to recover from the horrific events of September 11 and to ensure that it does not happen again.

And right this minute, our Nation is sending the men and women of our Armed Services into harm's way.

This is not the time for Congress to accept a pay raise, and I am confident that upon reflection, Members of the Senate and the other body will want to stop this automatic pay raise from taking effect.

Let's stop this backdoor pay raise right now, and then, let's enact legislation to end this practice once and for all.

THE WORLD SITUATION AFTER THE TERRORIST STRIKE

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the RECORD a speech delivered by a member of the U.S. Court of International Trade, Evan Wallach. A graduate of Cambridge and a Nevada, this expert international jurist and expert in the law of war, with clarity reviews the commission the United States and our allies by the terrorist strike of September 11, 2001.

There being no objection, the speech was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

SPEECH, 21 SEPTEMBER, 2001 HUGHES HALL.

It is good to be home. Whether it is because we as peoples share the same language and laws, value the same rights of humanity, and pray to the same God, or because I have developed so many lifelong friendships since I first set foot in these halls some twenty-one years ago, I cannot feel myself a stranger in this house and in this fair land. It is good to be home and to share with you our common hopes and our common tragedy.
pass over his thresh hold without an invitation to enter. We have taken the rights and liberties of Englishmen and extended them even further. We have enslaved them in a written Constitution and from time to time, as we have done with other nations and peoples, have learned a lesson from that wrong doing, we have added additional protections. We have been attacked by people from one particular part of the world. I am not a Arabist or a scholar of that region’s history to any great degree but I think I can say those who planned this attack are mistaken about the United States in many ways. I believe they thought to wound us deeply by attacking our national symbols, and that they viewed the WTC as one such symbol. They thought, I imagine, that as a capitalist state, worshiping the almighty dollar, we would reel back, shaken and demoralized, by the loss of this great temple of Mammon. Truly they were mistaken.

We reel back, not at the loss of a building, because bricks, and mortar can always be replaced, but at seeing hear our great values eaten away, eroded, battered, and over the years we have chased barbarians across the Mediterranean to battle the corsairs of Barbary, and over the years we have chased bandits and pirates beyond our borders whenever our national interest required it. Often, and for many decades, we shared that job with the Royal Navy. I cannot, in this English language, say anything about this endeavor upon which we now embark in any way better than my hero who led your fight for civilization in the last world war. Let me quote from two speeches by Mr. Churchill: “There shall be no halting or half measures, there shall be no compromise or parley. These gangs of bandits have sought to darken the light of the world; have sought to stand between the common people and their inheritance. They shall themselves be cast into the pit of death and shame, and only when the earth has been cleansed and purged of their crimes and villainy shall we turn from the task they have forced upon us, a task which we were reluctant to undertake, but which we shall now most faithfully and punctiliously discharge. 四 四

“We do not war primarily with races as such. Tyranny is our foe, whatever trappings or disguise it wears, whatever language it speaks, be it external or internal, we must forever be on our guard, ever vigilant, ever ready to spring at its throat. In this war, In this indeed, I know, we shall march together."

In this indeed, I know, we shall march together.

ELECTIONS IN BELARUS
Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I rise today to speak about Belarus and my concerns about the country’s recent elections. Belarus has endured tremendous difficulties in its history. For centuries, Belarus has been fought over, occupied and carved up. It has borne heavy devastating consequences from the 1986 Chernobyl nuclear disaster in neighboring Ukraine. Belarus’ declaration of independence in 1991 held great promise for a better future. As it broke from communist rule, it had the opportunity to build a free nation and become part of a peaceful, more secure Europe. The country began to embrace economic and political reforms and democratic principles. It courageously chose to be a nuclear-free state, ratified the START Treaty, acceded to the Non-Proliferation Treaty, and became a member of NATO’s Partnership for Peace. It established a constitutional state, held its first Presidential election in 1994.

Unfortunately, the prospect of democratic change in Belarus was quickly halted as its first President, Alexander Lukashenka, adopted increasingly authoritarian policies. Including amending the constitution in a flawed referendum to extend his term and broaden his powers. Lukashenka’s regime has been marked by a terrible human rights record that is progressively getting worse, with little respect for freedom of expression, assembly and an independent media. A pattern of disturbing disappearances of opposition leaders fails to be seriously investigated by authorities. The living conditions in Belarus are declining and Lukashenka’s refusal to institute economic reforms has only exacerbated the situation.

For months, nations throughout the world have been following closely the events leading up to the presidential election which took place on September 9, 2001, with hope that Lukashenka would take the necessary steps to allow the election to be free, fair and transparent. The United States, the European Union and leaders of the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe, OSCE, had urged Lukashenka to uphold his commitments to democratic principles as an OSCE member state and adhere to international election standards. Lukashenka was encouraged to seize this opportunity to renew his relations with European neighbors and the rest of the world that he is ready to change his heavy handed policies which have isolated his government and earned him a reputation as the lone remaining dictator in Europe.

Unfortunately, this election process demonstrated that Lukashenka is still unwilling to acknowledge the will of the Belarusian people. Much like last year’s parliamentary elections, this election was marred by reports of intimidation, harassment and fraud. The OSCE concluded that it failed to meet internationally recognized democratic election standards.

Leading up to the election the opposition was denied fair and equal access to state-controlled media coverage, the independent media was harassed, publishing houses were shut down, and newspapers reporting on the opposition were seized. International observers from the Office for Democratic Institutions and Human Rights, whose observations were denied entry into the country for several weeks, and some were denied visas altogether, thus hindering efforts to establish a complete and thorough observation mission. Consequently, observa-

On the eve of the referendum, the Belarusian government began to tense, and the opposition started to organize protests. On election day, the opposition maintained their presence and continued to call for a boycott of the referendum. The central government responded by deploying a large number of security forces to the streets, including members of the presidential guard and the KGB. The security forces used tear gas and water cannon to disperse the opposition protesters. Despite the opposition’s efforts, the referendum proceeded as planned, and the results were announced on October 28, 2001.

The results of the referendum were announced on October 28, 2001, with Lukashenka securing 82.6% of the vote. The opposition immediately challenged the results, calling them fraudulent and calling for the holding of new elections. The Central Election Commission upheld the results, citing overwhelming evidence of fraud and malpractice.

The international community, including the OSCE, issued a statement expressing concern about the conduct of the referendum and urging the Belarusian authorities to ensure free and fair elections in the future.

In response, Lukashenka intensified his crackdown on opposition leaders and activists, arresting and开来 muscle. New laws were passed, including one that allowed the government to detain and interrogate suspected enemies of the state without trial.

The referendum results were seen as a clear indication of the extent of authoritarianism in Belarus, with Lukashenka consolidating his grip on power. The opposition continued to call for new elections, and the issue of Belarusian democracy remained a focus of international attention for years to come.
During this Hispanic Heritage Month, our Nation is in the process of coming to terms with the unspeakably savage attacks of September 11th and bracing for what may follow. Yet, in the wake of these heinous terrorist acts, we have demonstrated one of our greatest strengths, the ability to unite in times of crises. A major element of that unity is in recognizing and embracing our diversity. This month we do so by showing our respect and appreciation for the rich cultural heritage Hispanic Americans bring to our Nation.

Recent census figures show that there are more than 35 million Hispanic Americans in this country. Their ranks have increased 58 percent through the last decade. Hispanic Americans will soon be the largest minority group in the United States, making up 24 percent of the population by 2050. In my State of Maryland, the number of Hispanics grew more than 82 percent since 1990, making up more than 4 percent of the population statewide. I know that Hispanic Americans will continue to bring great contributions to Maryland’s culture and economy.

Like America, the Hispanic culture within our country is diverse. Whether we look to the large Puerto Rican community in New York, the influx of Central Americans to the Washington Metropolitan region, Mexican Americans who have a long history in California, or Cuban Americans who have made South Florida their home, Hispanic American culture reflects the breadth and depth of the cultures of their nations of origin. Hispanic Americans are changing the face of America, challenging our tendency to view the world in terms of black and white and teaching us to accept ethnic diversity as well as racial differences.

I strongly believe that Hispanic Americans will live up to the ideals of our Nation’s founding only when all Americans have equal access to the building blocks of a strong society, education, employment, health care, housing and political participation. We must make sure that basic services and opportunities are available to Hispanic Americans. And, as this segment of the population grows, it will be increasingly important for educators, hospitals, civil services, and financial institutions to be able to communicate effectively, provide bilingual materials where appropriate, and be aware of cultural differences when delivering services. Hispanic Americans deserve to take full part in their communities and language barriers should not prevent them from doing so.

Throughout our history, different groups have come to this country contributing their culture, values and strengths to make the United States the strong diverse country that it is. The story of immigrants searching for a better life is a story that has been replayed countless times throughout our history, sustaining the growth of America since her beginning. Hispanic Americans continue this tradition and I am proud to have the opportunity to recognize their heritage this month.

IN RECOGNITION OF DR. HENRY WALL

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I rise today to recognize the service of Dr. Henry Wall to New Mexican veterans. Dr. Wall recently retired from the Artesia Veterans Affairs community-based outpatient clinic after nearly 50 years of service to meeting the health care needs of Artesia residents.

Dr. Wall graduated from the University of Oklahoma in 1933 and moved to Artesia shortly thereafter. Dr. Wall’s private practice spanned from 1955 to 1991, and he became well known for his dedication to patient care, as well as for his maternity practice. In fact, many Artesia residents remind him that “You delivered me, my children, and my mom.”

In 1989, the Artesia community-based clinic was founded. The clinic was an outgrowth of legislation that I sponsored to establish six satellite veterans outpatient centers. I believed that veterans should have access to quality health care at a convenient location. Dr. Wall also saw this opening as an opportunity to serve the veterans of southeastern New Mexico. He joined the clinic’s staff and brought his care and expertise to the many veterans in the local community. Dr. Wall is a veteran himself, having served in the Marine Corps in World War II. I have understood the need to provide our Nation’s veterans with superior health care.

I wish to express my gratitude to Dr. Henry Wall for his service to Artesia and to the veteran population in particular. I have frequently stated that ensuring the health and well-being of the servicemen and women, who have placed their lives in harm’s way in order to secure our freedoms, should be a commitment that Americans do not take lightly. I am proud that Dr. Wall has done his part to live up to this commitment. I am sincerely grateful for his service to New Mexico’s veterans.

TRIBUTE TO SISTER MARGARET SMITH

Mr. DAYTON. Mr. President, today, I would like to take the opportunity to pay special tribute to an exceptional person, Sister Margaret Smith of Park Rapids, Minnesota. With great pride, Minnesotans have named Sister Margaret Minnesota’s Outstanding Older Worker for this year. This is an honor richly deserved, for Sister Margaret has spent 55 of her 80 years serving in a variety of capacities at the St. Joseph’s Area Health Services, in Park Rapids.

The award for Minnesota’s Outstanding Older Walker is conferred by Green Thumb, Inc., the Minnesota Department of Economic Security, and the Minnesota Department of Labor.

Sister Margaret is virtually an institution, a pillar at St. Joseph’s where she has touched the lives of thousands of people. With her humor, warmth, feeling for people, and dedication, she has been a support not only for appreciative patients and their families, but also for her coworkers at St. Joseph’s. Indeed, one of the affectionate nicknames conferred on her by the medical staff is “The Presence.” This is a fitting title, indeed: She was among the seven Sisters of Saint Joseph who arrived in Park Rapids in 1946 to establish a hospital, is always where she is needed, and has never missed a single day of work. Moreover, Sister Margaret is nothing if not versatile. Having become a certified radiology technician in 1945, she has worked in almost every department of the hospital, including the lab and surgery; was once St. Joseph’s administrator; and now sits on the Board of Directors.

Although she no longer performs procedures, she keeps the radiology department running smoothly by scheduling patients’ appointments; maintaining statistics, information, and activities in superb order; working with physicians to arrange radiology procedures; and supervising the department’s peer review. In the hospital at... large, she keeps her finger well placed on the pulse of the organization by overseeing quality control. Moreover, Sister Margaret is the hospital historian and photo archivist.

At St. Joseph's, Sister Margaret is called “the rock, the foundation.” So loved is she for her steadfastness, lightheartedness, and solid values, that patients of 20 years ago return and ask to see her. At its genesis, the success of St. Joseph’s and its founders might not have been predicated. Rather, some in the community opposed a Catholic hospital. Today, sister Margaret says she believes her presence as a Sister of St. Joseph has made a difference. Caring for patients, she believes is sacred. Her philosophy has been to care for the whole person, spiritually as well as physically.

Sister Margaret was to have visited Washington, D.C., during the week of September 11 to attend the National Prime Time Awards Program. Although our Nation’s crisis made it impossible for this trip to take place, I would like to add my voice to those who have honored Sister Margaret’s constancy of heart and spirit in ministering to so many patients for more than 50 years.

IN RECOGNITION OF I. MARTIN MERCADO

- Mr. DOMENICCI. Mr. President, I rise today to recognize the accomplishments of Mr. I. Martin Mercado, who will be presented today with the Small Business Administration’s Minority Small Business Person of the Year Award. This prestigious award recognizes the vital role that minority-owned small businesses play in creating jobs and providing robust economic development in their communities. Mr. Mercado is the president of Mercado Construction in Albuquerque and is the perfect example of the important contributions that small business make to our economy.

Mr. Mercado is one of seven children of immigrant parents who left their native country of Mexico in search of better opportunities for their children. Although they had little knowledge of American culture or language, they were able to provide their children with a good education and a bright future. I. Martin Mercado is a wonderful illustration of the American dream. Although he came from this humble background, he has built a successful business from the ground up.

Mercado Construction began in 1994 with only $20,000 in cash and one employee. Mr. Mercado faced tremendous difficulty in securing financing and credit because it was a start-up company. However, after the successful completion of several projects, Mercado Construction was able to demonstrate its ability and began to gain access to working capital. Through hard work and resolve, Mercado Construction has grown exponentially. It now has 23 employees and $4.8 million in revenues and has contributed to many important development projects in the Albuquerque and Rio Rancho communities.

Equally important, Mercado Construction shares its success with other New Mexican small businesses. Mr. Mercado is an active member of the New Mexico (a) Association and frequently subcontracts with and purchases materials from other minority- and women-owned small businesses. In fact, over 50 percent of Mercado Construction’s subcontractors are minority- and women-owned firms. Mercado Construction is also an active participant in the Albuquerque community. It has sponsored youth sports teams and contributes to several charities, such as the North Valley Little League and the Big Brothers/Big Sisters program.

I wish to congratulate Mercado Construction and its president, Mr. I. Martin Mercado, on being named a Minority Small Business Person of the Year. I am grateful for their contribution to economic development and job creation in New Mexico, and I look forward to their continued growth and success.

MESSAGES FROM THE PRESIDENT

REPORT ON BLOCKING PROPERTY AND PROHIBITING TRANSACTIONS WITH PERSONS WHO COMMIT, THREATEN TO COMMIT, OR SUPPORT TERRORISM—MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT—FM 44

The PRESIDING OFFICER laid before the Senate the following message from the President of the United States, together with an accompanying report; which was referred to the Committee on Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs.

To the Congress of the United States:

Pursuant to section 204(b) of the International Emergency Economic Powers Act, 50 U.S.C. 1703(b) (IEEPA), and section 301 of the National Emergencies Act, 50 U.S.C. 1631, I hereby report that I have exercised my statutory authority to declare a national emergency in response to the unusual and extraordinary threat posed to the national security, foreign policy, and economy of the United States by grave acts of terrorism and threats of terrorism committed by foreign terrorists, including the September 11, 2001, terrorist attacks at the World Trade Center in New York City and in Pennsylvania. I have also issued an Executive Order to help deal with this threat by giving the United States more powerful tools to reach the means by which terrorists and terrorist networks finance themselves and to encourage greater cooperation by foreign financial institutions and other entities that may have access to foreign property belonging to terrorists or terrorist organizations.

These attacks of September 11, 2001, highlighted in the most tragic way the threat posed to the security and national interests of the United States by terrorists who have abandoned any regard for humanity, decency, morality, or honor. Terrorists and terrorist networks pose a significant risk to our borders and derive their financing from sources in many nations. Often, terrorist property and financial assets lie outside the jurisdiction of the United States. Our effort to combat and destroy the financial underpinnings of global terrorism must therefore be broad, and not only provide powerful sanctions against the U.S. property of terrorists and their supporters, but also encourage multilateral cooperation in identifying and freezing property and assets located elsewhere.

This Executive Order is part of our national commitment to lead the international effort to bring a halt to the flow of terrorist financing. In general terms, it provides additional means by which to disrupt the financial support network for terrorist organizations by blocking the U.S. assets not only of foreign persons or entities who commit or pose a significant risk of committing acts of terrorism, but also by blocking the assets of their subsidiaries, front organizations, agents, and associates, and any other entities that provide services or assistance to them. Although the blocking powers enumerated in the order are broad, my Administration is committed to exercising them responsibly, with due regard for the culpability of the persons and entities potentially covered by the order, and in consultation with other countries.

The specific terms of the Executive Order provide for the blocking of the property and interests in property, including bank deposits, of foreign persons designated in the order or pursuant thereto, when such property is within the United States or in the possession or control of United States persons. In addition, the Executive Order prohibits any transaction or dealing by United States persons in such property or interests in property, including the making or receiving of any contribution of funds, goods, or services to or for the benefit of such designated persons.

I have identified in an Annex to this order eleven terrorist organizations, twelve individual terrorist leaders, three charitable or humanitarian organizations that operate as fronts for terrorist networks, and special units that are businesses or business entities that operate as fronts for terrorist financing and support. I have determined that each of these organizations and individuals have committed, supported, or threatened acts of terrorism that imperil the security of U.S. nationals or the national security, foreign policy, or economy of the United States.

I am grateful for their contribution to economic development and job creation in New Mexico, and I look forward to their continued growth and success.

I have identified in an Annex to this order eleven terrorist organizations, twelve individual terrorist leaders, three charitable or humanitarian organizations that operate as fronts for terrorist networks, and special units that are businesses or business entities that operate as fronts for terrorist financing and support. I have determined that each of these organizations and individuals have committed, supported, or threatened acts of terrorism that imperil the security of U.S. nationals or the national security, foreign policy, or economy of the United States.
United States. I have also authorized the Secretary of State to determine and designate additional foreign persons who have committed or pose a significant risk of committing acts of terrorism that threaten the security of U.S. nationals or the national security, foreign policy, or economy of the United States. Such designations are to be made in consultation with the Secretary of State, the Secretary of the Treasury, and the Attorney General.

The Executive Order further authorizes the Secretary of the Treasury to identify, in consultation with the Secretary of State and the Attorney General, additional persons or entities that:

—Are owned or controlled by, or that act for or on behalf of, those persons designated in or pursuant to the order;
—Assist in, sponsor, or provide financial, material, or technological support for, or financial or other services to or in support of acts of terrorism or those persons designated in or pursuant to the order;
—or
—Are otherwise associated with those persons designated in or pursuant to the order.

Prior to designating persons that fall within the latter two categories, the Secretary of the Treasury is authorized to consult with any foreign authorities the Secretary of State deems appropriate, in consultation with the Secretary of the Treasury and the Attorney General. Such consultation is intended to avoid the need for additional designations by securing bilateral or multilateral cooperation from foreign governments and foreign financial and other institutions. Such consultation may include requests to foreign governments to seek, in accordance with international law and their domestic laws, any international financial institutions regarding terrorist property and to take action to deny terrorists the use of such property. The order also provides broad authority, with respect to the latter two categories, for the Secretary of the Treasury, in his discretion, and in consultation with the Secretary of State and the Attorney General, to take lesser action than the complete blocking of property or interests in property if such lesser action is deemed consistent with the national interests of the United States. Some of the factors that may be considered in deciding whether a lesser action against a foreign person is consistent with the national interests of the United States include:

—The impact of blocking the U.S. or international financial system;
—The extent to which the foreign person has cooperated with U.S. authorities;
—The degree of knowledge the foreign person had of the terrorist-related activities of the designated person;

United States include:

—The extent of the relationship between the foreign person and the designated person; and —The impact of blocking or other actions against the foreign person.

The Executive Order also directs the Secretary of State, the Secretary of the Treasury, and other agencies to make all relevant efforts to cooperate and coordinate with other countries, consistent with future multilateral and bilateral agreements and arrangements, to achieve the objectives of this order, including the prevention and suppression of acts of terrorism, the denial of the financing of and financial services to terrorists and terrorist organizations, and the sharing of intelligence about funding activities in support of terrorism.

In the Executive Order, I also have made determinations to suspend otherwise applicable exemptions for certain humanitarian, agricultural, transfers or donations. Regrettably, international terrorist networks make frequent use of charitable or humanitarian organizations to obtain clandestine financial and other support for their activities. If these exemptions were not suspended, the provision of humanitarian materials could be used as a loophole through which support could be provided to individuals or groups involved with terrorism and whose activities endanger the safety of United States nationals, both here and abroad.

The Secretary of the Treasury, in consultation with the Secretary of State and the Attorney General, is authorized to issue regulations in exercise of my authorities under IEEPA to implement the prohibitions set forth in the Executive Order. All Federal agencies are also directed to take actions within their authority to carry out the provisions of the order, and, where applicable, to advise the Secretary of the Treasury in a timely manner of the measures taken.

The measures taken here will immediately demonstrate our resolve to bring new strength to bear in our multifaceted struggle to eradicate international terrorism. It is my hope that they will point the way for other civilized nations to adopt similar measures to attack the financial roots of global terrorist networks.

In that regard, this Executive Order is an integral part of our larger effort to form a coalition in the global war against terrorism. We have already worked with nations around the globe and groups such as the G-8, the European Union, and the Rio Group, all of which have made clear their intention to take measures to limit the ability of terrorism groups to operate. In the next several weeks the 33rd Session of the International Civil Aviation Organization (ICAO) General Assembly and other fora will focus on terrorism worldwide. It is our intention to work within the G-7/G-8, the ICAO, and other fora to reach agreement on strong concrete steps that will limit the ability of terrorists to operate. In the G-7/G-8, the United States will work with its partners, drawing on the G-8 Lyon Group on Transnational Crime, the G-8 Group on Counter-terrorism, the G-7 Financial Action Task Force, and the existing G-8 commitments to build momentum and practical cooperation in the fight to stop the flow of resources to support terrorism. In addition, both the Convention for the Suppression of the Financing of Terrorism and the Convention for the Suppression of Terrorist Bombings have been forwarded to the Senate, and I will be forwarding shortly to the Congress implementing legislation for both Conventions.

I am enclosing a copy of the Executive Order I have issued. This order is effective at 12:01 a.m. eastern daylight time on September 24, 2001.

GEORGE W. BUSH.

The President of the United States:

This is a presidential message to Congress. I am submitting with this message the report required by section 601(b) of the Omnibus Consolidated Appropriations Act, 2001, 114 Stat. 2343, to accompany the budget for fiscal year 2002. This message, as required by section 202 of the National Emergencies Act, 50 U.S.C. 1702, conveys my determination that a national emergency exists in the United States with respect to the activities of units of the Islamic Republic of Iran, including the regular armed forces of Iran, the Basij, and the Revolutionary Guard, and certain political and other entities with which they are associated, which it hazards to the national security and foreign policy interests of the United States.

The national emergency hereby decla...
MESSAGE FROM THE HOUSE

Under the authority of the order of the Senate of January 3, 2001, the Secretary of the Senate, on September 21, 2001, during the recess of the Senate, received a message from the House of Representatives announcing that the House has passed the following bill, in which it requests the concurrence of the Senate:

H.R. 2926. An act to preserve the continued viability of the United States air transportation system.

ENROLLED BILL SIGNED

Under the authority of the order of the Senate of January 3, 2001, the following enrolled bill, previously signed by the Speaker of the House, was signed by the President pro tempore (Mr. BYRD) on September 21, 2001:

H.R. 2926. An act to preserve the continued viability of the United States air transportation system.

MEASURES PLACED ON THE CALENDAR

The following bill was read the second time, and placed on the calendar:

S. 1447. A bill to improve aviation security, and for other purposes.

EXECUTIVE AND OTHER COMMUNICATIONS

The following communications were laid before the Senate, to be entered with accompanying papers, reports, and documents, which were referred as indicated:

EC-4095. A communication from the Chairman of the Federal Trade Commission, transmitting, pursuant to law, the Board's report under the Government in the Sun notice stating that the emergency is to continue in effect beyond the anniversary date. In accordance with this provision, I have sent the enclosed notice, stating that the emergency declared with respect to the National Union for the Total Independence of Angola (UNITA) is to continue in effect beyond September 26, 2001.

The circumstances that led to the declaration on September 26, 1993, of a national emergency have not been retracted. The actions and policies of UNITA pose a continuing unusual and extraordinary threat to the foreign policy of the United States. United Nations Security Council Resolutions 864 (1993), 1127 (1997), and 1173 (1998) continue to oblige all member states to maintain sanctions. Discontinuation of the sanctions would have a prejudicial effect on the prospects for peace in Angola. For these reasons, I have determined that it is necessary to maintain in force the broad authorities necessary to apply economic pressure on UNITA to reduce its ability to pursue its military operations.

At the request of Mr. LOTT, the names of the Senator from Maine (Ms. COLLINS) were added as cosponsors of telecommunications and computer systems and services essential to the national defense and economic stability. As a result, new vulnerabilities to such systems and infrastructures have emerged, such as the threat of physical and cyber attacks from terrorists or hostile states. These attacks could disrupt the economy and endanger the security of the United States.

(3) The private sector, which owns and operates the majority of these critical infrastructures, and the Federal Government, which has unique information and analytical capabilities, could both greatly benefit from cooperation in response to threats, vulnerabilities, and actual attacks to critical infrastructures by sharing information and analysis.

(4) The private sector is hesitant to share critical infrastructure information with the Federal Government because—

(A) Federal law provides no clear assurance that critical infrastructure information voluntarily submitted to the Federal Government will be protected from disclosure or misuse;

(B) the framework of the Federal Government for critical infrastructure information sharing and analysis is not sufficiently developed; and

(C) concerns about possible prosecution under the antitrust laws inhibit some companies from partnering with other industry members, including competitors, to develop cooperative infrastructure security strategies.

(5) Statutory nondisclosure provisions that qualify as Exemption 3 statutes under section 552 of title 5, United States Code (commonly referred to as the Freedom of Information Act), many of them longstanding, prohibit disclosure of numerous classes of information under that Act. These statutes cover specific and narrowly defined classes of information and are consistent with the principles of free and open government that that Act seeks to facilitate.

(6) Since the infrastructure information that this Act collects is internal to the public domain, preventing public disclosure of this sensitive information serves the greater good by promoting national security and economic stability.

SEC. 3. PURPOSE.

The purpose of this Act is to foster improved security of critical infrastructure by—

(1) promoting the increased sharing of critical infrastructure information both between private sector entities and between the Federal Government and the private sector; and

(2) encouraging the private sector and the Federal Government to conduct better analysis of critical infrastructure information in order to prevent, detect, warn of, and respond to incidents involving critical infrastructure.

SEC. 4. DEFINITIONS.

In this Act:

(1) AGENCY.—The term “agency” has the meaning given that term in section 551 of title 5, United States Code.

(2) CRITICAL INFRASTRUCTURE.—The term “critical infrastructure”—

(A) means physical and cyber-based systems and services essential to the national defense and economic stability of the United States, including systems essential for telecommunications (including voice and data transmission and the Internet), electric power, air and surface transportation, banking and finance, transpor­tation, water supply, emergency services (including medical, fire, and police services), and the continuity of government operations; and

(B) includes any industry sector designated by the President pursuant to the National Security Act of 1947 (50 U.S.C. 401 et seq.) or the Defense Production Act of 1950 (50 U.S.C. App. 2061 et seq.) as essential to provide resources for the execution of the national security strategy of the United States, including authority to procure critical infrastructure information pursuant to title VI of the Robert T. Stafford Dis­aster Relief and Emergency Assistance Act (42 U.S.C. 5166 et seq.).

(3) CRITICAL INFRASTRUCTURE INFORMATION.—The term “critical infrastructure information” means information related to—

(A) the ability of any protected system or critical infrastructure to resist interference, compromise, interruption, or failure; and

(B) any planned or assessed, projected, or estimated vulnerability of a protected system or critical infrastructure, including security testing, risk evaluation, risk management planning, or risk audit;

(C) any planned or past operational problem, condition, or risk of a protected system or critical infrastructure; or

(D) any threat to the security of a protected system or critical infrastructure.

(4) INFORMATION SHARING AND ANALYSIS ORGANIZATION.—The term “Information Sharing and Analysis Organization” means any formal solution, including repair, recovery, reconstruction, insurance, or continuity, related to the security of a protected system or critical infrastructure; or

(5) PROTECTED SYSTEM.—The term “protected system” means any—

(A) gathering and analyzing critical infra­structure information in order to better understand security problems related to critical infrastructure and protected systems, and interdependencies of critical infrastruc­ture and protected systems, so as to ensure the availability, integrity, and reliability of critical infrastructure and protected systems;

(B) communicating or disclosing critical infrastructure information to help prevent, detect, mitigate, or recover from the effects of a problem related to critical infrastruc­ture or protected systems; and

(C) voluntarily disseminating critical infrastructure information to entity members, other Information Sharing and Analysis Organizations, the Federal Government, or any entities which may be of assistance in car­rying out the purposes specified in subparagraphs (A) and (B).

(6) VOLUNTARY.—The term “voluntary” includes any service, physical or computer-based system, process, or procedure that directly or indirectly affects a facility of a critical infrastructure; and

(B) includes any physical or computer-based system, including a computer, computer system, computer or communications network, or any component or element thereof, software program, processing instructions, or information or data in trans­mission or storage therein (irrespective of storage medium).

(7) VOLUNTARY.—The term “voluntary”, in the case of the submittal of information or records to the Federal Government, means the submittal of the information or records in the absence of an agency’s exercise of legal submission.
SEC. 5. PROTECTION OF VOLUNTARILY SHARED CRITICAL INFRASTRUCTURE INFORMATION.

(a) PROTECTION.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law, critical infrastructure information that is voluntarily submitted to a covered Federal agency for analysis, warning, interdependency study, recovery, reconstitution, or other informational purposes, when accomplished by an express statement specified in paragraph (3)—

(A) shall not be made available under section 5 of title 5, United States Code (commonly referred to as the Freedom of Information Act); and

(B) may not, without the written consent of the person or entity submitting such information, be used directly by such agency, any other Federal, State, or local authority, or any third party, in any civil action arising under Federal or State law, unless such information is submitted in bad faith; and

(C) may not, without the written consent of the person or entity submitting such information, be used directly by any officer or employee pursuant to the official duties of such officer or employee pursuant to this Act.

(2) COVERED FEDERAL AGENCY DEFINED.—In paragraph (1), the term ‘‘covered Federal agency’’ means the following:

(I) The Department of Justice.

(II) The Department of the Treasury.

(III) The Department of Energy.

(IV) The Department of Health and Human Services.

(V) The General Services Administration.

(VI) The Federal Communications Commission.

(2) ELEMENTS.—The procedures established under paragraph (1) shall include mechanisms regarding—

(A) the acknowledgement of receipt by Federal agencies of critical infrastructure information that is voluntarily submitted to the Federal Government, including a confirmation that such information is protected from disclosure under this Act;

(B) the marking of such information as critical infrastructure information that is voluntarily submitted to the Federal Government for purposes of this Act;

(C) the care and storage of such information; and

(D) the protection and maintenance of the confidentiality of such information so as to permit, pursuant to section 6, the sharing of such information within the Federal Government, and the issuance of notices and warnings related to protection of critical infrastructure.

SEC. 6. NOTIFICATION, DISSEMINATION, AND ANALYSIS REGARDING CRITICAL INFRASTRUCTURE SECURITY.

(a) NOTICE REGARDING CRITICAL INFRASTRUCTURE SECURITY.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—A covered Federal agency (as specified in section 5(a)(2)) receiving significant or significant and credible information shall—

(I) share with appropriate covered Federal agencies (as specified in subparagraph (A)) such information; and

(ii) if the information is anonymous and otherwise specific, not disclose it.

(ii) if the information is anonymous and otherwise specific, not disclose it.

(b) ANALYSIS OF INFORMATION.—Upon receipt of critical infrastructure information that is voluntarily submitted to the Federal Government by a covered Federal agency receiving such information—

(1) share with appropriate covered Federal agencies such information that concerns actual attacks, threats, and warnings of attacks, on critical infrastructure and protected systems;

(2) identify interdependencies; and

(3) determine whether further analysis in concert with other Federal agencies, or warnings under subsection (c), are warranted.

(c) ACTION FOLLOWING ANALYSIS.—

(1) AUTHORITY TO ISSUE WARNINGS.—As a result of analysis of critical infrastructure information, a covered Federal agency may issue warnings to individual companies, targeted sectors, other governmental entities, or the general public regarding potential threats to critical infrastructure.

(2) FORM OF WARNINGS.—In issuing a warning under paragraph (1), the Federal agency shall take appropriate actions to prevent the disclosure of the source of any voluntarily submitted critical infrastructure information that forms the basis for the warning.

(d) STRATEGIC ANALYSES OF POTENTIAL THREATS TO CRITICAL INFRASTRUCTURE.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The President shall designate an element in the Executive Branch to conduct strategic analyses of potential threats to critical infrastructure; and

(B) to submit reports on such analyses to the Secretary of Energy and to the element designated under paragraph (1) to conduct strategic analyses under paragraph (1)(A).

(f) FREQUENCY.—Strategic analyses shall be conducted under this paragraph with such frequency as the President considers appropriate, and otherwise specifically at the discretion of the President.

(2) ELEMENTS.—The plan under paragraph (1) shall include the following:

(A) A description of currently recognized methods of attacks on critical infrastructure.

(B) An assessment of the threats to critical infrastructure that could develop over the year following such report.

(C) An assessment of the lessons learned from previous attacks on critical infrastructure.

(iv) Such other information on the protection of critical infrastructure as the element conducting analyses under paragraph (1) considers appropriate.

(B) FORM.—Reports under this paragraph may be in classified or unclassified form, or both.

(c) REPORTS.—Each report under paragraph (1) shall contain the following:

(i) A description of currently recognized methods of attacks on critical infrastructure.

(ii) An assessment of the threats to critical infrastructure.

(iii) An assessment of the lessons learned from previous attacks on critical infrastructure.

(iv) Such other information on the protection of critical infrastructure as the element conducting analyses under paragraph (1) considers appropriate.

(B) FORM.—Reports under this paragraph may be in classified or unclassified form, or both.

(c) FORM.—Reports under this paragraph may be in classified or unclassified form, or both.

(iii) An assessment of the lessons learned from previous attacks on critical infrastructure.

(iv) Such other information on the protection of critical infrastructure as the element conducting analyses under paragraph (1) considers appropriate.

(B) FORM.—Reports under this paragraph may be in classified or unclassified form, or both.
(C) An allocation of roles and responsibilities for the work under the plan among the Federal agencies specified in section 5(a)(2), including the relationship of such roles and responsibilities.

(3) REPORTS.—

(A) INTERIM REPORT.—The President shall submit to Congress an interim report on the plan developed under paragraph (1) not later than 120 days after the date of the enactment of this Act.

(B) FINAL REPORT.—The President shall submit to Congress a final report on the plan developed under paragraph (1), together with a copy of the plan, not later than 180 days after the date of the enactment of this Act.

SEC. 7. ANTI-TRUST EXEMPTION FOR ACTIVITY INVOLVING AGREEMENTS ON CRITICAL INFRASTRUCTURE MATTERS.

(a) ANTI-TRUST EXEMPTION.—The anti-trust laws shall not apply to conduct engaged in by an Information Sharing and Analysis Organization or its members, including making and implementing an agreement, solely for purposes of—

(1) gathering and analyzing critical infrastructure information in order to better understand security problems related to critical infrastructure and protected systems, and interdependencies of critical infrastructures and systems, so as to ensure the availability, integrity, and reliability of critical infrastructure and protected systems;

(2) communicating or disclosing critical infrastructure information to help prevent, detect, mitigate, or recover from the effects of a problem related to critical infrastructure or protected systems;

(3) voluntarily disseminating critical infrastructure information to entity members, other Information Sharing and Analysis Organizations, the Federal Government, or any entities which may be of assistance in carrying out the purposes specified in paragraphs (1) and (2);

(b) EXCEPTION.—Subsection (a) shall not apply with respect to conduct that involves or results in an agreement to boycott any person, to allocate a market, or to fix prices or output.

(c) ANTI-TRUST LAWS DEFINED.—In this section, the term ‘‘anti-trust laws’’ means—

(1) the federal laws given such term in subsection (a) of the first section of the Clayton Act (15 U.S.C. 12(a)), except that such term includes section 5 of the Federal Trade Commission Act (15 U.S.C. 45), to the extent, the term ‘‘antitrust laws’’—

SEC. 8. NO PRIVATE RIGHT OF ACTION.

Nothing in this Act may be construed to create a private right of action for enforcement of any provision of this Act.

By Mr. FEINGOLD:

S. 1438. A bill to facilitate the voluntary provision of emergency services during commercial air flights; to the bill S. 1438, supra; which was ordered to lie on the table.

Mr. FEINGOLD. Mr. President, I rise today to introduce the Volunteers For Safe Skies Act of 2001. This bill will allow our Nation’s firefighters, law enforcement officials, and emergency medical technicians, EMTs, to serve voluntarily on commercial aircraft to help ensure the safety of the flying public. In my 15 years of service, these public servants already notify the crew when they board that they are fully trained for emergencies and are willing to help out in the event they are needed.

This bill would simply streamline and organize this practice by requiring the Federal Aviation Administration to create a program through which these officials can register voluntarily and confidentially with the airlines. Our Nation’s law enforcement officials, firefighters, and EMTs, are trained to respond to any type of emergency and can be of great assistance to an airline crew.

When I was back in Wisconsin following the vicious attacks on our country, I heard of the outpouring of support and the number of people who wanted to help the victims, their families, and the rescue workers in the attacks. Across Wisconsin and the country, we have heard of the stories of people lining up to buy blind and food, of charities being flooded with donations of goodwill. People are searching for ways to help.

When I held one of my listening sessions last week, Fire Chief James Rehberg of the Beloit Fire Department, Chief Charles Tubbs of Beloit, WI, came up to me with an idea that they thought would help make our skies safer. Part of this idea was to create a registration system through which law enforcement officials, firefighters, and EMTs could register voluntarily to serve in the event of an emergency on a commercial airplane. For example, if an official was going on vacation on an airplane, they would register with the airline beforehand to notify them that they would have a trained public safety official on that flight. Like the sky marshals, only the crew would know when one of these volunteers was on the plane.

Keep in mind that this would strictly be a volunteer program. This bill will help make our skies safer while at the same time making it easier for our police officers, firefighters, and EMTs to serve their country.

As many of my colleagues have stated, if the airline industry is to recover fully from the events of September 11, 2001, we must make the flying public feel safe once again in our skies. The Volunteers For Safe Skies Act would help us do just that.

At the end of subtitle B of title III, add the following:

SEC. 335. DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE MOST EFFICIENT ORGANIZATION BID-TO-GOAL AND BEST-VALUE PURCHASING PILOT PROGRAM.

(a) REQUIREMENT FOR PROGRAM.—The Secretary of Defense shall carry out a pilot program to demonstrate an alternative to the Office of Management Budget Circular A-76 approach for achieving cost-effective performance of Department of Defense commercial activities.

(b) ELIGIBLE ACTIVITIES.—(1) The Secretary shall provide under the pilot program for each of not more than five continuing or recurring commercial activities of the Department of Defense to be performed by an organization of the department that is to be figured as the most efficient organization for the performance of that activity.

240. (a) The commercial activity is an activity.

(b) The head of the agency concerned has no authority to transfer a contract for the commercial activity to the public sector under the pilot program if, at the time that the contract is transferred to the public sector, the commercial activity is not figure as the most efficient organization for the performance of that activity.

(c) PROJECTS.—The Secretary shall consider whether to carry out the pilot program in several projects, as follows:

(1) One project that involves a group of 500 to 750 employees.

(2) Four projects, each of which involves 150 to 599 employees.
(3) At least one project undertaken within the Defense Logistics Agency, Defense Finance and Accounting Service, or any other defense agency not performing base operations.

(d) PERFORMANCE-BASED CONTRACT.—(1) The performance of a Department of Defense commercial activity under the pilot program shall be covered by a performance-based memorandum of understanding that is entered into by the head of the agency concerned and the subordinate of that official who is the head of the organization designated to perform the activity.

(2) The head of the agency concerned shall set forth the performance standards that are applicable to the performance of a commercial activity under the pilot program in the memorandum of understanding for that activity. The performance standards shall include the following:

(A) Achievement of the following cost and performance objectives:

(i) The total amount of the cost savings estimated, as of the beginning of the pilot program, to be achievable by use of the most efficient organization.

(ii) The number of personnel strengths for such fiscal year that would be incurred for the continued performance of the activity, provisions for attrition to be used as principal means for achieving the necessary reduction.

(B) Achievement of the performance improvements projected, as of the beginning of the pilot program, to be achievable by use of the most efficient organization.

(C) Any other performance standards determined appropriate by the head of the agency.

(2) Rigorous use of technology-based solutions, performance measurements, and quality of service standards that will be subject to past and future performance.

(3) Each memorandum of understanding shall be in effect for five years, except that the head of the agency concerned may terminate the memorandum of understanding earlier on recommendation of the head of the agency concerned, through quarterly reviews, that the most efficient organization has failed to achieve a performance standard that is determined critical and a cause for default.

(4) Each memorandum of understanding shall begin on the date of approval and be in effect for a period of five years, as determined by the head of the agency concerned.

(5) A description of the most efficient organization for the performance of the activity.

(6) A plan for achieving the objectives determined appropriate for the performance of the activity under subsection (a).

(7) For any case in which a reduction in the workforce is necessary to achieve the most efficient organization for performing the activity, provisions for attrition to be used as the principal means for achieving the necessary reduction.

(g) MORATORIUM ON APPLICABILITY OF OMB CIRCULAR A-76.—During the period that a memorandum of understanding is in effect for a Department of Defense commercial activity under subsection (d), no action may be initiated under Office of Management and Budget Circular A-76 regarding the acquisition of performance of that commercial activity.

(h) QUARTERLY REPORT TO HEAD OF AGENCY.—Promptly after the end of each quarter of a year, the head of an organization performing a Department of Defense commercial activity under the pilot program shall submit a report on the performance of that activity during that quarter to the head of the agency concerned. The report shall include an assessment of the performance in terms of the performance standards provided in the memorandum of understanding applicable to the activity under subsection (d).

(i) REPORT TO CONGRESS.—Not later than one year after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to Congress a report on the implementation of the pilot program under this section.

(j) DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE.—In this section:

(A) The term ‘‘Department of Defense commercial activity’’ means an activity covered by the Department of Defense commercial activity program pursuant to Department of Defense Directive 4100.15 or any successor Department of Defense Directive.

(B) The term ‘‘head of the agency concerned’’ means:

(i) The head of a Department of Defense agency, with respect to a Department of Defense commercial activity carried out by that official.

(ii) The term ‘‘Defense Agency’’ has the meaning given the term in section 101(a)(11) of title 10, United States Code.

(9) ROCKY FLATS TRUSTEES.—The term "Rocky Flats Trustees" means the Federal and State of Colorado entities that have been identified as trustees for Rocky Flats under section 107(f)(2) of the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act of 1980 (42 U.S.C. 9607(f)(2)).

(10) SECRETARY.—The term "Secretary" means the Secretary of Energy.

SEC. 3174. FUTURE OWNERSHIP AND MANAGEMENT.

(a) FEDERAL OWNERSHIP.—Except as expressly provided in this subtitle or any Act enacted after the date of enactment of this Act, all right, title, and interest of the United States, held on or acquired after the date of enactment of this Act, to land or interests therein, including minerals, within the boundaries of Rocky Flats shall be retained by the United States.

(b) LIABILITY.—The structures that comprise the former Lindsay Ranch household site in the Rock Creek Reserve area of the buffer zone, as depicted on the map referred to in subsection (A), shall be permanently preserved and maintained in accordance with the National Historic Preservation Act (16 U.S.C. 1001 et seq.).

(c) PROHIBITION ON ANNEXATION.—Neither the Secretary nor the Secretary of the Interior shall allow the annexation of land within the refuge by any unit of local government.

(d) PROHIBITION ON THROUGH ROADS.—Except as provided in subsection (e), no public road shall be constructed through Rocky Flats.

(e) TRANSPORTATION RIGHT-OF-WAY.—

(i) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary may, by resolution, transfer—
(A) availability of land.—On submission of an application meeting each of the conditions specified in paragraph (2), the Secretary, in consultation with the Secretary of the Interior, shall make available land along the eastern boundary of Rocky Flats for the sole purpose of transportation improvements along Indianan Street.
(B) boundaries.—Land made available under this paragraph may not extend more than 300 feet from the west edge of the Indianan street right-of-way, as that right-of-way exists as of the date of enactment of this Act.

(C) easement or sale.—Land may be made available under this paragraph by easement or sale to 1 or more appropriate entities.

(D) compliance with applicable law.—Any action under this paragraph shall be taken in compliance with applicable law.

(f) CONDITIONS.—An application for land under this subsection may be submitted by any county, city, or other political subdivision of the State of Colorado and shall include documentation demonstrating that—

(i) the transportation project is constructed so as to minimize adverse effects on the management of Rocky Flats as a wildlife refuge; and

(ii) the transportation project is included in the regional transportation plan of the metropolitan planning organization designated for the Denver metropolitan area under section 5303 of title 49, United States Code.

SEC. 3175. TRANSFER OF MANAGEMENT RESPONSIBILITIES AND JURISDICTION OVER ROCKY FLATS.

(a) IN GENERAL.—

(i) MEMORANDUM OF UNDERSTANDING.—

(A) IN GENERAL.—Not later than 1 year after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary and the Secretary of the Interior shall publish in the Federal Register a draft memorandum of understanding under which—

(i) the Secretary shall provide for the subsequent transfer of administrative jurisdiction over Rocky Flats to the Secretary of the Interior; and

(ii) the Secretary of the Interior shall manage natural resources at Rocky Flats until the date on which the transfer becomes effective.

(B) REQUIRED ELEMENTS.—

(i) IN GENERAL.—Subject to clause (ii), the memorandum of understanding shall—

(I) provide for the division of responsibilities between the Secretary and the Secretary of the Interior necessary to carry out the proposed transfer of land;

(II) for the period ending on the date of the transfer—

(aa) provide for the division of responsibilities between the Secretary and the Secretary of the Interior; and

(bb) provide for the management of the land proposed to be transferred by the Secretary or the Secretary of the Interior as a national wildlife refuge, for the purposes provided under section 3177(d)(2);

(iii) provide for the annual transfer of administrative jurisdiction over the proposed transfer of land to the Secretary of the Interior for the management of the land proposed to be transferred; and

(iv) subject to subsection (b)(1), identify any land proposed to be transferred to the Secretary of the Interior.

(ii) NO REDUCTION IN FUNDS.—The memorandum of understanding and the subsequent transfer of land as required by this section shall not result in any reduction in funds available to the Secretary for cleanup and closure of Rocky Flats.

(iii) D EADLINE.—Not later than 18 months after the date of enactment of this Act, the Secretary and the Secretary of the Interior shall finalize and implement the memorandum of understanding.

(2) EXCLUSIONS.—The transfer under paragraph (1) shall not include the transfer of any property or facility over which the Secretary retains jurisdiction, authority, and control under subsection (b)(1).

(i) CONDITION.—The transfer under paragraph (1) shall occur—

(A) not earlier than the date on which the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency certifies to the Secretary and to the Secretary of the Interior that the cleanup of the property and any operations at Rocky Flats have been completed, except for the operation and maintenance associated with those actions; but

(B) not later than 30 business days after that date.

(4) COST; IMPROVEMENTS.—The transfer—

(A) shall be completed without cost to the Secretary of the Interior; and

(B) may include such buildings or other improvements as the Secretary of the Interior has requested in writing for refuge management purposes.

(b) PROPERTY AND FACILITIES EXCLUDED FROM TRANSFERS.—

(1) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall retain jurisdiction, authority, and control over all real property and facilities at Rocky Flats that are to be used for—

(i) any necessary and appropriate long-term operation and maintenance facility to intercept, treat, or control a radionucleide or any other hazardous substance, pollutant, or contaminant; and

(ii) any other purpose relating to a response action or any other action that is required to be carried out at Rocky Flats.

(2) CONSULTATION.—

(A) IDENTIFICATION OF PROPERTY.—

(i) IN GENERAL.—The Secretary shall consult with the Secretary of the Interior, the Administrator of the Environmental Protection Agency, and the State of Colorado on the identification of all property to be retained under this subsection to ensure the effective execution of Revisions.

(ii) AMENDMENT TO MEMORANDUM OF UNDERSTANDING.—

(I) IN GENERAL.—After the consultation, the Secretary and the Secretary of the Interior shall by mutual consent amend the memorandum of understanding required under subsection (a) to specifically identify the proposed transfer of land and the determination of the exact acreage and legal description of the property to be transferred by a survey mutually satisfactory to the Secretary and the Secretary of the Interior.

(II) COUNCIL ON ENVIRONMENTAL QUALITY.—

In the event the Secretary and the Secretary of the Interior cannot agree on any element of the land to be retained or transferred, the Secretary or the Secretary of the Interior may refer the issue to the Council on Environmental Quality, which shall decide the issue with the advice and consent of the Senate. The Secretary and the Secretary of the Interior shall then amend the memorandum of understanding required under subsection (a) in conformity with the decision of the Council on Environmental Quality.

(b) Management of Property.—

(1) In General.—The Secretary shall consult with the Advisory Board on the management of the retained property to minimize any conflict between the management of property transferred to the Secretary by or under the authority of the Secretary and the management of the retained property retained by the Secretary for response actions.

(ii) Conflict.—In the case of any such conflict, implementation and maintenance of the response action shall take priority.

(c) Access.—As a condition of the transfer under subsection (a), the Secretary shall provide such easements and access as are reasonably required to carry out any obligation or address any liability.

(d) Administration.—

(1) In General.—On completion of the transfer under subsection (a), the Secretary of the Interior shall administer Rocky Flats in accordance with this subtitle to—

(A) protect Rocky Flats from being used as a hazardous waste facility, as described in paragraph (1), nothing in this subtitle affec- ts the level of cleanup and closure at Rocky Flats required under the RFCA or any applicable Federal or State law.

(B) No Effect from Establishment as National Wildlife Refuge.—

(i) In General.—Nothing in this subtitle shall preclude the Secretary from using at Rocky Flats any new technology that may become available from bringing a claim for, or taking any action to abate the release of, or control at Rocky Flats carried out by or under the authority of the Secretary under the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act of 1980 (42 U.S.C. 9601 et seq.); or

(ii) Conflict.—In the case of any conflict between the management of Rocky Flats by the Secretary of the Interior and the conduct of any response action or other action described in subparagraph (A) or (B) of paragraph (1), the response action or other action shall take priority.

(e) Liability.—

(1) In General.—The Secretary shall retain any other liability for land transferred under subsection (a) under—

(A) the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act of 1980 (42 U.S.C. 9601 et seq.); or

(B) any other applicable law.

(f) Response Actions.—

(1) In General.—The Secretary shall be liable for the cost of any necessary response actions, including any costs or claims asserted against the Secretary, for any release, or substantial threat of release, of a hazardous substance, if the release, or substantial threat of release, is—

(i) located on or emanating from land—

(A) identified for transfer by this section; or

(B) subsequently transferred under this section.

(ii) known at the time of transfer; or

(iii) subsequently discovered; and

(iv) the land on which the hazardous substance is located.

(2) Use, Management, Storage, Release, Treatment of Hazardous Substance on the Land by the Secretary; or

(ii) the use, management, storage, release, treatment of a hazardous substance on the land by the Secretary.

(b) Recovery from Third Party.—Nothing in this paragraph precludes the Secretary, on behalf of the United States, from bringing a cost recovery, contribution, or other action against a third party that the Secretary reasonably believes may have contributed to the release, or substantial threat of release, of a hazardous substance.
At the end of subsection (a), $1,800,000 shall be available for fiscal year 2002 for military activities of the Department of Defense, for military constructions, and for defense activities of the Department of Energy, to prescribe personnel strengths for such fiscal year for the Armed Forces, and for other purposes; which was ordered to lie on the table; as follows:

Mr. HUTCHINSON (for himself and Mrs. LINCOLN) submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill S. 1438, to authorize appropriations for fiscal year 2002 for military activities of the Department of Defense, for military constructions, and for defense activities of the Department of Energy, to prescribe personnel strengths for such fiscal year for the Armed Forces, and for other purposes; which was ordered to lie on the table; as follows:

At the end of subsection A of title III, add the following:

SEC. 306. CLARA BARTON CENTER FOR DOMES-TIC PREPAREDNESS, ARKANSAS.

(a) INCREASE IN AUTHORIZATION OF APPRO-PRIATIONS FOR OPERATION AND MAINTENANCE, DEFENSE-WIDE.—The amount authorized to be appropriated by section 301(5) for operation and mainteance for Defense-wide activities, as increased by subsection (a), $1,800,000 shall be available for the Clara Barton Center for Domestic Preparedness, Arkansas.

SEC. 1641. Mr. DOMENICICI (for himself, Mr. THURMOND, Mr. MURKOWSKI, Mr. BINGAMAN, Mr. LUGAR, and Mr. HOL-LINGS) submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill S. 1438, to authorize appropriations for fiscal year 2002 for military activities of the Department of Defense, for military constructions, and for defense activities of the Department of Energy, to prescribe personnel strengths for such fiscal year for the Armed Forces, and for other purposes; which was ordered to lie on the table; as follows:

At the end of subsection C of title XXXI, add the following:

SEC. 3135. UNITED STATES PARTICIPATION IN UNITED STATES AND RUSSIA PLUTO-
NITON DISPOSITION PROGRAMS.

(a) LIMITATION ON MODIFICATION OF UNITED STATES PARTICIPATION IN PROGRAMS.—No modification of United States participation in the current United States and Russia plutonium disposition programs until the date of the submittal to the congressional defense committees of a report setting forth a comprehensive United States strategy for activities under such programs as so modified.

(b) PLUTONIUM DISPOSITION PROGRAMS.—For purposes of this section, the current United States and Russia plutonium disposition programs are the following:

(1) The United States Disposition Program identified in the January 1997 Record of Decision setting forth the intention of the Department of Energy to pursue a hybrid plutonium disposition strategy that includes irradiation of mixed oxide fuel (MOX) and immobilization, and the January 2000 Record of Decision of the Surplus Pluto-num Dispositional Environmental Impact Statement identifying the Savannah River Site, South Carolina, for plutonium disposition activities.

(2) The United States-Russia Agreement on the Management and Disposition of Plu-tonium Designated as No Longer Required for Defense Purposes and Related Cooper-a tion, signed in 1997 by the Russian Federation of Russia.

(c) SCOPE OF MODIFICATIONS.—Any modification of United States participation in a current United States and Russia plutonium disposition program shall provide for the disposition of not less than 34 tons of Russian weapons-grade plutonium on a schedule which completes disposition of such plutonium not later than 2026, the date envisioned in the Agreement referred to in subsection (a).

(d) ELEMENTS OF REPORT ACCOMPANYING MODIFICATION.—If any modification is proposed to United States participation in a current United States and Russia plutonium disposition program, the report under subsection (a)—

(1) shall assess any impact of such modification on other elements of the environmental management strategy of the Department of Energy for the closure or cleanup of current and former sites in the United States nuclear weapons complex;

(2) shall specify the costs of such modifications, including any costs to be incurred in long-term storage of weapons-grade plutonium or for research and development for proposed alternative disposition strategies, and

(3) shall describe the extent of interaction in development of such modification with, and concurrence in such modification from—

(1) States directly impacted by the plutonium disposition program; and

(2) nations participating in current programs, or proposing to participate in future programs, for the disposition of Russian weapons-grade plutonium, including the willingness of such nations to offset the costs specified under paragraph (2); and

(C) the Russian Federation.

(e) ANNUAL REPORT TO CONGRESS ON FISSILE MATERIALS DISPOSITION ACTIVITIES.—The Secretary of Energy shall include with the budget justification materials submitted to Congress in support of Department of Energy budget for each fiscal year (as summation with the budget of the President under section 105(a) of title III, United States Code) a report setting forth the extent to which amounts requested for the Department for such fiscal year for fissile material disposition activities will enable the Department to meet commitments for such activities in such fiscal year.

(f) LIMITATION ON ALTERNATIVE USE OF CERTAIN FUNDS FOR DISPOSAL OF PLUTONIUM.—The amount made available by section 2 of title I of division B of the Omnibus Consolidated and Emergency Supplemental Appropriations Act, 1999 (Public Law 105–277; 112 Stat. 2681–560) for expenditures in the Rusian Federation to implement a United States/Russian accord for disposition of excess weap-one-grade plutonium shall be available only for that purpose until the submittal to the congressional defense committees of the report referred to in subsection (a).

SEC. 1642. Mr. DOMENICICI (for himself, Mr. HAGEL, Mr. LUGAR, and Mr. BINGAMAN) submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill S. 1438, to authorize appropriations for fiscal year 2002 for military activities of the Department of Defense, for military constructions, and for defense activities of the Department of Energy, to prescribe personnel strengths for such fiscal year for the Armed Forces, and for other purposes; which was ordered to lie on the table; as follows:

At the end of title XII, add the following:

Subtitle C—Coordination of Nonproliferation Programs and Assistance

SEC. 1231. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the “Nonproliferation Programs and Assistance Cooperation and Shared Obligations in Russia Act of 2001.”

SEC. 1232. FINDINGS.

Congress makes the following findings:

(1) United States nonproliferation efforts in the independent states of the former Soviet Union have achieved important results in ensuring that weapons of mass destruction, weapon-useable material and technology, and weapons-related knowledge remain beyond the reach of terrorists and weapons-proliferating states.

(2) Although these efforts are in the United States national security interest, the effectiveness of these efforts suffers from a lack of coordination within and among United States Government agencies.

(3) Increased activities and investment by the United States private sector on non-proliferation efforts in the independent states of the former Soviet Union, specifically, spending and investment by the United States private sector in job creation initiatives and proposals for unemployed Russian weapons scientists and technicians, are making an important contribution in ensuring that knowledge related to weapons of mass destruction remains beyond the reach of terrorists and weapons-proliferating states.

(4) Increased spending and investment by the United States private sector on non-proliferation efforts in the independent states of the former Soviet Union require the establishment of a coordinating body to ensure that United States public and private efforts are not in conflict, and to ensure that United States public and private and further United States national security interests.

SEC. 1233. ESTABLISHMENT OF COMMITTEE ON NONPROLIFERATION ASSISTANCE TO THE INDEPENDENT STATES OF THE FORMER SOVIET UNION.

(a) ESTABLISHMENT.—There is established within the executive branch of the Government an interagency committee known as the “Committee on Nonproliferation Assistance to the Independent States of the Former Soviet Union” (in this title referred to as the “Committee”).

(b) MEMBERSHIP.—(1) The Committee shall be composed of 6 members, as follows:

(A) A representative of the Department of State designated by the Secretary of State.

(B) A representative of the Department of Energy designated by the Secretary of Energy.

(C) A representative of the Department of Defense designated by the Secretary of Defense.

(D) A representative of the Department of Commerce designated by the Secretary of Commerce.

(E) A representative of the Assistant to the President for National Security Affairs designated by the Assistant to the President.

(F) A representative of the Director of Central Intelligence.

(2) The Secretary of a department named in subparagraph (A), (B), (C), or (D) of paragraph (1) shall designate as the department’s representative an official of that department who is not below the level of an Assistant Secretary of the department.

(b) CHAIR.—The representative of the Assistant to the President for National Security Affairs shall serve as Chair of the Committee. The Chair may invite the head of any other department or agency of the United States designated in the title of this Act to participate in the activities of the Committee.

(b) CHAIR.—The representative of the Assistant to the President for National Security Affairs shall serve as Chair of the Committee. The Chair may invite the head of any other department or agency of the United States designated in the title of this Act to participate in the activities of the Committee.

SEC. 1234. DUTIES OF COMMITTEE.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The Committee shall have primary continuing responsibility within the executive branch of the Government for:

(1) monitoring United States nonproliferation efforts in the independent states of the former Soviet Union;

(2) coordinating the implementation of United States policy with respect to such efforts; and

(3) recommending to the President, through the National Security Council—

(A) integrated national policies for countering the threats posed by weapons of mass destruction; and

(B) options for integrating the budgets of departments and agencies of the Federal Government for programs and activities to counter such threats.

(b) DUTIES SPECIFIED.—In carrying out the responsibilities described in subsection (a), the Committee shall—

(1) arrange for the preparation of analyses on the issues and problems relating to coordination within and among United States departments and agencies on nonproliferation efforts of the independent states of the former Soviet Union;

(2) arrange for the preparation of analyses on the issues and problems relating to coordination within and among United States departments and agencies on nonproliferation efforts of the independent states of the former Soviet Union;

(3) provide guidance on arrangements that will contribute to, and maximize the utility of United States public spending on nonproliferation programs of the independent states of the former Soviet Union to ensure efficiency and further United States national security interests;

(4) encourage companies and nongovernmental organizations involved in nonproliferation programs of the independent states of the former Soviet Union to voluntarily report these efforts to the Committee;

(5) arrange for the preparation of analyses on the issues and problems relating to the coordination between the United States and other countries with respect to nonproliferation efforts in the independent states of the former Soviet Union;

(6) consider, and make recommendations to the President and Congress with respect to, proposals for new legislation or regulations relating to United States nonproliferation efforts in the independent states of the former Soviet Union as may be necessary.

SEC. 1235. COMPREHENSIVE PROGRAM FOR NONPROLIFERATION PROGRAMS AND ACTIVITIES.

(a) PROGRAM REQUIRED.—The President shall develop a comprehensive program for the Federal Government for carrying out nonproliferation programs and activities.

(b) COORDINATION.—The program under subsection (a) shall include plans and proposals as follows:

(1) Plans for countering the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction and related materials and technologies.

(2) Plans for coordinating, de-conflicting, and maximizing the use of appropriated funds for nonproliferation programs of the independent states of the former Soviet Union, including coordination between the United States and other countries with respect to nonproliferation programs of the independent states of the former Soviet Union and coordination between public spending and private investment in defense conversion activities of the independent states of the former Soviet Union.

(3) Plans for establishing appropriate centers for analyzing seized nuclear, radiological, biological, and chemical weapons and related materials and technologies.

(4) Proposals for establishing in the United States appropriate legal controls and enforcement authority of any existing department or agency of the Federal Government, or any other entity therefor, to implement and enforce laws that set forth appropriate penalties for offenses regarding the smuggling of weapons of mass destruction and related materials and technologies.

(5) Proposals for encouraging and assisting governments of foreign countries to implement and enforce laws that set forth appropriate penalties for offenses regarding the smuggling of weapons of mass destruction and related materials and technologies.

(6) Proposals for building the confidence of the United States and each of its nuclear arms control partners over United States and Russian nuclear weapons and fissile materials, including plans for verifying the dismantlement of nuclear weapons.

(7) Plans for reducing United States and Russian stockpiles of excess plutonium, which plans shall take into account an assessment of the options United States co-operation with Russia in the disposition of Russian plutonium.

(8) Plans for studying the merits and costs of establishing a global network of means for detecting and responding to terrorism or other criminal use of biological agents against people or other forms of life in the United States or in the United States territory.

(c) REPORT.—(1) At the same time the President submits to Congress the budget for fiscal year 2003, pursuant to section 1105(a) of title 31, United States Code, the President shall submit to Congress a report that sets forth the comprehensive program developed under this section.

(2) The report shall include the following:

(A) The specific plans and programs for the comprehensive program under subsection (b).

SEC. 1066. CRITICAL INFRASTRUCTURES PROTECTION.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress makes the following findings:

(1) The Information revolution has transformed the conduct of business and the operations of government as well as the infrastructure relied upon for the defense and national security of the United States.

(2) Private business, government, and the national security apparatus increasingly depend on an interdependent network of critical physical and information infrastructures.

(b) POLICY OF UNITED STATES.—It is the policy of the United States to:

(1) prevent all possible disruption of the operation of the critical infrastructures of the United States be rare, brief, geographically limited in effect, manageable, and minimally detrimental to the economy, essential human and government services, and national security of the United States;

(2) maintain the focus on critical infrastructures essential to create and maintain models of such systems and of critical infrastructures generally;

(c) ACQUISITION FROM STATE AND LOCAL GOVERNMENTS.—The Secretary shall have in place a comprehensive and effective program to mitigate the threats to such systems and to critical infrastructures generally.

SA 1645. Mr. DOMENICI (for himself and Mr. BINGAMAN) submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill S. 1438, to authorize appropriations for fiscal year 2002 for military activities of the Department of Defense, for military constructions, and for defense activities of the Department of Defense, to prescribe personnel strengths for such fiscal year for the Armed Forces, and for other purposes; which was ordered to lie on the table; as follows:

TITLE XXXV—COMMERCIAL REUSABLE IN-SPACE TRANSPORTATION

SEC. 3501. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the "Commercial Reusable In-Space Transportation Act of 2001".

SEC. 3502. FINDINGS.

Congress makes the following findings: (1) It is in the national interest to encourage the utilization of cost-effective, in-space transportation systems, which would be developed and operated by the private sector on commercial basis. (2) The use of reusable in-space transportation systems will enhance performance levels of in-space operations, enhance efficient and safe disposal of satellites at the end of their useful lives, and increase the capability and reliability of existing ground-to-space launch vehicles. (3) Commercial reusable in-space transportation systems will enhance the economic well-being and national security of the United States by reducing space operations costs for commercial and national space programs and by adding new space capabilities to space operations. (4) Commercial reusable in-space transportation systems will provide new cost-effective space capabilities (including orbital transfer from the equatorial orbits to high altitude orbits and return, the correction of erroneous satellite orbits, and the recovery, refurbishment, and refueling of satellites) and the propulsion functions to increase ground-to-orbit launch vehicle payloads to geostationary and other high energy orbits. (5) Commercial reusable in-space transportation systems can enhance and enable the space exploration of the United States by providing lower cost trajectory injection and orbit transfer, improve control on re-entry, and planet arrival deceleration to support potential National Aeronautics and Space Administration missions to Mars, Pluto, and other planets.

SEC. 3503. LOANS AND LOAN GUARANTEES FOR DEVELOPMENT OF COMMERCIAL REUSABLE IN-SPACE TRANSPORTATION SYSTEMS.

(a) AUTHORITY TO MAKE LOANS AND LOAN GUARANTEES.—The Administrator may make loans, and may guarantee loans made, to eligible United States commercial providers for purposes of developing commercial reusable in-space transportation systems.

(b) ELIGIBLE UNITED STATES COMMERCIAL PROVIDERS.—The Administrator shall prescribe requirements for the eligibility of United States commercial providers for loans, and loan guarantees, under this section. Such requirements shall ensure that eligible providers are financially capable of undertaking a loan made or guaranteed under this section.

(c) FEES.—(1) CREDIT SUBSIDY.—(A) COLLECTION REQUIRED.—The Administrator shall collect from each United States commercial provider receiving a loan or loan guarantee under this section an amount equal to the amount, as determined by the Administrator, to cover the cost, as defined by the Administrator, to the extent that the amount is not subordinated to another debt

(2) INTEREST RATE.—The interest rate on a loan made or guaranteed under this section may not be less than the interest rate determined by the Administrator based on a benchmark interest rate on marketable Treasury securities with a similar maturity to the loan.

(3) RESTRICTION ON INCOME.—A loan or loan guarantee under this section shall be amortized over the period, as determined by the Administrator, of—
(A) 20 years; or
(B) the useful life of the physical asset to be financed by the loan.

(4) PROHIBITION ON SUBORDINATION.—A loan made or guaranteed under this section may not be subordinated to another debt, held or guaranteed by the United States or any other agency without the need for the United States to bear the cost of development of such systems.

(5) OTHER TERMS AND CONDITIONS.—The Administrator may require other terms and conditions for a loan made or guaranteed under this section.

(6) TREATMENT OF GUARANTEE.—The guarantee of a loan under this section shall be conclusive evidence of the following:
(A) That the guarantee has been properly obtained.
(B) That the loan qualifies for the guarantee.
(C) That, but for fraud or material misrepresentation by the holder of the loan, the guarantee is valid, legal, and enforceable.
(D) OTHER TERMS AND CONDITIONS.—The Administrator may establish other terms and conditions for a loan made under this section, or for the guarantee of a loan under this section, as the Administrator considers appropriate to protect the financial interests of the United States.

(7) ENFORCEMENT OF RIGHTS.—(1) IN GENERAL.—The Attorney General may take any action The Attorney General considers appropriate to enforce any right accruing to the United States under a loan or loan guarantee under this section.

(2) FORBEARANCE.—The Attorney General may, with the approval of the parties concerned, forebear from enforcing any right of the United States under a loan made or guaranteed under this section for the benefit of a United States commercial provider if such forbearance will not result in any cost, as defined in section 502(c) of the Federal Credit Reform Act of 1990, to the United States.

(3) UTILIZATION OF PROPERTY.—Notwithstanding any other provision of law and subject to the terms of a loan made or guaranteed under this section, the Administrator may, at the election of the Administrator—
(A) take control of the physical asset financed by the loan; and
(B) complete, recondition, reconstruct, repair, maintain, operate, or sell the physical asset.

SEC. 3504. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.—There is hereby authorized to be appropriated $1,500,000,000 for the making of loans under this section and for the administration of amounts paid by a United States commercial provider under this subsection shall be derived from amounts other than the proceeds of the loan for which such amount is paid.
of loans and loan guarantees under this section.

SEC. 3504. DEFINITIONS.

In this title:

(1) ADMINISTRATOR.—The term "Administrator" means the Administrator of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

(2) COMMERCIAL PROVIDER.—The term "commercial provider" means any person or entity providing commercial reusable in-orbit space transportation services, primary control of which is held by persons other than the Federal Government, a State or local government, or a foreign government.

(3) IN-SPACE TRANSPORTATION SERVICES.—The term "in-space transportation services" means operations and activities involved in the direct transportation or attempted transportation of a payload or object from one orbit to another by means of an in-space transportation vehicle.

(4) IN-SPACE TRANSPORTATION SYSTEM.—The term "in-space transportation system" means the space and ground elements, including in-space transportation vehicles and support systems, and ground administration and control facilities and associated equipment, necessary for the provision of in-space transportation services.

(5) IN-SPACE TRANSPORTATION VEHICLE.—The term "in-space transportation vehicle" means a vehicle designed—

(A) to be based and operated in space;

(B) to transport a payload or objects from one orbit to another orbit; and

(C) to be reusable and refueled in space.

(6) UNITED STATES COMMERCIAL PROVIDER.—The term "United States commercial provider" means any commercial provider organized under the laws of the United States that is more than 50 percent owned by United States nationals.

SA 1657. Mr. BROWNBACK submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill S. 1438, to authorize appropriations for fiscal year 2002 for military activities of the Department of Defense, for military constructions, and for defense activities of the Department of Energy, to prescribe personnel strengths for such fiscal year for the Armed Forces, and for other purposes; which was ordered to lie on the table; as follows:

At the end of subtitle B of title XII add the following:

SEC. 1217. LIMITED AUTHORITY TO PROVIDE ASISTANCE TO PAKISTAN AND INDIA.

If the President determines that it is in the national interests of the United States to do so, the President is authorized to provide assistance to Pakistan and India under the Arms Export Control Act, the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961, the Export-Import Bank Act of 1945, or any Act without regard to any grounds for prohibiting or restricting such assistance under those Acts that arose prior to September 11, 2001.

SA 1658. Mr. LOTTT submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill S. 1438, to authorize appropriations for fiscal year 2002 for military activities of the Department of Defense, for military constructions, and for defense activities of the Department of Energy, to prescribe personnel strengths for such fiscal year for the Armed Forces, and for other purposes; which was ordered to lie on the table; as follows:

At the end of subtitle B of title XII add the following:

SEC. 1217. ACQUISITION OF LOGISTICAL SUPPORT FOR SECURITY FORCES.

Section 5 of the Multinational Force and Observers Participation Resolution (22 U.S.C. 3614) is amended at the end the following new subsection:

"(x)(1) The United States may use contractors to provide logistical support to the Multinational Force and Observers in this section in lieu of providing such support through a logistical support unit composed of members of the United States Armed Forces.

"(2) Notwithstanding subsections (a) and (b) and section 7(b), support by a contractor under this subsection without reimbursement whenever the President determines that such action enhances or supports the national security interests of the United States."
Defense, for military constructions, and for defense activities of the Department of Energy, to prescribe personnel strengths for such fiscal year for the Armed Forces, and for other purposes; as follows:

At the end of subtitle B of title XII, add the following:

SEC. 1217. PERSONAL SERVICES CONTRACTS TO BE PERFORMED BY INDIVIDUALS OR ORGANIZATIONS ABROAD.

Section 2 of the State Department Basic Authorities Act of 1966 (22 U.S.C. 2659) is amended by striking the period at the end of section (c), and inserting the following:

‘‘(c) C ONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—(1) The heading for section (d) of this title is amended by striking ‘‘Defense, the member’s years of active service when he died.’’;

‘‘(2) Subsection (d)(3) of such section is amended by striking ‘‘1448(d)(1)(B) or 1448(d)(1)(C)’’ and inserting ‘‘clause (ii) or (iii) of section 1448(d)(1)(A)’’;

(b) COMPUTATION OF SURVIVOR ANNUITY.—Section 1651(c)(1) of title 10, United States Code, is amended—

(1) in subparagraph (A)—

(A) by striking ‘‘based upon his years of active service when he died,’’ and inserting ‘‘based upon the following:’’; and

(B) by adding at the end the following new clauses:

‘‘(iii) the case of an annuity payable under section 1448(d) of this title by reason of the death of a member in line of duty, the member’s years of active service when he died.’’;

‘‘(i) in the case of an annuity under section 1448(f) of this title, the member’s years of active service when he died;’’;

‘‘(c) CONFORMING AMENDMENTS.—(1) The heading for section (d) of this title is amended by striking ‘‘Retirement-Ineligible’’.

SA 1665. Mr. LEVIN (for Mr. AKAKA) submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by Mr. LEVIN to the bill S. 1438, to make appropriations for fiscal year 2002 for military activities of the Department of Defense, for military constructions, and for defense activities of the Department of Energy, to prescribe personnel strengths for such fiscal year for the Armed Forces, and for other purposes; as follows:

At the end of subtitle D of title XXXVIII, add the following:

SEC. 2844. CONSTRUCTION OF PARKING GARAGE AT FORT DE RUSSEY, HAWAII.

(a) AUTHORITY TO ENTER INTO AGREEMENT.—(1) The Secretary of the Army may enter into an agreement with the Army Heritage Foundation, a not-for-profit organization, for the design, construction, and operation of a facility for the United States Army Heritage and Education Center at Carlisle Barracks, Pennsylvania, and insert the following:

‘‘(2) the facility referred to in paragraph (1) is to be used for curation and storage of artifacts, research facilities, classrooms, and offices for education and other activities, agreed to by the Secretary, relating to the heritage of the Army. The facility may also be used to support such education and training as the Secretary considers appropriate.

(b) DESIGN AND CONSTRUCTION.—The Secretary may, at the election of the Secretary:

(1) accept funds from the Military Heritage Foundation for the design and construction of the facility referred to in subsection (a); or

(2) permit the United States Army Heritage Foundation to contract for the design and construction of the facility.

(c) ACCEPTANCE OF FACILITY.—(1) Upon satisfactory completion, as determined by the Secretary, of the facility referred to in subsection (a), and upon the satisfaction of any and all financial obligations incurred thereto by the Military Heritage Foundation, the Secretary shall accept the facility from the Military Heritage Foundation, and all right, title, and interest in the facility shall vest in the United States.

(2) Upon becoming property of the United States, the facility shall be under the jurisdiction of the Secretary.

(d) USE OF CERTAIN GIFTS.—(1) Under regulations prescribed by the Secretary, the Secretary may, without regard to section 2691 of title 10, United States Code, accept, hold, administer, invest, and spend any gift, devise, or bequest of property for the Armed Forces, or any gift, devise, or bequest for any purpose of a value of $500,000 or less made to the United States if such gift, devise, or bequest is for the benefit of the United States Army Heritage and Education Center.

(2) The Secretary may pay or authorize the payment of any reasonable and necessary expense in connection with the conveyance or transfer of a gift, devise, or bequest under this subsection.
SEC. 1027. COMPTROLLER GENERAL STUDY AND REPORT ON INTERCONNECTIVITY OF NATIONAL GUARD DISTRIBUTEIVE TRAINING TECHNOLOGY PROJECT NETWORKED PUBLIC AND PRIVATE NETWORKS.

(a) STUDY REQUIRED.—The Comptroller General of the United States shall conduct a study of:

(1) the voice, data, and video communications networks and related infrastructure of the National Guard Distributive Training Technology Project (DTTP) and other Department of Defense, Federal, State, and private networks.

(2) Whether, and to what extent, national security concerns impede interconnectivity between the DTTP and other military and civilian networks.

(3) Whether, and to what extent, other concerns or limitations impede interconnectivity between the DTTP and other military and civilian networks.

(b) PURPOSES.—The purposes of the study under subsection (a) are as follows:

(1) To identify existing capabilities, and future requirements, for transmission of voice, data, and video for purposes of operational support of disaster response, homeland defense, command and control of pre mobilization forces, training of military personnel, training of first responders, and shared use of the networks of the Distributive Training Technology Project by government and members of the networks.

(2) To identify appropriate connections between the networks of the Distributive Training Technology Project and networks of the Federal Emergency Management Agency, State emergency management agencies, and other Federal and State agencies.

(3) To identify requirements for connectivity between the networks of the Distributive Training Technology Project and the DTTP and other Department of Defense, Federal, State, and private networks referred to in subsection (a) in the event of a significant disruption of providers of public services.

SEC. 1028. REPRESENTATION OF NATIONAL GUARD DISTRIBUTIVE TRAINING TECHNOLOGY PROJECT TO NATIONAL SECURITY AGENCY

Representatives of the DTTP shall be required to provide to the National Security Agency.

SEC. 1029. COMPTROLLER GENERAL STUDY AND REPORT ON INTERCONNECTIVITY OF NATIONAL GUARD DISTRIBUTIVE TRAINING TECHNOLOGY PROJECT NETWORKED PUBLIC AND PRIVATE NETWORKS.

(a) STUDY REQUIRED.—The Comptroller General shall conduct a study of the voice, data, and video networks of the National Guard Distributive Training Technology Project (DTTP) and other Department of Defense, Federal, State, and private voice, data, and video networks, including the networks of the distance learning project of the Army known as Classroom XXI, networks of public and private institutions of higher education, and networks of the Federal Emergency Management Agency and other Federal, State, and local emergency preparedness agencies.

(b) PURPOSES.—The purposes of the study under subsection (a) are as follows:

(1) To identify existing capabilities, and future requirements, for transmission of voice, data, and video for purposes of operational support of disaster response, homeland defense, command and control of pre mobilization forces, training of military personnel, training of first responders, and shared use of the networks of the Distributive Training Technology Project by government and members of the networks.

(2) To identify appropriate connections between the networks of the Distributive Training Technology Project and networks of the Federal Emergency Management Agency, State emergency management agencies, and other Federal and State agencies.

(3) To identify requirements for connectivity between the networks of the Distributive Training Technology Project and the DTTP and other Department of Defense, Federal, State, and private networks referred to in subsection (a) in the event of a significant disruption of providers of public services.

(c) PARTICULAR MATTERS.—In conducting the study, the Comptroller General shall consider, in particular, the following:

(1) Whether, and to what extent, national security concerns impede interconnectivity between the networks of the Distributive Training Technology Project and other Department of Defense, Federal, State, and private networks referred to in subsection (a).

(2) Whether, and to what extent, limitations on the technological capabilities of the Department of Defense impede interconnectivity between the networks of the Distributive Training Technology Project and such other networks.

SEC. 1030. COMPTROLLER GENERAL STUDY AND REPORT ON INTERCONNECTIVITY OF NATIONAL GUARD DISTRIBUTIVE TRAINING TECHNOLOGY PROJECT NETWORKED PUBLIC AND PRIVATE NETWORKS.

(a) STUDY REQUIRED.—The Comptroller General shall conduct a study of

(1) the voice, data, and video communications networks and related infrastructure of the National Guard Distributive Training Technology Project (DTTP) and other Department of Defense, Federal, State, and private networks.

(2) Whether, and to what extent, national security concerns impede interconnectivity between the DTTP and other military and civilian networks.

(b) PURPOSES.—The purposes of the study under subsection (a) are as follows:

LADY LIBERTY

HON. MICHAEL BILIRAKIS
OF FLORIDA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Monday, September 24, 2001

Mr. BILIRAKIS. Mr. Speaker, in the aftermath of the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001, everyone’s thoughts and prayers are with those whose lives have been forever altered by this tragedy. Several days after the attack, I received a copy of a poem entitled “Lady Liberty Still Stands Tall.” It was written by a good friend, Dr. Ken Webster. I wanted to share this touching poem with my colleagues.

LADY LIBERTY STILL STANDS TALL
(By Kenneth E. Webster)
The New York Harbor was attacked,
As the twin towers came tumbling down.
With Lady Liberty standing by,
She sheds a tear and a frown.
I’ve watched this harbor over 100 years,
And welcomed thousands to our shores.
The tired, poor and huddled masses,
As I lift my lite beside the golden door.
People come from all over the world,
Yearning for a life that is free.
They could count on safe harbor here,
But on September 11 the year 2001,
Some terrorists attack—what a pity.
I saw them fly right past my torch,
As others who visit New York City.
I could see the terror in the eyes,
Of everyone on board the plane.
It headed straight for the twin towers,
Soon to inflict them all with pain.
I saw the terrible crash occur,
And I knew many would lose their lives.
The buildings exploded into the sky,
And I knew many would lose their lives.
I’ve never cried here in the harbor,
As terrorist perform a terrible wrong.
I’ve always remained straight and strong.
And I’ll stay here for all to see.
That America is the land of the free.
And I’ll stay here for all to see.
As terrorists perform a terrible wrong.
I’ve always remained straight and strong.
And I’ll stay here for all to see.
That America is the land of the free.
As terrorists perform a terrible wrong.
I’ve always remained straight and strong.
And I’ll stay here for all to see.
That America is the land of the free.
As terrorists perform a terrible wrong.
I’ve always remained straight and strong.

great friend of mine, Murfreesboro City Attorney Tom Reed. Tom, who has worked for our city as an attorney for more than 29 years, is retiring at the end of this month.

Tom began his distinguished career with the city of Murfreesboro soon after his graduation from the University of Tennessee School of Law, helping guide the Middle Tennessee community through nearly three decades of unprecedented growth and prosperity.

Tom’s service has aided city leaders and officials in their effort to make Murfreesboro, my hometown, one of America’s most desirable places to live. Tom’s influence has reached much farther than the legal interests of his city, though.

He has also been instrumental in bolstering the city’s economic health and development. And he has been actively involved in many local, state and national committees, boards and professional associations.

His unflinching dedication and tireless service to the city will be sorely missed. I congratulate Tom on his outstanding career and look forward to seeing him continue to make a great contribution in his future endeavors.

VERMONT HIGH SCHOOL STUDENT CONGRESSIONAL TOWN MEETING

HON. BERNARD SANDERS
OF VERMONT

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Monday, September 24, 2001

Mr. SANDERS. Mr. Speaker, today I recognize the outstanding work done by participants in my Student Congressional Town Meeting held this summer. These participants were in my Student Congressional Town Meeting to organize the outstanding work done by participants ON BEHALF OF HILLARY KNAPP AND CHRISTINE HARVEY. In January, Otter Teen Network helped organize and run a peer leadership and education program that invites teens to work together to create a safe environment and positive school community at Otter Valley. And OTM encourages young students to develop leadership skills, have fun, and be high on life, not alcohol, tobacco or other dangerous drugs. One of OTM’s goals is to empower individuals to respect themselves and others, and not give in to negative peer pressure. There are no membership requirements. All student and faculty are already members. As a member, you can become involved as much or as little as you desire.

Hillary Knapp. Peer Leadership Project is where certain kids from the school go and have leadership training for one weekend. And Green Mountain Prevention projects provided a facilitator, Workshop-presenter and team-building games. Through the PLP, we generated interest among the middle school students to get involved with planning and carrying out our Power of Choice Day.

Christine Harvey. Our Power of Choice Day was a day where we had workshops for students to go to instead of regular classes, and the workshops were on healthy choices and the power you have to make your own choices.

Hillary Knapp. Students came to our Power of Choice Day thinking that it was going to be boring and negative, but they were just going to sit there. And as they went to the workshops and did all the activities we had, they found that it was interesting and they thought that the survey results of the survey for the day showed that the vast majority of the students enjoyed the day and found it somewhat to be useful in their everyday life.

Christine Harvey. We have a packet on all the stuff that we did during the day, and some pictures.

ON BEHALF OF JOSH SMOLKIN—REGARDING LEGALIZING CANNABIS, MAY 7, 2001

Josh Smolkin. My name is Joshua Smolkin. Thank you for letting me speak here. Cannabis legalization has been increasingly popular. This push is misunderstood by those who discredit and close their ears to the evidence that cannabis can help people who merely wish to walk down the street and smoke a joint without getting apprehended. It comes from intelligent individuals who wish to make as much use of a significant resource as humanly possible. Cannabis is the only plant that has resilient enough growing habits, fragrant value, and the versatility to provide all the basic necessities of life while helping to save our ecosystem and supply all the energy we would ever need. I feel it is in our best interest to legalize cannabis. As the world is learning, the cannabis plant does not contain enough tetrahydrocannabinol, or THC, the psychoactive chemical found in cannabis, to get an individual high. It would astonish me as to why we have been confronted with so many problems whenever there is an attempt to use it industrially. That is, it would astound me, because hemp poses a huge threat to the timber and oil companies, both of which exert huge influence within the United States. Hemp can be effectively made into all sorts of energy products that are practically sulfur-free and cleaner burning than currently used national resources such as crude oil, its by-products, natural gas, or coal. It can be made into a bio-mass form of charcoal and gasoline. While when burnt, it will release carbon dioxide, while it is growing, it uses up CO₂, creating more of a balance. I am convinced cannabis is one of our prime allies in the fight against the greenhouse effect and pollution. This possibility is definitely not given enough credence. I guess it is a horrible thing to experience, it is just so happens that, during the cultural development of our country, some substances became more socially acceptable than others. I think the main position taken by anti-marijuana legalization advocates is that it is a gateway drug. This assumption, made by those who would see it as far worse, and others who see it less harmful. The fact is, if an individual of legal age can go home and drink a few beers and watch TV, why can’t a person go home after work, smoke some marijuana and watch TV? It is just so happens that, during the cultural development of our country, some substances became more socially acceptable than others. laws outlawing its use. Law enforcement arrests a marijuana smoker every 54 seconds in America, at a cost to society. Over 10 million Americans have been arrested on marijuana charges since the National Commission on Marijuana and Drug Abuse issued its recommendations to Congress in 1972 to decriminalize the plant. Nonviolent marijuana offenders often serve longer sentences than rapists or murderers, and there are currently 60,000 in jail. This means that peaceful middle-class people are thrown in cells with rapists and murderers. Civil forfeiture laws allow the police to seize the property of suspected marijuana offenders; charges need not even be filed. Vigorous enforcement of the laws forces hardliners to criminalize to take over marijuana trafficking. This causes violence and increased predatory crime. Marijuana prohibition creates a mixed drug market, which puts marijuana customers in contact with hard-drug dealers. Experimenting marijuana would separate marijuana from cocaine, heroin and other hard drugs. Because marijuana is typically used in private, trampling the Bill of Rights is an integral part of marijuana-law enforcement—for example, the use of drug dogs, urine tests, phone taps, government informants, curbside garbage searches, military helicopters, and infrared heat detectors. There are simply so many facts which support cannabis legality that I could speak of them to you all day today. Hopefully, these facts and my opinions that I have presented are helpful and informative. I urge you to support this cause, given the opportunity. The industrial, medicinal, nutritional, and moral benefits of cannabis legalization are too much to ignore.

CONDEMNING BIGOTRY AND VIOLENCE AGAINST ARAB-AMERICANS, AMERICAN MUSLIMS, AND AMERICANS FROM SOUTH ASIA

HON. CONSTANCE A. MORELLA OF MARYLAND IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES Friday, September 14, 2001

Mrs. MORELLA. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this resolution condemning bigotry and violence against Arab and Muslim-Americans. I also thank Congressman BONIOR for bringing this issue to the full attention of the House, because the incidents seem to be multiplying. Americans are sharing many emotions. We are angry at our own vulnerability. We grieve for ourselves and the tremendous pain that thousands continue to endure. We watch, feeling helpless and unable to help those in need. Our reactions are frantic but, similar. They are similar because we are Americans. We believe in the American ideals of freedom, liberty and compassion; a true democracy. Our citizenry shares the ability to accept and to desire to be accepted, for whom we choose to be, and what we choose to believe. We shall never cease to condemn the practice of intolerance, bigotry and discrimination. This week we have shared a tragedy that must bring ALL Americans together. To faction...
we must all live together; we must all be concerned about each other.”

I hope all Americans can be concerned about each other at this pivotal time in our history.

HONORING ALLAN Y. JENDIAN

HON. GEORGE RADANOVICH
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Monday, September 24, 2001

Mr. RADANOVICH. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor Allan Y. Jendian for being elected Secretary/Treasurer of Chapter 97 of the National Treasury Employees Union (NTEU). The NTEU represents 6,000 employees of the Fresno Internal Revenue Service (IRS) Campus.

Jendian has been an IRS Revenue Agent for the past 34 years. During the last fiscal year, he was named “Employee of the Year” of the Compliance Division for his community service at Public Service Recognition ceremonies. Jendian also successfully coordinated the Fresno IRS Campus Combined Federal Campaign, which reached a record-breaking high of over $220,000.

Jendian, who has long been a highly active member of his community, is a Deacon at the Armenian Orthodox Church. He recently served as the Regional Chairman of the Pontifical Visit of the Catholics of All Armenians to the Central Valley. In addition, he serves on numerous Boards, including the Armenia Fund of the Western Region, the Diocesan Council of the Western Diocese and the Armenian Inter-Denominational Community Council. Furthermore, Jendian is an active member of the St. Paul Armenian Church, Armenian General Benevolent Union, Knights of Vartan and the Tekeyan Cultural Association, while serving on various committees within these organizations.

Mr. Speaker, I rise to congratulate Allan Y. Jendian for being elected Secretary/Treasurer of Chapter 97 of the National Treasury Employees Union, I urge my colleagues to join me in wishing Mr. Jendian many more years of service to his community and our Nation.

HONORING GEN. HENRY H. “HUGH” SHELTON, USA, FOR HIS EXCEPTIONAL SERVICE AS CHAIRMAN OF THE JOINT CHIEFS OF STAFF

HON. BENJAMIN A. GILMAN
OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Monday, September 24, 2001

Mr. GILMAN. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to rise to recognize and commend the exceptional work of a distinguished American, a great friend and an exceptional soldier, General Henry H. “Hugh” Shelton, USA, the 14th Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. On October 1, 2001, General Shelton, concludes his second term as the principal military adviser to the President, the Secretary of Defense, and to the National Security Council.

General Shelton, known to his friends as “Hugh,” was born in Tarboro, North Carolina, and grew up on his family’s 1,000 acre farm in the tiny town of Speed, N.C., with its population of 100. He is the oldest of four children whose father was a farmer and sold farm equipment, and his mother was a local school teacher. General Shelton attended the Speed Baptist Church every Sunday where his mother served as its pianist. General Shelton’s father achieved his goal of sending his children to college so they could broaden their horizons and not be limited to a life of growing cotton and tobacco.

As a freshman of North Carolina State University Hugh Shelton joined the U.S. Army Reserve Officers’ Training Corps (ROTC), where he was drawn to the discipline, the values, and the esprit de corps of the U.S. Army and the precision of his unit’s drills. After completing this two-year ROTC requirement after college, General Shelton went to work at Regal Textiles, local business served with the 1st Brigade of the 82nd Airborne Division, and with the 7th Special Forces Group, and with the 173rd Airborne Brigade. It was during his service in Vietnam he earned the Purple Heart.

General Shelton also commanded the 3rd Battalion, 60th Infantry Division at Ft. Lewis, Washington; serving as the assistant chief of staff for operations for the 9th Infantry Division; and was the commander of the 1st Battalion, 3rd Airborne Division at Ft. Bragg, North Carolina; served in Ft. Drum, NY as the 10th Mountain Division’s Chief of Staff; as the assistant division commander of the 101st Airborne; and commanded the Special Operations Command.

A testament to General Shelton’s exceptional leadership and of his commitment to our Nation is his meteoric rise through the Army’s general officer ranks from brigadier general through general in 9 years! In 1987, as a brigadier general, General Shelton served for 2 years in the Joint Chiefs of Staff’s Operations Directorate, followed by another 2-year assignment as the 101st Airborne Division’s Assistant Division Commander, which included a 7-month deployment to the Gulf for Operations Desert Shield and Desert Storm. Following the Gulf War, General Shelton was promoted to the rank of major general and was assigned to command the 82nd Airborne Division at Ft. Bragg, N.C., and in 1993, was promoted to the rank of lieutenant general and assumed the command of the XVIII Airborne Corps. While serving as Corps Commander, General Shelton commanded the Joint Task Force that conducted Operation Uphold Democracy in Haiti. In February 1996, General Shelton served as the Chief of the Special Operations Command in Tampa, Florida. As the Command’s Chief, General Shelton became the overall commander of our Nation’s elite fighting forces participation in joint operations.

True to his roots as a “soldier’s soldier” and a leader who is “at home” being out in the field, I was not surprised to learn that General Shelton was in Namibia reviewing special operations forces when he was contacted by the Pentagon regarding his interest in being considered for the Chairman’s position. Following his nomination by then President Bill Clinton, and confirmation by the Senate, General Shelton took his oath of office as the 14th Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff to improve the quality of life for our men and women serving in our armed forces.

General Shelton sought and received the largest across the board pay increases for the military in nearly two decades; pushed for greater salary increases for our mid-grade noncommissioned officers; and instituted a retirement reform package that reinstated benefits for those who entered our Nation’s military service after 1986; implemented an enhanced housing allowance that gradually eliminated out of pocket expenses for service members living off their post or base; and advocated for medical health care reform that made health care more responsive to the needs of our military and their families, and included military retirement reform as well.

As part of Chairman Shelton’s dynamic leadership, he established a U.S. Joint Forces Command to serve as the nucleus for Joint Experimentation and Joint Force Readiness; established a Joint Task Force-Civil Support to increase the military’s ability to respond to U.S. homeland defense crises, and established a Joint Task Force-Computer Network Operations to develop and enhance measures and protocols to further safeguard our information networks. In his Joint Vision 2020, General Shelton set forth the goals and metrics for the future joint force. General Shelton prioritizes initiatives designed to improve the interoperability of our services including: a Joint Warfighting Logistics initiative, a revision of Joint Professional Military Education Programs, development of a Global Information Grid, and an enhancement of the Joint Requirements Oversight Council's focus on joint warfighting. Additionally, General Shelton through his hard work, preparation, and personal presence, the Department of Defense realized an increase of 112 billion dollars for defense spending over the 5-year defense plan, as well as implemented new processes to carefully manage and account for resources in support of the overall National Security Strategy.

During General Shelton’s distinguished career, he was awarded numerous awards and decorations, including: the Defense Distinguished Service Medal (with 2 oak leaf clusters), the Distinguished Service Medal, the Legion of Merit (with oak leaf cluster), the Bronze Star Medal with V device I (with three oak leaf clusters), and the Purple Heart, for injuries received during combat in Vietnam. General Shelton has also been awarded the Combat Infantryman Badge, Joint Chiefs of Staff Identification Badge, Air Assault Badge, Military Freefall Badge, Master Parachutist Badge, Pathfinder Badge, and the coveted Special Forces and Ranger Tabs, as well as numerous foreign awards and badges.

General Shelton’s leadership, drive and initiatives have proven time and again that he was a superb choice to serve as our Nation’s top military adviser as we entered into the 21st Century. On September 11, 2001, our Nation suffered from the horrors of terrorist attacks in New York and in Washington, and I am confident that if it were not for the Joint Chiefs of Staff’s instantaneous and swift response to the attacks under the leadership of General Shelton working under our President, the Secretaries of Defense and State, and our Nation’s top-notch national security team, the damage and casualties we suffered may have been far greater.

General Shelton meritoriously served as our 14th Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff with honor and distinction during the past four years. While he may have served as the senior military officer and operated at the highest levels of government, General Shelton never lost touch with our men and women in uniform, and no matter how busy or over committed he is, he always makes the time to assist others. In August 2001, a member of my staff underwent two surgeries and General Shelton and his staff called Matt to see if there was anything they could do—that is but one example of the true, caring professional that epitomizes General Shelton as a “soldier’s soldier.”

I also want to recognize and offer my sincere gratitude to General Shelton’s wife Carolyn for her dedicated work, tireless efforts, and support of our military families during her service to our country. Mr. and Mrs. Shelton’s three sons Jonathan, Jeffrey and Mark deserve our thanks for supporting their father during his distinguished service.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to join me in expressing our gratitude to General Henry H. “Hugh” Shelton, the 14th Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, a superb leader, a quiet diplomat and a true gentleman of the truest sense of the word, and a true friend of mine and of our great Nation!

Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize Don and Craig Saladino on the occasion of the grand opening of their new facility. Saladino Company operates as two separate privately owned corporate entities: Saladino Sausage Company and Saladino’s, incorporated, which is a specialized foodservice distribution company.

- The Saladino Sausage Company was established in Fresno, California in the meat department of a grocery store, owned by Don Saladino’s father. Don’s sausage products were first made and sold in 1944. The distinct sausages were made from special family recipes brought over from the Calabrese region of Italy.
- His special sausages helped Don’s business grow quickly and earned him a reputation for producing quality sausages at a fair price.
- Craig, Don’s son, joined his father in the family business in 1979. Together they extended their core product line to include pizza sausage and linguica, as well as local restaurants and pizzerias. The Saladino Sausage Company’s wide variety of raw and cooked sausage products soon developed a loyal following of retail and institutional customers.
- A growing reputation of integrity and quality products soon presented Saladino’s with expanded distribution.

Saladino’s expansion has allowed the company to move into their new state-of-the-art distribution facility. The new facility has increased warehouse capability, climate controlled docks, and a layout that allows for orders to be processed more efficiently. The new facility will help Saladino’s Company to continue building on a tradition of service.

Saladino’s Sausage Company is run by President Don Saladino. Under Don’s leadership, the company has maintained a high level of quality, integrity and growth. Don’s motto, “Never forget where you came from,” keeps the company focused on providing continuous quality service to its customers. Saladino’s, incorporated is run by President Craig Saladino. His company has a unique philosophy of partnerships with its foodservice customers, vendors and associates.

Mr. Speaker, I rise to recognize Don and Craig Saladino and Saladino’s Company on the occasion of the grand opening of their new facility. I urge my colleagues to join me in wishing the Saladino family and the Saladino Company many more years of continued success.
way to meet them. I urge my colleagues to join me in voting against this legislation.

AIR TRANSPORTATION SAFETY AND SYSTEM STABILIZATION ACT
SPEECH OF
HON. WILLIAM J. COYNE
OF PENNSYLVANIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, September 21, 2001

Mr. COYNE. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in opposition to H.R. 2926, the Air Transportation Safety and System Stabilization Act when it was considered by the House of Representatives on September 21, 2001. This bill would provide $5 billion in direct aid to the airlines for losses incurred as a result of the government-ordered shut-down of the nation’s air travel industry, as well as $10 billion in loan guarantees.

I oppose this legislation because I believe that it is incomplete. It fails to address several important and time-sensitive issues.

I oppose H.R. 2926 because this bill does nothing to help the tens of thousands of hard-working Americans who were laid off by the airlines and airline manufacturers in the wake of the terrorist attacks of September 11, 2001. 78,000 airline employees and 30,000 employees of aircraft manufacturers have been or are going to be laid off. The workers who lost their jobs as a result of these terrorist attacks are also victims of the terrorists. While they were fortunate enough not to have lost their lives, they have lost their livelihoods through no fault of their own.

The airline workers who have lost their jobs will need continued health insurance coverage and job search and possibly retraining assistance. Unemployment benefits don’t last very long, so time is of the essence. And while these employees can continue their existing health insurance coverage under COBRA, they will be responsible for the full cost of the premiums, which a family with the chief breadwinner out of work can find it difficult if not impossible to afford. Consequently, I believe that the federal government should provide premium assistance to the affected families.

This bill should contain provisions to help these unemployed individuals and their families. I think that it is unacceptable that Congress will act swiftly to help the airline companies while ignoring the injured employees of those companies. It is even more unacceptable in light of the fact that multi-million dollar severance packages are available to the Presidents and CEOs of the major airlines.

In addition, I oppose this legislation because it does nothing more than express the government’s commitment to act expeditiously to strengthen airport security. It did absolutely nothing to actually improve airport security. I believe that improving security in airports and on airplanes should be our first and highest priority. I am convinced that airport security can no longer be left to the airlines. Now that terrorist attacks on airlines have become a major national security threat, I support the assumption of responsibility for airport security.

Finally, I am concerned that the bill does not adequately address the liability issue. I believe that a little more time should be taken to think through the liability issue and come up with a more equitable, comprehensive solution.

Mr. Speaker, I believe that these shortcomings should be addressed before the House passes H.R. 2926. Consequently, I urge my colleagues to join me in supporting the motion to recommit and in opposing this legislation in its current form. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

THE FRIENDS OF CHICKAMAUGA & CHATTANOOGA NATIONAL MILITARY PARK
HON. ZACH WAMP
OF TENNESSEE
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Monday, September 24, 2001

Mr. WAMP. Mr. Speaker, I would like to commend the work of a very special group of people, the Friends of Chickamauga & Chattanooga National Military Park.

In September 1863, Union and Confederate soldiers fought over access to Chattanooga in what was one of the bloodiest battles of the Civil War. In 1890, Congress established the Chickamauga & Chattanooga National Military Park as the country’s first national military battlefield park. Those petitioning for its establishment were veterans of both sides who came together in a spirit of reunion and brotherhood to memorialize the hills and fields where their brothers had fought and died.

What is now known as the Chickamauga Battlefield is bisected by a two-lane portion of U.S. Highway 27, a major north-south artery extending from Michigan to Florida. Over the years, heavy commercial and commuter traffic has created a threat to the cultural, historical and abundant natural resources in the national park.

On December 24, 1987, Public Law 100–211 was enacted to authorize the relocation of a 5.7 mile section of U.S. Highway 27. This new section of road, on the western perimeter of the Chickamauga Battlefield, will be officially dedicated on October 12, 2001. Its successful completion is the result of a partnership among the Eastern Federal Lands Highway Division of the Federal Highway Administration, Department of Transportation; the National Park Service, Department of Interior; and the Georgia Department of Transportation.

In honor of this accomplishment, Friends of the Park is presenting a weekend of activities to celebrate the opening of this new road that will allow Park visitors to experience this historical Battlefield more safely.

Mr. Speaker, the Friends of the Park was one of the first National Park support groups to successfully achieve the maximum of its ability. Following his retirement as the Chief of the National Board of Advisors established for the Museum of Aviation in Warner Robins, Georgia, Carl is the kind of man that strives to achieve the maximum of his ability. Following his service in the U.S. Air Force, he began his telephone career with BellSouth in 1973. With increasing responsibility in 1977 he became the general public relations manager for Georgia. By 1985 Carl was appointed assistant vice-president for public affairs in Charlotte, N.C. Four years later in 1989, he was promoted to state president of BellSouth’s telephone communications in Georgia. He was elected a corporate officer and promoted to his current position Senior Vice President, Corporate

TRIBUTE TO TROOPER BOBBY KINTZEL
HON. SHELLEY BERKLEY OF NEVADA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Monday, September 24, 2001

Ms. BERKLEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize a truly outstanding individual from Nevada. Trooper Bobby Kintzel of the Nevada Highway Patrol is a six-year highway patrolman, Persian Gulf War veteran, and a Valley High School graduate. Several months ago, Trooper Kintzel was laying tire-piercing spikes across the highway to end a 40-minute high speed chase when a fleeing sport utility vehicle, driven by an escaping murder suspect, purposely struck him at an estimated speed of 90 mph. Trooper Kintzel suffered a fractured pelvis and skull, a severe brain injury, and internal bleeding. A few days later, surgeons removed a portion of his brain that had been irreversibly damaged. The family was devastated and are facing an uncertain future.

Trooper Kintzel has recently begun using head and hand signals to communicate, and has had a throat operation to help him speak. Trooper Kintzel’s plight has triggered sympathy from fellow law enforcement officers across the United States, as well as in Europe and Australia. More than a thousand well wishers have left encouraging messages for Trooper Kintzel, and on Sunday, September 30, 2001, the City of Las Vegas, and Clark County, Nevada will be honoring the Nevada State Trooper by proclaiming “Trooper Bobby Kintzel Day.”

Mr. Speaker, it gives me great pleasure to recognize Trooper Bobby Kintzel before the Congress today. I call upon my colleagues to join me in honoring this special man for his bravery and courage in the line of duty.

IN RECOGNITION OF MR. CARL E. SWearingEN ON HIS RETIREMENT FROM THE NATIONAL BOARD OF ADVISORS FOR THE MUSEUM OF AVIATION IN WARRNer ROBINS, GEORGIA
HON. SAXBY CHAMBLISS OF GEORGIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Monday, September 24, 2001

Mr. CHAMBLISS. Mr. Speaker, I want to pay tribute to Mr. Carl Swearingen upon his retirement as the Chairman of the National Board of Advisors established for the Museum of Aviation in Warner Robins, Georgia.

Carl is the kind of man that strives to achieve the maximum of his ability. Following his service in the U.S. Air Force, he began his telephone career with BellSouth in 1973. With increasing responsibility in 1977 he became the general public relations manager for Georgia. By 1985 Carl was appointed assistant vice-president for public affairs in Charlotte, N.C. Four years later in 1989, he was promoted to state president of BellSouth’s telephone communications in Georgia. He was elected a corporate officer and promoted to his current position Senior Vice President, Corporate Compliance and Corporate Secretary from BellSouth Corporation of Georgia in June 1998.

He exemplifies strong character, leadership, fine management skills, and a dedication to improving education and his local community. Each of these qualities are demonstrated through the position he holds on several boards including the University of Georgia Foundation, Berry College, American Cancer Society, Georgia Partnership for Excellence in Education, and Georgia Industry Trade and Tourism.

We hate to see him retire from his position as Chairman of the National Board of Advisors established for the Museum of Aviation in Warner Robins, Georgia where he has served since 1993. He and his wife have personally donated their time, money, and hard work to guarantee the educational programs offered by the museum have grown to reach 62,000 children a year. He has been responsible for raising millions of dollars from corporations and foundations throughout the country to benefit the museum. His leadership has been vital in the expansion and success of the museum and the educational programs associated with it. He is now heading a campaign called Century 2000 The Next Generation to raise 30 million dollars for the expansion of the museum and its programs.

Setting high standards, hard work and dedication have ensured his continued success. We all appreciate his service to the industry, the Museum of Aviation, and the 8th District of Georgia. He is a spectacular example of a fine businessman, family man, and role model for people of all ages. I wish him all the best in his retirement and continued success in all his future endeavors.

"THE KING OF VIBES"

HON. JOHN CONYERS, JR.
OF MICHIGAN
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Monday, September 24, 2001

Mr. CONYERS. Mr. Speaker, as the Dean of the Congressional Black Caucus, and chairman of its annual Jazz Issue Forum and Concert, I rise to call to this body’s attention the achievements of a distinguished American, Mr. Lionel Hampton. At the age of 92, he continues a career that has brought him international acclaim as a musician, composer, and bandleader. I am extremely honored that he will be my guest here in Washington, DC, as Chairman of the National Board of Advisors of the Museum of Aviation, and the 8th District of Georgia.

Lionel Hampton began his phenomenal musical career at an early age when a student at the Holy Rosary Academy in Kenosha, Wisconsin, where he studied under the strict supervision of the Dominican Sisters. His first instrument was a set of drums and his idol during these early years was drummer Jimmy Bertrand whose records he treasured. Louis Armstrong soon became a major influence in Hamp’s young years. It was in 1930 that Armstrong hired him to appear, on the drums, at a Los Angeles nightclub engagement. Louis was so impressed with Hampton’s talents he invited him to join his big band for a recording session. During the session break, Armstrong led young Hampton to a set of vibes and asked if he knew how to play them. Lionel, who was well schooled in his keyboard studies, picked up the mallets and played. The first tune cut that day, “Memories of You,” with Lionel on vibes) became a tremendous hit and has remained a classic throughout the years.

In 1936, Benny Goodman asked Lionel to join his small group, featuring Goodman, Teddy Wilson on piano, and Gene Krupa on drums. They immediately became the legendary Benny Goodman Quartet. Musical history was being made, both for the brilliant music produced, and because they were the first racially integrated group of jazz musicians. The Swing Era had begun. “Moonlight,” “Dinah,” and “Vibraphone Blues” were immediate hits and will always remain classics in the jazz annals. Hampton formed his own band in the early 1940’s. “Sunny Side of the Street.” “Good-Bye Blues,” “Central Avenue Breakdown,” his signature tune, “Flying Home,” and “Hamp’s Boogie-Woogie” all became top-of-the-chart best-sellers upon release and the name Lionel Hampton became world famous overnight.

The Lionel Hampton Orchestra had a phenomenal array of sidemen. Among those who got their start with Hamp were: Quincy Jones, Wes Montgomery, Clark Terry, Cat Anderson, Emile Royal, Joe Newman and Fats Navarro. Among Lionel’s proteges were singers Dinyal Washington, Joe Williams, Betty Carter and Aretha Franklin. Over the years, jazz giant Hampton has received innumerable prestigious awards, which keep coming to the distinguished musical master. Among them: the title of musical advisor, bestowed by Presidents Eisenhower and Nixon, the Papal Medal from Pope Paul I, Sixteen Honorary Doctorates, and in 1992 the highly esteemed Kennedy Center Honors Award, in which he shared the musical distinction with Mislaiov Rostropovich.

Also a celebrated composer, Hamp’s original ballad, “Midnight Sun” (with Johnny Mercer and Sonny Burke) has become a beloved classic in American Jazz and popular music. His talent in the symphonic field is highly respected. Two major symphonic works, “King David Suite” and “Blues Suite” have been performed often by leading orchestras throughout the world.

Despite the rigors of his hectic calendar, Hampton continues to amaze those in the music business with the care and time he devotes to many public service activities. A “dream” of his would be to aid in the creation of a university in Uptown New York “...where young Black kids can learn to be Doctors, Lawyers, IBM technicians, and, maybe even musicians.”

Mr. Speaker, Lionel Hampton has established himself one of our nation’s greatest cultural heroes and ambassadors. Therefore, I urge all Members to join me in paying him this well deserved tribute.

STOP THE VIOLENCE AGAINST SIKHS

HON. EDOLPHUS TOWNS
OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Monday, September 24, 2001

Mr. TOWNS. Mr. Speaker, I was distressed to hear that on Saturday, September 15, a Sikh named Balbir Singh Sodhi, who owned a gas station in Mesa, Arizona, was murdered at his place of business. It appears that he was killed because of his turban and beard, which are required by the Sikh religion. Apparently, his killer thought that Mr. Sodhi was a follower of Osama bin Laden.

This was just one of well over 100 acts of harassment or violence against Sikhs in the week since the terrorist bombings of the Pentagon and the World Trade Center. A list of these acts can be found by visiting http://www.sikh.org/hatecrime.

This past Tuesday, just one week after the terrorists carried out their brutal acts, the Council of Khalistan held a press conference at the National Press Club to denounce these crimes against Sikhs and other minorities. Dr. Gurmit Singh Aulakh, the President of the Council of Khalistan, made some excellent remarks. He called on the Attorney General to investigate and called on the victims of these crimes to contact their local prosecutors and police. At this time, I would like to insert Dr. Aulakh’s remarks into the RECORD so that we can all have a better understanding of this problem.

REMARKS OF DR. GURMIT SINGH AULAKH

Ladies and Gentlemen of the Media: Thank you for coming today. I want to talk to you about a very important issue. Then I will be open for questions. Sikh Americans, Muslim Americans, Christian Americans, our neighbors and countrymen, are being harassed and acts of violence are being committed against them merely because of their religious or ethnic heritage. All Americans should join together to condemn these cowardly acts.

On behalf of the 2 million strong Sikh Nation and more than 500,000 Sikhs in the United States, I strongly condemn these acts of violence. I condemn the violence against Muslim Americans and I condemn the attacks on Sikh Americans. There have been

STATMENT OF CONGRESSMAN
ALCEE L. HASTINGS
OF FLORIDA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Monday, September 24, 2001

Mr. HASTINGS of Florida, Mr. Speaker, earlier today I received a call from George Mador. Mr. Mador is the President of L & M Aircraft Services and he called my office looking for help. L & M is a small aircraft maintenance company that charters aircraft for transporting passengers to and from the Bahamas. L & M only has seven employees and many of them have been with the company for a majority of the company’s existence.

However, in the wake of the terrorist attacks on September 11, L & M is now facing imminent bankruptcy and its seven employees, therefore, are facing certain unemployment. George told me that he did not want to get out of bed this morning because of the reality that he will have to lay off at least half of his staff by the end of the week as a result of zero income in the past two weeks. Last week’s paycheck left George and his employees without a paycheck and L & M $500 in the hole. With no apparent income coming in this week, the future of L & M Airport Services and its seven employees are undoubtedly in jeopardy.

At the three international airports serving my district, Ft. Lauderdale/Hollywood, Palm Beach, and Miami, there are more than 300 small businesses just like L & M that are now on the verge of bankruptcy as a result of loss of income. In Miami-Dade County, the airline and aviation industry is the County’s primary economic engine, representing more than nine percent of the County’s total workforce. Thousands of employees have already or will lose their jobs, and hundreds of business will go under nationwide if Congress does not act today.

To help remedy some of the future hardships sure to be faced by hundreds of thousands of people in the coming days, weeks, and months, I am proud to introduce the Displaced Workers Relief Act of 2001. My bill serves as the companion bill to S. 1454, which was introduced in the Senate by Senator JEAN CARNAHAN of Missouri. It provides those who have lost their jobs in the wake of the attacks of September 11 with the ability to pay rent, put food on their table, buy school books for their children, while trying to live their lives even in these difficult times.

My bill extends unemployment benefits from 26 to 78 weeks, provides 26 weeks of unemployment insurance benefits for workers who would not otherwise qualify, extends Job Training Benefits from 52 to 78 weeks, and provides up to 78 weeks of federally subsidized COBRA premiums; and provides optional temporary Medicaid coverage for up to eighteen months to those workers without COBRA coverage.

Under the Displaced Workers Relief Act of 2001, all airline and airport workers, including transit workers, as well as employees who work for airline suppliers, such as service employees and plane manufacturers, will all be eligible to receive these needed benefits.

In the past two weeks, more than 100,000 airline employees have been laid off, and airline analysts suggest that as many as 250,000 additional layoffs in airline-related industries may shortly follow. Everywhere I look in this country, industries and business are hurting. Hotels are reporting record lows in occupancy levels; travel agencies are losing customers by the dozen; the cruise industry has come to a virtual standstill; and service industries dependent upon airlines are closing their doors as we speak. As these businesses suffer, Mr. Speaker, so do their employees, many of whom are families.

Indeed, Mr. Speaker, last Friday evening, Congress missed a golden opportunity to assist American workers affected by this tragedy. Now, it is time for this body to recognize the responsibility it has to these hard working Americans and provide them with relief. The Displaced Workers Relief Act of 2001 is the vehicle which Congress can use to help these workers at a time that they need it most. For if we fail to act today, then we are neglecting the responsibility that we have to serve the very same people who put us here to represent them. It is essential that Congress act swiftly and pass this legislation immediately.

SENATE COMMITTEE MEETINGS

Title IV of Senate Resolution 4, agreed to by the Senate on February 4, 1977, calls for establishment of a system for a computerized schedule of all meetings and hearings of Senate committees, subcommittees, joint committees, and committees of conference. This title requires all such committees to notify the Office of the Senate Daily Digest—designated by the Rules committee—of the time, place, and purpose of the meetings, when scheduled, and any cancellations or changes in the meetings as they occur.

As an additional procedure along with the computerization of this information, the Office of the Senate Daily Digest will prepare this information for printing in the Extensions of Remarks section of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD on Monday and Wednesday of each week.

Meetings scheduled for Tuesday, September 25, 2001 may be found in the Daily Digest of today’s RECORD.

MEETINGS SCHEDULED

SEPTEMBER 26

9 a.m. Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry
To hold hearings to examine Administration’s perspective with regard to the new federal farm bill; immediately following, a hearing on the nominations of Elsa A. Murano, of Texas, to be Under Secretary for Food Safety, and Edward R. McPherson, of Texas, to be Chief Financial Officer, both of Department of Agriculture.

10 a.m. Banking, Housing, and Urban Affairs
To hold oversight hearings to examine the Administration’s national money laundering strategy for 2001.

12 noon Energy and Natural Resources
To hold closed hearings to examine critical energy infrastructure security and the energy industry’s response to the events of September 11, 2001.

Room to be announced

1:00 p.m. Health, Education, Labor, and Pensions
To hold hearings to examine psychological trauma and terrorism, focusing on 100 acts of harassment or violence against Sikhs. A Sikh man was murdered in Mesa, Arizona, over the weekend. Balbir Singh Sohi, who owned a Chevron gasoline station, was shot to death at his business. Some time later, the same gunman shot a Lebanese gasoline station owner. We demand that the man who killed Balbir Singh Sohi be prosecuted and punished, for the fullest extent of the law.

Attackers threw a brick through the window of a local Sikh, Ranjit Singh of Fairfax, Virginia. Another local Sikh, Sher Singh, was arrested by police in Rhode Island after the attack, but was released the next day. A couple of young Sikhs were attacked in Brooklyn, New York. Sikh businesses have been stoned and cars have been burned. An Egyptian Christian man was shot in San Gabriel, California. A Pakistani Muslim who owned a grocery store was shot in Dallas.

What a group of terrorists did Tuesday was a terrible crime and an act of war against America, but it was done by a group of individuals who are no more typical of their religion than Timothy McVeigh is typical of Christians.

If America descends to the level of those who are appropriately punished. Let’s not let local prosecutors. This is the best way to enforce the law.

Congressional Record are available here.

I call on Attorney General John Ashcroft to look into this nationwide pattern of violence and I urge the victims of these attacks to call their police departments and their local prosecutors. This is the best way to ensure that those who perpetrare this violence are appropriately punished. Let’s not let America descend to the level of those who attacked it.

The Sikhs are not Muslims. We are not Hindus. Like Hinduism, Christianity, Islam, and any other religion, we are an independent, monotheistic religion with our own symbols. Among them are a turban and beard. That does not make us followers or associates of Osama bin Laden, yet we are being targeted for violence in the wake of the atrocities last Tuesday.

We appreciate the support of Congressmen Dan Burton, Edolphus Towns, and all our other friends in the Congress who condemned the acts of violence against the Sikhs and other minorities. Their statements in the Congressional Record are available here.

I call on Attorney General John Ashcroft to look into this nationwide pattern of violence and I urge the victims of these attacks to call their police departments and their local prosecutors. This is the best way to ensure that those who perpetrate this violence are appropriately punished. Let’s not let America descend to the level of those who attacked it.

GEOGE TOLD ME THAT HE DID NOT WANT TO GET OUT OF BED THIS MORNING BECAUSE OF THE REALITY THAT HE WILL HAVE TO LAY OFF AT LEAST HALF OF HIS STAFF BY THE END OF THE WEEK AS A RESULT OF ZERO INCOME IN THE PAST TWO WEEKS. LAST WEEK’S PAYCHECK LEFT GEORGE AND HIS EMPLOYEES WITHOUT A PAYCHECK AND L & M $500 IN THE HOLE. WITH NO APPARENT INCOME COMING IN THIS WEEK, THE FUTURE OF L & M AIRPORT SERVICES AND ITS SEVEN EMPLOYEES ARE UNDOUBTEDLY IN JEOPARDY.

The Senate met at 9:30 a.m. and was called to order by the Honorable Paul Wellstone, a Senator from the State of Minnesota.

RECOGNITION OF THE ACTING MAJORITY LEADER
The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Nevada.

SCHEDULE
Mr. REID. Mr. President, the Senate going to resume consideration of the Department of Defense authorization bill. There will be 15 minutes of closing debate on the Bunning base closure amendment. The debate will be evenly divided between the proponents and the opponents of that matter. This debate will be followed by a vote on a motion to table the amendment.

There are going to be additional roll-call votes during the day. After this vote takes place, there will be a unanimous-consent request offered to again try to get a finite list of amendments. It is still the view of the majority leader that we can complete this legislation by tomorrow. It would be great if we could do it tonight, but certainly by tomorrow we should be able to do that.

In addition to this very important legislation, before we finish tomorrow at 2 o'clock, we really need to take up the continuing resolution. We have a lot to do today. The Senate will be in recess from 12:30 until 2:15 for our party conferences.

There are a lot of very important hearings going on today. The Attorney General is here at 10 o'clock. The Secretary of State is here later in the day. People are going to have to work with us so we can have votes on these important amendments that are coming up on this legislation, some of which have already been filed.

Inhofe amendment No. 1594, to authorize the President to waive a limitation on performance of depot-level maintenance by non-Federal Government personnel.

Inhofe amendment No. 1595, to revise requirements relating to closure of Vieques Naval Training Range.

AMENDMENT NO. 1622
The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Under the previous order, there will now be 15 minutes of debate remaining on the Bunning amendment number 1622.

The Senator from Michigan, Mr. LEVIN, Mr. President, I note that the Senator from Arizona is here. I assume, since we oppose the Bunning amendment, that he, along with the two managers, will be controlling the time.

I yield myself 1 minute at this point to put into the Record a letter that I, along with Senator WARNER, received from Gen. Shelton, who is the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. These are his words:

"reiterate how critically important it is that Congress authorize another round of base closures and realignments.

We previously put in the Record a letter from the Secretary of Defense, Donald Rumsfeld, strongly supporting one additional round of base-closing authority to begin in the year 2003 and giving the reasons for that need.

I ask unanimous consent to have printed in the Record the letter I received this morning from the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs, Gen. Shelton.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the Record, as follows:

CHAIRMAN OF THE JOINT CHIEFS OF STAFF,

Hon. CARL LEVIN,
Chairman, Senate Armed Services Committee,
U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: As the full Senate deliberates the FY 2002 Defense Authorization Bill I would like to reiterate how critically important it is that Congress authorize another round of base closures and realignments.

Last Thursday the President outlined a sustained campaign to combat international terrorism. The efficient and effective use of the resources devoted to this effort will be the responsibility of the Services and the Combatant Commanders. The authority to eliminate excess infrastructure will be an important tool our forces will need to become more efficient and serve as better custodians of the taxpayers' money. As I mentioned before, there is an estimated 23 percent under-utilization of our facilities. We cannot afford the cost associated with carrying this excess infrastructure. The Department of Defense must have the ability to restructure its installations to meet our current national security needs.

I know you share my concerns that additional base closures are necessary. The Department is committed to accomplishing the required reshaping and restructuring in a single round of base closures and realignments. I hope the Congress will support this effort.

Sincerely,
HENRY H. SHELTON,
Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Virginia.

Mr. WARNER. President, I would like to read from paragraphs of this letter from the Chairman.

Last Thursday the President outlined a sustained campaign to combat international terrorism. The efficient and effective use of the resources devoted to this effort will have the responsibility of the Services and the Combatant Commanders. The authority to eliminate excess infrastructure will be an important tool our forces will need to become more efficient and serve as better custodians of the taxpayers money. As I mentioned before, there is an estimated 23 percent under-utilization of our facilities. We cannot afford the cost associated with carrying this excess infrastructure. The Department of Defense must have the ability to restructure its installations to meet our current national security needs.

I know you share my concerns that additional base closures are necessary. The Department is committed to accomplishing the required reshaping and restructuring in a single round of base closures and realignments. I hope the Congress will support this effort.

Mr. President, both the Secretary of Defense and the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs are acting in accordance with the Commander in Chief, the President of the United States. This BRAC issue is clearly one that our President needs at this time given the extenuating circumstances facing the United States of America.

I yield sufficient time as he may need to our colleague from Arizona, Senator MCCAIN.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Arizona.

Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, how much time is remaining and how is it divided?

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. There are 5 minutes remaining to the opponents and 7½ minutes remaining to the other side.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the opponents of the Bunning amendment be given an extra 2 minutes.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I want to make sure Senator MCCAIN has adequate time. How much time would he like?

Mr. MCCAIN. I would like to request that Senator LEVIN have 2 additional minutes at the expiration of the 5 minutes I have. I ask unanimous consent for 2 additional minutes for Senator LEVIN and 2 additional minutes for the Senator from Kentucky, if he wishes.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there objection?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BUNNING. Mr. President, Senator DORGAN will be the first speaker.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from North Dakota.

Who yields time?

Mr. BUNNING. I yield 2½ minutes.

Mr. DORGAN. Mr. President, I do not doubt that when there is excess capacity with respect to military installations we ought to take action to deal with them. But I think it ought to be action that is targeted, thoughtful, and timely. In my judgment, there are two reasons why we ought to strike the language from this bill at this point: One is military and the other is economic.

First, we do not know what the force structure is going to be. We are undergoing a quadrennial review at this point and yet, before we talk about force structure, we already presumably know what the base structure should be.

With the issue of homeland security and all the other changes that will occur as a result of this country's determination to protect itself, we ought to, at this present point of what should be our base structure. And for that reason, I do not think this is the time to do this.

Second, on the economic circumstances, the potential of having a base-closing commission that says to every military installation in the country, by the way, we are going to look at you for potential closure, is, in my judgment, an opportunity to stunt the economic growth of virtually every community in every region in the country that has a military installation.

At a time when we have an extraordinarily soft economy, and one that is in significant trouble, can you imagine anyone making a decision to invest in any military installation community in this country if they know the prospect might exist that installation will be closed? The answer is, they will not make that investment. They will decide they cannot in good conscience do it.

We have been through this before. If we just say that every base is at risk with respect to a commission, it stunts the economic growth of every community in which a base exists.

I say to the Pentagon, I think it would make much more sense to narrow the focus of where they have excess capacity. When that is narrowed, then let's have a commission that evaluates that excess capacity and how to deal with it. But I really believe that both for military and economic purposes this amendment ought to be agreed to and this provision ought to be stricken.

I disagree with my friend from Arizona, I think he is an American hero. I am glad he has got a veto and he is a good friend of mine—but we disagree. I believe we ought to take a chunk out of this excess capacity at some point but not now, given the question of homeland security. I certainly do not believe now is the time, given what it will do to the economy, the economy of communities, regions, and our country, if we say every military installation is at risk of closure. That clearly will dry up investment that we need in this country to try and update the American economy.

For that reason, I intend to support the motion to strike.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has used his 2½ minutes.

Who yields time?

Mr. MCCAIN. Mr. President, I yield myself 5 minutes.

Mr. President, I would like to very briefly address some of the arguments that have been made. One is that the economy is too soft right now to consider further base closings and couldn't absorb the loss of jobs. The fact is that the provision gives the President the authority to consider a base closure in 2003, not 2001. If our economy is still bad in the year 2003, we will have other problems besides a base-closing commission.

Taxpayers for Common Sense and the Center for Defense Information prepared an independent report that they released in September 2001. Some of this data may surprise some of my colleagues who are citing economic concerns as to why they oppose further base-closing rounds.

This objective study studied 97 bases closed in four base-closing rounds. Eighty-eight percent of the bases closed experienced per capita personal income growth, as high as 36 percent, and averaging nearly 10 percent. Seventy-five percent of the bases closed had high unemployment rates. Sixty-eight percent beat the national average. The average job replacement rate of all these bases closed—all bases is 102 percent.

By the beginning of 2001, only 3 of the 97 bases had high unemployment rates than the BRAC announcement year; and 53 percent had unemployment rates lower than the national average.

I will be glad to share this information with my colleagues.

Everything has changed with regard to BRAC. The argument is, and as my friend from North Dakota has said, everything is changed now as of September 11. That may be the view of some, but it is not the view of the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and the Secretary of Defense. In fact, in their view, the opposite is the case—the opposite—that we need now to provide the Secretary of Defense with more flexibility because we may be called upon to do things very differently.

The argument is made that we do not know what the force structure will be absent the QDR—the Quadrennial Defense Review—so how can we vote on further base closure rounds? Maybe we ought to remember that this issue has been around since 1970.
In 1983, the Grace Commission made recommendations for base closures. In 1997, the QDR recommended that after four closure rounds we must shed excess military infrastructure. The National Defense Reform Initiative and National Defense Panel strongly urged Congress and the Department of Defense to move quickly the base realignment, and BRAC has been recommended—basic realignment—by Presidents Reagan, Bush I, Clinton, and now President George W. Bush.

Finally, Mr. President—and I think this is important—this is a time we should place trust in the judgment of the Commander in Chief and the Secretary of Defense and the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. If we adopt the Bunning amendment, we will be acting in direct contradiction to their views. I think it is important that there is not a single military expert in this country of any credibility who doesn’t believe that we need a base-closing round.

I ask my colleagues to consult anyone—Gen. Schwarzkopf—retired or active. Who believes we need another base closing round? I hope we will vote down the Bunning amendment.

I reserve the remainder of my time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time?

Mr. BUNNING. I yield Senator Ted STEVENS 1 minute.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Alaska is recognized for 1 minute.

Mr. STEVENS. Mr. President, I support the Bunning amendment to strike the base realignment and closure language from this year’s Defense Authorization bill. It is my view that this is the wrong time for our country and our military to move forward with BRAC legislation.

There are serious questions about the adequacy of the costs and savings estimates upon which the Department bases its claims for savings in the near term. My concern has been that over the past 12 years, we have spent over $22 billion to close and realign bases throughout the United States. These costs are substantial and must be figured into DOD’s future budgets. There is still considerable work to be done to clean up previously closed bases.

However, the Department of Defense has not put aside funds in the future year Defense plan to pay for BRAC. They have not budgeted for the upfront costs. A reasonable estimate that an additional BRAC round would cost $3 to $4 billion a year—starting as early as 2004.

In recent General Accounting Office reports, they state that “net savings from BRAC were not generated as quickly as initially estimated because the costs of closing bases and environmental cleanup were high and offset the savings.”

The up-front money must be found, and it will most likely come from the Department’s investment accounts. The diversion of billions of dollars to pay for another base closing round could have a serious impact on the transformation of the services for the 21st century.

There has been a lot of discussion about savings. We found that in the 1993 Department of Defense BRAC round, savings came from the elimination of civilian and military positions. This was consistent with the downsizing of our Armed Forces through the 1990s—not necessarily related to closing bases. Many of the military personnel were simply realigned to other bases.

Further, I know of no comprehensive assessment of the mission impact of the totality of the closure and realignment decisions made to date. Particularly with the considerable uncertainty about the future size of the force and its requirements, it would seem the more prudent approach would delay this legislation until we have a better picture of our future requirements.

I urge you to vote to support the Bunning amendment to strike the BRAC language.

Mr. President, there will be a lot of discussion about the elimination of these bases and the impact on the economy. This is not the time to do it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator’s time has expired.

Who yields time?

Mr. KYL. Mr. President, I rise in opposition to the amendment proposed by my good friends and colleagues, Senators Bunning and Lott, concerning eliminating the authorization for another Base Realignment and Closure review in 2003.

In February of 2001, the Business Executives for National Security, a non-profit organization focused on improving the Nation’s defense business policies reported that nearly 70 percent of the defense budget is spent on support functions including bases and infrastructure.

In the 1997 Department of Defense Report on Base Realignment and Closure, Secretary Cohen noted that our force structure has been brought down significantly, 33 percent, but our domestic infrastructure has decreased only 21 percent.

In June of this year, Secretary Rumsfeld stated that he needed “greater freedom to manage,” and he pointed out that a “reduction in excess military bases and facilities could generate savings of several billion dollars annually.”

This year, the Joint Chiefs testified before the Armed Services Committee, and each one—General Ryan, Admiral Clark, General Jones, General Shinseki—agreed to need for an additional round of base closures or realignments. In their comments they pointed out that savings from excess capacity are real and that the excess infrastructure burdens their ability to efficiently execute their national strategy.

On September 3, 2001, Admiral David Jeremiah, former Vice Chairman of the JCS, and General Richard Hearney, former Assistant Commandant of the USMC wrote in commentary that “Every billion not spent on unneeded bases is a billion that can be redirected toward building an even stronger military.”

To those of my friends and colleagues who say that we are in a different time than in 1997, or in February 2001 or even August, and that we must support our military at this time, I say I agree with you. We must support our soldiers, sailors, airmen and women and Marines. We must give them the financial tools and operational and administrative flexibility to effectively carry out our mission, especially at this time.

I draw my colleagues’ attention to September 21, 2001, as it is after the horrific events of September 11. On that date Secretary Rumsfeld communicated to the Congress, once again, his strong support for converting “excess capacity into warfighting ability.” My colleagues, a stronger more applicable comment could not have come at a more critical time.

The colleagues who may point out that in that letter Secretary Rumsfeld noted that “our future needs as to base structure are uncertain.” I point out that he goes on to emphasize that the DoD, “simply must have the freedom to maximize the efficient use of our resources.” By authorizing another round of realignments and closures we let our war fighters mold their infrastructure to fit their requirements. Let us not burden them for political reasons with infrastructure that should have been retired, with the P-51, the Enfield rifle and the Sherman tank.

I stand with the Secretary, the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and the Senate Armed Services Committee in opposition to this amendment.

Mrs. BOXER. Mr. President, I support the amendment of the Senator from Kentucky to strike language from the fiscal year 2002 Defense authorization bill that would authorize a new base closure and realignment round in 2003.

I feel very strongly that the time is not right for another painful round of military base closures, and my opposition is only strengthened in the aftermath of the tragedy that occurred on September 11. As a result of the terrorist attacks at the World Trade Center and at the Pentagon, I believe we must reevaluate our military force structure needs—both at home and abroad—in a new and very different light.

In fact, I was extremely skeptical about the need for additional base closures even before the terrorist attacks.
On August 14, Congressman GEORGE MILLER and I sent letters to the chairmen and ranking members of the House and Senate Armed Services Committees outlining our reasons for opposing a new base closure round. I ask unanimous consent that those letters be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the letters were ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

Hon. CARL LEVIN,
Ranking Member, Committee on Armed Services,
U.S. Senate.

Hon. JOHN W. WARNER,
Ranking Member, Committee on Armed Services,
U.S. Senate.

DEAR CHAIRMAN LEVIN AND SENATOR WARNER: We write to express our deep concern about the round of military base closures proposed by the Pentagon for 2003, and the enabling legislation that the Armed Services Committee will be considering. Since the late 1980s, in a series of Congressionally mandated base closures, 97 major military facilities have been closed or “realigned”—29 of them in California.

These closures have been extremely painful for the communities involved, and it has proven extremely difficult to convert these bases to other, economically viable uses. As you know, the primary obstacles to converting closed bases are the enormous costs and huge technical challenges associated with cleaning them up. In our state of California, while some sites have made great progress, none of the 29 bases closed since 1988 have been fully cleaned up or converted to non-military uses. And until a base is cleaned up (or at least a fully funded clean up plan is in place), it is virtually impossible for a community to attract the vendors, developers and others who can help make a base’s conversion an economic and social success.

We believe it would be unfair and inefficient to close even one more base while the Pentagon continues to raise financial and bureaucratic hurdles to communities that are doing everything in their power to adjust to new civilian economic realities. The Pentagon must work in good faith with communities in California and across the country to expedite and complete the clean up and conversion efforts now underway.

Instead of devoting time, money and energy to developing a new base closure round, we ask that you work with us and our communities to finish the job we started so long ago.

Sincerely,

BARBARA BOXER, U.S. Senator.
GEORGE MILLER, Member of Congress.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, we have heard basically three arguments. One is that this is the wrong time to do this, following the events of September 11. It seems to me, the compelling answers are set forth in the letters from Secretary Rumsfeld and GEN Shelton on that issue.

Secretary Rumsfeld: “the imperative to convert excess capacity into warfighting ability is enhanced, not diminished,” because of those events because we need to maximize our resources—in his words—“to the effective use of resources.” And the authority to realign and close bases and facilities will be a critical element to ensure the right mix of bases and forces within our warfighting strategy.

We are asking our troops to take risks. It seems to me, at a minimum, we ought to be willing now to set aside our own back-home concerns and do what is essential in order to have the efficient use of resources. We cannot afford infrastructure which is excess at any time but surely when we are asking our troops to go into combat. There is no justification for us to continue to say we are going to preserve excess infrastructure. This begins in 2003. I emphasize this because some of our colleagues have said, if you don’t know the force structure, how can you know the base structure? We don’t know what our force structure is going to be. That is why in the bill itself we require that before 2003, before this base structure plan is put into place—and here the words of the bill are being quoted:

The Secretary shall carry out a comprehensive review of the military installations of the Department of Defense . . . based on the force-structure plan submitted under subsection (a). . . .

There must be a force structure plan submitted under this law prior to the base restructuring proposal.

Finally, in terms of savings, we heard that at times you cannot prove the savings. We have shown, it seems to me, through GAO report after GAO report, that—and now I am going to quote from one of the more recent ones:

Our work has consistently affirmed that the net savings for four rounds of base closure and realignment are substantial.

That is the GAO talking. And we have had a report from the Department of Defense, a very specific report, showing the savings in a chart which lays them out line by line. I ask unanimous consent that the Department of Defense chart showing specifically where the $6 billion annual recurring savings comes from be printed in the RECORD.

That is a significant amount of money. We cannot afford to waste this money. We cannot afford to ask our forces to go into combat if we ourselves will not do what is necessary to give them the resources.

This is excess baggage. They should not be going into combat with the belief that we are not willing to strip the excess, at least starting in the year 2003, at least starting after there is a new force structure that has been decided upon, if they are going to be taking the risks we are going to be asking them to take.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE 17823
Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, I know we are about to vote. I yield myself some leader time.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Republican leader is recognized.

Mr. LOTT. Mr. President, it is no secret that I have always opposed the BRAC process. I think it is an abdication of the responsibility of the Congress. For years and years, the Pentagon made recommendations for Congress, and Congress considered them, acted on many of them, and bases were closed.

Second, we know for certain that the BRAC process severely disrupts the local economies of communities in States across the Nation. We also know there is still a question about the BRAC savings from the past base closures. For instance, I know that in the military construction appropriations bill that will be coming up, perhaps later today or tomorrow, there is $150 million for cleanup as a result of previous base closures, most of it going, I guess, to California, some to Texas, and some I think maybe to New York. We are still in the process of trying to expend money so that the process can be completed.

Also, I think the timing is bad. We are arguing about exactly what we should do now, but I saw an Air Force general talking the other day about how our fighters had been looking outward up until 2 weeks ago; now they have to look inward. The world did change. I think that at a time of our Reserves being called up, the National Guard being called up, communities being told to support the military, we are going to be together, we have been attacked, and we are going to respond appropriately, but we are going to say: By the way, we are going to look at closing your base.

I don't think the timing is good. While I have never supported BRAC, it is not to say I won't someday. I realize we have excess capacity and duplicative operations. I think we may not have sufficient capacity now, perhaps the wrong way to go. Where we have excess capacity, identify it and say we are going to look here. Where we know we may not have sufficient capacity now, why have a question about that particular base?

I continue to wonder why we have not done more about overseas bases. We gave the Pentagon authority a few years ago to move in that area. Have they done it? No. Have they consolidated missions and looked at closing bases? No. Do we need bases in Europe? Yes. We need to have air and naval bases where we can project power from Europe. We have 523 activities in Europe, 116,000 troops. We have spent well over a half-billion dollars since 1997 on MILCON in Europe. So should we not take a look at that before, or at least at the same time that we are looking at bases in our own country?

Mr. President, I support the Bunning amendment. I think this is a classic case of getting the cart in front of the horse. I am committed and prepared to work with Senator WARNER and Senator LEVIN and the Defense Department to see if there can be a way to do this. I don't think the way this is set up in the bill is appropriate. I think the timing could not be any worse.

I urge a vote for the Bunning amendment.

I yield the floor.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Kentucky controls just under 6 minutes.
Mr. BUNNING. Mr. President, I want to make sure I get to close. Do we have any other speakers?

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The time of the opponents has expired. The Senator would have the last word.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I hope the Chair will recognize me for the purpose of a tabling motion at the conclusion of my colleague’s presentation.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Kentucky is recognized.

Mr. BUNNING. Mr. President, we are embarking on a new war like nobody has ever seen before. We are not experts in knowing what the landscape of the 21st century warfare will look like. None of us knows for certain that we need to downsize our military infrastructure under these extraordinary circumstances.

I have heard it said here today, and before, that DOD has a certain amount of savings. I show you two reports. One is from the GAO on military base closings. In the report, it says: The estimates are imprecise and should be reviewed as rough approximations and not likely savings. These prospects apply as well to the Department’s updated net savings estimates.

So even the GAO and the CBO say the savings are not really savings because they didn’t consider everything. They can’t even back up their own numbers. If you agree with DOD on savings—and they also say the cost upfront actually is more, which was brought out by Senator STEVENS, BRAC has been a political football. Anybody who has been involved in it knows it has been a political football. First it was the commission; then it was the administration. So it cannot be done objectively.

I know our good chairman and the ranking member have tried to do that in this AC round. But I am not sure it won’t become a political football again. So that is BRAC as usual, and I am not for BRAC as usual.

The new home security cabinet, as Senator LOTT has said, may decide they need things to make our homeland secure. I think it is very good that we keep in mind that when Governor Ridge is confirmed, he may decide how important certain bases are. Our economy and BRAC don’t go hand in hand. If we slow it down, it may fall off the edge. I know that is not as necessary a reason, but it is a reason for not doing BRAC at this time.

The DOD’s Quadrennial Defense Review is not even completed. It is premature to lavish when we don’t even know what the quadrennial report proposes regarding our infrastructure.

Please vote no on the tabling motion that is coming.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Does the Senator from Kentucky yield back his remaining time?

Mr. BUNNING. Yes.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. The Senator from Virginia is recognized.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I move to table the Bunning amendment and ask for the yeas and nays.

The ACTING PRESIDENT pro tempore. Is there a sufficient second?

There is a sufficient second.

The question is on agreeing to the motion. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk called the roll.

The result was announced—yeas 53, nays 47, as follows:

Mr. BUNNING. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, we have talked about the amendment that is under consideration, No. 1594. We have agreed to change it. I send to the desk the amendment, No. 1594, as modified.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, we have talked about the amendment that is under consideration, No. 1594. We have agreed to change it. I send to the desk the amendment, No. 1594, as modified.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Is there objection to the modification?

Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment (No. 1594), as modified, is as follows:

At the end of subtitle D of title III, add the following:

SEC. 325. REVISION OF AUTHORITY TO WAIVE LIMITATION ON PERFORMANCE OF DEPOT-LEVEL MAINTENANCE.

(a) Section 2312(a)(3) of title 10, United States Code, is amended to read as follows:

"(3) The Secretary of Defense may waive the limitation in subsection (a) for a fiscal year if—"

"(A) the Secretary of Defense determines that—"

"(i) the waiver is necessary for reasons of national security; and"

"(B) the Secretary of Defense submits to Congress a notification of the waiver together with—"

"(i) the reasons for the waiver; and"

"(ii) the Secretary of Defense may not delegate the authority to exercise the waiver authority under paragraph (1)."

(b) The Secretary of Defense shall provide a report to Congress not later than January 31, 2002 that outlines the Secretary’s strategy regarding the operations of the public depots.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, may we have a minute?

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The senior assistant bill clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, the chairman has advised me that the Inhofe amendment is acceptable to the other side.

Would you restate the number of that?

Mr. INHOFE. Yes.

Mr. LEVIN. I ask unanimous consent to vitiate the yeas and nays on the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Mr. REED). Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, the amendment (No. 1594) as modified.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The amendment (No. 1594) as modified.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, we have reached agreement on the amendment.
Having to do with depot maintenance. We have made two modest changes from that which was introduced. One is, instead of sending it to the President in lieu of the service chiefs, it now goes to the Secretary of Defense. No. 2, it says we need to have the report from the Secretary of Defense as to the future use of depots. That is essentially it. It is agreed to, and I ask it be accepted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator has the right to modify the amendment.

The question is on agreeing to the amendment, as modified.

Mr. WARNER. I urge adoption of the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendment, as modified, is agreed to.

The amendment (No. 1594), as modified, is agreed to.

Mr. LEVIN. I move to reconsider the vote.

Mr. WARNER. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Virginia.

AMENDMENT NO. 1674

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that I be allowed to send an amendment to the desk and ask for its immediate consideration.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The clerk will report.

The senior assistant bill clerk read as follows:

The Senator from Virginia (Mr. WARNER) proposes an amendment numbered 1674.

The amendment is as follows:

Strike section 821 of the bill.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, this is an unusual step, but as a manager of the bill I have the responsibility to keep this bill moving. We have exercised good-faith efforts on both sides to reconcile an issue which is deserving of the attention of the Senate. The amendment of the Senator from Virginia would strike from the bill that language referred to generically as the prison issue of materials made by prisoners and sold to the Department of Defense.

I support the bill, and I am going to vote against my own amendment, but in order for the Senate to move expeditiously, to continue to have this bill go forward, because at the moment we cannot hope to achieve finalization of this bill—the desire of both the majority leader and the Republican leader—by tomorrow unless we get finalization on the list of amendments.

I do not, in any way, disparage my distinguished colleague who is exercising, perfectly within his rights, certain procedures. But I think this will enable the Senate to address this issue now and to come to some resolution on it so that we can move on with this bill.

Several Senators addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Wyoming.

Mr. THOMAS. I move to table the amendment.

Mr. GRAMM. I suggest the absence of quorum.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, we need to have some debate, I think. Mr. THOMAS. Mr. President, I would like to have some debate, so I will, at the appropriate time, move to table the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The motion is withdrawn.

Mr. WARNER. I thank my colleague. I think it is important that debate take place on this amendment, and at the appropriate time the Senator may seek recognition on that purpose.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas.

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, let me first say I want to make it clear that—reserving all of my rights under the rules of the Senate to offer substitutes or amendments—I am hopeful that in the midst of a national crisis we can find a way to gather new information and commit to make a decision on this divisive issue next year.

We have voted on this issue probably four or five times in the last decade. To this point, in each and every case we have preserved prison labor in America. Our new chairman of the Armed Services Committee, who has consistently sought provisions in the bill that would effectively end the current program, is now chairman of the committee and has the provision eliminating the program for all practical purposes—I will explain that—has put that in the bill itself which has produced the situation in which we find ourselves.

Now let me try to talk about this problem. I want to begin by talking about the history of prison labor in America. I want then to talk about the point at which we came to a fork in the road, and took the wrong fork, in my opinion, and that occurred during the Great Depression.

I want to talk about the Levin amendment, as to why it violates every principle in the bill. Then I want to outline the prison labor system and why it is so critically important to our system of criminal justice, and why the program, at least in our last study, which was in 1998, was given very high marks. At that point, I will have made my case.

We do have some Members of the Senate who are voting on this issue for the first time, and I believe it is important that a full presentation be made.

Let me begin with de Tocqueville. We all remember that de Tocqueville came to America in the 1830s, was a comprehensive program where, for all practical purposes, every prisoner in America worked.

We had a system where prisoners engaged in manufacturing; prisoners engaged in agriculture, and substantial amounts of the cost of incarceration were paid for by prison labor, lifting the burden on the taxpayers of the 1830s in America to fund our prison system; but most important, in de Tocqueville’s opinion, was the humane treatment of labor in prison, de Tocqueville went to great lengths to talk about the prison system and to talk about how humane it was that people in prison in America, unlike Europe, worked.

Let me read you a quote from de Tocqueville:

It would be inaccurate to say that in the Philadelphia Penitentiary labor is imposed. We do say, with more justice, that the favor of labor is granted. When we visited this penitentiary, we successively conversed with all its inmates. There was not one single one among them who did not speak of labor with a kind of gratitude and who did not express the idea that without the relief of constant occupation, life would be insufferable.

In 19th century America when someone went to prison, they went to work, and they worked 12, 14 hours a day, 6 days a week, and in working several good things happened. One, they weren’t idle. And as we all know from Poor Richard’s Almanac, “idle hands are the devil’s workshop.” Secondly, they produced food, they produced products that could be sold, and they dramatically reduced the cost of incarceration in 19th century America.

From 1900, where virtually every prisoner in America worked—and I would have to say there is some justice to requiring people in prison to work and to share the burden of their incarceration with working people who today pay $30,000 per Federal inmate to put people in prison and keep them there. It is cheaper to send somebody to Harvard University than it is to send somebody to the Federal penitentiary.

Now, by the turn of the century, we had an effective prison system all over America. In Texas, I am proud to say, we had a model program where every prisoner worked, and they worked hard. They grew their own food, they made their own clothes, and they produced products that were sold in the

All his bill has is the absence of competition. The only place it calls for "competition" is in the prison labor industry. This, in reality, is not a competitive bidding provision because the potential interest provision supported by organized labor and supported by private manufacturers. Senator LEVIN and proponents of this provision will say: What could be wrong? Business and labor are together on this issue and if the two great special interests of America are for it, surely it must be America's interest. I beg to disagree. The special interests always want benefits that are not in America's interest. And I remind my colleagues that by idling these prisons who are beginning to pay victims restitution, who are beginning to pay funds that displace taxpayers' money, what we are going to do is to choose a heavier and heavier burden on the American taxpayer. We are going to destroy the only system we have that effectively trains prisoners so when they get out, they can go out and get a job and hopefully find a job—and America will be a loser.

Part of the problem here is that all the political interests are on the side of the amendment that is now in this bill. I am proud to say that in the last decade, we've decreased four or five times, and each time we have saved prison labor in America. I don't know where the votes are here, and I would have to say that I am profoundly disappointed that in a year where we are facing an imminent crisis, that instead of focusing on defense, we have a special interest provision in this bill that is aimed at killing prison labor.

I want my colleagues to know that I have proposed an independent study through the General Accounting Office where the report would be made in May and where we could have a comprehensive debate and, hopefully, have a compromise that would allow us to solve this problem once and for all. Senator LEVIN and I have fought over this issue for a decade.

Let me go back and complete the story. Where we are is that we have a provision in the bill that basically claims that the Defense Department is a loser from the prison labor system. I want my colleagues to understand the Defense Department did not ask for the Levin amendment. You might ask: How come they didn't send a letter down here saying they opposed it? If you were the Secretary of Defense and the chairman of the Armed Services Committee in the Senate had a provision related to prison labor, would you write a letter saying you are against it? No, you would not.

I want my colleagues to understand the Secretary of Defense did not ask for this provision, and the Attorney General and the Justice Department are adamantly opposed to the provision in Senator LEVIN's amendment.

Senator LEVIN apparently is going to make the argument, which he has made for the last decade, that the prison labor system is unfair to the Defense Department. I simply make two comments: One, how come every other noncompetitive purchasing provision in the pending bill is unfair to the Defense Department? Why only prison labor? What is this about?

I can tell you what it is about. It is about greedy special interest. That is what it is about.

Let me tell you what the facts are, and they are old facts. One of the reasons we ought to do a study is to update the facts so we know exactly what we are talking about. There was an audit report mandated by the Congress that was submitted to Congress on August 5, 1998, 3 years ago. It was submitted by the Office of Inspector General of the Department of Defense. This is basically what it concluded. It was a comprehensive study. I have the study here if anybody would like to look at it.

Basically, what the study concluded was that when they looked at a random sampling of procurement by the Defense Department from the Federal Prison Industries Program, in 78 percent of the products they looked at, the price the Defense Department got from the Federal Prison Industries was lower than the competitive market price. In 20 percent of the cases, it was higher. In 2 percent of the cases, it was the same.

Also, when they looked at waivers—that is where the Defense Department concluded that the property that was being procured was not being sold at a competitive price or at competitive quality or on a timely basis—in over 80 percent of the cases where the Defense Department sought a waiver because they believed it was not a good deal, that waiver was granted.

When you look at the overall aggregate situation that existed in 1998 when we last studied the Federal Prison Industries, in 78 percent of the cases, the Prison Industries sold the product at less than the competitive price in the private sector; 20 percent of the time, they were on quality or on a timely basis; in 2 percent of the time, for all practical purposes, it was the same.

The quality of the product was found to be excellent. There were problems in terms of deliverability and, in fact, in 1998, a series of reforms were implemented to try to deal with the deliverability problem.

Senator LEVIN will say that all his amendment does is require competition. My answer is, let's require competition in everything the Defense Department buys from anybody. If the Secretary of Defense will not change his position, let's simply give the Secretary of Defense the ability to buy competitively so that the Secretary can have competitive bidding and buy the highest quality product at the lowest price across the board. I will support that amendment. But that is not going to happen because this bill is not a competition bill. This bill is full of restrictions on competition everywhere except prison labor.

Another provision I would support and would rejoice to the heavens, labor would be to eliminate the Federal Prison Industries Program at the Department of Defense and in the rest of the Government and let’s allow the Federal Prison Industries to compete with anybody else in Government procurement with no special arrangement, but then, subject to simple restrictions, let’s let them sell in the private sector.

What would those restrictions be? A, you cannot sell in the area where the prison is located because you do not want to glut the market; B, you cannot sell products that are in excessive supply where the price is falling precipitously; and C, let’s focus production where prisoners are producing things we are importing—component parts, for example.

Unless I am sadly misinformed by the last 10 years of the debate, I do not expect the proponents of the provision in the bill to say they want competition. In fact, not only do they not want prisoners to work and produce things to sell in the private sector, they do not want prisoners to work to produce things in the public sector. That is our dilemma.

We have before us a provision in the bill which was not sought by the Defense Department, which is adamantly opposed by the Attorney General and the Department of Justice, a provision that the Federal Prison Industries Program believes will be extraordinarily detrimental to their program. It is a provision which is now a part of the entire bill. If there were a provision in the bill that said the Secretary of Defense, in promoting the public interest, shall be driven by the same motivation which motivates every consumer and every American, to buy the best quality product at the lowest possible price and they shall be in no other way constrained, I would support that amendment, and I would think it was enlightened policy.

I want my colleagues to remember when they hear this impassioned argument about competition, there is no competition in this bill save for prison industry. If the bill had a general competition provision, I would be for it because the benefits to America of having competitive procurement in defense would greatly outweigh the problems it would produce in the American prison industries, but there is no competition in this bill, save an effort to kill the prison industries in America.

Part of this debate, and it has been one for the whole decade—I do not know why it is that I always end up on these issues where there is no constituency—the taxpayers, by and large, hardly know this issue is even being debated today. In fact, they would be stunned. If somebody turned on the television, they would say: What in the world is that guy doing standing up talking about prison labor when the Nation is hearing the drumbeat and the bugle to march off to war? I wonder why we are doing that, too. I did not bring this up.

The point is, the American public does not understand we have an effort underway to kill what is left of prison labor. So we have 1.2 million young men idle—idle hands are the devil’s play—six days a week, bringing down the cost of incarceration and building up the skill level, until they are not working, they ought to be going to school, building up the skill level, so when they get out of prison, they know how to do something.

What we really ought to be debating today and every day is turning our prisons into industrial parks. We ought to have American manufacturers in joint ventures with our prison systems producing the component parts in prison that we are buying from other parts of the world. We ought to have every prisoner working 10, 12 hours a day, 6 days a week, bringing down the cost of prison versus people who are not priviledged to work in prison and their recidivism rate or, in English, if people work in prison, they are far less likely to come back to prison when they leave. Why? For one thing, because they accumulate skills in prison.

What we ought to be demanding is to have prisoners to work to produce things in the public sector. That is our dilemma.

The second thing I ask people to not kill the remaining vestige of prison labor in America. I know my colleagues are hearing from furniture manufacturers, from some electronics manufacturers, saying: We do not want competition with prison labor. We want to force prison labor into a—we want to eliminate the special status they have.

I say, and have said to manufacturers in my State: Look, if you will let prison labor compete in selling in the private sector, in a no glutting of the market system, then I will support taking away their special relationship with government. I would support that. But they do not want to do that. They do not want to compete with prison labor anywhere.

The problem is, if you do not let prisoners work, you have 1.2 million young men idle—idle hands are the devil’s workshop—and you eliminate the building programs of victims’ restitution and self-funding of prisons. In fact, since the 1930s we have largely destroyed the greatest prison system in history by destroying prison labor. Finally, let me ask my colleagues to look very closely at the recidivism rate. Look what is happening with people who are working in prison and what is happening when they leave prison versus people who are not priviledged to work in prison and their recidivism rate. What you are going to find is the probability of people coming back to prison when they are released falls dramatically if they have worked in prison; it goes up dramatically if they have not worked in prison.

So I understand we do not have any prisoner PACs. We do not have any organized lobby from people in prison. I am not sympathetic to people in prison. I think they ought to have to work. I am sympathetic to working people who are going to have to work harder to pay this $30,000 a year to keep the American government in business. We think that everybody who is in prison, special interests want to kill off the prison labor system because some desk that the Defense Department is buying or some component part of some item the Defense Department is buying is being produced by prison labor.

So I hope to be able to offer a report on the problem that was uncovered in 1998, which was deliverability.

With that report, I then commit to seeking a compromise within our Government, or voting one way or the other, as we should have a report on the problem that was discovered in 1998, which was deliverability.

I hope my colleagues will vote to strike this provision today, knowing we will have an opportunity next year, hopefully under very different circumstances than today, to deal with this problem.

The second thing I ask people is to not kill the remaining vestige of prison labor in America. I know my colleagues are hearing from furniture manufacturers, from some electronics manufacturers, saying: We do not want competition with prison labor. We want to force prison labor into a—we want to eliminate the special status they have.

I am sympathetic to working people who are going to have to work harder to pay this $30,000 a year to keep the American government in business. We think that everybody who is in prison, special interests want to kill off the prison labor system because some desk that the Defense Department is buying or some component part of some item the Defense Department is buying is being produced by prison labor.
Defense Department and have the Secretary constrained in no way, save by the best product, the lowest price, put me down as a cosponsor, but there is no such provision in this bill. In fact, there are pages in this bill that prohibit competition. If I am a paving contractor and they are paving a road at the Pentagon or a parking lot at the Pentagon, I cannot even bid on pouring of the concrete unless I pay the highest wages in the region. What kind of competition is that?

So when you hear this chest thumping about all we want is competition—that is all they want—where is it? Where is it except for Prison Industries?

Secondly, if people think Prison Industries should not have a special agreement with the Government to buy products it produces, let Prison Industries produce and sell in the private sector, the same as the special interest college. But there is no proposal for competition. There is no proposal for allowing Prison Industries to sell in the private sector.

Cloaked in the righteousness of competition—and what special interest in American history has ever cloaked itself in anything other than the public interest?—cloaked in the public interest is this demand by unions and by manufacturers to kill the prison labor system in America. Reform it, yes. Study it and find better ways of doing it, yes. Bring competition to defense procurement in general, yes. Let anybody bid on a prison contract based on pricing and quality, yes. But kill prison labor in America, no. That is what the issue is.

I urge my colleagues to vote for this amendment and let us settle this issue. But this issue will not be settled if this amendment is rejected because there are other amendments and other ways of doing it. I think it is very important. We are talking about the lives of real people. We are talking about the burden on taxpayers. They are not represented. I assume no taxpayers know what is going on here. Nobody has heard from one. I don’t take calls from prisoners myself, so they are not busy lobbying. But the AFL-CIO and furniture manufacturers, in particular, are very active on this issue.

One will say: All they want is competition. What about competition in selling to the private sector? They do not want that. This is a special interest provision aimed at killing or dramatically reducing the Federal Prison Industries. I think that is a mistake. It is wrong. I am opposed to it.

This is not ought to be taking place, but on another day, on another bill, not on our defense authorization bill.

I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Wyoming.

Mr. THOMAS. I rise in support of tabling this amendment. I have listened to my esteemed friend from Texas. I am not going back to Plato. I will start closer to the current situation. I am surprised, when we talk about giving the private sector appropriate ability to compete for contracts put out by the Defense Department, that that is special interest. That is difficult for me to understand.

This is defense authorization. It is absurd that we are in the appropriate place to talk about how we do that, how we pay for it, and who does the work. It is also important we get moving with this program.

This is not an amendment that came in; this language is in the committee bill.

I have worked for several years, as many have, on a fair amendment designed to give the private sector an opportunity to bid on Government businesses. We have been successful. We have had meetings on what they are doing instead of doing it internally, instead of putting it out for contract. It seems reasonable. This is competition. The prisons will continue to have the opportunity to compete under a very unfair—for them, favorable—situation. They don’t have to pay taxes; they don’t have to pay minimum wage; they don’t have to do any of the things they do in the private sector.

This has been in place since 1994. Talk about a study. The study was not even made by the congressional group. The study did not come up with the real facts. It is time to do something. It is time to deal with this idea that the private sector ought to be able to participate, to compete. That is the bottom line.

As to the notion that this does away with Federal Industries, only 18 percent of the Federal prisoners are involved. The other 82 percent are doing food service, plumbing, carpentry, other kinds of work. The fact is, this does away with the industry. As a matter of fact, as a good example, New Mexico, a State that had a mandatory source situation such as this, lifted it. The New Mexico Prison Industries operated under that until the State legislature reformed it. They are very happy with the result of that transformation which does, indeed, provide for competition, which is exactly what we want.

The Senator from Texas, a proponent of the private sector for the most part, is calling the private sector private interest. That is peculiar. We have a Government monopoly and we are saying this is an opportunity for people to compete. This does not eliminate the Government prison production. It makes it competitive.

As I mentioned, there are a number of opportunities for them. The competitive advantages are retained: Inmate wages, from $23 to $11.15, compared to the private sector; factory space furnished by the host prison, with no cost to the actual production; equipment, utilities, taxes, insurance, workplace benefits—none of those things offered. Yet they will be able to compete. That is what it is, competition.

We have had meetings about the private sector and trying to strengthen the economy. Yet we seem to be reluctant to allow the private sector to help the economy by moving into this area. It is very timely and appropriate to do it on this bill. The idea of setting it off I don’t think makes much sense.

There are many other products beyond these—less time. We have had, for 45 years, a policy in this Government that we ought to go to the private sector to provide for governmental needs. That has been the policy. Yet we still have a monopoly to do it. We say the private sector is good for the economy. Jobs prisoners can do. I, too, support the idea that there ought to be work for prisoners. But there are lots of jobs that can be done in the prison realm that would be outside of the competitiveness as to who can do the supplies and the necessary equipment for the defense.

This idea is also supported as a special interest by the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, by the small business NFIB, by labor unions, which also favor all these opportunities for the private sector to supply the needs of Government. It is not a new idea. It makes sense.

Also, we will find it is difficult for the Defense Department to have various contracts. They are not the ones that supervise the contract. They lose some control when it goes to this private sector. We have a mandatory source for the needs that are required in defense.

I don’t know that we need to go into a great deal of detail. The facts are that prison workers still continue. Most support the idea that we ought to have competition for these expenditures. Most support the idea the private sector ought to have an opportunity to compete with Government in any circumstance where the private sector can do that. That is what strengthens it.

We are in a time that anything we can do to increase the activity of the private sector is good for the economy. We are fighting on two fronts: terrorism on one side and strengthening the economy on the other. These are the things we need to do.

The policy for doing this is 46 years old. We have strengthened that in the last several years to get more emphasis on the idea that there needs to be competition, there needs to be private sector involvement. In my view, the more the private sector can do in terms of the Government realm, the better off we are. What the Government ought to do is strengthen their ability to let contracts and review the contracts and make sure it is done that way.

This idea has been in place since 1934. I think it has not been improved. This is not going to change it.
Only 18 percent are involved out of 22,000.

So we are going to find ourselves with an opportunity that they can find ways to do it. We will have a way to put the private sector in, have more efficiency, less cost, and if they cannot compete, then the prisons will continue.

I am not going to take an awful lot of time. It seems to me the issues here are fairly basic. Let me just review them again. This was not an amendment. This was part of the bill of the committee. This is a time when we ought to be looking for more opportunities for the private sector. This is a time when we ought to have competition. I think we have an opportunity to do that here and yet continue to have a program which works for the prisoners.

Mr. President, I yield the floor.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kansas.

Mr. BROWNBACK. Mr. President, if I may speak for a couple of brief moments about the Gramm amendment?

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, the Senator's remarks are welcome even though they might be contrary to the views of the Senator from Virginia. But I arranged this debate. It is quite unusual to put on a fellow Senator's amendment, but it was necessary to keep this bill moving. We welcome the debate. I shall be voting against it eventually. My distinguished colleague from Wyoming will be seeking recognition for purposes of a tabling motion in due course.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Kansas.

Mr. BROWNBACK. Mr. President, I will not keep the body long. I do rise in support of the amendment of Senator Gramm of Texas regarding Prison Industries. This has come after some considerable discussion and visiting the prison in Kansas at Leavenworth, the Federal Penitentiary of Leavenworth. I note: visiting, not occupying. This is a maximum security facility. Men are in this facility for years, frequently for life, and at these Prison Industries at this facility.

I visited with the warden about 2 months ago—a month and a half ago, actually—about this particular issue, and also with the head of Corrections for the Federal Government. Both insisted that if we do not allow Prison Industries to effectively be able to compete—there are questions about that in the language, but if we do not allow Prison Industries to effectively compete, they are going to have difficulty in the penitentiary keeping these gentlemen occupied, working with them, and being able to effectively run that prison. Otherwise, these men are going to be sitting around, and idle hands present a great deal of difficulty.

I have worked with the Senator from Wyoming on privatization efforts with-in the Federal Government. I think he is absolutely on the mark on these issues. From a personal perspective and the perspective of Kansas, having a penitentiary facility that is long-term inmates, people who are going to be incarcerated frequently for life, or at least 10 to 20 years, prisoners need something that is going to keep them occupied and working or else we are going to have a great deal of difficulty with them.

Prison Authorities do not know what they are going to do with these inmates otherwise, and they pleaded with me, saying: Don't allow this to go forward. This is going to be very difficult for us in the system.

I bring that word to my colleagues from a State with a major Federal penitentiary facility housing long-term inmates. They don't know how they are going to be able to handle it. Some say it will work; some say it won't work and they do the work all right, but reading this, within the system, it will cut back their ability to effectively have jobs for these inmates, and they need jobs for these inmates. It helps with restitution pay, helps them build self-worth; more than anything, it helps manage this population that is very violent, very difficult, and if you do not give them anything to do, the idle hands are the devil's playground. This has a great deal of difficulty.

I appreciate my colleagues allowing me to put those sentences forward, and I will be supporting the Gramm amendment.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Michigan.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I oppose the amendment that strikes section 821 of our bill. Section 821 is a good government provision. It simply says the private sector should be allowed to compete when it comes to selling items to the Department of Defense. But even with that advantage, the private sector can produce things more cheaply and at better quality at times. At those times, how in Heaven's name can we tell a Government agency that they must buy from a prison if they can buy more cheaply from the private sector? How in the name of Heaven can we tell someone in a private business, or an employee in a private business, that he cannot bid on something that his Government is buying? That is all this language does. It doesn't end the Prison Industries program, or come close.

There are all kinds of things prisoners can and should be doing, by the way, including focusing on things the Government buys that it currently imprisons. There are all kinds of opportunities.

We talk to Federal Prison Industries about this year after year. They always say they are going to do something about it, and they have not.

The Senator from Texas says let's do a study. We just had a study, in 1999, April. This is what the joint study of the Department of Defense and the Federal Prison Industries did. This is the result of that study:

On price, 54 percent of Department of Defense electronics buyers, 70 percent of Department of Defense clothing and textile buyers, 46 percent of Department of Defense furniture buyers, 53 percent of Department of Defense office case goods buyers, and 57 percent of Department of Defense furniture buyers rated the Federal Prison Industries prices as average, fair, or poor. There is a lot of room in there to save money for the Department of Defense.

On delivery, the figures are approximately the same: Roughly 50, 60 percent say: average, fair, or poor. On quality, about 50 percent say average, fair, or poor. Those are averages. These are buyers at the Department of Defense.

So we ought to be very clear what this provision does and does not do. It allows, for the first time in a long time, a private person who is working hard on the outside of prison to make a product and be able to bid when his Government is buying that product and not be stopped from bidding by an estabishment of a monopoly by Federal Prison Industries.

There are letters which we received, to which I think my friend from Virginia will also refer. I will place one of the letters in the RECORD. It comes from the AFL-CIO, urging us to oppose any effort to weaken or eliminate the Federal Prison Industries reforms contained in the bill. It says at the end that the bill imports prison work programs and recognizes that they make prisoners safer for correctional staff. They say:

However, we do not believe that the Federal Prison Industries, just as any company, would enjoy a monopoly that unilaterally deprives other firms and workers of job opportunities. Section 821 represents a more balanced policy and we urge you to support it.

Finally, my friend from Texas talks about letting prisoners sell in the private sector. We have laws going back 50 years which say that they can't. The reason we say that is because it is obviously totally unfair to say that 25 cents or 50 cents an hour should be able to compete commercially against people who provide products when they are paying a decent wage. We prohibit imports from China that are made with prison labor. Yet the suggestion of the Senator from Texas is, hey, let's just, across the board, allow prisoners to make anything that goes into the commercial world at the scale that they are paid.

In that case, he said he would favor the language and broaden it to include anything. He says that is real competition. That sure is. That is totally unfair competition.

You can’t compete. If an employer pays a decent wage to somebody, you can’t possibly compete with somebody who is paying 25 cents or 50 cents an hour. Yet that is the approach which the Senator from Texas really favors and says so openly on this floor.

That is not an approach which too many of us—I hope—would favor. We surely don’t favor that. To hold that up as being what is desirable, and short of that we should not allow a private business in this country to offer to supply its own Government a product because the Federal Prison Industries said you may not bid because we have a monopoly on this item, it seems to me, is just highly wrong.

The language in the bill has been carefully constructed; it simply allows for competition. It doesn’t say that Federal Prison Industries can’t compete at all, as the Senator from Kansas suggested. That is not what it says at all. It simply says, allow private businesses to compete, as I think most Americans would think that the private sector can now compete when it comes to providing the Department of Defense with products.

We received many letters from owners of businesses across this country. From an office supply company in Biloix, MS:

I could go on and on about how we could have sold the product much cheaper which would have saved taxpayers’ money, faster delivery, which would have increased productivity, and, finally, better service. You get the picture.

From Tucson, AR:

The Prison Industries’ representatives routinely refuse waivers. The answer is the standard “we have products which will meet your needs.” No explanation. They refuse to answer waiver requests in a timely fashion. I had a $1,100,000 order for the Arizona Air National Guard in full order, I was turned away by Prison Industries. The representative demanded the design—the company’s—and said that Prison Industries would fill the request. No explanation.

Fairfax, VA:

You know, it is not just the impact that Federal Prison Industries has had on our businesses. It is the waste of everybody’s tax dollars when furniture costs more and doesn’t even do the job.

According to Economy Office Products of Fairfax, VA:

Federal Prison Industries tells their customers what the customer can have rather than the needs of the customer.

I hope this language will remain in the bill and that the effort to table it on the part of Senator Gramm will fail. When the time comes for a tabling motion, I hope that tabling motion is agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Virginia.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I thoroughly support what my distinguished chairman has said, and indeed the Senator from Wyoming.

For purposes of clarity, I submitted the amendment to keep the bill moving and to frame the issue so it could be debated. We have now had a very good debate on this subject.

Just for clarity, I will be voting against my own amendment, which I said at the time I introduced it. There will be a motion to table, and therefore Senators who desire to have the bill remain intact would then support the motion to table.

The distinguished chairman alluded to certain letters. I think it is important that colleagues understand that while the labor unions, which Senator Levin addressed, are strongly in favor of keeping the bill intact, there is an equal strength among the private sector for organizations.

The National Federation of Independent Business, the voice of small business, addressed a letter to the Senate signed by the senior vice president.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the entire letter be printed in the RECORD, together with a letter from the Chamber of Commerce, which I will shortly address.

There being no objection, the letters ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

DEAR MR. CHAIRMAN: On behalf of the 600,000 members of the National Federation of Independent Business (NFIB), I want to express our support for your language in the FY 2002 National Defense Authorization Act that would allow the Department of Defense to purchase products from the private sector rather than from Federal Prison Industries if it would benefit the taxpayer and not the DOD.

We will oppose any effort to strike this language from the defense authorization bill.

Eighty-nine percent of NFIB members do not believe that prisons should receive preference over small businesses for federal contracts. NFIB’s members have fought against unfair government competition with the private sector. Federal Prison Industries (FPI) has become one of the most egregious examples of unfair government competition. FPI, also known by its trade name UNICOR, is a government-owned corporation operated by the Federal Bureau of Prisons. From a small program when it was established in 1935, FPI has grown to be a large enterprise. According to its most recent annual report, FPI operates a centrally managed chain of over 100 prison factories that employed 20,966 inmate workers in 1999. With sales to the Federal Government of $566.2 million, FPI would rank 36th among the top 100 contractors to the Federal Government.

FPI would be a formidable competitor for even the most accomplished small business experienced in the Federal market, but FPI does not have to compete. FPI simply takes its contracts from its captive Federal agency “customers.” Under FPI’s Depression-era statute, FPI is a mandatory source for all Federal agencies, meaning that they are not required to compete with private businesses for Federal contracts. A Federal agency must actually obtain FPI’s authorization, a so-called “waiver,” before it can even solicit competitive offers from the private sector. FPI, rather than the Federal agency, determines whether FPI’s product, delivery schedule, and non-competitive price meet the agency’s needs.

FPI’s advantages don’t stop there. FPI pays its workers at hourly rates of $1.25 per hour or less, rather than market-driven wages. FPI’s facilities are built as part of a prison. FPI has access to production equipment and to other Government agencies at no-cost. Congress even gave FPI direct access to the Treasury with authority to borrow up to $20 million, at rates far below what would be available to even the largest commercial enterprise.

Your language provides for fundamental change, making FPI less predatory to small business government contractors and a more responsible supplier to Federal agencies and taxpayers. It would reverse FPI’s monopoly, allowing private contractors to compete for its contracts with the Federal government. Small businesses do not want to prohibit prison industries from entering the market, they just want a fair and level playing field upon which to compete against the
The Chamber of Commerce:
The United States Senate is expected to very shortly consider A. 1416, the Fiscal 2002 National Defense Authorization Act. Contained in that measure is a provision (Section 821), based on legislation authored by Senators Carl Levin and Craig Thomas, that would allow the Department of Defense to purchase goods and services in the private sector rather than from Federal Prison Industries (FPI), if doing so would be in the best interests of the taxpayer and DOD. Be aware that efforts may be made to strike or alter this provision.

The U.S. Chamber of Commerce, the world’s largest business federation, representing more than three million organizations of every size, sector, and region urges you to support Section 821 and amendments to weaken or strike this provision.

Under current law, federal agencies, including the Department of Defense (DOD), must purchase needed goods from FPI rather than buy them following a competitive procurement process. As a result, DOD and other Federal agencies subject to the FPI monopoly, waste taxpayers dollars purchasing inferior-quality products made in prison and services at inflated costs.

By supporting the Levin-Thomas FPI provision you will signal your support for free-market needs and you will save jobs in your state just as many workers and their employers are facing layoffs and cutbacks.

Prisoners should work and learn skills, but they should work for wages that support their families and are paid in their region. There is no reason to subsidize an uncompetitive private business.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, it says: On behalf of the 600,000 members of the National Federation of Independent Business (NFIB), I want to express our support for your language in the FY 2002 National Defense Authorization Act that would allow the Department of Defense to purchase products from the private sector rather than from Federal Prison Industries if it would benefit the taxpayer and the DOD. We will oppose any effort to strike this language from the authorization bill.

Eighty-nine percent of NFIB members do not believe that prisons should receive preference over small businesses for federal contracts.

That is what we are talking about here.

FPI. Thank you for your support for small business and fair competition.

Sincerely,

DAN DANNER, Senior Vice President, Public Policy,

HON. CARL LEVIN, U.S. Senate, Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR LEVIN: The United States Senate is expected to very shortly consider A. 1416, the Fiscal 2002 National Defense Authorization Act. Contained in that measure is a provision (Section 821), based on legislation authored by Senators Carl Levin and Craig Thomas, that would allow the Department of Defense to purchase goods and services in the private sector rather than from Federal Prison Industries (FPI), if doing so would be in the best interests of the taxpayer and DOD. Be aware that efforts may be made to strike or alter this provision.

Be aware that efforts may be made to strike or alter this provision.

On behalf of the Senator from Wyoming and myself, I move to table the amendment.

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, I suggest the absence of a quorum.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, the Senator from Texas has been very cooperative on this unusual procedure. He advises the managers that he and two other Senators wish to participate in this important debate, that debate by these total of three Senators could be concluded prior to 2:15. The leadership is prepared to agree to have a vote at 2:15.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, the Secretary of State is going to be here for a briefing at 2:30. We would have to have that vote at 2:15. The time between now and 12:30 when we recess is very short.

Mr. WARNER. I ask the Senator from Wyoming to move to table the amendment.

Mr. REID. Mr. President, I only ask unanimous consent that we vote at 2:15, that the time until 2:15 be divided between the two managers, and that this request propounded by the Senator from Nevada?

Mr. GRAMM addressed the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas.

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, I don’t object. I would just like to be recognized.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Texas.

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, I have listened to all three speeches. In listening to them, you get the idea that what they want is competition in defense procurement. I would, therefore, like to ask unanimous consent that the pending resolution be set aside and that an amendment be adopted by unanimous consent, which says the following:

All defense procurement shall be on a competitive basis, and the Secretary of Defense shall buy products at the highest possible quality at the lowest possible price.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

Mr. GRAMM. Mr. President, I wanted that objection because I wanted to make a point. And that point is, this bill is completely full of noncompetitive provisions. This bill is full of provisions that say who can do business with the Pentagon and who cannot. This bill prohibits someone from even bidding on a contract with the Pentagon unless they pay the highest wage rates paid in their region. There is no price competition in this bill. This bill is the antithesis of price competition.

When our colleagues talk about price competition, their bill has none, save they want to destroy Prison Industries.

The point I want to make is the following: This amendment has nothing to do with price competition. This bill has to do with killing Prison Industries. Now, look, if you listen to our colleagues, it sounds as though they are saying they want to compete with prisoners. It sounds as though if prisoners are getting all this money that would have gone to some private sector producer.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that a letter from The National Center for Victims of Crime be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

THE NATIONAL CENTER FOR VICTIMS OF CRIME,

Hon. PHIL GRAMM,
U.S. Senate, Russell Senate Office Building,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SENATOR GRAMM: The National Center for Victims of Crime wishes to express its strong opposition to Section 821 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2002 (S. 1438), concerning purchases from federal prison industries. This amendment raises a panoply of concerns at both the federal and state levels, and will literally take desperately needed funds away from victims who are trying to piece their lives back together in the aftermath of crime.

At the federal level, we are deeply concerned that this provision will thwart the Federal Bureau of Prisons' (BOP) efforts to collect millions of dollars each year to support victim assistance and pay crime victim restitution.

In addition, we have spoken to state officials who are extremely concerned that this federal provision may set precedent for state level action, significantly affecting the ability of crime victims to collect restitution. Many states require a percentage of money deposited into inmate accounts—including inmate savings from prison industries—to be collected to support state funds for victim assistance programs and restitution orders. The total payment from PIA wages for crime victim restitution during that year was $440,000 dollars. In Florida, the statewide private Prison Rehabilitation Industries and Diversified Enterprises (PRIIDE) collected $264,000 in crime victim restitution during the last fiscal year. To take away those desperately needed victim assistance funds is a slap in the face of the already wounded.

Furthermore, that prison work programs can prepare inmates for a productive return to society, reducing recidivism. Section 821, by introducing competitive bidding into the procurement process, will reduce the availability of prison work. The result will be fewer prisoners returning to society with the necessary skills and work history to gain employment.

We strongly urge you to support restitution for victims of crime and oppose Section 821 of the National Defense Authorization Act.

Sincerely,

Susan Herman, Executive Director.

Mr. GRAMM. The point of this letter is, some of the money that is being earned by producing goods in prison is going for restitution to their victims. Prisoners get approximately 5 percent of the value of the products that are sold. This is not benefiting prisoners in any real sense. Who is it benefiting really boils down to three groups of people: One, restitution to victims, where some of the money goes for that purpose; two, we are beginning to discover that by paying some of the $30,000 per-prisoner cost of keeping somebody in the Federal penitentiary by having them work; and, finally, indirectly prisoners benefit by a reduced recidivism rate.

Our colleagues say: Well, look, why should the Government give to Prison Industries the right of first offering to sell products to the Government? Why shouldn’t we just do it competitively?

Let me say, Madam President, I would be perfectly happy—in fact, I ask unanimous consent that the current amendment be set aside and that the following amendment be adopted:

The Federal Prison Industry Program and its special relationship to the Defense Department shall be terminated. Federal Prison Industries shall have every right to sell products in the private sector of the economy except with two limitations: No. 1, no products shall be sold in the immediate vicinity of the prison; and, No. 2, no products shall be sold in a market where price has declined more than 10 percent in the last year.

I ask unanimous consent that be adopted.

The PRESIDING OFFICER (Ms. CLINTON). Is there objection?

Mr. LEVIN. I object.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

Mr. GRAMM. Madam President, I wanted that objection because I wanted to make the point that when our colleagues are talking about wanting prison labor to compete; they do not want prison labor to compete; they do not want the prison industry to compete with the private manufacturers. The furniture manufacturers pound their chest and talk about: We want to compete with prison labor. But they are not telling the truth. They want to take away the only market that is left for prison labor.

They killed off the market for prison labor in the 1930s where virtually everybody in American prisons worked and where they produced their own food, where they produced their own clothes, where they paid for part of the cost of their incarceration, and where they learned skills. So having killed that, now they want to kill the last vestige of prison labor; and that is selling to the Federal Government. They cloak themselves in the righteousness of competition, but they want no competition.

Now, lest anybody think the relationship the Federal Prison Industries has is a relationship which is unfair to the Government, I remind my colleagues that in the 1930s we killed the prison industry as it related to producing and selling goods in the private marketplace with three Federal statutes: One, forbid the sale of prison goods in interstate commerce; another, forbid the transportation of prison goods in interstate commerce; and another one said: You can work, but you have to pay them union wages. The simple English was: Prisoners are not going to work. What happened? We drove up the cost of keeping people in prison.

The only thing left is Government procurement. Every other kind of production by prisoners is now illegal in the United States of America.

Let me recite these facts: In the last comprehensive study by the Office of the Inspector General, Department of Defense—let me remind my colleagues, the Defense Department did not ask for the Levin amendment. The Justice Department is adamantly opposed to the Levin amendment. But you get the idea. Listening to the current provision that, well, these prison products are overpriced and are no good. When we did a comprehensive study that was reported to Congress on October 5, 1998, here is what it found: In 78 percent of the procurements that the Defense Department engaged in with Federal Prison Industries, the cost of the product was actually lower than the cost of the product that was available in the private sector. So 78 percent of the time it was cheaper buying from the prisons; 20 percent of the time, in the survey, it was higher; 21 percent of the time it was roughly the same.

When the cost is higher, the Defense Department has the ability to apply for a waiver so that they don’t have to buy from Prison Industries if they think it is not a good deal. Well, in listening to the proponents of this provision, you would get the idea that the answer every time they asked for a waiver was no. The plain truth is that in 89 percent of the cases where they said they didn’t want this product from Prison Industries, that waiver was granted.

Let me summarize by making the following points: First of all, by roughly a 4-to-1 margin in the surveys that have been done, it is cheaper to buy from Prison Industries than from the private sector.

Secondly, in those cases where it is not cheaper, almost 90 percent of the time a waiver was granted so that the Pentagon did not have to purchase the item from Prison Industries.

Our colleagues talk about competition, but they don’t want competition. When I asked unanimous consent to have competition for the Pentagon to buy the best, quickest, lowest price, just as Mr. and Mrs. America try to do every day—and as every business in America tries to do every day—they claim it is what they want, but when I ask that we do it by unanimous consent, they object. They say they want prison labor to have to compete, but when I ask unanimous consent that it be able to compete for both Government contracts and private contracts, save the limitation that you could not sell things right around the prison when the glut of goods was going to send letters back home telling people—whether you care about the manufacturer or the labor union, they are going to send those letters. Nobody is going to send a letter back home saying that they would lose by killing the last vestige of prison labor in America. They will say that 285 million people are paying attention to it. That is how bad laws are made. I urge my colleagues to defeat the Levin amendment. We had a very unusual thing happen. I must say, in all the time I have been here I don’t remember it happening before, but it is perfectly within the rules. We had the Senator from Virginia offer a tabling amendment on behalf of another member—in this case, my colleague who was ready to debate the issue, before I could get together my supporters to come speak on behalf of it. I am sure that was not his intention. His intention was to get on with this bill.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator’s time has expired.

Mr. GRAMM. Did we have a unanimous consent agreement dividing the time? If so, I did not hear it.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The time was to be equally divided.

Mr. GRAMM. That was in the unanimous consent request?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Yes, it was.

Mr. GRAMM. I ask unanimous consent for one additional minute.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GRAMM. The issue is not going to be decided on this tabling motion unless this provision is stricken because I have not yet had an opportunity. I would like to get new data, and I would like to try to improve the Federal prison system. I would like to respond to the legitimate concerns that have been raised. But I am not willing to step aside and allow prison labor to be killed in America. We have 1.2 million people sitting around in idleness, and the cost of keeping people in prison is driving up taxes all over America.

If, in fact, this amendment is taken out of this bill, it will not settle this issue for this year, but if it is not taken out of this bill, it will not settle this issue for this year. I urge the distinguished chairman of the committee to compromise, to come to a reasonable solution so we can deal with the Nation’s problems.

This is an important issue. There are 285 million people paying $30,000 a year to keep people in prison. We have 1.2 million people in prison. I just cannot be indifferent about that. As a result, I am opposed to the Levin amendment. I will vote against this tabling motion. If it is not tabbed, the amendment will be pending and it can be amended. If it is tabbed, then another amendment can be offered, so I do not know that we have remedied anything.

We have had a good debate, and I think the more people hear about this, the better off we are. I cannot imagine an objective American sided with killing the Federal Prison Industries.

I thank the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Who yields time? The Senator from Michigan.

Mr. LEVIN. Madam President, very briefly, there are a number of points which the Senator from Texas has made which deserve, again, to be refuted. I will pick two of them.

First he says Mr. and Mrs. America, if they only knew, they surely would say that we have to allow the Prison Industries to establish a monopoly so that the Defense Department must buy a product from Prison Industries, even though the Defense Department is paying more for it from other industries than they do from a private firm.

I think Mr. and Mrs. America would be stunned, would be shocked if they heard that a private firm is not allowed to bid on a product that the Government is buying.

I think Mr. and Mrs. America would probably shake their heads in disbelief and say: Wait a minute, you mean that the office supply company down the street my husband or wife works at is not allowed to bid even if they have a lower price than Prison Industries at 50-cents-an-hour labor? You mean that firm, that company, where my spouse has a job, cannot even bid on it? Talk about being stunned. That would stun Mr. and Mrs. America.

There is something else, by the way, about Mr. and Mrs. America to which I want to make reference. We do not allow Americans to buy products made by Chinese prison labor. We prohibit it. We just do not think it is right that we should be competing with Chinese prison wages. It is tough enough to be competing with wages of people who are not in prison in other countries, but we have a prohibition on that.

Yet our friend from Texas says we ought to let prison labor sell in the private sector. That is really what is at issue by the way. The issue is much more than the language which is in this bill which would simply allow the private sector to compete. What the Senator from Texas is really after and has said he would support would be a provision that would let prison labor make products and sell in the private sector.

I want to see whether or not the American public will support a system where our workers not in prison have to compete with prison wages. I do not think they want to do it anymore than we want to compete with Chinese prison wages. I do not think they want to do it. Yet that is what the Senator from Texas says he will support.
I hope this Senate will reject that as being really what the Senator from Texas is after and, according to his own words, something he will support. The issue before us is a narrower issue. Although the issue I mentioned may be the underlying issue, the narrower issue is the language in this bill. The language in this bill simply says that if a private firm wishes to bid on a product the Department of Defense is buying, it ought to be allowed to do so and that Prison Industries should not be able unilaterally to say a private company may not bid, that Prison Industries is going to have a monopoly.

The Senator from Texas repeated perhaps 20 times that the effort here is to kill prison labor, kill Prison Industries. Of course, it is not. It is to permit the taxpayers to compete. Indeed, the statistics, which he cited a number of times, support our language. It was his statistics which said that in 78 percent of the procurements by the Department, the price paid to Prison Industries was actually lower. Fine. We are not trying to change that. All this language does is take care of the other 20 percent, which is also one of the statistics cited by the Senator from Texas.

In the other 20 percent, according to the Senator from Texas, it would actually be cheaper for the Department of Defense to buy from the private sector than it would from Prison Industries. He cites that statistic as proving that in most cases it would be cheaper for the Department to buy from Prison Industries. Fine. We are not trying to stop that. We are not trying to stop the Prison Industries from competing. We just want to allow the private sector to compete so that in 20 percent of the cases where the Department of Defense would save money by buying from the private sector, it would be allowed to do so.

Madam President, I hope this language will stay in the bill. It has broad support. It is, also, it seems to me, so fundamentally fair that American citizens not in prison be allowed to bid on items that their Government is buying. That to me is so obvious and so fair that it would come as a shock to American citizens to learn that is anything other than what the current system is. I yield the floor.

Mr. GRAMM. Madam President, we have a couple minutes remaining, and I would like to have that time, if I may. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. GRAMM. Madam President, first of all, I am not in a Federal prison, and I do not have any kinfolk in a Federal prison, so I do not know how I would benefit from that.

Second, it is interesting, all this concern about competition. The Defense Department sent the chairman a recommendation that they be allowed to be more competitive in purchasing items by not requiring defense contractors to pay inflated wage rates in order to bid. They estimated that next year they could save $180 million if they were allowed to be more competitive, and that provision was struck and not included in this bill.

The Defense Department sent the chairman and the ranking member a letter saying: If you will just let us have a little bit more leeway in getting competitive bidding on small contracts of less than $1 million, that could have saved $180 million. I yield the floor.

Our colleagues who are so concerned about competition today say basically we do not want to save $180,000 if it means competition, and so they rejected that provision. Yet, when it comes to Federal Prison Industries, now all of a sudden everything should be different.

So I hope my colleagues will vote on this on the merits. Do you want to kill Federal Prison Industries or not? Do you think a handful of workers and a handful of manufacturers who would benefit by killing Federal Prison Industries are more important than the 285 million taxpayers who are paying $30,000 a year to keep somebody in prison on those costs can be ultimately who they will pay and where we could use some of the money for victims' restitution? That is the issue, and I hope people will vote on that basis.

Mr. VOINOVICH. Madam President, I rise today in support of the preservation of the Federal Prison Industries Program. Language that is currently in the Defense authorization bill would gut this program within the Bureau of Federal Prisons, effectively withdrawing hope for thousands of incarcerated Federal prisoners, fostering a dangerous number of idle hands within our Federal prison system.

Today, the Federal Prison Industries Program employs and provides valuable skills training to the greatest number of inmates incarcerated within the Federal prison system. Overall, FPI has some 21,000 inmates in more than 100 Federal prisons working in 100 industries, from textiles to electronics to graphic design. In Ohio, the Federal Correctional Institute at Elktont has up to 450 inmates working in data processing and electronics recycling. This employment of prisoners does more than just occupy time, it teaches prisoners the skills they need to obtain a job once they leave prison.

By giving prisoners an opportunity to change their lives, the FPI program contributes to security inside prisons, and it reduces the rate of recidivism among those it trains. Indeed, inmates in FPI's work programs are 24 percent less likely to be repeat offenders after being released. In addition, 55 percent of inmates' wages go toward meeting their financial obligations, such as victim restitution, child support, and court fees.

When I was Governor of Ohio, we had a similar program to FPI and saw firsthand the success and value of giving inmates a second chance at being productive members of society. In Ohio, we had inmates who had been trained in both horticulture and绘画, take part in groundkeeping throughout the Governor's residence. We had inmates working in the Governor's office mailroom and copy center operations, where they put together news clippings that distributed newspapers around the portion of the photocopying. Overall, I had an extremely good experience with the work those inmates did, and I have to say that for the most part, the work they performed was excellent. For some inmates who had exemplified themselves, I even wrote letters of recommendation to help them get jobs when they got out of prison.

The experience that I have had at the State level by employing State inmates is one that is replicated at the Federal level through the FPI program. I understand that some private sector companies desire to compete for FPI contracts, however, I believe that FPI provides an invaluable opportunity for inmates, and the communities to which they will eventually return, that cannot be ignored.

While I find merit in pursing possible reforms to the FPI program, I do not believe the answer is to completely obliterate FPI, as the current language does. Therefore, I urge my colleagues to support to ensure the viability of FPI, the safety of our Federal prisons.
and the rehabilitation of our Federal inmates.

Mr. BYRD. Madam President, I oppose section 821 of the Fiscal Year 2002 Defense Authorization bill because I fear that this section would undermine what has proved to be a successful program in helping to manage Federal prisoners.

Section 821 would effectively eliminate the mandatory source requirement for the Department of Defense, which ensures that Federal prisoners are employed in sufficient numbers, and thus is fundamental to the security of our Federal prisons.

Moreover, since this section would significantly affect our Federal prisons, it is an issue that the Senate Judiciary Committee should first consider before the Senate takes action on it after only 2 hours of debate.

I support the protection for the provision of goods and services to the Federal Government. However, this competition should not be sought at the expense of a successful prisoner management program, and that program should certainly not be repealed without some alternative program to replace it.

Mr. BROWNBACK. Madam President, I rise to support my colleague from Texas in his effort to strike section 821 from S. 1438. I have outlined why I believe the Federal Prison Industries is important for the continued orderly function of our prisons.

Today I have received a letter from Fraternal Order of Police President Steve Young. In his letter, Mr. Young made an interesting point that a healthy Federal Prison Industries is not only important for the orderly function of our prisons but also for the safety of our corrections officers.

I ask unanimous consent that Mr. Young’s letter be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the letter was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

FRATERNAL ORDER OF POLICE,

HON. SAM BROWNBACK,
U.S. Senate,
Washington, DC.

Dear Senator Brownback:

I am writing on behalf of the more than 300,000 members of the Fraternal Order of Police to advise you of our strong support for Amendment No. 1674 to strike Section 821 from S. 1438, the “FY 2002 National Defense Authorization Act,” and therefore urge a “no” vote on the motion to table this important amendment.

Reform of Federal Prison Industries has been an issue which has received much attention over the past several years. For our organization, any reform proposal put before the Congress must be viewed from the perspective of its potential impact on both the safety of Federal correctional officers, and the safety of the public from recidivist offenders.

With the large number of Federal prisoners incarcerated in Bureau of Prison (BOP) facilities, now is the time to seek increased opportunities for inmates to gain meaningful employment through FPI. In so doing, we can reduce the rate of recidivism, enhance public safety, provide restitution to victims of crime, and enable these inmates to truly pay their debt to society at no additional cost to the American taxpayers. In addition, it will create a safer environment for the work force and the correctional officers who work in BOP facilities.

On behalf of the membership of the Fraternal Order of Police, I wish to thank you for your continuing leadership on this issue, and your support of America’s law enforcement officers. Please do not hesitate to contact me, or Executive Director Jim Pasco, if we can provide you any additional information or assistance.

Sincerely,

Steve Young
National President

Mr. THURMOND. Madam President, I rise to express my strong support for the amendment to strike section 821, the Federal Prison Industries provision of the Defense Authorization Act. Do I have the consent of the Senate to place it?

Mr. BROWNBACK. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that Mr. Young’s letter be printed in the RECORD.

The Defense Department is critical to FPI’s continued success. It is one of FPI’s most important customers, constituting about 60 percent of FPI sales. FPI is an important supplier of the military supply network. DOD and FPI have a good working relationship, and there is no basis for us to create a special carve out of DOD from FPI’s very long-standing Federal Government preference in procurement.
reform legislation that we should consider in the Judiciary Committee is currently pending there.

I agree that it is time to move away from the mandatory source preference that FPI has in the Federal market. However, we must do so in a reasoned, comprehensive way that creates more opportunities, not less.

Senator Barton and I have introduced a bill that is pending in the Judiciary Committee which would eliminate the mandatory source in a way that would not endanger FPI. Our legislation, S. 1228, would give private businesses the opportunity to partner with FPI to make products in the private sector.

Most importantly, it would permit prisoners to make products for private companies that otherwise would be made overseas, such as electronic toys and textiles. This has the potential to return jobs to America that have been lost to foreign labor. FPI already purchases over $400 million per year in raw materials and equipment from United States companies, most of which comes from small businesses. This bill would expand those opportunities for private industry.

Also, under S. 1228, when inmates made products in the domestic market, they would earn comparable wages. Any argument about forced labor, whether in FPI today or in this bill, is going to get his way even if the majority of the Senate disagrees with him. That is what the issue is. It seems to me that is the overriding issue.

Back to competition. If the Senator from Texas believes there should be an amendment that would modify Davis-Bacon, I would urge him to offer that. Let us debate it. Let us vote it, but let us not hold up the Defense bill as his position would.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Texas.

Mr. GRAMM. I ask unanimous consent that the request of the Defense Department that they have the right to engage in competitive bidding on contracts of less than a million dollars be accepted.

Mr. LEVIN. I object. I have said very clearly that the Senator should offer the amendment if he wants to do so. Send the amendment to the desk. Let's debate that amendment. Win or lose, modify Davis-Bacon if he wishes. Send an amendment to the desk. We will debate it. But what I object to is holding up the Defense bill on this ground. We do not do this by unanimous consent.

Mr. GRAMM. Not to keep dragging this dead cat back across the table, but I am not asking for any special privilege. I wanted to offer my own amendment, which someone else offered. The Senator can deal with his bill as he chooses. I have been a private in the Army but I believe I am a private in the right. I want this issue to be heard, and I want to debate it. I don't understand why that is somehow unreasonable.

When people want to pass special interest legislation, they can cloak themselves in the righteousness of the moment. I do not understand why it is even in this bill. I think, quite frankly, people ought to be embarrassed that it is in this bill.

In any case, I am not asking for any special privilege whatsoever. I want to exercise my right as 1 of 100 Senators. That is all I am doing.

I yield the floor.

RECESS

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the hour of 12:34 p.m. having arrived, the Senate will stand in recess until 2:15 p.m.

Thereupon, the Senate, at 12:34 p.m., recessed until 2:15 p.m. and reassembled when called to order by the Presiding Officer (Mr. Nelson of Nebraska).

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The majority leader.

ORDER OF BUSINESS

Mr. DASCHLE. For the interest of all Senators, we will stand in recess immediately following this vote in order to accommodate Senators who wish to attend the briefing that will be held in room 407 this afternoon. That briefing will be to hear the Secretary of State give an update on the current circumstances.

MAKING CONTINUING APPROPRIATIONS FOR FISCAL YEAR 2002

Mr. DASCHLE. I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the consideration of H.J. Res. 65, a continuing resolution.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the resolution by title.

The bill clerk read as follows:

A joint resolution (H.J. Res. 65) making continuing appropriations for the fiscal year 2002, and for other purposes.

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the joint resolution.

Mr. DASCHLE. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that the resolution be read three times, passed, and the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The joint resolution (H.J. Res. 65) was considered read the third time and passed.
There is a sufficient second.

Mr. WARNER. We have no objection.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will call the roll.

The bill clerk called the roll.

Mr. REID. I announce that the Senator from Delaware (Mr. BIDEN) and the Senator from Delaware (Mr. CARPER) are necessarily absent.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Are any other Senators in the Chamber desiring to vote?

The result was announced—yes 74, nays 24, as follows:

RECESS SUBJECT TO THE CALL OF THE CHAIR

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate stands in recess subject to the call of the Chair.

Thereupon, the Senate, at 2:48 p.m., recessed subject to the call of the Chair and reassembled at 4:00 p.m., when called to order by the Presiding Officer (Mr. MILLER).

NATIONAL DEFENSE AUTHORIZATION ACT FOR FISCAL YEAR 2002—Continued

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Michigan is recognized.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I understand the amendment of the Senator from New Mexico has now been cleared on both sides. We welcome that news. He has been working hard on this amendment for a number of years to provide some equity to some people who have had severe losses. I have always commended him on his efforts and supported him. I think we have worked it out within the budget constraints of the bill.

Perhaps the Senator from Oklahoma would agree that his amendment will be temporarily laid aside so the Senator from New Mexico could offer an amendment.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I join the chairman. We have known of the years and years of work and the foundation laid by our colleague from New Mexico. He provided for it in the budget amendment long before the current situation developed. We support it.

Amendment No. 1672

Mr. DOMENICI. I send an amendment to the desk.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

The Senator from New Mexico [Mr. DOMENICI, for himself, Mr. BIDEN, Mr. BACUS, and Mr. ALLARD], proposes an amendment numbered 1672.

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that further reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

(Purpose: To provide permanent appropriations with fiscal year limits to the Radiation Exposure Compensation Trust Fund to make payments under the Radiation Exposure Compensation Act)

At the appropriate place, insert the following:

SEC. 4. RADIATION EXPOSURE COMPENSATION ACT MANDATORY APPROPRIATIONS.

Section 3(e) of the Radiation Exposure Compensation Act (42 U.S.C. 2260 note) is amended to read as follows:

"(e) APPROPRIATION—" "(1) IN GENERAL.—Subject to the limits in paragraph (2), there are appropriated, out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, for the fiscal year 2002, and each fiscal year thereafter through 2011, such sums as may be necessary to the Fund for the purpose of making payments to eligible beneficiaries under this Act.

"(2) LIMITATION.—Amounts appropriated pursuant to paragraph (1) not exceed—" "(A) in fiscal year 2002, $172,000,000;" "(B) in fiscal year 2003, $143,000,000;" "(C) in fiscal year 2004, $107,000,000;" "(D) in fiscal year 2005, $85,000,000;" "(E) in fiscal year 2006, $47,000,000;" "(F) in fiscal year 2007, $29,000,000;" "(G) in fiscal year 2008, $29,000,000;" "(H) in fiscal year 2009, $29,000,000;" "(I) in fiscal year 2010, $25,000,000; and" "(J) in fiscal year 2011, $17,000,000.”

Mr. DOMENICI. Mr. President, we are going to do something that is very fair that will eliminate a serious problem that is out there among a few thousand Americans, some of whom have walked into meetings with the U.S. Government carrying an IOU. The IOU is that the Federal Government owes them the money they were supposed to receive months ago, because either the person that their claimants I am talking about under the Radiation Exposure Compensation Act are walking around, some of them almost in a daze, because they cannot believe that their Federal Government read about every day, spending hundreds of billions of dollars, huge amounts for defense, huge amounts for other things, is telling them for a claim that is theirs, that has been adjudicated, that says the U.S. Government of America owes Jimmy Jones $100,000, there is no money. And this is what they bring to our meetings.

We do not take very long in agreeing with them. We try to give them the history, the fact it has to be funded. Perhaps the Senator from Oklahoma could offer an amendment that is out there among a few claimants. A little bit of it was used in the defense part of our budget, this claim that is theirs, that has been adjudicated, that says the U.S. Government owes them the money they were supposed to receive months ago, because the people that they have walked into meetings with the Government ruled quickly, even though in some cases, with some of them listening in the Four Corners area, they did go through an awful lot of trouble to get here. But then, the situation developed. We support it.

Every time we sought funding for one reason or another, we received just enough for a month or two. This claim got mixed up in jurisdictional problems as to which committee ought to fund it.

I say to the Senate, when we were working on the budget resolution, we allocated in that budget to the Armed Services Committee the money that was necessary to keep this program going for a substantial period of time. We said, even though it is allocated to the defense part of our budget, this amount of money should be used for the claimants I am talking about under the Radiation Exposure Compensation Fund.

Under this bill, there is $172 million in the defense account that has not been used because it is for these claimants. A little bit of it was used in the process of producing this bill. I do not choose to argue about that. That is all right with me. I just want this amendment adopted so nobody uses the rest of the money that is in this bill for these people.

For anybody who is interested, we are about to do something for a lot of Americans, principally in the Four Corners area, some in the Dakotas. Those claimants ought to know the best we can do is to put it on this bill. This bill has a long way to go, but the Senator from New Mexico does not know where else to put it that will get it into their hands any sooner. We will be watching and observing, and if for some reason this authorization bill cannot get through the process—through the House to the President and signed—we will try to find another vehicle that we can succeed totally. We do not make this a completely mandatory program.

We are taking jurisdiction away from no one. If this bill is in the Judiciary Committee, they will retain jurisdiction. We are going to pay for it out of an allocation that went to this committee’s work on defense, and we are just about to say that this money will now go to whom it was intended: those people to whom the Government is clearly indebted and owes money.

I offered an amendment that will make funding for the Radiation Exposure Compensation Fund mandatory. From the 1940s through 1971, uranium miners, Federal employees, who participated in above-ground nuclear tests, and downwinders from the Nevada Test Site were exposed to dangerous levels of radiation. As a result of this exposure, these individuals contracted debilitating and too often deadly radiation-related cancers and other diseases.

In 1990, Congress recognized their contribution by passing the Radiation Exposure Compensation Act to ensure that these individuals and their families were indemnified for their sacrifice and suffering. However, the RECA Trust Fund ran out of money in May 2000. Consequently, for over a year most eligible claimants received nothing more than a five-line IOU from the Justice Department explaining that no payments will be made until Congress provides necessary funds. Some of these claimants died while awaiting their payments. This is simply unconscionable.

Fortunately, we were able to secure the necessary funds in this year’s supplemental to pay the IOUs and all claims approved by September 30, 2001. Nonetheless, many claims will be filed and approved over the coming years, and it is time we make all payments to this fund mandatory so that these people who have suffered so greatly for our Nation’s security are not again shortchanged by the political complexities of the annual congressional appropriations process. If we do not adopt this amendment, more of these men will die holding nothing but a Government IOU.

In a time when our Nation is at war, it is imperative that we do not forget those citizens who have contributed so much to the strength and security of our Nation. After all, these folks helped build our nuclear arsenal, the nuclear arsenal that is responsible, at least in part, for ending the cold war and leading to America’s place as the world’s only superpower.

Moreover, it is important that we show those who are now being called on to defend our Nation that the Senate cannot and will not forget their efforts and sacrifice. By turning our backs on some of yesterday’s heroes we will be sending the wrong message to the heroes of today.

This is an appropriate time to raise this issue because we assumed this spending in the Senate budget resolution and the funding was allocated to the Armed Services Committee for this purpose. It is important to note that under this amendment, these mandatory payments are capped at the amounts allocated to the Armed Services Committee and will not exceed $172 million in any one year.

Those who helped protect our Nation’s security through their work on our nuclear programs must be compensated for the enormous price they paid. Anything less is unacceptable.

Mr. President, there were a lot of Senators involved. If they want to be a cosponsor, we will be glad to ask them to be made original cosponsors. I yield the floor.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I commend our good friend from New Mexico, he and Senator BINGAMAN and others have fought hard and long for equity in this area. We intended to do it for some time, but it has always been subject to appropriations.

The amendment would clearly mobilize $655 million over 10 years to workers and their families who are eligible through RECA. This goes a long way toward the Federal Government fully living up to its promise when we passed RECA 11 years ago. Unfortunately, the Congressional Budget Office estimates that we need $812 million over the same period. So, we urge the Congress to make this amendment.

Basis of Estimate

Spending Subject to Appropriation

The bill would authorize appropriations totaling $343 billion in 2002 (see Table 2). Most of those costs would fall within budget function 050 (national defense). S. 1416 also would authorize appropriations of $71 million for the Armed Forces Retirement Home (function 060—income security) and $17 million for the Naval Petroleum Reserves (function 570—oil and gas). Title XIII would make $15.2 billion of the authorizations in the bill contingent upon either a procedural action taken by the Chairman of the Committee on the Budget in the Senate or a procedural waiver agreed to by three-fifths of the members of the Senate. The estimate assumes that one of these actions would occur and that $293 billion would be appropriated near the start of fiscal year 2002. Outlays are estimated based on historical spending patterns.

Multiyear Procurement. In most cases, purchases of weapon systems are authorized annually, and as a result, DoD negotiates a separate contract for each annual purchase. In a small number of cases, the law permits multiyear procurement; that is, it allows DoD to enter into a contract to buy specified annual quantities of a system for up to five years. In those cases, DoD can negotiate lower prices because its commitment to purchase the weapons gives the contractor an incentive to find more economical ways to manufacture the weapon, including cost-saving investments. Funding would continue to be provided on an annual basis for these multyear contracts, but potential termination costs would be covered by an initial appropriation.

Note.—For every item in this table except the authorization for the Coast Guard reserve and for payments to WWII slave laborers, the 2002 levels are included in the amounts specifically authorized to be appropriated in the bill. Those amounts are shown in Table 3.

Section 122 would authorize DoD to enter into a multyear contract to buy engines for F/A-18E/F aircraft starting in 2002. The Navy currently purchases the aircraft from Boeing under a multyear contract covering the 2000-2004 period, while the engines are purchased separately from General Electric under annual contracts. Each engine costs about $4 million today. According to the Navy, it plans to purchase 48 aircraft a year over the next five years starting in 2002. CBO estimates that the savings from buying F/A-18E/F engines under a multyear contract would total about $50 million over the 2002-2006 period, or about 3 percent of total engine costs. This estimate assumes that the Navy would buy 96 engines a year (two engines for each aircraft purchased) over the five-year period and that there would be no up-front investment required to implement the multyear contract. Section 131 would authorize DoD to enter into a new multyear procurement contract to buy up to 60 additional C-17 aircraft. Under the current multyear contract, the Air Force will purchase 18 aircraft in 2002 and another 6 aircraft in 2003. Assuming that the Air Force would proceed with follow-on procurement of up to 60 additional aircraft, CBO estimates that savings from buying 60 additional C-17s under a multyear contract arrangement would total $894 million or an average of about $250 million a year over the 2003-2006 period. Funding requirements would total just under $3.3 billion instead of the almost $9.2 billion needed under annual contracts. This estimate assumes that the Air Force would purchase the 60 additional aircraft starting in 2003 at a rate of 15 a year.

Force Structure. The bill contains various sections that affect endstrength and personnel grade structure. Endstrengths. The bill would authorize active and reserve endstrengths for 2002. The authorized endstrengths for active-duty personnel and personnel in the selected reserve would total about 1,387,000 and 865,000, respectively. Of those selected reservists, about 67,000 would serve on active duty in support of the reserves. The bill would specifically authorize appropriations of $82.4 billion for the costs of military pay and allowances in 2002. Of that amount, discretionary authorizations for military pay and allowances would total $32.3 billion, while $0.1 billion was to cover the costs of BAH. The authorized endstrength represents a net increase of 3,152 servicemembers that would boost costs for salaries and other expenses in the first year by about $600 million annually in subsequent years, compared to the authorized strengths for 2001.

The bill would also authorize an endstrength of 8,000 in 2002 for the Coast Guard Reserve. This authorization would cost about $83 million and would fall under budget function 490 (Transportation).

Grade Structure. Sections 402, 415, and 502 would increase the number of servicemembers in certain grades. Under section 402, the number of servicemembers in pay grade E–8 in the Navy would increase. Section 415 would change the grade structure of active-duty personnel in support of the reserve, and section 502 would reduce the time-in-grade required for promotion to captain in the Army, Air Force, and Marine Corps, and lieutenant in the Navy when service staffing needs are low.

The bill includes provisions that would increase the overall endstrength, but would result in more promotions to these ranks. CBO estimates these provisions would cost $29 million in 2002 and $10 million by 2006.

Compensation and Benefits. Section 1416 contains several provisions that would affect military compensation and benefits. Military Pay Raises. Section 601 would raise basic pay by 5 percent across-the-board and authorize additional targeted pay raises, ranging from 1 percent to 10 percent, for individuals with specific ranks and years of service at a total cost of about $3.1 billion in 2002. Because the pay raises would be above the current law, CBO estimates that the incremental costs associated with the larger pay raise would be about $1 billion in 2002 and total $7.1 billion over the 2002–2006 period.

Expiring Bonuses and Allowances. Several sections would extend DoD’s authority to pay certain bonuses and allowances to current and former active-duty personnel, most of these authorities are scheduled to expire in December 2001, or three months into fiscal year 2002. The bill would extend these authorities for at least another two years, and CBO estimates that the costs of these extensions would be as follows:

- Various bonuses for the Selected and Ready Reserve would cost $64 million in 2002 and $73 million in 2003.
- Special payments for aviators and nuclear-qualified personnel would cost $52 million in 2002 and $55 million in 2003.
- Retention bonuses for officers and enlisted members with critical skills would cost $29 million in 2002 and $13 million in 2003.
- Authorities to make special payments to nurse officer candidates, registered nurses, and nurse midwives would cost $7 million in 2002 and $2 million in 2003.

Most of these changes would result in additional, smaller costs in subsequent years because of built-in expiration dates.

Housing Allowances. Section 605 would limit the out-of-pocket cost of housing for servicemembers receiving basic allowance for housing (BAH) to about $48,500. Currently, DoD pays members BAH rates which cover about $5 per cent of the cost of adequate housing in the United States. DoD plans to reduce the average out-of-pocket housing expense for members by increasing BAH by about 4 percent annually, until BAH covers the full cost of adequate housing by 2005, adjusted for inflation. Section 605 would accelerate DoD’s plan by limiting out-of-pocket costs to 7.5 percent in 2002 and eliminating average out-of-pocket costs entirely by January 1, 2002, and October 1, 2002, respectively. CBO estimates that the increase in BAH would cost $230 million in 2002 and $1.4 billion over the 2002–2006 period.

Travel and Transportation Allowances. Sections 631 through 634 would affect travel and transportation allowances by expanding eligibility or increasing benefits. CBO estimates that the cost of these changes would be as follows:

- Subsistence eligibility to receive the basic allowance for housing (BAH) to junior enlisted members in grades E–3 and below who are on leave or traveling between permanent-duty stations would cost $34 million in 2002 and $162 million over the 2002–2006 period.
- Expanding eligibility for temporary subsistence allowance for marriage partners, where the spouse is a member of the military, would cost $1 million in 2002. Expanding eligibility to receive DLA to members with dependents moving to their first duty station would cost $34 million in 2002.
- Authorizing dislocation allowances (DLA) for individuals whose current military-privatization or renovation) would cost $6 million in 2002. CBO estimates that these three provisions would cost $256 million over the 2002–2006 period.

In total, these provisions affecting travel and transportation allowances would cost $94 million in 2002 and $498 million over the 2002–2006 period.

Increases in Incentive Pay and Bonuses. Sections 537, 615, and 617 would expand eligibility for incentive pay for personnel with special skills. Section 537 would expand the population eligible to receive stints to the Junior Reserve Officers’ Training Program to include medical and dental school students. Assuming the number of participants would increase gradually, at a rate of about 5 percent per year, CBO estimates that implementing section 537 would cost less than $500,000 in 2002 and $7 million over the 2002–2006 period.

Section 618 would raise the maximum pay rates for servicemembers performing submarine duty. CBO estimates this pay increase, effective October 1, 2002, would have no cost in 2002, cost $21 million in 2003, and cost $111 million over the 2003–2006 period.

Under section 617, certain officers and enlisted servicemembers would receive an additional $200 clothing allowance (e.g., because of housing privatization or renovation) would cost $6 million in 2002. CBO estimates that these provisions would cost $256 million over the 2002–2006 period.

Uniform Allowances. Section 697 would loosen restrictions on eligibility of officers to receive an additional $200 clothing allowance by doubling the cap on the dollar amount a member may receive in an initial clothing allowance over the prior two years. Under current law, officers are ineligible to receive additional clothing allowances if they have received more than $200 in an initial clothing allowance during the past two years. Raising the cap would increase the number of officers eligible for the $200 allowance. CBO estimates that implementing this provision would cost $4 million in 2002 and $32 million over the 2002–2006 period.

Commissary Benefits. Section 662 would allow new members of the reserve to use the commissary system, which are paid for by the government, to shop at commissaries if they have $500,000 in 2005. CBO estimates implementing this provision would cost $4 million in 2002 and $20 million over the 2002–2006 period.

Subsistence Allowances. Section 604 would extend the current authority to provide an additional allowance for married members, and CBO estimates that authorizations in-kind are not available. DoD plans to prescribe this incremental subsistence allowance until payments may be fully offset by the annual increases in basic allowance for subsistence (BAS). CBO estimates that under DoD’s plan, additional subsistence payments would end in 2005. This section also would develop estimates of additional authority by three months, making termination effective on January 1, 2002, and saving an estimated $15 million in 2002. CBO estimates the combined effects of implementing these provisions would cost $6 million in 2002 and $32 million over the 2002–2006 period.

Under section 661, the Secretary of Defense could provide BAH for members of the Coast Guard Reserve. This authorization would cost about $50 million in 2002, and $230 million over the 2002–2006 period.
Section 536 would increase the number of international students authorized to be admitted to the United States to eliminate the restrictions on full tuition waivers. CBO estimates that this section would cost $17 million over the 2002-2006 period. Full tuition waivers would allow about 70 additional international students to receive full tuition assistance each year. This figure includes students who are not a citizen of a country with a small number of international slots made available under this section, as well as slots that are currently receiving only partial tuition assistance. The current cost of tuition for an international student is about $62,000 a year, and the annual cost of implementing this section would be $1 million.

Section 539 would provide DoD with the authority to allow certain military personnel the option to transfer up to 18 months of their entitlement to Montgomery GI Ed. (MGIB) educational assistance to any combination of spouse and children. To be eligible for this benefit, servicemembers would have to be in the military for at least six years in the Armed Forces, and to agree to serve an additional four or more years. Under section 539, the servicemember would receive a payment equal to the net present value of the transferred MGIB benefit into the Defense Education Trust Fund when a servicemember is granted this benefit. Under current law, participants in MGIB who serve at least three years on active duty are entitled to receive $650 a month if they are full-time students. CBO estimates that the value of 18 months of MGIB benefit would be $11,700 in 2002. In estimating the net present value of the transferred MGIB benefit, CBO assumes that one-third of the benefit transfers would be to spouses and two-thirds would be to children, that spouses would begin using the benefit after two years and children after 16 years, and that 75 percent of the amount available for transferring is being transferred and used. Using these assumptions, CBO estimates that the cost to DoD of the transferred benefit would be an average of $6,640 per person in 2002. Thus, the cost of the transferred benefit would be $7,365 in 2006.

CBO expects that DoD would use the authority in 2002 to enhance retention in those areas where the maximum authorized retention bonuses are currently being paid and that these areas will become the center of a larger population in subsequent years. Based on information from DoD, about 20,300 servicemembers, with six or more years of service, will receive selective enlistment bonus in 2002. Under section 539, CBO assumes that about 3,000 of those would receive the MGIB transfer benefit, and that this number would increase to 4,400 by 2006. Thus, CBO estimates implementing this provision would cost $20 million in 2002, and about $130 million over the 2002-2006 period. It would also be direct spending costs of about $91 million over the 2004-2006 period for outlays from the Defense Education Trust Fund as the MGIB benefit is transferred. CBO’s estimate of those outlays is discussed below under the heading of ‘Direct Spending.’

CBO notes that, because this section offers a benefit to the families of servicemembers, it is possible that the demand for equal treatment might increase and that this could affect the cost of this section. CBO estimates that this benefit would cost less than $200 million over the 2002-2006 period.

Defense Health Program. Title VII contains several provisions that would affect DoD’s health care program and the spending under Tricare for beneficiaries under age 65 is subject to appropriation. Specifcally, DoD estimates that about 7,365 beneficiaries under age 65 and over, often called Tricare for Life (TFL), is subject to appropriation in 2002, but beginning in 2003 this spending will be paid out of the trust fund and will not be subject to appropriation.

Payment Rates. Under current law, DoD has the regulatory authority to set maximum allowable rates for medical services to limit how much the Tricare program pays to health care providers. Although DoD has set maximum rates for many services, it has not yet set rates for hospital outpatient diagnostic services, including clinical lab work and radiation services, and long-term care services such as skilled nursing and home health care services. As a result, Tricare currently pays 75 percent of billed charges for these services. DoD has started the regulatory process for setting rates for the services listed here and estimates it will take upwards of two years to implement the changes by regulation.

Section 713 would require DoD to implement these rates by October 1, 2001. Under this provision, DoD would be able to lower its costs for both hospital outpatient and long-term care services in the 2002-2003 period before the regulations would have been implemented. These savings would affect spending subject to appropriation as well as direct spending for retirees of the other uniformed services in 2002 and 2003 and the TFL trust fund that starts operation in 2003. CBO estimates that the total savings in spending subject to appropriation for hospital outpatient and long-term care services would be about $230 million over the 2002-2003 period, assuming appropriations are reduced by the estimated amounts. Section 713 would affect two different programs: Tricare (under 65) and Tricare for Life. Those two effects are discussed below.

By lowering payment rates for hospital outpatient diagnostic services, DoD would be able to reduce spending on its beneficiaries under age 65. (This portion of the provision would affect beneficiaries under age 65 and over because Medicare is first payer for these services and TFL would only be responsible for the Medicare deductible and copayments.) Using data from DoD, CBO estimates that making payment rates for hospital outpatient diagnostic services equivalent to Medicare rates would lower Tricare spending for these services by about 30 percent. CBO estimates that lowering the payment rates for hospital outpatient services would save about $150 million over the 2002-2003 period, assuming appropriations are reduced by the estimated amounts.

Under section 713, DoD also would lower the cost of paid leave for home health care. This change would primarily affect the TFL program since beneficiaries under age 65 do not use much long-term care services. DoD estimates that section 713’s payment changes would be about $40 million in 2002,2003 and 2004 for DoD when the trust fund begins operation. CBO estimates that lowering payment rates for skilled nursing and home health services would save about $20 million in 2002, assuming appropriations are reduced by the estimated amounts. (There would be direct spending savings of about $7 million over the 2002-2003 period for the other uniformed services, and about $215 million in 2003 for DoD when the trust fund begins operation. CBO estimates of those savings are discussed below under the heading of ‘Direct Spending.’)

Long-term Care Rules. Tricare does not currently require a hospital stay prior to using long-term care services such as skilled nursing and home health care. Requiring prior hospitalizations would reduce the number of beneficiaries who use long-term care. DoD estimates that the regualtion would require prior hospitalizations for those beneficiaries who would have used long-term care and would save DoD the cost of providing this care over the 2002-2003 period before DoD’s new long-term care rules would have gone into effect under DoD’s plan. CBO estimates that some of those beneficiaries would likely be able to get their long-term care benefits under Medicare. In those instances, Medicare would become the first payer while a few beneficiaries would not be able to get their long-term care benefits. Taking this into account, the CBO estimates that implementation of this provision on October 1, 2001. Requiring prior hospitalization under Tricare’s long-term care program would save DoD, on a net basis, $80 million between 2002 and 2006 for those beneficiaries who would otherwise have used long-term care and would save DoD the cost of providing this care over the 2002-2003 period before DoD’s new long-term care rules would have gone into effect under DoD’s plan. CBO estimates that some of those beneficiaries would likely be able to get their long-term care benefits under Medicare. In those instances, Medicare would become the first payer while a few beneficiaries would end up using Medicaid. Thus the net effect would be a reduction in DoD’s cost by increased costs to both Medicare and Medicaid (discussed below).

Using data from DoD and the Agency for Healthcare Research and Quality, CBO estimates that about 3,500 beneficiaries, who would have used skilled nursing without a hospital stay, would be affected by these new rules along with about 24,000 beneficiaries who would have used home health care. CBO estimates that some of those beneficiaries would pay for the long-term care through Medicare or Medicaid, while others would pay the costs themselves, use other insurance, or do without the long-term care. For those beneficiaries who would be covered by Medicare, CBO estimates that the savings would be about $40 million in 2002, assuming appropriations are reduced by the estimated amounts. (There would be direct spending savings of about $7 million over the 2002-2003 period for both the trust fund and the other uniformed services in 2003 and Medicare and Medicaid costs in the 2002 and 2003.) traveling to the new doctor or hospital. Section 712 would require the Secretary of Defense, upon a reasonable determination that funds are needed, to provide a benefit at a rate of up to $25 million a year. CBO estimates that about 600 DOE employees would participate in the buyout program. CBO estimates that the total net savings from this provision would be about $75 million over the 2003–2011 period. (CBO assumes that enacting this provision also would increase direct spending for federal retirement and retiree health care benefits by $17 million over the 2003–2011 period.) CBO's estimate of those outlays is discussed below under the heading of "Direct Spending.")

Payment to World War II Slave Laborers. Section 1064 would authorize the Secretary of Veterans Affairs (VA) to pay a gratuity of $20,000 to certain veterans and civilians who were held as prisoners of war (POWs) or prisoners of Japan during World War II and sent to Japan to perform slave labor. Section 1064 also would authorize VA to pay this gratuity to a surviving spouse if the claimant is deceased. During the war, thousands of American POWs and civilians who were employees of the United States (either directly or through contractors) were forced to provide slave labor for Japanese corporations. While the precise number of people who might qualify for this gratuity is not known beyond the 60,000-off the books POWs and civilians who were members of the United States armed forces, CBO estimates that the net annual cost to compensate veterans and their surviving spouses would be about $118 million over the 2002–2006 period.

Purchase of Alternative Fuel Vehicles for DoD. Section 317 would increase the number of alternative-fuel light duty trucks purchased by DoD by not for fee in the Energy Policy Act of 1992. CBO estimates that implementing this section would cost about $23 million in fiscal year 2005 and would cost $44 million over the 2005–2006 period. Based on data from the General Services Administration (GSA), CBO estimates that about 11,500 light duty trucks are purchased annually for DoD use. CBO also estimates that to meet the levels specified in section 317, GSA would need to purchase about 850 alternative-fuel light duty trucks for DoD in 2005 and every year thereafter. These vehicles would be purchased in lieu of conventional gas or diesel vehicles and do not include vehicles purchased to satisfy the terms of the Energy Policy Act. Under current regulations, GSA has estimated that as many as 25,000 Americans were forced to perform slave labor for the Japanese government. While CBO has undertaken similar savings initiatives, it is unsure to what extent the savings targets could be met. CBO notes that enacting this provision also would authorize VA to pay this gratuity to a surviving spouse if the claimant is deceased. During the war, thousands of American POWs and civilians who were employees of the United States (either directly or through contractors) were forced to provide slave labor for Japanese corporations. While the precise number of people who might qualify for this gratuity is not known beyond the 60,000-off the books POWs and civilians who were members of the United States armed forces, CBO estimates that the net annual cost to compensate veterans and their surviving spouses would be about $118 million over the 2002–2006 period.

Purchase of Alternative Fuel Vehicles for DoD. Section 317 would increase the number of alternative-fuel light duty trucks purchased by DoD by not for fee in the Energy Policy Act of 1992. CBO estimates that implementing this section would cost about $23 million in fiscal year 2005 and would cost $44 million over the 2005–2006 period. Based on data from the General Services Administration (GSA), CBO estimates that about 11,500 light duty trucks are purchased annually for DoD use. CBO also estimates that to meet the levels specified in section 317, GSA would need to purchase about 850 alternative-fuel light duty trucks for DoD in 2005 and every year thereafter. Direct Spending. The bill contains provisions that would reduce direct spending, primarily through revisions to payments rates for certain defense health care program services and certain asset sales from the National Defense Stockpile. The bill also contains a few provisions with direct spending costs. On balance, CBO estimates that enacting S. 1416 would result in net savings in direct spending totaling $209 million over the 2002–2005 period (see Table 2).

Medical Care Trust Fund. Sections 703 and 713 would change the way DoD administers long-term care and would authorize VA to pay long-term care under the Tricare for Life program. DoD has the regulatory authority to make the changes that are directed in these sections but thinks it will take upwards of two years to implement the changes by regulation. Both sections would require that the changes take effect on October 1, 2001. Accordingly, the DoD would make payments under the new rules for two years, starting October 1, 2001.

Payment Rates. Under current regulations, the Tricare for Life program will pay 75 percent of billed charges, with no maximum charge, until the beneficiary has paid $3,000 in out-of-pocket costs and then

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE September 25, 2001
The Tricare for Life program also covers retired members of the Coast Guard and retired uniformed members of the Public Health Service and the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration. Health care spending for these retirees is considered direct spending. Under section 713, CBO estimates that implementing new provisions that would allow the DoD and DoE to offer voluntary separation incentives and voluntary early retirement to their civilian employees would save about $2 million in 2002 and $5 million in 2003.

Long-Term Care Rules. Under current law, Medicare will not pay for skilled nursing and home health care unless the beneficiary has been hospitalized before receiving that care. Tricare, on the other hand, will pay for long-term care without a prior hospitalization. For those cases, Tricare becomes the primary insurance because Medicare will not pay. Section 703 would require DoD to structure its long-term care benefits to resemble Medicare’s, which requires prior hospitalization. Implementing this provision would lower DoD’s costs because fewer beneficiaries would be eligible for skilled nursing and home health care. CBO estimates that under section 703, direct spending from the trust fund would decline by about $120 million in 2003. (There would also be discretionary savings of about $40 million, as discussed earlier.)

The Tricare for Life program would be able to lower costs by shifting many of those costs to DoD’s beneficiaries and other government programs, primarily Medicare. CBO estimates that about 50 percent of individuals who would have used long-term care without a prior hospital stay would be able to qualify under the Medicare rules (about 1,600 for skilled nursing and about 12,000 for home health care). CBO further estimates that the average cost of skilled nursing is about $250 a day, and for home health care about $2,300 for 60 days of care, which is the Medicare benefit. Accordingly, CBO estimates that under section 703, direct spending for Medicare benefits would increase by $30 million in 2002 and $70 million in 2003. In addition, a few beneficiaries would eventually become eligible for Medicaid, which also provides long-term care benefits. CBO estimates that Medicaid costs based on Medicare rates would lower what DoD pays for skilled nursing and home health care by about 30 percent. Under section 713, CBO estimates that direct spending from the trust fund for DoD retirees would decline by about $215 million in 2003. (The discretionary savings for 2003 associated with the buyout payments were discussed earlier in the “Spending Subject to Appropriation” section under the heading of “Voluntary Separation and Early Retirement Incentives.”)

The Tricare for Life program would also reduce the DoD’s share of the premium for these retirees—unlike current employees—under the FEHB program. Because many of those accepting the buyouts would convert from being an employee to being a retiree earlier than under current law, mandatory spending for FEHB benefits would increase. CBO estimates these additional FEHB benefits would increase direct spending by $6 million in 2003 and $12 million over the 2003–2011 period.

CBO estimates that implementing new provisions that would allow the DoD to offer voluntary separation incentives and voluntary early retirement to their civilian employees, taken together, would result in additional direct spending for federal retirement and retiree health care benefits by $44 million in 2003 and $62 million over the 2003–2011 period. Section 1113 would provide DoD with authority to offer its civilian employees early retirement annuities as well as separation incentive payments of up to $25,000 for employees who voluntarily retire or resign in fiscal year 2003. The authority under this section is provided only during fiscal year 2003 and is limited to 4,000 employees. CBO estimates that enacting section 1113 would increase direct spending for federal retirement and retiree health care benefits by $44 million in 2003 and $62 million over the 2003–2011 period.

Section 3153 would provide DOE with authority to offer payments of up to $25,000 to employees who voluntarily retire or resign in calendar year 2003. Current buyout authority for DOE is scheduled to expire on December 31, 2002. CBO estimates enacting section 3153 would increase direct spending for federal retirement and retiree health care benefits by $6 million in 2003 and $16 million during the 2003–2011 period.

DoD Retirement Spending. Section 1113 also would increase direct spending on federal retiree health benefits because many employees who accept the buyouts would continue to be eligible for coverage under the FEHB program. The government’s share of the premium for these retirees—unlike current employees—is mandatory spending. Because many of those accepting the buyouts would convert from being an employee to being a retiree earlier than under current law, mandatory spending for FEHB benefits would increase. CBO estimates these additional FEHB benefits would increase direct spending by $6 million in 2003 and $12 million over the 2003–2011 period.

Table 4 displays the estimated direct spending from health care and other provisions in S. 1416, as reported.

2 Less than $500,000.

Note: Values represent spending in millions of dollars.
Public Law 106–398, which enacted the Floyd D. Spence National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2002, CBO estimates that enacting this provision would increase direct spending for EEOICP by about $15 million over the 2002–2006 period, and $35 million over the 2002–2009 period. CBO assumes these payments would be spread evenly throughout the 2002–2009 period because screening programs are still ongoing and will need several years to identify all potential claimants.

Additionally, under current law, once a claimant is certified as eligible to receive an EEOICP benefit, the claim is payable for all medical bills related to a claimant's condition. CBO estimates that the average annual cost for treatment of chronic silicosis is between $30,000 and $50,000, depending on the severity of the disease. The CBO estimates that medical costs paid under EEOICP would increase direct spending by about $15 million in 2002, $35 million over the 2002–2006 period, and $21 million over the 2002–2011 period.

Section 3151 also would make other changes to EEOICP. The age requirement for those claimants afflicted with leukemia attributable to occupational exposure to radiation would be lowered to include those whose initial exposure occurred before age 21. CBO estimates that lowering the age requirement would create a negligible number of additional claims. Section 3151 also would clarify that the death of a survivor of former energy workers, including widows, widowers, parents, grandparents, and siblings can claim the payment if they can prove dependency on the deceased employee. Section 3151 would allow these other relatives to make such claims without proving dependency. CBO estimates that only about 0.5 percent of all survivors would be someone other than a widow or child, generating about 25 additional claims. CBO estimates that the relaxed restrictions on survivors would increase direct spending for EEOICP by less than $1 million in 2002, and $4 million over the 2002–2006 period. CBO expects that almost all these additional claims would be paid in the 2002–2006 period.

Transfer of Entitlement to MGIB Education Assistance. Section 539 would provide DoD with the authority to allow certain military retirees to transfer 18 months of their entitlement to MGIB educational assistance to any combination of spouse and children. To be eligible, service members would have to have met either certain physical skill or specialty, to have served at least six years in the Armed Forces, and to agree to serve an additional four or more years. An amount no less than $50,000 of the net present value of the transferability option would be deposited into the Defense Education Trust Fund when a service member was granted this benefit, and would be paid to the Secretary of Veterans Affairs as the benefit was used. The monies deposited into the trust fund are subject to appropriation. Monies transferred under this section would be subject to the heading of “Spending Subject to Appropriation.”

CBO expects that DoD would use the authority in section 539 to transfer entitlements to beneficiaries where the maximum authorized reten- tion bonuses are currently being paid and that the benefit would be offered to a larger number of personnel on the basis of a demonstration of the fiscal benefit to DoD. Based on information from DoD, about 20,000 service members, with six or more years of service, will receive a selective re-enlistment bonus in 2002. Under section 539, CBO as- sumes that about 3,000 of those would receive the MGIB transferability benefit, and that this number would increase to 7,100 by 2011. CBO also assumes that two-thirds of the transfers would be used by children. Since most selective re-enlistment bonuses go to service members with 10 or fewer years of service, few of their children would be of an age to use post-secondary education benefits over the next 10 years. CBO's estimate of mandatory outlays for this benefit, therefore, is based on the use of the remaining one-third of the transfers that would go to spouses.

CBO expects the spouses would, on average, begin training two years after the transferability option was granted, and that they would train, on a part-time basis, over a period of 12 months. Assuming these assumptions as base cases, CBO estimates that about 700 spouses would receive an average annual benefit of $2,400 in 2004 and that, by 2011, almost 840 spouses would receive an annual MGIB ben- efit of about $2,800. Thus, CBO estimates that enacting this provision would increase direct spending for MGIB education benefits by $2.2 billion in 2004. Based on CBO's assumptions, CBO estimates that the conveyance provision would increase such spending by about $1 billion in 2002, and $6 billion over the 2002–2009 period. CBO expects that DoD would use the authority in section 539 to enhance retention in those population in subsequent years. Based on in- formation from DoD, CBO estimates that other conveyances would not significantly affect offsetting re- ceipts because according to DoD some of the properties have values of less than $500,000 while others are not likely to be transferred to GSA for disposal.

Concurrent Receipt. Under passage of qualifying offsetting legislation, section 651 would allow total or partial concurrent payment of retirement annuities together with veteran's disability compensation from the Department of Veterans Affairs. Under this prohibition on concurrent receipt, such vet- erans forgo a portion of their retirement annu- ity equal to the nontaxable veterans' ben- efit.

Section 651 would become effective only upon passage of legislation that would fully offset the costs in each of the first 10 fiscal years after passage of the offsetting legislation. If qualifying, offsetting legislation were enacted in 2001, CBO estimates that im- plementing this section would increase direct spending for retirement pay- ments and veterans' disability compensation by about $3 billion in 2002, $17 billion over the 2002–2006 period, and $91 billion over the 2004–2011 period. Because those effects are contingent upon subsequent legislation, they are not included in Table 1.

In addition, the military retirement sys- tem is financed in part by an annual payment from appropriated funds to the military retirement trust fund, based on an estimate of the system's accruing liabilities. If section 651 were implemented, the yearly contribution to the military retirement trust fund (an outlay in budget function 180) would increase to reflect the added liability from the expected increase in annuities to future retirees. CBO estimates that implementing this provision would increase such payments by about $1 billion in 2002, and $6 billion over the 2002–2006 period, assuming appropriation of the necessary amounts.

The projected increase in current service members would have an insignificant budgetary impact on direct spending:

CBO would conduct a pilot program for the sale of air pollution emission reduc- tion incentives. DoD would be allowed to spend all receipts less than $500,000 on envi- ronmental programs. Receipts above $500,000 would go to the Treasury.

Section 505 would allow officers whose mandatory retirement has been deferred for medical reasons to further postpone their re- tirement for up to 30 days.
Section 515 would allow disability retirement for reservists whose disability was incurred or aggravated while remaining overnight before inactive-duty training, or between successive periods of such training. Currently, reservists are only covered during overnight periods and have to return to outside reasonable commuting distance of their residences.

Section 552 would require the military to review the records of certain Jewish American war veterans to determine if any of these veterans should be awarded the Medal of Honor. A $950 a month pension is available to living Medal of Honor recipients. Based on similar reviews in the past, CBO estimates that a small number of awards would be presented (many posthumously), resulting in an increase in direct spending of less than $500,000 a year.

Section 586 would allow DoD to accept voluntary legal services as a way to provide legal help to DoD beneficiaries. Although the service is voluntary, in the event of a legal malpractice suit the government would be liable for any claims against the legal volunteer. Payment of those claims is considered direct spending, but CBO estimates that this provision would cost less than $500,000 each year.

Section 1112 would provide federal retirement credit to certain former employees of Nonappropriated Fund Instrumentalities (NAFI). Under current law, most workers who transfer from NAFI employment to regular federal employment may transfer any NAFI retirement service credits earned as NAFI employees to the appropriate federal retirement program. However, under certain circumstances, some former NAFI employees have not been permitted to transfer NAFI retirement credits to their federal service. Section 1111 would permit many of these employees to use NAFI credits that otherwise would not have been credited to their federal service in order to qualify for retirement annuities under the Civil Service Retirement System or the Federal Employees’ Retirement System.

Although workers would be able to use these credits in order to qualify for federal retirement benefits earlier than they would have otherwise, the provision mandates that annuities be actuarially reduced. The actuarial reduction would be calculated such a way that the present value of a retiree’s benefits would be actuarially equivalent to the value of the annuity that would have been provided without the NAFI service credit. Information provided by the Department of Defense and Office of Personal Management indicates that only between 5 and 15 employees would claim NAFI service credit under this provision in any given year. Therefore, CBO estimates that Section 1111 would increase direct spending for federal retirement benefits by less than $500,000 a year.

Section 1112 would provide greater pension portability for certain civilian employees that transferred from NAFI to DoD. These employees would receive a transition benefit, which would be calculated as the present value of their transition benefit. The provision would eliminate the requirement that workers who move between a NAFI employer and the civil service must be fully vested in order to transfer any accrued service credits from one retirement system to another. According to the Department of Defense, relatively few workers would be affected by this provision; thus, CBO estimates that Section 1112 would increase direct spending by less than $500,000 per year.

Section 2804 would expand DoD’s ability to substitute in-kind payments for cash from the lease of its property. The provision would raise direct spending because it would lower the amount of cash that DoD receives from these sales and deposits in the Treasury as offsetting receipts. CBO estimates that offsetting receipts would total less than $500,000 annually.

Asset Sales

The bill would authorize various asset sales totaling $144 million over the 2002-2006 period.

National Defense Stockpile. Section 3301 would authorize DoD to sell certain materials contained in the National Defense Stockpile that are obsolete or excess to stockpile requirements. CBO estimates that DoD would be able to sell the materials at approximately $175 million. There is significant uncertainty as to whether all six vessels would be sold and what the sale price might reflect. Therefore, CBO estimates that receipts from these sales would total $18 million in 2002 and $82 million in 2003.

Naval Vessels. Section 1216 would authorize the transfer of 13 naval vessels to foreign countries. It would authorize the sale of six vessels; the other seven would be given away. Information from DoD indicates that the asking price for the six authorized to be sold would be approximately $175 million. According to the Department of Defense, relatively few workers would be affected by this provision; thus, CBO estimates that Section 1112 would increase direct spending by less than $500,000 per year.

Pay-as-you-go considerations: The Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act sets up pay-as-you-go procedures for legislation affecting direct spending or receipts. The net changes in direct spending that are subject to pay-as-you-go procedures are shown in Table 5. For the purposes of enforcing pay-as-you-go procedures, only the effects in the current year, the budget year, and the succeeding four years are counted.

Intergovernmental and private-sector impact: Section 4 of the Unfunded Mandates Reform Act excludes from the application of that act any legislative provisions that enforce the constitutional rights of individuals. CBO has determined that subtitle F (Uniformed Services Overseas Voting) of title V is excluded provisions that enforce an individual’s constitutional right to vote.

Section 1062 of the bill would prohibit possession of significant former military equipment that has not been demilitarized and require the Secretary of Defense to notify the Attorney General of any known cases of persons holding equipment. The Attorney General would be given the authority to require holders of such equipment either to ensure that the equipment is demilitarized or returned to DoD for demilitarization. In either case, those requirements would be considered mandates. If the equipment is not returned to DoD for demilitarization, the recovered must be the costs, resulting in an increase in direct spending. However, the instances in

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma.

AMENDMENT NO. 1995

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, I have amendment No. 1995 before the Senate. I am very distressed right now over some things that are happening. I have an amendment before the Senate that will change our relationship with and the understanding many people have concerning the island of Vieques. The island of Vieques has been a live range for us for over 50 years. It has had a very successful record. There has only been one civilian killed during that period. Contrast that with a range in the State of Oklahoma. In the State of Oklahoma we have had a live range much longer than that, and we have lost eight civilians during that period of time—because of purely political reasons and in a lust for the votes and a mistaken notion that if you vote to close a range as a result of people who are protesting, breaking the law, people who are former terrorists, such as Mrs. Lebron, who led a bunch of terrorists into the House of Representatives many years ago and opened fire, wounding five of our Members of the House of Representatives, and others now protesting, trespassing, trespassing on property that we own, property owned by the U.S. Navy, where we train our troops for their deployments from the east coast to the Persian Gulf.

Whereas battle groups to the Persian Gulf, those troops are going to see combat. The chances are better than 50-50 they will see combat. They have relied on this live-fire training for a long time. It has always been there. It is the only place we can do that type of training. We have had all kinds of committees to find another place that is just as good, but they cannot do it.

The reason they cannot find a new range is because there has to be unified training; a battle group of aircraft carriers and the F-14s, F-18s, using live munitions, bombing, and at the same time our Navy using live munitions, and at the same time our Marine expeditionary units going in under that live fire.

For those of us in this room—and I do not know how many besides the two I am looking at have actually been in the service—there is a huge difference between inert and live ammunition. I can remember when I was in basic training. It is easy to crawl under that barbed wire when it is not real bullets, but when it is real ammunition, that is different. That is exactly what we have to have to train these people who are going off to the Persian Gulf.

We have been unable to do it because of the range closure. It is the first time in the history of America we have allowed a bunch of illegal protestors to change our policy. They will not be successful, but if they were successful, think about our other ranges. I have talked to the chiefs of every service. The Air Force is in desperate need of ranges right now.

I have talked to people in Lawton, OK. There are 100,000 people who live right next to a live range, and a few of them said: All you have to do is protest and they close the range?

There is a clear right and wrong. I have 2½ years of my life in this issue. I have been around the world. I have looked at every possible area where we could have an alternative training source and found that you cannot put live F-18s over there and let them go to England or some place and drop their loads. Let us train out here with live fire and let us let the marines train over in this area, and I was suggesting at least that notion to some of the Navy pilots that were on one of the—this is probably over a year ago—on one of the aircraft carriers on which they were supposed to be training, and he said, well, wait a minute, that is like having the very best football players you can have anywhere in the world; you have the best quarterback, the best halfback, the best defense but they never scrimmage together. So what happens on the day of the opening game? They lose it. They have to train together.

Now, people say you get the same training with inert. You do not get the same training with inert, but when we allowed that bunch of illegal trespassers to take us out of live fire and put us at a different place, American lives. Did we lose these lives because of that? Yes, we did. They had to go over and they were trying to carry out an exercise in Kuwait. It did not work, and six people died, five of whom were Americans.

I have the investigation. It shows clearly those individuals who were unable to have live fire training—they had inert training on Vieques but not live fire training. There is a huge difference. Talk to anyone in the Navy who has to handle those live missiles. When they are deploying them, when they are handling live ordnance, it is a big difference from inert. Anyway, we have already lost that many, and I am hoping we will be able to resolve this problem.

I say to Senator CORZINE, I think the votes are there to pass his amendment. If we did that, we would be closing the range and at the same time we would be giving that responsibility to the President on a year-by-year basis. If one stops and thinks about the 200-and-some ranges we have, if the President had to go through and debate this every year as to whether or not to allow that range to stay open as a live range, he would not have time to do anything else. That would not work.

Secondly, that puts politics right back in it. My amendment is a good amendment. It said call off the referendum. We should never have had a referendum. Then it says we will use the range we own—and at this very time we are in the middle of war—to train our troops until such time as both the CNO of the Navy and the commandant of the Marine Corps certify we do not need it. Those are military people. They are not political people.

I have this gnawing feeling that the way this is worded I would lose that amendment, and rather than have the Corzine language in there, we are far better off not to have any language at all.

I regretfully say I think we will end up in the same situation as we would be if we passed this amendment, or if we did not pass it or if we just left it like it is in conference.

As we speak, in Puerto Rico they are considering a resolution. That resolution says we, Puerto Ricans, as proud Americans—being citizens, having responsibilities as our brethren in the continental United States, have the obligation of contributing to this fight, allowing and supporting military training and exercises in the island municipality of Vieques.

This may not pass. It is being debated right now. But certainly there is a very large number of people saying—and that number is much larger today after September 11 than it was before—we are American citizens with the same rights and responsibilities as our brethren in the continental United States, have the obligation of contributing to this fight, allowing and supporting military training and exercises in the island municipality of Vieques.

That is my situation. That is the dilemma that we have.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, will the Senator yield for a question?

Mr. INHOFE. I will be glad to yield. Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, frankly, there is no Senator in this Chamber, on either side of the aisle, who has worked more conscientiously on this extremely complex issue than our distinguished colleague from Oklahoma, Mr. INHOFE, had indicated to him I felt his amendment was one that certainly merited my support, and my support remains. I wonder if we laid his amendment aside, perhaps in further consultations we could come up with some affirmative position that fostered, No. 1, the current obvious willingness among responsible people in Puerto Rico to recognize the extenuating circumstances in which our American servicemen are now preparing to embark. For various points worldwide in response to an issue taken by a very courageous and bold President of the United States. I wonder if we could lay it aside, enabling as Senator from Oklahoma to counsel with our colleague from New Jersey in the hopes that perhaps he could reach a position again that would foster the strengthening of this opportunity to continue the use of this base as the Puerto Ricans at the present time are doing.

Mr. INHOFE. I appreciate that counsel, and I think it is very wise counsel. If I could count the votes, and I knew I could defeat the Corzine amendment and have mine, I would do it, but I think we would be in far worse shape if we had that language.

For that reason, I am down to two choices: one to go ahead and withdraw my amendment, and the other to lay it aside as we can talk to see if something can happen. I think I will choose the latter and ask at this time to lay aside amendment No. 1395 for a period of time.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, the chairman of the committee and I will confer on what matter we next have at hand.

Mr. LEVIN. I wonder if we have any cleared amendments we can take up?

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Michigan.

AMENDMENT NO. 1677

Mr. LEVIN, for himself, and Mr. HUTCHINSON, I offer an amendment which would give the Secretary of Defense direct hiring authority for certain health care professionals, and I believe this amendment has been cleared by the other side.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, the amendment has been cleared.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the amendment.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

"The Senator from Michigan [Mr. LEVIN], for Mr. CLELAND, for himself, and Mr. HUTCHINSON, proposes an amendment numbered 1677.

Mr. LEVIN. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment as follows:

(Purpose: To authorize the Secretary of Defense to exempt certain health care professionals from examination for appointment in the competitive civil service.)"

On page 377, between lines 3 and 4, insert the following:

SEC. 1124. AUTHORITY TO EXEMPT CERTAIN HEALTH CARE PROFESSIONALS FROM EXAMINATION FOR APPOINTMENT IN THE COMPETITIVE CIVIL SERVICE.

(a) AUTHORITY TO EXEMPT.—Chapter 81 of title 10, United States Code, is amended by adding at the end the following new section:

"§ 1599d. Appointment in competitive civil service of certain health care professionals: exemption from examination.

"(a) AUTHORITY TO EXEMPT.—The Secretary of Defense may appoint in the competitive civil service without regard to the provisions of subsection (c) of chapter 33 of title 5 of this title (other than sections 3303, 3321, and 3328 of such title) an individual who has a recognized degree or certificate from an accredited institution in a covered health-care profession or occupation.

"(b) COVERED HEALTH-CARE PROFESSION OR OCCUPATION.—For purposes of subsection (a), a covered health-care profession or occupation is any of the following:

"(1) Physician.

"(2) Dentist.

"(3) Podiatrist.

"(4) Optometrist.

"(5) Pharmacist.

"(6) Nurse.

"(7) Physician assistant.

"(8) Audiologist.

"(9) Expanded-function dental auxiliary.

"(10) Dental hygienist.

"(c) PREFERENCES IN HIRING.—In using the authority provided by this section, the Secretary shall apply the principles of preference for the hiring of veterans and other persons established in subsection 1 of chapter 33 of title 5.

(b) CLERICAL AMENDMENT.—The table of sections at the beginning of such chapter is amended by adding at the end the following new item:

"1599d. Appointment in competitive civil service of certain health care professionals: exemption from examination."

Mr. WARNER. We both urge adoption of the amendment.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. If there is no further debate, the question is on agreeing to the amendment.

The amendment (No. 1677) was agreed to.

Mr. LEVIN. I move to reconsider the vote by which the amendment was agreed to.

Mr. WARNER. I move to lay that motion on the table.

The motion to lay on the table was agreed to.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report.

The assistant legislative clerk read as follows:

"The Senator from Michigan [Mr. WARNER], for himself, and Mr. LANDRIEU, and Mr. ALARD, proposes an amendment numbered 1678.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent that reading of the amendment be dispensed with.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The amendment is as follows:

SEC. 718. MODIFICATION OF PROHIBITION ON REQUIREMENT OF NONAVAILABILITY STATEMENT OR PREAUTHORIZATION.

(b) REPEAL OF REQUIREMENT FOR NOTIFICATION REGARDING HEALTH CARE RECEIVED FROM ANOTHER SOURCE.—Subsection (b) of such section is repealed.

(c) WAIVER AUTHORITY.—Such section, as so amended, is further amended by striking subsections (c) and inserting the following:

"(c) WAIVER AUTHORITY.—The Secretary may waive the prohibition in subsection (a) if:

"(1) the Secretary—

"(A) demonstrates that significant costs would be avoided by performing specific procedures at the affected military medical treatment facility or facilities;

"(B) determines that a specific procedure will be affected by the decision to grant a waiver under this subsection;

"(C) determines that the lack of nonavailability statement data would significantly interfere with TRICARE contract administration;

"(2) the Secretary provides notification of the Secretary's intent to grant a waiver under this subsection to covered beneficiaries who receive care at the military medical treatment facility or facilities that will be affected by the decision to grant a waiver under this subsection;

"(3) the Secretary notifies the Committees on Armed Services of the House of Representatives and the Senate of the Secretary's intent to grant a waiver under this subsection, the reason for the waiver, and the date that a nonavailability statement will be required; and

"(4) 60 days have elapsed since the date of the notification described in paragraph (3).

(d) DELAY OF EFFECTIVE DATE.—Subsection (d) of such section is amended—

"(1) by striking “take effect on October 1, 2001" and inserting “be effective beginning on the date that is two years after the date of the enactment of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2002”; and

"(2) by redesignating the subsection as subsection (c)."

REPORT.—Not later than March 1, 2002, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to the Committees on Armed Services of the House of Representatives and the Senate a report on the Secretary's plans for implementing section 721 of the Floyd D. Spence National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2001, as amended by this section.

MEDICAL TECHNOLOGY

Ms. COLLINS. Mr. President, I rise today to bring to the attention of our distinguished chairman of the Senate..."
Armed Services Committee an issue that we must consider as potential military action is taken to address our national crisis. There are many aspects to consider in taking care of our warriors, sailors, airmen and Marines who are sent into harm’s way. However, there is an immediate and critical area that may not seem like a high priority in these times of deployment and mobilization of forces. It is an area that should not be overlooked. That is the battlefield. I am speaking of medical technology and research as it concerns the personnel who fight and risk their lives for each of us.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, I have recently been made aware of two efforts that could dramatically improve the current medical challenges involved in blood and tissue preservation. These programs would aim to develop stable blood products, organs, and wound-repairing tissues that could enhance human survivability under conditions of trauma, shock, anoxia and other extreme conditions that are common in combat.

Mr. LIN. Mr. President, The Senator from Maine is quite correct in her observation and assessment that medical treatment is a part of war that sometimes may be taken for granted, and that the medical care of our service men and women is an area of defense that should not be overlooked. Particularly in the area of military combat casualty care, the Department must consider any initiative that could have benefits for saving the lives of men and women whose service to our nation puts them at risk of severe injury.

Ms. COLLINS. I have recently been briefed on these two medical research efforts and would like to offer a couple of comments on their potential impact on combat casualty care. They are research initiatives by our research laboratories and universities across the country, which could provide a unique capability to develop new tissue products that are vitally important for the military. Recent U.S. military actions have resulted in stationing troops in harsh climates, from Kuwait to Bosnia to Saudi Arabia. Future locations and missions will require new capabilities in combat casualty care, and these capabilities would include stable blood products, organs, and wound repair tissues that will enhance human survivability under conditions of trauma, shock, anoxia and other extreme conditions that are common in combat.

These projects aim to develop tissue with a long shelf life that are necessary for combat casualty care. Additionally, the research would serve as a large-scale source of murine models for the scientific community to utilize mouse genetics in understanding how the products of multiple genes interact to develop and maintain entire physiological systems. I would strongly urge the Department to investigate research that would permit the long-term storage of blood cells and tissues in deployed environments.

Mr. LEVIN. I thank the distinguished Senator from Maine for highlighting the critical nature of this research, and for voicing her support for investments in the well-being of a most precious national asset—our men and women in uniform, who will fight and risk their lives for each of us.

Mr. WARNER. Mr. President, this authorizes the Secretary of Defense to waive the prohibition against waiving statements of nonavailability to authorized health care services other than mental health services of beneficiaries receiving care under TRICARE standard. It is my understanding this amendment is cleared on both sides.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The question is on agreeing to the amendment.

WARNER, for taking the first step toward ensuring that disabled families of our active-duty military have greater access to the health care they deserve. The first amendment I intend to offer is another step toward achieving that goal.

Early last year, a young man in the U.S. Air Force, SGT Faye, drove over 12 hours with his wife and disabled 4-year-old child to give him the care he needed. This amendment makes his case one of many in a situation facing many military families. We know how far we have come, over many decades, to guarantee that disabled people have the health care and independence they need to be participants of their communities. Our military families with disabled dependents should not be denied that opportunity. These improvements to TRICARE are some of the most significant steps we can take in this Congress. They offer a new and better life to large numbers of military families.

This amendment addresses the needs of our military families, but from a different angle. It relates to the needs of the families of servicemen and women who face these very same circumstances. We clearly know that servicemen and women should not have to worry about finding adequate health care for their children, especially when their children have a disability. Half of all the members of the Armed Forces are married, more than half have children, and many of those children are under 10 years of age. As in any population, a number of those children are special needs children and require the services I have outlined. This amendment ensures that servicemen and women don’t have to go to Medicaid to get the health care their children need.

We know how far we have come, over many decades, to guarantee that disabled people have the health care and independence they need to be participants of their communities. Our military families with disabled dependents should not be denied that opportunity. These improvements to TRICARE are some of the most significant steps we can take in this Congress. They offer a new and better life to large numbers of military families. I commend Senator CLELAND, who did a great deal of work in this area and provided great leadership in the development of a number of different programs to reach out to children with special needs. This amendment gives servicemen and women and their disabled family members the health care they need.

My other amendment also addresses the needs of our military families, but from a different angle. It relates to the needs of the families of servicemen and women who will be impacted by the call up of the National Guard and Reserve components. As we examine the immediate and long-term needs of our military, we cannot forget the families, especially the children, whose daily lives and routines are disrupted by their parents’ commitments to preserving America’s freedoms. Husbands and wives, parents and children, will be separated more frequently and for longer periods during the coming months and years. These separations will be filled with uncertainty about the safety of their loved ones, and the families will be profoundly affected.

Today, over half of the active-duty members that have children. There are 2 million family members of active-duty personnel and 900,000 family members of those in the Reserve. There are nearly half a million children under the age of 6 of active-duty members, and a majority need some type of child care. Families of reservists will also be affected because they often lack the support provided by military installations. Reserve members are located in more than 4,000 communities nationwide. More than half of them live at least 75 miles from a military installation. Support is especially critical to provide needed assistance to these geographically isolated families.

This amendment uses the lessons of the Persian Gulf War and Bosnia and Herzegovina to authorize additional wartime support for military families. Included are provisions for child care and youth programs and family support programs, such as parent education, to help families cope with the stress of deployments. It also provides assistance for Reserve families geographically separated from military installations, as well as support for security for DOD schools and children’s facilities in areas of high risk for terrorist attacks. We have a number of children attending schools that are off base that come to mind immediately. In Turkey, children of U.S. service members ride in buses through areas which could put these children at risk should there be a need to be in a facility.

Many husbands and wives share child care responsibilities. When a service member deploys, the burden is left to one spouse, and in some cases a guardian. The need for child care is greater. If a spouse works irregular hours, such as nights or weekends, the challenge is even more difficult. In many instances, the base operating hours are extended and longer shifts are required. Additional operating funds are needed for the non-traditional care in centers and family child care home care.

Guard and Reserve families do not typically live close to the military bases where they can obtain military child care. We should do all we can to offer these families the same assistance with child care that we are offering active-duty personnel on their bases. We can do so through a cooperative agreement with The National Resource and Referral networks. Modeled on a project called “AmeriCorps Care” established by the National Service Corporation. Child care assistance can be provided on the same sliding fee scale available to military families on base. This step will prevent financial hardships for many young reservists called to active duty.

With parents not available, youth, especially young teens, are stranded, with no place to go after school or no way to get to after school activities. Families not located close to installations find child care problems after school. Youth are often left home alone after school. During Desert Storm, to help give parents peace of mind that children were engaged in positive after school activities, transportation and activities were provided free to over 17,500 Guard and Reserve families through a partnership between DOD and the Boys and Girls Clubs of America. The youths participated in after school programs, sports and recreational activities, and received help with homework. We ought to be prepared to provide those kinds of services to these Guard and Reserve families. This is what was done during the Persian Gulf War, and it was good for the morale of the Reserve and the Guard who were serving overseas.

My amendment doesn’t reinvent the wheel. We had many of these programs in place before. We simply need to reauthorize them for today’s deployments.
During Desert Storm, additional aid funds were provided to civilian community schools when large units were deployed. We also learned during Desert Storm that there is a need for counselors for family support activities. This amendment authorizes the additional funds for counselors.

There are serious school security issues on our overseas bases, including safety on school buses in foreign countries. Approximately 40 percent of military families living overseas live off their bases. Their children are bused to schools, either on the base, or, in many cases, to schools in unprotected foreign communities that are potential targets for terrorist attacks. We also need to fund bus safety personnel and equipment for school buses to ensure the personnel are adequately trained to identify risk.

Military families face an extended period of anxiety and sacrifice for our Nation. It is our responsibility to ensure they have the support they need in the face of this extreme danger and sacrifice.

I urge the Senate, when we have the opportunity, to support my amendments.

Mr. President, I ask unanimous consent the order for the quorum call be rescinded. The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BOND. Mr. President, I rise today not to offer an amendment but, first, to express my thanks and appreci- ation to the managers of the bill for responding to a concern that I raised. I have spoken with Chairman LEVIN, and his staff, Senator WARNER, and his staff, as well as Chairman INOUYE and Senator STEVENS, and the Defense De- partment about the concern I have over our industrial base for the produc- tion of tactical fighters.

It seems to me that the tragedy of September 11 brings with it the realiza- tion that we are in a long contest with terrorist elements. We are in a long, drawn out contest that may require us to provide all kinds of responses. The tactical aircraft we are planning to build in the fu- ture is just one of the tactical aircraft that we might have to provide in years beyond.

So it is my concern that when the competition for the joint strike fighter—the JSF—is over, that if one of the two contestants—Boeing and Lockheed Martin are competing—is selected, if there is not production and an active role for the second one, we would be left with only one major producer of tactical aircraft.

It is for that reason I have raised the concern that, either before or after the contract is let, the Defense Depart- ment and both contractors must be willing to agree that production will go on in both facilities.

Boeing and Lockheed Martin are this country’s sole remaining tactical air- craft manufacturers. Whoever wins the contract will have a long-term foothold in tactical aircraft manufacturing due to the very large number of aircraft ex- pected to be built for both here at home and the overseas market.

If nothing else happens, whoever loses out of the jet fighter business, in about 10 years, when our current pro- duction of F-22s, F-16s, and FA-18s will about 10 years, when our current pro- duction of F-22s, F-16s, and FA-18s will

Mr. WARNER. The competitiveness exhibited by Boeing and Lockheed Martin in the JSF competition has been good for the U.S. and for our military forces. With- out competition we would be left with just one military house capable of pro- viding the full line of services neces- sary to build whatever aircraft will follow. And the JSF, while it is the state of the art now, will not be the state of the art 10, 20, 30 years from now.

September 25, 2001 CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE 17853

The competitiveness exhibited by Boeing and Lockheed Martin in the JSF competition has been good for the U.S. and for our military forces. Mr. WARNER. The competitiveness exhibited by Boeing and Lockheed Martin in the JSF competition has been good for the U.S. and for our military forces. With- out competition we would be left with just one military house capable of pro- viding the full line of services neces- sary to build whatever aircraft will follow. criteria set by the Department of Defense.

My concern is what happens on the next complex tactical aircraft program we build. I am a big fan of Boeing; I am a big fan of Lockheed Martin—the two finest producers in the world. One of them happens to be located in my State; one of them happens to be located in the President’s State. Both companies have excellent design and manufacturing teams. And without them we would not now be fielding the best military aircraft in the world. But I am an even bigger fan of having them both in the business of making tactical aircraft with concomitant design, engineering, manufacturing, and support services.

With only one domestic military tactical aircraft producer, we would seriously cripple our ability to field state-of-the-art tactical aircraft in the future, as any serious competition would be eliminated. And as is the case in so many other areas, competition is essential to the health of our tactical aircraft industry.

We do not have to look far to see examples of how we can ensure a robust split production program. The two primary competitors for JSF—Lockheed Martin and Boeing—currently share production of the F-22 Raptor. Boeing has a one-third share and Lockheed Martin a two-thirds share of the program. Supporting split production would ensure a minimum of two primary contractors in the tacticalfighter industrial base. An issue associated with split production is second sourcing. That has been productive, and it has been a prudent working theory in the years past. It still is practiced effectively in many areas.

During the defense buildup period, the Department of Defense and Congress wisely tried to increase the amount of competition in the development of major defense systems. In the defense aerospace industry, during those years, there were five primary companies capable of developing and producing fighter weapons systems.

The benefits of competition were well understood in commerce at large but difficult to establish in the military. So emphasis in some programs shifted to second sourcing. The production piece of weapons systems programs was divided in two. A single design was produced. The Government financed creation of both production lines. The firms competed for the largest share of the production run each year, but both remained in production.

This worked to keep costs under control for large volume purchases because each firm saw the potential for decent earnings by investing in cost reduction programs to remain competitive. If one producer let its costs get out of control, well, then, the purchaser—the Department of Defense—could go to the more efficient producer.

The same logic was successful in setting up second sourcing for propulsion systems for the joint strike fighter. And my question is, if the logic is competitive, why not take advantage of competitive competition in second sourcing for engine competition, why wouldn’t the same logic work for the prime aircraft manufacturing companies, especially since there are only a few of them left in the industry?

The second sourcing expands the mobilization base as well as producing an increased surge capability. And it encourages higher product quality and reliability at a competitive cost. And that helps the Government in contract negotiations.

One other example I would cite is the joint cruise missile project, second sourcing of the Tomahawk missile in 1982. Every review of that effort demonstrated abundant cost savings to the Government, and a steady production of missiles which have been used for years by our Armed Forces.

The success of the program resulted from at least two factors: One, the cost for entry for a second source was low, given the large projected production run, and, two, the annual production quantities were large enough to absorb direct and indirect manufacturing costs.

The Tomahawk experience is directly applicable to the current JSF Program because we have a large projected number of aircraft deliveries spread over many years, for both the armed services—all branches—and those of our allies, and gives us an opportunity to retain the benefits of second sourcing.

It worked for engines, and it worked for prime aircraft developers and manufacturers, while preserving the domestic industrial base. However, second sourcing alone does not ensure the sustainment of full design and development capability.

I think it would also be unwise for the country to have only one company capable of designing an appropriate fighter aircraft. I hope, as we move forward, we will continue to utilize the design and development capacity of both of the manufacturers.

Despite the fact that there may be some additional costs for having two production lines—some say costs may be a half billion to a billion dollars—when you are really talking about a couple of hundred billion dollars, a multiyear program, it seems to me to protect the search capacity, production protection of a second major source, and the protection of competition are well worth the price. That is why I have been arguing that we must maintain two tactical aircraft providers.

We cannot prevent the pendulum from swinging radically in the opposite direction without maintaining split production. The recent terrorist attack teaches us that if we skimp on defense, we will pay for it. Maintaining a strong defensive posture is not done on the cheap, unless we are willing to expose our national security and homeland security.

For this reason, I have discussed at length with my colleagues, with the managers of this bill, with the chairman and ranking member of the Appropriations Committee, as well as the Department of Defense, the need to continue to keep two tactical aircraft producers in production. Based on the discussions I have had and the understanding that has been developed, I believe now that we are in a position where we will not see one company alone winning the competition and taking over the entire tactical aircraft production in the United States. I think that would be a significant mistake for the Nation, and it would not serve our military well because we would not ensure that competition to produce not only the airplane and the most economical and highest quality product available but future design and manufacture of aircraft to follow on.

So while we had discussed the possibility of offering an amendment, I believe this position is well understood. And from the conversations I have had, I believe there will be efficient steps taken to ensure that we do maintain two tactical aircraft producers. If we don’t move down that path, then I will be back on the appropriate measure, whether it is on an authorization or an appropriations bill, to ensure that we do have two strong tactical aircraft manufacturers in this country.

Mr. President, I thank the managers and the Chair.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from Oklahoma is recognized.

Mr. INHOFE. Mr. President, at this time, I withdraw my amendment No. 1595 from consideration. Mr. PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, the amendment is withdrawn.

Mr. INHOFE. I yield the floor.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The Senator from New Jersey is recognized.

Mr. CORZINE. Mr. President, I express my gratitude, and I understand the differences of opinion we have regarding this issue. I think we now have an opportunity to have a good discussion on this issue in conference committee. In that vein, I withdraw my consent to have printed in the RECORD the amendment I would have proposed.

There being no objection, the material was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

SEC. 1066. CLOSURE OF QUIVIES NOVEL TRAINING RANGE.

(a) Section 1065 of the Floyd D. Spence National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2001 is amended by adding at the end the following new subsection:

(c) NATIONAL EMERGENCY.—

(1) EXTENSION OF DEADLINE.—The President may extend the May 1, 2003 deadline for the termination of operations on the island of Vieques established in Subsection (b)(1) for a period of one year, and may renew the extension on an annual basis), provided that—

"(A) The President has declared a national emergency and such declaration remains in effect; and

"(B) The President determines that, in light of such national emergency, the actions required by subsections (b), (c) and (d) would be inconsistent with the national security interest of the United States.

"(2) EFFECT OF EXTENSION.—An extension of the deadline pursuant to paragraph (1) shall suspend the requirements of subsections (b), (c) and (d) for the duration of the extension."

(b) Subsection (a) of Section 1505 of the Floyd D. Spence National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2001 is repealed and

Mr. CORZINE. Mr. President, before I discuss the provisions of this amendment, let me make something clear. I am very sensitive—painfully and personally so—of the human tragedy and national emergency created by the cowardly attacks of the terrorists on our nation on September 11. Just as much as my colleagues, I stand united with our President, our military personnel, and the people of America in accepting, as President Bush put it, our “mission and moment” to end this scourge of terrorism.

But just as so many of America’s leaders have implored the nation to be measured and thoughtful in our actions in the wake of this tragedy, and just as President Bush has asked that Americans put their lives aside, so should the workings of America’s democracy. That’s why I believe it would be a mistake to approve the amendment by the Senator from Oklahoma, which represents a significant change in direction from the policies formuated by both Presidents Bush and Clinton, while frankly undermining the President’s authority as commander in chief. Why should the Chief of Naval Operations, and the commandant of the Marine Corps, be given the authority to make decisions that go well beyond military considerations? In my view, full access given the extended public debate and deep concerns, surrounding this Vieques facility this decision rightfully rests, as it did before Sep-ember 11, with the President of the United States.

Mr. President, I believe, in the long run, we should respect the views of the people of Puerto Rico and Vieques. Their voice has been clear on this issue, and I believe the people of Puerto Rico are Americans. They raise our flag. They have fought valiantly in our wars. Many hundreds—maybe as many as 800—died on September 11th in the World Trade Center tragedy. Puerto Ricans deserve to be treated justly.

Both President Clinton and President Bush have recognized this reality in formulating their responses to this difficult issue.

Mr. President, like all Americans, I believe that the people of Puerto Rico have the right to object, most readily, I say to our leader that I have to object. There are still Members on our side with concerns.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Objection is heard.

Ms. LEVIN. Madam President, if the majority leader will yield for one moment, this bill has provisions in it which we need to pass. There is a special pay provision in it for short wartime specializations, for instance. We have special provisions which will allow us to hold onto enlisted members in high priority units who otherwise might leave the military. We have special re-enlistment and enlistment bonuses in this bill. We have a targeted pay raise of 4½ percent for everybody. And we have targeted pay raises of between 3½ and 10 percent for special categories.
This is a vital bill for the success of our military.
The problems we have now are no longer related to the jurisdiction of this committee. We think we have resolved the last problem, or we are close to resolving the last problem that relates to the jurisdiction of this committee. Everybody else is willing to have their amendments placed on this list so we have a finite list. We are not trying to preclude anybody from offering amendments of any kind. It is just a list of their amendments and a finite list.
I thank the majority leader for his patience. I thank Senator Reid for his extraordinary effort to get us to where we are. I express disappointment that we can't get that finite list so we can proceed to complete this important bill.
I thank him and the other colleagues that the problem we think we have now is not related to the jurisdiction of the Armed Services Committee, and that is too bad.
Mr. DASCHLE. Madam President, if I could just add to what the distinguished Senator from Michigan has said, and let me repeat also the compliment of our two managers. I think they have done an admirable job. They have shown remarkable patience with all of their colleagues. But I don't know of a bill that deserves more uregency than this one. I don't know of a bill that ought to be the source of unity as we look at the array of challenges that our country is currently facing.
This afternoon, we were given one of the finest briefings that I have heard in recent years by the Secretary of State and the Secretary of Defense. They did an outstanding job in laying out the challenges that we have to face, not only in the short term but in the longer term. At the very least, it seems to me, the Senate ought to respond to the tremendous challenges we face by providing the support that we can to this administration at a time of need.
I must say that I know we have worked off the earlier objections. And now, as the Senator from Michigan said, we have objections tonight that I am told have nothing to do with the Defense bill but have to do with the schedule on other issues. I am willing to work with my colleagues. No one wants to pass an energy bill more than I do. We know we have to do that. That has to be an important part of the Senate's agenda. I am willing to enter into a colloquy with Senators who have concerns about how high a priority that is. But, for heaven's sake, let us not hold up one of the most urgent bills before the Senate tonight.
I must tell my colleagues, that we may be left with no other option than to pull this bill and go straight to Defense appropriations when that bill is ready. We can resolve this on Defense appropriations. I don't want to have to do that, but I will do that if there is no other choice. Tomorrow we are going to go to the military construction bill.
This is our last opportunity tonight until sometime later.
There are many other urgent pieces of work that have to be done. We have an airport security bill that we all have talked about that we know is important. That has to be brought up, hopefully next week.
We can't continue to deliberate, object, delay, and confound the two manger's here as we try to address this important question. We have a window. If we lose this window, we are going to have to look for another window under the appropriations process.
I put my colleagues on notice. We will either work this out this way or we will work it out another way. But these laborious objections are very troubling to me and ought to be troubling to all of our colleagues.
I will work with our managers.
I appreciate as well the distinguished assistant majority leader for his efforts tonight.
If I sound frustrated, I am. I will be patient. But patience wears thin. We have a lot of work to do.
I yield the floor.
Mr. REID. Madam President, before the leader leaves the floor, I am a member of the Committee on Appropriations. We are not an authorizing committee. We should not have to do the Defense authorization bill because the hard work that these two managers and the committee members have put in will be for naught.
Yesterday, I had to make some phone calls. One-hundred National Guardsman has been called to active duty out of Ely and Las Vegas. These are MP's—military policemen. We had eighty-three out of Reno call the same calls. One-hundred National Guards-had been called to active duty out of Fallon.

Mr. BIDEN. Madam President, the leader talked about these two managers. They have worked so hard.
They are two veteran legislators. They are distinguished managers. They have worked so hard.
I put my colleagues on notice. We will either work this out this way or we will work it out another way. But these laborious objections are very troubling to me and ought to be troubling to all of our colleagues.

How can I go back to Nevada and face these people? This bill is going to go down as a result of something that has nothing to do with this bill.
The leader talked about these two managers. They have worked so hard.
They have worked so hard. They are two veteran legislators. They are two of the best we have. They have done ev-everything they can to move this legislation.
Ninety-eight percent of the Senate wants to move this bill. It is too bad that 2 percent decided they don't want this bill to move anywhere. It is too bad for the country. It is too bad for the military personnel in Nevada and all over this country, and for those serving outside the United States' continental limits. It is just too bad.
If the leader is frustrated—and I know he is because he has been on this bill all day—I can't imagine how these two managers feel who have spent months working on this legislation. And they are being told, well, you can have the appropriators do it. That is what it is coming to. It is a sad day in the history of the Senate of the United States.

Mr. DASCHLE. Madam President, in light of our circumstances, I reluctantly concluded that there will be no more votes tonight. There is so much work we could do. Clearly, we are not going to a point where we can move any further on the bill. If Members wish to express themselves, they are welcome to do that. But there will be no more votes tonight.
I yield the floor. I suggest the absence of a quorum.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. The
clerk will call the roll.
The assistant legislative clerk proceeded to call the roll.
Mr. REID. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent the order for the quorum call be rescinded.

THE PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

Mr. BIDEN. Madam President, the fiscal year 2002 National Defense Authorization Act that was reported out of the Committee on Armed Services was a good bill. In particular, it included important provisions regarding missile defense.
It required prior Congressional approval of any activities during the next fiscal year that are barred by the ABM Treaty. This provision assured Congress its proper role in any decision to walk away from a cornerstone of strategic stability which has served the United States well for the past 30 years.

It strengthened transparency and Congressional oversight over the Admnistration's missile defense programs. If the Congress is to authorize billions of dollars for national missile defense, we deserve a clear blueprint for how the administration will spend that money.
And it reallocated $1.3 billion from missile defense to other pressing defense priorities.

As a result of the managers' amendment adopted last week, the first two provisions were dropped. The third one was altered to permit the President to spend the $1.3 billion on missile defense or on counter-terrorism.
As every other Member, I understand the need to forge a unity of purpose in the difficult war which lies ahead. That is why I did not prevent action on the managers' amendment last week. Let the record show, however, that I strongly disagree with the decision to delete those very sensible provisions.
The prior approval provision did nothing to prohibit the President from withdrawing the United States from an international treaty. Nor did it prohibit the Department of Defense from undertaking any activity in violation of the treaty. Rather, it simply enabled the Congress to exercise its rightful power of the purse to approve or disapprove the use of funds for any DoD activity barred by a major U.S. treaty.

I believe that the President has the constitutional authority to withdraw from a treaty in the face of congressional silence. I also believe, however, that Congress must exercise its appropriate responsibility. That is why it was also a mistake, in my view, to delete the missile defense transparency provisions in this bill.

Finally, in my view, there is no question how marginal dollars must be spent. The terrorist threat to the United States is an unceasing and constantly evolving threat. Attacks of September 11, 2001, have thrust upon us a war that we absolutely must win, not only for our own sake, but for all civilized nations. The wisdom of any element of defense spending must be evaluated in that light.

As President Bush has made clear, this war will be complex. The battle to dry up terrorist funding will be as crucial as any military offensive. Both battles may hinge on the support we receive from other countries.

President Bush has done a wonderful job of turning world reaction into positive and specific support for an effective campaign against international terrorism and those who aid and abet it. That is precisely what is needed.

Today, that international support is broad and strong, at least in words. It extends from NATO to Russia, Pakistan, and South Korea. We must maintain and strengthen that international coalition, however, in the months, and years, to come.

Russia may very well play a crucial role in any military action against Osama bin Laden or those who aid him in Afghanistan. By virtue of both geography and its involvement in the region, Russia can do much to aid or hinder our operations. Already, some of its military leaders are cautioning against military action that we may find essential to the defeat of terrorism.

What will happen, if the President chooses this time to walk away from the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty in the face of Russian objections? Russia's official stance is that anti-terrorism is a separate issue, and that cooperation will continue. But I fear that both military and public opinion in Russia could shift substantially against cooperation. As a result, the United States may find itself in a more difficult position.

Neither can we take our European allies for granted. Their governments overwhelmingly oppose any unilateral abandonment of the ABM Treaty. Even Prime Minister Tony Blair, the leader of our staunchest ally, warned that Great Britain's support was not a "blank check."

Alliance cohesion requires our willingness, too, to cooperate with other nations in pursuit of a common aim. Our leadership role in the battle against terrorism is clear today, but will be maintained in this conflict only by convincing others of both our wisdom and our care to take their concerns into account. That is why precipitate actions to deploy a missile defense, and to unilateral withdrawal from the ABM Treaty, could undermine our vital war efforts.

A defense against ICBM's will have little impact on international terrorism. Terrorists are not likely to develop or acquire such weapons and the complex launch facilities that they require. Rather, terrorists are likely to seek to attack the United States through infiltration, smuggling in a nuclear weapon in a ship into a city's harbor or carrying lethal pathogens in a backpack.

A national missile defense would do nothing to defend against these more likely threats. Indeed, too much investment in it now could drain needed resources from the war effort, not just in money, but also in technical manpower and production capability.

Let me give some examples of how $1.3 billion could be used to further the war on terrorism: The greatest threat of a nuclear weapons attack on the United States is from a weapon smuggled into the United States. Terrorists cannot build such a weapon, but they could hope to buy one. According to the bipartisan Baker-Cutler task force report issued earlier this year, Russia has tens of thousands of nuclear weapons, sensitive nuclear materials and components. Some are secure, but others are not. Some nuclear facilities don't even have barbed wire fences to keep out potential terrorists. The task force called for spending $30 billion over the next 8 to 10 years, to address none of what it called "the most urgent unmet national security threat to the United States today."

Biological terrorism is a real threat to both our military personnel and our civilian population. It is a challenge we can sensibly face, but only if we invest in the necessary preparation today. For instance, the Department of Defense should produce or acquire the necessary vaccines and antibiotics to protect our armed forces against a range of pathogens. It should assist civilian agencies in procuring and stockpiling similar medicines for emergency civilian use. According to Dr. Fred Ikle, who testified at a Foreign Relations Committee hearing earlier this month, $300 million would cost to deal with the threats.

Winning the war on terrorism, a war that we face here and now, is infinitely more important than pouring concrete in Alaska or an extra $1.3 billion into combating the least likely of threats.

We can take the time to perfect our technology and to reach understandings with Russia and China that will minimize the side-effects of missile defense. But we have precious little time to do what is essential: to win the war against terrorism, to dry up the supply of Russian materials or technology, or to prepare our military, our intelligence community, our health care system, and our first responders to deal with a chemical or biological weapons attack by the terrorists of tomorrow.

In the fury of the moment, Congress will let the President have the final say on the use of these funds. So be it. It will be up to the President to take the sensible course.

In the midst of a war, let us not be diverted by the least likely threat. Let us turn our attention, our energies, and our resources to winning the war that is upon us, and to building our defenses against terrorism of all sorts.

MORNING BUSINESS

Mr. REID. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that there now be a period of morning business with Senators allowed to speak therein for a period not to exceed 10 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

THE RESPONSE TO TERRORISM

Mr. WELLSTONE. Madam President, I would like to, in 10 minutes, cover three topics. First, I want to talk a little bit about September 11 and now. And I want to just say, in an ironic way—not bitterly ironic—the days I have had in Minnesota have maybe been some of the better days I have had because—and I am not putting words in anybody's mouth; and I do not do damage to the truth; I have too much respect for people, even when we disagree. I have said—there have not been any jingoistic; and they have not said we need to bomb now—we need to do this the right away. Many of them have expressed concern that we not let terrorists define our morality and that we should take every step possible to minimize the loss of life of innocent civilians in Afghanistan, or any other country, starting with innocent children. I am proud of people in Minnesota for saying that.

People in Minnesota have also said they understood this is not going to be one military action. They know this is going to be a long struggle. They know we are going to need a lot of cooperation from a lot of other countries. They think it should be international.

Above and beyond the way people come together to support each other, I am so impressed with the way I think people are really thinking deeply about this and want us to stay consistent with our own values as a nation. I just want to say that. That is my view.

I find myself kind of on two ends of the continuum. I had a discussion with some friends who were telling me that I should speak out more about the underlying conditions and causes of this violence, this hatred and violence. I told them there is a divide between us because I cannot do that because there are no conditions or explanations or justification for the mass murder of innocent people. I do not even like to talk about war because I do not think warriors are people. Warriors are not involved in the slaughter of innocent people; criminals are.

A second point, which now gets closer to the defense authorization bill: On economic recovery, we have to really focus on the economic security. I believe, and will always believe, we should have included assistance for employees in the package we passed last Friday.

I say to the Senator from Massachusetts, when I went home to Minnesota, I heard about that. People were not bitterly angry, but they said: How could that happen to us and our families? Who can disagree with that? That has to be a priority, along with safety, to get help to employees.

I would argue, maybe it is a sequence issue, maybe everything at one time. It is easier to give a speech than to actually do it. But above and beyond help for employees and employment benefits and making sure people can afford health care needs and making sure there is job training and dislocated worker funding and, I would argue, having to deal with some child care expenses, I want to say one other thing. The truth is, I think we have to also think about an economic recovery package. And that should include, I say to Senator for New Jersey, a workforce recovery package because not only are we going to need to extend the lifeline to people by way of helping them—when people are flat on their back, Government helps them; that is one thing. It is also true that that is part of an economic stimulus because you do not want to have a lot of people—people who work in hotels and restaurants and small businesses, all of whom now are really hurting—you do not want to have a whole lot of people shut down and not able to consume at all.

So we need to think about this package in broader terms as well. Finally, on the defense authorization bill, if I had my own way, there are at least a couple things I would want in it. One of them Senator LEVIN worked so hard on, and other colleagues support it. It made it clear that if President Bush requested funding for missile defense tests that violated the ABM Treaty, he would need congressional approval to spend those funds. I wanted that language in this bill in the worst way. If I had time, I would argue over and over again, but I don't want to impose my own agenda on what our country is facing right now. But we need to reorder some of our priorities, and clearly more of the money—some of the money in this bill that I don't think we need for certain items I would put into homeland defense and helping families with economic security.

I think there are a lot of threats our country is faced with that come way before a rogue nation sending missiles our way by suitcase, by boat, by plane, chemical, biological—there are lots of other threats with a much higher priority. I dropped that language. I understand that the majority leader and Senator LEVIN and others made a commitment that we will come back to that language and that provision.

I believe missile defense doesn't make the world more secure; it makes it less secure for our children, grandchildren, and for all God's children. I could argue that for the next 5 hours. I don't have 5 hours.

I congratulate Senators on both sides of the aisle for the way in which we have worked together. We probably need each other as never before. There will be some sharp disagreement on policy issues—some of the issues that deal with education and health care, prescription drugs, you name it. Frankly, I am sure there will be questions many of us have as we go forward. But for right now, I want to just dissent on missile defense and say to my colleagues we need to get back to that debate. I think we are going to have to see more of an emphasis on priorities, including some of the money from some weapons systems that are not necessary to what we are talking about now by way of our own national security and homeland defense for our families and others, I appreciate the additional support for the armed services, especially when they are about to go into harm's way. I want to say to every Senator that we did not do well for too many people in that package for the industry, which was necessary. I don't think the companies and CEOs were crying wolf, but we didn't help the employees, and the economic security of these working families has to be the next step, along with safety. That has to happen soon.

Finally, I believe we are going to have to have a broader workforce recovery bill as part of economic recovery legislation, as a part of how we deal with this recession in hard economic times, because there are a lot of businesses and people who are getting right now. The Government should be there to help people when they are flat on their backs through no fault of their own. That is going to be a big part of our work as well.

VOTE EXPLANATION

Mr. BIDEN. Madam President, I was unable to be here for an earlier vote today. I was at the funeral of a brave young American, Aero-Grapher's Mate Second Class Matthew Michael Flocco, whose life was one of those so tragically ended at the Pentagon on September 11. I believed it was important to be there with the family, to make sure they knew that America shares in their grief and stands ready to assist them in any way we can.

CRITICAL INFRASTRUCTURE INFORMATION SECURITY ACT

Mr. BENNETT. Madam President, yesterday Senator KYL and I introduced the Critical Infrastructure Information Security Act, CIISA, which is designed to minimize a dangerous national security blind spot by: one, protecting voluntarily shared critical infrastructure information; two, providing critical infrastructure threat analysis; and three, encouraging proactive industry cooperation.

Critical infrastructures are those key sectors such as financial services, telecommunications, transportation, energy, emergency services, and government essential services, whose disruption or destruction would impact our economic or national security. On September 11, 2001, America suffered a senseless strike, where America's commercial air space was "weaponized" and turned viciously against its financial and defense establishments in an infrastructure attack that resulted in staggering losses.

About 85 percent of the United States' critical infrastructures, telecommunications, energy, finance, and transportation systems, are owned and operated by private companies. If our critical infrastructures are targets, it is the private sector that is on the front line. It is undeniably true that there is a great deal of overlap between government systems and critical infrastructures. However, it is important to realize that the ability to make a request under FOIA does not apply only to American citizens interested in seeing what the Government is doing. Corporations, associations, and other entities have the same access. There are no limitations on FOIA even during times of war. Furthermore, the narrow provisions provided in CIISA do not protect the government. If CIISA created certain classes of information that are not subject to the Freedom of Information Act.

In order to ensure the uniform protection of voluntarily shared information, CIISA requires the Director of the Office of Management and Budget to establish procedures for the Federal agencies to receive, acknowledge, mark, care, and store voluntarily submitted critical infrastructure information. Today, there is no uniform standard of care.

CIISA requires that information and analyses from the Federal Government be shared back with the private sector in the form of notifications, warnings, and strategic analyses. The bill requires a Federal agency receiving voluntarily submitted critical infrastructure information to make reasonable efforts to do the following: one, analyze the information; two, determine the tactical and strategic implications for such information; three, identify interdependencies; and four, consider conducting further analysis in concert with other Federal agencies. Following this analysis, a Federal agency may issue warnings regarding potential threats to: one, individual companies; two, targeted industry sectors; three, the general public; or four, other government entities. Federal agencies must take appropriate actions to prevent the disclosure of the source of any voluntarily submitted critical infrastructure information that forms the basis for any warnings.

CIISA also requires the President to designate an entity within the executive branch to conduct strategic analyses of potential threats to critical infrastructure; and to promulgate reports and analyses to information sharing and analysis organizations and the private sector. These analyses draw upon this information submitted to the Federal Government by the private sector, as well as information from the Federal Government, such as national security and law enforcement information. The President is also required to submit a plan for developing strategic analysis capabilities in the Congress.

When competitors work closely to address competition concerns always surface. Security in a networked world must be a shared responsibility. To encourage the private sector to find solutions to common security problems, CIISA provides a narrow antitrust exemption, not unlike that of the Information Readiness Disclosure Act or the Defense Production Act. Information sharing and analysis organizations formed solely for the purpose of gathering and analyzing critical infrastructure information and not primarily for the purpose of aiding the private sector are protected from antitrust laws. Again, this exemption only applies to the activities specifically undertaken to address infrastructure threats.

The threats to our critical infrastructure are varied. Some of these threats are physical; some may come from cyberspace. From wherever they come, the private sector and Government must work together to reduce the risk of an attack.

I thank Senator Kyl for his interest and leadership on this issue.

COMMENDING THE TRUCKING INDUSTRY

Mr. BROWNBACK. Madam President, I rise to speak today in recognition of the noble truck drivers across the Nation. For the past 2 weeks, our trucks have been vital in their service to this country, delivering important supplies to the attack sites of New York City and Arlington, VA. Many of these truckers have been volunteering time, equipment, and use of their vehicles to supply these areas in efforts of relief, regardless of the escalating gas prices throughout the country. This is a commendable act, as airlines have been shut down and delivery has been severely restricted, truckers have responded to the call of America. I commend the work performed by this industry. We have often heard about those on the front line, but not of those in the shadows, holding part of America’s infrastructure intact with their service. I say thank you to the hardworking men and women of the trucking industry who continue to contribute to the relief effort throughout the country.

LOCAL LAW ENFORCEMENT ACT OF 2001

Mr. SMITH of Oregon. Madam President, I rise today to speak about hate crimes legislation I introduced with Senator KENNEDY in March of this year. The Local Law Enforcement Act of 2001 would add new categories to current hate crimes legislation sending a signal that violence of any kind is unacceptable in our society.

I would like to describe a terrible crime that occurred September 25, 1994 in Hollywood, CA. Three men and five juveniles wielding baseball bats and a golf club allegedly assaulted two gay men. Juan Huiza, 19, and Marvin and Guillermo Hendriquez, both 20, were charged with suspicion of civil rights violations and assault with a deadly weapon. I believe that government’s first duty is to defend its citizens, to defend them against the harms that come out of hate. The Local Law Enforcement Enhancement Act of 2001 is now a symbol that can become substance. I believe that by passing this legislation, we can change hearts and minds as well.

ADDITIONAL STATEMENTS

TRIBUTE TO DAVID R. CHEVALIER
• Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire. Madam President, I rise today to pay tribute to former U.S. Army Sgt. David Chevalier of North Hampton, NH, for his heroic service to the United States of America during the Korean Conflict. On June 13, 1953, David was injured in action while courageously serving his country in Korea. David has earned the Purple Heart medal for his dedicated service to our country with pride.

As a Vietnam veteran and son of a Naval aviator who died in a World War II related incident, I commend David for his selfless dedication to his state and country. He is an American hero who fought to preserve liberty and justice for all citizens of the United States. It is truly an honor and a privilege to represent him in the U.S. Senate.

TRIBUTE TO ELETPAC COMPANY, INC.
• Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire. Madam President, I rise today to pay tribute to Electropac Company, Incorporated, of Manchester, NH, on the celebration of their 25th year in business. For 25 years, Electropac Company, Incorporated headed by Raymond Boissonneau, has provided high quality printed circuit boards to businesses in New Hampshire, the United States and worldwide markets. The company has constantly invested in the latest technology and processes and has produced innovative products for their customers. Electropac is one of North America’s leading suppliers of printed circuit boards with $45 million in annual revenue and currently employs more than 400 dedicated team members. Electropac has consistently prided itself in their dedication to complete customer satisfaction and teamwork. I commend the leadership and employees of Electropac for their exemplary accomplishments in the business world. The contributions of Electropac have been of significant benefit to the citizens of our state and have provided economic stimulus and employment opportunities. It is truly an honor and a privilege to represent you in the U.S. Senate.

TRIBUTE TO COVER
• Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire. Madam President, I rise today to pay tribute to COVER, a non-profit program based in Lebanon, NH. The COVER organization works in partnership with low income, elderly and disabled citizens assisting them with urgent home repairs. The volunteers organized by COVER have successfully prevented the imminent displacement of more than 100 Upper Valley residents due to substandard or inaccessible housing.

The members of COVER work together to ensure that home repair projects are supplied with recycled materials to conserve natural resources. The volunteer labor pool allows COVER to build positive relationships throughout the community bringing neighbors together to accomplish the refurbishing needs of area homes. More than 450 hard working volunteers at COVER have completed more than 100 home repair projects in the Upper Valley region since 1998. I applaud the tireless efforts of the organizers and volunteers of COVER. Their valuable contributions have added a spark of new life to the lives of the elderly and disabled citizens in the community. The citizens of Lebanon and our entire state owe a debt of gratitude to the COVER organization. New Hampshire is a better place in which to live because of their kind acts of charity. It is truly an honor and a privilege to represent them in the U.S. Senate.

TRIBUTE TO ALEXANDER LEVERIS
• Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire. Madam President, I rise today to pay tribute to Alec Leveris of Kensington, NH, for his heroic service to the United States of America during World War II. On September 17, 2001, I will present Alec with the medals he so bravely earned while serving his nation in battle. Alec joined the U.S. Navy in Boston and was trained in Newport, RI. He served as an ordinary seaman on tours of duty on the U.S.S. Yorktown including the Battle of Midway and trained pilots to take off and land on the aircraft carrier, U.S.S. Alabam. Alec earned medals for his dedicated military service including: the Honorable Service Lapel Button, a Combat Action Ribbon, the European-African-Middle Eastern Campaign Medals, a World War II Victory Medal, an American Campaign Medal, the Navy Good Conduct Medal and an Asiatic-Pacific Campaign Medal.

As a son of a Naval aviator who died in a World War II related incident, I commend Alec for his selfless dedication to his state and country. He is an American hero who fought to preserve liberty and justice for all citizens of the United States. It is truly an honor and a privilege to represent him in the U.S. Senate.

TRIBUTE TO LESLIE E. ROBERTS
• Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire. Madam President, I rise today to pay tribute to Leslie E. Roberts of Belmont, NH, who passed away on July 27, 2001. Leslie was born in Wolfeboro, NH, and served with honor in the U.S. Army during World War II with Company C, 64th Armored Infantry Battalion, 16th Armored Division in Germany. He also served with the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers where he oversaw construction of major public works restoration projects during the Occupation Period.

After returning to New Hampshire, Leslie joined the 368th Combat Engineer Battalion of the Army Reserve and served for more than 20 years with the reserves as a Battalion Equipment Officer. Leslie was a small business owner in Belmont, NH, in the dairy and heavy equipment hauling industries. He also served as treasurer of Roberts Cove Corporation of Alton, NH.

He was an active supporter of his community and served in positions including: member and leader in the 4H club, charter member of the Bel and chairman of the New Hampshire Farm Bureau. Leslie was also a charter member of the Bel- ton Rotary Club and had been a Paul Harris Fellow. In 1988 he received the Citizen of the Year Award from the town of Belmont. Leslie is survived by his wife, Suzanne; his sons: Clive Roberts, Mark

AMENDMENT NO. 1641
At the request of Mr. DOMENICI, the names of the Senator from Louisiana (Ms. LANDRIEU) and the Senator from Delaware (Mr. BIDEN) were added as co-sponsors of amendment No. 1641 intended to be proposed to S. 1438, a bill to authorize appropriations for fiscal year 2002 for military activities of the Department of Defense, for military constructions, and for defense activities of the Department of Energy, to prescribe personnel strengths for such fiscal year for the Armed Forces, and for other purposes.

AMENDMENT NO. 1642
At the request of Mr. DOMENICI, the names of the Senator from Louisiana (Ms. LANDRIEU) and the Senator from Delaware (Mr. BIDEN) were added as co-sponsors of amendment No. 1642 intended to be proposed to S. 1438, a bill to authorize appropriations for fiscal year 2002 for military activities of the Department of Defense, for military constructions, and for defense activities of the Department of Energy, to prescribe personnel strengths for such fiscal year for the Armed Forces, and for other purposes.
The Airline Passenger Safety Enhancement Act of 2001 also would require the FAA Administrator to conduct a comprehensive study to determine how best to organize the security operations at airports in cooperation with air carriers and local airports in order to secure the safety of passengers and workers. A report to Congress would be required no later than 30 days after the enactment of this legislation. This report would include recommendations for legislation to assure greater airport security.

I have heard from a number of Downstate Illinois airports that support stronger airport security procedures. However, these airports will be asked to shoulder a heavy financial burden. For example, the Central Illinois Regional Airport in Bloomington, Normal will likely need to spend as much as $30,000 per month for additional security measures. These funds are above and beyond what has been budgeted and could create a financial hardship for the airport. The Department should explore ways to help smaller airports by providing resources and technical assistance to upgrade security and enhance passenger safety. My legislation would provide for additional support to these small-to-medium size airports by providing them with added financial and technical support which would enhance, upgrade and improve security operations. I am hopeful that these upgrades and improvements of a federalized security system can be paid for through an added fee of up to $1.00 per domestic flight segment.

While this concept generally appears to be supported by the airlines and by some in the Administration, I think it’s important for Congress to act swiftly to codify these important changes.

In closing, together, we can craft common-sense solutions that protect passengers, secure our airports, and ensure that our aviation system is the safest in the world and I believe this legislation can make that happen.

By Ms. SNOWE.
S. 1462. A bill to establish the Federal Emergency Transportation Administration, FETA, to coordinate transportation-related activities of all federal agencies during a national emergency; to coordinate transportation, maritime, aviation and surface transportation, including rail, during an emergency; to develop and notify appropriate federal, state and local authorities of uniform emergency transportation security standards to be followed during an emergency and to ensure those standards are followed; and to establish within U.S. DOT the authority to: 1. coordinate national transportation and transportation-related activities of all federal agencies during a national emergency; 2. disseminate critical transportation-related information during an emergency; and 3. develop and notify appropriate federal, state and local authorities of uniform emergency transportation security standards to be followed during an emergency and to ensure those standards are followed.

It will establish within the U.S. DOT a Federal Emergency Transportation Administration, FETA. FETA would be responsible for coordinating transportation-related activities of all federal agencies during a national emergency, including aviation, maritime and port security, and surface transportation, including rail. FETA would coordinate transportation-related responsibilities of other agencies during an emergency as well. FETA could serve as a point of contact within U.S. DOT for the Office of Homeland Security laid out by the President last Thursday.

In addition, FETA would be responsible for establishing uniform national transportation ‘emergency’ standards, and notifying appropriate Federal, State, and local agencies and government transportation-related security threats in the event of an emergency. It would also develop appropriate national standard operating procedures for agencies and municipalities to follow during an emergency and disseminate critical transportation-related information during.

As a member of the Senate Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation, I know that steps are being taken to protect our airports and our skies. However, there is no guarantee that, should there be another terrorist attack on our soil in the future, that aviation will be the only mode of transportation targeted. We must not take that chance. We must take steps to ensure that all our modes of transportation are coordinated in the event of such an attack. I strongly urge my colleagues to join me in a strong show of support for this legislation.

By Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire:

S. 1463. A bill to provide for the safety of American aviation and the suppression of terrorism; to the Committee on Commerce, Science, and Transportation.

Mr. SMITH of New Hampshire. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the text of the bill be printed in the RECORD.

There being no objection, the bill was ordered to be printed in the RECORD, as follows:

S. 1463

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE

This Act may be cited as the “Airline Safety Act of 2001”.

SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

Congress makes the following findings:

(1) On September 11, 2001, terrorists hijacked four civilian aircraft, crashing two of the aircraft into the towers of the World Trade Center in New York, New York, and a third into the Pentagon outside Washington, District of Columbia.

(2) Thousands of innocent Americans and citizens of other countries were killed or injured as a result of these attacks, including the passengers and crew of the four aircraft, workers in the World Trade Center and in the Pentagon, rescue workers, and bystanders.

(3) These attacks destroyed both towers of the World Trade Center, as well as adjacent buildings, and seriously damaged the Pentagon.

(4) These attacks were by far the deadliest terrorist attacks ever launched against the United States and, by targeting symbols of America, clearly were intended to intimidate our Nation and weaken its resolve.

(5) Armed pilots, co-pilots, and navigators with proper training will serve as a deterrent to any contemplated acts of terrorism.

(6) Secured doors separating the crew cabin from the passenger cabin have been effective in deterring hijackings in other nations and serve as a deterrent to any contemplated acts of terrorism in the United States.

SEC. 3. AVIATION SAFETY AND SUPPRESSION OF TERRORISM BY COMMERCIAL AIRCRAFT.

(a) Possession of Firearms on Commercial Flights.—No person shall possess a firearm, or any other weapon or destructive device, on a commercial aircraft.

(b) Reinforced Cockpit Doors on Commercial Aircraft.—

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—SENATE

September 25, 2001

17868
(2) COVERED COMMERCIAL AIRCRAFT.—A commercial aircraft described in this paragraph is a commercial aircraft that is determined by the Secretary, is configured so as to permit a door to separate the crew and passenger cabin of such aircraft.

(c) REGULATIONS.—The Secretary may prescribe regulations for purposes of this section.

(d) REPORTS TO CONGRESS.—Not later than 6 months after the date of the enactment of this Act, and every 6 months thereafter, the Secretary shall submit to Congress a report on the effectiveness of the requirements in this section in facilitating commercial aviation safety and the suppression of terrorism by commercial aircraft.

(e) EFFECTIVE DATE.—This section shall take effect on the date of the enactment of this Act.

By Mr. BROWNBACK (for himself and Mr. MCCONNELL):

S. 1465. A bill to authorize the President to provide assistance to Pakistan and India through September 30, 2003; to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

Mr. BROWNBACK. Madam President, I am introducing today a bill, along with Senator MCCONNELL, and there will be others who will be added as co-sponsors to the bill, to provide limited authority to the President to provide assistance to Pakistan and India.

This bill provides a limited waiver authority to the President to provide foreign aid assistance to Pakistan and to India. I do not need to remind anybody of the difficulty facing particularly Pakistan at this time, as General Musharraf, the Chief Executive of the country, stepped forward to support the United States in this time of fighting international terrorism, particularly that which is based in Afghanistan.

Yet because of prior legislation, the United States cannot provide certain types of aid to Pakistan that I believe the administration may well need to provide to Pakistan to keep the Government there in providing support and help to the Government.

For instance, the U.S. Government today, because of sanctions that were put on Pakistan by law and there is no waiver authority, cannot provide more than $50 million in foreign aid assistance to Pakistan. They can in some areas provide below $50 million, but they cannot provide any more than that. They can do no debt rescheduling. There are no balance of payment supports to the United States can provide to Pakistan. These are a lot of funds, but I want to point out what would take place if the Pakistani Government gets into great difficulty and the United States is not able to help.

General Musharraf controls nuclear weapons and missile capacity as well. If the Government of Pakistan does not survive, it will probably move to a more radical regime that will have both nuclear weapons and the capacity to deliver those nuclear weapons to our allies and even possibly U.S. interests.

Pakistan is helping us against this battle of terrorism. We need to lift all sanctions to work with them. We are going to need to help them economically during this very difficult time for them and for us.

As we move forward in this battle on terrorism, we are going to have to work with people in many ways. There is a military component that people watch, but there is also a strong cooperative component which needs to take place. We need to work with our potential allies around Afghanistan so that we can go into the country of Afghanistan or support resistance fighters around Afghanistan and in Afghanistan, which I think is the better route to go, for us to drain the swamp and be able to get the terrorism at that point in time or cause them to move and capture them at that time.

The administration is asking for this important assistance. They will need to work very closely with Pakistan. The Musharraf government has had sanctions imposed on it because they triggered particular provisions by their own actions. The administration is going to have to weigh that very carefully. If they are going to return to an elective government, which the Pakistani President and the Supreme Council of Pakistan, the Supreme Court has stated that they will next October have free elections to elect their leadership, we are going to have to appraise this as it moves forward.

Right now the Bush administration does not even have the authority to waive these sanctions to provide foreign aid, debt repayment, and assistance. They do not even have the option. This bill will provide them the waiver authority to provide that assistance. It means the sanctions will still be in place, and the administration will have to decide whether or not to lift them.

I am introducing this bill now because I would like to see it included either on the Defense authorization bill, foreign ops appropriations bill, or as a freestanding bill passing through this Congress. This needs to take place. That is why I am introducing this bill and drawing it to the attention of my colleagues. We need to do this, and we should not be parsimonious in this time of great difficulty for us and for them. I thank the Chair.

SEC. 1231. SHORT TITLE.
This title may be cited as the "Nonproliferation Programs and Assistance Coordination Act of 2001".

SEC. 1232. FINDINGS.
Congress makes the following findings:
(1) United States nonproliferation efforts in the independent states of the former Soviet Union have achieved important results in ensuring that weapons of mass destruction, weapons of mass destruction-related materiel and technologies, and weapons-related knowledge remain beyond the reach of terrorists and weapons-proliferating states.
(2) Although there are in the United States national security interests, the effectiveness of these efforts suffers from a lack of coordination within and among United States Government agencies.
(3) Increased spending and investment by the United States private sector on nonproliferation efforts in the independent states of the former Soviet Union isspecification, spending and investment by the United States private sector in job creation initiatives and proposals for unemployed Russian weapons scientists and technicians are making an important contribution in ensuring that knowledge related to weapons of mass destruction remains beyond the reach of terrorists and weapons-proliferating states.
(4) Increased spending and investment by the United States private sector on nonproliferation efforts in the independent states of the former Soviet Union require the establishment of a coordinating body to ensure that United States public and private efforts are not in conflict, and to ensure that public spending on nonproliferation efforts by the independent states of the former Soviet Union is maximized to ensure efficiency and further United States national security interests.

SEC. 1233. ESTABLISHMENT OF COMMITTEE ON NONPROLIFERATION ASSISTANCE TO THE INDEPENDENT STATES OF THE FORMER SOVIET UNION.

SEC. 1233. ESTABLISHMENT OF COMMITTEE ON NONPROLIFERATION ASSISTANCE TO THE INDEPENDENT STATES OF THE FORMER SOVIET UNION.

(a) PROGRAM REQUIRED.—The President shall develop a comprehensive program for the Federal Government for carrying out nonproliferation programs and activities.
(1) Plans for countering the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction and related materials and technologies.
(2) Plans for providing for regular sharing of information among intelligence, law enforcement, and customs agencies of the Federal Government.

(3) Plans for establishing appropriate centers for analyzing seized nuclear, radiological, biological, and chemical weapons and related materials and technologies.

(4) Proposals for establishing in the United States appropriate legal controls and authorities relating to the export of nuclear, radiological, biological, and chemical weapons and related materials and technologies.

(5) Proposals for encouraging and assisting governments of foreign countries to implement and enforce laws that set forth appropriate penalties for offenses regarding the smuggling of weapons of mass destruction and related materials and technologies.

(6) Proposals for building the confidence of the United States and Russia in each other's controls over United States and Russian nuclear weapons and fissile materials, including plans for verifying the dismantlement of nuclear weapons.

(7) Plans for reducing United States and Russian stockpiles of excess plutonium, which plans shall take into account an assessment of the options for United States cooperation with Russia in the disposition of Russian plutonium.

(8) Plans for studying the merits and costs of establishing a global network of means for detecting and responding to terrorism or other threats of biological or chemical agents against people or other forms of life in the United States or any foreign country.

(c) REPORT.—(1) At the same time the President submits to Congress the budget for fiscal year 2002 pursuant to section 306 of title 31, United States Code, the President shall submit to Congress a report that sets forth the comprehensive program developed under this section.

(2) The report shall include the following:

(A) The specific plans and proposals for the program under subsection (b).

(B) Estimates of the funds necessary, by agency or department, for carrying out such plans and proposals in fiscal year 2003 and five succeeding fiscal years.

(C) The report shall be in an unclassified form, but a classified annex.

SEC. 1236. ADMINISTRATIVE SUPPORT.

All departments and agencies of the Federal Government shall provide, to the extent permitted by law, such information and assistance as may be requested by the Committee in carrying out their functions and activities under this title.

SEC. 1237. CONFIDENTIALITY OF INFORMATION.

Information which has been submitted to the Committee or received by the Committee in confidence shall not be publicly disclosed, except to the extent required by law, and such information shall be used by the Committee only for the purpose of carrying out their functions and activities set forth in this title.

SEC. 1238. STATUTORY CONSTRUCTION.

Nothing in this title—

(1) applies to the data-gathering, regulatory, or enforcement authority of any existing department or agency of the Federal Government over nonproliferation efforts in the independent states of the former Soviet Union, and the review of those efforts undertaken pursuant to this title shall not in any way supersede or prejudice any other process provided by law; or

(2) applies to any activity that is reportable pursuant to title V of the National Security Act of 1947 (50 U.S.C. 413 et seq.).

SEC. 1239. INDEPENDENT STATES OF THE FORMER SOVIET UNION DEFINED.

In this title, the term ‘‘independent states of the former Soviet Union’’ has the meaning given the term in section 3 of the FREEDOM Support Act (22 U.S.C. 8801).

SA 1690. Mr. HELMS (for himself, Mr. MILLER, Mr. SHELBY, Mr. BOND, and Mr. ALLEN) submitted an amendment intended to be proposed by him to the bill S. 1438, to authorize appropriations for National Security programs and for the operations of the Department of Defense, for military constructions, and for defense activities of the Department of Energy, to prescribe personnel strengths for such fiscal year for the Armed Forces, and for other purposes; which was ordered to lie on the table; as follows:

At the end of division A, add the following new title:

TITLE XIV—AMERICAN SERVICE-MEMBERS’ PROTECTION ACT OF 2001

SEC. 1401. SHORT TITLE.

This title may be cited as the ‘‘American Servicemembers’ Protection Act of 2001’’.

SEC. 1402. FINDINGS.

Congress makes the following findings:

(1) On July 17, 1998, the United Nations Commission of Experts on the Establishment of an International Criminal Court, meeting in Rome, Italy, adopted the ‘‘Rome Statute of the International Criminal Court’’. The vote on whether to proceed with the statute was 120 in favor to 7 against, with 21 countries abstaining.

(2) As of April 30, 2001, 139 countries had signed the Rome Statute and 30 had ratified it. Pursuant to Article 120 of the Rome Statute, the statute will enter into force on the first day of the month after the 60th day following the date on which the 60th country deposits an instrument ratifying the statute.

(3) Since adoption of the Rome Statute, a Preparatory Commission for the International Criminal Court has met regularly to draft and negotiate the Rome Statute, including Rules of Procedure and Evidence, Elements of Crimes, and a definition of the Crime of Aggression.

(4) During testimony before the Congress following the adoption of the Rome Statute, the lead United States negotiator, Ambassador David Scheffer stated that the United States could not sign the Rome Statute because certain critical negotiating objectives of the United States had not been achieved. As a result, he stated: ‘‘We are left with consequences that do not serve the cause of international justice."

(5) Ambassador Scheffer went on to tell the Congress that: ‘‘Multinational peacekeeping forces that have joined the treaty can be exposed to the Court’s jurisdiction even if the country of the individual peacekeeper has not joined the treaty. Thus, the treaty would place United States armed forces operating overseas who could conceivably be criminally prosecuted by the international court as a result of their actions agreed to be bound by the treaty. Not only is this contrary to the most fundamental principles of treaty law, it could inhibit the ability of the United States to provide assistance to meet its international obligations and participate in multinational operations, including humanitarian interventions to save civilian lives. Other contributors to peacekeeping operations will be similarly exposed."

(6) Notwithstanding these concerns, President Clinton directed that the United States sign the Rome Statute on December 31, 2000.

In a statement issued that day, he stated that the United States has never been bound by the treaty. ‘‘I will not, and do not, believe that my signature on the Treaty to the Senate for advice and consent until our fundamental concerns are satisfied’’.

Any American prosecuted by the International Criminal Court will, under the Rome Statute, be denied procedural protections to which all Americans are entitled under the Bill of Rights to the United States Constitution, such as the right to trial by jury.

Members of the Armed Forces of the United States should be free from the risk of prosecution by the International Criminal Court, especially when they are stationed or deployed around the world to protect the vital national interests of the United States. The United States Government has an obligation to protect the members of its Armed Forces to the maximum extent possible, against criminal prosecutions carried out by the International Criminal Court.

In addition to exposing members of the Armed Forces of the United States to the risk of international criminal prosecution, the Rome Statute creates a risk that the President and other senior elected and appointed officials of the United States Government may be prosecuted by the International Criminal Court. Particularly if the Preparatory Commission agrees on a definition of the Crime of Aggression, senior United States officials may be at risk of criminal prosecution for national security decisions involving the use of force, including terrorism, preventing the proliferation of weapons of mass destruction, and deterring aggression. No less than members of the Armed Forces of the United States, senior officials of the United States Government should be free from the risk of prosecution by the International Criminal Court, especially when they are stationed or deployed around the world to protect the national interests of the United States.

Any agreement within the Preparatory Commission on a definition of the Crime of Aggression that usurps the prerogative of the United Nations Security Council under Article 39 of the charter of the United Nations to ‘‘determine the existence of any … act of aggression’’ would contravene the charter of the United Nations and undermine deterrence.

It is a fundamental principle of international law that a treaty is binding upon its parties only and that it does not create obligations for nonparties without their consent to be bound. The United States is not a party to the Rome Statute and will not be bound by any of its terms. The United States will not recognize the jurisdiction of the International Criminal Court over United States nationals.

SEC. 1403. WAIVER AND TERMINATION OF PROHIBITIONS IN THIS TITLE.

(a) AUTHORITY TO PERMIT WAIVE WECN TIONS 1405 AND 1407.—The President is authorized to waive the prohibitions and restrictions in sections 1405 and 1407 for a single period of one year. A waiver under this subsection may be issued only if the President determines that the implementation of the provisions of such sections would, in the judgment of the President, be inconsistent with the national security or national emergency. A waiver under this subsection may be issued only if the President determines that the implementation of such section would be inconsistent with national security or national emergency.

SEC. 1408. AUTHORITY TO FREE MEMBERS OF THE UNITED STATES MILITARY FORCED TO SERVE AT THE REQUEST OF THE INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL COURT.

(a) Authorization.—The President is authorized to use all means necessary and appropriate to bring about the release of any person described in subsection (b) who is being detained, investigated, prosecuted, or imprisoned by, on behalf of, or at the request of the International Criminal Court.

(b) Persons Authorized to Be Freed.—The authority of subsection (a) shall extend to the following persons:

(1) United States persons.

(2) Imprisoned allied persons.

(3) Individual persons.

(4) Individually-warred persons.

(5) Individuals who were members of the United States military assistance provided to a particular country if he determines and reports to Congress in accordance with chapter 15 of title 10, United States Code, that it is in the national interest of the United States to do so.

(c) Construction.—The provisions of this section do not authorize the President to take any action after the date of the enactment of this Act, the President should transmit to the appropriate committees of Congress a description of modifications to command and operational control arrangements within military alliances to which the United States may have agreed by Congress, and the President should transmit to the appropriate congressional committees a description of modifications to command and operational control arrangements within military alliances to which the United States may have agreed by Congress, and that could be made in order to reduce any risks to members of the Armed Forces of the United States identified pursuant to subsection (a)(2).

SEC. 1411. APPLICATION OF SECTIONS 1404 AND 1406 TO OTHER PERSONS DETAINED OR IM PRISONED BY OR ON BEHALF OF THE UNITED STATES AND CERTAIN OTHER PERSONS DETAINED OR IM PRISONED BY OR ON BEHALF OF THE INTERNATIONAL CRIMINAL COURT.

(a) Authorization.—This section does not authorize the President to take any action after the date of the enactment of this Act, the President should transmit to the appropriate committees of Congress a description of modifications to command and operational control arrangements within military alliances to which the United States may have agreed by Congress, and the President should transmit to the appropriate congressional committees a description of modifications to command and operational control arrangements within military alliances to which the United States may have agreed by Congress, and that could be made in order to reduce any risks to members of the Armed Forces of the United States identified pursuant to subsection (a)(2).

(b) Notification to Congress.—

(1) In general.—Subject to paragraph (2), no later than 15 days after the President makes a determination that an action is in the national interest of the United States, the President shall provide a full notification to Congress in writing of such action.

(2) Exception.—If the President determines that a full notification under paragraph (1) could jeopardize the national security of the United States or compromise a United States law enforcement activity, the President may not notify Congress in writing of such action.

SEC. 1412. NONDELEGATION.

The authorities vested in the President by sections 1404 and 1406 shall not be delegated to the President pursuant to section 301 of title 3, United States Code, or any other provision of law. The authority vested in the President by section 1408 may not be delegated to the President pursuant to section 301 of title 3, United States Code, or any other provision of law to any other provision of law to any other person or entity other than the Secretary of Defense, and if so delegated may not be subdelegated.
(10) PEACEKEEPING OPERATION UNDER CHAPTER VI OF THE CHARTER OF THE UNITED NATIONS OR PEACE ENFORCEMENT OPERATION UNDER CHAPTER VII OF THE CHARTER OF THE UNITED NATIONS.—The term “peacekeeping operation under chapter VI of the Charter of the United Nations” means any operation carried out with the consent of the Security Council of the United Nations pursuant to the Charter or under a decision of the Security Council and conducted by the United Nations for the purpose of maintaining or restoring peace and security in a country or territory; and "peace enforcement operation under chapter VII of the Charter of the United Nations” means any military operation to maintain or restore international peace and security in which United Nations forces participate as part of a peacekeeping or peace enforcement operation.

(A) is authorized by the United Nations Security Council under chapter VI or VII of the Charter of the United Nations; and

(B) is paid for from assessed contributions of United Nations members that are made available for peacekeeping or peace enforcement activities.

(12) SUPPORT.—The term “support” means assistance of any kind, including financial support, transfer of property or other material support, services, intelligence sharing, law enforcement cooperation, the training or detail of personnel, and the arrest or detention of individuals.

(13) UNITED STATES MILITARY ASSISTANCE.—The term “United States military assistance” means:

(A) assistance provided under chapter 2 or 5 of part II of the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 (22 U.S.C. 2151 et seq.); or

(B) defense articles or defense services furnished with the financial assistance of the United States Government, including through loans and guarantees, under section 23 of the Arms Export Control Act (22 U.S.C. 2763).

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

LEE H. HAMILTON FEDERAL BUILDING AND U.S. COURTHOUSE

Mr. REID. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the Senate proceed to the immediate consideration of H.R. 1583 just received from the House.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. The clerk will report the bill by title.

The legislative clerk read as follows:

A bill (H.R. 1583) to designate the Federal Building and United States Courthouse located at 121 West Spring Street in New Albany, Indiana, as the “Lee Hamilton Federal Building and United States Courthouse.”

There being no objection, the Senate proceeded to consider the bill.

Mr. REID. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that the bill be read the third time and passed, the motion to reconsider be laid upon the table, and the bill be referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

Madam President, before you rule, this is a courthouse to be named for Lee Hamilton. I had the pleasure of serving with him in the House of Representatives on the Foreign Affairs Committee. He is such a fine man. He served 25 or 28 years in the House. He retired. He is still heavily involved in America’s foreign policy. He is one fine person, a great representative of what a person who serves the public should be.

I extend my appreciation to the committee of jurisdiction in the Congress for making this possible for a very fine person, Lee Hamilton.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The bill (H.R. 1583) was read the third time and passed.

ORDERS FOR WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 26, 2001

Mr. REID. Madam President, I ask unanimous consent that when the Senate completes its business today, it adjourn until the hour of 9:30 tomorrow morning, Wednesday, September 26. I further ask that on Wednesday, following the morning business and the pledge, the Journal of the proceedings be approved to date, the morning hour be deemed to have expired, the time for the two leaders be reserved for their use later in the day, and there be a period for morning business until 10 a.m., with Senators permitted to speak therein for up to 5 minutes each, with the following exceptions: Senator DASCHLE or designee, 15 minutes; Senator LOTT or designee, 15 minutes.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

PROGRAM

Mr. REID. So tomorrow the Senate will convene at 9:30 a.m. with morning business until 10 a.m. The majority leader asked me to announce that he expects us to consider the Military Construction Appropriations Act. Both Senators DASCHLE and LOTT believe this bill should move very quickly. We hope that we can call this bill in a very short period of time. Rollcall votes are possible tomorrow until 2 p.m.

ORDER FOR ADJOURNMENT

Mr. REID. Madam President, if there is no further business to come before the Senate, I ask unanimous consent that following the statement by Senator BROWNBACK, the Senate stand in adjournment thereafter, in the order of the Senators.
up to 10 minutes as in morning business.

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Without objection, it is so ordered.

The Senator from Kansas is recognized.

Mr. BROWNBACK. I thank the Chair.

(The remarks of Mr. BROWNBACK pertaining to the introduction of S. 1465 are printed in today’s RECORD under “Statements on Introduced Bills and Joint Resolutions.”)

Mr. BROWNBACK. Madam President, I yield the floor.

ADJOURNMENT UNTIL 9:30 A.M. TOMORROW

The PRESIDING OFFICER. Under the previous order, the Senate stands in adjournment until 9:30 a.m. tomorrow.

Thereupon, the Senate, at 7:49 p.m., adjourned until Wednesday, September 26, 2001, at 9:30 a.m.

The House met at 9 a.m.

MORNING HOUR DEBATES

The SPEAKER. Pursuant to the order of the House of January 3, 2001, the Chair will now recognize Members from lists submitted by the majority and minority leaders for morning hour debates. The Chair will alternate recognition between the parties, with each party limited to not to exceed 25 minutes, and each Member, except the majority leader, the minority leader or the minority whip limited to not to exceed 5 minutes, but in no event shall debate extend beyond 9:50 a.m.

The Chair recognizes the gentlewoman from Florida (Ms. ROELEHTINEN) for 5 minutes.

U.S. POLICY IN THE FIGHT AGAINST INTERNATIONAL TERRORISM ORIGINATING IN SOUTH ASIA

Ms. ROELEHTINEN. Mr. Speaker, a regional approach to the war on terrorism is critical to success. The U.S. national security team must fully understand the dynamics between actors, as well as the strategic considerations which are guiding the responses to U.S. requests in this battle of good versus evil.

In developing our policy toward Pakistan, for example, some have argued that it is imperative that we address the long-standing relationship between the ISI and the Taliban and between the ISI and Osama bin Laden. We must not ignore facts such as the ISI's past warnings to bin Laden about U.S. military action.

There are reports that on August 20, 1998, when the United States launched cruise missile strikes on bin Laden terrorist training camps in southeastern Afghanistan, it was the head of Pakistan's ISI at the time who contacted bin Laden to warn him about U.S. surveillance and attempts to track down his whereabouts. He also cautioned bin Laden to relocate immediately because U.S. strikes were imminent.

We must also address the power relations within the Pakistani government to accurately assess the General's ability to contain challenges from the ISI. These and other factors have a direct bearing on U.S. short-term capabilities and long-term response to terrorism originating in this region.

In looking at Afghanistan, we must be careful not to follow a microcosmic view of the problem. While an immediate, comprehensive and multi-tiered military and political response to the September 11 terrorist attacks is necessary, the U.S. must also prepare a strategy to consider the myriad of factors contributing to the proliferation of terrorist activities in Afghanistan.

For one, we must look at the nature of the regime. This is not a reference to the process offered by the administration to evaluate intelligence sources. However, when formulating and implementing U.S. foreign policy toward a state, the nature and behavior of the regimes or governments which rule these countries is a critical variable to be considered.

As chairman of the Subcommittee on International Operations and Human Rights, I bear witness on a regular basis to the regimes that some regimes undertake against their own people and how this abhorrent behavior manifests itself in their views and approach to global relations.

As the President stated during his address to the Congress last week, a regime such as the Taliban which tortures its own people and shows no regard for human life can never be trusted.

A regime such as the Taliban can never understand or appreciate the magnitude of the loss suffered by our country 2 weeks ago.

Secretary of State Powell stated, when he was chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, that our military objective must also have a political objective. This political objective in Afghanistan and elsewhere in south Asia should be to support and promote pluralistic representative systems guided by respect for human rights, civil liberties and religious freedoms; governments who would not promote and foster terrorism. Only then can we hope to achieve our long-term goal of eradicating the world of the cancer of terrorism.

As many have stated in the aftermath of the brutal attacks of September 11, democracy is the best antidote for Islamic militancy and radicalism. In studying the nature of the leadership which rules these countries and these regions, we must also differentiate between those who oppress and those who are guided by democratic tenets.

The U.S. must, as the Financial Times stated on September 17, be careful not to align itself too closely with authoritarian regimes that have dreadful records of suppressing minority groups. This view was echoed in a Washington Post editorial of September 24 that warned against forming tactical bonds with central Asian republics. It stated that in forming such bonds, America must not forget what it is fighting for as well as what it is fighting against.

Further, cooperation with the U.S. should not require inducements. Support for the U.S. and the war against terrorism should come from an understanding of the dangers of terrorist methods and tactics, not from a quid pro quo.

As President Bush has underscored, you are either with us or you are with the terrorists.

Ultimately, having learned the lessons of the Cold War, the U.S. must embark on this battle from a position of overwhelming strength if we are to be victorious.

I fully support the President and his advisors in this difficult journey and I wish them Godspeed.

MONETARY ASSISTANCE FOR THE AIRLINES

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. JOHNSON of Illinois). Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 3, 2001, the gentleman from Oregon (Mr. BLUMENAUER) is recognized during morning hour debates for 5 minutes.

Mr. BLUMENAUER. Mr. Speaker, 2 weeks ago, you were in the Chair and I had taken to the floor for this session. As we have seen the impacts of September 11 continue to unfold, it does, as you and I have remarked, seem like a lifetime ago. Yet, in these times of emergency, the American public deserves our very best efforts. They deserve to have Congress look after the interests of all our citizens, America's workers as well as its businesses, in a careful, cost-effective manner.

In our rush to meet the growing demands created by the devastation in New York, Washington, D.C., and Pennsylvania, Congress would do well to follow Mr. Greenspan's cautious advice, that it is more important to be right than to be quick.

Last week, Congress approved $15 billion in Federal support for airline carriers. While no one doubts that the aviation industry has had enormous impacts on our communities, on American business and on our people's daily lives, our rush to provide relief created what I feel is a dangerous precedent.

Within a week of receiving airlines' demands for help, Congress passed and the President signed a $15 billion package that appears to go well beyond the amount needed to provide the stabilization required for this vital part of the economy.
CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE 17881

September 25, 2001

PUSHED ASIDE FOR LATER CONSIDERATION were many of the more difficult questions, providing assistance to over 100,000 airline employees laid off since the attacks, puzzling what role the Federal Government should play to ensure greater airport security, or addressing the numerous collateral victims across the country directly related to air transport who have also been attacked and damaged, even though they live far away from ground zero.

These ripple effects need to be heard and addressed. The question is not merely whether the industry got too much money. When huge sums of taxpay- ers' dollars are involved, we need to establish clearly what will be the value that the public receives in return. Is it going to receive an equity interest in return for an extraordinary investment? Or perhaps we could have purchased the noisy, polluting, inefficient airplanes and retired them from service.

It seems, Mr. Speaker, that in the upcoming weeks and months, we know Congress will be asked to provide assistance to other interests and industries and clearly to help bolster our troubled economy. We would do well to seize this as an opportunity to be thoughtful in our approach and to capitalize on this renewed bipartisan spirit on Capitol Hill to craft legislation that addresses the complexity of the problems that adds real value and makes sufficient use of tax dollars.

This is not the time to throw money at problems without a sense of the trade-offs, without falling to include all impacted individuals and businesses or weakening labor or fiscal protections.

Above all, it is not a time to use the sense of crisis to push through questionable legislation, whatever the motivation. The American public deserves our best at the time of crisis, and we in Congress would do well to heed the open letter from taxpayers for common sense that calls for these very best efforts for our taxpayers, our citizens to make sure that we are equal to the challenge.

INTRODUCTION OF CESAR ESTRADA CHAVEZ STUDY ACT

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 3, 2001, the gentlewoman from California (Ms. SOLIS) is recognized during morning hour debates for 5 minutes.

Ms. SOLIS. Mr. Speaker, in the wake of the most horrific attack in the United States history, we have seen many modern American heroes among us.

Today's heroes are firefighters, police officers, chaplains, paramedics, steelworkers and those who have fought to prevent further destruction, and the families of the victims who dis-play the strength of going on and living. Their heroism is in the spirit of those who have gone before them such as Martin Luther King, Jr., John F. Kennedy, Robert F. Kennedy, and Cesar Chavez, former president of the United Farm Workers.

Today, Mr. Speaker, I proudly introduce this bill that will honor one of our past presidents, Cesar Chavez, founder of the United Farm Workers and passionate champion of human and civil rights. These values and beliefs and dedication to all working men and women, regardless of socioeconomic background, make him truly an American hero.

This bill will highlight his contributions by studying the ways to honor him within the National Park Service. It is a first step in honoring his tremendous accomplishments and the local communities where he placed his footprints.

Cesar Chavez was a humble man. Little did anyone know of the greatness he would bestow upon future generations. In his early childhood, Cesar was raised as a farm worker in Yuma, Arizona. Raised during the Great Depression, his family lost everything and were forced to join thousands of farm workers that wandered the southwest just to find work.

During his youth, the Chavez family migrated throughout the southwest working on various farms that fed our country. The young Cesar Chavez experienced firsthand the hardships and injustices of thousands of farm workers at that time. His home was barely livable and his school hardly fit to be called a schoolhouse.

Unfair labor practices, harassment, abuse, long hours, low pay, hazardous working conditions, and limited edu-cational opportunities kept many farm workers in a life of poverty and suffering. However, Chavez sought to make changes in the way farm workers were treated throughout the country.

He united many others who suffered similar atrocities with those who empathized with the struggle and became a part of the union movement. In 1962, he left the fields and joined the Community Service Organization. There he conducted voter registration drives and campaigns against racial and economic discrimination.

In 1962, he took that vast experience, his compassion, along with his brothers and sisters and developed a multiethnic struggle and started the National Farm Workers Association which today is known as the United Farm Workers of America.

The UFW, as it is known, succeeded in organizing the oppressed. They overcame this opposition through boycotts and pickets, and when all else failed, Chavez almost died by participating in a hunger strike.

Chavez was a student of Mahatma Gandhi's nonviolent philosophies. He knew that he could not unite people through violent means but he could connect them by joining hands in peaceful demonstrations.

Since its inception the UFW has achieved incredible results throughout the country. Fair wages, better health care coverage, pension benefits, housing, pesticide regulations and countless other rights and privileges that protect all farm workers in the fields of the United States.

In the past, we have honored other heroes like Martin Luther King, Jr., and the civil rights movement, through the national parks and land. The life of Cesar Chavez and his family provides an outstanding opportunity to interpret the history of agricultural labor in the United States through honoring him through this particular National Park Service.

Most importantly, this bill that I introduced today provides an excellent opportunity for us to honor a true American hero.

RECESS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 12 of rule I, the Chair declares the House in recess until 10 a.m. today.

Accordingly (at 9 o'clock and 15 minutes a.m.), the House stood in recess until 10 a.m. today.

AFTER RECESS

The recess having expired, the House was called to order by the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. SWEENEY) at 10 a.m.

PRAYER

The Reverend Walter L. Solomon, Mt. Moriah Missionary Baptist Church of North Pratt, Birmingham, Alabama, offered the following prayer:

Our Father, whose presence brings joy to every condition, and whose favor brings strength to every endeavor in life, we thank You for the blessings of this day. Thank You for life and for freedom. God, we acknowledge You as the ruler of our Nation.

Father, bless these representatives that You have given the task of leading this Nation in times like these. Father, lead them to do Your will. Allow them to uphold the traditions that have made our Nation great. We pray that they will be led with vision, integrity, and accountability.

Father, bless those of this Nation who are hurting, those who are weak, those who are weary. Bless our President and his cabinet with wisdom, that together they may lead our Nation during this period of restoration.

Bless our Nation with favor, that we might do great things in Your name.

The UFW, as it is known, succeeded in organizing the oppressed. They overcame this opposition through boycotts and pickets, and when all else failed, Cesar Chavez almost died by participating in a hunger strike.
Keep us together as one Nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.
In Jesus’ name, we pray. Amen.

THE JOURNAL

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair has examined the Journal of the last day’s proceedings and announces to the House his approval thereof.

Pursuant to clause 1, rule I, the Journal stands approved.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Will the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Pitts) come forward and lead the House in the Pledge of Allegiance.

Mr. PITTS led the Pledge of Allegiance as follows:
I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

WELCOMING THE REVEREND WALTER L. SOLOMON, MT. MORIAH MISSIONARY BAPTIST CHURCH OF NORTH PRATT, BIRMINGHAM, ALABAMA

(Mr. HILLIARD asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. HILLIARD. Mr. Speaker, we welcome Reverend Walter Solomon to this Chamber. We are very appreciative of his leadership in Birmingham, Alabama, and indeed in this Nation. His work on the national level with the National Baptist Convention is extraordinary. Many opportunities have been afforded this young man and many things are expected from him.

Mr. Speaker, as we move forward in these difficult times, there will be men like Reverend Solomon, who will make the difference. There will be men in this Chamber who will perform to the utmost. We thank him for coming this morning. May God bless him and his family, and may God bless America.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The Chair will entertain ten 1-minute speeches from each side.

ORGAN DONATION, THE GIFT OF LIFE

(Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend her remarks.)

Ms. ROS-LEHTINEN. Mr. Speaker, the stinging attacks of September 11 remind us of the fragility of life. Life is fleeting, and no one knows it better than the nearly 60,000 patients waiting to receive transplant organs. Today alone, nine patients will die because a match was not found.

The Transplant Foundation at the University of Miami is dedicated to transplant research because there is no greater gift than the gift of life. On October 13, the Foundation will host its sixth annual That’s Life ball to raise funds for patient services and public education. I congratulate president Donnie Coker and president-elect Ivan Gomez of the Transplant Foundation of Miami. Also Ellie Compton, Jeffrey Barash, John Venezia, and surgeons Joshua Miller, Andreas Tzakis, and Si Pham.

I commend the That’s Life committee and members of all boards who devotedly educate our community on organ procurement.

Becoming an organ donor is as easy as checking a box on your driver’s license, and it could literally mean a life to a transplant patient. I have signed up as an organ donor, and I encourage all of my colleagues to leave a lasting legacy by giving the gift of life.

ENVIRONMENTAL PRIORITIES

(Mr. TRAFICANT asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Speaker, all around America firefighters, policemen, and rescue workers prove to be heroes. What is troubling though, in Washington States, weeks before the attack, four firefighters died because of red tape and the Endangered Species Act. Officials there delayed using helicopters for 4 hours on a massive fire because it might harm the protected bull trout fingerlings.

Beam me up. Since when are fish more important than the lives of our brave firefighters?

This is too much.

I yield back all the cod liver oil in the bowels of these conservationists and bureaucratic leaders.

PROTECTING LIBERTY AND FREEDOM

(Mr. GIBBONS asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. GIBBONS. Mr. Speaker, as we continue to mourn the senseless loss of thousands of Americans, let us begin to ensure that the tragic events of September 11 never happen again.

This week we will consider legislation to begin providing our military men and women the resources they have needed for years. According to Secretary of Defense Donald Rumsfeld, the United States military needs “every penny” of the $343 billion provided in the fiscal year 2002 Defense budget, because in real terms the Defense budget has declined every year from 1985 until 1998. Our battle to combat terrorism will require dedication and commitment not only by our armed services and by the American public, but by Congress, this very Congress, as well.

We need to ensure that our military has every tool and resource available to enable them to protect freedom and liberty. Therefore, I encourage all of my colleagues to support the defense authorization bill, a down payment for our military to enable them to meet the challenges of today and to begin preparing for those of tomorrow.

KEEP FAITH WITH OUR AIRLINES

(Mr. MATHESON asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. MATHESON. Mr. Speaker, over the last 2 weeks, we have all seen what has become of our airline industry. Airport concourses across the country seem more like ghost towns than centers of international commerce. The lounges are empty, the taxi stands and busses are vacant. Across the country, airports that should be at the center of municipal liveliness, now seem to be monuments to a bygone era.

The terrorist attacks left our nation reeling, but they did not change the fundamental soundness of any of our industries or the safety of future fliers. Over the past 2 weeks, our airline system has been hurt much more by perception than reality. It is our responsibility in this Congress not only to provide cash to the airlines, but also to provide reassurance and security to their passengers.

Airport and airplane safety should now become the domain of the Federal Government. Before September 11, security was provided by the airlines that usually contracted this service to the cheapest bidder. Safety of the traveling public should be a basic function of government. We have the Coast Guard to protect boaters, we make sure the State Police monitor our highways, the skill of government-trained air traffic controllers has all but guaranteed the safety of our space. Why should security in airports and airplane cabins be any different?

COMING TOGETHER IN A TIME OF NEED

(Mr. FOLEY asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. FOLEY. Mr. Speaker, today I rise with a great deal of pride to salute the communities I represent, Palm Beach County, Martin, St. Lucie, Okeechobee, Glades, Hendry, and Highlands, the 16th Congressional District in Florida.

I am so proud because every citizen of our community rallied together for this Nation, supporting those who are
Mr. Speaker, H. Res. 245 is an open rule providing for the consideration of H.R. 2944, the Fiscal Year 2002 District of Columbia Appropriations Act. Overall, this bill provides $6.8 billion in local funding and a $386 million Federal payment to the District of Columbia. By way of comparison, the final fiscal year 2001 D.C. appropriations bill provided a total of $6.8 billion in local funding and $386 million Federal payment. The rule waives all points of order against consideration of the bill.

Mr. Speaker, H. Res. 245 provides for 1 hour of general debate, equally divided and controlled by the chairman and ranking minority member of the Committee on Appropriations, and it waives clause 2 of rule XXI (prohibiting unauthorized appropriations or legislative provision in a general appropriations bill) against provisions within H.R. 2944. The rule also waives FRA that the bill be considered for amendment by paragraph.

The rule provides that amendments in part A of the Committee on Rules report accompanying H. Res. 245 shall be considered as adopted.

It also waives points of order against the amendment printed in part B of the Committee on Rules report, which may be offered only by a Member designated in the report and only at the appropriate point in the reading of the bill. The rule provides for one motion to recommit, with or without instructions. I urge my colleagues to support this rule on H.R. 2944, which will allow the House to work its will on the various funding and policy matters contained in this bill. I should note that the bill is the 11th of 13 regular appropriations bills that the House will need to consider and enact in order to complete the fiscal year 2002 discretionary budget.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman from Georgia (Mr. LINDER) for yielding me the customary one-half hour, and I yield my time as I may consume. The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. Sweeney). The gentleman from Georgia (Mr. LINDER) is recognized for 1 hour.

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, for the purpose of debate only, I yield the customary 30 minutes to the gentlewoman from New York (Ms. Slaughter), pending which I yield myself such time as I may consume. During consideration of this resolution, all time yielded is for the purpose of debate only.
great Member, in the process of developing this legislation, a trend we hope will continue with developing other appropriations measures in the days ahead. Indeed, the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. KNOLENBERG) and the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. FATTAH), the ranking member, and I have tried to behave like grown-up Members of Congress, not able to get all we wanted, understanding that we had some disagreement, each reciprocating; and I was prepared not to object to moving forward.

Mr. Speaker, I regret that this rule must be opposed. I hope that if this bill does, in fact, make it to general debate, we will respect the chairman's call. He made it known as soon as he became chairman that he would like no attachments on his bill. I recognize some have been made in order. I hope that my colleagues who have such attachments will reconsider, in light of criticism from D.C. residents who want to get his bill through. He wants to be an appropriator. If my colleagues have other matters, I am willing to take them to the D.C. City Council or to take them to the authorizing committee.

Matters such as domestic partners, abortions, other matters of controversial local concern do not belong on this bill. Let us get this bill done; let us make this a banner year for D.C. We are off to a good start on the rule. I ask my colleagues to be mindful of the fact that this is a local appropriation and to follow the lead of the Mayor of the District of Columbia and the council when it comes to how to respond to any attachments that may come forward.

Once again, I thank the chairman and the ranking member for very important progress and for the respect they have shown the people and the government of the District of Columbia.

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, at this time I continue to reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. FATTAH), the ranking member of the subcommittee.

Mr. FATTAH. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of the underlying legislation, and I would like to compliment the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. KNOLENBERG), the majority chairman, and the staff for their hard work on this legislation.

However, even as I rise to support the underlying legislation, I have difficulty with this rule, for it seems to lack any respect for the work product of the subcommittee or the full Committee on Appropriations and wants to reverse a bipartisan vote in the full committee. I think that that is unwise and inappropriate. I particularly feel that, at this particular hour, there would be other uses of all of our time than to get into the micromanaging of the District’s affairs. But nonetheless, I oppose the rule, but I support the bill; and I hope that we can move beyond this at one point to the underlying legislation.

I think that the chairman has done a remarkable job in terms of building a consensus around how we should move forward in terms of the District of Columbia’s city; and I hope that we will be able to get there from here, but I think that there has to be respect for the committee’s position. I think that the rule is one that should be revisited and, therefore, I oppose it.

Mr. LINDER. Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 5 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. FRANK).

Mr. FRANK. Mr. Speaker, I have not thought of myself as naive in a long time, but I am sure that I heard and read and even participated in saluting unity, in arguing that divisive issues ought to be deferred at this time; indeed, while I continue to think spending billions on missile defense is a diversion from the real defense needs of this country and a waste, and destabilizing at a time when the world does not need that, I understand the decision not to press that at this time.

So I was deeply shocked to be told yesterday that the Republican leadership has chosen to use this bill to make an assault on millions of gay and lesbian Americans in general, and on those who live in the District of Columbia, in particular.

Not only are they launching this assault, but they are going to extraordinary lengths to do it. A nongermane amendment has been protected by the Committee on Rules so that a decision of the Committee on Appropriations, recognizing the right of people in the District of Columbia to make their own choices about how their money will be spent, can be overruled.

The District of Columbia, by its small “d” democratic processes, decided to say that if two men or two women were in love and were prepared to commit themselves to each other legally and financially, as well as emotionally, the District of Columbia, if they work for the District of Columbia, they would honor that.

For reasons I do not understand, that willingness to accept a mutual declaration of responsibility from two people in love deeply offends some of my colleagues.

On a personal level, it does not matter to me what they think. They are entitled to their opinions, prejudicial as I might think they are. But to tell the 550,000 people of the District, who have voted through their democratic processes, that they may not use money raised in the District by taxation voted by the District on residents of the District, that they may not use that money to carry out a policy that recognizes that love, shame on those who pervert it, and particularly now, when we are coming together as a Congress, lifting up our eyes to deal with big issues and finding ways to bring Americans together.

Everybody in America is concerned about the people who died, and gay and lesbian and bisexual and transgendered people are no different than others. In addition to the general mourning, there is a discussion of those in that particular community, of which I am a member, who died.

Indeed, we have the military announcing what we call a “stop loss” policy, which says that gay and lesbian Americans in the military who are, I think, wholly unfairly and incorrectly and unwisely subject to being thrown out, may not be thrown out now. In other words, at this time of terrible crisis, when we are going to ask Americans to go and risk their lives for the defense of our country, we are overbooking, we are overextending ourselves, we are going to make an exception in some cases to the policy of excluding gays and lesbians.

And gay and lesbian people who have been asking for the right are going to get it. They are going to be allowed to die for their country.

But according to some, we are just not allowed to live here freely, because this bill says that we will violate what some have said is a philosophical principle that local people at the local level ought to be able to decide how to spend local money.

We are not talking formally about States’ rights. The District of Columbia is not a State. It is a self-governing group of Americans who have voted—through an open and democratic process, through a public policy, which are they prepared to support with their money. And the Republican leadership says, no, no, we cannot let them do that. We cannot let them do that, because if two men love each other, to express their love for each other and one of them works for the District of Columbia and wants to extend health benefits to her partner, we cannot allow that. That somehow is going to undo the great fabric of this Nation.

And we will even violate the normal rules of the House, because it is the one amendment that is nongermane. In our technical terms, it is legislating in an inappropriate bill.

And I believe, how seriously do they take this terrible assault on the dignity and freedom and emotions of gay and lesbian Americans? They give us 10 minutes to talk about it. There will be 5 minutes in which those of us who are appalled by this intrusive, divisive policy of their fellow citizens, because those of us who do not live in the District on a legal basis, share the pain of those in the District who will be penalized by this punitive amendment, and they give us 5 minutes to talk about it.

I do not see how anyone who has talked about not being divisive, who has talked about unity at this time, can agree to dealing with this amendment at this time, and certainly not to a 5-minute debate on each side, where a bill’s fundamental rights, the right of the District to self-governance, that is to be disposed of in 5 minutes? Have people so little concern for the rights and feelings of others? I hope the rule is voted down.

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Speaker, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from Oregon (Mr. BLUMENAUER).

Mr. BLUMENAUER. Mr. Speaker, I appreciate the gentlewoman’s courtesy in yielding time to me to speak briefly to this rule.

Mr. Speaker, like the previous Member, I am deeply concerned that, in a time when we should be coming together as a Congress, lifting up our eyes to deal with big issues and finding ways to bring Americans together, that this Congress sees fit to, sadly, divide people by playing with the budget for the District of Columbia.

It seems to me that responsible businesses across the country and a number of local governments, some of which I represent, have seen fit to extend in a reasonable fashion insurance coverage to their employees and their domestic associates, people that they have an insurable interest, people that they care about. This is something that is reasonable.

I had an opportunity in my prior life to help craft provisions like this. It was good for our employees, it was the right thing to do.

For the last 8 years, the District of Columbia’s government has chosen to do this with their own resources. Yet, Congress, in its wisdom, has intervened, seen fit to deny them the right to do what is being done by thousands of people across the country. It is wrong. It is particularly wrong to do it now.

We do not need to have these gratuitous efforts at bringing forth unnecessary political battles. This ought to be one time that we can move beyond it.

Mr. Speaker, I was also embarrassed that the Congress of the United States saw fit, in dealing with needed resources for emergency planning, that we were going to micromanage the District of Columbia and withhold some of its funds in dealing with the $16 million in special Federal payments for emergency security planning.

I find that particularly ironic. Mr. Speaker, when I consider that the events of the last 2 weeks demonstrated that the Federal Government did not have its act together regarding the District of Columbia; and further that if the standard for preparedness is what we as Members of this House have done in terms of preparing our offices and our employees for these emergencies, that bar is very low.

Every man and woman who serves in this Chamber knows that we were not ready, and has doubts about whether we are ready today. Yet, for the committee to therefore overlook our shortcomings and try to manage the District of Columbia by withholding funds, I find outrageous, and embarrassing. I hope we will reject the rule and reject the bill.

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Speaker, I call for a no vote on the rule, and I yield back the previous question on the resolution.

Mr. Speaker, I urge my colleagues to support this rule so we can get on with the debate on the important appropriations bills.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time, and I move the previous question on the resolution.

The previous question was ordered. The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SWEENEY). The question is on the resolution.

The question was taken and the Speaker pro tempore announced that the ayes appeared to have it.

Ms. SLAUGHTER. Mr. Speaker, I object to the vote on the ground that a quorum is not present and make the point of order that a quorum is not present.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Evidently a quorum is not present. The Sergeant at Arms will notify absent Members. The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—yeas 236, nays 11, as follows:

In the Committee of the Whole

September 25, 2001

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE

Mr. ROEMER, Mr. DOUGGERTY, Mr. MOLLOR, Mr. RAHALL, Ms. CARSON of Indiana, Mr. LOFgren, Mrs. MINK of Hawaii, Mrs. MEEK of Florida, and Mrs. JOHNSON of Connecticut changed their vote from “yea” to “nay.”

So the resolution was agreed to.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

Stated against:

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Speaker, yesterday evening a tornado ripped through several towns and I was in Maryland surveying the damage.

I would like the Record to reflect that had I been present I would have voted “no” on rollcall 351.

GENERAL LEAVE

Mr. KNOXLENNBERG. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent that all Members may have 5 legislative days within which to revise and extend their remarks on the bill (H.R. 2944) making appropriations for the government of the District of Columbia and other activities chargeable in whole or in part against the revenues of said District for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2002, and for other purposes, and that I be permitted to include tabular and extraneous material on the bill.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SWEENEY). Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA APPROPRIATIONS ACT 2002

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SWEENEY). Pursuant to House Resolution 245 and rule XVIII, the Chair declares the House in the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill, H.R. 2944.

In the Committee of the Whole

Accordingly, the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the consideration of the bill (H.R. 2944) making appropriations for the government of the District of Columbia and other activities chargeable in whole or in part against the revenues of said District for the fiscal year ending September 30, 2002, and for other purposes, with Mr. BEREUTER in the chair.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.
Under the rule, the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. KNOLLENBERG) and the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. FATTAH) each will control 30 minutes. The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. KNOLLENBERG).

Mr. KNOLLENBERG. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Chairman, I am pleased to bring before the House the Fiscal Year 2002 District of Columbia Appropriations Act. Before I present the details of this legislation, I want to remind my colleagues of the context in which we consider the bill. A little more than 6 years ago, this Congress took a drastic, but necessary, action in response to the completely unacceptable financial condition of our Nation’s Capital by creating the District of Columbia Financial Responsibility and Management Assistance Authority, or better known as the Control Board.

We gave the Control Board authority over virtually every function of District government. We asked it to bring the city recover after years of mismanagement and accumulated budget deficits. Back in 1995 that looked like no small task, and only starry-eyed dreamers would have said that just 6 years later the District would have had 4 consecutive years of budget surpluses leading to the sunset of the Control Board. That is exactly what happened.

Today is September 25, and in 5 days the Control Board will disband. This I believe is a tremendous credit to the steady hand of Mayor Anthony Williams and his policies as well as the efforts of Chief Financial Officer Nat Gandhi. City Council Chair Linda Cropp and District of Colombia courts for the reform of the D.C. Family Court.

Just last Thursday this House passed the District of Columbia Family Courts Act, which provides for the first major overhaul of the District of Columbia courts’ Family Division in some 30 years. The additional funds in this legislation will pay for the transition. The fiscal year 2002 District of Columbia Appropriations Act totals slightly more than $7.14 billion, of which approximately $5 billion is from local funds, and $2.1 billion is from Federal grants. I will not go into the portion of the bill dealing with the local funds except to say that we fully funded every penny of the city’s budget. What the city asked for, we provided.

The Fiscal Year 2002 District of Columbia Appropriations Act totals $7.14 billion. Of the bill, excluding Federal grants, totals $398 million, which my colleagues will know is slightly more than the $359 million President requested, but $66 million less than what was enacted in fiscal year 2001. The difference between this bill and the President’s budget is due primarily to two items: first, the bill provides $23.5 million above the President’s request to the District of Columbia for the reform of the D.C. Family Court.

The fiscal year 2002 District of Columbia Appropriations Act totals slightly more than $7.14 billion, of which approximately $5 billion is from local funds, and $2.1 billion is from Federal grants. I will not go into the portion of the bill dealing with the local funds except to say that we fully funded every penny of the city’s budget. What the city asked for, we provided.

I urge my colleagues to support it. Beyond these two items, this bill fully funds the Federal Government’s responsibilities in the District of Columbia, including, among other things, $77 million in resident college tuition support, $5.5 million for the Children’s National Medical Center, $585,000 for the chief medical examiner to clear a backlog of autopsies, and $1 million for the St. Colletta of Greater Washington Expansion project.

In addition, this legislation eliminates 35 of the 69 general provisions contained in last year’s bill. Let me repeat that. The bill deletes over half of the general provisions that were in last year’s bill. I conducted a thorough review of each and every general provision and removed the ones that are now permanent law, not requested by the President, or had been rendered obsolete.

I know that the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. FATTAH) and the gentleman from the District of Columbia (Ms. NORTON) have expressed reservations about certain parts of this bill. As the managers’ amendment that the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. FATTAH) and I offered at the Committee on Rules will attest, I am committed to working with them and will continue to do so as the bill winds its way through the legislative process. I am hopeful that we can reach a solution that is satisfactory to all.

Before I close, I would like to thank the many staff members who do it possible to bring this bill to the floor today. Migo Miconi and Mary Porter of the subcommittee staff and Jeff Onizuka and Candia Symonds from my staff have been invaluable in this whole process. Let me also say that Tom Forhan of the minority staff has been of great help. We reasoned together and talked things through, and I appreciate his support; and also Williams Miles from the personal staff of the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. FATTAH) They all deserve great applause.

Mr. Chairman, the District of Columbia is a city full of treasures and rich history and should be the crown jewel of all American cities. After all, the leading Nation in the world deserves a world-class capital. Make no mistake, the District of Columbia is on its way back, and this legislation is another important step. This is a good bill, and I urge my colleagues to support it.

Mr. Chairman, I am submitting at this point for the RECORD a chart comparing the amounts recommended in the legislation to the appropriations for fiscal year 2002.

1/ Section 403 PL 106-554, 114 Stat 21632a-198
2/ Refined
Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. FATTAH. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself and the chair to the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. TOM DAVIS) and myself and a number of others, like the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. MORAN) and the gentleman from Maryland (Mrs. MORELLA) worked on in my first term in this Congress. This control board has worked very well. This city has had an improvement in its bond ratings for each of the last 4 years. It has a cash reserve that I think is unmatched by any other American city. The mayor and the city council deserve all of the credit, working with the control board, to moving the fiscal functioning of this city to where it is today.

I would also like to take a minute to talk about the tuition support program, another piece of legislation that I had an opportunity to join with a number of my colleagues in cosponsoring, for it has responded to the needs of literally hundreds and hundreds of students from the District and allowed them to pursue an education in colleges all across this country and to do so at an in-State tuition rate. It is, I think, representative of the kind of legislation that this House can produce when we are getting mired in the activities of trying to micromanage and to overrule the local city council and the mayor.

I want to commend the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. KNOLLENBERG) and his staff also, Migo and his team, because they have done a terrific job.

This bill, as has been stated, is about $65 million less than what the appropriation was last year. It is about $30 million above what the President requested. It represents a response to the needs of the school district within its budget constraints, of the best D.C. appropriations bills that we have ever had in this Congress.

I yield 6 minutes to the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. YOUNG) and our ranking member, the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. OBIEY), always have. This year we have not had to pull our Appropriation Committee chairman and our full ranking committee into this little appropriation process just to help us get it through because of the work of our chairman and ranking member of our subcommittee.

Mr. CHAIRMAN. Mr. Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. KNOLLENBERG. Mr. Chairman, it is my privilege to yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. YOUNG), the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations who does extraordinary work in so many ways.

Mr. YOUNG of Florida. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the bill. I also like to congratulate the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. KNOLLENBERG) for having done an outstanding job in developing this legislation, which is one of the best D.C. appropriations bills that we have seen in a long time, and also the ranking member, the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. FATTAH) who was there every step of the way and had a lot of input in how this bill was finally developed.

When the gentleman from Michigan became chairman of this subcommittee at the beginning of the session, I asked him to do two things: One was to have as good a relationship between the Congress and the Nation's capital city, Washington, D.C., as was humanly possible. I think he has done that extremely well. Also, I asked him to avoid using this bill as a vehicle for many riders that really did not belong on an appropriations bill. I think he deserves a tremendous round of applause for having eliminated 35 of those riders that really did not belong on this bill at any time, and especially not this year.

So he has done a really good job. He has done a good job for our capital city, he has done a good job in the proper positioning of the Congress relative to the capital city, and he has established a great working relationship with the minority and his ranking member. He has already complimented the staff, and they certainly deserve those compliments because they have done a good job. While this is not one of the larger appropriations bills, oftentimes it has been one of the most difficult to prepare and to pass through the Congress. They have done a good job. They worked well with the city. They worked well with the gentleman from the District of Columbia (Ms. NORTON). That is the type of teamwork that we believe the American people want to see.

Mr. FATTAH. Mr. Chairman, I yield 6 minutes to the gentleman from the District of Columbia (Ms. NORTON). I thank the gentleman for yielding time. At the same time I thank him for very hard work on this appropriation. The gentleman from Michigan (Mr. KNOLLENBERG) began his chairmanship by seeking a smooth and fair appropriation process as the chairman of the full committee, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. YOUNG) and our ranking member, the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. OBIEY), always have. This year we have not had to pull our Appropriation Committee chairman and our full ranking committee into this little appropriation just to help us get it through because of the work of our chairman and ranking member of our subcommittee.

Even when the chairman and I have disagreed as we have occasionally, he has been a pleasure to work with, not only because of his well-known pleasant disposition, there have been lots of folks with pleasant dispositions where when it came to the District appropriation, that did not much matter. It has a lot to do with the way in which the chairman has approached his job. He said to himself, "What am I? I am an appropriator. My job is to get this appropriation over. Let me see if I can do that the best way I can." With that workmanlike approach to his job, whenever he and I have had some points of disagreement, we have simply agreed to disagree and try to work it out.

I hope that the way in which the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. KNOllenberger) and I have worked sets a precedent for how the D.C. appropriation will be handled in the future. The chairman said early on, for example, that he took over the chairmanship, that attachments to the D.C. appropriation were not welcome or appropriate. The ranking member, the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Fattah) is the first big-city leader of the D.C. subcommittee, the death of the legendary Julian Dixon.

The gentleman from Pennsylvania has brought very unusual, special skill and insight to this subcommittee. How lucky we are that as we emerge from a control board, we have gotten a ranking member who helped bring his own big city out of precisely the situation the District of Columbia found itself, so that I have turned to the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Fattah) for special advice given his long history and his extraordinary unique background so relevant to our own city.

Mr. Chairman, especially at a time when Congress has made a successful effort, at least thus far, to put aside the usual quarrels, I hope that the bipartisanship we have shown on other matters will be especially evident on the D.C. appropriation. After all, it is the smallest. It is really tiny. It is a tiny fraction of every other appropriation. It consists almost entirely of local funds, raised from local taxpayers. It is a local budget that does not belong here at all.

I apologize that you are distracted by having to get into the business of a local jurisdiction. You should be embarrassed at a time like this to have to do so. Finding ourselves distracted from the most serious business, the business of war and peace following a vicious attack on American soil, I can only hope that this body will not allow the local budget of a city to detain us long or headlines to read after this. The gentleman from California (Mr. Cunningham) who is a valuable member of this committee. He has been involved in the environmental arena and the education arena.

Mr. Cunningham. Mr. Chairman, 8 years ago I was put on the Subcommittee on the District of Columbia, and I am still on the Subcommittee on the District of Columbia, because I volunteered to stay there. This was during the time of Marion Berry, and I thought what better place can we make some changes.

I set out in three specific areas. One, the education system. You recognize, the fire department had to take over control. The roofs, the schools did not open because the roofs were unsafe and the schools were unsafe. We got in. The new school board, we reorganized, we took some of the board members off who were totally unqualified, and the new board has done a good job with charter schools, et cetera.

The one area that I am disappointed in this bill is that for two of those terms I was enabled to take the trial lawyers, liberal trial lawyers that were ripping off the system within the special education program, and they had charter organizations that would literally take millions of dollars out of the special education program. We stopped that. We capped the trial lawyers' fees and put in valuable programs for special education and children, but yet no child was left without representation. I hope that the Senate takes that into consideration and hopefully that will be changed in the Senate, like it was last year.

Another area was the waterfront. The U.S.S. John Glenn, an ice cutter, when we lost an airliner on the 14th Street that is the only ship that could go to that was the U.S.S. John Glenn, an ice cutter, fire boat, to rescue those people. The chairman specifically, the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. KNOllenberger) and the ranking member, supported putting the new engine that was needed, so for airplanes and the waterfront, that will provide a lot of safety for that particular area.

One of the areas that I am also not that happy with on the waterfront, when I first started, this city would only go after a 1-year lease. Now, I am going to invest in a waterfront to make it like a San Diego waterfront.

The City Council at that time was taking money under the table to support leases. We changed that. But one of the areas now is when the city assigned an 8(a) to do some work down on the waterfront. The original bid was $1.6 million. They said well, let us do it with an 8(a), a small business. I said okay. But now that same 8(a), that has never done this kind of work, where it would be done by professionals at $1.6 million, it is now $2.6 million, and they are giving the Corps of Engineers $300,000 and the 8(a) $200,000, which will be taken off the top. That is $1.5 million that I think is squandered in this particular bill.

I am going to ask within the conference that we get support from both sides to account for that $1.5 million that is not going to the waterfront, because of, in my opinion, mismanagement.

I support the bill. What better place, two Irishmen, the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. Moran) and myself, have become very, very close friends when he was ranking member, and I thank the ranking minority member as well.

Mr. Fattah. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2½ minutes to the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. Moran).

Mr. Moran of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding me time and for his leadership, and the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. KNOllenberger).

This is a good bill, but I do have a problem with it. The problem is with the rule. The rule should not have made in order the Weldon amendment, because I had a better bill coming out than might pass if we include the Weldon amendment.

This is a time when we need to come together as a Nation. We should not be advancing amendments that are intended to divide us. That is what the Weldon amendment would do. It would reverse a vote on the full Committee.
on Appropriations that took place last week, and it took place purely on the substance of the issue.

In 1992, the District of Columbia passed a domestic partnership program. We have forbidden them from implementing that program for the last 9 years. All it did was say that the District employees can purchase health insurance at their own expense for a domestic partner. Who qualifies? Well-disabled people and their health care provider, two widows or widowers living together, a grandmother and mother who are jointly raising children, two relatives raising their children together, as well as domestic partners.

The amendment today would continue the ban on the use of local funds to implement the Domestic Partnership Act. But no Federal funds are involved. Why are we involved? Why should we be against expanding health care for the poor? Who are we aiding and who are we harming?

own expense. And I want to commend the committee for at last allowing the District to use its own local funds to implement this modest measure.

Their action is consistent with the atmosphere of tolerance and reflection which has characterized our debates since the terrible events that occurred on September 11. It has been genuinely inspirational to see Americans come together in a spirit of reconciliation that is unusual in our time. I commend the chairman of the subcommittee, and the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. FATTAH), the ranking member, are presenting to the floor. Unfortunately, the Committee on Rules decided to put a very unfortunate amendment in, and I was very pleased to join the gentleman from Florida (Mr. YOUNG), the distinguished chairman of the full Committee on Appropriations, in opposing that rule in a recorded vote.

Mr. Chairman, I come to the floor on September 18. Indeed, it was originally endorsed by a Republican President and a Democratic Congress, and then for 2 years, a Democratic President and a Democratic Congress. It is actually the other side of this debate who brought this issue up on September 18.

I would agree that this is a somewhat divisive issue. But I would just like to point out to my colleagues that I did not bring it up; they did. They introduced this issue for debate at this time.

Now, the other issue I would like to address straight up is there have been people who have gotten up and said that this provision would allow grandparents and mothers and mothers living together, raising children, or persons with disabilities and a live-in care provider, or two sisters raising children to be able to get one of the persons in the house medical coverage. I think that it would have had the option to write a law that would have covered those types of hardship cases; but instead, they chose to write a law that was a blanket provision that simply allows heterosexuals cohabitating to qualify for this benefit and homosexuals cohabitating to qualify for this benefit.

I, along with previous administrations and previous Congresses, have endorsed the policy that simply stated the way we are in like funds withheld from their appropriations their States would receive.

Mr. Chairman, I urge my colleagues to oppose the Weldon amendment when it comes up, and I again thank the ranking member for this good bill; and I urge my colleagues to support the committee position and oppose the Weldon amendment.

Mr. WELDON of Florida. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. KOLBE), the chairman of the Subcommittee on Foreign Operations.

Mr. KOLBE. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Chairman, I want to congratulate the gentleman from Michigan and the gentleman from Pennsylvania for the fine job that they have done on this issue. We have heard it from many people, but I think these plaudits are really due here for a very good job that they have done on this bill.

I am rising to speak at this point because the time on the amendment that will be coming up later offered by the gentleman from Florida (Mr. WELDON) is very limited; and I want to give just a little bit of background, although it has already been covered to some extent. I do hope my colleagues will, when the time comes, oppose the Weldon amendment.

By way of background, the District has had a health benefits law for domestic partners since 1992. We have heard it said here today, 113, 117 other jurisdictions around the country also have a similar provision, so this is hardly anything that is new or different. In fact, the District of Columbia provision is much, much more limited than that offered by most other governmental units. It would allow a partner, and it can be, as the gentleman from Florida noted, a grandmother and... a mother together raising a child; it could be a disabled person with a care giver; it could be two heterosexual people living together; it could be a lesbian or gay couple living together. It allows the one of them who is employed by the District of Columbia to sign the other up for health benefits. I want to emphasize, this benefit is entirely, entirely, at the expense of the individual. No Federal or District of funds are used to subsidize the premiums for the domestic partner.

Now, for the last 9 years, Congress has blocked that D.C. statute from being implemented. But as we have heard on the floor this morning, the state of the District is different from nine years earlier. The Control Board is about to expire. We have confidence in the local government. Now, if we are going to demonstrate that confidence, is this not a good place to start, by lifting the ban and allowing to the District of Columbia that along with 113 other jurisdictions around the country, you can make these decisions about who among your employees can have health benefits? This is the time to lift this prohibition.

Mr. Chairman, it is time to start bringing our country together. We should be uniting our country; we should be bringing people together. We do not need this kind of mean-spirited amendments that is being offered here today.

Mr. Chairman, I urge my colleagues to reject the Weldon amendment.

Mr. FATTAH. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from Texas (Ms. JACKSON-LEE), a member of the Committee on the Judiciary.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Mr. Chairman, I thank the ranking member and the chairman of the subcommittee for a very excellent appropriations bill that recognizes how much we cherish our communities, our people, and particularly in this time. Let me thank them for providing the funds for the emergency security plan, and for the $23 million that helps the family court to protect abused children. Many good things. Let me acknowledge former Chairman Dixon for his leadership.

However, I must stand in opposition to the Weldon amendment. I would just say to the gentleman from Florida, my good friend, there were words that he said that particularly struck me as a reason to oppose this amendment. What he said was the District of Columbia chose to draft this domestic partnership legislation as it did. The Mayor, the city council, the citizens chose to make a determination to protect a group within their jurisdiction, provide all of them with good health care to allow them, no matter what their sexual orientation, to be respected and to alleviate the problem of these individuals trying to be on public assistance. We have already heard about 4,500 corporations and 117 jurisdictions. How would we like to violate, as a member of the Committee on the Judiciary, the constitutional provisions of local and Federal jurisdiction?

Mr. Chairman, we are now here discussing what’s right here in this Congress today, after we have united this country around freedom and justice, by denying the District of Columbia its right to promote its domestic partnership act for good health care under its own local funding.

I ask my colleagues to oppose the Weldon amendment. Let us promote the unity that we promoted in this country. Let us respect the District of Columbia. Let us cherish our capital, and let us cherish freedom and justice for all of the people, no matter what their beliefs. Whatever their beliefs may be and however they stand, whatever their sexual orientation, it is our right to protect their freedom and to protect the Weldon amendment.

Mr. KNOLENBERG. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. PITTS).

Mr. PITTS. Mr. Chairman, I rise to support the Weldon amendment, since others are criticizing it. I must admit that I am a little embarrassed that some have decided to use this bill and this era of bipartisanship to advance the gay agenda.

This Congress and the vast majority of the American people believe that marriage is a sacred union between a woman and a man. This is not a radical concept. No culture in the history of the world has ever thought otherwise. There is no serious religion anywhere in the world that believes otherwise. I oppose using government funds to promote gay partnerships because I have tremendous respect for the families of this country. I oppose using government funds to promote gay partnerships because I have tremendous respect for the families of this country. I oppose using government funds to promote gay partnerships because I have tremendous respect for the families of this country.

Mr. Chairman, I know there are a few vocal voices who will disagree. But the violence of our country that we just suffered requires our unity. We should not be talking about this divisive issue now and trying to move the gay agenda. I urge my colleagues to vote for the Weldon amendment so that we can get on with the real business facing our country.

Mr. FATTAH. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentlewoman from Wisconsin (Ms. BALDWIN).

Ms. BALDWIN. Mr. Chairman, I would associate myself with the comments of some of my colleagues commenting the Committee on Appropriations and subcommittee process that resulted in this bill. Nevertheless, I rise in strong opposition to the Weldon amendment.

At a time when 43 million people in our country lack health care coverage, this amendment would maintain barriers for certain citizens of our capital city to obtain health insurance. This amendment would prohibit the implementation of the District’s plan to extend health care coverage to domestic partners of city employees with its own local funds.

This amendment stands as the only barrier between affordable health care for countless families of city employees. This amendment could mean the difference between a person having a sensible health care plan or no plan at all. It could mean the difference between wellness and illness for the families of city employees.

I implore my colleagues, do not continue to overturn the democratic process that brought this benefit in the first place. The people of this city have spoken, and they have made it clear that health care coverage for domestic partners is what they need. This amendment is a slap in the face, both to the citizens and the leaders of this city.

I can only imagine the uproar that would occur if this House sought to directly overturn the municipal law of any other city in this Nation. Let the democratic process stand. Let the District leadership do their job. Let the District spend its own money. Vote “no” on the Weldon amendment, and let the District implement a health care benefit plan for domestic partners and their families for city employees.

Mr. KNOLENBERG. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. HOSTETTLER).

Mr. HOSTETTLER. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong support of this bill and the Weldon amendment. During this debate, as in years past, we have heard that Congress should not impose its will on the District of Columbia regarding its so-called domestic partnership law.

We have been told that it is a matter of home rule, and we have been lectured that Federal interference is both unwarranted and unconscionable.

Mr. Chairman, I would remind my colleagues of the oath they took to uphold the United Constitution. I would remind them that article 1, section 8 of that great document states that “Congress shall have the power to exercise exclusive legislation in all cases whatsoever over the District.”

I urge my colleagues to vote for the Weldon amendment so that we can get on with the real business facing our country.
Mr. Chairman, regardless of which party has been in power, Congress has consistently prohibited both Federal and District of Columbia tax dollars from being spent on the District’s domestic partnership law. I urge my colleagues to remember their constitutional obligations and to support this amendment.

Mr. FATTAH. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2½ minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. FRANK).

Mr. FRANK. Mr. Chairman, the gentleman from Pennsylvania who got off the floor invoked religion as a reason to support the amendment that would prevent the District of Columbia’s democratically-elected decision on domestic partnership from going into effect, and I know there are religious views of this sort. We have heard them expressed probably in various ways. Indeed, my guess is one could quote from the Taliban at great length about how terrible all of this is.

But the question is not what people in their own individual religious views think, but what a self-governing people, once they have chosen to be free, with some degree of commitment, we are not going to allow it; because what we are talking about here are two people of the same sex to express their affection physically, the District of Columbia repealed that, and to its credit, this Congress allowed that repeal to stand. So understand that according to this Congress, only recently, a few years ago, we allowed the physical expression of intimacy.

So the question now is, do we then follow it up by saying to the people, okay, they can live together and can express their love in a physical way, but by God, if they try to show responsibility, they are not going to be responsible for each other, if they try to couple their emotional and physical sense with some degree of commitment, we are not going to allow it; because what we are talking about here are two people, one of whom works for the District of Columbia and one of whom does not, one of whom has health insurance and one of whom does not.

So do not think Members are banning people’s ability to live together. We are beyond that. This Congress has said the District could make that decision. The question is, once the people live together, do they think it makes sense to say that the person who is working and wants to join the way for health insurance can do it?

What Members are talking about, let us be very clear, there are people whose lives they do not like, and I am one of those, and I regret that, but I must admit I am far beyond losing sleep about what the Taliban or anybody else thinks about the way I live.

But what I assert is my right to live that way equally and freely as an American, and I implore my colleagues, what motivates them to inflict pain on fellow citizens who have done them no wrong? They just want to live.

Can they not let them live?

Our government is about to say that, in times of crisis, they can die for their country, because we are going to put a temporary moratorium on “gays in the military” policy. Let people live and let them die freely.

Mr. FATTAH. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. OLVER), a member of the subcommittee.

Mr. OLVER. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.

Mr. Chairman, I want to associate myself with the remarks of my colleague, the gentleman from Massachusetts, who can always be so very eloquent on this issue and on so many others.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the underlying bill, but I do want to state my very strong opposition to the effort expected here shortly on this floor to prevent the people of D.C. from spending their local tax dollars, which is nearly 95 percent of the whole budget that we are talking about, for the city, for the District of Columbia, to spend that money as they see fit: namely, to implement a law that provides health plan benefits to unmarried domestic partners of city employees, regardless of gender.

Mr. Chairman, the people of Washington, like all Americans, have had a long 2 weeks. It is appalling to me that we are now considering what can only be described as a slap in the face to the people of D.C. and their elected officials. Washington, D.C. should have the right to grant domestic partner benefits with their own local tax dollars.

This issue affects this country, at least 113 local jurisdictions over the length and breadth of the country, from large cities like San Diego to small towns, like Bar Harbor in Maine, offer similar benefits and rights for the domestic partners of local residents. It is clearly not unusual and is clearly a matter of home rule, or should be a matter of home rule. What is unusual is the effort to insert the heavy hand of the Federal Government in this local municipal issue.

After the tragic events of September 11, average Americans are feeling a renewed desire to participate and contribute to this great democracy. Let us not ridicule their efforts with gratuitous riders. Let us, Members, urge Members to vote against that amendment when it comes up.

Mr. KNOLLENBERG. Mr. Chairman, I yield 2½ minutes to the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. DAVIS).

Mr. DAVIS of Virginia. Mr. Chairman, I thank my friend for yielding time to me. I commend him for his leadership as chairman of this subcommittee, and their staff for the excellent work they have done in reviewing the D.C. budget this year and in bringing this bill to the floor in a timely manner.

Mr. Chairman, with the assistance of the Control Board, the Citizen Council, and the mayor, the District of Columbia has made tremendous progress in overcoming the spending and management crisis that drove it to the verge of bankruptcy in 1995.

After four consecutive balanced budgets, Congress restored the mayor’s management authority over nine major departments. Now the city is well on its way to a full recovery. This budget not only maintains the momentum of the management stability and reform, it will also allow the city to implement much needed social service reforms.

Legislation recently passed the House that will implement structural and management reforms in the D.C. Family Court so it can better serve the needs of the city’s most vulnerable children. It addresses the recruitment and retention of Family Court judges, mandates longer judicial terms of service in the Family Court, and imposes the critically important one family-one judge requirement on the Family Court.

As an original cosponsor of that legislation, I am pleased that the Subcommittee on the District of Columbia in the Committee on Appropriations, under the leadership of the gentleman from Michigan (Chairman KNOLLENBERG), has ensured that more than $23 million will be provided for these critical reforms.

The bill also provides $17 million to maintain the D.C. tuition assistance program. Since its inception, the program has grown in popularity among D.C. students and participating colleges and universities. This funding is imperative to ensure that D.C. students have more educational choices, and the same opportunities for higher education that those students in the rest of the country have.

The bill provides $5 million to help the D.C. Child and Family Services Agency promote and facilitate adoptions of D.C. children in the city’s foster care system.

Sixteen million dollars is provided for security planning that is vital to the city, particularly in the wake of the September 11 terrorist attacks.

Overall, Mr. Chairman, this is a budget that keeps the Nation’s Capitol moving forward and addresses some of its most pressing needs. Once again, I applaud the chairman for his leadership, commend the subcommittee for its bipartisan cooperation, and urge my colleagues to support this legislation.

Mr. KNOLLENBERG. Mr. Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Kansas (Mr. RYUN).

Mr. RYUN of Kansas. Mr. Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding time to me.
Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the Weldon amendment against allowing the District of Columbia to endorse the controversial domestic partnership. Without this amendment, the District of Columbia will be able to recognize domestic partnerships, to offer domestic partners benefits to the city employees, and encourage businesses in the District to do the same.

The requirements of domestic partnerships are simply mutual caring and sharing of experience. No long-term commitment is required. Congress oversees D.C. law, and American taxpayers provide roughly one-third of its budget. I could not, in good conscience, commit the taxpayers in my district to subsidize benefits for domestic partners. It is our duty to uphold the traditional marriage and to stop this misguided law, as we have for the past 9 years.

Mr. Chairman, I urge my colleagues to support the Weldon amendment.

Mr. FATTAH. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 2½ minutes.

Mr. Chairman, I would read, in part, a statement from the ranking member of the full committee. This is from the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. OBEY).

"In full committee, Chairman Young and I presented an amendment to redirect $15 million in Federal funds to help the District prepare and begin to implement a revised emergency operations plan."

It was first thought, and I am paraphrasing, that there was no plan available. It later became obvious that the District was not prepared. It submitted a plan to the committee, and the ranking member goes on to say, however, that this plan needs serious revision.

He said, "I trust this bill provides adequate resources to do a careful and complete revision of the Emergency Operations Plan, fully coordinated with other entities in the District, like the U.S. Capitol Police, the Federal Office of Personnel Management, and other local governments."

Mr. Chairman, I include for the RECORD the full remarks of the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. OBEY).

Mr. OBEY. Mr. Chairman, Chairman KOELLENBERG has done a good job with this bill, and I thank him.

He has approved the overall budget for the use of local funds, judiciously used the Federal allocation to fund required services and boost several local initiatives, cut back the number of general provisions, and worked with Mr. FATTAH, the ranking member, to restore a lot of the District’s specific spending plans.

In full Committee, Chairman YOUNG and I presented an amendment to redirect $13 million in Federal funds to help the District prepare and begin to implement a revised Emergency Operations Plan.

In the aftermath of September 11th, it became apparent that many government entities—Federal, state and local—were not prepared for the new reality.

In the District, the Police said there was no plan. The fire department said it had a plan—but it was over thirty years old. The Federal government never told the city it was sending its workers home for the day—the District had to learn that from the press.

So we have this opportunity to help the District make certain that it had an excellent, coordinated Emergency Operations Plan.

The bill withholds about $8 million in unallocated Federal funds until the plan is done to make the point that this was a very serious matter.

Those other funds are not needed right away; this will not have any immediate impact on the District or its citizens.

Now, it turns out the District does have an emergency operations plan, but it is clear it has some very serious problems.

These problems cannot be addressed by a hasty revision.

I trust this bill provides adequate resources to do a careful and complete revision of the Emergency Operations Plan, fully coordinated with other entities in the District, like the U.S. Capitol Police, the Federal Office of Personnel Management administrative offices.

The District should not rush through the process of developing its Emergency Operations Plan—it owes its citizens and the nation the best product possible.

Mr. FATTAH. Mr. Chairman, a lot has been said in particular about the Weldon amendment that we expect to hear from. I want to return, however, to compliment the chairman for the full body of work that is represented in the committee’s efforts. I hope that the committee bill will succeed in this year’s efforts to amend it.

Mr. Chairman, I would now say in terms of the expected amendment offered by the gentleman from Florida (Mr. WELDON), I am reminded of the Hippocratic oath: First, do no harm. Obviously, if we were to pass the Weldon amendment, we are creating an opportunity for citizens in the District to have health insurance. That is not something we should do, especially when they are going to pay for it with their own money.

Absent doing that, these people will have to be paid for through Federal resources in terms of their health care. So that the gentleman who just spoke is worried that he could not, in good conscience, have his citizens provide resources for this, but by supporting the Weldon amendment, we would, in a direct way, require that Federal resources through Medicaid have to be expended for the health care of these citizens who would have paid for the Weldon amendment, health care under their own resources.

Mr. Chairman, I encourage the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. DELAHUNT) refer to one of the heroes of that saved the plane from crashing at the Capitol, which happened to be a gay person, but nonetheless, and maybe even because of, he felt a need to stand up and to do what was right.

I would hope that this House would do what is right and defeat the Weldon amendment.

Mr. KOELLENBERG, Mr. Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

In closing, I would like to thank all Members of Congress who took such an active interest in the District of Columbia appropriations bill this year. The subcommittee received an unprecedented number of requests from Members, which I think shows, as much as anything, how committed they are in this body to our Nation’s Capital, and how far this city has come in the last 6 years.

Mr. Chairman, the bill before us is a good, bipartisan bill that reflects the priorities I set when I first became chairman, that being economic development, public safety.

As was mentioned, this fully funds every penny of the city’s budget, and it ensures that all Federal obligations are met. I want to reemphasize, as has been said before, that we have eliminated more than half of the general provisions that were included in last year’s bill and by our manager’s amendment that was included in our rule, we have shown our commitment to addressing any remaining concerns with the bill.

I intend certainly to do that with the various participants, including the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. FATTAH), obviously, and the gentleman from the District of Columbia (Ms. NORTON).

My first year as chairman of the Subcommittee on the District of Columbia of the Committee on Appropriations has been a very positive experience for me. I began to meet the leadership of the city, I began to meet the people in the city, and I got an understanding from them as to what was on their minds. Their input has been invaluable to me in crafting this bill.

I might also say that the residents have been very kind to me.

Mr. NUSSELE. Mr. Chairman, I rise in favor of H.R. 2944, which provides appropriations for the District of Columbia. As modified by the rule, this bill is consistent with the budget resolution and complies with the Congressional Budget Act of 1974.

H.R. 2944 provides $402 million in budget authority and $409 million in outlays for fiscal year 2002. As reported by the Committee on Appropriations, the bill exceeds the subcommittee on the District of Columbia’s 302(b) allocation of new budget authority by $3 million. Accordingly, the original reported bill violates section 302(l) of the budget, which stipulates that appropriations bills may not exceed the reporting subcommittee’s 302(b) allocation.

I understand the overage was caused by an amendment in committee, which permitted revenue collected from the sale of surplus property associated with the Lorton correctional facility in Virginia to be made available for use by the District.
The appropriations committee has, to its credit, requested a self-executing rule that will bring the bill back within its 302(b) allocation. Accordingly, the bill as modified by the rule is considered to be a budget resolution that complies with the Congressional Budget Act.

H.R. 2944 contains no emergency-designated appropriations, advanced appropriations, or rescissions of previously appropriated budget authority.

As reported, the bill provides $44 million less in new budget authority than the enacted level for fiscal year 2001 but exceeds the President's request for fiscal year 2002 by $60 million.

I commend my colleagues on the appropriations committee for producing a bill that meets the needs of the District of Columbia within the framework of the budget resolution.

Mr. KNOLLENBERG. Mr. Chairman, I yield back any time remaining.

The CHAIRMAN. All time for general debate has expired.

Pursuant to the rule, the bill shall be considered for amendment under the 5-minute rule, and the amendments printed in part A of House Report 107–217 are adopted.

The amendments printed in part B of the report may be offered only by a Member designated in the report and only at the appropriate point in the reading of the bill, shall be considered read, debatable for the time specified in the report, equally divided and controlled by a proponent and an opponent, shall not be subject to amendment, and shall not be subject to a demand for division of the question.

During consideration of the bill for amendment, the Chair may accord priority in recognition to a Member offering an amendment that he has printed in the designated place in the Congressional Record. Those amendments will be considered read.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 2944

Provided, That $17,000,000, to remain available until September 30, 2002, for District of Columbia resident tuition support, administered by the Mayor, for a nationwide program, to be prioritized on the basis of a resident's academic merit and such other factors as may be authorized: Provided further, That the awarding of such funds may be made available until the enactment of legislation containing equal to the amount appropriated for this program for the current fiscal year; Provided further, That $3,406,000 of such amount shall be for payment to the Capitol City Carrier Development and Job Training Partnership; Provided further, That the appropriation for this program may be used for more than 7 percent of the total amount appropriated for this program; Provided further, That one-half of the amounts under the headings ‘Federal Payment for Resident Tuition Support’ shall be for payment to the District of Columbia for a nationwide program.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 2944

Provided, That $4,623,000 of such amount shall be for payment to the Chief Medical Examiner, and ‘Federal Payment to the Chief Medical Examiner’, shall not be subject to amendment under the 5-minute rule, and the amendments in the report, equally divided and controlled by a proponent and an opponent, shall not be subject to amendment, and shall not be subject to a demand for division of the question.

The appropriations committee has, to its credit, requested a self-executing rule that will bring the bill back within its 302(b) allocation. Accordingly, the bill as modified by the rule is considered to be a budget resolution that complies with the Congressional Budget Act.

H.R. 2944 contains no emergency-designated appropriations, advanced appropriations, or rescissions of previously appropriated budget authority.

As reported, the bill provides $44 million less in new budget authority than the enacted level for fiscal year 2001 but exceeds the President's request for fiscal year 2002 by $60 million.

I commend my colleagues on the appropriations committee for producing a bill that meets the needs of the District of Columbia within the framework of the budget resolution.

Mr. KNOLLENBERG. Mr. Chairman, I yield back any time remaining.

The CHAIRMAN. All time for general debate has expired.

Pursuant to the rule, the bill shall be considered for amendment under the 5-minute rule, and the amendments printed in part A of House Report 107–217 are adopted.

The amendments printed in part B of the report may be offered only by a Member designated in the report and only at the appropriate point in the reading of the bill, shall be considered read, debatable for the time specified in the report, equally divided and controlled by a proponent and an opponent, shall not be subject to amendment, and shall not be subject to a demand for division of the question.

During consideration of the bill for amendment, the Chair may accord priority in recognition to a Member offering an amendment that he has printed in the designated place in the Congressional Record. Those amendments will be considered read.

The Clerk read as follows:

GENERAL PROVISIONS

SEC. 101. Whenever in this Act, an amount is specified within an appropriation for particular purposes or objects of expenditure, such amount, unless otherwise specified, shall be considered as the maximum amount that may be expended for said purpose or object rather than an amount set apart exclusively therefor.

Mr. KNOLLENBERG (during the reading). Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the bill through page 34, line 24, be considered as read, printed in the RECORD and open to amendment at any time.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

Mr. FATTY. Mr. Chairman, reserving the right to object, I want to clarify that the gentleman from Florida (Mr. HASTINGS) would have an opportunity to offer his amendment. Obviously I think that there may be a point of order or something raised at that point, but that his opportunity not to offer be void by this unanimous consent.

Mr. KNOLLENBERG. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FATTY. Further reserving the right to object, I yield to the gentleman from Florida.

Mr. KNOLLENBERG. Mr. Chairman, I will continue to reserve the point of order, but I would be glad to yield to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. HASTINGS).

Mr. HASTINGS of Florida. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. FATTY. Further reserving the right to object, I yield to the gentleman from Florida.

Mr. KNOLLENBERG. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order.

Mr. HASTINGS of Florida. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Florida.

The amendment that I would offer, I talked with the chairman and ranking member about the fact that I will withdraw it. I apologize for the delay. I was trying to get an additional copy for the Reading Clerk.

I rise to have this considered to provide the District of Columbia’s Metropolitan Police and Fire Department with an additional $5 million for the purpose of emergency preparation. In the wake of the terrorist attacks of September 11, it is clear that our country needs to do more to prepare for such attacks.

Let me make it very clear, the chairman and ranking member of this committee, as well as the chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, have already addressed this particular subject.

Mr. KNOLLENBERG. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman from Pennsylvania yield?

Mr. FATTY. Mr. Chairman, I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. KNOLLENBERG. Mr. Chairman, it would be appropriate, I think, for the amendment to be read so that the gentleman from Florida (Mr. HASTINGS) can, in fact, present it.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman has that opportunity, but under his reservation, the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. FATTY) is yielding to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. HASTINGS) for a discussion under his reservation.

Mr. FATTY. Mr. Chairman, I withdraw my reservation of objection.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection. Are there any amendments to this portion of the bill?

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. HASTINGS OF FLORIDA

Mr. HASTINGS of Florida. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. HASTINGS of Florida:

In the item relating to “FEDERAL FUNDS—FEDERAL PAYMENT FOR SECURITY PLANNING”—

(1) strike “$16,058,000” and insert “$16,058,000”;

(2) strike “$6,029,000” and all that follows through “security plan;” and insert the following: “$15,058,000 of such amount shall be made available for the Metropolitan Police Department and the Fire Department of the District of Columbia;”.

Mr. KNOLLENBERG. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order.

Mr. HASTINGS of Florida. Mr. Chairman, I would hurry through this in the interest of time.

I was saying that I wanted to thank the chairman of the subcommittee and the ranking member, as well as the chairman and ranking member of the full committee. I know that they have observed the necessity by virtue of the fact that there are funds that are here, but also know that in the District of Columbia there are significant problems that have not been addressed with reference, as we did at the Committee on Rules last night, I pointed this out, that they in some respects have inadequate resources in the fire and police department.

As our Nation’s capital, the District of Columbia is an obvious target. However, as we saw 2 weeks ago, it is in many respects unprepared for such attacks. I applaud, as I have, and commend the efforts and actions of the District’s law enforcement agencies and... officials. I am equally concerned about the inadequacy of resources available to the District’s police and fire departments, however.

No plan was in place on September 11 that dictated how the D.C. police and fire department would deal with a plane attack anywhere in the District, and I am unaware of any plan currently in place that deals with chemical or biological attacks or any other domestic disaster that may occur in the future. This is unacceptable.

In a day and age that warfare is unconventional and casualties will most likely occur within our homeland, our country needs to be prepared. Cities, States and the Federal Government, all need to do their part in developing emergency plans on how to deal with such disasters.

Congress needs to do its part today, and that is why I had offered the amendment which at this time I want to thank the chairman and the ranking member for giving me the opportunity and the great hopes that if a supplemental comes along that we will contemplate the fact that we, this capital, are in the District of Columbia and that they need resources in order to be prepared for any future attacks that we may suffer.

Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to withdraw the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. Without objection, the amendment is withdrawn.

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. Are there any other amendments to that portion of the bill under consideration?

If not, the Clerk will read.

The Clerk read as follows:

SEC. 102. Appropriations in this Act shall be available for expenses of travel and for the payment of dues of organizations concerned with the work of the District of Columbia government, when authorized by the Mayor:

Provided, That in the case of the Council of the District of Columbia, funds may be expended with the authorization of the chair of the Council.

AMENDMENT NO. 3 OFFERED BY MS. NORTON

Ms. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, I offer amendment No. 3.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment No. 3 offered by Ms. NORTON:

Mr. KNOLLENBERG. Mr. Chairman, I reserve a point of order on the amendment.

Ms. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, my amendment would strike all general provisions. They are all. They include so-called social riders, and they include redundant and duplicative provisions.

I recognize that the chairman has removed half of those provisions. He will be the chairman next year. If this amendment does not prevail, we can perhaps work together next year to at least rid this bill of those redundant and duplicative riders.

Mr. Chairman, the Hill newspaper has an important headline this week: Congress United For Now. And the first paragraph reads: ‘After a week of extraordinary bipartisanship, inspired by the terrorist attacks on New York and Washington, Members are questioning how long their unprecedented unity will last.”

I rise to ask that the appropriation for the District of Columbia not be the one that breaks this unity. We have heard of at least two riders that would break this unity. I ask that the Members hold back on breaking the unity that the Committee on Appropriations tried to preserve and that is in danger here.

These general provisions that I would have struck are a fancy word for attachments, legislating on an appropriation willy-nilly, against the will of the people of the District of Columbia. Most of them are so-called social riders, the riders that chairman of the subcommittee, the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. KNOLLENBERG) and chairman of the full committee, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. YOUNG), meant when they said let those riders go this time; that the ranking members, the gentleman from Wisconsin (Mr. OBEY) and the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. FATTAH), meant when they said it is inappropriate to put such riders, attachments, to a bill of local jurisdiction.

These riders are duplicated in every jurisdiction of the United States. They are laws there, they are laws here. They are almost always controversial. That is the difference between L.A. and New York, yes and the District of Columbia on the one hand and small rural areas on the other. My colleagues, this is a Federal Republic. We are one Nation. In the past there has been the ability to hold together as one Nation is we have respected diversity and difference between jurisdictions and local law according to the democratic will.

It is here that we get a national consensus, not in local jurisdictions. We say to local jurisdictions, democracy means you can go your own way, we are not to intervene. That is your right as Americans. Do I have to remind this body that the 600,000 people I represent are Americans every bit as much as you, and they should demand exactly the rights that they would demand?

And yet there will be abortion services denied to poor women if the riders remain, even though most half the States allow their local jurisdictions to provide for abortion. And in any case, what my colleagues have done is to create a fund in the District of Columbia so that private funds may be used to pay for abortions for poor women, and they are regularly used. So we have not reduced abortion in that way, but may I inform this body that, on our own, we have reduced abortion.

The District of Columbia is one of only three jurisdictions in the country that is being awarded extra Federal funds for reducing teen pregnancy without abortion.

We are getting $25 million that almost none of the rest of my colleagues are getting because we, on our own, have reduced teen pregnancy without sending these teens to abortion clinics. We do not want those teens to go to abortion clinics. We want them to abstain. We want them to use birth control. And it is working. We, indeed, had the largest decline in teen pregnancy without the use of abortion.

And let me compare what we have done in the District as my colleagues try to bar our youth from abortion with what other States have done. Forty-eight States saw increases in their unwed birth rates that make almost all of my colleagues feel for the bonus that the District of Columbia will get. Virginia, right next door, had their unwed birthrate climb by 2.3 percent, making Virginia number 18 in the country; and Maryland’s rate climbed 3.3 percent, making them number 33 in the country.

Mr. Chairman, I believe that in the name of democracy and the people I represent, I had to put this matter before the body.

Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent to withdraw my amendment.
children with the special education service the Supreme Court and the Congress declared they have a right to receive. Particularly in the case of low income parents who might be unable to otherwise seek legal representation to challenge Board of Education decisions to refuse to provide special education services, the possibility of receiving reasonable attorney fees is all that gives these parents a hope of securing a lawyer to win educational services for their children.

It is disgraceful that the Congress chose to deprive only the poorer parents of special needs children in the District of Columbia of these rights. The only entity in the continental United States that lacks voting rights. The only entity with a majority minority population. Yes, some fees awarded to some lawyers were excessive; that is why the law allows for reasonable fees. And high fees occurred in states other than the District of Columbia; but interestingly, no one suggested that their constituents were denied access to attorneys to secure special education services. We just elected to impose that restriction on parents—and generally, poor and minority parents—in D.C.

These legal fees can run $40,000 or more in Maryland and Virginia, yet the Congress has limited D.C. parents to a fraction of that amount. In effect, that means D.C. parents cannot find lawyers to represent them in cases against a Board of Education that has run a dreadful special education program for many years. The law granted parents the remedy of attorney fees specifically so that could pressure recalcitrant education officials to providing the services that special needs children require. Instead, the Congress has insulated the D.C. Board of Education at the expense of students who need special ED services.

The D.C. City Council and the Mayor have rightly opposed such a cap and I am delighted that this legislation before us today treats D.C. like every other jurisdiction in the country. It comes as no surprise that some in the education bureaucracy favor retaining a cap; they are the ones being sued. We should not be swayed by the cynical argument that money allocated to attorneys would otherwise go towards educating special needs children. If the D.C. schools were educating these children, there would be no need for suits, and the suits would not be successful and thereby generating attorney fees.

If anyone has been misusing the attorney fees section of IDEA, that is a subject to be investigated. If the case of low income parents who might be unable to otherwise seek legal representation to challenge Board of Education decisions to refuse to provide special education services, the possibility of receiving reasonable attorney fees is all that gives these parents a hope of securing a lawyer to win educational services for their children.

Mr. STEARNS. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the last word.

Mr. STEARNS. Mr. Chairman, I have come here to speak in the debate portion on behalf of the Weldon amendment that is going to be voted on soon. I think the point that the gentleman from Florida (Mr. WELDON) is making when he offers this, is that if we have in place the words that allow them to use private funds within the D.C. appropriations but not Federal funds, I am not sure that money, being fungible, won’t turn out to be Federal funds as well. Federal and private funds will be mixed.

I do not think we can be sure that by not adopting the Weldon amendment that we will have in place a bill that, up until the last 9 years, has essentially not allowed domestic partnerships. So I think by not adopting the Weldon amendment we are changing historically what the House has agreed to overwhelmingly in the past.

In fact, we have had several recent votes on this. We think just to remind Members, on June 30, 1993, 8 years ago, 251 to 177, rollcall No. 313, the faceBOOK amendment for the full funding ban was passed. Then on November 1, 1995, it was 249 to 172, rollcall No. 793, the Hostettler amendment when the ban was sustained. So the House has spoken on this.

I hope the Weldon amendment will be adopted again. When the Members come to the House floor to vote on the Weldon amendment to remit them to re- alize that if they do not adopt it, then Federal and private money is fungible and that Federal and private will be mixed. That is the real issue. I do not think we have to go into what the will of the House has been year after year on this matter.

The gentleman from Texas (Mr. DELAY) in 1992 when we were in the mi nority, when the Democrats controlled Congress, offered an amendment to re-commit the D.C. appropriation bill and that amendment did not allow us to re-consider the funding ban on D.C. domestic partners. This goes back to 1992. The motion of the gentleman passed 235 to 173. That was rollcall No. 420. The ban was ultimately signed into law.

So my colleagues, if Members come on the floor and vote against the Weldon amendment, they are voting against the tradition and history of this House that has overwhelmingly supported such funding going back to 1992, what the gentleman from Florida (Mr. WELDON) is doing today. So I think the argument is clear. I sup- port the Weldon amendment.

Mr. KNOLLENBERG. Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the remainder of the bill through page 43, line 15 be considered as read, printed in the RECORD and open to any amend- ment at this point.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

The text of the bill from page 36 line 8 through page 43 line 15 is as follows: SEC. 101. There are appropriated from the applicable funds of the District of Columbia such sums as may be necessary for making refunds and for the payment of judgments that have been entered in favor of the District of Columbia government: Provided, That nothing contained in this section shall be construed as modifying or affecting the provisions of section 1412 of title 20, United States Code, the District of Columbia Income and Franchise Tax Act of 1947 (70 Stat. 78; Public Law 84-460; D.C. Official Code, sec. 47-1812.11c(3)).

SEC. 104. No part of any appropriations contained in this Act shall remain available for obligation beyond the current fiscal year unless expressly so provided; Provided, That none of the funds appropriated in this Act for the District of Columbia government for the operation of educational institutions, or for the payment of judgments or for other educational purposes may be used to permit, encourage, facilitate, or further partisan political activities. Nothing in this Act is intended to prohibit the availability of school buildings for the use of any community or partisan political group during non-school hours.

SEC. 106. None of the funds appropriated in this Act shall be made available to pay the salaries of any employees of the District of Columbia government whose name, title, grade, salary, past work experience, and salary his- tory are not available for inspection by the House and Senate Committees on Appropriations, the House Committee on Government Reform, the Senate Committee on Governmental Affairs, and the Council of the Dis- trict of Columbia, or their duly authorized representative.

SEC. 107. There are appropriated from the applicable funds of the District of Columbia such sums as may be necessary for making payments authorized by the District of Co- lumbia Revenue Recovery Act of 1977 (D.C. Law 2-20; D.C. Code, sec. 47-222 et seq.).

SEC. 108. No part of this appropriation shall be used for publicity or propaganda purposes or implementation of any policy including boycott designed to support or defeat legisla- tion pending before Congress or any State legislature.

SEC. 110. At the start of the fiscal year, the Mayor shall develop an annual plan, by quar- ter and by project, for capital outlay bor- rowings: Provided, That within a reasonable time after the close of the fiscal year, the Mayor shall report to the Council of the Dis- trict of Columbia and the Congress the actual borrowings and spending progress com- pared with projections.
in advance of any reprogramming as set forth in this section.

(b) None of the local funds contained in this Act may be available for obligation or expenditure for an agency through a reprogramming of funds which transfers any local funds from one appropriation to another, unless the Committees on Appropriations of the Senate and House of Representatives are notified in writing 30 days in advance of the transfer, except that in no event may the amount of any funds transferred exceed two percent of the local funds in the appropriation.

Sec. 111. Consistent with the provisions of title 5, United States Code, and the comprehensive Merit Personnel Act of 1978, as amended by the District of Columbia Government Comprehensive Merit Personnel Act of 1978 (D.C. Law 2-139; D.C. Official Code, sec. 1–601.01 et seq.), any appropriation made under this Act may be used for obligations or expenditures of the Office of the Chief Technology Officer under this section ("or the Chief Technology Officer, in the case of the Office of the Chief Technology Officer").

(2) INCLUSION OF OVERHEAD COSTS IN AGREEMENTS.—Section 2706(c)(3) of such Act is amended by striking the period at the end and inserting the following: "(or the Chief Technology Officer, in the case of the Office of the Chief Technology Officer)".

(3) REPORTING REQUIREMENT.—Section 2706 of such Act is amended—

(a) by redesignating subsection (f) as subsection (g); and

(b) by inserting after subsection (e) the following new subsection:

'(f) Not later than 45 days after the end of each fiscal year (beginning with fiscal year 2002), the Chief Technology Officer shall prepare and submit to the Mayor and to the Committees on Appropriations of the House of Representatives and Senate a report describing all agreements entered into by the Chief Technology Officer under this section which are in effect during the fiscal year.

(2) The Mayor shall consult with the Chief Technology Officer and the District of Columbia Board of Education, which may, upon the determination as to whether to invoke the competitive bidding process as set forth in section 118 of the District of Columbia Board of Education Act of 1985 (D.C. Law 6-85; D.C. Official Code, sec. 2–303.03), except that the District of Columbia government or any agency thereof may renew or extend sole source contracts for which competition is not feasible or practical: Provided, That the determination as to whether to invoke the competitive bidding process has been made in accordance with duly promulgated rules and procedures.

Sec. 114. In the event a sequestration order is issued pursuant to the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act of 1985 (99 Stat. 1977; Public Law 99–177), after the amounts appropriated to the District of Columbia for the fiscal year involved have been paid to the District of Columbia, the Mayor of the District of Columbia shall pay to the Secretary of the Treasury, within 15 days after receipt from the Secretary of the Treasury, such amounts as are sequestered by the order:

(A) the Mayor approves the acceptance and use of the gift or donation (except as provided in paragraph (b)); and

(B) the entity uses the gift or donation to carry out its authorized functions or duties.

(2) EXCEPTION FOR COUNCIL AND COURTS.—The Council of the District of Columbia and the District of Columbia courts may accept and use gifts without prior approval by the Mayor.

(b) RECORDS AND PUBLIC INSPECTION.—Each entity of the District of Columbia government shall maintain and detail the records of the acceptance and use of any gift or donation, and shall make such records available for audit and public inspection.

(c) INDEPENDENT AGENCIES INCLUDED.—For the purposes of this section, the term ‘entity of the District of Columbia government’ includes an independent agency of the District of Columbia.

(d) EXCEPTION FOR BOARD OF EDUCATION.—This section does not apply to the District of Columbia Board of Education, which may, pursuant to the laws and regulations of the District of Columbia, accept and use gifts to the public schools without prior approval by the Mayor.

Sec. 115. None of the Federal funds made available by this Act may be used by the District of Columbia to provide for salaries, expenses, or other costs associated with the offices of United States Senator or United States Representative of the District of Columbia Statehood Constitutional Convention Initiatives of 1979 (D.C. Law 3-171; D.C. Official Code, sec. 1–123).

Sec. 116. None of the Federal funds appropriated under this Act shall be expended for any abortion except where the life of the mother would be endangered if the fetus were carried to term or where the pregnancy is the result of an act of rape or incest.

Sec. 117. None of the Federal funds made available in this Act may be used to implement or enforce the Health Care Benefits Expansion Act of 1992 (D.C. Law 9–114; D.C. Official Code, sec. 2–701 et seq.) or to otherwise implement or enforce any system of registration of unmarried, cohabitating couples (whether homosexual, heterosexual, or lesbian) including but not limited to registration for the purpose of extending employment, health, or governmental benefits to such couples on the same basis that such benefits are extended to legally married couples.

PART B AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. WELDON OF FLORIDA

Mr. WELDON of Florida. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Part B Amendment offered by Mr. Weldon of Florida:

In section 118 (relating to the use of funds to implement or enforce the Health Care Benefits Expansion Act of 1992), strike “Federal”.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to House Resolution 245, the gentleman from Florida (Mr. Weldon) and a Member opposed, the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. Kolbe), each will control 5 minutes.

Mr. WELDON of Florida. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 2 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, I am offering my amendment because the bill before us is such a stark departure from 9 years of previous law. My amendment simply continues current law. Ever since the District of Columbia passed its domestic partnership act in 1992, the Congress has included a provision to prevent its implementation. Congress and the President have chosen to uphold the institution of marriage and I am delighted that others would choose this time to try to reverse it.

Please do not believe for a moment that this is about home rule. If you want to believe that, then I have a bridge in Brooklyn I would like to sell. How you vote on this today will have an impact on the institution of marriage in the United States and on how corporations and State and municipal governments treat this issue throughout our Nation for the years to come.

Furthermore, under article I of the Constitution and the D.C. home rule law, the Congress maintains full authority to do this.

How you vote on this will have an impact on the institution of marriage in the United States and on how corporations and State and municipal governments treat this issue throughout our Nation for the years to come.

Mr. WELDON of Florida. Mr. Chairman, I yield myself 2 minutes.

Mr. Chairman, I am offering my amendment because the bill before us is such a stark departure from 9 years of previous law. My amendment simply continues current law.

Mr. Chairman, I am offering my amendment because the bill before us is such a stark departure from 9 years of previous law. My amendment simply continues current law.
Mr. WELDON of Pennsylvania. Mr. Chairman, I yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from Texas (Mr. DELAY).

Mr. DELAY. Mr. Chairman, sometimes words that are said on the floor are very unfortunate. This amendment has nothing to do with bigotry; it has to do with tradition and understanding what is marriage and what is the role of marriage in this country.

Members should support the Weldon amendment because it defends the traditional understanding of marriage. The Weldon amendment rejects a broad new recognition of relationships that would extend the benefits of marriage to people who have not made that special commitment. Marriage can only take place between a man and a woman, in my opinion.

Mr. Chairman, introducing domestic partnership benefits would have broad consequences extending far beyond the specific action contemplated here. We would be walking away from the traditions and virtues that we have respected and honored since our country was founded, and even before.

Doing so would radically undermine the special privileges and incentives of marriage by distributing them without requiring the unique commitment between a man and a woman. When married couples forsake all others and bind themselves together, they form a vital unit to rear their children and they strengthen society immeasurably.

Mr. Chairman, we should protect the sanctity of that special bond called marriage. Members should support the Weldon amendment.

Mr. Chairman, we should protect the sanctity of that special bond called marriage. Members should support the Weldon amendment.
provisions. Those States did not alter their definition of marriage when they allowed municipal jurisdictions in their States to audit these provisions. This bill would have anything to do with the definition of marriage in family law. This has to do with whether or not the District of Columbia, like those 113 other government units and one-third of the Fortune 500 companies, is going to be allowed to permit its employees to extend, to include in their health coverage at 100 percent expense to the individual, to include a partner, a woman who is raising her child who has her mother living with her as the caretaker, to include that grandmother in the coverage; a disabled person, to include his caregiver or her caregiver in the coverage.

That is what this is all about. It is not about the definition of marriage. And it is not expensive. Eighty-five percent of the companies that offer the provisions do not experience additional costs according to the Society for Human Resources Management.

This is about allowing the District of Columbia and its employees to purchase the insurance at their own expense. Let me reiterate that. One hundred percent of the cost at their own expense. Not the Federal Government, not the District of Columbia. The only expense for the District of Columbia is the cost implementing the law by maintaining a register of domestic partners. There is no subsidy that is involved in this. It applies to all potential familial partners. It is not just a gay partner, a lesbian partner; it is heterosexual, it is the disabled partner. It is the grandmother and the daughter that I mentioned earlier. It is all kinds of people, seniors who might be living together.

The fact is that our traditional familial lives have changed in American society. The only place likely to exclude the arrangements mentioned earlier. I urge my colleagues to defeat this amendment. Show confidence in the District of Columbia; show respect for the individuals who are affected and defeat this amendment.

Ms. SCHAKOWSKY. Mr. Chairman, I rise in strong opposition to the amendment offered by the gentleman from Florida to restrict the District of Columbia’s ability to use its own local funds to implement the Health Care Benefits Act of 1992. On a different occasion, a different day, this body has balked the District of Columbia from using any local or federal funds to implement this law, which would expand health care benefits for domestic partners. This must stop.

Particularly today, with the attacks on our country fresh in our mind, it is extremely important that we come together as a nation and in our communities. Our American family includes many families, traditional and non-traditional. Our nation should welcome diversity. We should respect each other, not be divisive.

Domestic partnership laws acknowledge and respect the non-traditional family structures in our world today. These include relationships such as grandparents and mothers living together raising children, persons with disabilities and their live-in care providers, and unmarried partners, both heterosexual and gay and lesbian. We as a government must grow with the society we are governing and embrace it.

We must respect the rights of non-traditional families. We must also respect the right of the District of Columbia to respond to the concerns and needs of its residents. Many other governments around the country provide domestic partnership benefits to their employees. Since 1997, the City of Chicago has offered domestic partner benefits. Other cities have been offering these benefits since the early 1990’s. Those laws are working well, providing important protections for our constituents. There is absolutely no justification for this body to prevent D.C. residents from receiving those same benefits.

This amendment is anti-local control, anti-good public health policy, and just plain bad business. In 1999, a survey in Human Resource Management ranked domestic partner benefits as the most effective recruiting incentive for executives and the third most effective recruiting incentive for managers and line workers. Employers must have the ability to offer competitive benefit packages in order to recruit quality applicants.

I urge my colleagues to join me in opposing this restriction and allow the implementation of the Health Care Benefits Expansion Act of 1992 in the District of Columbia.

Mr. NADLER. Mr. Chairman, I rise to strongly oppose the Weldon amendment which would prevent the District of Columbia from using its own funds to provide domestic partner benefits.

There has been a lot of discussion in the past two weeks about sadness and anger, and most of that discussion was about the attacks of September 11th. Today, there is yet another reason to be both sad and angry.

Today, this House is departing from its partisan truce and healing rhetoric of unity. Today, the war will have to wait, while we strip gays and lesbians of legal benefits and once again deny democracy right here in Washington, DC.

There are 113 jurisdictions nationwide that have domestic partner benefits and Congress has taken no action to block any of these benefits provided to other Americans.

The fact that some Members of Congress seek to do so today is insulting, outrageous, and quite frankly, offensive.

The House Appropriations Committee acted in a bipartisan manner to allow DC to offer its residents domestic partner benefits, and now the House leadership has authorized the violation of House Rules in order to undo the work of the Committee on this issue.

Domestic partner benefits allow residents to visit loved ones in hospitals and long term care facilities, officially register as partners, and, for employees of the District of Columbia government, provide insurance at their own expense for their partner. This is hardly revolutionary or even uncommon in our nation today. Over 4,200 employers around the country, including hundreds of cities, colleges, and universities, have already established domestic partnership health programs.

In fact, this amendment is not only mean-spirited and unwarranted, it is also bad health care policy. At a time when millions of Americans lack any health insurance, why would we stand in the way of any extension of health care benefits? Do we as a Congress really want to tell D.C. residents, they should be denied health care simply because of whom they love?

This amendment is a disgrace and should be defeated.

Mr. KUCINICH. Mr. Chairman, I rise in opposition to the Weldon amendment to H. R. 2944, the District of Columbia appropriations bill for FY2002. This amendment would prohibit local funds from being used to implement the District of Columbia domestic partnership act.

I would like to point out that the heroes of the tragic attacks on New York, Washington, D.C., and Pennsylvania include:

Mark Bingham, a passenger on American Airlines 77 who helped resist the hijackers and chased the plane from crashes onto a national monument in Washington, D.C.

David Charlesbois, American Airlines flight 77 co-pilot and resident of Washington, D.C.;

Father Mychal Judge, Fire Department Chaplain and Francisican priest who died while serving last rites to victims of the attack on the World Trade Center.

These three courageous Americans are all heroes and are all gay. Many more gay Americans continue to assist in efforts in the aftermath of the tragedies—rescue workers, healthcare professionals and volunteers from around the country.

How can we deny these heroes domestic partnership benefits? I strongly encourage my colleagues to vote against the Weldon amendment and support local funding for domestic partnership benefits.

I would also like to submit into the record a commentary from the National Public Radio show “Weekend Edition Saturday.”

COMMENTARY: INAPPROPRIATE COMMENTS MADE BY THE REVERENDS JERRY FALWELL AND PAT ROBERTSON REGARDING THE WORLD TRADE CENTER TRAGEDY (September 22, 2001)

SCOTT SIMON (host). I really don’t want to be critical of anyone during a national crisis, especially people who are sources of spiritual guidance to millions of Americans. But sometimes the Reverends Jerry Falwell and Pat Robertson say something so staggering, they renew your capacity to be shocked, amen, even in a shocking time. Last week when America was wounded and confused, the Reverend Falwell was a guest on Pat Robertson’s television show, “The 700 Club.” He said that God Almighty, angered by America’s abortion rights, gay rights and sex education in schools, had permitted terrorists to slack the World Trade Center and smite the Pentagon.

SOUNDBYTE OF “THE 700 CLUB”

Reverend Jerry Falwell. What we saw on Tuesday, as terrible as it is, could be minimized. In fact, God came to lift the curtain and allow the enemies of America to give us probably what we deserve.

Pat Robertson, Jerry, that’s my feeling. I think we’ve just seen the antechamber to terror. We haven’t even begun to see what they can do to the major population.

Re. Falwell, I really believe that the pagans and the abortionists and the feminists and the gays and the lesbians who are actively trying to make that an alternate lifestyle, the ACLU. People for the American Way—all of them who've tried to secularize America, I point the finger in their face and say, "You helped this happen." SIMON. This week, both the reverses issued apologies. Mr. Falwell called his own remarks "insensitive, uncalled for and unnecessary." Nothing but wrong. This week, it was reported that Mark Bingham, a San Francisco public relations executive, may well have been one of the passengers who so bravely resisted the hijackers of American Airlines Flight 77. That flight crashed into an unpopped field outside of Pittsburgh instead of another national monument. Mr. Bingham was 31. He played on a local gay rugby team and hoped to compete in next year's Gay Games in Sydney, Australia.

I don't know if Mark Bingham was religious, but it seems to me that he lived a life that celebrated the preciousness of this world's infinite variety. So not the Reverends Robertson and Falwell and the muffahs of the Talibans, who seem to see a god who frowns at tolerance and smiles with approval on murder and destruction. Let me put it in the bold terms in which many Americans may be thinking right now. If your plane was hijacked, who would you rather sit next to? Righteous reverends who prayed on their feet. It is not subject to approval or receipt of a Federal, private, or governmental officer of the District of Columbia shall accept, obligate, and expend Federal, private, or grants not included in ceiling. (3) PROHIBITION ON SPENDING IN ANTICIPATION OF THE APPROVAL OR RECEIPT OF A FEDERAL, PRIVATE, OR GRANTS NOT INCLUDED IN CEILING.—No amount accepted, obligated, or expended pursuant to this section, or any other provision of this Act, the Mayor, in consultation with the Chief Financial Officer, may accept, obligate, and expend Federal, private, and other grants received by the District government that are not reflected in the amounts appropriated in this Act.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

Stated for: Mr. REHBERG. Mr. Chairman, on rollcall No. 352 I put my voting card in the machine but the vote was not recorded. I would have voted "aye." The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will read. The Clerk read as follows:

Section 119. (a) Acceptance and Use of Grants Not Included in Ceiling.

(1) In general.—Notwithstanding any other provision of this Act, the Mayor, in consultation with the Chief Financial Officer, may accept, obligate, and expend Federal, private, and other grants received by the District government that are not reflected in the amounts appropriated in this Act.

(2) Requirement of Chief Financial Officer Report and Council Approval.—No such Federal, private, or other grant may be accepted, obligated, or expended pursuant to paragraph (1) until—

(A) The Chief Financial Officer of the District of Columbia submit to the Council a report setting forth detailed information regarding such grant; and

(B) The Council within 15 days after receipt of the report submitted under (A) has reviewed and approved the acceptance, obligation, and expenditure of such grant.

Section 120. Prohibition on Spending in Anticipation of Approval or Receipt.

No amount may be obligated or expended from the general fund or other funds of the District Government in anticipation of the approval or receipt of a grant under paragraph (b) of this subsection or in anticipation of the approval or receipt of a Federal, private, or other grant not subject to such paragraph.

(1) Quarterly Reports.—The Chief Financial Officer of the District of Columbia shall prepare a quarterly report setting forth detailed information regarding all Federal, private, and other grants subject to this subsection.
and to the Committees on Appropriations of the House of Representatives and the Senate, not later than 15 days after the end of the quarter covered by the report.

SEC. 120. (a) Except as otherwise provided in this section, none of the funds made available by any other appropriation act may be used to provide any officer or employee of the District of Columbia with an official vehicle unless the officer or employee uses the vehicle for official purposes or the officer's or employee's official duties. For purposes of this paragraph, the term ‘official duties’ does not include travel between the officer’s or employee’s residence and workplace (except: (1) in the case of an officer or employee of the Metropolitan Police Department who resides in the District of Columbia or is otherwise designated by the Chief of the Department; (2) at the discretion of the Fire Chief, an officer or employee of the District of Columbia Fire and Emergency Medical Services Department who resides in the District of Columbia and is on call 24 hours a day; (3) the Mayor of the District of Columbia; and (4) the Chairman of the Council of the District of Columbia). (b) The Chief Financial Officer of the District of Columbia shall submit, by November 15, 2001, an inventory, as of September 30, 2001, of the vehicles owned, leased, or operated by the District of Columbia government. The inventory shall include, but not be limited to, the following: the year the vehicle is assigned; the year and make of the vehicle; the acquisition date and cost; the general condition of the vehicle; annual operating and maintenance costs; current mileage; and whether the vehicle is allowed to be taken home by a District officer or employee and if so, the officer or employee’s title and resident location.

c) No officer or employee of the District of Columbia government (including any independent agency of the District) excepting the Office of the Chief Technology Officer) may enter into an agreement in excess of $2,500 for the procurement of goods or services on behalf of any entity of the District government if the officer or employee has not conducted an analysis of how the procurement of the goods and services involved under the applicable regulations and procedures of the General Services Administration will differ from the procurement of the goods and services under the applicable regulations and procedures of the Federal government that are applicable to the District government.

SEC. 121. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, not later than 120 days after the date that a District of Columbia Public School (DCPS) student is referred for evaluation or assessment—

(1) the District of Columbia Board of Education, or its successor, and DCPS shall assess any individual who may have a disability and who may require special education services; and

(2) if the individual is classified as having a disability, as defined in section 101(a)(1) of the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (20 U.S.C. 1401(a)(1)) or in section 780 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 (29 U.S.C. 796(a)(1)), or in section 504 of the Uniform Code of Military Justice (10 U.S.C. 1133), the District of Columbia, or the Department of Education, shall place that student in an appropriate special education program. In the case of any equipment or product that may be authorized to be purchased with financial assistance provided by the District of Columbia, the District of Columbia shall exercise the sense of the Congress that entities receiving the assistance should, in expending the assistance, purchase only American-made equipment and products to the greatest extent practicable.

SEC. 122. None of the funds contained in this Act may be used to provide for voting representation in Congress for the District of Columbia.

SEC. 123. (a) None of the funds contained in this Act shall be used to provide funds the entity will comply with the Buy American Act (41 U.S.C. 10a–10c).

(b) Sense of the Congress; Requirement Regarding Notice.—

(1) In the case of any equipment or product that may be authorized to be purchased with financial assistance provided by the District of Columbia, it is the sense of Congress that entities receiving the assistance should, in expending the assistance, purchase only American-made equipment and products to the greatest extent practicable.

(2) Notice to Recipients of Assistance.—In providing financial assistance using funds made available in this Act, the head of each agency of the Federal or District of Columbia government shall provide to each recipient of the assistance a notice describing the statement made in paragraph (1) of the Congress.

PROHIBITION OF CONTRACTS WITH PERSONS FALSELY LABELING PRODUCTS AS MADE IN AMERICA—If it has been finally determined by a court or Federal agency that any person intentionally affixed a label bearing a 'Made in America' inscription, or any inscription to any product sold in or shipped to the United States that is not made in the United States, the person shall be ineligible to receive any funds made available in this Act.

(c) Prohibition of Contracts with Persons Falsey Labeling Products as Made in America.—If it has been finally determined by a court or Federal agency that any person intentionally affixed a label bearing a ‘Made in America’ inscription, or any inscription to any product sold in or shipped to the United States that is not made in the United States, the person shall be ineligible to receive any funds made available in this Act.

SEC. 124. None of the funds contained in this Act may be used for purposes of the annual independent audit of the District of Columbia government for fiscal year 2002 unless—

(1) the audit is conducted by the Inspector General of the District of Columbia pursuant to section 206(a)(4) of the District of Columbia Procurement Practices Act of 1985 (D.C. Official Code, sec. 2-302.8); and

(2) the audit includes as a basic financial statement a comparison of audited actual year-end results with the revenues submitted to the budget document for such year and actual year-end results with the revenues submitted to the budget document for such year using the format, terminology, and classifications contained in the law making the appropriations for the year and its legislative history.

SEC. 125. (a) None of the funds contained in this Act may be used for any program of distributing sterile needles or syringes for the prevention of drug abuse—

(b) Any individual or entity who receives any funds contained in this Act and who carries out any program under subsection (a) shall account for all funds used for such program separately from any funds contained in this Act.

SEC. 126. None of the funds contained in this Act may be used by the District of Columbia or any other officer or entity of the District government to provide assistance for any petition drive or civil action which seeks to require Congress to provide for voting representation in Congress for the District of Columbia.

SEC. 127. (a) None of the funds contained in this Act may be used for any program or distribution of contraceptive services or products.

(b) The Office of the Chief Technology Officer shall provide to the Committees a comparison of audited actual year-end results with the revenues submitted to the budget document for such year using the format, terminology, and classifications contained in the law making the appropriations for the year and its legislative history.

SEC. 128. (a) None of the funds contained in this Act may be used to enact or carry out any law, rule, or regulation to legalize or otherwise reduce penalties associated with the possession, use, or distribution of any substance for which 21 U.S.C. 802 (any tetrahydrocannabinols derivative).

(b) The Legalization of Marijuana for Medical Treatment Initiative of 1998, also known as Initiative 59, approved by the electors of the District of Columbia on November 3, 1998, shall not take effect on July 1, 2001. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Mayor of the District of Columbia is hereby solely authorized to allocate the District’s limitation amount of qualified zone academy bonds (established pursuant to 26 U.S.C. 1397E) among qualified zone academies within the District.

SEC. 129. Nothing in this Act may be construed to prevent the Council or Mayor of the District of Columbia from addressing the issue of the provision of contraceptive coverage by health insurance plans, but it is the intent of Congress that any legislation enacted on such issue should include a ‘science clause’ which provides exceptions for religious beliefs and values.

SEC. 130. None of the funds made available in this Act may be used by the District of Columbia government (including any independent agency of the District) who has not filed a certification with the Mayor and the Chief Financial Officer that the purposes are consistent with the definition of ‘essential office.’

SEC. 131. Section 149 of division A, Miscellaneous Appropriations Act, 2001, as enacted by section 5(a)(4) of Public Law 106-554 and the D.C. Appropriations Act, 2002, as enacted by the Superior Court of the District of Columbia on November 3, 1998, shall not take effect on July 1, 2001. Notwithstanding any other provision of law, the Mayor of the District of Columbia, effective upon the enactment by the District of Columbia of a law which reads as follows:

FEDERAL CONTRIBUTION FOR ENFORCEMENT OF LAW BANNING POSSESSION OF TOBACCO PRODUCTS BY MINORS

SEC. 132. (a) Contribution.—There is hereby appropriated a Federal contribution of $150,000 to the Metropolitan Department of the District of Columbia, effective upon the enactment by the District of Columbia of a law which reads as follows:

(b) Exception.—

(1) Possession in Course of Employment.—Subsection (a) shall not apply with respect to an individual possessing cigarettes or tobacco products in pursuance of employment.

(2) Participation in Law Enforcement Operation.—Subsection (a) shall not apply with respect to an individual possessing any firearm.
products in the course of a valid, supervised law enforcement operation.

(c) Notwithstanding subsection (a), as the effective date of the District of Columbia Appropriations Act, 2001, the Chairman shall receive compensation, payable in equal installments, at a rate equal to $10,000 less than the compensation of the Mayor.

Mr. KNOLLENBERG (during the reading). Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the remainder of the bill, through page 55, line 15, be considered as read, printed in the RECORD, and open to amendment at any time.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Michigan?

There was no objection.

The CHAIRMAN. Are there any amendments to that portion of the bill?

AMENDMENT NO. 1 OFFERED BY MR. HOSTETTLER

Mr. HOSTETTLER. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment No. 1 offered by Mr. HOSTETTLER:

At the end of the bill, insert after the last section (preceding the short title) the following new section:

SEC. 1315

Mr. HOSTETTLER. Mr. Chairman, I rise today to offer an amendment that will protect the Boy Scouts of America from the latest political attack on its constitutionally protected rights.

The most recent assault against the Boy Scouts occurred on June 20 when the District of Columbia Commission on Human Rights ruled that the Boy Scouts of America had violated the D.C. Human Rights Act of 1977. The Boy Scouts’ crime? In keeping with their longstanding values and standards, the Boy Scouts had expelled two homosexual scout masters in Washington, D.C.

Now, despite the constitutional protection of freedom of association, and despite the Supreme Court ruling that the Boy Scouts are a private civic group, the District of Columbia Human Rights Commission ruled that the Boy Scouts must also pay all attorneys’ fees and court costs.

Mr. Chairman, I urge today to offer an amendment that will protect the Boy Scouts of America from the latest political attack on its constitutionally protected rights.

Now, during this debate, we will hear the best interests of our Nation’s boys and young men at heart. Instead, its goal is to force a radical political agenda on a private civic group.

While ostensibly advancing the virtue of “tolerance,” the commission has approved only one politically correct viewpoint, determining that all other beliefs must be excluded or penalized, in this case.

The decision of the commission runs counter to our most basic liberties and, as such, must be stopped. My amendment would prohibit the District of Columbia from enacting the commission’s decision by preventing funds from being spent to do so, and I urge its passage.

Mr. Chairman, I simply say that in the discussion of this body’s control and authority over the District of Columbia, it is clearly pointed out, not only in the home rule statute, but in the very Constitution itself. This body is afforded the obligation and authority to determine its criteria for members and leaders, the District of Columbia Human Rights Commission ordered the Boy Scouts to reinstate the troop leaders and pay them $50,000 each. In addition, the Commission ruled that the Scouts must also pay all attorneys’ fees and court costs.

Mr. Chairman, this arrogant and intrusive ruling is just the latest in a long string of cultural broadsides against the Boy Scouts of America, a group dedicated to instilling selflessness, character, responsibility, and love for God and country of our Nation’s boys and young men.

Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the remainder of the bill, through page 55, line 15, be considered as read, printed in the RECORD, and open to amendment at any time.
allow them to freely associate without doing any damage whatsoever to the community when, in fact, the opposite is true. They strive to make the country and their community a better place to live, with all of the activities in which they endeavor.

Mr. HAYES. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of Mr. HOSTETTLER's amendment—a vote in support of the Boy Scouts of America.

The process of appealing this ruling is costing the Scouts valuable dollars each day that could be better used to benefit the lives of young men—Young men who are being taught values such as duty to God and country, honor, and community service.

We must send a message that Congress will uphold the full benefits of freedom of association, and that the Scouts, a private organization, may continue to define their own leadership and promote core American values that have been taught to children for over a century. I urge my fellow Members to vote in favor of the Hostettler amendment.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MS. NORTON TO THE AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. HOSTETTLER

Ms. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment to the amendment.

The Clerk read as follows:

Amendment offered by Ms. Norton to the amendment offered by Mr. Hostettler:

In the matter proposed to be inserted by the amendment, insert “Federal” before “funds”.

Ms. NORTON. Mr. Chairman, this House has just done a historic act. For the first time, it has broken through the prejudice against gay men and lesbians on this floor. It is an extraordinary moment. It is even more important today by the local authorities of the District of Columbia.

I am asking this House to do with respect to my amendment exactly as we have just voted very decisively to do in the last vote. My amendment would disallow any Federal funds for the enforcement of the provision and decision of the District of Columbia Human Rights Commission. Only local funds could be used. That is what we have just voted, Please be consistent.

Mr. Chairman, this was not a knee-jerk vote by the District of Columbia Human Rights Commission. They submitted a very well-reasoned, 74-page decision which I think they can reasonably argue is very much consistent with the Supreme Court decision on this issue. The Supreme Court says that gay men cannot interfere with the message of the Boy Scouts. The District of Columbia found that the gay men here were not strong activists of the kind that the Supreme Court recognized as interfering with the message of the Boy Scouts. Let us suppose that the District of Columbia is wrong. If the District is wrong, the Boy Scouts of America, as I speak, are pursuing their remedy. They are pursuing it because that decision was appealed and it is to be heard in the courts.

If we proceed, we are not only undermining the local courts of the District of Columbia, which, by the way, are Federal courts, but we are undermining the independence of the Federal judiciary as well, because this decision is based on a decision of the Supreme Court of the United States; and this matter will ultimately find its way there, if it has been incorrectly decided by the District's Human Rights Commission. We interfere with the independence of the judiciary when we, the Congress of the United States, decide that a politically unpopular decision has been made and, therefore, we will politically intervene into a court decision. We do not want to do that. We do not want to go there, especially not now.

So long as this matter is not settled, we ought to let it be, because there will always be another time to settle it. Suppose we do not like what the local courts find. We could come back and overturn the local courts. If, on the other hand, the Supreme Court finds that what the District of Columbia has done is consistent with Supreme Court decisions, then we will be barred and ought to be barred.

The fact is, Mr. Chairman, that this amendment piles on yet another constitutional violation, because the Congress of the United States is, in fact, imposing its own one-sided views on a matter that is of constitutional import. We cannot do that. Justice Scalia himself wrote, “The government may not regulate speech based on hostility or favoritism towards the underlying message expressed.” If it is the underlying view that we object to, you are in violation of what Justice Scalia has said, because the amendment is not viewpoint-neutral. My amendment, on the other hand, gets the Federal Government out of this messy business, leaving only the District of Columbia to do what it is doing anyway, which is responding to the appeal.

This matter will not be settled by my amendment. It still leaves to us, ultimately, if the local courts are wrong, the ability to come back next year and overturn it so long as the Supreme Court does not say that this amendment was correct. Leave this be. Vote as we have just voted on the prior amendment. Do not cast another vote against people who are gay just because the courts have said that they are.

Mr. KERNS. Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the Hostettler amendment, and I move to strike the last word.

Mr. KERNS. Mr. Chairman, the Boy Scouts of America is an institution that since 1910 has been creating leaders and instilling principles to guide young men down the right path as they form their basic values and grow into adults. The scout oath and the scout law serve as the foundation of this organization’s beliefs, including duty to God and country.

In June of 2000, the United States upheld the Boy Scouts’ standing that as a private organization, it has a right to set its own standards for membership.

We know that some have tried to force their views on the Scouts and confuse the true mission of the scouting organization. This effort has taken place right here in our Nation’s Capitol. Since the Supreme Court’s ruling, the D.C. Human Rights Commission has ignored the decision and acted directly to the contrary.

Mr. Chairman, I have had the opportunity to visit a variety of Boy Scout events in west central Indiana and I have talked with scouts. I had the honor of presenting the Eagle Scout Badge to a young man in Tippecanoe County. I have always been impressed by these young scouts. My son is a Scout. I am impressed by their enthusiasm, their devotion, and their sense of pride in their communities. That is why I am here on the floor today to stand with the Boy Scouts of America and oppose the efforts to undermine this outstanding organization.

I thank the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. HOSTETTLER) for his leadership on this issue in trying to correct this wrong. I encourage my colleagues to support his amendment.

Mr. KNOLLENBERG. Mr. Chairman, I move to strike the requisite number of words.

Mr. Chairman, I rise in support of the underlying amendment for two good reasons. On June 28, 2000, the U.S. Supreme Court said that the Boy Scouts of America have the constitutional right to block gays from becoming troop leaders. That is what they said. They are the law of the land. The Court ruled 5 to 4 that the New Jersey Supreme Court was wrong in forcing the Boy Scouts to accept James Dale, who was fired from the organization when the organization learned of his sexual orientation.

The Boy Scouts of America is a private organization which does not receive public funds. They have consistently won court judgments; and they have won, in part, because they do not receive taxpayer money.

Last September, September 13, 2000, this House voted 362 to 12 to reject an effort to revoke the 88-year-old Federal charter of the Boy Scouts of America because the group excludes gays. I believe it would be inconsistent to challenge the decision of the Supreme Court of this land.
that we are debating this matter as part of the D.C. appropriations bill.

It is probably appropriate in the authorizing bill, or perhaps not even then, since it has always been the majority party's view that local communities, those closest to the people, should make decisions; that they know best, and that we should not, as a Federal government, intervene in these local matters.

But nonetheless, absent a reversal of the Supreme Court's viewpoint, I do not know why we are in this at all. I would hope that we could move on with the more important business of the Nation, which at this time makes this matter a pretty small issue, given tens of thousands of our troops being arrayed across the world, to be here now debating back and forth a decision which at this time makes this provision, which is a straightforward amendment that a vote by electronic device will be taken on the underlying amendment offered by the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. Hostetler).

The clerk designated the amendment offered by Mr. Trafaicant (Mr. TRAFICANT).

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Chairman, I ask for an aye vote on the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. TRAFICANT).

Mr. TRAFICANT. The amendment was agreed to.

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Chairman, I am prepared to accept the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. TRAFICANT), which at this time makes this provision, which is a straightforward amendment that a vote by electronic device will be taken on the underlying amendment offered by the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. Hostetler).

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to clause 6 of rule XVIII, further proceedings on the amendment offered by the gentleman from the District of Columbia (Ms. Norton) to amendment No. 1 offered by the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. Hostetler) will be postponed.

The point of no quorum is considered withdrawn.

AMENDMENT OFFERED BY MR. TRAFICANT

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The Clerk reads as follows:

Amendment offered by Mr. Trafaicant. Page 55, after line 15, insert the following new section:

Sec. 1. No funds appropriated in this Act may be made available to any person or entity that violates the Buy American Act (41 U.S.C. 10a–10c).

Mr. TRAFICANT (during the reading). Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be considered as read and printed in the Record.

The CHAIRMAN. Is there objection to the request of the gentleman from Ohio?

There was no objection.

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Chairman, this is a straightforward amendment that would prohibit anybody from getting any grants under this bill who has violated the Buy American Act. It has been added on to all the other appropriations bills.

I want to just take one second and commend the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. Fattah). As a representative of a large city, I think he has shown and demonstrated leadership on our side, and I want to commend the gentleman from Michigan (Mr. Knollenberg), who has worked very hard and brought forward a very good bill.

Mr. KNOLLENBERG. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TRAFICANT. I yield to the gentleman from Michigan.

Mr. KNOLLENBERG. Mr. Chairman, I say to the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. TRAFICANT), we have examined his amendment and we have no objection to it.

Mr. FATTAH. Mr. Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. TRAFICANT. I yield to the gentleman from Pennsylvania.

Mr. FATTAH. Mr. Chairman, I am prepared to accept the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. TRAFICANT), which at this time makes this provision, which is a straightforward amendment that a vote by electronic device will be taken on the underlying amendment offered by the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. Hostetler).

Mr. TRAFICANT. Mr. Chairman, I ask for an aye vote on the amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. TRAFICANT).

Mr. TRAFICANT. The amendment was agreed to.

Amendment offered by Mr. Knollenberg. Mr. Chairman, I demand a recorded vote, and pending thereupon, I move to add the following new section:

Sec. 1. No funds appropriated in this Act may be made available to any person or entity that violates the Buy American Act (41 U.S.C. 10a–10c).

Mr. TRAFICANT (during the reading). Mr. Chairman, I ask unanimous consent that the amendment be considered as read and printed in the Record.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE SPEAKER PRO TEMPORE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 8 of rule XX, the Chair announces that he will postpone further proceedings today on the motion to suspend the rules on which a recorded vote or the yeas and nays are ordered, or on which the vote is objected to under clause 6 of rule XX.

Any record vote on the postponed question will be taken later.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA POLICE COORDINATION AMENDMENT ACT OF 2001

Mrs. MORELLA. Mr. Speaker, I move to suspend the rules and pass the bill (H.R. 2199) to amend the National Capital Revitalization and Self-Government Improvement Act of 1997 to permit any Federal law enforcement agency to enter into a cooperative agreement with the Metropolitan Police Department of the District of Columbia to assist the Department in carrying out crime prevention and law enforcement activities in the District of Columbia if deemed appropriate by the Chief of the Department and the United States Attorney for the District of Columbia, and for other purposes.

The Clerk read as follows:

H.R. 2199

VACATING PROCEEDINGS ON H.R. 2510, DEFENSE PRODUCTION ACT AMENDMENTS OF 2001

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Without objection, the previous action of the House on H.R. 2510 will be vacated.

There was no objection.

DEFENSE PRODUCTION ACT AMENDMENTS OF 2001

Mr. OXLEY. Mr. Speaker, I ask unanimous consent to take from the Speaker’s table the bill (H.R. 2510) to extend the expiration date of the Defense Production Act of 1950, and for other purposes, with a Senate amendment there-to, and concur in the Senate amendment with an amendment.

The Clerk read the title of the bill.

The Clerk read the Senate amendment, as follows:

Senate amendment:
Page 2, strike out all after line 8 down to and including line 14 and insert: ‘‘2002’’.

SEC. 3. AUTHORIZATION OF APPROPRIATIONS.

Section 731(b) of the Defense Production Act of 1950 (50 U.S.C. App. 2161(b)) is amended by striking ‘‘2001’’ and inserting ‘‘2002’’.

The Clerk read the House amendment to the Senate amendment, as follows:
House amendment to Senate amendment:
Line 3, strike ‘‘2002’’ and insert ‘‘2003’’.
Line 7, strike ‘‘2002’’ and insert ‘‘2003’’.

Mr. OXLEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in strong support for the reauthorization of the Defense Production Act and the amendment that will be adopted by the House today. As you are aware, the Defense Production Act gives the President important emergency powers to ensure that industry produces needed material during times of military or civil emergencies.

Unfortunately, with the events of September 11, we find ourselves in the midst of both. The President authorized the DPA to expire on Sunday, and it is important that we renew these powers during this critical period in our Nation’s history.

The House passed a clean 3-year reauthorization on September 5. The Senate returned the bill to us this Friday night, limiting the President’s authority to only one year. With the clock ticking, we don’t want to be back in this same position next year. Therefore, in the best spirit of compromise, we are amending the Senate bill and splitting the difference—extending the DPA for 2 years.

I know that some of my colleagues in the other body have some concerns about the powers granted to the President under the DPA, and particularly in how they have been used in the past. They have my assurance that we will look closely at those concerns in the interim, and make changes where they are necessary.

I want to thank Chairman King, and ranking members LaFalce and Maloney for their help in moving this bipartisan legislation forward. I urge my colleagues to support this bill and this amendment.

Mr. LAFALCE. Mr. Speaker, I want to express my strong support for the extension of the Defense Production Act for a two-year pe
The original 1997 legislation provided great assistance to the District of Columbia by enabling Federal law enforcement agencies to enforce local laws on or near their jurisdictional boundaries. The 1997 legislation specified certain law enforcement agencies, inadvertently leaving out some agencies. H.R. 2199 cures this restriction by allowing other Federal agencies to participate in coordinated efforts to improve public safety and reduce crime in the Nation's capital.

I would like to express my appreciation to the gentleman from the District of Columbia (Ms. NORTON), the ranking minority member of the Subcommittee on the District of Columbia, for her leadership in expanding the provisions of the existing law to improve public safety and reduce crime in the Nation's capital.

I also want to thank the chairman of the Committee on Government Reform, the gentleman from Indiana (Mr. BURTON), for his interest in District of Columbia issues and for his guidance in bringing this bill to the floor and, of course to the ranking member, the gentleman from California (Mr. WAXMAN).

Mr. Speaker, I urge all Members to support H.R. 2199, the District of Columbia Police Coordination Amendment Act of 2001.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. NORTON. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in strong support of the bill to amend P.L. 105-33, legislation that has done much to cure our coordinated efforts of Federal and local law enforcement officials in the Nation's capital. I want to thank the chairman of the Subcommittee on the District of Columbia (Mrs. MORELLA) for her leadership and her work in bringing this bill to the floor today and moving so quickly to facilitate this important bill.

H.R. 2199, the District of Columbia Police Coordination Act of 2001, amends the Police Coordination Act of 1997, signed that year, by allowing those agencies not named in the original legislation to assist the Metropolitan Police Department with local law enforcement in the district. Inadvertently, P.L. 105-33 failed to make the language sufficiently amended to include agencies not mentioned in the original bill. Prior to the Police Coordination Act, Federal agencies often were confined to agency premises and were not able to enforce local laws on or near their premises. Instead, for example, Federal officers sometimes called 911, taking hard-pressed D.C. police officers from urgent work in neighborhoods experiencing serious crime. Federal officers were trained and willing to do the job, but lacked the authority to do so before the passage of the Police Coordination Act. When our country has been attacked, this flexibility provided to Federal police officers to pursue suspects beyond their desks is both timely and necessary.

Five agencies have already signed agreements with the U.S. Attorney for the District of Columbia enabling them to assist the Metropolitan Police Department, including the Federal Protective Service, the largest Federal force to participate. Now over 400 officers are assisting D.C. police.

Federal agencies understand that the extension of their jurisdiction will enhance safety and security within and around their agencies, while offering needed assistance as well to District residents. The Capitol Police and Amtrak police, who have the longest experience with expanded jurisdiction, report that the morale of their officers was affected positively because of the satisfaction that comes from being integrated into efforts to reduce and prevent crime in and around their agencies and in the Nation's capital.

This non-controversial technical amendment to the Police Coordination Act is another step toward achieving my goal of assuring the most efficient use of all the available police resources to protect Federal agency staff, visitors, commuters, and D.C. residents.

Once again, I thank the chairman for her work on this bill.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mrs. MORELLA. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, I reiterate my thanks to the sponsor of the legislation, the gentlewoman from the District of Columbia (Ms. NORTON) for her leadership on these issues. I urge unanimity supporting this important bill to coordinate the police action in the District of Columbia to provide for further public safety and reduction of crime.

Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time.

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. BE-REUTER). The question is on the motion offered by the gentlewoman from Maryland (Mrs. MORELLA) that the House suspend the rules and pass the bill, H.R. 2199.

The question was taken; and (two-thirds having voted in favor thereof) the rules were suspended and the bill was passed.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.
waives all points of order against such amendments. Finally, the rule provides for one motion to recommit, with or without instructions.

Mr. Speaker, this rule allows us to finish up our work on the defense bill. All of us on both sides of the aisle recognize that we must provide for our military in this time of crisis. The gentleman from Arizona (Chairman STUMP) and the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. SKELTON) deserve great credit for coming together this week to grease the skids on this bill.

The rule simply ratifies their agreement by providing for five amendments. The gentleman from Texas (Mr. Frost), who is managing the rule for the minority, worked hard on one of these amendments. In the wake of the terrorist attacks 2 weeks ago, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. Frost) and the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. STUMP) worked hard that the Pentagon recommends its civilian employees who are killed and injured by terrorist attacks by awarding them a medal for the defense of freedom. This is a new medal to recognize civilian Department of Defense employees who are injured in the line of duty.

The rule makes in order another amendment that I strongly oppose, an amendment to allow abortions on our military bases overseas. There is no place for abortion on our sensitive foreign bases.

Finally, Mr. Speaker, in addition to a noncontroversial manager’s amendment, the rule provides for two amendments that would beef up our military’s ability to fight terrorism. All of America realizes how important this is. We can leave nothing to chance. The primary purpose of our Federal Government is to defend our citizens, and the military is our primary source of that defense.

The reason for these amendments is all too clear. We must act quickly to give our men and women the tools that they need to patrol our borders and prevent terrorist attacks to protect us.

So let us pass this rule and pass the underlying defense authorization bill. At the end of the day, we will have provided $343 billion to our Armed Forces, the largest increase in support for our military since the 1980s. At this crucial time in our history, this bill is most important.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Mr. Speaker, let me start by saying that I am glad that today the House of Representatives have completed this bill, H.R. 2586, the National Defense Authorization Act for fiscal year 2002. It is a good example of the bipartisan support America’s Armed Forces enjoy. It passed the Committee on Armed Services on a bipartisan vote of 58 to 1. That is because Democrats and Republicans are strongly committed to a first-rate military that will protect this Nation and its people and that will maintain our position as the chief protector of democracy and the rule of law throughout the world.

Since the horror of September 11, Mr. Speaker, America’s commitment to the finest military in the world has only become stronger. That is clear from the hard work that went into reaching bipartisan consensus on this rule. In the interest of national unity, several of the military’s strongest defenders on the Democratic side agreed to forego important priorities. For example, I am disappointed that the manager’s amendment strips out the provision of the gentleman from Hawaii (Mr. ABERTHOMBE) to make contracting procedures more equitable for Department of Defense civilian employees, a provision that was passed by the Committee on Armed Services. Last night, when we were in the Committee on Rules, I tried to restore this important provision, but failed in a party line vote. I hope that we can revisit this issue at a later date.

On the other hand, I am pleased that there is bipartisan support for the amendment offered by the gentleman from Arizona (Chairman STUMP) and the ranking member, the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. SKELTON). It provides $400 million for intelligence and counterterrorism initiatives by reducing the President’s request for national missile defense. It reflects how America’s national defense priorities have changed since September 11.

The rule also makes in order an amendment by the gentlewoman from California (Ms. SANCHEZ) to restore equal access to health services at overseas military hospitals for service men and women and their dependents stationed overseas.

Finally, I personally appreciate the work of the gentleman from Arizona (Chairman STUMP) and the gentleman from California (Chairman DREIER) to recognize the sacrifice of Defense Department civilians killed or injured at the Pentagon on September 11. The amendment of the gentleman from Arizona (Chairman STUMP) is a sense of the Congress resolution commending the Defense Department’s decision to create a new award, a medal for the defense of freedom, to be awarded to Defense Department civilian employees killed or wounded as a result of terrorism.

Mr. Speaker, we urge the Secretary of Defense to move quickly to produce and present this new medal. These medals are typically awarded about the 12-month to 15-month burial and the Defense Department is now in the process of identifying the civilians killed in the September 11 attack on the Pentagon.

Until 1998, Mr. Speaker, civilian employees of the Defense Department were eligible for the Purple Heart, an honor begun by the Kennedy administration and continued during the Reagan Administration. The amendment of the gentleman from Arizona (Chairman STUMP) would ensure that once again they can receive the recognition they deserve for their service to America.

As for the bill itself, Mr. Speaker, I am pleased that it makes crucial quality of life improvements by raising military pay, improving military housing, and ensuring medical care for military retirees for the men and women of the Armed Forces and their families.

I am also pleased that the Committee on Armed Services has continued its commitment to the wide range of weapons programs that ensure our military’s superiority throughout the world. The bill includes $865 million for research and development of the F-22 Raptor, the next generation of dominance fighter for the Air Force, as well as $2.7 billion for 13 low-rate initial production aircraft, and $379 million for advance procurement of 24 LRIP aircraft in fiscal year 2003.

Mr. Speaker, H.R. 2586 also includes $1.5 billion for continued development of the Joint Strike Fighter, $1 billion for the procurement of 12 MV-22 helicopters. These aircraft are important components in our national arsenal, and moving forward on their research and development sends a clear signal that the United States has no intention of relinquishing our air superiority.

Mr. Speaker, the first duty of the Congress is to provide for the national defense, and the men and women who protect it. This bipartisan bill does a great deal to improve military readiness and to improve the quality of life of our men and women in uniform, as well as for their families. For that reason, I urge the adoption of this rule and of the bill.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Puerto Rico (Mr. ACEVEDO-VILA).

Mr. ACEVEDO-VILA. Mr. Speaker, I am glad the House today finally agrees on a rule to approve H.R. 2586, that will authorize the adequate funds for the Defense Department at this critical time, but I want to clarify some issues with regard to Puerto Ricans and Puerto Rico’s commitment at this moment to the Nation.

Puerto Ricans will continue to support this great Nation and President George W. Bush in efforts to fight against the horrors of terrorism. Let no one question our commitment. Governor Calderon and I have reached out to support those directly impacted by the cowardly acts of September 11, 2001. Some 800 Puerto Ricans died that day in the Pentagon and in New York. We stand in steadfast support of efforts to realize justice and to heal the many wounds inflicted on America. We recognize that this bill works toward that commitment.

Nevertheless, I am concerned, however, about language contained in the chairman’s mark that would, if enacted, alter the commitment of the Navy to find sufficient alternative training grounds to Vieques by May 1, 2003. I am also concerned about how this change in policy will be received in Puerto Rico should it become law. We reaffirm our support of President Bush’s position that there is no need for another referendum and that the Navy will depart Vieques on or before May 1, 2003.

Furthermore, since Navy Secretary Gordon England yesterday stated in a letter dated September 24, 2001, to Senate Committee on Armed Services Chairman Levin that the Navy will meet its goal of May 1, 2003, there is no need to change the existing commitment. Such a change would create confusion and distrust in Vieques. We do not need that at this time of national unity.

I am confident that the President, this House, and the Senate will comply with the commitment made to the people of Vieques that the Navy will leave Vieques by 2003.

I want my colleagues to appreciate how committed Puerto Ricans are to our national defense. All of the recruitment goals of the armed services have been surpassed in Puerto Rico over the last 4 years. Even as this issue has been discussed on the island, young Puerto Ricans enlist to serve our Nation in numbers that increase year after year and exceed recruiting goals of our armed services, including the Navy.

Puerto Rico’s support of this Nation is unconditional. However, I believe that the administration can still meet the commitment to find alternatives to Vieques by May 1, 2003.

Mrs. MYRICK. Mr. Speaker, I would just like to say to the gentleman from Puerto Rico that I hope he will accept our condolences for all of the people of Puerto Rico who lost their lives in that senseless act.

Mr. Speaker, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Arkansas (Mr. SNYDER).

Mr. SNYDER. Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this rule. Both the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN) and I had asked that amendments be made in order that deal with base closure. They were not made in order; but in the spirit of comity, we understand why that is the situation.

However, the other body has clearly made its preferences clear, and this will be an item at conference. Senate Committee on Rules said we would have to waive the budget rules; but all of us have a big PAC, folks who made big contributions. What they have done is contributed their lives to our Nation, and we are not even willing to see to it that we can keep the promise to them.

So I am going to oppose this rule, and I would ask my fellow colleagues to oppose it.

I would also like to point out that one more budget tightening that is going on has to do with concurrent receipt. Federal employees who are disabled on the workplace are allowed to draw their disability and their retirement pay. One again, the only Americans who are singled out to get one or the other are our Nation’s military retirees. As the President just pointed out, we are going to have casualties in Iraq against terrorists and military casualties happen to have been someone who served our Nation for 20 years or more, and if they become disabled as a result of their military service, they will get their disability; but it will be deducted from their retirement pay.

Mr. Speaker, I want my colleagues, the Committee on Rules, I want the gentleman from California (Mr. THOMAS), the Committee on Ways and Means, I want somebody to come to this floor and tell me that that is fair. Just last week we bailed out the airlines, and I voted for it, and some of the people we bailed out make $20 million and $30 million a year to run those companies, and they have not run them very well. We have seen to it that the wealthiest 5 percent of all Americans got more than their fair share of 1 trillion, 200 billion dollars worth of tax breaks; but we cannot take care of folks who have been disabled serving their country, and we cannot honor the promise of lifetime health care to our Nation’s military retirees.

I want the Speaker of the House, I want the gentleman from California (Mr. THOMAS), I want someone to come forward and just tell me if they think that is fair, because if we are willing to do it behind the cloak of secrecy, if we are willing to get the folks on the Committee on Rules to do our dirty work for us, then please do not have the nerve 2 months from now to go to Veterans’ Day celebrations, and when that military retiree comes to you and says, ‘You know what, they will not let me in the base hospital, and when that disabled veteran comes to you, and says, you know what, I can get my military pay or disability pay, but I have earned both of them, and I cannot get both. You can look that guy in the eye and say well, I was not aware of that, and maybe he will forget about it a year from November, or you can tell him the truth: yes, I knew you had a problem, but we were trying to move that bill along, so we just ignored you one more time.”
Just last week we found $18 billion to bail out the airlines. The week before that we allocated $40 billion additional defense funds, but not one of those penny-niques is allocated to solve either one of these problems. Does somebody want to tell me that is right? This defense bill is more famous for what it does not do. It does not balance the budget. As of the end of August, even before the tragedy on September 11, our Nation was $31 billion in the red, again. It does not build ships. At the rate we are going, we are losing 15 ships a year, that is the impact, and headed towards a 200 ship fleet. I say to my colleagues, not the 400-ship fleet of just a few years ago and not the 600-ship fleet of the Reagan years. So someone tell me where the heck all the money goes and why we cannot set better priorities. So for a lot of reasons, on behalf of my 405 colleagues who supported Medicare subvention last year, and who only asked for a fair up and down vote on that issue so that we can fulfill the promise to our Nation’s military retirees, I ask my colleagues to oppose this rule.

Mr. FROST. Mr. Speaker, we have no additional speakers. I urge adoption of the rule, and I yield back the balance of my time.

Mrs. MYRICK. Mr. Speaker, I yield back the balance of my time, and I move the previous question on the resolution.

The previous question was ordered.

The resolution was agreed to.

A motion to reconsider was laid on the table.

RECESS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to clause 12 of rule I, the Chair declares the House in recess subject to the call of the Chair.

Accordingly (at 2 0’clock and 57 minutes p.m.), the House stood in recess subject to the call of the Chair.

The recess having expired, the House was called to order by the Speaker pro tempore (Mr. McHugh) at 5 0’clock and 47 minutes p.m.

COMMUNICATION FROM THE CLERK OF THE HOUSE

The SPEAKER pro tempore laid before the House the following communique from the Clerk of the House of Representatives:

Hon. J. Daniel郝赫特
The Speaker, House of Representatives, Washington, DC.

DEAR MR. SPEAKER: Pursuant to the permission granted in Clause 2(h) of Rule II of the Rules of the U.S. House of Representatives, the Clerk received the following message from the Secretary of the Senate on September 25, 2001 at 4:41 p.m.:

That the Senate PASSED without amendment H.J. Res. 65. With best wishes, I am

Sincerely,

JEFF TRANDAH, Clerk of the House.

NATIONAL DEFENSE AUTHORIZATION ACT FOR FISCAL YEAR 2002

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Pursuant to House Resolution 246 and rule XVIII, the Chair declares the House in the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the further consideration of the bill, H.R. 2586.

□ 1748

IN THE COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

Accordingly, the House resolved itself into the Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union for the further consideration of the bill (H.R. 2586) to authorize appropriations for fiscal year 2002 for military activities of the Department of Defense, to prescribe military personnel strengths for fiscal year 2002, and for other purposes, with Mrs. Biggert in the chair.

The CHAIRMAN. When the Committee of the Whole rose on Thursday, September 20, 2001, proceedings pursuant to the order of the House of Wednesday, September 19 had been completed.

Pursuant to House Resolution 246, no further amendment to the committee amendment in the nature of a substitute is in order, except amendments printed in House Report 207–218.

Amendments printed in the report may be considered only in the order printed, may be offered only by a Member designated in the report, shall be considered read, and shall not be subject to a demand for a division of the question.

It is now in order to consider amendment No. 1 printed in House Report 107–218.

AMENDMENT NO. 1 OFFERED BY MR. STUMP

Mr. STUMP. Madam Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment No. 1 offered by Mr. Stump: At the end of subtitle A of title I (page 18, after line 25), insert the following new section:

SEC. 1. ADDITIONAL AMOUNT FOR SHIPBUILDING AND CONVERSION, NAVY.

(a) INCREASE IN SCN AMOUNT.—The amount provided in section 102(a)(3) for shipbuilding and conversion for the Navy is hereby increased by $57,100,000, to be available for the U.S.S. Eisenhower (CVN-69) Refueling Complex Overhaul program.

(b) OFFSET.—The amount provided in section 301(5) is hereby reduced by $57,100,000, to be derived from amounts for consulting services.

Strike section 121 (page 20, line 2, through page 21, line 2).

At the end of subtitle B of title II (page 27, after line 24), insert the following new sections:

SEC. 107. COST LIMITATION APPLICABLE TO F-22 AIRCRAFT PROGRAM ENGINEERING AND MANUFACTURING DEVELOPMENT.

Section 271(c)(3) of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2001 (Public Law 106–398; 111 Stat. 1660) is amended by inserting “plus $250,000,000” after “and (2)”.

SEC. 108. C-5 AIRCRAFT MODERNIZATION.

The appropriation amount provided in section 201(3) is hereby reduced by $30,000,000, to be derived from amounts for consulting services.

Strike section 331 (page 58, beginning on line 19) and insert the following:

SEC. 331. WORKFORCE REVIEW LIMITATIONS.

(a) LIMITATION FINDING GAO REPORT.—No more than 50 percent of the workforce review planned during fiscal year 2002 may be initiated before the date that is the earlier of (1) May 1, 2002, or (2) the date on which the Comptroller General submits to Congress the report required by section 832 of the Fiscal Year 2001 National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2001 (as enacted by Public Law 106–398; 111 Stat. 1654–221), regarding the report’s analysis of findings with respect to the transfer of commercial activities from Government-owned to Government-operated contractors.

(b) REQUIRED COST SAVINGS LEVEL FOR CHANGE.—(1) A commercial or industrial type function of the Department of Defense that is not currently performed by the private sector as a result of a workforce review unless, as a result of the cost comparison examination required as part of the review of the contractor that employed the most efficient organization process described in Office of Management and Budget Circular A–76 or any successor administrative regulation or policy, at least a 10-percent cost savings would be achieved by performance of the function by the private sector over the term of the contract.

(2) The cost savings requirement specified in paragraph (1) does not apply to any contract for special studies and analyses, construction services, architectural services, engineering services, medical services, scientific and technical services related to (but not in support of) research and development, and depot-level maintenance and repair services.

(3) The Secretary of Defense may waive the cost savings requirement if—

(A) the written waiver is prepared by the Secretary of Defense, or the relevant Assistant Secretary or agency head; and

(B) the written waiver is accompanied by a detailed description of why the waiver is necessary, including the specific security interests are so compelling as to preclude compliance with the requirement for a cost comparison examination.

(c) WORKFORCE REVIEW DEFINED.—In this section, the term “workforce review” with respect to a function of the Department of Defense performed by Department of Defense civilian employees means a review conducted under Office of Management and Budget Circular A–76 or any successor administrative regulation or policy.

At the end of subtitle F of title III (page 71, after line 11), insert the following new section:

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE

SEC. 1748

DEAR MR. SPEAKER: Pursuant to the permission granted in Clause 2(h) of Rule II of the Rules of the U.S. House of Representa-
The amendments made by this section shall be paid from funds available for the health care programs of the participating uniformed services under the jurisdiction of the respective administering Secretary.

(c) LIMITATION ON TOTAL AMOUNT CONTRIBUTED DURING A FISCAL YEAR.—Section 1116 of such title is further amended by adding at the end of the following new subsection:

"(d) In no case may the total amount of monthly contributions to the Fund during a fiscal year under subsection (a) exceed the amount paid from the Fund during such fiscal year under section 1113."

(2) The item relating to section 1111 in the table of provisions at the beginning of chapter 56 of such title is amended to read as follows:

"1111. Establishment and purpose of Fund; definitions; authority to enter into agreements".

(3) Section 1112(f)(1) of title 10, United States Code, is amended by striking "three" and inserting "two".

(b) First Year Contributions.—With respect to contributions under section 1116(a) of title 10, United States Code, for the first year that the Department of Defense Medicare-Eligible Retiree Health Care Fund is established under chapter 56 of such title, if the Board of Actuaries is unable to execute its responsibilities with respect to such section, the Secretary of Defense may make contributions under such section using methods and assumptions developed by the Secretary of Defense.

At the end of title X (page 307, after line 20), insert the following new sections:

SEC. 5. AMENDMENTS RELATING TO COMMISSION ON THE FUTURE OF THE UNITED STATES AEROSPACE INDUSTRY.

(a) Deadline for Report.—Subsection (d)(2) of section 902 of the Floyd D. Spence National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2001 (Public Law 106–398; 114 Stat. 1648–179) is amended by adding at the end the following new paragraph:

"(3) The report required by this subsection shall be submitted to the President not later than one year after the date of the first official meeting of the Commission."
SEC. 3034. EXPEDITED IMPLEMENTATION OF AUTHORITY TO DISPOSE OF COBALT FROM NATIONAL DEFENSE STOCKPILE.

(a) DISPOSAL AUTHORIZED DURING FISCAL YEAR 2002.—Section 301(3), subsection (a)(1) of section 3005 of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 1998 (Public Law 105–85; 50 U.S.C. 98d note) is amended by striking "fiscal year 2002" and inserting "fiscal year 2003".

(b) LIMITATIONS ON DISPOSAL AUTHORITY.—

(1) subsection (b)(1) of such section is amended by adding at the end the following sentence: "The total quantity of cobalt disposed of under such subsection during fiscal year 2002 may not exceed 700,000 pounds.".
positive developments from the introduction of this language in last year's intelligence bill, even though that language was removed by the other body prior to final passage. Since the beginning of 2001, the U.S. Air Force has been more forthcoming with the NRO on contracting matters, and this trend needs to be encouraged.

Mr. STUMP. Madam Chairman, re-claiming my time, it is my under-standing that the House Select Committee on Intelligence does not plan to adopt any additional space launch contracting provisions in the fiscal year 2002 intelligence authorization bill; is that correct?

Mr. BERREUTER. Madam Chairman, the chairman's understanding of our position is correct.

Mr. STUMP. Madam Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. SHELTON. Madam Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. ANDREWS).

Mr. ANDREWS. Madam Chairman, I rise to engage the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. STUMP), the chairman of the committee, in a colloquy. Madam Chairman, I appreciate the gentleman's willingness to discuss an issue that takes on even more significance in light of the attacks on September 11, and that is computer cybersecurity. I had proposed an amendment to provide $2 million to the Secretary of Defense in order to assist the Department of Defense in ensuring that computers and computer-related products that the Department purchases from the commercial sector meet the highest level of national security and information security requirements. Unfortunately, my amendment was not ruled in order. This is a very important topic to me, and I hope to have the chairman's support as I continue to discuss and promote the need for information assurance within the Department of Defense.

Mr. STUMP. Madam Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. ANDREWS. I yield to the gentleman from Arizona.

Mr. STUMP. Madam Chairman, the gentleman raises a very important issue. In this day and age, information assurance and security of the Department's computers is vital. Our national defense relies on it. I assure the gentleman that I will continue to work with him on this matter.

Madam Chairman, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from West Virginia (Mrs. CAPITO).

Mrs. CAPITO. Madam Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

I would like to speak in support of the manager's amendment, but I would like to talk briefly about part of that amendment that came from the heart of West Virginia.

The day after the tragedy on September 11, the eighth grade class of Moorefield Middle School, Mr. Sisler's class, got together and talked about what they could do to help. One of the girls in the class said, I would like to give some money to rebuild the Pentagon. So we engaged in a conversation; and what we came up with was a specific bill, part of this amendment, that would allow children and adults throughout the country to specifically donate to the Department of Defense to create a fund to rebuild and restructure our Pentagon. That is part of this manager's amendment.

It is with great pride that I offer this from the Moorefield Middle School children, from the hearts of West Virginia to the hearts of America; and I thank the gentleman for letting me be a part of this.

Mr. SHELTON. Madam Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. STUMP. Madam Chairman, I am pleased to yield 1 minute to the gentle- woman from Virginia (Mrs. JO ANN DAVIS).

Mrs. JO ANN DAVIS of Virginia. Madam Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

I rise today in strong support of the manager's amendment of the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. STUMP). This amendment contains $57.1 million to complete the funding required for the refueling of the U.S.S. Eisenhower and will help to ensure our carrier force is ready for war.

Madam Chairman, there is no question that we have underfund our true defense needs for over 10 years. Now is the time to correct this. Now is the time to fully fund our carriers.

Who could have imagined just 2 weeks ago that we would require two carriers in the New York Harbor flying combat air patrols? Who could have imagined that just 2 weeks ago we would require four carriers in just one theater of operation?

Madam Chairman, H.R. 2586 is a start toward funding our military at adequate levels, but it is only a start. This information will rush critical funding not only to our carriers, but C-5 aircraft modernization. These are two critical areas that need our immediate attention, and the gentleman from Arizona's amendment does just that.

In closing, I encourage all Members of the House to vote in support of this critical amendment.

Mr. SHELTON. Madam Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. STUMP. Madam Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

The CHAIRMAN. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. STUMP).

The amendment is agreed to.

The CHAIRMAN. It is now in order to consider amendment No. 2 printed in House report 107-218.

AMENDMENT NO. 2 OFFERED BY MR. STUMP

Mr. STUMP. Madam Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment No. 2 offered by Mr. STUMP: At the end of subtitle E of title V (page 161, after line 13), insert the following new sections:

SEC. __. Sense of Congress on new medal to recognize civilian employees of the Department of Defense killed or wounded as a result of hostile action.

(a) FINDINGS.—Congress makes the following findings:

(1) The role and importance of civilian na-tionals of the United States as Federal em-ployees and contractors in support of opera-tions of the Armed Forces worldwide has con-tinued to expand.

(2) The expanded role performed by those civilians, both in the United States and overseas, greatly increased the risk to those civilians of injury and death from hostile ac-tions taken against United States Armed Forces, as demonstrated by the terrorist at-tacks on the Pentagon on September 11, 2001, in which scores of Department of Defense ci-vilian and contractor personnel were killed or wounded.

(3) No decoration exists for the recognition of civilian nationals of the United States who, while serving under competent author-ity in any capacity with the Armed Forces, are killed or wounded in the line of duty under circumstances which, if they were members of the Armed Forces, would qualify them for the award of the Purple Heart.

(4) Both the Congress and the Secretary of Defense have previously agreed to the need for such a decoration.

(5) On September 20, 2001, the Deputy Sec-retary of Defense announced a new award, a medal for the defense of free-dom, to be awarded to civilians employed by the Department of Defense who are killed or wounded as a result of hostile action and at the same time directed that a comprehensive review be conducted to develop a more uni-form approach to the award of decorations to military and civilian personnel of the De-partment of Defense.

(b) COMMENDATION OF CREATION OF NEW AWARD.—Congress commends the decision announced by the Deputy Secretary of De-fense on September 20, 2001, to approve the creation of a new award, a medal for the defense of freedom, to be awarded to civilians employed by the Department of Defense who are killed or wounded as a result of hostile action.

(c) SENSE OF CONGRESS.—It is the sense of Congress that the Secretary of Defense

(1) should move expeditiously to produce and award the new medal referred to in sub-section (b); and

(2) should develop a more comprehensive, uniform policy for the award of decorations to military and civilian personnel of the De-partment of Defense.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to House Resolution 216, the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. STUMP) and a Member opposed each will control 5 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. STUMP).

Mr. STUMP. Madam Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may con-sume.

My amendment expresses a sense of Congress regarding the recognition of civilian employees within the Depart-ment of Defense who are killed or wounded as a result of hostile action.
The tragic and deadly attack of the Pentagon by terrorists has raised public awareness that our Nation’s civilian personnel also take an oath to defend our Nation. Their selfless contributions and their sacrifices are just as vital to our efforts to protect the constitutional freedoms that we enjoy.

On September 11, nearly 200 of our finest men and women from civilian and military service, who are killed or wounded in the line of duty, will be awarded the Purple Heart. Sadly, the sacrifices of their civilian counterparts will not be acknowledged, since no decoration existed to recognize civilians who were also killed or wounded in the line of duty.

These and many other civilians often work with their military colleagues side by side, and oftentimes are deployed to hostile areas in support of military operations. They are essential to support military operations worldwide, and it is right and just that we recognize their contributions and sacrifices on behalf of our Nation.

On September 20, the Deputy Secretary of Defense approved of a new defense of freedom medal for civilians of the Department of Defense who were killed or wounded as a result of hostile action. The defense of freedom medal, like the Purple Heart, will recognize the sacrifices of our civilian personnel. I urge the support of my colleagues.

Madam Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. STUMP. Madam Chairman, I yield such time as I may consume to support the gentleman from Utah (Mr. HANSEN).

Mr. HANSEN. Madam Chairman, I rise in support of my friend and chairman, the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. STUMP). This amendment recognizes the role that civilians play in support of our Armed Services during peace and war. I am happy to join my colleagues in commending the Defense Department for its decision to create a new medal for civilians employed by the Department of Defense who are wounded or killed as a result of their presence in or near the area of action.

There are numerous duties carried out by government civilians during wartime. Civilians conduct the necessary tests on essential military equipment and serve as liaisons between government contracts and active duty field commanders.

At a time when we have seen the personal sacrifice that American civilians are willing to make in defense of freedom, an amendment honoring Defense Department civilian employees is a meaningful way to show our friends and foes the resolve of the American people.

Madam Chairman, we must ensure that those civilians who risk their lives for us are never forgotten.

Mr. REYES. Madam Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.
The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment No. 3 offered by Mr. TRAFICANT.

At the end of subtitle C of title X (page 271, after line 17), insert the following new section:

SEC. 374a. Assignment of members to assist border patrol and control.

"(a) Assignment Authorized.—Upon submission of a request consistent with subsection (b), the Secretary of Defense may assign members of the Army, Navy, Air Force, and Marine Corps to assist—

"(1) the Immigration and Naturalization Service in preventing the entry of terrorists or drug traffickers into the United States; and

"(2) the United States Customs Service in the inspection of cargo, vehicles, and aircraft at ports of entry to the United States to prevent the entry of weapons of mass destruction, components of weapons of mass destruction, prohibited narcotics or drugs, or other terrorism or drug trafficking items.

"(b) Request for Assignment.—The assignment of members under subsection (a) may occur only if—

"(1) the assignment is at the request of the Attorney General, in the case of an assignment to the Immigration and Naturalization Service, or the Secretary of the Treasury, in the case of an assignment to the United States Customs Service; and

"(2) the request of the Attorney General or the Secretary of the Treasury (as the case may be) is accompanied by a certification by the President that the assignment of members pursuant to the request is necessary to respond to a threat to national security posed by United States of terrorists or drug traffickers.

"(c) Training Program Required.—The Attorney General or the Secretary of the Treasury, as the case may be, together with the Secretary of Defense, shall establish a training program to ensure that members receive general instruction regarding issues affecting their enforcement in the border areas in which the members may perform duties under an assignment under subsection (a). A member may not be deployed at a border location pursuant to an assignment under subsection (a) until the member has successfully completed the training program.

"(d) Conditions of Use.—(1) Whenever a member who is assigned under subsection (a) to assist the Immigration and Naturalization Service or the United States Customs Service is performing duties at a border location pursuant to the assignment, a civilian law enforcement officer from the agency concerned shall accompany the member.

"(2) Nothing in this section shall be construed to—

"(A) authorize a member assigned under subsection (a) to conduct a search, seizure, or other similar law enforcement activity or to make an arrest; and

"(B) supersede section 1385 of title 18 (popularly known as the "Pose Comitatus Act").

"(e) Establishment of Ongoing Task Forces.—(1) The Attorney General or the Secretary of the Treasury may establish ongoing joint task forces when accompanied by a certification by the President that the assignment of members pursuant to the request to establish a joint task force is necessary to respond to a threat to national security posed by United States of terrorists or drug traffickers.

"(2) When established, any joint task force shall fully comply with the standards as set forth in this section.

"(f) Notification Requirements.—The Attorney General or the Secretary of the Treasury (as the case may be) shall notify the Governors of the States in which the members are to be deployed pursuant to an assignment under subsection (a), and local governments in the deployment area, of the deployment of the members to assist the Immigration and Naturalization Service or the United States Customs Service (as the case may be) and the types of tasks to be performed by the members.

"(g) Reimbursement Requirement.—Section 377 of this title shall apply in the case of members assigned under subsection (a).

"(h) Termination of Authority.—No assignment may be made or continued under subsection (a) after September 30, 2004.

"(i) Establishment of Training Program.—The training required by subsection (b) of section 374a of title 10, United States Code, shall be established as soon as practicable after the date of the enactment of this section.

"(j) Clerical Amendment.—The table of sections at the beginning of such chapter is amended by inserting after the item relating to section 374 the following new item:

"374a. Assignment of members to assist border patrol and control."

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to House Resolution 246, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. TRAFICANT) and a Member opposed each will control 5 minutes.

Mr. TRAFICANT. The Traficant amendment does not deal with illegal immigration. I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Madam Chairman, I want to, first of all, commend my colleague, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. TRAFICANT). Year after year he comes to the floor, out of sheer frustration with this recommendation. But I say to this Congress again, if 300,000 illegal immigrants trying to find a better life can gain access to America, do not believe for one moment that a large contingent of people with evil intentions could not gain entry into America and continue to kill American citizens.

The CHAIRMAN. Who rises to control the time in opposition?

Mr. REYES. Madam Chairman, I rise in strong opposition to this amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Texas (Mr. REYES) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. REYES. Madam Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Madam Chairman, I want to, first of all, commend my colleague, the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. TRAFICANT). Year after year he comes to the floor, out of sheer frustration with this recommendation. But this amendment is not a good idea. It was not a good idea 4 years ago, it was not a good idea last year, and it certainly is less of a good idea today, because just recently, President Bush activated 50,000 reservists. That tells us, it sends a very clear message that we do not have enough troops to go around.

Those reservists that have been activated have been activated because we are about to go and make those accountable for the very acts that my colleague mentioned, the bombing and the terrible and tragic acts against the World Trade Center and against our own Pentagon.

I yield the gentleman from Texas (Mr. ORTIZ).

Mr. ORTIZ. Madam Chairman, I yield 1 1/2 minutes.

Mr. REYES. Madam Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Madam Chairman, 2 weeks ago a foreign force came across our borders and attempted to take away our domestic tranquility. In 1941, Japan attacked Pearl Harbor, a nation with evil intent, and their victims claimed were less than half of what the terrorists need. Pearl Harbor, a nation with evil intent, and their victims claimed were less than half of what the terrorists need. Pearl Harbor, a nation with evil intent, and their victims claimed were less than half of what the terrorists need. Pearl Harbor, a nation with evil intent, and their victims claimed were less than half of what the terrorists need. Pearl Harbor, a nation with evil intent, and their victims claimed were less than half of what the terrorists need.

We are not talking about the border between D.C. and Virginia, we are not talking about the border between Pennsylvania and Ohio, and we are not talking about only the Southwest borders of the United States. The two planes that struck the World Trade Center, those individuals came through Canada.

The Traficant amendment does not mandate anything at this point. It does not deal with illegal immigration. I think the Border Patrol is well capable of doing that. The Traficant amendment allows the President, Mr. Ridge, my friend and former neighbor, now in the Pentagon, in conjunction with the Secretary of the Treasury, and the U.S. Attorney General, to provide that support, land or air.

I say to this Congress again, if 300,000 illegal immigrants trying to find a better life can gain access to America, do not believe for one moment that a large contingent of people with evil intentions could not gain entry into America and continue to kill American citizens.

Madam Chairman, I stand in opposition to the Traficant amendment.
Mr. Chairman, I understand that my friend from Ohio, he is a very good friend, and I think his amendment has some merits, but I think this is the wrong time to be moving troops and to be positioning them at the border when we have a more serious problem of dealing with terrorists.

It takes people at the border who understand the skills, or who have the skills to do this job. The military and I served in the military, we are trained to do a different job: to destroy the enemy, to do covert operations. We are dealing with a friendly country on both sides, Canada and the United States.

Now, this new war that we are now involved in includes a host of fronts which include law enforcement on our borders, which includes Customs, Border Patrols, the INS, and just like what we are trying to do now, to be sure that when we get people who work at airports, that we pay them a decent salary, that they have the skills necessary so that they know exactly what they are dealing with, what they are looking for. Staying troops at the border will not do the job.

I was in law enforcement for about 8 years.

Mr. TRAFICANT. Madam Chairman, I continue to reserve my time.

Mr. REYES. Madam Chairman, I yield 15 seconds to the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. SKELTON), my colleague and the distinguished ranking member.

Mr. SKELTON. Madam Chairman, let me say, in recent testimony, Madam Chairman, the Chief of Staff of the United States Army, as well as the Secretary of the Army, testified that they are in need of at least 40,000 additional soldiers for our present missions. I have recommended publicly at least an additional 20,000.

I would point out that these are soldiers, as opposed to those who are police. Their job is to protect America's interests as soldiers.

Mr. REYES. Madam Chairman, might I inquire how much time is remaining on either side?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Ohio (Mr. TRAFICANT) has 3 minutes. The gentleman from Texas (Mr. Reyes) has ¾ of a minute, and the gentleman from Texas has the right to close.

Mr. REYES. Madam Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Over 6,300 Americans are now dead since our last debate. President Bush has shown wisdom in calling up 50,000 reservists. If we need more, tell me what is more important than the national security of the United States nor the charge that we have here in Congress.

I am a former sheriff. Sheriffs and police chiefs do not fight wars. Border patrols and customs do not fight wars. They are a great help.

All this business about traffic and deploying troops is an absolute lie. We, in fact, through legislation create the training for a specific mechanism of military, intelligence, and that is exactly what we do not know who our enemy is, but I know this: on September 11 there was one other unusual headline. China signed a cooperative agreement economically with the Taliban government, and today the Taliban headline, that China is testing super missiles.

If not now, when? If not this, what? We cannot guard all these borders. We give the chance to make sure that there is adequate training; that we support our President; that there is a strong aviation presence; and that if there are to be troops deployed, they are deployed as former-President Bush did with his task force that worked successfully. Yes, there were some setbacks, but never has America been more secure than this.

Let me ask this question of Congress. How do we defend our home if our back door and our front door is unlocked? It is unlocked. That is not offending customs. That is not offending border patrol. There is one border patrol for every two miles, and that is not talking about the northern border. I am not talking about the Southwest border. Quite frankly, I think the most inviting aspect to most terrorists border now looks more like the North.

We have a responsibility to secure our Nation. This is a national security location checkpoint, our border. I know the politics. It took me 12 years to pass changing the burden of proof in the civil tax case, 12 years. It was the right thing to do and seizures of homes dropped from 10,050 to 51.

We have lost double the amount from three terrorist strikes than we did from an attack from Japan. My God, what do we stand for? If we cannot secure ourselves, how many more Americans will die? I hate to say this, but I assure you they will, if 300,000 illegal immigrants come across a border, an army could come across one, perhaps maybe with a nuclear device, in some subway.

I ask the Members and urge them to vote aye on this amendment and fight to keep it in our conference.

The CHAIRMAN. The time of the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. TRAFICANT) has expired.

Mr. REYES. Madam Chairman, I yield myself the remainder of my time.

I know this puts my colleagues in a difficult situation, whether to show the courage to vote against this amendment, which is the right thing to do, or to continue to go along and seem patriotic by saying let us put our troops on the border.

My colleague mentioned we do not know who our enemy is but we do know that the people who live along the border, both on the Southern border and the Northern border, are not the enemy; and we should not deploy the military to the Southern border or the Northern border.

Let us use some of that money that we just authorized, that $10 billion, to never have gone through or the presence of professional law enforcement personnel to help the border patrol and to help customs. That is the rational thing to do. Putting the military on the border has never been a good idea.

Marshal law is not a good idea just because we fear terrorism. President Bush, the Secretaries this afternoon have said, let us go back to normal life. A normal life is not marshal law. I urge all my colleagues to vote against this amendment.

Mr. STUMP. Madam Chairman, I rise in support of the amendment offered by the gentleman from Ohio, Mr. TRAFICANT.

The amendment would reaffirm existing authorities of the President to use members of the Armed Forces in support of law enforcement operations to deny terrorists and drug traffickers entry into the United States. The Department of Defense currently provides personnel, equipment, and intelligence to assist local, state, and federal law enforcement organizations to include the Customs Service and the U.S. Border Patrol.

I believe the Department of Defense must continue to be prepared to respond to the range of threats against the nation and participate where appropriate with law enforcement. While this amendment does not mandate any specific actions by the President, it would establish a process by which the Secretary of Defense may make available additional personnel at the request of the Attorney General or the Secretary of the Treasury.

Madam Chairman, the amendment is reasonable and I support its adoption.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Madam Chairman, I rise in opposition to the Traficant Amendment to H.R. 2586.

The Traficant Amendment would assign, at the request of the Attorney General and the Secretary of Defense, military personnel to aid in counter-terrorism and drug interdiction efforts.

The Traficant Amendment is a bad amendment for a number of reasons. First, Mr. Chairman, our military forces are spread too thin internationally. This amendment would cause additional stress on our service men and women and their families at a time when our forces are engaged in the world’s largest terrorist eradication campaign. Even our National Guard and reserve units around the country are engaged in this effort. To use military personnel in civilian roles is simply not an efficient use of this nation’s manpower, especially when our border patrol agents can accomplish the same goals with the assistance of new rules and regulations. Let me point out a few key reasons why we need a policy change in our current structure.

The U.S.-Canadian border, which extends for approximately 4,000 miles (excluding Alaska) is one of the longest land borders in the world. Approximately 300 Border Patrol
The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to House Resolution 246 the gentlewoman from California (Ms. SANCHEZ) and a Member opposed each will control 5 minutes.

Ms. SANCHEZ. Madam Chairman, I yield myself 1 minute.

Today, I join my colleague the gentlewoman from California (Ms. HARMAN) to offer this amendment. Our amendment is about safety and choice, and it is simple and fair.

This amendment allows military personnel and their dependents overseas to use their own funds to obtain legal, safe abortion services in military hospitals. The amendment has been re-drafted to leave no room for misinterpretation. It only affects U.S. military bases overseas.

In light of the recent events, I cannot think of a better time to address this issue. The President has already started to activate reserve units, and our brave men and women are being deployed overseas.

The military will not transport a woman out of a forward deployment unit to obtain medical services in a U.S. hospital. That is why our amendment has never been more important.

Women who volunteer to serve in our Armed Forces already give up many freedoms and risk their lives to defend our country. They should not have to sacrifice their privacy, their health, and their basic constitutional rights because of a policy with no valid military purpose.

This is a health care concern. Local facilities in foreign nations are not equipped to handle procedures. This is a matter of fairness.

Our amendment does not allow taxpayer-funded abortions at military hospitals nor does it compel any doctor who opposes abortion on principle to perform an abortion.

Vote for the Sanchez-Harman amendment.

Madam Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. RYUN of Kansas. Madam Chairman, I rise in opposition, and I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Our military serves to protect the lives of the innocent. This is clear to us now more than ever. Military treatment centers are dedicated to healing and nurturing life. They should not be forced to facilitate the taking of the most innocent of human life, the child in the womb.

Supporters of abortion in military hospitals argue that women in countries where abortion is not permitted will have nowhere else to turn. However, the U.S. military follows the prevailing laws and rules of the host country regarding abortions. Military doctors must obey the laws of the country where they are providing services, so abortions still could not be performed in these locations even if we passed this amendment that we are considering today.

This is also the wrong time for Congress to allow overseas military treatment facilities to become abortion clinics. Our administration is working hard to recruit Muslim countries to be a part of our coalition against terrorism. They are working to build a partnership to allow our military to operate in these countries. It would be counterproductive to risk eroding relationships with these countries that oppose abortion.

For the past 5 years, since 1996, the House has rejected attempts to overturn the ban on overseas abortions. The Sanchez amendment is simply one more attempt to reopen a contentious issue that this House has rejected from time to time. I urge my colleagues to maintain current law by voting “no” on the Sanchez amendment.

Madam Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Ms. SANCHEZ. Madam Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from California (Ms. HARMAN), my colleague and the cosponsor of this amendment.

Ms. HARMAN. Madam Chairman, I thank my colleague, the gentlewoman from California (Ms. SANCHEZ), for her leadership and co-leadership on this very important issue.

Madam Chairman, as we mount our multilayered global efforts to fight terrorism, we need America’s best talent.

All of it. That includes the majority of Americans: women. And those women serving in our military overseas need access to health care.

As we have heard, this amendment is about health care, which may be denied these women, especially serving in austere countries, as travel back to the United States may become impossible.

We are not asking that the Federal Government pay for abortions for women overseas. Women who want this procedure will have to pay for it themselves. We are not asking that health professionals who do not wish to perform abortions be required to do so.

Only willing doctors would provide this service.

As women deploy abroad, it is time to send the right message: as they protect our constitutional rights to life and liberty, we need to protect theirs.

Mr. RYUN of Kansas. Madam Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentlewoman from Virginia (Mrs. JO ANN DAVIS).

Mrs. JO ANN DAVIS of Virginia. Madam Chairman, I rise today to speak against this amendment to expand abortion services in overseas military hospitals.

Madam Chairman, let us be clear what we are talking about. We need to put aside all the rhetoric. What this amendment does is allow the use of hard-earned taxpayer money to fund the procurement of abortions in our military hospitals overseas. The other side will throw out all kinds of false arguments and accusations concerning...
Ms. SANCHEZ. Madam Chairman, may I inquire how much time is remaining on both sides?

The CHAIRMAN. The gentlewoman from California (Ms. SANCHEZ) has 2 minutes. The gentleman from Kansas (Mr. RYUN) has 1 1/2 minutes. Ms. SANCHEZ. I reserve the balance of my time, Madam Chairman.

Mr. RYUN of Kansas. Madam Chairman, the best reason to reject this amendment is because the military medical personnel want you to. It has only been fairly recently we actually had a law enforcing the policy that has been in effect for a long time that we are not going to do abortions in medical facilities. Our military medical personnel do not want abortions done in their facilities no matter who pays for it. It is very important now to support our military. Please reject this amendment. This is not helpful to our military.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentlewoman from Kansas (Mr. RYUN) has 1 minute remaining. The gentlewoman from California (Ms. SANCHEZ) has 2 minutes. The gentleman from Kansas has the right to close.

Ms. SANCHEZ. Madam Chairman, I yield 1 minute to my colleague, the gentlewoman from California (Ms. HARMAN).

Ms. HARMAN. Madam Chairman, as I said earlier, this amendment is one which I have spent considerable time. Let us understand what we are talking about.

The gentleman from Maryland (Mr. BARTLETT) just said personnel in military hospitals do not want to perform this service. They do not have to under this legislation.

He said let us support our military while deployed abroad. That is my point too.

Our military includes American women who have a constitutional right to reproductive health care. So let us give them access. Let us support them while they are deployed aboard. If there were easy answers, easy ways for them to return to the United States to have these procedures, that might be fine, but that is not the case.

If they are in Pakistan or other far-off places where access to quality health care may be difficult, they will not be able to return to the United States and their constitutional rights will be abridged.

The point I made earlier, consistent with the thrust of this amendment, is that we are a republic of women and men in our military. We need to pass the Sanchez amendment.

Ms. SANCHEZ. Madam Chairman, I will leave the closing of this amendment to the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. MALONEY).

Mrs. MALONEY of New York. Madam Chairman, I rise in support of the Sanchez-Harman amendment.

Our country is at war. Our troops overseas are risking their lives to protect our lives and our rights as U.S. citizens. One of those rights is a woman’s right to choose. But women serving effectively lose this constitutional right at U.S. military bases where they literally cannot even buy an abortion.

A male member of the armed services needing medical attention receives the best. A female member needing a specific medical procedure must return to the United States, often at great expense, or go to a foreign hospital which may be unsanitary and dangerous. All she wants is the right to choose and the right to pay for the bill.

We need to come together as a Nation to support our armed services. Passing this amendment is the least we can do.

Mr. RYUN of Kansas. Madam Chairman, I yield the balance of my time to the gentlewoman from New Jersey (Mr. SMITH).

Mr. SMITH of New Jersey. Madam Chairman, have not we had enough violence lately? With all due respect to the gentlewoman from California (Ms. SANCHEZ), the amendment she offers will result in babies being brutally killed by abortion and will force pro-life Americans to facilitate the slaughter of innocent children. Sanchez will turn military hospitals into abortion mills. I want no part of the carnage.

Madam Chairwoman, abortion is violence against children. Some abortion methods dismember and rip apart the fragile little bodies of children. Other abortion methods chemically poison children. There is nothing benign or “curing” or nurturing about abortion. It is violence.

We worry today about the agony of chemical attack. Yet abortionists routinely attack unborn children with lethal chemicals. Abortionists turn the babies spines to jelly. Abortionists turn children’s bodies into burned corpses, a direct result of the caustic effect of salt poisoning and other methods of chemical abortions. It’s gruesome yet the apologists sanitize the awful deed with soothing, misleading rhetoric.

Abortion methods are particularly ugly, Madam Chairman, because under the guise of choice, they turn human baby girls and baby boys into dead baby boys and baby girls. We have had enough loss of innocent life. Reject the Sanchez amendment.

Ms. SCHAKOWSKY. Madam Chairman, I should like to support the amendment offered by the Gentlewoman from California to lift the ban which forbids service women and female military dependants from using their own funds for abortions at overseas military hospitals. At a time when we are sending more military personnel overseas, we must not limit the medical care those individuals will have to be able to access.
The brave women serving our Nation risk their lives for our freedom, and they give up liberties that many of us take for granted. But our soldiers and their families deserve the same constitutionally protected health care as we enjoy living in the United States. This amendment is not only in the best interest of our military families, but will help our national recruiting and retention efforts as well.

The facts are simple: No Federal funds would be used for these abortion services. Health care professionals who are opposed to performing abortions as a matter of conscience or moral principle would not be required to do so. This simply repeals the statutory prohibition on abortions in overseas military hospitals, allowing women stationed overseas to use their own funds for abortions. It returns the policy to the way it was for decades—consistent with the laws of the state where they are stationed.

Our soldiers cannot do their jobs when they have to go off base—often in hostile nations—to use their own funds for abortions. It is unfair. It denies women in the military the same constitutional liberties to the very women who have not willingly sacrificed so much to serve our country. The amendment simply would re-establish parity and the assurance that uniform health care services will be delivered to service people wherever they are stationed. Medical services will be provided consistent with historical practice, medical convention and statutory requirements consistent with the laws of the state where they are stationed. The facts are clear: We cannot afford to terminate pregnancies. Furthermore, physicians opposed to performing said operations are not forced to do so.

Finally, the provision of health services should not be used to raise issues on the abortion issue. We must ensure that all female service personnel can avail themselves of legal medical services that are comparable to those in the United States, even if they are on a military base. Otherwise we will be creating a caste system, whereby only persons with the financial means to pay for abortion services receive the medical treatment they want and need would be able to do so. I ask my colleagues to support the Sanchez/Harman amendment.

Ms. MILLER-MCDONALD. Madam Chairman, I rise in support of the amendment offered by Representatives SANCHEZ and HARMAN. This amendment is a common sense approach to the question of abortion procedures for servicewomen at bases overseas.

The law is clear here in the United States: women have the right to choose to have an abortion and to obtain it without undue interference from the government. Roe v. Wade established that right nearly 30 years ago, and no case since then has struck it down. That right belongs to all women residing in the U.S. It should not be taken away when our women decide to serve this country and are stationed overseas.

Without this amendment, our servicewomen will not have access to safe abortion procedures in U.S. military medical facilities overseas. They are at risk of being subjected to unsafe methods in non-military medical facilities. Meanwhile, overseas servicemen and servicewomen seeking any other type of health care are able to access good, safe health care at military medical facilities.

This amendment does not ask the government or taxpayers to fund the abortions. And the amendment would not force anyone in a U.S. military medical facilities overseas to perform the procedure. Rather, this amendment merely gives our servicewomen the right to obtain abortions in a safe facility, provided that they pay the cost of the procedure and the doctor agrees to perform it.

This is the very right those same women would have here in the United States, if they had not willingly sacrificed so much to serve our country. The amendment simply would re-establish parity and the assurance that uniform health care services will be delivered to service people wherever they are stationed.

Ms. JACKSON-LEE of Texas. Madam Chairman, I rise in support of the Sanchez/Harman amendment, and I urge my colleagues to correct this misguided policy and vote for the Sanchez-Harman amendment.

Ms. MCKINNEY. Madam Chairman, I rise in support of the Sanchez amendment. Though the U.S. Supreme Court has affirmed the right of women to seek abortions if they choose, this right does not carry with women when they travel overseas with our military. This amendment would simply permit service women and female dependents who serve or head overseas to obtain privately funded abortions in military facilities. Should we instead force them to seek such medical procedures in back alleys or third world hospitals, or are we ceding ourselves the authority of the Supreme Court in prohibiting a woman's right to abortion? Freedom of choice is not a democratic anachronism. This simply repeals the statutory prohibition on abortions in overseas military hospitals, allowing women stationed overseas to be able to get on base. This is a legal procedure for medical care. And they cannot do their jobs when they have to go off base—often in hostile nations—to use their own funds for abortions. It is unfair. It denies women in the military the same constitutional liberties to the very women who have not willingly sacrificed so much to serve our country. The amendment simply would re-establish parity and the assurance that uniform health care services will be delivered to service people wherever they are stationed. Medical services will be provided consistent with historical practice, medical convention and statutory requirements consistent with the laws of the state where they are stationed. The facts are clear: We cannot afford to terminate pregnancies. Furthermore, physicians opposed to performing said operations are not forced to do so.

Finally, the provision of health services should not be used to raise issues on the abortion issue. We must ensure that all female service personnel can avail themselves of legal medical services that are comparable to those in the United States, even if they are on a military base. Otherwise we will be creating a caste system, whereby only persons with the financial means to pay for abortion services receive the medical treatment they want and need would be able to do so. I ask my colleagues to support the Sanchez/Harman amendment.

Ms. WATERS. Madam Chairman, I rise in support of the amendment being offered by Representatives SANCHEZ and HARMAN. This amendment is a common sense approach to the question of abortion procedures for servicewomen at bases overseas.

The law is clear here in the United States: women have the right to choose to have an abortion and to obtain it without undue interference from the government. Roe v. Wade established that right nearly 30 years ago, and no case since then has struck it down. That right belongs to all women residing in the U.S. It should not be taken away when our women decide to serve this country and are stationed overseas.

Without this amendment, our servicewomen will not have access to safe abortion procedures in U.S. military medical facilities overseas. They are at risk of being subjected to unsafe methods in non-military medical facilities. Meanwhile, overseas servicemen and servicewomen seeking any other type of health care are able to access good, safe health care at military medical facilities.

This amendment does not ask the government or taxpayers to fund the abortions. And the amendment would not force anyone in a U.S. military medical facilities overseas to perform the procedure. Rather, this amendment merely gives our servicewomen the right to obtain abortions in a safe facility, provided that they pay the cost of the procedure and the doctor agrees to perform it.

This is the very right those same women would have here in the United States, if they had not willingly sacrificed so much to serve our country. The amendment simply would re-establish parity and the assurance that uniform health care services will be delivered to service people wherever they are stationed.

Ms. LOWEY, Madam Chairman I rise in strong support of the Sanchez amendment, which would allow military women and dependents stationed overseas to obtain abortion services with their own money. And I want to thank my colleague LORETTA SANCHEZ for her fine work on this important issue.

Over 100,000 women live on American military bases overseas. These women risk their lives and security to protect our great and powerful Nation. These women work to protect the freedoms of our country. And yet, these women—for the past 7 years—have been deprived the very Constitutional rights they fight to protect.

My colleagues, this restriction is un-American, undemocratic, and would be unconstitutional on U.S. soil. How can this body deny constitutional liberties to the very women who toil to preserve them? Mr. Speaker, as we work to promote and ensure democracy worldwide, we have an obligation to ensure that our own citizens are free while serving abroad. Our military bases should serve as a model of democracy at work, rather than an example of freedom suppressed.

This amendment is not about taxpayer dollars funding abortions because no federal funds would be used for these services. This amendment is not about health care professionals performing procedures they are opposed to because they are protected by a broad exemption. This amendment is about ensuring that all American women—for the past 7 years—have been denied the very Constitutional rights they fight to protect.

The CHAIRMAN. It is now in order to consider amendment No. 5 printed in House Report 107–218.

AMENDMENT NO. 5 OFFERED BY MR. STUMP

Mr. STUMP. Madam Chairman, I offer an amendment.

The CHAIRMAN. The Clerk will designate the amendment.

The text of the amendment is as follows:

Amendment No. 5 offered by Mr. STUMP. At the end of division A (page 358; after line 8), insert the following new title:

TITLE XV—ACTIVITIES TO COMBAT TERRORISM

Subtitle A—Increased Funding to Combat Terrorism

SEC. 1501. INCREASED FUNDING.

(a) IN GENERAL.—The amount provided in section 301(5) for Operation and Maintenance, Defense-wide Activities, is hereby increased by $400,000,000, to be available as follows:

(1) INTELLIGENCE PROGRAMS.—For increased situational awareness and upgrades to intelligence programs to enhance United States security posture, $100,000,000.

(2) ANTI-TELEVISION INITIATIVES.—For enhanced anti-terrorism and force protection initiatives to reduce vulnerabilities at United States military installations and facilities in the United States and worldwide, $150,000,000.

(3) COUNTER-TERRORISM INITIATIVES.—For offensive counter-terrorism initiatives, $100,000,000.

(4) CONSEQUENCE MANAGEMENT ACTIVITIES.—For consequence management activities, $50,000,000.

(b) TRANSFER AUTHORITY.—The amounts specified in subsection (a) are available for transfer to other current accounts of the Department of Defense, as determined by the Secretary of Defense.

(c) OTHER PROVISIONS.

(1) The amount provided in section 201(1) for Research, Development, Test, and Evaluation, Defense-wide is hereby reduced by $280,000,000, to be derived from amounts for the Ballistic Missile Defense Organization, of the Department of Energy.

(2) The amount provided in section 301(5) for Operations and Maintenance, Defense-wide Activities, is hereby reduced by $135,000,000, to be derived from amounts for consulting services.

SEC. 1502. TREATMENT OF TRANSFERRED AMOUNTS.

Funds transferred under authority of section 1501(a) shall be merged with, and shall be available for the same time period as, the appropriations to which transferred. The transfer authority under that section is in addition to the transfer authority provided by section 1001.

Subtitle B—Policy Matters Relating to Combating Terrorism

SEC. 1511. ASSISTANCE TO DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE ABILITY TO RESPOND TO TERRORIST ATTACKS.

(a) ASSESSMENT.—The Secretary of Defense shall conduct an assessment of the ability of the Department of Defense to provide support for the consequence management activities of other Federal, State, and local agencies, directly taking into account the terrorist attacks on the United States on September 11, 2001, and report to Congress a report providing recommendations for ways to enhance the ability of the Department of Defense to provide support described in subsection (a). The report shall address the recommendations made by the Vice President in his report to the President on the development of a coordinated national effort to improve national preparedness, including efforts to combat terrorism, as directed by the President in May 2001. The report shall be submitted not later than 60 days after the date on which the Vice President submits to the President the report under the preceding sentence.

(b) RECOMMENDATIONS.—The Secretary of Defense shall submit to Congress a report providing recommendations for ways to enhance the ability of the Department of Defense to provide support described in subsection (a). The report shall address the recommendations made by the Vice President in his report to the President on the development of a coordinated national effort to improve national preparedness, including efforts to combat terrorism, as directed by the President in May 2001. The report shall be submitted not later than 60 days after the date on which the Vice President submits to the President the report under the preceding sentence.

SEC. 1512. REPORT ON DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE ABILITY TO PROTECT THE UNITED STATES FROM AIRBORNE TERRORIST THREAT.

Not later than 120 days after the date of the enactment of this Act, the Secretary of Defense shall submit to Congress a report on the ability of the Department of Defense to protect the United States from airborne threats, including threats originating from within the borders of the United States. The report shall identify improvements that can be made in the capabilities of the American people against these threats and shall recommend actions, including legislative proposals, designed to address and overcome existing vulnerabilities.

SEC. 1513. ESTABLISHMENT OF COMBATING TERRORISM AS A NATIONAL SECURITY MISSION.

Section 108(b)(2) of the National Security Act of 1947 (50 U.S.C. 404a(b)(2)) is amended by inserting “, including acts of terrorism,” after “aggression.”

SEC. 1514. DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE COORDINATION WITH FEMA AND FBI.

The Secretary of Defense shall seek an agreement with the Director of the Federal Emergency Management Agency that clarifies the roles of Department of Defense Weapons of Mass Destruction Civil Support Teams in relation to both agencies with respect to coordination of the roles and missions of those teams in support of crisis management and consequence management efforts.

The CHAIRMAN. Pursuant to House Resolution 246, the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. STUMP) and a Member opposed each will control 20 minutes.

Mr. TIERNEY. Madam Chairman, I claim the time in opposition.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. TIERNEY) will be recognized for 20 minutes.

The Chair recognizes the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. STUMP).

Mr. STUMP. Madam Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Madam Chairman, I rise in support of this amendment. The September 11 terrorist attack on the United States was a wake-up call for our country. It demonstrated the vulnerability of our Nation to attack on a magnitude unseen since Pearl Harbor. Thousands of innocent Americans lost their lives as a result of terrorist attacks that we failed to detect and prevent. This situation must never be allowed to happen again.

Terrorists have declared war on the United States, and it is up to the Congress to ensure that the United States has the appropriate means to respond.

Mr. SPRATTS and I set out earlier this year to revise what we believed to be a disparate legislative approach to the amount dedicated to missile defense. Members from both sides recognize the gentleman from South Carolina (Mr. SPRATTS) as a true authority on the subject with a grasp of detail which is astonishing. We believe that other items in the budget deserve a higher priority, so we proposed to move a substantial increase to the Department of Defense for the purpose of combating terrorism. This amendment would authorize an additional $400 million as a down payment on additional improvements to ensure that our ability to detect, prevent and, if necessary, respond to terrorist attacks is strong and effective.

Madam Chairman, this amendment would increase funds to the Department of Defense in a number of important areas that will strengthen our ability to combat terrorism. It would provide an additional $100 million for improved intelligence. It includes an additional $150 million for antiterrorism initiatives. Force protection is an essential priority if we are to reduce existing vulnerabilities at military installations at home and abroad.

An additional $100 million would be dedicated to improvements in our offensive counterterrorism capabilities. In addition, the amendment would add $50 million to improve DOD’s ability to assist in the effort to deal with the consequences of a terrorist attack.

Clearly, more than this will be needed to respond to and to properly equip the Pentagon to deal with this new challenge. This amendment provides an initial down payment until the President can better assess the long-term needs.

Finally, this amendment would grant the Secretary of Defense the flexibility he needs to apply those additional funds to the most critical priorities. The amendment also contains a number of legislative initiatives designed to improve DOD’s overall ability to protect Americans against the threat of terrorism.

This amendment has been carefully crafted with the support of the committee’s ranking member, the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. SKELOTON), and is well balanced; and I thank the gentleman for his cooperation. I urge my colleagues to support the amendment.

Madam Chairman, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. SKELOTON).

Mr. SKELOTON. Madam Chairman, I support this amendment because I believe it correctly sets out today’s priorities for the Department of Defense. I have to say that this amendment represents an unusual, but successful, collaboration.

The gentleman from South Carolina (Mr. SPRATTS) and I are set out earlier this year to revise what we believed to be a disparate legislative approach to the amount dedicated to missile defense. Members from both sides recognize the gentleman from South Carolina (Mr. SPRATTS) as a true authority on the subject with a grasp of detail which is astonishing. We believe that other items in the budget deserve a higher priority, so we proposed to move a substantial amount from national missile defense into increased pay and improved family housing and counterproliferation efforts. And had matters turned out differently, this may have been a very spirited debate.

Then America was struck with an abominable act that demanded a united response. Both parties, from the Speaker and the minority leader on down, agree, whether our differences are on this subject, the Nation would not be served by a divisive debate. So we reached a compromise.

While I support missile defense, and the gentleman from South Carolina (Mr. SPRAT) supports missile defense, we have clear differences on how rapid and wide-ranging the research effort should be. But those differences pale next to our common goal of enhancing the security of our country from its most proximate threat.

Today, it is acts of terror against the innocent by the inhuman. This revealed importance of fighting terrorism has joined us in common cause.

The public is so often cynical about agreements in Congress, but we made an agreement; and this is one that aims toward the highest military priority, the fight against terrorism; and that is what this amendment does.

Mr. TIERNEY. Madam Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Madam Chairman, I, too, have high words of praise for the gentleman from South Carolina (Mr. SPRAT) and the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. SKLTON) and the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. STUMP), who worked hard on this issue.

However, I have to make mention that I think we are going in the right direction perhaps in reducing the amount of money allocated to national missile defense but we are not far enough. We would all love to throw an umbrella around this country and stop any type of missile projection coming in here; and if we could do that, there would not be a Member of Congress that would hesitate to vote for it.

The fact of the matter is that we do not have a system that works that way, and every reputable scientist indicates that we will not have a system like that in the foreseeable future, if at all.

The Pentagon's own operations office and research office and technical office has indicated that not only have the tests not been successful to indicate that a system would work, but that the regime for testing as we go forward is not adequate to ever give us the confidence that any system would be reliable. In essence, we would be buying a false sense of national security.

We have to as a Nation set our priorities on this issue. We have been setting our priorities supposedly in line with what dangers, what risks, what threats may actually exist. But our intelligence services do not tell us that the primary risk threat to us is an intercontinental ballistic missile sent from a so-called rogue nation.

It is, instead, something along the lines of what we experienced on September 11, and yet we do not align our national security budget in that direction. We are going to pay the price if we do not pay attention to that.

There are a number of reasons why we should not go beyond just testing this system; and yet this budget calls for not only testing a national missile defense system, but actually deploying it and violating the ABM treaty in the process, something which many in this country do not think is wise, certainly our allies do not think is wise, and gives great concern to Russia and China, nations upon whom we are now calling for their cooperation, yet telling them at the same time that we are going to unilaterally violate an agreement, a treaty, binding their countries and ours.

It does not make sense, it is not good fiscal policy, and frankly it is not good national security policy. If we want to really protect this country and give our citizens some feeling that we are secure in our lives and in this land, we should organize our priorities, understand which risks really are threats of immediacy, and allocate our resources in that direction. Spending $0 to $100 billion, a very new yet proven can work and have not yet shown that we can have any confidence in its reliability is not the right direction.

Placing resources into home front security, where we know now especially what our concerns are, knowing that we have some 40 agencies whose efforts have to be coordinated, knowing that we have to work diplomatically, through intelligence, through law enforcement, as well as the military, and we have to make sure we have cooperation of everyone throughout the world, we know that this is going to be expensive, and we know that we still have a domestic budget and items that we have to confront at the same time.

We should get our priorities straight. Madam Chairman. We should not put this excessive money into national missile defense. Even those of us who think that we are nowhere near ready to go forward can get others to agree that we should just, at most, do testing and not move us into this dangerous path of starting to build before we are ready, before we have something that can be shown to work. We have done that in other programs. That is the Osprey. at a cost of risk and disappointment and sometimes lives. We ought not to start down this particular path.

We ask people to consider that when they vote on this particular amendment. It does not go far enough in cutting funds for national missile defense. It does not put our priorities in the proper order. It does not give us true national security but, rather, gives us a prospect of national insecurity.

Madam Chairman, I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. STUMP, Madam Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentlewoman from New Mexico (Mrs. WILSON).

Mrs. WILSON. Madam Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding time. I rise to support his amendment and also support his intent.

He talks about this being a down payment on what we are going to need to do to fight a war on terrorism, and it is. It is really just a placeholder, a down payment on what will be required in conference with the Senate. All of us know in this Chamber that with respect to fighting the war on terrorism, this bill is woefully inadequate. It is a pre-September 11 bill.

I would like to highlight some of the things that we are going to have to do in conference with the Senate and with the assistance and the leadership of the President of the United States. Our job is to look forward at what are the capabilities we need to make sure are in place to defend this country when our men and women are called upon to defend this country. We need to establish in law the Office of Homeland Security. I am glad Governor Ridge will be taking up that responsibility. But we need to give him the support he will need to do the job.

We are going to have to completely rebuild airport security in this country. What we have now is inadequate, and everyone who travels on our airlines knows it. We are going to have to fund the operations, readiness and munitions accounts at much higher levels.

The assumptions in this bill on operational tempo do not take into account what we are currently asking our military to do. And, particularly importantly, the most gaping hole that has been shown to the world in the last 2 weeks is the gaping hole in domestic intelligence. Without even changing the laws on what the government can gather for information, we are not coordinating the information that we have now between the Border Patrol and Customs and local law enforcement and the FBI. Without doing that, we will never be able to provide the protection that we need that will come first and foremost from intelligence.

Finally, Madam Chairman, this bill is inadequate with respect to what it funds for the National Nuclear Security Agency. We have authorized the refurbishment of four classes of weapons. It should be a major national effort. We have said that we want to have science-based stockpiled stewardship so that we can have a safe, reliable nuclear weapons stockpile without nuclear testing, but we do not fund it. We are short about $400 million in those accounts. We are short also on cybersecurity in the National Nuclear Security Agency which the Cox report and the President’s foreign intelligence advisory board have said is a major priority for this country. That total shortfall of over $800 million in the National Nuclear Security Agency must be remedied.

We are going to have to make major changes in this bill in conference. I think all of my colleagues understand that.

Mr. TIERNEY. Madam Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. DELAHUNT).

Mr. DELAHUNT. I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Madam Chairman, on September 11, America was assaulted, attacked, not with missiles, but with knives. This amendment reflects that new reality. It reduces funds for programs that could violate the ABM treaty and shifts that money to counterterrorism and suggests that America honors its commitment.

Former Secretary of Defense Mel Laird, who played a key role in the treaty’s ratification under President Nixon, recently said, and I am quoting, “An amended ABM treaty remains as relevant to peace and security today as it was 30 years ago. Deep-sixing the treaty instead of negotiating amendments would only create a less stable relationship.”

Last week, there were reports that the U.S. was about to withdraw from the treaty, but since then, Secretary Powell has reaffirmed our commitment to a new understanding with Russia on missile defense. That is eminently wise. Russia will be a key ally in the days ahead as the administration attempts to create an international coalition to fight terrorism.

So let us support those efforts and commit resources to the real threat we face today.

Mr. STUMP. Madam Chairman, I yield 1 minute to the gentleman from Florida (Mr. FOLEY).

Mr. FOLEY. Madam Chairman, let me thank the chairman and obviously the Congress for looking very critically at this amendment. This is very, very important.

I never served in the military. My father did. But one thing I know for certain, the responsibility of the Federal Government is to provide for national security and domestic tranquility. These two points of view that are shared in this bill are essential to that operation.

I appreciate the work of the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. SKELTON) and certainly of the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. STUMP) and all the Members who have been active in military preparedness for this Nation. Yes, September 11 was a horrifying day. It woke this Member up to the fact that we are ill prepared to meet the challenge and this is vitally important.

People have scoffed at missile defense, they have said it is not necessary, and they make the representation that the attack was by knives. I agree. There were issues in that attack that knives were used. But if we allow this to pass, if we do not properly apply technology and we do not thoroughly fund this program, we will rue the day we were ill prepared to defend American soil.

I applaud the manager’s amendment, and I support the underlying legislation.

Mr. TIERNEY. Madam Chairman, I yield myself 45 seconds.

First, we will have national insecurity, not national security if we start down the path of deploying and actually building and producing a system that is not yet workable. I do not think anybody can make a logical argument that this system is ready to work. I understand everybody would love to have it, but it just does not work that way. Our approach to missile defense says something about the argument here. Are we going to give in to this budget so much money that it goes beyond testing and starts with building when it is not ready, therefore giving us national insecurity?

Are we going to give ourselves just the amount that we need for testing and continue to do that until testing shows that we have something that is workable, or are we going to waste resources by building something and then have to go back to the beginning at far more expense, at possibly the expense of lives, because we relied on something that does not work? For $1.6 billion, we can put money into airline security that we choose to put it in this way, and that is wrong.

Mr. STUMP. Madam Chairman, I yield 4 minutes to the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. WELDON).

Mr. WELDON of Pennsylvania. Madam Chairman, I rise in an attempt to try to demonstrate straight on some of the facts for those who have spent the time attending all the classified hearings and briefings and asking the questions of both the intelligence community and the members of the committee. I might say for the 6 years that I chaired the Research Committee, we opened up our briefings and hearings to every member. I do not know how many of those my colleague attended. I know I attended 160.

So we can get up on the floor publicly and talk about something, but it is something else to sit in on all the classified briefings and ask the tough questions of the people who are making these decisions. I am not challenging the gentleman’s motives because he has the right to do what he thinks is in the best interests of the country, but I also think we need to understand that many of our colleagues have sat through these briefings, and let us clarify some misinformation.

First of all, we do not have an adequate testing program. It was this Congress for the past 6 years, 7 years, with an overwhelmingly bipartisan vote that called for more money for testing. It was this Congress, in spite of the objections of those who opposed missile defense, who now called for more money for testing, who opposed us when we put more money in for testing. It was this Congress who led the effort to find a way to come together in a bipartisan effort to support a consensus around missile defense.

It is important that tomorrow will send 12 Members of Congress to Russia to seek very deliberate discussions to build a cooperative arrangement with the Russians that does not have them feel as though they are isolated.

I invite my colleague to go with us. We still have room on the plane. I can get him a visa tomorrow so that he can support our effort which his colleagues will be a part of to meet with the Russian Duma leaders, to meet with the Russian defense minister to show them that we do care about a cooperative arrangement as opposed to sitting on the floor of the House and in some cases, not particularly perhaps the gentleman, but in some cases demagoging this issue.

Let us get down to the facts and let us talk about tests. The last time I checked, we had about 31 tests of our missile defense programs. Sixteen times, I will admit, we did not have successes. But that was not because of missile defense. It was because the contractors could not get the rocket in the atmosphere.

Now, if the gentleman’s argument is that that constitutes a failure, then he better shut down Cape Kennedy, because the same technology that we use for stage separation, the same technology for launching a ballistic missile is the same identical technology for launching rockets. If you believe that is a reason to cancel missile defense, you better cancel our space program. It is the same technology.

Of the 15 times that we had tests where we did get out to the atmosphere, we hit the target 13. We missed it twice. Thirteen of 15 where the interceptor saw the target and hit it is not a bad track record. I ask for my colleague to dispute that with the facts. I will back mine up with ballistic missile defense organization numbers. So, in fact, our testing program has been successful.

The point is, Madam Chairman, the colleague is saying we need more money for weapons of mass destruction. Cut me a break. If you check the facts of our defense bill, in each of these last 7 years, we have put more money into weapons of mass destruction than the President asked for. We have put more money into cyberterrorism, more money into detection systems by hundreds of millions of dollars every year. And my colleague says, well, an airplane is not going to be impacted by a missile defense system.
Well, I hate to make the comparison here, but what do you think an airplane is? It is a large missile. It just so happens that these terrorists could use people and planes because we did not have the technology ready to put that missile on a cargo ship off of our coast. We have no defense against that kind of capability. I can tell you, when the Iranians, when the Iraqis, the Syrians and Libyan plan and scientists, there which they are very close to now, we are not going to have the capability to defeat it and then it will not be an airplane, it will be a missile without people in it.

So I say to my colleagues, support the compromise. I am not happy with this. But the gentleman and the ranking member do what they have to. Support it. It is good policy and it is a good vote in favor of, I think, a logical solution.

Mr. TIERNEY. Madam Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume only because I do not want to let time pass between the gentleman’s comments and reality.

The fact of the matter is, I heard the word “demagogue” used in there, and I certainly hope that it was not pointed in this direction after what I just heard. The true fact of the matter is we only have to look at scientists, are a number of people missing from this debate that would not be in favor of national missile defense. They are basically all scientists, our European allies and friends in other countries and a large part of our military.

The fact of the matter also is that we do not rely on the same technology for NASA that we rely on for the missiles because if NASA fails, we understand that we need to go forward in there, we can have other attempts at this. If we are relying on a missile defense system and it fails, we are all dead. The fact of the matter is we need to test to make sure it works.

As to further facts on that, I have been told all the things. You would think after 106, that that would settle in and the information would come out clearer. It does not take 106 to understand what is going on here and what is happening with the allocation of resources. This system has never fully tested the exact system that will be used ultimately. It has never shown that that would work. In fact, when there have been so-called successes here, it has usually been because there has been a beacon, because there has been some other sort of radar systems working other than the ones that will eventually come in. We have spent over $60 billion in the last several years on trying to design a national missile defense system that has not worked.

If we are going to continue to spend money, it ought to be testing to get to a system that we can then have some level of confidence in its reliability, not start building something that the Pentagon’s own Office of Testing and Evaluation tells us has not been tested properly, has not been tested to show it is successful, and whose testing regime does not show that.

It is not a lack of money. Colonel Welch on the panel says clearly, you can keep throwing money at this. Money is not the issue. The issue is doing the tests, doing them properly, and getting that point where you have some success on that.

Madam Chairman, I yield 3½ minutes to the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. KUCINICH).

Mr. KUCINICH. Madam Chairman, I thank the gentleman for yielding me time and for the opportunity to work with him on this. I also want to thank the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. WELDON), because in the time I have been in Congress, there are not many people as patriotic and concerned about America as the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. WELDON). I have had the chance to go to Russia with him and travel with him on many opportunities.

We may not agree on this issue, but I do not doubt for a second the gentleman’s commitment to this country. And I would ask that our commitment to our country not be doubted when we say that it is really time to look at missile defense with great skepticism. When we look at the events of the last 2 weeks, we have seen our President put together a coalition of countries from around the world, a world coalition that is going to challenge terrorism.

I think that now, more than ever, we have an opportunity to build from this world cooperation; to get rid of nuclear weapons once and for all, which was the promise of the non-proliferation treaty, it was the promise of the ABM treaty, and the United States has a new opportunity.

I think the gentleman from Massachusetts is right when he raises questions that go to the heart of national missile defense, because the truth of the matter is if we pursue national missile defense, we will inevitably deconstruct the ABM treaty, which is a basis for bringing nations together. And that ought to be our effort now as we are in the 21st century, at a time when democratic institutions are under attack.

I rise in support of the amendment, because I think the amendment reflects the new priorities of our Nation in the wake of the terrorist attacks. And I appreciate the ranking member’s work and the chairman of the committee for their work in crafting the amendment.

The events of September 11, I would submit, have demonstrated that missile defense is ineffective in the threats facing the Nation today. Who can argue that a missile shield would have protected against the events of 2 weeks ago? We know that that attack on our country was so devastating, precisely because it was perpetrated anonymously and amorphously, disarming and instilling fear in our Nation.

Assessors, they bring this type of battle, what Pentagon experts have long known as fourth generational warfare, shun the conventional. Rather than intercontinental ballistic missiles, they employ car bombs; rather than intercontinental ballistic missiles, they employ car bombs; rather than intercontinental ballistic missiles, they employ car bombs; rather than intercontinental ballistic missiles, they employ car bombs; rather than intercontinental ballistic missiles, they employ car bombs; rather than intercontinental ballistic missiles, they employ car bombs.

That is why this transfer of funds, from the development of an unproven, ineffective weapons system, to programs that will immediately help protect Americans citizens from attack, is so crucial.

Madam Chairman, let me say there is no illusion here. This amendment is not nearly enough. The defense bill authorizes the expenditure of $343 billion. We must ask ourselves, will the expenditure of this money protect our Nation from the type of attack we faced 2 weeks ago?

Madam Chairman, I believe we need a new set of principles to guide our national defense. We need a lighter, more mobile force, capable of adapting to changing circumstances, including the emergence of terrorists and other fourth generational threats. We need to recognize that people, not machines, are our most effective asset. It is not excusable that our armed service members go wanting for housing and proper equipment, while we sink money into an unworkable weapons system.

We need to demand financial accountability from the Pentagon, which has not once passed the test of an independent audit. Similarly, we need a new comprehensive threat and risk assessment; and we need to combine these efforts to a comprehensive program to prevent attacks like we had 2 weeks ago.

Mr. STUMP. Madam Chairman, we have only one speaker remaining. I reserve the balance of my time.

Mr. TIERNEY. Madam Chairman, I yield 3 minutes to the gentleman from South Carolina (Mr. SPRATT).

Mr. SPRATT. Madam Chairman, the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. SKEELTON) and I began with an amendment of $920 million to be taken out of ballistic missile defense and transferred into a pay raise, family housing, homeland defense, and counterproliferation, all urgent needs, none of which is fully met.

It became apparent to us, particularly after September 11, that we were not going to be able to sell an amendment cutting this amount. So we, in the spirit of bipartisanship, made a deal. We agreed to lower the amount of the amendment to $400 million, of which $135 million had already been cut or reduced by the gentleman from California (Mr. HUNTER), the chairman of the subcommittee with jurisdiction over this matter. That left $265 million to be taken from basically two places in the BMD budget.
First of all we took $120 million out of space-based lasers. Why? To put it in common parlance, we are simply saying, walk before you run. We have got an airborne laser system which has yet to prove itself. We should prove that technology on an airborne platform before we try to put it in outer space. This is a futuristic system, way over the horizon. Ballistic missile defense does not lose anything at all by that cut.

Secondly, we took $145 million out of mid-course systems and particularly out of sea-based mid-course systems. Why? The Navy has two systems now which are ship based. One is an around-the-world system called “lower tier,” the other is a theater-wide system called “upper tier.” The area-wide system has just been slipped 20 months. The upper tier system has yet to make the first intercept. We are simply saying again, walk before you run, and, for goodness sake, do not set up a proliferation of programs that cannot be sustained in follow-on budgets. So we would trim there.

We made the cuts discreetly. We did not make hand-fisted, meat-ax cuts; we made discrete cuts that will allow this program to go forward more, I think more efficiently and more effectively. Where did we put the money? Well, September 11 caught us nodding, and it also caught us focused on a threat, almost fixated on this threat, and ignoring other threats. So taking a page, a cue from the lesson of September 11, we took a $400 million and put $100 million into intelligence programs. $120 million into antiterrorism initiatives. $100 million into counterterrorism initiatives, and $90 million into consequence-management activities, the kind of things that will help to occur in the wake of the next tragedy, God forbid that there be one.

So we have made the cuts wisely and discreetly. We have made the allocation of the savings wisely as well. This is a good compromise. It is a good amendment. I urge support for it.

Madam Chairman, on September 6, 2001, Ranking Member IKE SKELTON and I filed an amendment with the Rules Committee affecting the Ballistic Missile Defense Organization (BMDO) Title of H.R. 2586, the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2002.

The amendment would have taken less than one-third, $918 million, out of the $3 billion increase proposed for BMDO and transferred the money to the theater area of urgent national security interest: $450 million for an additional 1 percent pay raise for military personnel; $250 million to address the most pressing family housing improvement needs; and $219 million for homeland defense and counter-proliferation efforts. Even with our amendment, spending on ballistic missile defense (BMDO) programs would have increased next year by $2 billion to $7.3 billion, or 38 percent.

The largest cut in our amendment as originally filed would have come from Fort Greely, Alaska, and here’s why. Greely is said to be the part of the Pacific test bed, but in truth, no missiles can be launched and tested from the silos at Fort Greely, as the booster stages would separate and drop over populated areas.

The booster on the missiles to be based at Fort Greely is the so-called booster, it’s an improvised Minuteman booster. The kinetic kill vehicle that sits atop the booster is also a test article, far from being proven. Its configuration will surely change as a result of testing before the final production design is selected. No intercepts have been made against an X-band radar for tracking incoming re-entry vehicles and guiding the interceptors as they close on their targets; a radar with this kind of range and resolution is essential to a mid-course intercept system.

Finally, the system of Low-Earth Orbit, Space-Based Infrared Sensors known as “SBIRS-Low” is still years away from being deployed; any ground-based intercept system without X-band radar and SBIRS-Low is going to be an extremely limited system.

BMDO argues that the 5 interceptors at Ft. Greely may give us an “early capability” against an emerging threat. But with test article components and a subpar radar, this system will have little, if any, utility against a threat launched against the West Coast of the United States, and BMDO freely admits it will have no capability whatsoever against a missile launched at the East Coast.

I felt then that given the unmet needs in this budget, it was not wise to sink so much money into these silos, for such little gain. Frankly, I continue to believe that. However, in the wake of the horrible events of September 11th, Members on both sides of the aisle have come together to seek a compromise on this issue.

We have agreed not to cut funding for Ft. Greely, but in truth, many on this side of the aisle continue to have concerns about that proposal. In the interest of bipartisanship, we are putting aside this issue today, but I expect that we will revisit this issue in the next budget cycle. As a result, the amount of the cut contained in the compromise amendment is far below the level contained in the Skelton-Spratt amendment. The reductions of our original amendment have been largely preserved. I want to thank Chairman STUMP for his willingness to work on this with us.

The compromise makes a total cut below the President’s request for BMDO of $400 million. $120 million of this total is taken from Space-Based Programs. This is the same amount as was cut by the Skelton-Spratt amendment, and reflects the good government logic that this immature technology should be funded only at a concept development level. Another $145 million is taken from the Mid-Course Intercept program. I argued for this cut to come out of Sea-Based Mid Course intercept, which is where the Skelton-Spratt amendment would have taken it, but the agreement leaves the cut less specific. I believe the cut should be made out of the Sea-Based Mid Course. We hope we can make the cut more specific at a future time.

A sea-based mid-course defense would entail an entirely new NMD platform, and before embarking on such an effort, BMDO should first demonstrate the maturity of the Navy’s theater defense programs, which are technically less demanding. At present, however, the Navy Area Wide program has seen its schedule slip by 20 months, and the Navy Theater Wide program has yet to have a successful intercept. Until these simpler technology programs are mature, it makes no sense to pour hundreds of millions into an even more challenging, and even less mature system like sea-based NMD.

The balance of the $400 million is a cut of $135 million, based on the grounds that the funding could not be executed in 2002. I have been saying for many years now that Congress needs to stop treating missile defense like a political totem. And while this compromise is disappointing to many on both sides, perhaps it represents a small step in that direction. I urge my colleagues to support the Stump-Skelton amendment.

Mr. TIERNEY. Madam Chairman, I yield 2 minutes to the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. FRANK).

Mr. FRANK. Madam Chairman, I rise reluctantly in support of this amendment not because I am in this particular context I have any hesitations about it, but because I would rather that we have been having the fuller debate on this issue that a few weeks ago it looked like we could have. Obviously, we regret, all of us terribly, the circumstances that have compressed this.

I believe that the continued expenditure on missile defense is greatly mistaken. I understand that to have a debate under these circumstances would not be in our interests on the broader aspects of this, because, frankly, given the impulse, the understandable and laudable impulse to show our unity and support, I think the project would get more votes than it might get in a calmer atmosphere, I look forward to our being able to debate this at a future time, because I think the leadership on our side, on the committee and on the Committee on Appropriations subcommittee, has done an excellent job of vetting this project. So I am going to vote for this amendment because it is the most reasonable thing to do in this context.

But I want to repeat again what I think is a very important point to the President: there is an accommodation going forward here. There is less of a debate on this issue and less of an attempt to reduce it than would otherwise have happened in the interests of showing national unity.

I hope we will see a reciprocal response, in particular at a time when we are trying to build an international cooperative coalition with Russia, with China, and with other nations. It would ill-befit this Nation to take unilateral action to undermine the ABM treaty. It would be an error to use the fact of our weakness in the House and the other body has said okay, we understand that this is not the appropriate time to have the full debate. I regret that, but I understand the decision.

But I hope we will not see the executive branch take advantage of that to go forward with steps that would lead to a fracturing of our efforts to build an international coalition and that would inappropriately unilaterally undermine the ABM treaty and the international cooperative framework.

Mr. TIERNEY. Madam Chairman, I yield myself such time as I may consume.

Madam Chairman, listening as this debate goes on to both the gentleman from South Carolina (Mr. SPRATT), who eloquently set forth his position, and the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. FRANK), who also did the same, I think they make convincing arguments about why, as much as many of us feel this does not go nearly as far as it should go, it may in this instance be all that we can get, as sad as that is to say.

It is important that we spend the money on intelligence and that we spend it on antiterrorism and counterterrorism and consequence management. It is just amazing sometimes to some of us that we do not think to do that without extracting a price of overspending on a system that has not been tested, and starting to deploy a system that, I think, in many ways will work to our disadvantage; that we will have $2.9 billion, or 55 percent of an increase over current spending on this. That we would have initial deployment that would lead to the breaching of the ABM treaty is somewhat beyond comprehension.

As I mentioned earlier, for $1.6 to $2 billion, we could secure Americans in their air travel. Yet we will put $2.9 billion instead on getting way ahead of ourselves, starting to build something before it is adequately tested, pursuant to the Pentagon’s own operations and testing and evaluation firm.

We are risking the stability internationally that this might present in unilaterally breaching that treaty. We are certainly well beyond the Congress’ intention, who said we should move forward only if it ever proved feasible. We are certainly failing to put our priorities in proper order. Where it is clear we are spending some $60 billion to $100 billion on an item that has not been proven to work and our own intelligence services say falls well behind the needs for security against terrorism, it just does not seem to make sense.

But I do want to commend the gentleman from South Carolina (Mr. SPRATT) and the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. SKELTON) for the work they have done on this. I was with them at the $920 million mark. I was a little beyond that, as were many, because that is what we really ought to be doing, being sensible.

But I join in congratulating them for getting at least something from folks that do not seem to want to take a really objective look at this and see where we are going.

I say that the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. FRANK) is probably right.

Let us see what we get for a reciprocal response. Let us hope that this administration can evaluate the entire situation and understand that this would not be a quality violation of this treaty. This would be the time to show good faith, and we can be responsible partners in cooperating with people as we ask for their cooperation internationally.

Mr. TIERNEY. Madam Chairman, I yield back the balance of my time.

Mr. STUMP. Madam Chairman, (Mr. HUNTER).

Mr. HUNTER. Madam Chairman, I want to thank the chairman and the ranking member for putting together this compromise that allows us to stand united during this defense bill and not send out the wrong signal to the world, and not to continue to move forward on missile defense.

It has been suggested that the question of the day is will we ever be attacked by ballistic missiles? Is it possible, is it imaginable that someday Americans will be killed by ballistic missiles?

Well, that question has been answered. It was answered 10 years ago when 28 Americans were killed, the first American civilians by ballistic missiles during Desert Storm.

They were killed by the slow ballistic missile known as the Scud, the Model-T of ballistic missiles, the ones that are proliferated around the world.

So the facts are, we have been struck by ballistic missiles, they have killed Americans, they are a real threat, and Democrats and Republicans agree that we have to be able to stop these thousands of ballistic missiles that are proliferating around the world, some of them a function of military sales where countries like North Korea and China and Russia sell these missiles to countries and to groups that would aim them at us; and the other one as a result of information and technology now that is going to rogue groups, going to nations that are not our friends around the world which, indeed, will aim these systems at the United States.

Now, let me just address this compromise and what it does. First, it has been suggested over and over again by the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. TIERNEY) that we do not want to use these things; we do not want to deploy a ballistic missile defense system until we know it works. That is the point. Most of the testing is for the so-called national missile defense system, that is going to stop the fast ballistic missiles that can go intercontinental. It is for testing.

Now, we just had a test about a month ago, a successful test in which we shot our standard shot; and when we shot our standard shot, we launched a target missile from Vandenberg Air Base. It went west across the Pacific, it was hit, it went about 4,800 miles, it cleared Hawaii; and after it cleared Hawaii, we fired up an interceptor missile out of Kwajalein Island that hit it about 145 miles above the Earth face and killed it. Now, we fired that shot several times; and if we ask the ballistic missile defense program, can we make that shot, we can make that shot. With that angle, with that speed, with those physics, we can make that shot.

But the critics of the system have said, wait a minute. There are other things we have to be able to do. How about the tougher angles? How about the faster closing speeds? How about the different closing speeds? How about all of those things that are variables?

Well, the answer is to this cry for tough testing, we have to expand the test range to have tough testing, and that means we cannot have the same shot time after time where we shoot over Hawaii and we come up with an intercept from Kwajalein Island. We have to now have the Alaskan dimension; not an Alaskan cruise, but to make the Alaskan dimension, to make the closing angles, the shooting angles. Just like we are shooting on a skeet range, instead of shooting at the clay bird going straightaway every time, we are now going to have to shoot one that is going at a fast angle.

It is going to give us a variety of speeds that we have to shoot at. It is going to give faster interceptor speeds. It is going to make all the difficult challenges that our critics are telling us and that the gentleman from Massachusetts (Mr. TIERNEY) alluded to when he talked about these commissions that have said we have to make tougher testing. It is going to give us tougher testing.

So I would say to my colleagues, whether one is for missile defense or against missile defense, we certainly want to know what the outcome of these tough tests are going to be.

Well, I have news for my colleague. There is not going to be any outcome for us to judge if we do not build the range. Most of the money that goes into this system goes to build the range.

Now, let me just say with respect to the Soviet Union, because the ABM Treaty has been mentioned, and I think everybody has reflected on the effect of this strike on America with respect to our position in the world, our relationship with the Soviet Union. We told the Soviet Union, we did make the agreement, the ABM agreement, not to defend ourselves. That is an agreement not to defend ourselves. But we have always said to them, we are worried about these other people. We are worried about all of these nations that are depicted here on this map of the world which are now building and developing ballistic missiles and none of these countries, none of these groups signed any treaty not to defend themselves. They did not sign the ABM Treaty.
Treaty, and we are concerned about that. I think that the Russians now are looking at this more realistically, and I think the President has more credibility in this event when he said we are truly worried about the unimaginable happening.

For those people who said up until a few weeks ago a strike on the United States is unimaginable, a missile strike on the United States is unimaginable, it now becomes apparent to us that unimaginable things happen.

So what we need is not just defense against people that take over airlines, it is not just defense at our borders against cargo containers coming in, it is not just defense against submarines and ships and guerrilla warfare and terrorism; it is broad capability against a number of threats. We live today, I say to my colleagues, in an age of missiles; and we are going to have to learn to defend against missiles if we are going to maintain the national security.

Our two leaders have put together a compromise that I do not fully agree with; it does make a $265 million cut from this missile defense budget. However, they did it in a spirit of compromise to get this bill moving, to move it into the conference, and to be able to work our will from that point. Because of that, and because of the need to let the world know that we stand together, that we are not fractured, I support this compromise. I urge everyone to vote for it.

Ms. McKinney. Madam Chairman, I rise in support of the Stump/Skelton amendment to combat terrorism. If there is one thing that we have learned from the tragedy of September 11, it is that the greatest threat to our Nation is not from high-tech weapons such as ballistic missiles being launched at our Nation. Therefore, the defense that is of the greatest priority to our Nation is not an $8.3 billion missile defense system that cannot be guaranteed to work. Instead, we need to protect ourselves from the modern threat of terrorism, protecting our airports and hubs of activity, seeking out those who are responsible for previous attacks, to be aware of and prepared for plans of future attacks, and to act appropriately with the intelligence we gather. This amendment takes away less than 9 percent of the increase for missile defense research and development, and only 3 percent of the entire missile defense budget. I believe that we should reprogram much more towards protecting our constituents from the real threats that our Nation is facing, and spend much less on some Star Wars program. This amendment supports that concept of refocusing our priorities on the true threats to our Nation, and I urge my colleagues to support it.

Mr. Underwood. Madam Chairman, I rise in strong support of this amendment and I thank the Chairman and the Ranking Member for bringing it to the floor in a bi-partisan fashion. This amendment deserves our attention and support if we are to begin addressing our pressing national needs in combating the horrific practice of terrorism. The tragic events of September 11th prompt use to do more in this effort and this amendment gives us the opportunity to enact sound policy in this regard. By providing $400 million in new funding for intelligence, anti-terrorism and counter-terrorism efforts in the Department of Defense with the resources needed to begin defending our nation against future terrorist aggression.

Combating terrorism is and should be a national security priority and this amendment establishes it as such. This amendment is a significant step towards overcoming existing vulnerabilities, as it requires DoD to report on their ability to defend the nation against airborne threats. Furthermore, as assessment of DoD’s ability to respond to terrorist attacks and provide support for Federal, State, and local consequence management activities as required by this amendment will ensure that our government is better prepared to handle any future terrorist crisis.

This amendment addresses our national security needs with regards to terrorism without compromising our need to protect and defend the nation against ballistic missile attacks. As the individual in this body representing Guam, well within striking range of nations like North Korea, I am keenly aware of our Nation’s vulnerability to the threat of a ballistic missile attack. But I am also acutely aware of our need to defend our people against terrorism.

If we are to protect our nation, safeguard our democracy, and rid the world of terror, we must begin to vigorously combat terrorism. Passage of this amendment is a significant step towards this end and it is necessary if we are to reduce vulnerabilities at our military installations and facilities, not only within the continental United States, but also in Guam, and throughout the world.

Mr. Rodriguez. Madam Chairman, I rise in support of the Stump/Skelton amendment to take $400 million from the national missile defense program to fund intelligence, anti-terrorism, force protection, and counter-terrorism efforts. The funding shift in the amendment is a good start but more needs to be done.

We must question spending an additional $2.5 billion next year and possibly $100 billion in the future to establish a national missile defense system when deadly terrorist attacks can occur with the purchase of an airline ticket.

Don’t get me wrong. I strongly support a theatre missile defense system to protect our troops and allies on the battlefield. But not a national missile defense system that threatens our world wide treaties. But, let’s take this one step at a time in light of our many priorities. The enormous sum of $100 billion could be better spent on intelligence, diplomacy, rebuilding the military, and protecting America’s ports of entry.

My Congressional district includes several border crossings between the U.S. and Mexico. The U.S. Customs agents at the border crossings are undermanned and underfunded even though they are on the frontline of protecting our Nation.

For three years Customs has been attempting to upgrade its computer systems to enhance the inspection of goods crossing U.S. borders. Funding shortfalls have prevented the implementation of this critical system. Customs is only one example of where money could be better spent to protect Americans from terrorist attacks.

I urge my colleagues to support the amendment.

Mr. Holt. Madam Chairman, I rise in strong support of the Stump/Skelton amendment. Our Nation is working to deal with the tremendous needs of our armed forces in the wake of the September 11 terror attacks, this is one amendment that is particularly important.

The Stump/Skelton bipartisan amendment cuts $400 million from the President’s request for National Missile Defense programs, and transfers these funds to intelligence and counter-terrorism initiatives. The Stump/Skelton amendment represents a consensus, compromise position that all of us should support.

As a Nation, there are many lessons to be learned from the recent attacks on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon. One of the things that is underscored by the events of September 11 is how careful we must be about where we put our defense dollars and the priorities that we as a nation fund in our defense budget.

The pursuit of a National Missile Defense is an expensive, unproven and destabilizing policy that should be rejected. There are so many more important needs to fund in our defense budget. While this amendment does not eliminate all of the funds the President has requested for a National Missile Defense system, it does make important reductions in that account and important increases in areas where we clearly need to make investments, particularly in our intelligence and counter-intelligence efforts.

The National Missile Defense as proposed would not be effective. It would be costly to deploy and easily circumvented. It could be confused with decoys. It could be bypassed with suitcase bombs and pickup trucks and sea-launched missiles or need I say it, wayward airlines. It would be billions of dollars down the drain. But it is not just a diversion of precious resources that we are told are not available for health care, for smaller class sizes, for modern school facilities, for securing open space or for taking care of America’s veterans.

It is worse than a waste. Simple strategic analysis will tell us that provocative yet permeable defenses are destabilizing and lead to reduced security.

The U.S. has not been able to develop a workable missile defense system after 40 years of trying and spending $108 billion. Clearly this money is better spent in supporting our intelligence and counter-intelligence efforts. I urge all of my colleagues to support the amendment.

Mr. Chairman. The question is on the amendment offered by the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. Stump).

The amendment was agreed to.

Sequential votes postponed in Committee of the Whole.

The Chairman. Pursuant to clause 6 of rule XVIII, proceedings will now resume on those amendments on which further proceedings were postponed in the following order: amendment No 3 by Mr. Trafficant of Ohio and amendment No 4 by Ms. Sanchez of California.

The Chair will reduce to 5 minutes the time for the second electronic vote.
Mr. TIERNEY. Madam Chairman, I make a point of order.

The CHAIRMAN. The gentleman will state his point of order.

Mr. TIERNEY. Madam Chairman, just looking around and counting, I am not sure that I reached the same conclusion that the Chairman did, and I am wondering if she might want to count again.

The CHAIRMAN. A recorded vote has been ordered.

The vote was taken by electronic device, and there were—ayes 242, noes 173, not voting 15, as follows:

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE
September 25, 2001

Mr. STUMP. Madam Chairman, as the House is about to move to final passage on this defense authorization bill, I think it is appropriate that we take a moment to note that this will be the first defense bill in over 30 years that we have passed that Floyd Spence did not have a part in. Floyd had a hand in shaping and guiding all the defense bills for the last 3 decades, and particularly in the last 6 years where he served as chairman of the House Committee on Armed Services.

Madam Chairman, there was not a stronger defender of our military, no truer friend of the men and women in uniform, and no tougher critic on those who allowed our defenses to deteriorate over the years. Floyd Spence had vision, he had sense of purpose, and he had a clear commitment to ensuring that the Congress fulfill its constitutional obligation to provide for the common defense.

We all miss Floyd, but I did not want this moment to go without the record reflecting his leadership, his commitment, and his wise counsel on national security matters, which still burn bright in the many of us that were privileged to work with this quiet, unassuming and passionate American patriot.

Mr. SKELTON. Madam Chairman, will the gentleman yield?

Mr. STUMP. No.

So the amendment was rejected.

The result of the vote was announced as above recorded.

Mr. STUMP. Madam Chairman, as a long-time critic of the manner in which we finance our nation’s military, I had intended to oppose the legislation being considered today.

This year’s defense budget contains a number of deficiencies, the most glaring of which is this: it is not designed to equip our military for the task at hand. Written prior to the attack of September the 11th, this legislation continues the mistakes of the past decade. It is designed to fight the cold war, but that war ended years ago, and as we saw all too brutally in New York and Washington, the world is a far more dangerous place.

Furthermore, this bill leaves our military, on the eve of an epic undertaking, with a number of acute needs that have yet to be adequately addressed—needs we’ve known about for many years.

As the chairman of the Government Reform Subcommittee on National Security, which has oversight jurisdiction over the entire Department of Defense, I have seen first hand the needs of our military. We need to do a better job attracting new enlistees and maintaining the necessary level of reenlistment.

Seven major military construction projects for Guam are included in this bill. Phase II of the Guam Army Guard Readiness Center will receive $7 million and $4 million is included for the U.S. Navy's Guardsmen at Andersen Air Force Base. Other projects include $4.5 million for a Forward Operation Location War Reserve Material Facility at Andersen Air Force Base and $24 million for the upgrading of the Navy's Bachelor Enlisted Quarters and Public Works Waterfront Utilities. The bill also includes $20 million for the continued replacement of Andersen's hydrant fuel system. These projects are significant towards modernizing Guam's military infrastructure and equipping our troops stationed in the Western Pacific with the weapons and facilities that they need to meet our increased national security demands.

In addition to military construction projects, the bill also provides for the conveyance of a water supply system at Andersen Air Force Base and the construction of a war memorial on Guam to honor the victims of the Yigo Massacre, which occurred during World War II. Guam was the only U.S. State or Territory with a civilian population to suffer occupation during World War II. Immediately following the liberation of Guam, decapitated bodies of 45 men were discovered in the village of Yigo. Today, it is presumed that these men were forcibly conscripted by the Japanese forces to be of service to them during their retreat. The story of these men has largely been forgotten since the time they were forcibly separated from their homes and families. The memorial included in this bill will commemorate the sacrifices made by these men and resurrect and preserve their story in history.

I am also pleased that the House Armed Services Committee has addressed the issue of the Department of Defense's responsibility and duty to clean up former military sites. Guam was home to significant and tremendous military activity during World War II. Unexploded ordnance and other weaponry have been found on Guam in recent years as a result of this activity. The report accompanying this bill stresses the need for the Department of Defense to be more aggressive in their management and clearance of unexploded ordnance and other dangerous ordnance. This language is essential in ensuring that the proper attention is devoted towards the cleanup of our island.

In conclusion, this bill goes a long way towards improving our nation's military readiness and supports Guam's unique military role in contributing to our national security. The people of Guam welcome the forthcoming military construction activity and look forward to doing their part in providing for the national defense.

Mr. DEFazio. Madam Chairman, I have worked for more than a decade to reorient defense funding towards our nation's true strategic priorities. I have long supported investments that will better reflect the needs and wants of average Americans. I have also been a vocal advocate for taking a serious look at the spending priorities within the Department of Defense (DOD). I have regularly asked for amendments to force the Pentagon to reevaluate and justify how it spends taxpayer money.

We demand accountability from all other federal agencies. We should demand no less of the DOD. After all, the $343 billion authorization in this legislation represents one of every two dollars in discretionary spending that can be appropriated by Congress.

There are clearly significant flaws with H.R. 2586. While the basic needs of many of our young men and women in uniform have not been met, this legislation provides tens of billions of dollars to fund weapons systems that are of dubious necessity, over-budget, behind schedule, and fail to meet performance requirements.

For example, at G.I. Joe's in Eugene, Oregon, I met a dad who was buying a water jug for his son in the Marines. He told me his son was issued an expensive radio without any waterproof protection. All the Pentagon supplied was a plastic garbage bag.

The legislation provides around $8 billion for an ill-defined, unworkable national missile defense system. This represents more than a 50 percent increase over current spending levels. American taxpayers have already generously provided more than $60 billion over the last two decades to develop this system with little to show for it.

Even if the system could be made to work correctly, it does not address the most significant threat our nation faces. As I've said in debates over NMD in past years, given our awesome retaliatory power, one of the least likely threats confronting the U.S. is an intercontinental missile with a return address. In those previous debates, I went on to raise concerns about the money NMD was diverting from our preparation for more likely attacks by terrorists with primitive delivery systems like rental trucks, freighters, or even suitcases.

The legislation continues to fund the development of three new fighter jets when one should do, and continues to fund an oversized nuclear stockpile.

I am concerned that the spending priorities reflected in this bill are oriented to fighting the last war, not meeting the threats our nation faces today.

That said, I am going to support this legislation. I do not make this decision lightly. The world changed on September 11, 2001. The terrorist strikes on U.S. soil have created a sense of urgency to guarantee our troops are adequately supplied and supported in order to prepare and defend our nation.

Some of the funds in this legislation and the emergency package approved by Congress last week will go to make sure our men and women in uniform have everything they need to deal with the current crisis. However, I fully intend to revisit the spending priorities of the Pentagon next year and look forward to reviewing Secretary Rumsfeld's plans for retooling our nation's military to more adequately meet the threats of today.

But, that critical debate can wait for another day. In this time of crisis, I will vote in favor of this legislation in order to stand firmly behind our young men and women in uniform who may soon be put in harm's way.

Ms. BALDWIN. Madam Chairman, when President Dwight D. Eisenhower gave his farewell address in 1961, he spoke about the "military-industrial complex." Over the councils of government, we must guard against the acquisition of unwarranted influence, whether sought or unsought, by the military-industrial complex. The potential for the disastrous rise of misplaced power exists and will persist."

It is forty years later, and yet his words still ring true. The corporations and organizations... that profit so much from military build-ups are unaccountable to the American people. That was true in 1961, it was true on September 10th, 2001, and it remains true today. In America we cannot continue to accept threats and dangers that our military priorities ought to be set by the people.

For that reason, I have been a harsh critic of our nation’s military budget. I have regarded its priorities as misplaced. I have vehemently opposed deploying National Missiles, the Defense.

I have disagreed with the decision to build the F–22 Raptor.

I have questioned the need for new attack submarines, battle ships and guided missile destroyers.

I lament our failure to adequately compensate the men and women who serve in the Armed Forces and our failure to keep our promises to our nation’s veterans.

I decry the failure to fully fund our non-proliferation efforts and nuclear disarmament programs.

I have opposed every defense authorization and defense appropriation bill put before me since I came to Congress.

And I would expect to do so again in the future, if I am not able to have greater influence on their content, their magnitude and their priorities.

But today is different. I have struggled with this vote as I have struggled with no other. Here is where that struggle has brought me. I regard my two central duties at this unprecedented time to be the protection of American lives and the protection of the American way of life—our freedoms of speech, our expectation of privacy, our right to due process.

I do not know what our President is being told by our intelligence agencies or by the criminal investigators. I do not know what tools our President will need to protect our families from further attacks and threats. I could not accept the responsibility for denying those charged with protecting our immediate safety and security with the tools they need. The Administration has told us that these are the tools they need. Not knowing what they know, I take responsibility.

No one should interpret this vote as any indication that I will not continue to question and criticize policy that I believe is wrong. I no one should take this vote as an indication that we should not push to reconfigure, rethink and reprioritize our national defense program.

In this unprecedented time, we give our President what he has requested in order to protect American life. At the same time, I do not forget General Eisenhower’s caution that we must guard against the acquisition of unwarranted influence by the military-industrial complex.

Mr. BLUMENAUER. Madam Chairman, in these times of extreme pressure on our national security team, we want to be assured that America is properly prepared. This defense authorization bill has much that I find commendable. It provides funding for providing the essential defense requirements that will assure that the United States continues to have the most powerful armed forces anywhere in the world, far and away superior to the next seven countries combined. There are many improvements that are made to quality of life for our fighting men and women including increased resources for their pay and for their housing which are critical and which I strongly support. It also recognizes work that I’ve been championing to have the military clean up after itself and deal with unexplained ordnance and other military pollution. Having an inventory of these contaminated sites is an important step forward and I appreciate the work that Committee leadership and staff have done in that regard.

I reluctantly vote in opposition to this defense authorization because of the continued clear misallocation of resources it includes for national missile defense. In fact, I have grave reservations about several of our patterns in military technology and hardware. For example, we are still developing three new tactical aircraft systems simultaneously. It is critical that we deal with the meat and potatoes of our nation’s defense and the support of our military retirees before launching forth with some of these troubling weapons systems. The most problematic of them all is missile defense. There is nearly $8 billion in this bill for a system that was demonstrated two weeks ago to not be our top priority. We were caught flat-footed with a severe act of domestic terrorism reiterating that we need to be doing more to protect against conventional threats: intelligence on the ground and improving civilian capacity to assist our citizens. It is ill-advised to continue to feed money into a system for remote risks that are far into the future which may not even work and may further destabilize the world balance of power.

We need to focus our efforts now more than ever before on making sure that our armed forces are equipped to deal with today’s threats. We must continue to work that they would be in the future or know they were in the past. Missile defense is the worst example of both these premises.

I hope that we will be able, in the course of this Congress, to do a better job of effectively evaluating our threats and redepouring our resources to protect our citizens and support our fighting men and women.

Ms. BROWN of Florida. Madam Chairman, as you may know, the Senate has authorized another round of base closing. I rise in opposition to any attempts to weaken our national defense through another round of base closing.

Another round of base closing will subject the future of our national defense to a political and arbitrary process of back-room-deals and broken promises. All of the past BRAC rounds have been full of last-minute games, empty promises, false cost savings and unreliable data.

At a time when our nation has been attacked by terrorist forces, further base closures would make our country look weak and further undermine the security of the American people. Closing additional military installations will make our remaining bases easier targets. Why should we be shutting down existing bases when we are only beginning to understand the extent of our enemies evil wishes?

Why should we be shutting down existing bases when we are still learning of our enemies’ ability to completely surprise even our best defenses?

Why should we be shutting down existing bases when we need all of our people and materials to fight against the terrorist enemy?

I rise in strong opposition to another round of base closing and encourage our conferees to do the same.

Ms. LOFGREN. Madam Chairman, I had urged that this Department of Defense spending bill be brought up without including the controversial missile defense program. It was my view that we, as a Congress, would be best served by taking up a bill that most of us could vote for, which could then be followed with the controversial missile defense bill about which so many of us disagree.

Last week, on the floor, I had occasion to discuss the missile defense plan with a Congressman from across the aisle. There has been a lot of that lately, discussions among Republicans and Democrats that are respectful. He said he would vote for “missile defense” if it would save one American city from nuclear annihilation.

Well, so would I. But this missile defense program won’t do that. It won’t make us safer. The technology doesn’t work. Further, in order to proceed, we also have to abrogate treaties just at the time when we need international allies in the war against terrorism.

On the September 11th anniversary, the country showed us so terribly, we need more and better defenses. Some of those defenses need to be in the Department of Defense and in the Department of Justice, and I favor increased funding to enhance those capabilities. Enhancement of our intelligence capabilities is also called for along with better coordination and communication between intelligence and law enforcement. Improved airport and airline safety is also a necessity.

But spending billions on missile defense, in my view, will not make our country safer. It wouldn’t stop the terrorists who attacked us on September 11th and it won’t work to stop “nuclear terrorism” either. Unfortunately, the technology isn’t even advanced enough to stop the so-called rogue nations that are identified to be its target.

I favor additional funding for avionics, parts, upgraded technology and military pay. I wish I were able to vote for such good things separately from this flawed missile defense plan.

Mr. GUTIERREZ. Madam Chairman, I rise in strong opposition to the language in this bill concerning the future of the Puerto Rican island of Vieques.

The United States Navy has trained in Vieques for more than sixty years.

The effects of that training on the environment of the island and on the lives of its 9300 residents are painfully clear.

Thousands of acres on that beautiful tropical island are devastated, bearing witness to the presence of hundreds of thousands of tons of metals, chemicals and materials that have been shown to increase the incidence of cancer and other diseases.

Vieques, which was once a thriving, albeit small, community—home of hundreds of thousands of American citizens—has been a place where so many of our nation’s defense and the support of our military retirees before launching forth with some of these troubling weapons systems. The most problematic of them all is missile defense. There is nearly $8 billion in this bill for a system that was demonstrated two weeks ago to not be our top priority. We were caught flat-footed with a severe act of domestic terrorism reiterating that we need to be doing more to protect against conventional threats: intelligence on the ground and improving civilian capacity to assist our citizens. I hope that we will be able, in the course of this Congress, to do a better job of effectively evaluating our threats and redeploying our resources to protect our citizens and support our fighting men and women.

of the bombing, enough of the contamination, enough of the constraining of their lives hopes and aspirations by the U.S. Navy. Together with the religious, civic, political, and labor leadership of the Navy Rico, the people of Vieques began a sustained campaign of peaceful protest and peaceful civil disobedience to put a stop to the abuses of their land by the Navy.

Madam Chairman, last year President Clinton and I urged my colleagues to support the DOD authorization bill, because, despite this and many other disagreements I have with this bill, its enactment is necessary for the defense of our country and of our democracy. But I want to make clear for the record that we are committing a grave injustice to a peaceful people who have the right, the same right as any of my constituents or any of the constituents represented in this body to live in peace, free of fear, free of deadly contamination with a hope for a decent future for themselves and their children. I vote for this bill to support that defense of our nation—and despite language regarding Vieques that is unjust and counterproductive.

Mr. BENTSEN. Madam Chairman, I rise in support of this amendment. It authorizes appropriations for the Department of Defense for a total of $343 billion in budget authority, consistent with the President's amended defense budget request.

H.R. 2586 provides the men and women in our nation's armed forces with the tools needed to address the challenges our country will face in the next decade and beyond. This legislation provides much needed increases in weapons procurement; research and development; operations and maintenance; and a 32 percent increase in military construction and housing for the Navy. The Navy, like all of our armed services, is facing an increasing number of threats to their lives and their safety, was going to take place on November, on the date chosen by the Navy.

But the Navy and their allies in Congress now know what I always said, that the people of Vieques, whom the Navy was called their "neighbors" no longer want the Navy in their land.

So, what do we do when the people of Vieques are about to beat the Navy at a game whose rules were designed by the Navy and its political allies in Congress? We will now change the rules, to prevent the people of Vieques from winning fair and square.

In this time of crisis, we are all feeling a growing sense of patriotism. I am pleased and proud that the people of our nation are rallying to our country and about what it stands for. Sadly, what this Congress intends to do to the people of Vieques does not represent the best of America. It disregards the clearly and democratically expressed will of the majority of the people of Vieques.

Madam Chairman, tonight I will vote for this DOD authorization bill, because, despite this and many other disagreements I have with this bill, its enactment is necessary for the defense of our country and of our democracy. But I want to make clear for the record that we are committing a grave injustice to our nation—this time from the scourge of terrorism. While I have no doubt that they will respond effectively, we must make sure that they have the necessary tools and resources to do the job. To that end, this legislation authorizes $6 billion for Department of Defense programs to combat terrorism.

While this bill is carefully balanced to address the most critical needs of our military forces, we must be prepared to provide additional resources, if needed. The war against terrorism cannot be won in a single year, and we must be prepared to provide the funding necessary to get the job done. We must also recognize that our responsibility to protect the American people includes the responsibility to ensure that emerging threats cannot be assured with a single year of defense increases. The effort to improve our nation's defenses and our people's security must be significant and it must be sustained. With that in mind, the funding levels provided in this legislation may not be sufficient to support the level of effort that the DoD must undertake to track down the perpetrators of last week's terrorist attack. The Administration in consultation with the Pentagon are working to identify the additional resources required and we stand ready to address these needs in the near future.

I urge my colleagues to support passage of this critical legislation. By enacting this legislation today, we are reaffirming our commitment to our national security, and to the men and women who so ably serve and defend our nation.

Mr. CARDIN. Madam Chairman, I rise today in support of this important bill. Since 1987, my first year in the House of Representatives, perhaps no defense authorization vote has been more timely or more significant, and I am proud to join my colleagues on the floor as we consider this legislation.

The health care provisions of this bill are key. In an effort to fully meet America's promises to the military, last year Congress created a Senior Pharmacy Benefit that took effect last April 1, and authorized expanding TRICARE to Medicare-eligible retirees and their dependents. Starting Oct. 1, 2001, all military retirees and their dependents who are age 65, or who are otherwise eligible for Medicare will be able to use TRICARE as a second payer. This year's bill authorizes full funding for these programs to combat terrorism.

I want to say as soon as possible to ensure that
Mr. SPRATT. Madam Chairman, the devastation wreaked by terrorists on September 11, 2001 was horrendous. But had the terrorists used nuclear weapons, the death and destruction would have been exponentially greater. In fact, to one essential element terrorists lack in making nuclear weapons is fissile materials, and we should make every effort to ensure that they do not obtain them. Only days before September 11, smugglers were apprehended in Turkey trying to move weapons-grade uranium out of Russia. This was not the first instance, and there is no doubt that terrorists and their sponsors are trying. There is however, reason to doubt that we are doing all that we should to keep such materials and nuclear know-how out of their hands.

The Department of Energy shares the non-proliferation campaign with the Department of Defense and focuses on its particular realm of expertise: nuclear materials. Despite the gravity of this mission, this bill follows President Bush’s request, and without explanation, cuts the DOE’s non-proliferation budget for stopping the spread of nuclear materials.

The Department of Energy oversees several programs to stem the spread of weapons of mass destruction, particularly nuclear weapons. All told, the DOW non-proliferation budget for FY 2001 is $874 million. The President cut those programs in his FY 2002 budget request by $101 million, a cut of almost 12 percent. The committee’s original mark did not restore this cut at all, even though the House and Senate Appropriations Committees added $71 million and $106 million, respectively, to the President’s budget. The manager’s amendment to the bill before us today restores only $10 million, leaving the DOE’s non-proliferation budget $90 million below the 2001 level, and well below the appropriated levels in the House or Senate.

hours so that public health agencies can react quickly and effectively to stop the spread of the agent. We do not have this capability in hand, but it is maturing: BASIS was field-tested at Saint Louis City in March 2001. This cut will slow down the development of a promising technology.

Development of new sensors that can detect atmospheric nuclear explosions. Our satellites that have such sensors are retiring. We do not have any work on new sensors on hand, we are all custom built. This cut may delay the effort to build new sensors in time to be placed on replacement satellites. If not built on time, the U.S. will not be assured of the ability to detect an atmospheric nuclear explosion.

New sensors specifically geared to go on platforms to detect the production, testing, transfer, or use of WMDs. The sensors detect various “signatures”—tell-tale clues that may be chemical, electromagnetic, infrared, optical, or radio-nuclide in nature—all absolutely critical to improving the ability of the U.S. intelligence community to keep watch on what countries like North Korea, Iran, Iraq, and Libya are doing.

Although the threat of WMDs is as seen as the gravest threat facing the U.S., we are deprivings our intelligence community of the resources to improve the technical means to gather information and track the threat if this cut stands.

Another victim of this cut is people. Dr. John Browne, Director of Los Alamos, was in my office a few weeks ago. Besides the programmatic impacts I just described, Dr. Browne is worried that these cuts will force long-time employees to seek employment elsewhere. And when they leave, they will leave for good. They will not come back to the work when the funding comes back, and not only will we lose their expertise, we will lose their ability to pass their expertise on to the next generation of scientists and engineers at the national labs.

That’s why these cuts are so shortsighted and the exact opposite of what we should be doing. I had an amendment in committee that would have doubled funding for what 2001 level, and I sought, to no avail, to do the same through my BMD amendment included in the managers’ amendment. We should not be so single-minded, so focused on the threat of ballistic missiles that we allow cuts like this to stand while bestowing a 49 percent increase on BMD.

SUMMARY OF DOE NON-PROLIFERATION ACTIVITIES

Non-Proliferation and Verification Research and Development—This program develops technologies to help the U.S. meet four primary goals:

1. Detecting nuclear weapons development efforts. The labs develop sensors that detect the tell-tale signatures of a nuclear weapon development program—which can be chemical, infrared, optical, radionuclide, or electromagnetic in nature.

2. Stopping Nuclear Explosions. The labs develop methods to detect nuclear explosions, either atmospheric events or underground, low-yield events that require seismic detection.

3. Deterring the Spread of Nuclear Weapons. The labs develop technologies needed to improve the detection and tracking of fissile materials. These technologies include handheld devices for border security forces and autonomous sensing devices that can be stationed at fissile material holding areas.

4. Responding to Chemical and Biological Attacks. The labs are developing technologies that will quickly identify the exact nature of a chemical or biological weapon. Quick identification is essential to providing first responders the information they need to treat victims and to contain the damage caused by such weapons.

Arms Control—The Office of Arms Control and Non-Proliferation includes several programs well known to Congress: the long-standing Reduced Enrichment Research and Test Reactor (RERTR) program, the Nuclear Cities Initiative, and the Initiatives for Proliferation Prevention. The office also provides DOE expertise to ensure that nuclear reductions are transparent, improve export controls, and generally strengthen existing nonproliferation agreements. The major responsibilities of this office include:

1. Nonproliferation in the Newly Independent States (NIS). The DOE tries to make sure that nuclear materials and human expertise in nuclear weapons resident in the NIS do not spread to other countries, such as North Korea, Iran, or Iraq. Two recent programs to stop such proliferation are the Nuclear Cities Initiative (NCI) and the Initiatives for Proliferation Prevention (IPP). The IPP tries to prevent the “brain drain” from the ten major laboratories and engineering institutes that were involved in the former Soviet Union nuclear weapons programs. IPP establishes projects that gainfully employ these scientists, engineers, and technicians. Some of the projects are joint ventures with U.S. industry. The Nuclear Cities Initiative is a “sister” program to IPP that focuses exclusively on the closed nuclear cities of the former Soviet Union, creating new jobs through economic diversification at these closed cities.

2. Nuclear Nonproliferation throughout the World. The Arms Control Office supports programs that aim to curb the ability of countries to convert spent nuclear fuel into nuclear weapons. Activities include: (i) a major program to reprocess fuel in Russia and Kazakhstan; (ii) implementation of the agreement with North Korea to switch to nuclear reactors that produce little weapons-grade fissile materials; and (iii) the Reduced Enrichment Research and Test Reactor program (begun by the Eisenhower Administration) to ensure that spent fuel from test and research reactors throughout the world is not used for military purposes.

3. Export Controls. DOE is active in U.S. government efforts to internally improve and strengthen export controls on nuclear materials, and to help train other nations in detecting and countering illegal exports of nuclear materials.

4. International Safeguards and Treaties. DOE helps verify that other countries are living up to various nonproliferation agreements and treaties. The Arms Control Office is the principal sponsor of the Information and Safeguards and Cooperative United States (INSPIRE) program.

Fissile Material Control and Disposition—DOE is in charge of safely disposing of surplus U.S. fissile materials (plutonium and HEU) as well as helping Russia get rid of its surplus stocks. Both countries have agreed to track each other’s progress toward elimination of these materials, so that both can be confident the other will not be able to quickly expand its stock of nuclear materials (a “breakout” scenario) and gain strategic dominance in nuclear weapons. These U.S. efforts with Russia are currently focused on plutonium disposition, since the 1993 agreement on HEU is already underway. U.S. and Russia have to convert much of their respective plutonium (34 metric tons each) into mixed oxide (MOX) fuel to be burned in civilian nuclear reactors. The U.S. also plans to vitrify (also known as “im mobilize”) approximately 13 of its 47 or so metric tons of plutonium because these materials are not in a form suitable for easy conversion into MOX.

International Nuclear Safety—This program helps Russia and the NIS prevent another Chernobyl disaster. There are 66 operating nuclear powered reactors at 21 sites in Russia and 7 NIS countries. Many of these reactors are either identical to the Chernobyl reactors or have their own serious design defects. This program helps these nations improve the training of their operators and create safety procedures for these plants, which still operate far below international safety and operational standards.

Program Direction—This pays the salaries of the Nuclear Proliferation workforce, as well as the expenses normally charged to salary and expense accounts. The workforce is comprised of 233 Full-Time Equivalents (FTEs) at DOE headquarters, 34 FTEs in field offices, and 25 FTEs in offices located abroad.

Ms. MCCOLLUM. Madam Chairman, I rise today in support of the Defense Authorization Act (H.R. 2586), and in support of our armed forces. We are at war, and we must ensure that we can defend our great country. In this time of national awareness of the very real threat of terrorism, I believe it is our responsibility as lawmakers to ensure the readiness and quality of life of our military by providing these forces with the necessary resources, equipment and training to defend our nation’s interests and to keep the American people secure.
I am encouraged that the Armed Services Committee, the Administration and our joint Congressional leaders have crafted legislation that firmly addresses many of our military's most pressing priorities. The current defense budget includes significant commitments to military salaries, health care, housing allowances and housing construction opportunities. We need to assure our military that as we continue to support their readiness capabilities, we remember the personal well being of the men and women in uniform as well as their families.

While I am supporting passage of this authorization, I am particularly concerned that we are placing too high an emphasis on an untested and unproven method of defense. Specifically, the proposed missile defense system that authorize an increase in funding for national missile defense. By moving forward with a costly national missile defense system, we are investing billions of scarce federal dollars in an unproven and dangerous scheme. Deployment and testing of the proposed missile defense system will jeopardize our obligations under the Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty that has served our nation and the world well for nearly three decades. In addition, evident by the recent attacks on our country, we must consider the possibility that an anti-missile system completely fails to address one of our most serious threats of attack the introduction of chemical, biological or nuclear weapons by non-state actors through as pedestrian means. The proposed missile defense system not only does not make our nation more secure, it diverts resources away from the very real human investments needed to keep our military, intelligence agencies and domestic security agencies strong.

Before we add billions of additional dollars to untested and unproven programs that destabilize our relationships with allies and undermine our treaty obligations, let's use this appropriation to focus on strengthening our home security and providing our citizens with the appropriate resources necessary to ensure the events of September 11th never happen again on American soil.

Mr. ABERCROMBIE. Madam Chairman, I rise in strong support of the National Defense Authorization Act for Fiscal Year 2002, and urge my colleagues to support this important measure.

This year, we lost two great friends on the House Armed Services Committee, our former Chairman, Floyd Spence from South Carolina, and Norm Sisisky from Virginia. Both of these men dedicated the majority of their time here in Congress to ensuring the defense of our Nation, and they are deeply missed on the Committee. I am opposed to provisions in this bill that would, if enacted, alter the commitment of the Navy to find sufficient alternative training grounds to Vieques by May 1, 2003. I am also concerned about how this change in policy will be received in Puerto Rico should it become law. We reaffirm our support of President Bush's position that there is no need for another referendum and that the Navy depart Vieques on or before May 1, 2003.

Furthermore, since Navy Secretary Gordon England stated in this letter dated September 24, 2001, to Senate Armed Services Committee Chairman LEVIN that the Navy would, if enacted, alter the commitment of the Navy to find sufficient alternative training grounds to Vieques by May 1, 2003. I am also concerned about how this change in policy will be received in Puerto Rico should it become law. We reaffirm our support of President Bush's position that there is no need for another referendum and that the Navy depart Vieques on or before May 1, 2003.

Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Speaker, I offer a motion to recommit.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The motion to recommit simply reinstates the original provision on the question of service contracting processes that was adopted on a bipartisan basis in the Committee on Armed Services.

The motion to recommit will make the service contracting process at the Department of Defense more fair to Federal employees and more accountable to taxpayers. It will save an enormous amount of taxpayer dollars.

Right now, Mr. Speaker, less than 1 percent of defense contracts allow Federal employees a chance to openly compete for their work before it goes to the private sector. Less than 1 percent. That is not fair. When given a chance to compete, Federal employees actually win 60 percent of the contracts. Why? Because they do a great job, and they do it for less money. It is as simple as that, Mr. Speaker.

Too often what happens at our bases, and those of you who have facilities here, know this, private contractors get the work, they fail to do the job; and then when the Federal Government has to take over, the employees are gone. Their work experience is gone. Competition for defense contracts can result in Federal employees a chance to compete for their jobs before they are contracted out.

This would not prevent the Department of Defense from contracting out as long as it is done fairly. DOD is given the maximum flexibility and can waive the requirement if it is threatened by national security.

This motion to recommit is a win for the Department of Defense, a win for Federal employees, and I think a win for the taxpayers.

Mr. Speaker, I just want to reiterate again, it is like voting on an amendment. It will be brought back forthwith whether it passes or does not pass. It is a good amendment for Federal employees, for saving tax dollars and to make sure we have competition in this sector.

Mr. Speaker, I yield 1 minute to my distinguished colleague, the gentleman from New Jersey (Mr. ANDREWS).

Mr. ANDREWS. Mr. Speaker, if a military base is deciding whether or not to contract out car washing at that military base, this amendment says before they can make that decision to take those jobs away from public employees, they must give those public employees a fair chance to compete and win the contract.

Mr. Speaker, the record shows that privatization is often a failure. It means lower quality at a higher price. It means taking jobs away from people with benefits and give it to people without benefits for private profit. But this motion is not anti-privatization. It is pro-competition and it is pro-taxpayer and it is pro-Department of Defense.

Mr. Speaker, I would urge a vote in favor of the motion to recommit.

Mr. BONIOR. Mr. Speaker, I yield the balance of my time to the gentleman from Maryland (Mr. HOYER).

Mr. HOYER. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me time.

Mr. Speaker, I rise in support of this motion to recommit. I am a strong supporter of the contracting community. I have a very vibrant contracting community in my district. They perform an invaluable service for the defense of this Nation, in my case, for the United States Navy.

The gentleman from Michigan (Mr. BONIOR) is adding simply that in the competition we will not exclude Federal employees who were doing the job now. If they lose that competition, the job will be contracted out as it ought to be.

On the other hand, if they win the competition, the competition shows that the Federal employees can do it cheaper and better, then it ought to be done in-house because that is what the taxpayer would want.

This is good for America. I frankly think it is good in the final analysis for contractors, and it clearly is fair to our Federal employees.

Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time in support of the motion to recommit.

Mr. BONIOR. Finally, Mr. Speaker, let me say that basically what we are saying to Federal employees is, we will not take your job away without letting you make your case. Then we will decide based on your opportunity to make your case. That is all this does. It is fair. It is supported on a bipartisan basis in committee. As I said, it will not kill this bill or send it back to committee. It will come forthwith back to the House. I hope Members will vote for it.

The SPEAKER pro tempore. The gentleman from Arizona (Mr. STUMP) is recognized for 5 minutes in opposition to the motion to recommit.

Mr. STUMP. Mr. Speaker, I yield such time as he may consume to the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. WELDON).

Mr. WELDON of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, I thank the gentleman for yielding me this time.

Mr. Speaker, I have served on the Committee on Veterans' Affairs for 15 years, and I love that committee because we are a bipartisan committee. I have as much respect for the gentleman from Missouri (Mr. SKELTON) as the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. STUMP) because the two gentlemen work in concert on every issue.

We have had a bipartisan approach under Floyd Spence, under Ron Dellums, and under Les Aspin. We have worked together to reach compromises that may not be what we want at the time, but in the end worked to the best interest of our military and our personnel. We worked out our differences.

The amendment my colleague seeks to offer today was offered identically by the gentleman from Hawaii (Mr. ABERCROMBIE) in the committee. The amendment has some problems. Despite what my colleague has said, the Pentagon has estimated it will cost $100 million a year to implement this.

Despite what my colleague has said, it will not establish a new classification system that will require every private contractor to open their records, and we do not even know what it will look like.

My colleague knows that I am a friend of labor. I have been with my colleagues on that side of the aisle on some key labor issues. I do not want anyone thinking I am not in favor of equal competition for workers.

Mr. Speaker, what bothers me about this motion to recommit is we sat with the leadership on the other side of the aisle on the committee, a unanimous agreement to move forward and resolve this problem.

I ask my friends and colleagues to follow the request of the leadership of this committee, the leadership of the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. STUMP), the leadership of the gentleman from Texas (Mr. ORTIZ), the gentleman from New York (Mr. MCHugh), and the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. JONES) that I agree with; but this is not the solution.

This Congress 1 year ago in our defense authorization bill with a bipartisan vote established a task force, which organized labor has a member of that, will report back in March on a plan to compromise.

My amendment that we offered with the support of the gentleman from Hawaii (Mr. ABERCROMBIE) in the en bloc amendment puts a moratorium of 50 percent of all A–76 work through that time.

We also require that there must be a 10 percent threshold met. It was a good-faith compromise that the administration reluctantly accepted.

Now my colleague comes up on the final vote, without consulting with the Members of the leadership of his own party on the committee, and seeks to impose on the American spirit of trying to resolve the A–76 process which I agree needs to be changed and modified. This is not, in my opinion, a good-faith effort on behalf of working people.

This is a chance to perhaps have Members of the other side score points when we had a good-faith agreement with the leadership on the other side of the aisle on the committee, a unanimous agreement to move forward and resolve this problem.

I ask my friends and colleagues to follow the request of the leadership of this committee, the leadership of the gentleman from Arizona (Mr. STUMP), the leadership of the gentleman from Texas (Mr. ORTIZ), the gentleman from New York (Mr. MCHugh), the leadership of the gentleman from Hawaii (Mr. ABERCROMBIE), the leadership of the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. JONES), and the other Members on both sides of the aisle and allow us to enact this bill and reject this amendment and do the right thing for the military in this country and move on to resolve the problems with the A–76 process.

Ms. WATERS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to express my disappointment that the Amherst language is not included in the Defense Authorization bill, and I support the motion to recommit so that it may be restored.

Representative Abercrombie’s amendment was an effort to ensure that the most knowledgeable and experienced individuals are contracted with to do the work for the Department of Defense. And his amendment was adopted in Committee by a bipartisan majority.

But what the other side wants to do is contract out these projects which does not guarantee the best workers for the job, it does not guarantee that the work will be done at a lower cost. All it does is jeopardize the jobs of thousands of federal employees and put the lives of Defense employees on the line.

The language was intended to place Federal employees on equal footing as private contractors.

My friend and my colleague on the other side knows full well that we reached an agreement to solve a problem that the gentleman from Hawaii (Mr. ABERCROMBIE) from Texas (Mr. ORTIZ), the gentleman from New York (Mr. McHugh), and the gentleman from North Carolina (Mr. Jones) raised that I agree with; but this is not the solution.

LOSS OF NORTHWEST ALLOYS CREATES VOID FOR WASHINGTON STATE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Washington (Mr. NETHERCUTT) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. NETHERCUTT. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor the workers of Northwest Alloys, a company located in Addy, Washington, in the north part of the Fifth Congressional District. Since beginning operations in 1975, Northwest Alloys has become the largest private sector employer in Stevens County. It employs about 350 people. These are good people with good paying jobs and a wide variety of families that support the community of Addy and Stevens County, Washington.

The void that the absence of this company will leave in our communities is immeasurable, because they have supported our schools, they have supported youth activities, community activities, and provided a great resource for northeast Washington State.

The plant at Northwest Alloys in Addy, Washington, is only one of two magnesium smelters in the entire United States, and Northwest Alloys has had a sterling reputation ever since it has been in business over the years. It received OSHA’s Voluntary Protection Plan Merit Status one year ago for a comprehensive evaluation of its safety processes and performance. The company recently received Star Status, the highest level of achievement within OSHA’s Voluntary Protection Plan, making it one of only three manufacturing locations to do so in Washington State. Safety was their code word, their standard. They worked very, very hard to have a safe manufacturing plant of magnesium.

So I am deeply saddened by the events that have lead to the closure of Northwest Alloys and the impact the closure is having on families and the communities surrounding this facility in our State. But I also remain hopeful that new opportunities will arise out of such adversity. The reason the plant is closing is large measure is because countries like China and Russia have flooded the market with magnesium, and that has put tremendous pressure on community operations like that which is located in Addy in Northwest Alloys.

The employees have been remarkably upbeat; and under the leadership of Jerry Turnbow, they have worked against incredible odds, considering the market situation, production, and energy conditions. They have been fighting a battle to try to get low-cost energy to run this plant, and they worked in a very cost-effective way to have a safe work environment.

Their commitment to our communities in the Fifth Congressional District has been everything. It will be sorely missed. I will be there this week to pay tribute as they close the plant and finish their job operations this Friday and to wish them well and all of God’s blessings as they move on in life; and we shall never forget them.

EXPRESSING WHOLEHEARTED GRATITUDE AND PRIDE FOR OUR BRAVE AND HEROIC EMERGENCY PERSONNEL

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Virginia (Mr. MORAN) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. Virginia. Mr. Speaker, on September 11, the world watched in horror as the primary symbols of our Nation’s strength and prosperity were attacked. There is an aching in our hearts as we mourn for the senseless loss of life, and we share the grief of the victims’ families, friends, and cowokers.

As the list of casualties from the World Trade Towers, from the Pentagon, and from Pennsylvania grows to 6,500, it is frightening to imagine that the toll would have been higher, even higher, were it not for the extraordinary courage and valor exhibited by our firefighters, police officers, and emergency rescue workers. For this reason I rise today to pay homage to these men and women who are responsible for saving so many lives. Together with the firefighters and police of New York City, they reminded all of us of what it means to exhibit courage and valor. It is with great pride and admiration that I rise today to honor these firefighters and rescue personnel for their commitment on behalf of our country.

I want to particularly commend Fire Chief Ed Plaugh of the Arlington County Fire Department and Police Chief Ed Flynn for their leadership during this terrible time in our community. The fire chief and police chief of Alexandria and those of Fairfax County also were able to command their forces with the kind of courage and immediate responsiveness that reflects their professional dedication, their selflessness and unwavering dedication which is an inspiration to all Americans.

Mr. Speaker, history will show that during a time of one of America’s greatest tragedies, a heroic group of firefighters, police officers, emergency personnel, and volunteers from around the Washington Metropolitan area brought our community and our country immense pride and honor.

OUR ETERNAL GRATITUDE

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentlewoman from New York (Mrs. MALONEY) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mrs. M. MILONEY of New York. Mr. Speaker, it has been nearly 2 weeks since war came to New York City, Virginia, Pennsylvania, and America. These cowards have waged war not on our Army and Navy, but on ordinary men and women who were killed simply because they showed up for work.

This unspeakable tragedy has been New York’s darkest hour, but it has also been its finest hour. We knew New York’s bravest and finest would respond with great courage; but we did not know how many firefighters, police officers, and other rescue workers we would lose.

Last week, the gentleman from New York (Mr. FOSSELLA) and I introduced legislation honoring Mayor Giuliani for his leadership, the rescue workers, and the people of New York City for their courage, volunteerism and enduring spirit. Through their selfless attempts to save innocent people, hundreds of rescue workers and citizens made the ultimate sacrifice. We appreciate all they have done.

We owe them our eternal gratitude.

Mr. Speaker, our city and country are mobilizing as never before.

The day after the terrorist attack at ground zero I saw not only the devastation but the determination in all New Yorkers and Americans to rescue, rebuild—and repay the terrorists in calculated, just, multi-national strikes at them and those who harbor them.

We’re getting back to work to rebuild Lower Manhattan and to keep our economy strong.

From the bottom of my heart I thank my colleagues for their swift support for the $20 billion we’ve approved to rebuild.

I’ve never seen this Congress more united or more determined.

The airline bill passed last Friday was also a boon to New York.

It included funds to support the victims and their families. And it helped keep planes flying into New York.

Today we will make this airline initiative more comprehensive by passing legislation that supports airline workers who were laid off through no fault of their own.

The impact of this tragedy is being felt far beyond ground zero.

New York City’s second largest industry is tourism.

Right now restaurants are empty. Hotel rooms are vacant and Broadway shows are closing.

Yesterday morning I met with Don Winter, a Chamber of Commerce President.

He said small businesses in particular are being devastated and that they pass under the radar screen of many relief efforts.

Last week to help address this problem and bring people back to New York Congressman Reynolds and I introduced the “I Love New York Tax Deduction Act”.

For the next year it would allow individuals to deduct from their income taxes up to $500 and families up to $1,000 for spending money in NYC restaurants, lodging and entertainment outlets whether or not they itemize their taxes.

All Americans who want to help the ground-zero cleanup continues I’ve been assured by Ken Holden, Commissioner of the New York City Department of Design and Construction, that fragments of shells of the Twin Towers which landed in the ground like daggers in our heart will be preserved for the purpose of creating a national monument. A reminder of the day our lives turned upside down. And how we have come together as a city and nation.
A NEW RELATIONSHIP WITH RUSSIA

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Pennsylvania (Mr. WELDON) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. WELDON of Pennsylvania. Mr. Speaker, tonight I rise to applaud those colleagues of ours who will join me tomorrow, equally divided between both sides of the aisle. Ten of our colleagues will join me as we travel to Moscow. The purpose of our trip is to lay the foundation for a new relationship with the Russian people and the Russian Government.

Over the past 2 months, we have worked out an in-depth assessment of a way to follow the Russian people. Not to pour massive amounts of American money into Russia, because that is not the answer, but ways to continue to support those efforts that are already underway by private foundations, by nonprofit groups, by academic institutions, and, in some cases, by governmental entities.

The document and the process that will be speaking to our Russian counterparts will include a new era of engaging Russia, the culture, the economy, the environment, justice and legal system, health care, science and technology, defense and security, agriculture, culture, space, local government and energy.

Today, I had a chance to brief our colleagues on the other side of the Capitol in both parties, and the White House and the National Security Council as well. This new initiative is designed to create a new era of opportunity for us where Americans and Russians can work together. We will also be providing an opportunity for the Russian Parliament, the Duma, and the Federation Council to enact a piece of legislation that I will be introducing, by the Congress, and they are identical, that calls for a joint task force on terrorism, a legislative task force that has Russian members of the Duma and the Federation Council working with Members of the Congress and the Senate, the House and the Senate. This will follow support the efforts of our two Presidents. Our meetings will include senior leaders of the Duma, members of the Federation Council, the Minister of Interior for Russia, and members of President Putin’s leadership in terms of security and foreign policy and the other major issues that we will be dealing with.

We will leave Moscow on Saturday and travel to Rome where we have planned meetings with the King of Afghanistan, who is in exile, and leaders of the opposition forces in that country. We will be extending our best wishes and our praise to the King as he attempts to reunify the people of that troubled country and to let him know that Americans do not have a problem with the Afghan people, that we want to be their friends.

We will leave Rome and travel on to Turkey where we will meet with the leadership of the Turkish Government, letting them know that we appreciate their support and solidarity with the U.S. and the allies, that we appreciate the work of the Turkish military, and that we appreciate their friendship during this troubled time.

I look forward to the trip. Our colleagues are giving up time that they could be home with their constituents. It is an important role they are playing to support our President in his effort to have a unified world in eradicating the terrorism that has done so much devastation here in this country in this past month.

So I thank our colleagues for being involved in this process. We will issue a report upon our return, giving the response that is expected that we meet and making recommendations back to our colleagues about future actions.

TRIBUTE TO TED C. CONNELL, A PATRIOT AND TRUE PUBLIC SERVANT

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SIMPSON). Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. SIMPSON) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. EDWARDS. Mr. Speaker, on Sunday, September 16, Texas and the Nation lost a patriot and a true public servant, Mr. Ted C. Connell. My friend, our Nation’s friend, passed away at his home in Killeen, Texas, after a courageous battle with cancer.

Ted Connell lived a life of service to others and to his beloved country. He was a World War II combat veteran, was elected Chairman of the Veterans of Foreign Wars. He was a great friend of my political mentor, former Congressman Olin E. (Tiger) Teague, and he was a friend of President Lyndon Johnson and the Johnson family.

Ted Connell was born in 1924 in the small town of Hamlin, Texas, the fifth of ten sons. He dropped out of high school, but finished his diploma while serving in the U.S. Army field artillery on the island of Guam during World War II.

During his 30-month tour in the South Pacific with the 316th Tank Destroyer Battalion of the 98th Division, he also fought in Saipan, Tinian and Okinawa. He eventually rose to the rank of Lieutenant Colonel in the Army Reserve.

While on Okinawa, in one of the bloodiest battles of the war, Ted was shot in the chest. He was shot in the chest. He sat with his mortally wounded comrade for 3 hours, comforting him in the last moments of his life. When Ted returned to the United States, he traveled to the Marine’s hometown in Colorado to tell his parents in person about their son’s death.

Ted Connell was a friend and confidante of President Lyndon Johnson, coordinating and advancing Presidential visits to Guam, Uruguay, Central America, South Vietnam, Australia, and Pakistan, and serving as an on-scene coordinator for a meeting with Pope Paul VI with the Vatican.

He served on several congressional and Presidential fact-finding missions, taking him to Vietnam five times, to Laos, Thailand, Malaysia, and Korea.

Ted Connell also served the State of Texas with great distinction as a member of the Texas Veterans Land Board, chairman of the Texas Veterans Commission, and as a member of the Sam Rayburn Foundation.

When his hometown of Killeen needed leadership, Ted Connell answered the call to duty once again, spearheading efforts to build the Lake Belton Dam, Central Texas College, and Metroplex Hospital, and to strengthen the U.S. Army’s Fort Hood.

He served two terms as mayor of Killeen, was director and president of the Killeen Chamber of Commerce, the Industrial Foundation, a director of the Metroplex Hospital, and chairman of the hospital’s building fund campaign.

Somewhere in all of this service to the public Ted Connell found time to operate his successful car dealership for 46 years, and to further leave his mark by bringing local airline service to his community. He opened an airline in 1965, eventually merging it with Hood Airlines and with Rio Airways. By 1974, Rio, serving small- and medium-sized cities in central, north, and south Texas, had become the seventh largest commuter airline in the country.

Fittingly, the Killeen City Council recently named the new passenger terminal at the about-to-be-completed, over the next few years, Fort Hood-Killeen Joint-Use Airport in honor of this great veteran and community leader.

Ted Connell fought for his Nation, Mr. Speaker, in time of war, and served his community and country in time of peace. His indomitable optimism and love of country were quintessential American values. He represented the special spirit that makes me optimistic about our Nation’s future.

As a businessman and community leader, Ted Connell worked tirelessly for jobs, prosperity, and opportunities for central Texans. His unparalleled record of public service and his enduring legacy to his community are matched only by his countless quiet acts of caring for those in need.

All those who knew or were the beneficiaries of Ted Connell and his humanity were enriched by his life and are diminished by his passing. Winston Churchill once said, “We make a living by what we get, but we make a life by what we give.” Ted Connell was a true example of that high measure, and Ted Connell’s life was a true success.

Mr. Speaker, if I could just finish with one story, at Ted Connell’s funeral recently in Killeen, Texas, a friend of his, Gaylen Christy, told the story, in the last 2 years where he and Mr. Connell were sitting in a coffee shop, but this time Ted was a patient of chemotherapy.

Rather than worrying about his own concerns, he heard a middle-aged couple at a table nearby talking about their problems. Their son had just been assigned to Fort Hood, but recently thereafter was asked to go to serve his Nation in Bosnia as a helicopter mechanic.

Their problem was—they did not know how to get their son’s belongings to the airport in Austin to be freighted back to Pennsylvania to their home, and then to get their son’s car back. Mr. Connell, having heard their concern over their son’s matters, walked over to their table, gave them a card, and said, come talk to me at my car dealership and we will take care of your problem.

He proceeded to provide a driver and a car to take that son’s belongings to the airport in Austin to be freighted back to Pennsylvania to their home, and paid for that driver to fly back to Texas. When Mr. Connell made this offer to this great family, they responded to him by saying, “Sir, we don’t know how we can pay you back.” Mr. Connell said, “you have already paid me back by raising a son who was willing to serve his Nation in uniform.”

That was the man, Ted Connell. Our Nation will forever remember and be better for his spirit and public service.

AMERICA’S RESPONSE TO THE SEPTEMBER 11 ATTACKS

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from California (Mr. LANGEVIN) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. LANGEVIN. Mr. Speaker, Sunday was an important day in the United States as we come to terms with the senseless terrorist attacks of September 11. In brief mourning ceremony at Camp David, President Bush watched as the U.S. flag was hoisted to a full staff for the first time in 12 days.

Later that afternoon, thousands of mourners gathered at Yankee Stadium in New York for a multi-faith event to remember their loved ones and all those lost in the terrorist attacks.

Our collective grief and confusion during the last 2 weeks have not waned and will likely remain with us for years. However, Sunday’s two events reminded us of the strong foundation on which this Nation is built, and of the need to defend our citizens and principles from future threats.

Paramount among America’s concern following the attacks was the realization that terror could strike on our own soil. However, we cannot live in constant fear and hand a victory to the terrorists, so it is incumbent upon Congress to restore faith in national security. We need immediate action to enhance safety in airports and on planes by improving passenger and baggage screening procedures, strengthening airplane security features, and installing sky marshals on flights.

Additionally, we must identify other vulnerabilities in our infrastructure, and work to safeguard food and water supplies, financial institutions, electricity grids, energy production facilities, and transportation and communications networks.

Once we have improved any shortcomings in our infrastructure, we can enact fundamental reforms such as ensuring police departments, firefighters, rescue workers, health care systems, and local governments are prepared in the event of biological or chemical attacks.

The Rhode Island Disaster Initiative has served as a pioneer in developing a model disaster plan for every State in the Nation. I am proud of this initiative, and hope that it will play an integral role in developing national solutions to problems revealed on September 11.

Also, an investment in mental health services, whose importance is often overlooked in times of tragedies, would be a benefit.

I would like to mention a little-known way American citizens deal with the trauma of witnessing violence and terrorism around the globe.

All of these efforts must be pursued in conjunction with a careful, coordinated counterterrorism program. The new Office of Homeland Security is an essential step towards preventing terrorism, and Congress must provide this office with the authority it needs to be effective.

By consolidating existing responsibilities from the 40 different agencies managing terrorism prevention, and by establishing information-sharing procedures with the FBI and CIA, the Office of Homeland Security can safeguard our lands, citizens, and facilities from future threats.

I also look forward to working with the administration on its request for increased authority to combat terrorism. As terrorists gain access to new technology, our law enforcement offices must be equipped to intercept and analyze these communications.

However, in our rush to action, any new authority Congress grants must be consistent with the civil liberties guaranteed in the Constitution and upheld by the courts.

Furthermore, we must focus on the perpetrators of terrorist crimes, and condemn the unfounded targeting or harassment of innocent Americans because of their skin color, customs, or beliefs.

Mr. Speaker, we are just beginning to fathom the implications of the September 11 attacks. Yet, we may take comfort that our Nation’s principles are still intact. The valiant and selfless efforts of emergency responders are to be commended. The generosity of those who have donated to relief efforts and the multifaith ceremony at Yankee Stadium all demonstrate that Americans of all backgrounds join in condemnation of terrorism.

For many years to come, when we look at our flag proudly waving at full staff, we will remember the victims of September 11, but we will also be reminded of the principles that make the United States a great Nation, and which we must always strive to preserve.

INTRODUCING H.R. 2953, LEGISLATION TO EXTEND SOCIAL HEALTH MAINTENANCE ORGANIZATIONS AND MAKE THEM PART OF MEDICARE+CHOICE PLANS PERMANENTLY

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from California (Mr. HORN) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. HORN. Mr. Speaker, today I introduced H.R. 2953, which is legislation to extend and make social health maintenance organizations a permanent part of Medicare+Choice. It is an important benefit option helping seniors maintain a healthy lifestyle longer in their own homes. As such, it represents a fiscally sound approach to managing our long-term health care needs in this country, and I urge all of my colleagues to support this important legislation.

I am fortunate to represent one of the four social HMOs that were approved as part of the initial Medicare demonstration project in 1985. This effort, called the Seniors Care Action Network, or SCAN, provides coordinated personal and health care to more than 50,000 Medicare beneficiaries in Los Angeles, Orange, Riverside, and San Bernardino Counties in southern California.

The concept actually originated more than 20 years ago when a group of seniors in my district became frustrated how difficult it was to get both personal care and health care services. The principle underlying SCAN is that some individuals, although relatively happy and healthy, may need some outside assistance to remain in their homes.

These extra services, in the case of SCAN, includes, among other things, transportation assistance, light housekeeping, prescription drug services, home health care, adult day care, and caregiver relief programs. By providing these services, SCAN expects to keep its seniors healthier longer, relieving the need for them to enter into more costly long-term care facilities.

Participants are not charged an extra fee for the coordinated care approach by SCAN. Instead, SCAN is reimbursed by the centers for Medicaid and Medicare services based on a formula that provides additional reimbursement for more seriously ill seniors, but a slightly smaller fee for healthier participants.

The demonstration project, first approved by Congress as part of the 1994 Deficit Reduction Act, has been revalidated by five subsequent acts of Congress. Unfortunately, only four demonstration sites exist now, which means that huge groups of seniors are not covered. Now the demonstration project has brought us to this international crisis. We should guard against emotionally driven demands to kill many bystanders in an effort to liquidate our enemy. These efforts could well fail to punish the perpetrators while only expanding the war and making things worse by killing innocent noncombatants and further radicalizing Muslim people.

It is obviously no easy task to destroy an almost invisible ubiquitous enemy spread throughout the world without infringing on our liberties here at home. Above all else that is our mandate and our key constitutional responsibility, protecting liberty and providing for national security.

My strong belief is that in the past efforts in the U.S. Congress to do much more than this has diverted our attention and, hence, led to our neglect of these responsibilities. Following the September 11 disasters, a militant Islamic group in Pakistan held up a sign for all the world to see. It said: “Americans, think! Why you are hated all over the world.” We abhor the messenger, but we should not ignore the message.

Here at home we are told that the only reason for the suicidal mass killing we experienced on September 11 is that we are hated because we are free and prosperous. If these two conflicting views are not reconciled we cannot wisely fight nor win the war in which we now find ourselves. We must understand why the hatred is directed toward Americans and not any other Western country.

In studying history, I, as many others, have come to the conclusion that war is most often fought for economic reasons, but economic wars are driven by moral and emotional overtones. Our own revolution was fought to escape from the excessive taxation but was inspired and driven by our desire to protect our God-given right to liberty.

The War Between the States, fought primarily over tariffs, was nonetheless inspired by the abhorrence of slavery. It is this moral inspiration that drives people to suicidally fight to the death as so many Americans did between 1861 and 1865.

Both economic and moral causes of war must be understood. Ignoring the importance of each is dangerous. We should not casually ignore the root causes of our current fight nor pursue this fight by merely accepting the explanation that they terrorize us out of jealousy.

It has already been written that Islamic militiants are fighting a holy war, a jihad. This drives them to commit acts that to us are beyond comprehension. It seems that they have no concern for economic issues since they have no regard even for their own lives, but an economic issue does exist in this war. It is oil.

When the conflict broke out between Iraq and Iran, it seemed that they had no concern for economic issues since they helped to finance and arm Iraq and Saddam Hussein. At that time, Anwar Sadat of Egypt profoundly stated, “This is the beginning of the war for oil.” Our crisis today is part of this long-lasting war over oil.

Osama bin Laden, a wealthy man, left Saudi Arabia in 1979 to join American-sponsored so-called freedom fighters in Afghanistan. He received financial assistance, weapons and training from our CIA, just as his allies in the 1980s continued to receive the same from us today.

Unbelievably, to this day our foreign aid continues to flow into Afghanistan, even as we prepare to go to war against her. My suggestion is, not only should we stop this aid immediately, but we should never have started it in the first place.

It is during this time, bin Laden learned to practice terror tragically with money from the U.S. taxpayer, but it was not until 1991 during what we referred to as the Persian Gulf War that he turned fully against the United States. It was this war, said to protect our oil, that brought out the worst in him. Of course, it is not our oil. The oil, in fact, belongs to the Arabs and other Muslim Nations on the Persian gulf.

Our military presence in Saudi Arabia is what most Muslims believe to be a sacred violation of holy land. The continuous bombing and embargo of Iraq has intensified this hatred without underrating the fact that it has contributed to more than a million deaths in Iraq. It is clear that protecting certain oil interests and our presence in the Persian Gulf helps drive this holy war.

Muslims see this as an invasion and domination by a foreign enemy which inspires radicalism. This is not new. This war, from their viewpoint, has been going on since the Crusades 1,000 years ago. We ignore this history at our own peril.

The radicals react as some Americans might react if China dominated the Gulf of Mexico and had air bases in Texas and Florida. Dominating the Persian Gulf is not a benign activity. It has consequences. The attack on the U.S.S. Cole was a warning we ignored. Furthermore, our support for secular governments in the moderate Arab country is interpreted by the radicals as more American control over their region that they want.

There is no doubt that our policies that are seen by the radicals as favoring one faction over another in the long-lasting Middle East conflict adds to the distrust and hatred of America. The hatred has been suppressed because of the powerful economic and military forces we have held a lot of influence. But this suppressed hatred is now becoming more visible. And we, as Americans, for the most part, are not even aware of how this could be. Americans who want security toward a people they hardly even know. Instead, our policies have been driven by the commercial interests of a few, and now the innocent suffer.

I am hopeful that shedding a light on the truth will be helpful in resolving this conflict in the very dangerous period that lies ahead. Without some understanding of the recent and past history of the Middle East and the Persian Gulf, we cannot expect to punish the evildoers without finding the nightmare of hatred that is now sweeping the world. Punishing the evildoers is crucial. Restoring safety and security to our country is critical. Providing for a strong defense is essential. But extricating the world from the war without any violence and without war, as we do not understand is also necessary if we expect to achieve the above-mentioned goals.

Let us all hope and pray for guidance in our effort to restore the peace, tranquility we all desire. We did a poor job in providing the security that all Americans should expect, and this is our foremost responsibility. Some Members have been quick to point out the shortcomings of the FBI, the CIA, and the FAA, and to claim more money will rectify the situation. I am not so sure. Bureaucracies, by nature, are inefficient. The FBI and CIA records come up short. The FBI loses computers with guns and is one busy with records. The CIA rarely provides timely intelligence. The FAA’s idea of security against hijackers is asking all passengers who packed their bags.

The clamor now is to give more authority and money to these agencies. But remember, important industries like our chemical plants and refineries do not depend on government agencies for security. They build fences and hire guards with guns. The airlines have not been allowed to do the same thing. There was a time when airline pilots were allowed and did carry guns, and yet this has been prohibited by government regulations. If this responsibility had been left with the airlines to provide safety, they may well have had armed guards and pilots on the planes, just as our industrial sites have.

Privatizing the FAA, as other countries have, would also give airlines more leeway in providing security. My bill, H.R. 2130, is the way to proceed immediately to clarify that the Federal Government will never place a prohibition on pilots being armed. We do not need more laws restricting our civil liberties, we need more freedom to defend ourselves.

We have an enormous task to restore the sense of security we have taken for granted for so long, but it can be done. Destroying the evildoers while extricating ourselves from this unholiest of wars is no small challenge. The job is somewhat like getting into a pit filled with venomous snakes. The sooner we shoot the snakes that immediately threaten us, the sooner we can get safely away. If we are not careful, though, we will breed more snakes; and they will continue to crawl from around the world and little will be resolved.

It is no easy task, but before we fight, we had better be precise about whom we are fighting and how many there are and where they are hiding; or we will never know when the war is over and our goals are achieved. Without this knowledge, the war can go on for a long, long time. And the war for oil has already been going on for more than 20 years. To this point, our President and his Administration has displayed the necessary deliberation. This is a positive change from unauthorized and ineffective retaliatory bombings in past years that only worsened various conflicts. If we cannot or will not define the enemy, the cost to fight such a war will be endless.

How many American troops are we prepared to lose? How much money are we prepared to spend? How many innocent civilians in our Nation and others are we willing to see killed? How many American civilians will be jeopardized? How much of our civil liberties are we prepared to give up? How much prosperity will we sacrifice?

The founders and authors of our Constitution provided an answer for the difficult task that we now face. When a precise declaration of war was impossible due to the vagueness of our enemy, the Congress was expected to take it upon themselves to direct the reprisal against an enemy not recognized as a government. In the early days, the concern was piracy on the high seas. Piracy was one of only three Federal crimes named in the original Constitution. Today, we have a new type of deadly piracy in the high sky over our country.

The solution the founders came up with under these circumstances was for Congress to grant letters of marque and reprisal. This puts the responsibility in the hands of Congress to direct the President to perform the task, with permission to use and reward private sources to carry out the task, such as the elimination of Osama bin Laden and his key supporters. This narrows targeting the enemy.

This effort would not preclude the President’s own efforts to resolve the crisis but, if successful, would preclude a foolish invasion of a remote country with a forbidding terrain like Afghanistan, a country that no foreign power has ever successfully conquered throughout all of history. Lives could be saved, billions of dollars could be saved, and escalation due to needless and senseless killing could be prevented.

Mr. Speaker, we must seriously consider this option. This answer is a world apart from the potential disaster of launching nuclear weapons or endless bombing of an unknown enemy. Marque and reprisal demands the enemy be seen and precisely targeted with minimal danger to others. It should be considered, and for various reasons, is far superior to any effort that could be carried out by the CIA.

We must not sacrifice the civil liberties that generations of Americans have enjoyed and fought for over the past 225 years. Unwise decisions in response to the terror inflicted on us may well fail to destroy our enemy, while undermining our liberties at home. That will not be a victory worth celebrating.

The wise use of marque and reprisal could negate the need to undermine the privacy and rights of our citizens. As we work through this period that lies ahead, let us resist the temptation to invoke the most authoritarian of all notions that not too many years ago tore this Nation apart, the military draft.

The country is now unified against the enemy. The military draft does nothing to contribute to unity, nor as the Pentagon again has confirmed, does it promote an efficient military.

Precise identification of all travelers on our air flights is a desired goal. A national ID issued by the Federal Government would prove to be disastrous to our civil liberties and should not be considered. This type of surveillance power should never be given to an intrusive, overbearing government no matter how well intentioned the motives.

The same result can be better achieved by the marketplace. Passenger IDs voluntarily issued by the airlines could be counterfeit-proof, and loss or theft of an ID could be immediately reported to the proper authorities. An ID, fingerprints, birth certificates, or any other information can be required without any violations of anyone’s personal liberty.

This delicate information would not be placed in the hands of the Government agents, but could be made available to law enforcement officers, like any other information obtained with probable cause in a search warrant.

The heat of the moment has prompted calls by some of our officials for great sacrifice of our liberties and privacy. This poses great danger to our way of life and will provide little help against our enemy.

Efforts of this sort will only punish the innocent and have no effect on a would-be-terrorist. We should be careful not to do something just to do something, even something harmful.

Mr. Speaker, I fear that some big mistakes could be made in pursuit of our enemies if we do not proceed with

September 25, 2001

CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE

Mr. Speaker, I fear that some big mistakes could be made in pursuit of our enemies if we do not proceed with great caution, wisdom, and deliberation. Action is necessary. Inaction is unacceptable.

No doubt others recognize the difficulty in targeting such an elusive enemy. This is why the principle behind the marque and reprisal must be given serious consideration. In retaliation, an unintended consequence of a policy of wanton destruction without benefit of reason could result in the overthrow of moderate Arab nations by the radicals that support bin Laden. This will not serve our interests and will surely exacerbate the threat to all Americans.

As we search for a solution to the mess we are in, it behooves us to look at how John F. Kennedy handled the Cuban crisis in 1962. Personally, that crisis led to a 5-year tour in the U.S. Air Force for me. As horrible and dangerous as the present crisis is, those of us that lived through such very tense moments that October realized we were on the brink of a worldwide nuclear holocaust.

That crisis represented the greatest potential danger to the world in all of human history. President Kennedy held firm and stood up to the Soviets as he should have and the confrontation was resolved. What was not known at the time was the reassessment of our foreign policy that placed nuclear missiles in the Soviet's back yard in Turkey. These missiles were quietly removed a few months later, and the world became a safer place in which to live. Eventually we won the Cold War without starting World War III.

Our enemy today, as formidable as he is, cannot compare to the armed might of the Soviet Union in the fall of 1962. Wisdom and caution on Kennedy's part in dealing with the crisis was indeed a profile in courage. But his courage was not only in his standing up to the Soviets, but his willingness to reexamine our nuclear missile presence in Turkey which, if it had been known at the time, would have been condemned as an act of cowardice.

President Bush now has the challenge to do something equally courageous and wise. This is necessary if we expect to avert a catastrophic World War III. When the President asks for patience as he and his advisors deliberate seek a course of action, all Americans should surely heed this request.

Mr. Speaker, I support President Bush and voted for the authority and the money to carry out his responsibilities to defend this country. But the degree of death and destruction and the consequences of escalation must be carefully taken into consideration.

It is, though, only with sadness that I reflect on the support, the dollars, the troops, the weapons and training provided by U.S. taxpayers that are now being used against us. Logic should tell us that intervening in all the wars of the world has been detrimental to our own self-interest and should be reconsidered.

The efforts of a small minority in Congress to avoid this confrontation by voting for the foreign policy of George Washington, John Adams, and Thomas Jefferson and all the 19th century Presidents went unheeded.

The unwise policy of supporting so many militants who later became our sworn enemies makes little sense, whether it is bin Laden or Saddam Hussein. A policy designed to protect America is wise and frugal, and hopefully it will once again be considered.

George Washington, as we all know, advised strongly, as he departed his Presidency, that we should avoid all entangling alliances with foreign nations.

The call for a noninterventionist policy over the past year has fallen on deaf ears. My suggestions made here today will meet the same fate. Yet, if truth is spoken, ignoring it will not negate it. In that case, something will be lost. But if something is said to be true and it is not and it is ignored, nothing is lost. My goal is to contribute to the truth and to the security of this Nation.

What I have said today is different from what is said and accepted in Washington as conventional wisdom, but it is not in conflict with our history and our Constitution. It is a policy that has, whenever tried, generated more peace and prosperity than any other policy for dealing with foreign affairs. The authors of the Constitution clearly understood this. Since the light of truth shines brightest in the darkness of evil and ignorance, we should all strive to shine that light.

EVERY WEAPON IN ARSENAL NEEDED TO DEFEAT TERRORISM

The SPEAKER pro tempore (Mr. SIMPSON). Under the Speaker's announced policy of January 3, 2001, the gentleman from Colorado (Mr. TANCREDO) is recognized for 60 minutes.

Mr. TANCREDO. Mr. Speaker, during my comments tonight, I will refer to one phrase that I think is important to place on the minds of the people of this country, and that phrase is this: "The defense of the Nation starts with the defense of our borders."

Mr. Speaker, we have begun a massive buildup of forces as a result of the events of September 11. Indeed, the President has issued a call for units of the National Guard to be activated. Troops are being dispatched, planes, ships, all over the world. The President has asked that the Defense Department order to restrict the flow of capital so that we, hopefully, inhibit the ability of terrorists around the world in that particular capacity.

We have done a great deal to try to figure out how to make it more difficult for hijackers to take over planes. We have increased security at all of our airports. Recently, we ordered that even crop dusters would not be allowed to fly for fear that some sort of chemical agent might be introduced into the atmosphere. We have increased security around water facilities and power plants throughout the Nation for fear of some sort of, again, biological or chemical attack that might come in that direction.

We have, indeed, created a brand-new, will create a brand-new, cabinet level agency for homeland defense that I hope will do what is desperately needed to be done, and that is to coordinate the actions of all our agencies that are designed to provide some sort of defense for this Nation.

The President and the Secretary of State have been extremely successful up to this point in time in creating some sort of international coalition to help fight terrorism everywhere that it rears its ugly head. We have even talked about trying to tighten up on visas that are given to people who might have backgrounds that are suspicious, have terrorist connections, not allow them to either enter the United States, or if they are here, to be held perhaps even indefinitely.

All of these things are good, and I totally support them. They are all important. We were told today by a general in the Israeli Army at a briefing that was available to any Member, it was not classified, but it was, indeed, a fascinating discussion. We were told about the Israeli experience in dealing with terrorists for now well over 2 or 3 decades.

Mr. Speaker, one of the things that this particular general said was that it is imperative that we think about terrorism as a phenomenon, as a system. What he meant by that is it is global in nature. It is not anything like we have ever dealt with before; and, of course, we have heard many many, including the President of the United States in his address to the Nation just last week in a very articulate and incredibly compelling address to the Nation and the activities of all in a way, and a brand-new kind of war. The Israeli general that gave the briefing today was talking about the fact that low-intensity warfare, a minimum of power, it is not an appropriate approach.

Terrorism, he said, requires maximum power to be applied against it in order to be successful; and that because it is a systemic problem, you must treat it systematically or holistically, treat it in every way you can. Attack the problem every way you possibly can.

He suggested that we should look at terrorism as a cancer, as that just like any other cancer that invades the body, if it is attacked in a piecemeal way, even though several different kinds of approaches may be tried, it will eventually gain control and overcome the body, the host body. Therefore, it must be attacked with every single thing in one's arsenal.
Mr. Speaker, the President said from that podium just a few nights ago essentially the same thing. He said, we will use every weapon in our arsenal to defeat terrorism. Every weapon in the arsenal.

I refer again, however, to the phrase that I opened these comments with, that the defense of the Nation begins with the borders we have abandoned our borders, of making sure that we as a Nation, to the greatest extent possible, are able to determine who comes into the United States and for what reason and when they enter, and how many will come into the United States. This is what is referred to as an immigration policy. It is something we do not really have. It is something we have abandoned over the course of the last couple of decades.

And we have abandoned this policy, we have abandoned our borders, we have succumbed to the siren song of open borders, a phrase used so often by organizations like the Wall Street Journal and the Cato Institute and others, libertarians and liberals looking for votes from the massive number of immigrants that would come into the country and perhaps become part of a voting bloc that they could then take advantage of.

For all of these reasons, we have abandoned our borders for all intents and purposes. They do not really exist. No one believes that they are there in reality. They may be there on maps, but they are not there in reality, because if a border is important for determining who comes, how many and how long, then, of course, America is just this place on a map, not distinguishable by lines that separate it from any other country on the globe. That has been the desire of a great many people. Many industrialists, many members of the, quote, elitist establishment in this country, many of the biggest, the Fortune 500 companies, other individuals who employ cheap labor, illegal immigrants, because, of course, they can be hired cheaply, they can work cheaply, and they are frightened to turn their employers in for ill treatment, all of those people have formed a bloc over the course of the last couple of decades to destroy our borders.

And, Mr. Speaker, I suggest to you that one part of the result that we witnessed that came from this process, of the destruction of our borders, were the events of September 11. Every single person that we now know that was involved in the hijackings, in the suicide bombing, that is, turning the plane into a bomb and crashing it into the World Trade Center and the Pentagon and the other attempt that was made outside Pittsburgh, and I am told, I understand that now they believe that there were several other planes, there was a great possibility that the same thing had been planned but they were not, for whatever reason, accomplished. They were to accomplish their goals, but every one of the people that we know that were on those planes that took them over, that killed the airplane crew, members of the crew, that took over and crashed them, even those that were here on some sort of visa or were here illegally, and even the ones that were here on visas, we are not really sure exactly what kind.

We have written now, my office and other Members have asked the INS for clarification about the status of each one of these people. They sent me back a list of the names of every single one of them and the status of only two, two, they said, that were here on visas, one with a visa that had expired, essentially illegally.

It is now my understanding that every one of them were here on some sort of visa, but many of them were, in fact, here illegally because they had overstayed their visa or they were not living up to the obligations of the visa. But we did not care. Or we did not know. Or if we knew, we simply paid not attention to that particular problem, because, Mr. Speaker, we do not pay attention to the fact that there are millions, I say millions, of people in the United States who are here illegally. You know it. Everyone hearing my words knows that there are millions of people in the United States who are here illegally.

Now, I do not for a moment suggest that the vast majority of those people, or even a small percentage factually are involved with terrorist activity or are people that we should be concerned about because of the threat to the Nation. At least not a direct threat to the Nation. But I do suggest to you that the same thing had been planned to accomplish their goals, but every one of them. You notice that I left to the end any discussion about tightening up on visas, because the only thing I have seen so far as part of the administration's proposal to deal with terrorism that deals specifically with the issue of immigration is this aspect of tightening up on visas.

Mr. Speaker, let me suggest to you that although I completely and totally support that particular provision, the horses are out of the barn at that point in time. The people are already here. The task we have ahead of us, the task we must face, is the one that would prevent them from getting here, it is defending our borders. It is defending the sovereignty of this Nation. That is what we seek.

Mr. Speaker, it has been many, many hours that I have spent almost right here, at various podiums on this floor, cajoling, arguing, urging that I musters, of my colleagues to please join me in an attempt to make our borders secure. It has been a relatively lonely fight. I have been assailed by some of my colleagues. I have certainly been assailed by members of the general public, e-mails and letters and calls and that sort of thing. I have been called a racist, I have been called xenophic, I have been called a lot of things that I certainly do not want to repeat on the floor of the House. But I persist, Mr. Speaker, because I believe that this is the most important, one of the most significant issues with which this body can deal, and, that is, the determination of our own system of government, how long our system will survive. I really believe it has that kind of significance.

There are literally hundreds of reasons that I can bring forward to argue my case for lower immigration, for tightening our borders, for controlling our borders, I should say, for determining who comes in, and they certainly deal with just the simple issues of population growth, the pressure it puts on the infrastructure of the United States, of every community in the country, the costs that are involved, the economic costs involved, the cultural issues that come up when we balkanize America with different ideas about government and philosophies of life. All of those things we can confront.

And I certainly have done so from this floor. But they all pale in comparison to the importance of this issue that was brought home to us all in the most stark of manners, in the most horrendous proof I can possibly offer.
What can I say, Mr. Speaker, what can I possibly say on the floor of this House that could ever compare in terms of encouragement to do something about the control of immigration? What can I say or do that could ever compare with the events of September 11?

Mr. Speaker, if that does not help my colleagues come to some conclusion about something very simple, immigration, I do not know what else will. And there will still be libertarians who come to the floor as my dear friend did just before me here, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. PAUL), whom I respect immensely, on almost every issue I have been supportive of what he has tried to do, but I must admit I disagree with him wholeheartedly on the issue of, especially immigration controls and our policy now, the policy we should now adopt vis-a-vis the terrorists that reside in Afghanistan and, indeed, around the world.

But there will still be voices like the gentleman from Texas. There will still be voices like many of my colleagues on the other side tonight who fought against an amendment which, I might add, passed overwhelmingly, and which I was just amazed to see the number. It was an amendment by the gentleman from Ohio (Mr. TRAFICANT) that simply said that the Armed Forces of the United States could be employed, if requested by the Attorney General, could be employed in the protection of our borders.

Now, there were individuals who stood up and argued that, and there were 180, if I remember correctly, 180 some people who voted against it. Even in light of what has happened, 100 and some of our colleagues, I do not recall the exact number now, but well over 100 said, No, I don't think I would use the military on the border to protect our sovereignty and our nation.

And so you say to yourself, Mr. Speaker, my God, what does it take? What does it take? How many people in this country have to lose their lives before we come to the understanding that the defense of the Nation begins at the defense of our borders? All the other things we talk about are important, but, Mr. Speaker, nothing surpasses the importance of our borders and their integrity. That is why I will continue to raise this issue, as long as I have breath, anyway, and as long as I am a Member of this body, because I can think of nothing more important.

There are hundreds of issues with which I have been involved, I am confronted by them as you are, and every other day something new, a single day, important issues, and I say, I have got to do something about that, and we should do something about that. You want to go off in about 20 different directions, but always I am pulled back to this, always, I am grounded in this particular issue, because everything begins to come back to it, everything I hope to accomplish for the Nation, everything I hope to add my voice in defense of depends upon our ability as a Nation to control our own destiny. And to control our own destiny, we must control our own borders.

It is a world, Mr. Speaker, that has changed so dramatically in so many ways. There are intellectuals, I think, who would quickly point out to us, as a famous old reference to them, perhaps pseudo-intellectuals, effete snobs, there were a couple of other things that I can remember, people who pride themselves on talking about a brand new day dawning in the world, that it is really a world that should not be separated by borders, that there is really no purpose for borders anymore. Now, these things we did hear before September 11. I must admit, Mr. Speaker, I have not heard as much of that recently.

But we will begin as soon as things calm down a little bit. I assure you there will be; they will be out in force. They will be saying things like, we really do not need to defend our borders so much, so long as we go out there and we make sure we attack terrorism in other lands, that we root them out, as we have heard often. I am all for doing that, do not get me wrong. Draining the swamp, all those other things, absolutely need to be done. So they will suggest if we can just do that, somehow we do not have to have borders.

I refer back to the presentation and the little briefing that we had today by this particular Israeli gentleman, who again talked about the systemic approach to this; that you had to use every single thing in your arsenal. That it was not enough just to go out and find them, it had to be done, you will have to go outside of your borders and find the people who are trying to kill you, and you will have to kill them. You will have to disrupt their organization.

You will have to do all of that, Mr. Speaker, but you recognize, and we all recognize, the fact that Israel has another aspect of that core policy, that holistic approach, and that is they defend their borders. They defend their borders in every way they possibly can, using every kind of technology, low-tech and high-tech, barbed wire to electronic surveillance, they use it all to defend their borders.

Now, they have an easier task than we have, it is true, a smaller land mass, a more homogenous population. All of those things are true. It does not, however, excuse us from the responsibility.

What more are we to do here? What else is more important for us, Mr. Speaker? Is it the Department of Health and Human Services? Is it the Department of Natural Resources? Is it the Department of Transportation? I know I would encourage you to think about that one, Mr. Speaker. Is it the variety of things we do out there, that this Federal Government does, that we spend hundreds of billions of dollars every single year doing? Are all of those things as important as the protection of the life and property of the citizens of this Nation?

No, sir. In my opinion, my humble opinion, I think this is perhaps the most important thing that we do at this time, because is there anything more important, yes, even than the Department of Education. I know, there I have said it. The defense of the Nation, the security of the people of the Nation, yes, it is, Mr. Speaker, it is more important than all of the other things we do.

So I am not opposed to efforts to increase, in fact, I heartily support all efforts to increase the appropriations for our military. As I say, it is the most important thing we can do. But how can we compare in the process of war, can we ignore perhaps the most important aspect of that defense system? Where can we be expected to draw the line, so to-speak, if it is not at our borders?

Mr. Speaker, one of our colleagues, a very respected Member of this body, the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. SHAYS), he is also the chairman of one of the security committees of this Congress and has been a member of that committee for many years, I respect his observations. And I have seen him now on television and I have heard him on the radio in the past couple of days, and he has stated unequivocally that it is not a matter of if we are ever going to be confronted by biological or chemical or even nuclear attack by terrorists; it is indeed, he says, a matter of when.

Mr. Speaker, we are well aware of the fact that many countries, several countries anyway, that have already demonstrated their mastery of this particular form of warfare, that is, biological and chemical especially, Iraq, I refer to specifically, as it has used this particular weapon, biological weapons, against its own people, the Kurds, killed many thousands of them a few years ago.

We know that there are governments out there that have perfected these particular weapons. We know that those governments harbor terrorists. We know that those governments provide succor to terrorists, provide support; not just physical support, not just a place to live and some food on the table, but support of every kind and variety.

What makes us think for a moment, Mr. Speaker, that they have not provided them, or at least are not willing to provide them, with these other agents to carry out their dastardly deeds?

Now, I do not know if the gentleman from Connecticut (Mr. SHAYS) is right or wrong when he says it is a matter of when, not a matter of if we are confronted with this. I can certainly say that the odds are that we will be in some way, at some time, confront with that kind of a situation.

I pray to God that it will not happen and that we will do everything in our power to make sure that it does not, and that the same thing we can do. That is the other side. That is the thing I think about. We should not dwell on the inevitability so much of this particular kind of terror, but we should dwell on our ability to stop it.

There are many things we can do, and certainly finding the terrorists out there, that is number one. But how can we suggest for a moment, even a second, how can it be in anyone’s mind in this body, that as part of our defense, that we would not be the closure of our borders to anybody who is not well-known to us, anybody who we can determine is not a threat to this Nation’s survival? How can we not do it? If something were to happen, and that nature, and, again, I pray to God, of course, that it never does, but if it does, and if we have done nothing to increase our ability to protect our borders, then there is culpability here, because this is not, as they say, rocket science.

I do not suggest for a moment, Mr. Speaker, that if we did everything we possibly could, if we put troops on the border, if we reduced immigration dramatically so we could actually get a handle on it for a while, if we tightened up on INS regulations, if we found out where all of the people in the United States who are here illegally are and sent the INS there, that I am not able, of course, to promise that we would make ourselves immune to or impervious to or unable to be attacked in the way we have suggested. All I know is it is something we have to do.

To those who suggest that there are other options open to us that do not include controlling our own borders, I just say this: perhaps there are others, perhaps in times past there were others who said, look, let us explain to the Vandals in ancient Rome, or the Huns, that there is no reason to be all that upset to us; we will open our borders to them and let them in and just discuss it with them. We will just peacefully deal with it, because, really they are just all members of the human race, you know? The Nazis, the Japanese militarists, you could go on and on and on.

There were people here who said, I am sure, not many, thank heavens, but people who suggested that perhaps ably it is a way we could have just negotiated our way out of and around the Second World War, and any other war with which we have been involved, because, after all, they are just people, just like us.

What are their needs? How are they different from us? There are still people who say that, and I suggest that it is almost irrational. People who suggest that we should not care about who comes across our borders, are, to a certain extent, enlightened. Because I guarantee you this, Mr. Speaker: the American public, they do not feel that way. The vast majority of the American people believe in their heart of hearts in the very simple idea of controlling our own borders; and they are not heartless, cruel people, who just hate foreigners. No, they all recognize that all of our roots are from someplace else. Even if you call yourself a Native American, your ancestors, how far back, came across a land bridge from Siberia, from Asia.

So all of us are immigrants. That is not the issue. The issue is will we be able to control who comes for how long, and how many. Will we be able to do that? And the American people want us to do that.

There is only one way, of course, Mr. Speaker, that this body will ever move in the direction of helping for tonight, even though there was a great sign that things may have changed tonight with that vote on the Traficant amendment to put troops on the border. However, I am told that has not been taken out in the committee. Perhaps it is different tonight. Perhaps September 11 changed all of that. I certainly hope so.

I certainly hope that there were more people in this body who were voting for that amendment without the thought in mind that it would be taken out, and they could easily cast their vote and sort of cover their tracks. They say, well, if they had done that, they would have been knowing in their heart of hearts it will probably be taken out in committee.

I hope there were not many like that in our body. I hope the 250-odd people who voted for it tonight did so because they know what we are saying here tonight, that it is the duty, the responsibility, of every Nation on the face of the Earth, including our own, to defend our borders, and that in our case, because of the geographic problems that we confront, it will require perhaps a far stronger force than we have available to us tonight in the INS, and it may in fact require the positioning of Armed Forces on our borders. That is, of course, what the Armed Forces are trained to defend. If it is not an inappropriate use, it is an absolutely logical use of our Armed Forces, because it is very difficult for us to patrol the length of our borders. I understand that.

Mr. Speaker, there was an op-ed that was written by a gentleman by the name of Mark Krikorian who is with an organization called the Center for Immigration Studies. I am going to enter it in the RECORD and read it tonight as my final statement, because I believe that it encapsulates so much of what it is I am trying to say here this evening.

It stays, “As we consider our response to last week’s horrific attacks, we must be careful not to seek scapegoats among foreigners who live among us. But if immigrants in general are not the problem, a broken immigration system almost certainly is partly to blame. While much attention has been focused on the failure of intelligence and counterintelligence, a clear case could be made that we have failed to properly police our borders, borders being any place where foreign citizens enter the United States. It would be a grave error if we did not ask ourselves the fundamental question: How did these terrorists get in? Despite all the cant about globalization, borders are not irrelevant in today’s world, nor are they unenforceable. In fact, the need to secure them is more pressing than ever, given ease of travel, coupled with very real terrorist threats. “Most Americans understand that our border is not an obstacle to be overcome by travelers and businesses but, instead, a critical tool for protecting America from new threats. Unfortunately, much of America’s elite does not get it.”

“Most notorious among the cheerleaders for open borders have been libertarians such as the Cato Institute. The Wall Street Journal editorial board recently called for a 5-word amendment to the Constitution: ‘There shall be open borders.’”

I have not heard that recently from the Wall Street Journal. In fact, as an aside, I had a reporter from the Wall Street Journal call me the other day saying, has there been a change of attitude in Congress about immigration as a result of what has happened? I said, it is funny you should ask that question. I had exactly the same question for you. Has there been a change in the Wall Street Journal editorial board about immigration as a result of what happened on September 11? He just laughed and said, Well, you are not the first person to ask.

Back to Mr. Krikorian’s op-ed: ‘Even minimal borders to strengthen controls have been stymied. Congress in 1996 directed the Immigration and Naturalization Service to record arrivals and departures of foreigners at border crossings so as to identify people overstaying their visas. Business interests prompted Congress to postpone this requirement several times and ultimately to eliminate it. The personal safety and national security of our people seriously, we cannot continue to allow libertarian ideologues, immigration lawyers, cheap-labor business interests, and ethnic pressure groups to hobble our ability to manage our borders. What then, is to be done?”

“The Border Patrol, despite recent increases, remains almost laughably inadequate. At any given time, there are only about 1,700 agents patrolling the southern border, an average of less than 1 agent per mile, and the northern border is even less well defended.
"Establishing a computerized system to track entries and exits from the United States should not even be a subject of debate. There are no technological barriers, merely a lack of will and funding. What is more, the practice of requiring permanent residents who are not yet citizens to annually register their whereabouts with government, which was discontinued in the 1970s, should be resuscitated.

"The State Department's visa officers overseas need to be recognized as 'America's other Border Patrol.' Visa officers often have only 2 or 3 minutes to converse with an applicant, and are pressured to approve a high proportion of applicants to avoid offending the host country. The granting of visas should become a freestanding, well-funded function that people sign up for from the start, rather than today's dreaded right of passage for rookie Foreign Service officers.

"The very morning of the September 11 attack, the House was about to resuscitate a provision called 245(i), which allows applicants to receive green cards in the United States rather than in their home countries.

"Because personnel abroad are best equipped to screen applicants, 245(i) negates any efforts to keep out those judged to be ineligible.

"Finally, whatever one thinks about the level of immigration, a temporary reduction in legal immigration and the admission of temporary workers and students is essential to allow the overhaul of our immigration infrastructure.

"Did we hear that, Mr. Speaker? "A temporary reduction in legal immigration," and I will say a pause in all immigration; I want a pause. I will soon be introducing a bill to that effect. A pause, at least a 6-month pause, in all immigration into the United States, except for special circumstances, may be national defense-related issues. But other than that, let us stop it. Because we have an overhaul to do with our entire system. Let us let the Department, let us let our new Secretary for the Department of Homeland Defense determine how best to go back into the field and try to defend our borders. But let us call a pause or a halt to immigration for at least 6 months.

"Only by lightening the INS' load can the agency both process its huge backlog and strengthen border controls.

"Improved border and visa controls may not catch all malefactors, but it will help alert us to conspiracies such as last Tuesday's attacks. If only a dozen of the conspirators had been identified by consular officers during visa processing or border inspectors, it is very possible the entire conspiracy would have been unreacted. We have, of course, seen some home-grown terrorists as well, but there is no reason to neglect border control.

"We should not overreact by viscerating constitutional rights, including those of Muslim Americans, but an overhaul of our lax border controls is precisely the kind of reasonable reform that would make future attacks less likely and does not represent any threat to the civil liberties of American citizens. Americans are going to have to wait in longer lines at airports, and it is not too much to ask people entering into the country to do the same.

"Moreover, more foreign citizens may be denied visas.

"The measure of a successful immigration system is not how many people are allowed to enter and how fast, but rather whether the broad national interests of the United States are being served, including the safety of Americans.

"Mr. Krikorian is the executive director, as I say, for the Center for Immigration Studies here in Washington, D.C., and I commend his reading and his efforts, by the way, which I am sure one can go online and get. In fact, it is on here: http://www.cis.org. One can go on the Net and look into the Center for Immigration Studies and Work. They do great stuff.

"And the other thing, of course, everyone must do, Mr. Speaker, is to let their representatives in this body and in the other body know how they feel. Believe it or not, Mr. Speaker, believe it or not, there are still people in this body who are opposed to immigration reform, even after September 11; and there is only one way they are ever going to change their mind. There is only one way they are ever going to see the light and that, of course, is when they feel the heat.

EXPRESSING SENSE OF CONGRESS REGARDING ESTABLISHMENT OF NATIONAL CHARACTER COUNTS WEEK

SPEECH OF
HON. CONSTANCE A. MORELLA
OF MARYLAND
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Monday, September 24, 2001

Mrs. MORELLA. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of establishing a National Character Counts week. Developing strong character in our children today ensures the foundation of our Nation for the future.

Today's youth experience events that were unimaginable 40 or 50 years ago. Public scandals, violence by and against youth, and now for the first time in their lives they have seen a hatred for the character of our Nation. This exposure to negative influences threatens their physical and psychological well-being. Recognizing the importance of strength of character through this legislation can help us combat these negative influences.

I support funding character education and I am pleased that the reauthorizations of the Elementary and Secondary Education Act included language authorizing the Secretary of Education to make grants for the design and implementation of character education programs. Our youth deserve our support for developing the strength of character necessary to maintain a strong nation.

Maryland has been a shining example of the benefits character education programs bring to schools. Three Maryland schools have been recognized as National Schools of Character under the Character Education Partnership. In fact, these schools reduced the number of discipline referrals and suspensions, within a caring learning environment. Also, as a result of the program, student test scores and parent involvement in student education increased.

Character education programs help students identify and develop character traits that prepare them for life. Through trustworthiness, respect, responsibility, fairness, caring, citizenship, and honesty, our children can possess the tools for leadership. In addition, the programs recognize that character development does not necessarily begin at school, but rather at home with parents and family.

It is the responsibility of all adults to demonstrate good character traits to our young people. This includes faith communities, schools, and youth, civic, and human service organizations. All of us are responsible for the character and conduct of our young people because each of us reflects the values of our society.

Therefore, I urge all Members to support this legislation and encourage schools around the Nation to participate in character education programs, and our young people to become responsible citizens for today and tomorrow.

AIR TRANSPORTATION SAFETY AND SYSTEM STABILIZATION ACT

SPEECH OF
HON. ADAM SMITH OF WASHINGTON
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, September 21, 2001

Mr. SMITH of Washington. Mr. Speaker, it is with great disappointment that I vote against this legislation before us tonight.

The tragic events of September 11, 2001, have shocked and saddened all of us. In the weeks, months, and even years ahead, they will challenge us to fight for our freedoms and our values, and to figure out precisely how best to do that. As a Member of the U.S. Congress, representing not just the 650,000 people of my district, but the Nation as a whole, I want to do my part to decide what action must be taken and to constantly work with the people I represent so that their views and concerns can be heard, and so that I can keep them informed of the actions our Nation is taking and plans to take.

Last week, I voted to authorize necessary and appropriate force in response to the attacks, and I voted for $40 billion in emergency funding to assist the victims and fund the investigation. I looked forward to supporting a package that would keep America's economy strong, by providing assistance to the American airline industry, helping our workers, and improving safety so that Americans feel confident in our skies again.

I looked forward to doing all of this in a bipartisan way. I knew there are many differences of opinion in this body, even in times of great national emergency, regarding corporate liability, job training, federal control of aviation security, and other critically important issues, but I hoped that both sides would be able to give a little and compromise so that we could quickly put forth a package that would help heal the economic wounds that have been inflicted since September 11.

The leadership of both parties in both the House and the Senate and their staffs have worked tirelessly to put together a package that could garner bipartisan support and address all of these issues I've outlined, and I appreciate that. I believe this package in front of us tonight is nearly well-balanced enough because it doesn't address the worker concerns or safety concerns. I am opposing it because I think we need to go back to the drawing board and fix it. If it takes until tomorrow, or Monday, or Tuesday, we need to get this right.

This legislation provides $5 billion in direct aid to the airlines, $10 billion in loan guarantees to airlines, government aid with insurance for airlines, and caps the airlines' financial liability. I support all of these provisions.

However, I believe it would be irresponsible not to also address safety issues and employee issues. After all, we cannot have a strong and vibrant airline industry in this country without people who want to fly, and that will require both people who have money in their pockets to buy airline tickets, and a dramatic improvement in consumer confidence that will only come with real safety improvements.

This legislation will cost over $15 billion. I find it unbelievable that we could not find one dollar to cushion the blow for the workers who will be affected—by latest estimates, approximately 100,000 workers will be laid off as a direct result of the attacks on September 11. Bolstering the airline industry so that we can minimize these layoffs is imperative, but the sad truth is, even this $15 billion will not save very many of the jobs lost due to the terrorist attacks. Many workers in my district, who work at Boeing's 737 plant in Renton, fear a layoff notice as early as next month. I'm sure the thousands of Alaska Airlines and SeaTac Airport employees in my district are worried too. I have faith that the industry and the economy will recover, but that won't help with these workers' mortgage, electric bill, or car payment.

Right now, if a group of workers can prove that their job was lost due to trade, they are eligible for a series of benefits including job training and income support. Why can't we extend the same benefits for the thousands of workers who will lose their jobs and have trouble finding a new one right away? Can't we send just a few dollars to the men and women who will no longer fly the planes, sell the tickets, load the bags, attend to the passengers, or build the planes?

Before he passed away, my father was one of those men. He worked for thirty years as a ramp serviceman for United Airlines at SeaTac Airport, so I know firsthand how important these jobs are to Americans, and I can't imagine what my father would have said if, after this attack, Congress had passed a relief package that gave $15 billion to the airline industry and not a dollar for the thousands of workers who will be impacted within the next weeks.

Let me just say a few words about safety and security issues. I strongly support the U.S. airline industry, and I believe that we should, at this critical moment in history, stand behind them. However, I think we have to fairly and reasonably examine the events of September 11. Our current airport security system allowed four U.S. planes to be hijacked by men with knives, some of whom were on the terrorist watch list. It's safe to say that the airport security system failed us.

If we are passing legislation to improve the condition of the airline industry, shouldn't we also address this issue? Perhaps airport security should truly be a security issue, not merely a business issue that, until last week, was mostly considered in terms of a company's bottom line. Don't get me wrong—the bottom line is important to our capitalist economy, but I have come to the conclusion that airport security should not be subject to those concerns. There are many interesting ideas out there for how to improve it, but I believe first and foremost we need to make airport security a responsibility of the Federal Government: perhaps under the Department of Transportation, or the Coast Guard.

In conclusion, I want to again express my disappointment at having to oppose this bill. I sincerely hope that the President, Senate leaders, and House leaders will work to address these important concerns before a package is signed into law.

AIR TRANSPORTATION SAFETY AND SYSTEM STABILIZATION ACT

SPEECH OF
HON. C.L. "BUTCH" OTTER
OF IDAHO
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, September 21, 2001

Mr. OTTER. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to share with my colleagues and constituents my reasons for voting against H.R. 2926, the Air Transportation Safety and Stabilization Act. I believe it is important for every member to make known their thinking behind such an important vote.

The terrorist attacks on Sep. 11 devastated the American aviation industry. Hundreds of passengers, dozens of airline employees and thousands of innocent people on the ground died in the fiery crashes of the four airliners. America's commercial airlines were grounded for 3 days. Most of general aviation was grounded for more than a week, and some components of the general aviation industry remain grounded today. Insurers of aviation airlines are canceling their policies, and banks are refusing to extend loans to keep the system intact. Under these circumstances some form of assistance to the airline industry is essential for our economy and national security.

H.R. 2926, however, is the wrong form of relief. What should have been immediate relief from the effects of the attacks has become a golden parachute for the aviation industry, indemnifying many airlines from the effects of calamitous business decisions made long before Sep 11. In a time of tragedy for our nation and the world this Congress has failed to closely examine this bill.

The airline industry makes in at most $400 million a day. With a grounding of 3 days, and the continued closure of Reagan National Airport, the direct losses to the industry by government action can be calculated at roughly $2 billion. This act makes available cash in the amount of $4.5 billion for the passenger airlines, more than twice the direct losses of the airlines. Furthermore, this cash will be apportioned among the airlines, not according to how much revenue they lost because of the attacks, but how much capacity they had. This preference for available seat miles over revenue passenger miles can only benefit those carriers whose own bad business decisions before September 11 had left them with too much capacity and too little sales.

H.R. 2926 supposedly contained extra funding for security. The $3 billion authorized for security measures, however, has already been appropriated by Congress from the $40 billion emergency spending package, which I supported. To claim that this bill had any new funding for security is simply not true. Without needed security improvements it is impossible to see how airline traffic can return to normal levels. The bailout legislation should have waited for a security package in order to comprehensively deal with this situation.

H.R. 2926 would have been constitutional if it had been drafted as a focused bill to keep our airlines flying in the wake of the devastating attacks on our country. The creation of an entitlement fund, the overcompensation of the airlines, rewards for inefficient carriers, and lack of new funding for airline security all combined to make this a deeply flawed bill. For all of these reasons and more I voted against H.R. 2926 and urged my colleagues to do the same.

HONORING SERGEANT DANIEL P. O' bar
HON. SCOTT McINNIS
OF COLORADO
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, September 25, 2001

Mr. McINNIS. Mr. Speaker, to place your life in the line of duty day in and day out for the sake of others is an honorable and noble task, yet that is exactly what police officers do regularly. I would like to take the opportunity to recognize Sergeant Daniel P. O'Shea for his outstanding service to his community as a member of the Denver Police Department.

Sergeant Daniel P. O’Shea has been named one of America’s finest at the upcoming TOP COPS Awards ceremony. Officer O’Shea is one of only twenty officers to be honored at the ceremony. I’m proud to know that the State of Colorado is so well represented with Sergeant O’Shea being named in the top echelon of police officers across our entire nation.

Mr. Speaker, Sergeant Daniel P. O’Shea has acted with great professionalism in all that he has done. His top priority is the safety and protection of the people in his community. It is my pleasure to acknowledge Sergeant O’Shea’s accomplishments. He is a role model for all Colorado law officers and I wish him the warmest regards and best wishes in his continued service to his community.

EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

TO HONOR MR. RICHARD FIMBRES AS A RECIPIENT OF THE 12TH ANNUAL PROFILES OF SUCCESS HISPANIC LEADERSHIP AWARD

HON. ED PASTOR
OF ARIZONA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, September 25, 2001

Mr. PASTOR. Mr. Speaker, I rise before you today to recognize a special individual who was honored for his leadership qualities and service to his community. On September 5th, Mr. Richard G. Fimbres was honored by his peers at the Annual Profiles of Success Hispanic Leadership Awards presentation in Phoenix, Arizona. This event, coordinated by Valle del Sol, a local non-profit community based organization, kicks off National Hispanic Heritage Month in Arizona and is now in its twelfth year of honoring worthy individuals.

Honored in the category of Exemplary Leadership, Mr. Fimbres, of Tucson, Arizona, has recognized for his work as a community leader. He serves as a board member of Pima Community College, which helped to raise funds for the Hispanic Student Endowment Fund, create the Amigos de Pima, and partnered with the League of United Latin American Citizens (LULAC) to create and fund a year-round program to assist young students with their reading skills. He is dedicated to various organizations such as LULAC, the Metropolitan Education Commission, the Knights of Columbus, and the Tucson Pima Arts Council. He also devotes his time to serving on the State’s Behavioral Health Planning Council, Arizona Supreme Courts Juvenile Detention Advisory Committee and the University of Arizona’s Diversity Action Council.

Mr. Fimbres’ standing as a community leader is evident by his commitment to these organizations and countless hours of volunteer work throughout the community. Mr. Speaker, I ask you to join me in recognizing this outstanding citizen and community leader for his fine work and dedication.

SPEECH BY U.N. SECRETARY GENERAL KOFIG ANN

HON. JOHN M. SPRATT, JR.
OF SOUTH CAROLINA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, September 25, 2001

Mr. SPRATT. Mr. Speaker, as the Congress continues to move forward following the horrific and tragic events of September 11, 2001, I would like to insert for the Record a recent and I think timely speech given by United Nations Secretary General Kofi Annan.

Mr. Annan’s speech is about the contributions and vision of former U.N. Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjöld. While the speech was given on September 6th, five days before the attacks, I believe it provides for interesting reading as we examine our notions of international security and multi-lateral cooperation.
DAG HAMMARSKJOLD AND THE 21ST CENTURY

(By Kofi Annan)

As Secretary-General of the United Nations, I have to give many speeches, and even quite a few I can think of as invitations to speak that is a greater honour, or a greater challenge, than this one.

It will not surprise you to hear that Dag Hammarskjöld is a figure of great importance for me. He must be for any Secretary-General. His life and his death, his words and his action, have done more to shape public expectations of the office, and indeed of the United Nations, than the case of any other man or woman in its history.

His wisdom and his modesty, his unimpeachable integrity and single-minded devotion to duty, have set a standard for all servants of the international community—and especially, of course for his successors—which is simply impossible to live up to. There can be no better rule of thumb for a Secretary-General than a simple approach to each new challenge or crisis, than to ask himself, “how would Hammarskjöld have handled this?”

If that is true for any Secretary-General, how much more so for one of my generation, who came of age during the years when Hammarskjöld personified the United Nations, and began my own career in the UN system within a year of his death.

And how much more true, also, for one who has the special relationship that I do with this, his home country?

So you see, it is quite a solemn thing for me to give this speech, especially so close to the 40th anniversary of Hammarskjöld’s death. And I feel all the more solemn about this coming here, as I do, directly from the part of Africa where he met that death—and where, 40 years later, the United Nations is again struggling to help restore unity and peace to the Democratic Republic of Congo.

I can tell you that the Congolese have never forgotten Hag Hammarskjöld. Four days ago, during my visit to the Congo, I met with representatives of the parties involved in the Inter-Congolese Dialogue. Their spokesman began the meeting by telling me how much they appreciated the late Secretary-General’s dedication, and the fact that he gave his life for peace in their country. And he asked us to pay tribute to Hammarskjöld’s memory by observing a minute of silence. I found it very moving that people could feel like that about him after 40 years.

In Zambia, too—which, as you know, was where he actually died—Hammarskjöld’s death is commemorated annually. The Zambian government, together with your own and with the United Nations system, has launched an impressive “Hammarskjöld Programme” that includes a programme to educate young Africans as “messengers of peace”, as well as a Centre for Peace, Good Governance and Human Rights. There could be no better way to commemorate him than by promoting these ideals, which he held so dear.

If Dag Hammarskjöld were to walk through that door now, and ask me what are the main problems the United Nations is dealing with today, I could easily answer in a way that would make him think nothing much had changed.

I could talk to him not only about the Congo, but about the Middle East, or Cyprus, or the relations between India and Pakistan, and it would all seem very familiar.

But I could also tell him things that he would find very unfamiliar—though some would surprise him less than others, and some would gratify him more than others.

He would probably be relieved, but not surprised, to hear that China is now represented at the United Nations by the government that actually governs the vast majority of Chinese people.

It would surprise him much more to learn that the Soviet Union no longer exists. But he could only be pleased to find that there is now a more peaceful and realistic difference between the permanent members of the Security Council.

He might be struck by the number of conflicts the United Nations is dealing with today that are within, rather than between, States—though the experience of the Congo would have prepared him for this—and also by the number of regional organisations that have developed as partners for the UN in different parts of the world.

I feel sure, in any case, that he would be pleased to see the way United Nations peacekeeping has developed, from the model that he and Lester Pearson so brilliantly improved upon in 1956 to something much more diverse and complex, which is often more accurately described as “peacebuilding”.

And I imagine he would be equally impressed by the wide range of issues that the United Nations is now called upon to face outside the traditional security arena—from climate change to HIV/AIDS.

He would be gratified, and perhaps not all that surprised, to hear that human rights and democracy are now generally accepted as world norms—though he might well be distressed to see how far, in many countries, the practice still falls short of the rhetoric.

He would definitely be distressed to learn that, within the last decade, genocide had again disfigured the face of humanity—and that well over a billion people today are living in extreme poverty. I think he would see the recurrence of the former, and putting an end to the latter, as the most urgent tasks confronting us in this new century.

He would no doubt be impressed by the speed and intensity of modern communications, and by the constantly confused talk of faxes and sat-phones—let alone e-mails and the Internet. But I’m sure he would be quick to grasp the advantages and disadvantages of these innovations, both for civilisation as a whole and for the conduct of diplomacy in particular.

What is clear is that his core ideas remain highly relevant in this new international context. The challenge for us is to see how they can be adapted to take account of it.

One of the ideas that would impress Hammarskjöld was his belief that the United Nations had to be a “dynamically international” body, which its Members would collectively “develop forms of executive authority”.

During his time in office he became increasingly sensitive to the fact that some Member States did not share this vision, but regarded the United Nations as only “a statute book, with the aim of resolving conflicts of interests and ideologies with a view to peaceful coexistence”.

In the Introduction to his last Annual Report—a magisterial work, which reads almost as if he was conversely writing his political testament—Hammarskjöld argued that those who regarded the Organization in this way were not paying adequate attention to certain essential principles of the Charter.

He showed that the Charter clearly implies the existence of “an international community, for which the Organization is an instrument and an expression”. The overriding purpose of this community is succeeding generations from the scourge of war, and to do this it had to follow certain key principles.

These were:

First, “equal political rights”—which encompassed both the “sovereign equality” of all Member States, in Article 2 of the Charter, and “respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms”, in Article 1.

Second, “equal economic opportunities”—spelt out in Article 55 as the promotion of “higher standards of living, full employment, and conditions of economic and social progress and development, as well as ‘measures of international economic, social, health, and related problems’”.

Third, “justice”—by which he meant that the international community must be “based… on law and justice through which law and justice could be made to apply”.

And finally the prohibition of the use of armed force, “save in the common interest”.

These principles, Hammarskjöld argued, are incompatible with the idea of the United Nations as merely a conference or debating chamber—as indeed is the authority the Charter gives to its principal organs, and particularly to the Security Council, which clearly has both legislative and executive powers.

The context in which he put forward these arguments was, of course, the Cold War, and particularly the Soviet campaign against him during the Congo crisis of 1960-61.

That campaign is happily long past. But we still face, from time to time, attempts by Member States to reduce the United Nations to a “conference mechanism”.

Those attempts no longer come systematically from one particular ideological camp. Instead they tend to vary according to the subject under discussion.

Broadly speaking, industrialised countries remain reluctant to see the United Nations act on Hammarskjöld’s second principle—the promotion of “equal economic opportunities”. And the governments of some other countries are equally loath to see it actively promote “respect for, and observance of, human rights and fundamental freedoms for all”.

In both cases, I believe the Secretary-General has no choice. He has to follow in the footsteps of Hammarskjöld, upholding the right and duty of the United Nations to pursue the aims laid down for it by the Charter.

Of course there is always a need for negotiation and discussion on the appropriate forms of action. But the United Nations will only be able to do its duty to the world’s people, who are the ultimate source of its authority, if it allows itself to be reduced to a mere “static conference”, whether on economic and social rights or on civil and political ones.

The saying applies to Hammarskjöld’s exalted view of the “international civil servant”, which he also pursued in that last annual report, and in a lecture given that same summer at Oxford University.

His argument here was that the people charged with carrying out the executive functions of the United Nations could not be neutral in relation to the principles of the Charter. Nor could they be regarded, or allowed to regard themselves, as nominees or representatives of their own nations. They had to represent the international community as a whole.

Here too, Hammarskjöld based his argument on a very careful reading of the Charter itself—in this case Articles 100 and 101. Article 100 forbids the Secretary-General or any of his representatives to seek or receive instructions from States, and Article 101 prescribes “the highest standards of efficiency, competence, and integrity” as “the paramount consideration in the employment of the staff.”

Once again, Hammarskjöld was arguing in the context of the Cold War, in which first one side and then the other had tried to insist on the right to be represented, within the Secretariat, by people who were loyal to its political or ideological point of view.

Again, the context has changed, and I am glad to say that States today, while extremely sensitive to their national interests, do not point to senior positions, no longer seek—or at least, not in the same way—to exercise political control over them, once appointed. But the principle of an independent international civil service, to which Hammarskjöld was so attached, remains as important as ever. Each successive Secretary-General must be vigilant in defending it, even if, on occasion, changing times require us to depart from the letter of his views, in order to preserve the spirit.

To give just one example: Hammarskjöld insisted that the United Nations should have permanent appointments and expect to spend their whole career with the Organisation.

That may have been appropriate in his time. It is less so now that the role of the United Nations has expanded, and more than half of our employees are serving in missions in the field. This is a development which Hammarskjöld would surely have welcomed, since it reflects a transition from the “static conference” model to the “dynamic instrument” model which he so strongly believed in.

But what is clear is that his ideal of the United Nations as an expression of the international community, whose staff carry out decisions taken by States collectively rather than bending to the will of any one of them, is just as relevant in our times as in his.

And that, of course, has very important implications for the role of the Secretary-General himself.

Hammarskjöld pointed out that Article 99 of the Charter—which allows the Secretary-General, on his own initiative, to bring matters to the Security Council’s attention when in his view they may threaten the maintenance of international peace and security—makes him clearly a political rather than a purely administrative official.

In practice, successive Secretaries-General, including Hammarskjöld, have invoked this article very sparingly. I myself have never yet found it necessary to do so. But the fact that the Secretary-General has this power clearly affects the way he is treated by the Security Council, and by the Member States in general.

Few people now question the responsibility of the Secretary-General to act politically, or to make public pronouncements on political issues.

In fact, the boot today is if anything on the other foot: I find myself called on to make official statements on almost everything that happens in the world, from reports on marriages to the possibility of human cloning!

I do my best to satisfy this demand with due regard to the purposes of the Security Council and General Assembly. But those bodies would find it very strange if on each occasion I sought their approval before opening my mouth.

Their members can, and do, take exception to some of my statements—and thank goodness they do. There must be freedom of speech for governments, as well as for international officials! But they do not question my right to make such statements, according to my own understanding of the purposes and principles of the United Nations as set out in the Charter.

No doubt Dag Hammarskjöld would also disagree with some of the specific positions I have taken. But I suspect he would envy me the discretion I enjoy in deciding what to say. And I have no doubt he would strongly endorse the principle that the Secretary-General must strive to make himself an authentic and independent voice of the international community.

What he might not have foreseen is the way our concept of the community has developed in recent years. In his time it was essentially a community of separate nations or peoples, for whom all practical purposes were represented by States.

So if we go back to the things about today’s world that we would have to explain to him, if he unexpectedly joined us now, probably the most difficult for him to adjust to would be the sheer complexity of a world in which individuals and groups of all kinds are constantly interacting—across frontiers and across oceans, economically, socially and culturally—without expecting or receiving any permission, or a lone assistance, from their national governments.

He might well find it difficult to identify the precise role, in such a world, of a body like the United Nations, whose Charter presupposes the division of the world into sovereign and equal States, and in which the peoples of the world are represented essentially by their governments.

He might find that difficult—and if so, he would not be alone! But I am convinced he would relish the challenge. And I am sure he would not stray from his fundamental conviction that the essential task of the United Nations is to protect the weak against the strong.

In the long term, the vitality and viability of the Organization depend on its ability to perform that task by adapting itself to changing realities. That, I believe, is the biggest test it faces in the new century.

How would Hammarskjöld approach that task?

First of all he would insist, quite correctly, that States are still the main holders of political authority in the world, and are likely to remain so. Indeed, the more democratic they become—the more genuinely representative they become—the greater also will be their political legitimacy. And therefore it is entirely proper, as well as inevitable, that they will remain the political masters of the United Nations.

He would also insist, I am sure, on the continuing responsibility of States to maintain international order—and, indeed, on their collective responsibility, which their leaders solemnly recognised in last year’s Millennium Declaration, “to uproot the poisons of human dignity, equality and equity at the global level”.

And he might well say that, with a few hundred exceptions, the more fortunate countries in this world are not living up to that responsibility, so long as they do not fulfill their long-standing commitments to much higher levels of development assistance, to much more generous debt relief, and to duty- and quota-free access for exports from the least developed countries.

But then he would also see that his own lifetime coincided, in most countries, with the high watermark of State control over the lives of citizens. And he would see that States today generally tax and spend a smaller proportion of their citizens’ wealth than they did 40 years ago.

From this he might well conclude that we should not rely exclusively on State action to achieve our objectives on the international level, either.

A great deal, he would think, is likely to depend on non-State actors in the system—private companies, voluntary agencies or pressure groups, philanthropic foundations, universities, and think tanks, and, of course, creative individuals.

And that thought would surely feed into his reflection on the role of the United Nations.

Can it confine itself, in the 21st century, to the role of coordinating action by States? Or should it reach out further?

Perhaps it is presumptuous of me to suggest that this would be part of Hammarskjöld’s vision of the role of the United Nations in the 21st century—because it is, of course, my own view.

No doubt if he were alive today he would offer us something nobler and more profound.

But I like to think, Ladies and Gentlemen, that what I have just described would find some place in it.

Thank you very much.
my district. I would like to congratulate Ms. Miller, who is celebrating 25 years of business in Chevy Chase and Bethesda, Maryland. A graduate of the University of Maryland, Ms. Miller and her family have lived in my district for generations. She has over 100 clients, and employs several people. Thanks to leaders like Ms. Miller, women entrepreneurs have made great strides in the business world. She serves as a role model for other women in the business community. On behalf of my colleagues, I would like to wish Ms. Garfield Miller many more successful years.

HON. ED BRYANT OF TENNESSEE

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, September 25, 2001

Mr. BRYANT. Mr. Speaker, yesterday I was inadvertently delayed getting back to Washington from my district, and as a result missed Rollcall votes 349 and 350. Had I been present, I would have voted “yea” on both votes. As an original co-sponsor of H.R. 717, I regret being unable to cast a vote in favor of this important legislation that will have a positive effect on those children who suffer from Duchenne muscular dystrophy.

HONORING HUBERT TABOR FOR HIS DEDICATED SERVICE

HON. SCOTT McINNIS
OF COLORADO

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, September 25, 2001

Mr. McINNIS. Mr. Speaker, to place your life in harms way in order to defend our Nation is indeed a noble and honorable action. Hubert Douglas Tabor dedicated himself by serving in World War II and is certainly worthy of the praise and admiration of this body. During the campaign in Northern Burma, Hubert placed his well-being before all else in order to ensure a victory for the Allies in that war-stricken area.

Hubert was raised on a farm in Colorado. Throughout his time there, he grew tired of horses and wished to escape from the farm life by signing up for the Army. However, after entering the Army, the Army recognized that Hubert possessed superior riding skills and was sent to Ft. Riley, Kansas to be a member of the 124th Cavalry. This unit was the last mounted cavalry in the Army and it was with the 124th that Hubert deservedly received his silver spurs due to his accomplishments in the service. Upon his relocation to Burma, his role was that of a packer.

The 124th Cavalry, teamed with the 56th Cavalry and the 613th Field Artillery Battalion, was charged with the duty of opening the Burma Road that was closed by the Japanese enemy’s flank. His friend was killed in the line of duty while Hubert survived, but not without debilitating injuries.

Due to his bravery and courage, Mr. Speaker, Hubert Tabor was awarded the Purple Heart and Bronze Star. This battle was brutal, but Hubert offered his patriotism to our country and fought for its sake in Burma. I would like to take this moment to recognize the incredible sacrifices that Hubert made for our country and thank him for his service to our Flag. Hubert helped to make our country great and I extend my warmest regards and best wishes to Hubert for many years to come.

TO HONOR MS. ELVIRA ORTIZ AS A RECIPIENT OF THE 12TH ANNUAL PROFILES OF SUCCESS HISPANIC LEADERSHIP AWARD

HON. ED PASTOR
OF ARIZONA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, September 25, 2001

Mr. PASTOR. Mr. Speaker, I rise before you today to recognize a special individual who was honored for her leadership qualities and service to her community. On September 5th, Ms. Elvira Ortiz was honored by her peers at the Annual Profiles of Success Hispanic Leadership Awards presentation in Phoenix, Arizona. This event, coordinated by Valle del Sol, a local non-profit community based organization, kicks off National Hispanic Heritage Month in Arizona and is now in its twelfth year of honoring worthy individuals.

Honored in the category of Exemplary Leadership, Ms. Ortiz, of Phoenix, Arizona, was recognized for her civic activism in raising awareness of the issues that Latinos face today. She has risen to her position as Publisher and Editor-in-Chief at Ashland Media from humble beginnings, immigrating to this country from Mexico nearly twenty years ago, and has played an active role in addressing many civic issues. She was the co-founder of Cambio Magazine, a magazine addressing Latino issues in Arizona, and continues to work with Alma de la Gente’s Mexican Independence Day to replicate and promote the traditions and culture of Mexican-Americans.

Mr. Speaker, please join me in honoring Ms. Ortiz, who truly represents the determination of the new immigrant enriching this great country of ours with love and compassion for her family, community and profession.

THE BROWNFIELDS REDEVELOPMENT ENHANCEMENT ACT OF 2001 (H.R. 2941)

HON. GARY G. MILLER
OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, September 25, 2001

Mr. GARY G. MILLER of California. Mr. Speaker, last Friday, I introduced the “Brownfields Redevelopment Enhancement Act of 2001 (H.R. 2941).” I would like to thank my colleagues U.S. Representative MALONEY, Chairman MIKE OXLEY and Chairwoman MARGE ROUKEMA for joining me in supporting this important measure.

The biggest barrier that cities and communities face when trying to acquire and redevelop contaminated “Brownfields” properties is their lack of access to adequate and affordable capital to carry out critical activities including site assessment, remediation planning, cleanup and initial redevelopment activities.

This legislation is designed to facilitate the provision of assistance by the Department of Housing and Urban Development for the cleanup and economic development of Brownfields.

For nearly 25 years, HUD’s Section 108 Loan Guarantee program has encouraged local economic development by giving cities access to the up-front financing needed for key site preparation and infrastructure projects that make an area ready for revitalization. This bill would, in essence, improve the ability of local governments to use HUD’s Section 108 Loan Guarantee program and the Brownfields Economic Development Initiative (BEDI) program to address Brownfields projects by recognizing one of the new realities of the redevelopment process—that environmental evaluation and cleanup activities have become a necessary part of the process for reusing old, often abandoned sites, and that the public sector frequently must jump start that process.

This legislation will modify HUD’s existing Section 108 Loan Guarantee program to make it a more flexible and usable tool for Brownfields projects and provide BEDI grant funding in a more flexible form.

First, it authorizes, for the first time ever, appropriations specifically for the BEDI program, to clarify through the conventional authorization and appropriation process that Brownfields redevelopment assistance is a congressional priority. The authorization of such sums as may be necessary is for fiscal years 2002-4. This 3-year authorization would result in need for authorization after 3 years and prompt a timely congressional re-examination of the need for such funding and funding levels.

Second, it establishes the BEDI program as an independent program by separating it from the requirement that local governments obtain Section 108 loan guarantees in order to obtain BEDI grant funding. While Congress has funded the BEDI program at a level of $25 million annually since FY 1998, the program has existed solely as a line item in appropriations.
This “de-linking” of BEEDI funding from the Section 108 program will help to improve its visibility as a key source of Federal funds to trigger Brownfields redevelopment activities. Additionally, it establishes the BEEDI program as an independent program by separating it from the section 108 (q) economic development initiative program as a new section 123 of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974.

Third, it increases the allowable guarantee limit for Section 108-backed loans used in conjunction with Brownfields activities—cities and states could access an additional five times their annual entitlement for Brownfields cleanup and redevelopment. This provision will provide smaller communities with the opportunity to assemble a capital pool of sufficient size to cover the costs of Brownfields site preparation. It also gives cities more practical options to pursue Brownfields reuse strategies—for example, to acquire and clean up sites themselves, and assemble them into tracts that best fit markets and uses they have identified. The increase in the allowable guarantee limit for section 108-backed loans for Brownfields activities applies only prospectively to obligations guaranteed after the date of the enactment of the legislation.

Fourth, it promotes Section 108 Loan Guarantee Brownfields activities by better addressing the developmental realities of this type of real estate development. This will be achieved by clearly identifying Brownfields redevelopment activities as eligible activities under the Section 108 program, thereby enabling the loan funds to be used for a wider range of activities that support Brownfields reuse. It also encourages communities to identify and coordinate other public and private funding sources for Brownfields projects by allowing them to count as leverage in terms of award criteria.

Fifth, it implements HUD’s Community Empowerment Fund (CEF) Pilot program. The CEF Pilot is designed to use the Section 108 Loan Guarantee program in combination with the Economic Development Initiative (EDI) grant program. It is noteworthy that several years ago, HUD issued a Notice of Funding Availability (NOFA) and guidelines, but failed to implement the CEF Pilot program. The CEF Pilot is designed to mitigate or even eliminate the risk of loss to a community’s CDBG program inherent in making business loans funded by the Section 108 Loan Guarantee program. The CEF Pilot combines modern private sector financial engineering with privatization of much of the administration of business loans. The EDI grants are to provide a pooled cash loan reserve to cushion against losses resulting from defaults on business loans funded through the Section 108 Loan Guarantee program and reducing the risk to the community’s CDBG program.

Sixth, and finally, it directs HUD to undertake a comprehensive study of Brownfields redevelopment issues on a nationwide basis. While Brownfields redevelopment has become a critical community and economic development issue over the past five years, it seems that there has not been a thorough Federal ef-

PAYING TRIBUTE TO WILLIAM ADAMS

HON. SCOTT McINNIS
OF COLORADO
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, September 25, 2001

Mr. McINNIS. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take a moment to honor the bravery and military service of William Adams, a great American who currently resides in Montrose, Colorado. William Adams learned very important lessons about life and death when he was faced with the challenges of self-preservation and patriotism in the South Pacific during WWII.

At the young age of nineteen, William Adams, along with the rest of his advance landing unit of the 4th Marines landed on Saipan. There he struggled through one of the bloodiest campaigns his division had seen and finally took control of the small island. By the end of the battle, 3,400 American soldiers had lost their lives. William managed to survive several other battles including the invasions at Tarawa and Tinian. He finished his tours in the South Pacific having been wounded three times and being awarded the Purple Heart and the Bronze Star. William is a proud servant of his nation, exemplified by several accounts of bravery including putting his own life on the line to rescue a fellow soldier.

William is no longer the young man who landed the many shores of the Pacific Theater to defend freedom and liberty in the United States. Amidst all of the violence and death, William Adams returned to the United States although many of his friends did not. William now lives a peaceful life as a resident of Colorado but the sacrifices he made while serving our nation will never be forgotten. Mr. Adams fought selflessly for the ideals and protection of all Americans. He helped to ensure that our freedoms and way of life would live on. It is my pleasure to honor William Adams for the great sacrifices that he has made and assure him that his countrymen are grateful for his service.

SMALL BUSINESS TECHNOLOGY TRANSFER PROGRAM REAUTHORIZATION ACT OF 2001

SPEECH OF
HON. CONSTANCE A. MORELLA
OF MARYLAND
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Monday, September 24, 2001

Mrs. MORELLA. Mr. Speaker, I rise today in support of reauthorizing the Small Business Technology Transfer (STTR) Program. Continuing this program will encourage the development of small businesses and help strengthen our economy.

I have been a long time supporter of this program. It helps small businesses, including minority and women owned businesses, to participate in the research and development of new technologies. Various businesses in my district have benefitted from the STTR program as they work with the many research institutions and federal agencies located in the Washington region.

The STTR program has been successful since the launch of its pilot program in 1992. This success was recognized as funding for the pilot program was twice reauthorized in 1994 and 1996. Now, we can make this a permanent program and encourage participating agencies to implement outreach programs to small businesses and research institutions that will enhance the STTR program. The STTR program has helped small businesses benefit the economy by encouraging technology innovations and job creation. This program has been credited for promoting collaborative efforts in research and development. Under this program, small businesses are exposed to the scientific knowledge available at our nation’s research institutions. In addition, the STTR program moves academic theories from research institutes to viable commercial use that benefit our nation and the world.
September 25, 2001

Furthermore, in a recent GAO report that examined 102 projects under the STTR program, companies and research institutions indicated that they felt both contributed significantly to the research and development of new technologies. Their collaborative effort contributed to the construction and testing of prototypes and in providing equipment and facilities. Most of these projects were successful. For those projects that were discontinued, companies indicated insufficient funding for further technical development as a basis for terminating their projects.

This piece of legislation encourages the continued viability of the STTR program. The legislation increases the percentage of the extramural budget required to be expended by agencies participating in the program from 0.15 percent to 0.3 percent. The permanent nature of the program is acknowledged by striking the word 'pilot' as previously used to describe the program. Also, the amount a small business can receive under a Phase II award increases from $500,000 to $750,000, in line with the Phase II awards of the Small Business Innovative Research (SBIR) program.

In addition, the legislation requires participating Federal agencies to collect and maintain information. This will allow for a quick oversight of the program's progress. Also, the information would be kept in similar databases that agencies have already created to monitor the SBIR program.

By passing this legislation we will endorse a program that has been successful since 1992. The STTR program will ensure that the partnership between research institutions and small businesses, which adapts research technologies for commercial use, continues till at least 2008.

Therefore, I urge all members to support this legislation that encourages the development of small businesses and the continued cooperation between federal agencies and small businesses in the research and development of new technologies that benefit the nation.

GENE AUTRY DAY FESTIVAL IN TIoga, TX

HON. RALPH M. HALL
OF TEXAS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, September 25, 2001

Mr. HALL of Texas. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to announce the first annual Gene Autry Day Festival this weekend, September 28 and 29, 2001, in Tioga, Texas, in the Fourth Congressional District. Tioga is Gene Autry's hometown, and I join all those in Tioga and Grayson County, as well as friends and admirers throughout the Nation, in celebrating the life of this legendary American.

Gene Autry was born on a ranch near Tioga, Texas, on September 29, 1907, to Delbert and Elnora Autry. Gene's grandfather, William T. Autry, was a Baptist preacher who taught Gene to sing when he was five years old. At the age of twelve, Gene bought his first guitar from a Sears and Roebuck catalog for eight dollars. In his autobiography, Back in the Saddle Again, Gene noted that by his fifteenth birthday he was comfortable singing and performing before audiences at school and around his hometown.

At a young age, Gene began working as a telegraph operator at the old Tioga railroad depot, where he reportedly sang and played for local townsfolk and passengers on the railroad. By the late 1920s, Gene was working as a telegrapher for the railroad in Oklahoma. While singing and playing in the office one night, Gene was discovered by the great cowboy humorist, Will Rogers, who recommended that he try performing on the radio. And thus began a career that would span more than 60 years in the entertainment industry and that would bring fame and fortune to this young man from Tioga, Texas.

Gene Autry was successful in radio, recordings, motion pictures, television, rodeo, and live performances. He is the only entertainer to have five stars on Hollywood's Walk of Fame—one each for radio, records, film, television, and live theatrical performance, including rodeo. Gene appeared in 94 feature films and made 635 recordings, over 300 of which he wrote or co-wrote. Some of his best known movies are based on his hit records, including South of the Border and Back in the Saddle. He sold over 60 million records, including more than a dozen gold records and two platinum records, Here Comes Santa Claus and Peter Cottontail. Another record, Rudolph the Red-Nosed Reindeer, remains the second best selling single of all time, with sales totaling more than 30 million. From 1950 to 1955 Gene produced and starred in The Gene Autry Show and produced other popular television series as well.

In addition to his success in the entertainment industry, Gene was successful pursuing another passion—a love of baseball. In 1961 he purchased the American League's California Angels (now the Anaheim Angels) and held the title of Vice President of the American League until his death in 1998.

Gene Autry was always proud of his hometown, Tioga, and he would have been honored by this Festival and by the efforts of local citizens in memory of him. Proceeds from activities associated with the Gene Autry Day Festival will be used to build a Tioga Heritage Museum featuring Gene Autry, and to benefit Boys & Girls Clubs through United Way of Grayson County. Mr. Speaker, I want to commend the citizens of Tioga for planning this tribute to their hometown hero and to a legendary American whose contributions to our culture will long be remembered and appreciated—the late, great Gene Autry.

CHILLING INDICATORS OF THE TERRORIST ATTACK

HON. CLIFF STEARNS
OF FLORIDA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, September 25, 2001

Mr. STEARNS. Mr. Speaker, in the events that have followed the tragic attack on our Nation, we have seen a flurry of activity in both responding to the attack, and attempting to uncover the network, financing, and planning behind the attack. Though I believe our law enforcement and intelligence agencies understand and are closing the apparent gaps that may have aided the terrorist's ability to launch the attack on September 11, there is a recent piece in the September 21 edition of Washington Times that gave me pause.

The Inside the Beltway column titled "Signs in Cyberspace" alleged that indications of the impending attack might have existed in certain registered domain names, recently expired, on the Internet. Some of the domain names quoted in the article were: worldtradetowerattack.com; nycterrorismstrike.com; pearlharborinmanhattan.com; and terrorismattack2001.com.

It is indeed chilling that no one appears to have taken notice until it was too late. Mr. Speaker, I am hopeful that our federal agencies, along with Congress, continue to take a hard look at where our intelligence system failed and make the difficult and necessary decisions.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

HON. JIM DeMINT
OF SOUTH CAROLINA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, September 25, 2001

Mr. DeMINT. Mr. Speaker, on September 24, 2001, I missed rollcall vote No. 349 and rollcall vote No. 350 due to a delay in my flight. Had I been present, I would have voted "yes" on H.R. 717 and "yes" on H.J. Res. 65.

IN RECOGNITION OF SISTER JOAN MCKEE FOR HER 50 YEARS OF SERVICE TO THE SISTERS OF CHARITY

HON. ROBERT MENENDEZ
OF NEW JERSEY
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, September 25, 2001

Mr. MENENDEZ. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize Sister Joan McKee, who, on Sunday, September 30, 2001, will be honored at a special ceremony for her 50 years of service to the Sisters of Charity organization. The Sisters of Charity organization assists in ensuring adequate access to quality social services and educational opportunities for the poor and disadvantaged. The ceremony honoring Sister McKee will take place at Saint Joseph's Church in Jersey City, New Jersey. A native of Jersey City, New Jersey, Sister McKee is a graduate of St. Mary's Elementary School and St. Dominic's Academy. Throughout her career, she has demonstrated a remarkable ability to assist those in need. As a schoolteacher and school administrator for 50 years, she has instructed and counseled thousands of poor and underprivileged students in the Jersey City school system. Countess school children throughout Jersey City have prospered and excelled academically under Sister McKee's guidance and supervision.

Later this year, Sister McKee will officially retire as Principal of Saint Joseph's Elementary School in Jersey City. During her years as Principal of Saint Joseph's, she has implemented and coordinated several education initiatives that have fostered and enhanced the intellectual and learning capabilities of Jersey City students. Sister McKee's 22 years as Principal of Saint Joseph's ranks as one of the longest tenures for a school administrator in Hudson County history.

Outside of her teaching and administration obligations, Sister McKee has served as an essential contributor to the viability and successes of the Jersey City community. She has actively participated in projects dedicated to assisting disadvantaged women get back on their feet. In addition, she has donated her time to projects dedicated to providing quality social services to the needy.

Today, I ask my colleagues to join me in honoring Sister Joan McKee for her tireless work on behalf of the community of Jersey City, New Jersey.

VERMONT HIGH SCHOOL STUDENT CONGRESSIONAL TOWN MEETING

HON. BERNARD SANDERS
OF VERMONT
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, September 25, 2001

Mr. SANDERS. Mr. Speaker, today I recognize the outstanding work done by participants in my Student Congressional Town Meeting held this summer. These participants were part of a group of high school students from around Vermont who testified about the concerns they have as teenagers, and about what they would like to see government do regarding these concerns.

I am asking that these statements be printed in the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, as I believe that the views of these young persons will benefit my colleagues.

RECORDING NAPSTER (By Hydie Buchanan)

I am here today to talk about whether it is right to shut down Napster over the record companies' feeling it infringes on the copyrights of artists.

This case first started in April 1999 when the recording industry brought a lawsuit against Napster, saying that Napster violated copyrighted material. Since then, just recently, district courts ruled that Napster has to put blocks on copyrighted material, which Napster has complied with.

However, although it is against Napster's file-sharing rules to change file names to get around the copyrighted blocks, people change a song, they add letters or numbers to the file name, and therefore it can pass the block. And although Napster says that they will warn people and then kick them off the Napster community, there is over 500,000 users, so it is kind of hard to keep track of them all.

It's not that many artists are intimidated by Napster. Many artists actually support Napster. It is the recording industry that thinks they are losing profits, when, in all reality, profits were up in 1999 because of Napster.

I have a few quotes to share about artists who support Napster. Dave Matthews Band, in July 2000, said: "There are a lot of bigger problems in the world than whether Napster succeeds or fails. I don't think there is a malice coming out of Napster. We allowed people to tape our concerts from the beginning, and the record company questioned us about allowing that."

My thinking was that it only makes people want to buy more, and increases the devo- tion of people who are really going to listen to us." Which, in this case, shows that he supports Napster because it promotes the music, not takes away profits, but actually increases them.

Another quote: "We're not afraid of the Internet. We think it is a very cool way to reach our fans. If a band sells 12 million albums, what are we supposed to say? 'Oh, maybe we could have sold 13 million if we had just been Internet Nazi.'"

"At a certain point you have to say, Let the people have the music."

Dexter Holland, from Offspring: "Many of the bands that support Napster are maybe not the biggest bands, like boy bands, the popular music of today." A lot of people think that Napster doesn't infringe on copyrights, and it really doesn't. Napster does not copy the whole album. The people that are on Napster, they're the ones that create the MP3s, either from the program that they downloaded off the Internet or burning the ripping the CD onto their hard drive. So, really, it's not Napster. They just created a community where people can swap every- thing, and that is not necessarily so wrong.

A lot of people that use Napster use it as a way to find out more about an artist. Like, say they hear one song on the radio and they want to hear more about the band before they go out and buy the CD. So that's actually helping the profits. So, really, the recording industry has a lot to gain by Napster.

Another reason why Abenakis lack the academics is because of courses in teaching, rather than what normal students are supposed to take, show that 19 percent of tenth grade Native Americans met the reading and knowledge interpretation. This means that 81 percent can't read a one-to-two-paragraph passage and understand and interpret what they have read.

In mathematical skills, the test shows that American Indians fall 52 percent below standards. Only 14 percent meet the standards, which is really low. The difficulty is with fractions, multiplying, et cetera. What that means is they have difficulty with ba- sis, other than that what normal students would be able to do.

Continuing, I would like to talk about why this is happening. Abenakis are a majority of my school, and like 60 percent fall below standards. And I don't see why that should be happening. If Abenakis aren't meeting standards now, then how do they expect to go to college, get a degree, and have a good life? That means that many people, Abenakis, would be lower in poverty, wouldn't be able to support their families, and it is just going to keep happening over and over again.

This has been happening for years and years, and I feel that it should have been changed long ago. What are the reasons that this is happening? Racism, maybe. It has been in society for years, and people have never will have. And, in 1931, Vermont had a sterilization law, and it remained until 1973. The effects of the survey were loss of pride, dignity, and loss of heritage. Many students today that are Abenakis either don't know it or they don't know about their heritage, because it has been lost, because of the atrocities survey. If someone can't be proud of who they are or who they come from, then how do they expect to show pridefulness in everything that they do?

Another reason why Abenakis lack the academics is because of courses in teaching at my school, students feel separated and intimidated at school. People are put in certain classes and special groups where they feel like they're not intelligent enough. They don't have the right people to be around them, where they will feel that they fit in with all these topics.

I would like to talk about how we can make things better. There will be core-plus classes next year, which means that our school is trying core-plus classes. Whether you are an honor student or an applied student, you are going to be in the same class. That could start issues with honor students being bored or people being rushed into things.

Mr. Barnett, a teacher at my school, he tries to teach reading and writing in all of his classes. He tries to help students improving the skills that they need in everyday life. And he is one of the many at my school that are trying to change. But I think you need the whole school to help make a difference, or it’s not going to—it’s not going to have an effect.

Another way that you could make things better is through volunteer work. My family and I help out at a learning center. It is the Abenaki Learning Center in Swanton. Four days a week, we help kids with homework, and we try and help them understand the basics of what they're working on when they get into high school. We open kids to Native American arts and crafts, and we do cooking with them.

And I feel that, if you are Abenaki or if you are not, you should know a little about the background of the Abenakis, and try and pass it on to more people. Because, as the years go by, more and more people are forgetting, and they're losing everything.

I feel that these things will help the Abenakis, and even other races of our school. Like I said, you need everybody to work together, not just a few here and there.

I want to thank you for inviting me here to speak on a topic that concerns me greatly. And I think that one day the Abenakis will earn their pride back.

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, September 25, 2001

Mr. McNINNS. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take a moment to recognize the efforts made by Mr. Ron Borski on behalf of all war veterans of the great State of Colorado. Mr. Borski single-handedly started a campaign to create a veterans memorial in Carbondale, Colorado. After fourteen months of maneuvering his way through the state legislature, he has succeeded in his mission.

A resolution was adopted by the state legislature on April 17, 2001 to rename the Highway 133 Bridge in Carbondale. On Memorial Day, it has become tradition that veterans throw a wreath from the bridge in remembrance of soldiers whose lives were lost in battle. This “Veterans Memorial Bridge,” seems an appropriate tribute. Due to Mr. Borski’s noble efforts there will be a formal dedication ceremony for the renaming of the bridge on November 11, 2001. A monument will also be dedicated at the Scenic Overlook off of Highway 82, which looks out to the bridge.

Mr. Speaker, this project was the vision of one man who worked tirelessly in the name of all veterans. He undertook this mission on his own and saw it through to the end. I would like to recognize Ron Borski for his commitment to such a worthwhile cause. The State of Colorado and veterans across the country appreciate Ron’s contribution.

CHILDREN’S VISION AWARENESS DAY

HON. ROBERT T. MATSUI
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, September 25, 2001

Mr. MATSUI. Mr. Speaker, I rise today, in honor of Children’s Vision Awareness Day, Vision Services Plan, which is headquartered in Sacramento, California, has joined forces with several non-profit organizations to develop the Sight for Students program. This charitable program is designed specifically to help children in need of vital eyecare services. I ask my colleagues to join me in support of Vision Services Plan and their tireless work and determination to bring proper vision care to our nation’s underprivileged children.

Whereas, our children represent the future of this great nation and deserve every opportunity to succeed in the classroom, at play and in life in general;

Whereas according to the United States Center for Health Statistics, only 14 percent of children in the United States under the age of 6 receive an eye exam;

Whereas vision problems affect one in four school-age children, according to Prevent Blindness America;

Whereas untreated eye problems can affect learning ability, adjustment in school, athletic ability and self-esteem;

Whereas Vision Services Plan which has their headquarters in Sacramento, California has a Sight for Student’s Program to help low-income, uninsured children obtain the proper vision care that they so greatly need;

Whereas the Sight for Students program covers the cost of an eye examination and glasses or medically necessary contact lenses as well as vision therapy and treatment;

Whereas numerous community agencies, such as America’s Promise, Prevent Blindness America, Head Start, the Boys and Girls Clubs of America and Communities in School, have joined forces with Vision Services Plan to address this issue;

Whereas these many partners have come together to hold vision awareness events across the country on September 26, 2001, National Children’s Vision Awareness Day.

Since 1997 Vision Services Plan and the Sight for Students program have provided free eye exams and eyewear to nearly 90,000 children across the nation who would not otherwise have access to these services. I applaud their efforts and I am proud to lend my support to this program.
CRIMINAL ALIEN VISA DENIAL ACT OF 2001

HON. CHRISTOPHER SHAYS
OF CONNECTICUT
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, September 25, 2001

Mr. SHAYS. Mr. Speaker, today I am introducing the Criminal Alien Visa Denial Act of 2001 to ensure the State Department and Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS) have access to U.S. criminal databases before they let aliens into the country.

The State Department and INS currently lack the ability to access the FBI’s National Criminal Information Center’s Interstate Identification Index (NCIC–III) database. That means an alien can come into our country, commit a crime, leave, and get a reentry visa from our State Department or cross the border without being stopped.

There is evidence this has already happened. Between 1998 and 1999, serial killer Angel Maturino Resendiz, the “Texas Railroad Killer,” a Mexican with a lengthy criminal record in the United States, was allowed to cross the border because the INS didn’t know he had a record. And when he got here, he killed at least six people before his capture. And just last week, we heard unconfirmed reports one of the terrorist hijackers may have been allowed to cross the Canadian border even though he too had a criminal record in the United States.

Strengthening national security, particularly border security, against dispersed but deadly criminals and terrorists requires interagency cooperation and coordination on an unprecedented scale. Data matches between federal agencies today are often the product of good luck and the happenstance of personal relationships. The modern threat demands a more systematic collection and dissemination of the information needed to identify suspects or prevent known criminals from entering the United States.

The gap in data-sharing between Departments is no longer simply a matter of bureaucratic inertia, but a threat to national security. In 1996, the FBI and State Department issued a joint report recommending the State Department receive limited access to the NCIC–III database so the State Department could better identify aliens with a criminal record in our country, and prevent their entry. Nevertheless, for four years this report lay dormant while the Departments could not find a mutually agreeable way to institute their recommendations. The language in this bill should meet with the approval of both the Justice and State Departments.

Last year the House Committee on Government Reform’s Subcommittee on National Security, Veterans Affairs, and International Relations, began a series of meetings and briefings to discuss data-sharing. On July 24th of this year, the Subcommittee held a hearing on the effects of Federal Interagency Data Sharing and National Security. That hearing taught us effective border security begins with our embassies, where U.S. visas are issued.

EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

HON. HOWARD COBLE
OF NORTH CAROLINA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, September 25, 2001

Mr. COBLE. Mr. Speaker, on October 7, 2001, the Sixth District of North Carolina will be celebrating with Cane Creek Friends Meeting its 250th anniversary. The Cane Creek Friends Meeting opened its doors for worship for the first time in 1751, when George Washington was just 19 years old.

The Cane Creek Friends Meeting is a Quaker Church that opened to serve 30 families. These families desired a place to worship near to their homes. It was two women, Abigail Pike and Rachel Wright, with some others, who traveled some 200 miles to the governing body of the Friends in Perquimans, North Carolina, to secure permission for the establishment of the Cane Creek Meeting. As you may have realized, this all happened before our great country had a Constitution or even its first President. Cane Creek Friends Meeting has witnessed every event in our proud history.

During the first 13 years of the Meeting’s existence, it was located on a parcel of land, which was a part of the original grant of John Stanfield. Since 1764, Cane Creek Friends Meeting has been located on a 26-acre site donated by William Marshall.

The Meeting’s Sesquicentennial Committee, has planned and carried out several projects to celebrate this remarkable anniversary. Some of these projects include the publication of a pictorial history book, the design and stitching of a heritage quilt, and the construction of a memorial garden at the Meetinghouse.

Cane Creek Friends Meeting places a strong emphasis and takes great pride in its belief regarding the equality of women. Over the years there have been several female ministers, beginning with Abigail Pike in 1751. Furthermore, the Meeting prides itself on the fact that it has conducted many educational programs for children in the area.

Through the years, Quakers have had a very important input into the development of this country. Many elected officials have been Quakers. Indeed, despite the fact that I am a Presbyterian, I went to school at Guildford College in North Carolina, which is a Quaker institution, so Quakers have affected my upbringing and education as well.

On behalf of the Sixth District of North Carolina, I would like to wish Cane Creek Friends Meeting our congratulations on reaching this historic and momentous anniversary. Only a very small number of organizations in this country can claim to have been operating for 250 years. It is a truly remarkable achievement.

HONORING THE FRIENDS OF THE OPERA OF MICHIGAN ON THE OCCASION OF THE INAUGURAL OPERA PERFORMANCE AT THE FORD COMMUNITY AND PERFORMING ARTS CENTER

HON. JOHN D. DINGELL
OF MICHIGAN
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, September 25, 2001

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to congratulate the Friends of the Opera of Michigan as they celebrate the opening of the city of Dearborn’s wonderful new Ford Community and Performing Arts Center. The Friends of the Opera will christen this impressive new facility with its first opera on September 22, 2001. A performance of Verdi’s Messa da Requiem has been chosen for this inaugural event. An impressive cast of international artists directed by the Friends of the Opera’s own Quinto Milito will showcase their talents to an appreciative audience in Dearborn.

Additionally, a statue of Verdi will be unveiled at the opening. Verdi stands as a monumental figure in Italian opera and his compositions are greatly admired by the large Italian-American population in Dearborn, the communities of Downriver and throughout metropolitan Detroit. We are blessed to have such a fine facility and such extraordinary talent available to us here in Dearborn.

I am pleased to extend my best wishes to the Friends of the Opera of Michigan and to the Ford Community and Performing Arts Center for many years of beautiful performances.

HONORING THE FAMILIES OF AMERICAN SOLDIERS WHO FELL IN ACADEMY ATTACKS

HON. BILL SHUSTER
OF PENNSYLVANIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, September 25, 2001

Mr. SHUSTER. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to bring this great chamber’s attention to a sermon I recently heard at Zion Lutheran Church in Hollidaysburg, Pennsylvania. I fully believe that there is a message in the sermon for all of us to learn. There are many people across the United States of American who are continuing to deal with the effects of the recent deadly terrorist attack on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon. I believe this sermon may help those people deal with this tragedy.

THINGS TO KEEP IN MIND

(By Pastor Carol Custead)

The scene is etched in our minds. It entered over our television screens in the safety and comfort of our homes, schools, and places of work; and it left us feeling vulnerable and shaken. The scene seemed surreal; a beautiful blue September sky over Manhattan, those magnificent human-made towers of the World Trade Center gleaming in the sunshine, with a jet airliner in the background—and then, suddenly we realized that that God is at work healing and restoring goodness and order to our world. This can be seen through the many actions of good people following the attacks. Even though the forces of hatred and evil have entered our minds, so have the countless scenes of heroism, bravery, mercy, kindness, compassion and goodness as the American people and people across the world have come to the aid of those directly affected. We must keep these scenes before us and remember them. We must dwell on the goodness and not on the evil so that evil will not win the day. Look, then, at what so many evil people are working even in the midst of this enormous tragedy. The world community is coming together in a common bond against the evil. The people of this huge nation are coming together like a close knit family to face the task of grieving and healing and getting on with our lives, knowing that if we stop living while they are killing, we may be helping the terrorists they wanted. The words of encouragement from the people of Oklahoma City to the people of New York and Washington D.C. were well stated: “Have hope. Life and goodness will return.” Yes, God is still in control.

Third, God is still our God. God is not some remote force out there that leaves us on our own in a desperate and broken world. He calls and gathers us into communities of faith where we can seek mutual comfort, assurance, and guidance. This week more than ever we can see why religion is not a private matter. We need these communities of faith. We need each other especially at times like this and God has not left us alone. We have the good resources of our faith—the faith that has been passed down over countless generations that have faced adversity. As the psalmist has written long ago, “God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble. . . . The Lord of hosts is with us, the God of Jacob is our stronghold.” (Psalm 46)

Finally, let me shift gears to answer a question that has been asked of both Pastor Scott and me this week. “Would it be the Christian response to retaliate?” While pacifistic Christians may answer “no”; our answer is deeply steeped in the theology of Martin Luther—and St. Augustine and others before him. It is the God-given vocation of good government to maintain order, peace, and safety so that civilization can function. Civilized society is based upon the free movement and gathering of people for work, for school, and for the basic production and exchange of goods and services. Terrorism undermines the basic function of civilization—the free and safe movement and gathering of people to do good works. The nations of this world do need to hold accountable and responsible those governments that allow these terrorists to function.

A look back in history makes this clear. When the Roman Empire fell, and when the Empire was no longer able to provide for the safe movement and gathering of people; the economy, education, and culture collapsed. Then, at the end of the 18th century, the Age of Reason began—that period when Barbarians ruled the forests and no one was safe to leave their homes.

Another example: What is some one was wandering the streets of this town and randomly shooting and killing innocent people? Would we not need the police to act to put an end to that so that we could safely leave our homes and go about our business again?

The situation we face in our world today is much the same only on a much larger scale. More than ever, today we exist in a global community or a global society. This means that all governments must participate in fulfilling the basic function of government that is to maintain the peace and order needed for civilization to function for the common good of all people. That is their God-given calling.

The nations of this world will need to come together to take action as best we can against this new illusive enemy of terrorism that has attacked not only America but all the world. We are not for the sake of vengeance or retribution, but for the sake of restoring safety, order and peace to our world. The very core of civilization has been threatened this week. The Christian response is not one of vengeance and retribution but one that will best restore order to our world—and that may only be possible in this broken world through military action. It is time for us to band together to turn our earnestly for clarity in this matter by our nation’s leaders, by all responsible and civilized national leaders of this world, and by the military. God help us! Amen.

NATIONAL DEFENSE AUTHORIZATION ACT FOR FISCAL YEAR 2002

SPEECH OF Hon. Loretta Sanchez of California

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

September 25, 2001

The House in Committee of the Whole House on the State of the Union had under consideration the bill (H.R. 2586) to authorize appropriations for fiscal year 2002 for military activities of the Department of Defense, to prescribe military personnel strengths for fiscal year 2002, and for other purposes:

Ms. SANCHEZ. Mr. Chairman, on September 25, 2001, during debate on the Defense Authorization bill for fiscal year 2002, H.R. 2586, I entered into a colloquy with Representative SKELTON regarding the Marine Corps Air Station Tustin. I have attached relevant correspondence between myself and the Department of the Navy which was inadvertently left out of the Record.

CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Hon. Duncan Holiday,
Deputy Assistant Secretary, Installations and Facilities, Department of the Navy, Washington, DC.

Dear Secretary Holiday: When you met with me and representatives of the Santa Ana Unified School District in my office on March 20, 2001 to discuss the Base Reuse Plan for Marine Corps Air Station (MCAS) Tustin, we discussed the local resolution of the City of Tustin’s failure to include public benefit conveyances to Santa Ana Unified and Rancho Santiago Community College District in its Base Reuse Plan. You assured me then, in your follow-up letter on March 26, 2001, that the Department of Navy would not convey MCAS property until the parties concerned come to an agreement on the allocation of land.

We also discussed the possibility that, in implementing any such agreement, the Record of Decision (ROD) for the Base Reuse Plan may be required to be amended, to substitute a public benefit conveyance to the Districts for the Navy's commercial development, or otherwise to accommodate a compromise among the City and the Districts. You stated in our meeting that such an amendment to the ROD would not create a significant problem for the Department of Navy. Furthermore, you stated that such a change may not even require an amendment to the ROD, but that if an amendment were required, that the Department of Navy could approve such an amendment to the ROD expeditiously and without undue delay.

Could you please affirm these statements to me by way of a short confirming letter? I would appreciate hearing from you by August 3rd, 2001. Thank you very much.

Sincerely,

LORETTA SANCHEZ,
Member of Congress.

DEPARTMENT OF THE NAVY,
OFFICE OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY,

Hon. LORETTA SANCHEZ,
House of Representatives,
Washington, DC.

DEAR CONGRESSWOMAN SANCHEZ: Thank you for your letter of July 19, 2001, regarding the need for local resolution of the reuse-related issues concerning the conveyance of Marine Corps Air Station Tustin to the Local Reuse Authority, the City of Tustin.

As you requested, I am re-affirming the statement I made to you in my letter of 26 March: The resolution of the issues surrounding the conveyance of MCAS Tustin property for educational needs is critical to any conveyance decision. This is why the Navy continues to encourage a local agreement addressing all requests for property for these requirements. The lack of an agreement on educational transfers seriously complicates any Navy decision to convey MCAS Tustin property.

Regarding the Record of Decision (ROD), we continue to believe that the final resolution of the issues between the City of Tustin and the Santa Ana Unified School District can be accommodated within the ROD as presently configured. If the two sides reach a solution that would materially affect the ROD, then Navy would have to reevaluate the issue.

As always, if I can be of any further assistance, please let me know.

Sincerely,

DUNCAN HOLADAY,
Deputy Assistant Secretary,
(Installations and Facilities).

CONGRESS OF THE UNITED STATES,
HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES,

Hon. DUNCAN HOLADAY,
Deputy Assistant Secretary of Defense, Installations and Facilities, Department of the Navy,
Washington, DC.

DEAR SECRETARY HOLADAY: Thank you for your letter of 3 August 2001 reaffirming that the Navy would not convey any Tustin MCAS property until the parties concerned come to an agreement on the allocation of land. I appreciate your prompt and helpful response. I write to again seek your assistance on another matter, directly relating to the Record of Decision (ROD).

In our meeting of 20 March 2001, you indicated to me that the following two potential compromise solutions to the impasse between the City of Tustin and the Santa Ana Unified/Rancho Santiago Community College District would not require an amendment to the ROD. Or, if an amendment would be necessary, that it could be approved expeditiously.

(1) A compromising swapping the zoning of approximately 40 acres of commercially-designated land within the Districts’ boundaries for 40 acres of educationally-designated land within the ‘Learning Village.’

(2) The re-designation of approximately 100 acres of commercially-designated property within the Districts’ boundaries to educational uses.

Your written confirmation of this would be very helpful relative to negotiations between the parties at this juncture and, for that reason, I ask that you please respond to my inquiry no later than August 14, 2001. Thank you, again, for your continued assistance with this difficult matter, and for your timely attention to this further request.

Sincerely,

LORETTA SANCHEZ,
Member of Congress.

DEPARTMENT OF THE NAVY,
OFFICE OF THE ASSISTANT SECRETARY,

Representative LORETTA SANCHEZ,
House of Representatives,
Washington, DC.

DEAR REPRESENTATIVE SANCHEZ: Thank you for your letter of August 7 inquiring about the Department of the Navy’s Record of Decision (ROD) regarding MCAS Tustin.

Let me assure you that the Department’s principal interest is that the parties directly involved—the City of Tustin, the Santa Ana Unified School District, and Rancho Santiago Community College—reach an agreement rapidly on how to allocate the land so that we may begin to transfer the property.

The potential effect of an agreement on the ROD should not stand in the way of the negotiations. The Department is prepared to work with you and the parties directly involved in doing so. It is not necessary to seek a new ROD, nor are there significant changes to the Area of Conveyance that would require an amendment to the ROD.

We will review any agreement to determine whether we need to amend the ROD; if that proves necessary, we will do so expeditiously. If I may be of further assistance, please let me know.

DEPARTMENT OF DEFENSE,
Serving as the Secretary of the Navy.

Mr. HOLADAY: I would like to turn to another legislative matter, in which I asked the Department of Defense, and particularly the Secretary of the Navy, for their assistance.

In the neighborhood of Tustin, California, there is a community called the Learning Village. It is an area that the City of Tustin has acquired for educational needs, and it is contiguous to MCAS Tustin. The Record of Decision for MCAS Tustin did not include the Learning Village.

There is a provision in the Record of Decision that provides for a local resolution of the property. The City of Tustin has asked for the local conveyance of the Learning Village property for educational purposes.

I have written to the Secretary of the Navy, inquiring whether he would accept such a request. I have also written to you, the Department of the Army, and you have been equally forthcoming.

I am writing to ask you to consider the request of the City of Tustin for the local conveyance of the Learning Village property for educational purposes. The Department of Defense is in the process of reviewing this request.

Sincerely,

LORETTA SANCHEZ,
Member of Congress.

proceed as smoothly as it has without the help of Farm Service Agency staff members brought in from all over the State of Oregon. These talented and committed individuals assisting the Klamath Falls office are: Lois Loop, Janice Knut, Chanda Miller, Kelsey Hanning, Toni Williams, Ilene Berry, Patti Anderson, Charley Newhouse, Alycia McCord, Marty Harris, Bret Harris, and Lee Go.

Delivering these urgently needed funds to Klamath Basin farmers in a fair, accurate, and efficient manner is a monumental task. What makes this effort even more remarkable is the fact that the program for disbursing the funds, designed by State Office Specialist Fred Ringler, does not require one dime in administrative fees for the Farm Service Agency.

Mr. Speaker, we should all take pride in this selfless group of federal workers whose tireless efforts have made the difference between despair and hope for so many of the farmers in the Klamath Basin. They truly represent the best of what our government stands for. Their hearts are guided by compassion and they have the personal commitment to do their job to the fullest, regardless of the extreme effort required. I offer them both my praise and my most sincere gratitude for caring for the farmers in the Klamath Basin who have faced such significant trials.

Many hurdles remain in the path of Klamath Basin farmers, and I am delighted that the Oregon Farm Service Agency will be working with us throughout the challenges that lie ahead.

TRIBUTE TO MARTIN STEWART NIEDERER

HON. ERIC CANTOR OF VIRGINIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, September 25, 2001

Mr. CANTOR. Mr. Speaker, I would like to take the opportunity today to pay tribute to Martin Stewart Niederer.

Martin Niederer was young, he was a hard worker, a loyal citizen, and represented the bright, young future of America—the next generation. Martin’s life was robbed from him, and from us, by the hand of terrorists—radical extremists, seeking to rule the world by instilling despair and spreading hatred. Henrico, and indeed the entire Richmond area, has experienced a great loss. Our entire community mourn along with Martin Niederer’s parents and his loved ones.

On Tuesday, September 11, 2001, a precious life was ripped from our midst. Martin Niederer forged his way as a leader—in his case, a leader in the center of the world’s economic capital. Sadly, Martin Niederer reported for work on September 11, as he always did, to Cantor Fitzgerald at the World Trade Center—only on that day, America was to become victim to a set of horrific terrorist atrocities. Martin was conducting the nation’s economic business, when he and the World Trade Center were attacked.

Because Mr. Niederer lived as a symbol of American greatness and success, he was attacked. Not because he, as an individual, was hated, but because he stood with his colleagues as a symbol of America’s prosperity and our democracy. We owe Martin Niederer for paying our price for freedom. We must forever honor his memory. Mr. Niederer’s memory will be honored as America secures its future, fights against a maniacal hatred of freedom and human rights, and continues to demonstrate strength.

AMERICAN HEROES AT PENTAGON FROM BAKERSFIELD AND KERN COUNTY

HON. WILLIAM M. THOMAS
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, September 25, 2001

Mr. THOMAS. Mr. Speaker, I rise to acknowledge the real contributions of many individuals from California’s 21st District to the relief effort because of the horrible tragedy on September 11, 2001. I am continually encouraged by the courageous and unselfish acts of our communities.

Yesterday, I visited a group of American heroes at the Pentagon. Over the past two weeks, a tireless and dedicated crew of II firefighters and Forest Service personnel from Bakersfield and Kern County in California has helped with the rescue and cleanup efforts at the Pentagon. Facing, long days of work in a stressful environment, they kept their resolve. The display of internal fortitude by these heroes serves as a great example of generosity and selflessness.

Soon, this talented and brave group returns home, and I would like to express my appreciation to Steve Gage, Kevan Hager, Nick Dunn, Ken Stevens, Bob Kinloff, Bob Lechtreck, Dean Clason, Pat Caprioli, Steve Shoemaker, Jim Scritchfield, and Dan Kleinman for all their hard work in assisting with the rescue and recovery efforts at the Pentagon. I would also like to thank their families for the sacrifices they also endured during these uncertain times.

I am extremely proud of these firefighters and our communities for the compassion shown to the victims of this horrific act of terrorism. The blood, sweat, and tears shed throughout our history in the quest for life, liberty, and pursuit of happiness have never been in vain. The certain the American people will rise to the occasion and triumph in these most trying of times. Together, there are no difficulties we cannot overcome as the greatest example of freedom and democracy in the world.

THE SAFE SKIES ACT OF 2001

HON. ANDER CRENshaw
OF FLORIDA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, September 25, 2001

Mr. CRENSHAW. Mr. Speaker, by now we are all aware of the events that took place on September 11th and the many actions that took place before the tragedy. One circumstance that I found troubling was many of the terrorists at the controls of the commercial airliners used in the attacks received training in our own flight training schools.

The United States attracts men and women from throughout the world looking to acquire the skills needed to pilot an aircraft. There are several factors that make the United States an ideal place to receive flight training: it is inexpensive to rent aircraft, fuel is reasonably priced, landing fees are nonexistent, and it is quick and easy to be accepted for flight training.

We have now witnessed firsthand the destruction that can be wrought when the skills acquired in our flight training schools are used for evil purposes. Currently, The Federal Aviation Administration does not require a background check of any type for individuals seeking civilian instruction to fly an airplane or helicopter in our nations’ skies.

In order to close this loophole, I have introduced the Safe Skies Act of 2001, which will require background checks of all those seeking civilian instruction to fly airplanes or helicopters. It is my hope that we can stop international and domestic terrorist groups from using innocent and necessary skills for purposes other than innocence and necessity. Mr. Speaker, I realize not all terrorist organizations are those that infiltrate our borders from the outside, but also threaten us domestically. For that reason, we must ensure that the best information from the FBI and CIA is used to comb all civilian aviation applicants’ history for criminal activity, espionage, or links to terrorist organizations.

The skies over this great land belong to its hard-working, law-abiding citizens. Let’s help ensure that it stays in their hands.

RECOGNIZING THE CIVILIAN CONSERVATION CORPS AND NATIONAL PUBLIC LANDS DAY

HON. GEORGE W. GEKAS
OF PENNSYLVANIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, September 25, 2001

Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize and honor the Civilian Conservation Corps on the occurrence of their upcoming 60th anniversary. This Saturday, ceremonies around the country will commemorate the work and sacrifice of the members of the Civilian Conservation Corps, these unsung heroes who built over 800 of America’s national and state parks. In addition to these ceremonies, volunteers will work to restore original CCC projects. The achievements and contributions of the CCC to our nation are still being realized nearly sixty years after the program ended. I also would like to recognize the efforts of thousands of volunteers who will devote their time on Saturday, September 29, 2001. These volunteers in National Public Lands Day, will put in a day of real work on projects ranging from trail construction and repair to habitat restoration and
EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

Mr. Speaker, it is clear that the CCC had a great impact not only on the lives of its members but on the country as a whole. It was a program that put men to work building roads, walls, bridges, parks and countless other projects at a time when other nations put their populations, equally touched by depression, into work building bombs, planes and tanks. The same bombs, planes and tanks that former CCC men would face in Europe and the Pacific. The CCC worked to pull the nation out of depression but it also unified the country for the trying times to come.

I urge every American to take the opportunity to find out about the CCC. Use the internet to look up the accomplishments of the CCC or take a trip to the Allegheny National Forest, Gifford Pinchot National Forest, Skyline Drive, the Appalachian Trail, the Pacific Crest Trail or any of the thousands of CCC sites to see the results of their commitment. Most importantly, seek out a person who served in the CCC. There are fewer every year and the knowledge and wisdom they possess is invaluable. Mr. Speaker, let us all recognize the CCC and its men for their contributions, and also recognize the volunteers of National Public Lands Day who are working to bring the accomplishments of the CCC to light.

HON. IKE SKELTON
OF MISSOURI

As you know, Mr. Speaker, the Civilian Conservation Corps was created in 1933 to fight the effects of the Great Depression and to put the unemployed to work building roads, bridges, parks and other public works. The CCC was a model for the New Deal and led to the creation of many other federal programs.

I want to recognize the CCC and its men for their contributions to our nation. The CCC was a great example of government action to help the American people during hard times.

HON. JOE BACA
OF CALIFORNIA

Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to Jonathan Y. Thomas, a former resident of Alameda County who has brought credit and distinction to his family.

Mr. Speaker, it is with great joy and personal pride that I give tribute to a great American, Margaret E. Ansley of San Bernardino, California on the occasion of her 100th birthday.

The history of one person can be a deep sea of history, as is the case with Margaret. Margaret was born in 1901 Norwalk, Connecticut. The daughter of Hungarian immigrants, Margaret grew up in Connecticut and moved to San Bernardino, California in 1926 with her husband Alex. Like many others of that simpler and more dedicated time, she commuted to work from Connecticut to New York City everyday. When she moved to California, Margaret and her sister Anne ran a grocery store in San Bernardino next to the Santa Fe Railroad. Unfortunately, in 1933 her husband Alex passed away from tuberculosis, but she remarried in 1936 to Howard Ansley. Together Margaret and Howard bought some land in Bloomington to grow grapefruits and raise a family. Since then, she has been a loving wife, active member of her parish, and a good citizen. Margaret and I attend St. Catherine of Sienna Catholic Church on Sundays. I’ve gotten to know this wonderful lady over the years and I can say without a doubt, Margaret is one of the most decent and fine examples of our community.

Margaret lives in the Inland Empire to this day. She is an active and distinguished California resident that has brought credit and distinction to her family. It is because of her legacy of commitment to our region and the value of hard work that she has demonstrated every day of her life, that I pay homage and tribute to this wonderful woman.

HON. STEPHEN HORN
OF CALIFORNIA

Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to Jonathan Y. Thomas, a former member of the Los Angeles Board of Harbor Commissioners and the Alameda Corridor Transportation Authority Governing Board.

Between 1994 and 2001, Mr. Thomas provided seven years of distinguished public service as a Port of Los Angeles representative to the public agency undertaking the Alameda Corridor, a rail cargo expressway critical to the movement of goods from the Ports of Los Angeles and Long Beach into the House will join me in wishing him all the best in his retirement.

HON. MARK T. LEVIN
OF MICHIGAN

Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to a man who has dedicated his life to public service. Mr. Thomas has been a respected leader in the Alameda Corridor Transportation Authority and has made significant contributions to the development of the Alameda Corridor Project.

Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to a man who has been a dedicated public servant for many years. Mr. Thomas has been a strong advocate for the Alameda Corridor Project and has worked tirelessly to ensure its successful completion.

I urge my colleagues to join me in paying tribute to Jonathan Y. Thomas for his dedication to public service and his contributions to our community.

HON. JOHN M. TAYLOR
OF CALIFORNIA

Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to a man who has been a dedicated public servant for many years. Mr. Thomas has been a strong advocate for the Alameda Corridor Project and has worked tirelessly to ensure its successful completion.

I urge my colleagues to join me in paying tribute to Jonathan Y. Thomas for his dedication to public service and his contributions to our community.
stream of commerce. At the time, the Corridor needed to develop a financing package, and given Mr. Thomas’ well-known expertise in public finance, he was appointed to the Governing Board specifically to develop the financing concept. Under his leadership, the Corridor took shape:

Utilizing his expertise, Mr. Thomas has played a vital role in developing a unique financing package for the Alameda Corridor. In fact, this package has become a model for other major public works projects across the country. Mr. Thomas was also instrumental in generating political support for the project when it was little more than a concept.

This body identified the Alameda Corridor as “a project of national significance” in 1995. The Ports of Long Beach and Los Angeles comprise our nation’s busiest port complex, and cargo volumes are projected to triple by the year 2020. The Alameda Corridor will link the ports to the transcontinental rail yards near downtown Los Angeles, creating a more efficient and timely way to distribute cargo into the stream of commerce, thus allowing our ports and our mainstream economy to maintain competitive advantages.

It is a testament to the distinguished service of Jonathan Y. Thomas that the Alameda Corridor is now in full-scale construction, on budget and on schedule to open in April, 2002. We owe a debt of gratitude for his dedicated service.

TRIBUTE TO EARL MIDDLETON
HON. JAMES E. CLYBURN
OF SOUTH CAROLINA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, September 25, 2001

Mr. CLYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to Mr. Earl Middleton of South Carolina, who was recently named Orangeburg South Carolina’s Citizen of the Year. Mr. Middleton is recognized for his noteworthy contributions to the community as a successful realtor, businessman, political history-maker, and respected citizen of South Carolina.

Along with having served the country during World War II as one of the Tuskegee Airmen, Mr. Middleton has displayed incredible service to his church and college. After returning to his hometown after his service during World War II, Mr. Middleton embarked on a career in business and politics. His hope was that through his career he could overcome the social inequalities that faced him as an African American during that time.

In 1974, he became the first African-American to represent Orangeburg County in the South Carolina State House of Representatives since the Post Reconstruction Era. He would go on to serve in the legislature for 10 years.

Mr. Middleton worked as a barber and an insurance salesperson while contributing his time and effort toward various social causes and political campaigns. Later, his business grew to include real estate sales. In 1985 his real estate business, Middleton Agency, would grow to include a franchise of Coldwell Bank-

Mr. Speaker, I rise today in honoring my good friend and confidant, Earl Middleton for the dedicated service he has provided to the citizens of South Carolina and the noteworthy contributions he has made in the real estate business.

Mr. Speaker, I ask you and my colleagues to join me today in honoring Mr. Middleton for his service to the country and to the state. I congratulate him on his recent recognition as Orangeburg’s Citizen of the Year and truly wish him good luck and Godspeed in all of his future endeavors.

TRIBUTE TO LISTON RAMSEY
HON. CHARLES H. TAYLOR
OF NORTH CAROLINA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, September 25, 2001

Mr. TAYLOR of North Carolina. Mr. Speaker, I rise to honor the memory of the Honorable Liston B. Ramsey, a resident of the Eleventh Congressional District of North Carolina, who died on September 2, 2001.

Rep. Ramsey served nineteen terms as a Democrat in the North Carolina State House of Representatives, including an unprecedented eight years as Speaker of the House. Liston Ramsey put Western North Carolina on the political map and used his influence in the legislature, for the benefit of his constituents.

Rep. Liston Ramsey was first elected to the legislature from Madison County in 1961. In those days, before the interstate highway system served our region, legislators from Western North Carolina faced an eight-hour drive from the mountains across the state to Raleigh. Liston Ramsey faithfully made that trip for years in order to be a voice and a force for the mountain region.

In rankings by the North Carolina Center for Public Policy Research, Rep. Ramsey consistently ranked as one of the most powerful legislators in the state. Ramsey ranked as the most powerful lawmaker during his four terms as speaker, was eleventh in 1989, twelfth in 1991, ninth in 1993, twenty-third in 1995, and twentieth in 1997.

Among projects that Rep. Ramsey played a key role in funding for Western North Carolina were: Haywood Community College; Southwestern Community College; Western Carolina University; UNC-Asheville; the North Carolina Arboretum; the Western North Carolina Farmers’ Market; and countless roads.

I know all my colleagues join me in expressing condolences to his family members: daughter Martha Louise and her husband, Robert Donald Banks of Marshall; two sisters, Marie Prichard and Grace Castelloe, both of Asheville; one stepsister, Edna Sprinkle of Asheville.

HONORING CALIFORNIA RESTAURANT ASSOCIATION’S 2001 DIAMOND CUISINE AWARD WINNERS
HON. GEORGE RADANOVICH
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, September 25, 2001

Mr. RADANOVICH. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor and congratulate Tom and Doris Chester, Lloyd and Leona Beiderwell, and Kenny and Myrna Hook for being the recipients of the Central Valley Chapter of the California Restaurant Association’s 2001 Diamond Award.

In 1946, Lloyd and Leona Beiderwell opened a Foster’s Freeze restaurant in Visalia, California. Today, 55 years later, the Beiderwells are still serving food at Foster’s Freeze to their friends and neighbors in Visalia.

Tom and Doris Chester have owned and operated the Wagon Wheel Steak House in Visalia since 1975. In 1984, the Chesters expanded their business and began growing oranges. Most recently, the Chesters added a pizza operation to their restaurant.

Estrada’s Spanish Kitchen was a Visalia landmark from the time it opened, in 1912, until its closing eighty years later, in 1992. Kenny and Myrna Hook were an integral part of Estrada Kitchen’s long tradition of service and unique cuisine. The Hooks, along with numerous other members of their extended family, worked at Estrada’s Spanish Kitchen for 34 years.

I am pleased to take this opportunity to congratulate Kenny and Myrna Hook, Tom and Doris Chester, and Lloyd and Leona Beiderwell on their receipt of the California Restaurant Association’s 2001 Diamond Award. Furthermore, I would like to thank them for their hardwork and dedication to providing quality food and outstanding customer service to the people of California’s Central Valley.

CONGRESSMAN KILDEE HONORS LORRAINE STONE
HON. DALE E. KILDEE
OF MICHIGAN
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, September 25, 2001

Mr. KILDEE. Mr. Speaker, I rise today and ask my colleagues to join me in honoring a the best.

Raine, her husband Harold, and their family, all pride. Lorraine Stone is one of those people.

We in Michigan are proud of our reputation for efforts in making a positive impact in the larger community and I am appreciative of the efforts of those like Lorraine Stone live in our community. Lorraine was recognized for her stellar contributions by the UAW.

Lorraine began working for the International Union, UAW Region 1-C Office, on August 26, 1968, in Owosso, Michigan. In 1973, she was transferred to the Lansing Sub Regional Office until 1980, where she then returned to the Flint Regional Office, where she has remained to this day. Over three decades, Lorraine has been a vital component to Region 1-C, helping to establish a solid foundation for the progress of America’s labor movement, and a better way of life for autoworkers everywhere. She has worked under several Directors and International Representatives, and has worked as Secretary to the Educational Director and Secretary to the Assistant Director, the position she has held since 1998.

As a Member of Professional Secretaries International for more than 25 years, Lorraine has helped represent clerical workers throughout the state. She has held several executive positions within the organization, and in 1986 was recognized for her stellar contributions by being selected Secretary of the Year.

Mr. Speaker, we in Genesee County have been extremely fortunate to have someone like Lorraine Stone live in our community. Lorraine believes that the UAW must play a role in the larger community and I am appreciative of efforts in making a positive impact in the fields of scholarship and community activism.

As we in Michigan are proud of our reputation as the automotive capital of the world, we are as equally proud and grateful for the men and women who day in and day out work to provide those quality products and bolster our pride. Lorraine Stone is one of those people. I ask my colleagues to join me in wishing Lorraine, her husband Harold, and their family, all the best.

Mr. Speaker, today I join with my colleagues, Representatives Starks, Eshoo, Farr, and Longfellow in honoring the retirement of a dedicated public servant, John Neece. John’s retirement as Chief Executive Officer of the Santa Clara and San Benito Counties Building and Construction Trades Council ends 21 years of exemplary service to his community.

Lorraine’s work with the UAW extends outside the office as well. She has been an important part of the Region 1-C Bowling Tournament for 29 years, and an organizer of the annual Sit Downers Dinner for 15 years. She has served as Chairperson of the Sam Duncan Scholarship Committee and as a member of the Fred Meyers Scholarship Board of Trustees. Earlier this year, Lorraine was selected as one of Region 1-C’s three Corporate Women of Achievement.

As a Member of Professional Secretaries International for more than 25 years, Lorraine has helped represent clerical workers throughout the state. She has held several executive positions within the organization, and in 1986 was recognized for her stellar contributions by being selected Secretary of the Year.

Mr. Speaker, we in Genesee County have been extremely fortunate to have someone like Lorraine Stone live in our community. Lorraine believes that the UAW must play a role in the larger community and I am appreciative of efforts in making a positive impact in the fields of scholarship and community activism. As we in Michigan are proud of our reputation as the automotive capital of the world, we are as equally proud and grateful for the men and women who day in and day out work to provide those quality products and bolster our pride. Lorraine Stone is one of those people. I ask my colleagues to join me in wishing Lorraine, her husband Harold, and their family, all the best.

Mr. Speaker, I join with my colleagues, Representatives Starks, Eshoo, Farr, and Longfellow in honoring the retirement of a dedicated public servant, John Neece. John’s retirement as Chief Executive Officer of the Santa Clara and San Benito Counties Building and Construction Trades Council ends 21 years of exemplary service to his community.

A native of San Jose, California, John Neece attended Lowell Elementary and Roosevelt Junior High, and graduated from San Jose High in 1962. After becoming a member of the Ironworker’s Apprenticeship Program, John went on to join the Santa Clara and San Benito Building and Construction Trades Council in 1979. John became the youngest Chief Executive Officer of any council in the State, as well as the youngest delegate from the State of California to the International Iron Workers.

Through John Neece’s visionary leadership, the Building and Construction Trades Council became the important organization that it is today: a source of strong advocacy for workers and labor. A former ironworker himself, John utilized his insight, energy and vision to become the Trades business agent. As an organizer and a leader, John has been successful in growing in the union movement and cooperation with other local unions and developers. His efforts made the Trades Council a crucial force within the Bay Area.

However, John Neece’s service has not been limited to the building and construction industry. John has participated in various community programs in Santa Clara County and volunteered his time on numerous boards throughout Silicon Valley. John is an Executive Board Member and Second Vice President of the South Bay AFL–CIO Labor Council, and serves on the Board of several agencies such as the Valley Medical Center Foundation and the Joint Venture Silicon Valley Board and Visioning Council. John has also served in the past on the Boards of the Red Cross Capital Campaign Committee and the Red Cross Disaster Relief Program.

Mr. Speaker, John Neece leaves behind a life-long legacy of excellence and professionalism. It has been a great pleasure for my fellow Members and I to work with him, and it is an honor to be able to pay tribute to him here. John Neece has been a great friend to us all, and we wish him well.

ON THE INTRODUCTION OF THE RAIL INFRASTRUCTURE DEVELOPMENT AND EXPANSION ACT FOR THE 21st CENTURY (“RIDE–21”)
Amtrak’s Northeast Corridor needs $20 billion to upgrade the southern portion of the Northeast Corridor alone. Meanwhile, on September 12, U.S. Rail News reported that Virginia and North Carolina estimate that it will take more than $2.5 billion just to build high-speed rail infrastructure from Washington, D.C., to Charlotte, North Carolina. Proposals such as these and similar projects in Florida and in the Midwest would far surpass the funding level provided in competing bills.

TOO LITTLE FLEXIBILITY FOR STATES

Under competing proposals, Amtrak has too much control over the approval and funding of high speed systems. Amtrak’s financial condition is in serious jeopardy, and I am concerned about its ability to perform the tasks assigned to it under these bills, such as issuing bonds, managing a fund to repay the bonds, and repaying the bond proceeds. Moreover, Amtrak should concentrate on its core business of operating passenger trains and carrying mail and express and premium traffic.

RIDE–21 puts the federal and state governments in control of the development of high-speed passenger rail and balances their roles. On the one hand, the DOT places the federal government, through the Department of Transportation, in control over approving the basic design of the high-speed rail network in the United States. Among its roles, the DOT must determine whether a corridor is a comprehensive and viable high-speed corridor. The DOT must determine whether the proposal makes a significant step toward achieving speeds of at least 125 miles per hour on the corridor. The DOT must determine whether all at-grade rail crossings are eliminated.

On the other hand, RIDE–21 puts states and compacts of states in the conductor’s seat by giving them flexibility to address their transportation needs. States are free to develop the high-speed rail proposals that the DOT will review. States can choose which technology to employ and which routes make the most sense. States can take on the proposal and make a significant step toward achieving speeds of at least 125 miles per hour on the corridor. The DOT must determine whether all at-grade rail crossings are eliminated.

RIDE–21 does not leave states holding the bag, though. In fact, the cost of RIDE–21 to the states is about the same as the cost to the states of H.R. 2329. H.R. 2329 requires states to provide Amtrak with a minimum of 20 percent of the project cost. The states’ contributions are then intended to grow over time so that Amtrak can use that money to pay off the bonds. If the states use a similar “sinking-fund structure,” they will need to put up about the same amount of money so that it will grow into enough to pay off the bonds. Of course, under RIDE–21 states need not use a “sinking fund,” because they are given flexibility to determine how to pay off the bonds.

FINALLY, AMTRAK BENEFITS FROM RIDE–21

Finally, Amtrak benefits from RIDE–21. As the only operator of high-speed passenger trains in the United States, Amtrak will be a partner with the states in many projects. And, it will have a clear competitive advantage when the time to bid on contracts to operate trains on this new rail network. As owner of the Northeast Corridor, Amtrak can also benefit from infrastructure improvements there, financed by the states under this bill. Amtrak can focus on operating trains more efficiently while the DOT and states worry about the improvement of passenger rail infrastructure. Therefore, it demonstrates its ability to seriously compete for operation of new high-speed corridors, Amtrak will actually benefit under RIDE–21.

MORE BANG FOR THE BUCK

RIDE–21 is fiscally responsible. The $71 billion investment in infrastructure through RIDE–21 will cost the federal government about $6 billion. The other bills, which provide for only a $12 billion investment, will cost the treasury about $7.4 billion, according to CBO. Any taxpayer can tell that RIDE–21 is a better value.

Finally, RIDE–21 creates jobs. $71 billion to construct high-speed passenger rail infrastructure means good jobs for hard-working Americans.

I encourage Members to study RIDE–21 carefully and to become cosponsors of this bill.

TRIBUTE TO CALIFORNIA TASK FORCE 7

HON. ROBERT T. MATSUI OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, September 25, 2001

Mr. MATSUI. Mr. Speaker, I rise in tribute to the California Task Force 7, Sacramento Urban Search and Rescue Unit. On September 11, 2001, just hours after the murderous attacks on the World Trade Center and the Pentagon, sixty-four members of the Sacramento Urban Search and Rescue Team departed for New York City to assist with the recovery efforts. As their family and friends gathered to welcome them home, I ask all my colleagues to join with me in saluting one of America’s finest search and rescue teams.

The California Task Force 7, Sacramento Urban Search and Rescue Team, is comprised of members from Sacramento Metropolitan Fire District, Sacramento Fire Department, West Sacramento Fire, and El Dorado County Fire Protection District.

The Sacramento Urban Search and Rescue Unit is considered a multi-hazard discipline, as it may be needed for a variety of emergencies or disasters, including earthquakes, hurricanes, typhoons, storms, tornadoes, floods, dam failures, technological accidents, terrorist activities, and hazardous material releases.

The California Task Force 7 has always been a leader in supporting recovery efforts throughout the United States. The Unit was one of the first Urban Search and Rescue teams mobilized after the Oklahoma City bombing, arriving thirteen hours after the blast. The Unit also played an instrumental role in the rescue and relief efforts in the 1996 Atlanta Olympics bombing, the 1996 Yosemite Rock Slide, and the 1996/1997 California Floods.

The Sacramento Search and Rescue Unit is comprised of sixty-four highly qualified and dedicated specialists divided into four groups: Search, Rescue, Technical, and Medical. Team members include specialists in structural engineering, hazardous materials, heavy rigging, search and rescue, canine response, logistics, and medical response, which includes four medical specialists and two physicians. By design, there are two personnel assigned to each position for the rotation and relief. This allows for round-the-clock task force operations. A comprehensive equipment cache totaling 60,000 pounds supports the task force.

For ten days, the members of the California Task Force 7 worked tirelessly and selflessly in search of survivors in the rubble of the World Trade Center towers in New York City. These outstanding search and rescue specialists courageously answered our nation’s call for their assistance and compassion during this hour of need. Their bravery, valor, and patriotism in the face of such tragic events is inspiring to all Sacramentans and to all Americans, and deserves our most heartfelt gratitude.

Mr. Speaker, as the exceptional people of the Sacramento Urban Search and Rescue Unit return home, we are honored to pay tribute to some of our area’s most heroic and dedicated citizens. The California Task Force 7 serves as an invaluable resource to the Sacramento Region, the State of California, and the United States of America. We ask all of our colleagues to join us in thanking the men and women of the Sacramento Urban Search and Rescue Unit for their fearless dedication and service to our country during this national tragedy.

EDITORIAL IN THE JEFFERSON CITY NEWS TRIBUNE

HON. IRENE SKELTON OF MISSOURI

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, September 25, 2001

Mr. SKELTON. Mr. Speaker, I am proud to share with the Members of the House the excellent editorial in the Jefferson City News Tribune following Tuesday’s horrific events. The fine statement is set forth as follows:

AMERICANS UNDER ATTACK

Abject honor does not begin to describe the reaction to this morning’s attack on New York City and Washington, D.C.

Much remains unknown. What is certain, however, is that the attack was an act of war on American people on American soil.

At this juncture, we know that shortly before 9 a.m. EDT today an American Airlines jet hijacked after take-off from Boston, struck one of the twin towers at the World Trade Center in lower Manhattan. Within minutes, a second airplane, also believed hijacked from American Airlines, struck the trade center's second tower. Both towers caught fire and subsequently collapsed in a massive implosion of burning debris.

Later this morning a commercial jetliner, also believed to have been hijacked, crashed into the Pentagon in Washington D.C. That was followed by a car bomb exploding outside the State Department.

In addition, another jetliner, possibly hijacked from United Airlines, crashed outside Pittsburgh, PA. The death toll, although yet unknown, will be staggering. The World Trade Center itself houses an estimated 50,000 employees, exceeding the population of Jefferson City.

Passengers on the hijacked jet and other people on the ground also have perished. In reaction, all flights in the nation have been cancelled, key buildings have been evacuated and the military has been placed on alert.

The miscreants, presumably terrorists, who perpetrated these malevolent attacks also remain unknown. They must be identified, and they and their ilk must be extirpated like the vermin they have shown themselves to be. America has been attacked mercilessly. To serve notice that this must never happen again, our response must be equally merciless.

EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

RECOGNIZING BILL IVEY, CHAIRMAN OF THE NATIONAL ENDOWMENT FOR THE ARTS

HON. STEPHEN HORN
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, September 25, 2001

Mr. HORN. Mr. Speaker, as the chair of the National Endowment for the Arts, Bill Ivey’s contribution to the benefit and growth of American culture and arts education is undeniable. Since his chairmanship began in 1998, Bill Ivey’s determined outreach has given more people in more places in our country the opportunity to learn about America’s arts and cultural heritage. Under his leadership, the National Endowment for the Arts received bipartisan support for the critical need to adequately fund our national cultural agencies. While I am sad to see him leave, I wish Bill well in his future at Vanderbilt University and have no doubt that he will continue to contribute to the arts community and public service as he has for the past 30 years.

TRIBUTE TO OFIELD DUKES

HON. JAMES E. CLYBURN
OF SOUTH CAROLINA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, September 25, 2001

Mr. CLYBURN. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to Ofield Dukes of Washington, D.C., who is a recent recipient of the Public Relations Society of America’s 2001 Gold Anvil Award.

First awarded in 1948, the Gold Anvil Award is the PRSA’s most prestigious individual honor and is presented to the public relations professional whose contributions to the field have advanced the profession. Ofield Duke’s accomplishments as a journalist, public relations executive, and as a public relations educator speak for his recognition as a reputable leader in his field and in the community.

After receiving three national Newspapers Publishers Association awards for editorial, column and feature writing published in the Michigan Chronicle in Detroit, Mr. Dukes became a member of the Johnson-Humphrey administration in 1964. Later, he would go on to serve an additional 3 years on the staff of Vice President Humphrey.

He opened his first public relations firm in 1969, with Motown as his first client and Lever Brothers as his second. In 1975, he was the recipient of the Silver Anvil Award. As noted by the Washington Post Mr. Dukes is “one of the top public relations persuaders in the city.”

Mr. Dukes assisted in the organization of the Inaugural Congressional Black Caucus Annual Legislative Conference. He has served on the boards of the Congressional Black Caucus Foundation and the Martin Luther King Jr. Center for Nonviolent Social Change. Mr. Dukes became a communications consultant for the Democratic presidential campaign in 1972 and has been a consultant for every presidential campaign thereafter. He is president and founder of the Black Public Relations Society of Washington, which was established in 1993.

Mr. Dukes has served as an adjunct professor at Howard University for seventeen years and was instrumental in establishing the University’s public relations curriculum. For the past eight years, Mr. Dukes has been an adjunct professor in the School of Communications at The American University. He is responsible for inspiring hundreds of students to enter public relations.

Mr. Speaker, I ask you and my colleagues to join me today in honoring Ofiel Dukes for the incredible services he has provided to his students and the field of public relations. I sincerely thank Mr. Dukes for his outstanding contributions, congratulate him on becoming a recipient of the 2001 Gold Anvil Award, and wish him well in all of his future endeavors.

TRIBUTE TO JAY HENSLEY

HON. CHARLES H. TAYLOR
OF NORTH CAROLINA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, September 25, 2001

Mr. TAYLOR of North Carolina. Mr. Speaker, Jay Hensley, a newspaperman of old-school traditions who spent much of his career with the Asheville Citizen-Times, died Wednesday, September 5, at the age of 75. Hensley was with the Citizen-Times from 1956 until 1997. He covered politics, courts and crime, local government and civil rights, took feature photos and editorialized on local, state and national issues.

It is perhaps Hensley’s political coverage that he will be best remembered for. Hensley covered every state legislative session from 1967 until 1979 and was a familiar face around the state capitol.

“Jay would ask that second and if necessary that third question to get to the heart of things,” said former Gov. Bob Scott, who served from 1969–73. “He asked the tough questions but was always fair. At that time, the capital press corps was a crusty bunch of guys. But when the day was done and they’d filed their stories, it was a professional job.”

Former Citizen-Times executive editor Larry Pope described Hensley as “an encyclopedia on local and state politics,” adding “Jay probably knew more about politics than some of the people who held office.”

Jay Hensley, once a three-pack-a-day smoker, chronicled his battle to quit smoking and his resulting respiratory problems in 1990. He is best known for his talks about “Why We Pledge the Flag.” Mr. Ross gives these talks at veterans’, civic, and school events and is best known for his talks about “Why We Pledge the Flag.” Mr. Ross gives these talks in his original U.S. Navy uniform, which still fits him perfectly.

Al Ross has been a teacher and organizer for the National Amputee Foundation. He has

HONORING JOHN C. FREMONT HOSPITAL

HON. GEORGE RADANOVICH
OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, September 25, 2001

Mr. RADANOVICH. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to John C. Fremont Hospital for 50 years of service to the Mariposa community.

In 1947, the Mariposa county voters overwhelmingly approved the formation of the John C. Fremont Hospital District. Shortly after, the 1st meeting of the Board of Directors was held and they proceeded to purchase 20 acres of land to build a facility. In 1951, the John C. Fremont Hospital opened a 24-bed facility. As the community grew, so did the hospital facilities. A 10-bed skilled nursing facility was created in 1964. Additionally, the Ewing Wing has been added. The Ewing wing is a “home” facility that has beds to accommodate 28 residents.

In 1975, a Home Health Agency was established to serve patients with at-home health needs. In 1981, the hospital was designated a primary health service hospital by the state of California and a sole community provider by the Federal Government.

In 1994, the hospital received a complete face-lift. Revenue bonds totaling $5.84 million allowed the hospital to expand its emergency services, build a new clinic, enlarge a helipad port, reopen surgery capabilities, and add additional facilities. In 1995, a hospice was added to serve the terminally ill and their families.

John C. Fremont is one of the few California hospitals that have received the “Critical Access Hospital” designation, which allows the health care district to receive a higher reimbursement for its Medicare patients. The John C. Fremont Health Care District supplies education to the community by conducting CPR courses, Certified Nursing Assistant programs, and Licensed Vocational Nurse prerequisite programs. The health care district is one of the largest employers in the area with 168 employees.

Mr. Speaker, I rise to honor John C. Fremont Hospital for serving the health care needs in Mariposa County for 50 years. I urge my colleagues to join me in wishing John C. Fremont Hospital many more years of continued success.

100TH ANNIVERSARY OF LEXINGTON ELKS LODGE, LEXINGTON, MISSOURI

HON. IKE SKELTON
OF MISSOURI

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, September 25, 2001

Mr. SKELTON. Mr. Speaker, let me take this means to congratulate my friends at the Lexington Elks Lodge, Lexington, Missouri, who recently celebrated their 100th Anniversary as a lodge.

The Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks Lodge 749 has served a proud role in the city of Lexington since the lodge’s chartering in 1901. The Elks have played a vital and active role in the community, sponsoring programs aimed to better the town, the people, and the people’s safety.

The Elks organization is primarily involved in two community service programs, drug awareness and veteran services. Lexington Elks are strong supporters of the D.A.R.E. program in Lexington schools. They have sponsored the purchase of D.A.R.E. signs and drug awareness programs. The Elks also show support and appreciation to the veterans of our nation.

Mr. Speaker, the Lexington Elks Lodge has sponsored numerous other community projects. They have distributed fire alarms, hosted community Christmas dinners, donated to organizations such as the Ministerial Alliance and they sponsor a yearly scholarship for graduating high school seniors.

Mr. Speaker, the Lexington Elks Lodge has contributed to the city for a century. I know that the Members of the House will join me in congratulating them and wishing them continued success.

SALUTE TO AL ROSS

HON. MARK FOLEY
OF FLORIDA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, September 25, 2001

Mr. FOLEY. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to pay tribute to a man who has served his country bravely and who also serves as a role model in his community.

I speak of Al Ross, one of my constituents and the youngest surviving veteran of the First World War. Al, the son of Russian immigrants, enlisted in the United States Navy in 1917, when he was only 16 years old. He served as a Seaman First Class aboard the U.S.S. Richmond. In fact, Al is the last surviving member of Barracks 507, a West Palm Beach World War One veterans group.

On October 11, 2001, my friend Al Ross turns 100 years old. He is a frequent speaker at veterans’, civic, and school events and is best known for his talks about “Why We Pledge the Flag.” Mr. Ross gives these talks in his original U.S. Navy uniform, which still fits him perfectly.

Al Ross has been a teacher and organizer for the National Amputee Foundation. He has worked for the Palm Beach Daily News and the Selective Service System. Most recently, Mr. Ross has been an advocate for the voting rights of U.S. military personnel serving overseas. He is also an avid golfer.

Mr. Speaker, please let the RECORD reflect this Congress’ appreciation for his efforts.

TRADE PROMOTION AUTHORITY NEEDED

HON. DOUG BEREUTER OF NEBRASKA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, September 25, 2001

Mr. BEREUTER. Mr. Speaker, this Member commends to his colleagues this following editorial, entitled President Needs Trade Authority, from the September 5, 2001, edition of the Norfolk Daily News, which emphasizes the need to grant the President “fast track” trade negotiating authority.

This Member is a longtime supporter of Trade Promotion Authority (TPA), or “FastTrack Authority” (as it was previously called), because TPA is necessary to enable the United States to commence, conclude, and implement trade agreements with foreign nations. Without the enactment of TPA, the United States will continue to fall further behind in expanding its export base, which in turn will cost America thousands of potential jobs. Congressional passage of TPA for the President is absolutely essential for America to live up to its export potential.

Therefore, this Member urges his colleagues not only to carefully read this editorial, but also to support granting trade promotion authority to the President now!

[From the Daily News, September 5, 2001]

PRESIDENT NEEDS TRADE AUTHORITY
FORMER SECRETARIES OF AGRICULTURE OF ONE MIND REGARDING “FAST TRACK” ISSUE

Members of Congress ought to be impressed that 10 former secretaries of agriculture, Democrats and Republicans alike, are in agreement on an important matter of trade policy. From Orville Freeman, who served under President Kennedy, to Dan Glickman, who served under President Clinton, all were in agreement that President Bush ought to be granted “fast track” trade negotiating authority.

With some exceptions among those in farm organizations who fear only big companies find ways to profit from exports, the agricultural community seems unified regarding benefits of foreign trade. That accounts for broad bipartisan support of measures to promote it.

Presidents had fast-track authority beginning in 1974, and until congressional Republicans failed to renew it for the Clinton administration in 1994. They erred, and that error should not now be compounded. Trade negotiations are already conducted under broad guidelines approved by Congress and the president.

Having arrived at specific trade pacts under such authority, Congress must not pick and choose, second-guess and thereby jeopardize agreements. With the fasttrack arrangements, it can either accept or reject an agreement, not nitpick and rewrite the terms. Thus Congress retains an overall veto; the president retains negotiating power. It is the right balance.

Through the administrations of Presidents Ford, Carter, Reagan, Bush I and early in the first Clinton term, the fast-track authority existed in the White House. The error of fail ing to restore it after 1994 should not be compounded now by defeat of the proposal.

America’s efficiency in all phases of food production means it can compete effectively on a worldwide basis. This advantage cannot be exercised to improve the economic status of agriculture by tying the hands of the one individual who can, with a cooperative Congress, do most to encourage beneficial trading terms to reach consumers in foreign nations.

The letter to current Secretary of Agriculture Ann Veneman, signed by those 10 former secretaries, said, “American agriculture has much to gain by passage of Trade Promotion Authority and too much to lose if Congress fails to seize this opportunity.” Re-establishing this authority would do much to assure Americans, and especially those involved in farming and ranching, that their economic opportunities will not be hostage to narrow partisanship.

HONORING 76 YEARS OF THE NEW ENGLAND COUNCIL

HON. CHARLES F. BASS OF NEW HAMPSHIRE
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, September 25, 2001

Mr. BASS. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to congratulate the New England Council as they celebrate their 76th Anniversary of being a regional voice for the people of New England.

For over seventy-five years, the New England Council has been instrumental in uniting the region’s business and political leaders to discuss and shape public policies and programs that advance the economic well-being of the region. As a non-profit alliance of schools, hospitals, corporations, public agencies and other organizations throughout New England, the Council has worked diligently to promote economic growth and quality of life in the six-state region.

I commend your leadership in looking for regional solutions on issues including energy, workforce development, health care, transportation and privacy. Under the leadership of Jim Brett and the Council’s esteemed Board of Directors, the Council has played a significant role in both providing a forum and in advocating an agenda that addresses those issues impacting New Englanders and the regional economy.

I applaud the Council’s efforts to promote the economic growth of New England and to improve the quality of life for those who live throughout the region.

I ask my colleagues to join me in honoring the 76th Anniversary of the New England Council and in wishing the Council continued success as it faces the challenges and possibilities of the 21st Century.

“BAND OF BROTHERS”: THE STORY OF EASY COMPANY, 101ST AIRBORNE DIVISION

HON. GEORGE W. GEKAS
OF PENNSYLVANIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, September 25, 2001

Mr. GEKAS. Mr. Speaker, it was during the early morning hours prior to the D-Day invasion of June 6, 1944 that the men of Easy Company parachuted into Normandy. Company E, as was their official designation, was part of the 101st Airborne Division that carried out many objectives during World War II. Their acts of heroism begin with their participation in Operation Market Garden and continue on to the climactic Battle of the Bulge. Their service continued through Germany, ending with the capture of “Eagle’s Nest.” Adolf Hitler’s mountain fortress. Their brave deeds, documented in Stephen Ambrose’s book, “Band of Brothers” is now an HBO television mini-series.

On Monday, September 25, 2001, we had the opportunity to meet many of the great members of Easy Company. They came from far and wide to share, with Members of Congress, their story of defending freedom across Europe. In these trying times, their story is an inspiration to the men and women of the Armed Forces.

Last evening we watched in a special screening of the television mini-series as Easy Company landed behind the German battlefronts and took out an artillery battery that was firing on the Allied forces at Utah Beach. By destroying four 105mm guns, and killing or running off 60 soldiers, Easy Company significantly contributed to the successful landing of Allied forces on D-Day. Because of the overwhelming success of this mission, Easy Company’s maneuvers are still studied at West Point today.

Those Members of Congress who represent the veterans of Easy Company were privileged to speak briefly of these heroes. It is my pleasure to represent Major Dick Winters. He was the commanding officer of Easy Company, and perhaps best represented the heroism of Easy Company through his courage, character, and charisma. Unfortunately, Dick could not make the event from his home in Hershey, Pennsylvania, but he sent me his remarks which I was honored to read.

Here are the kind words written by Major Winters about his fellow soldiers, “In 1942, I was assigned by Colonel Sink to Company E. Ever since then the men of Company E have been my buddies in combat, my friends, my family—for ever. I shall never forget them.”

At the conclusion of the event, everyone in attendance rose in applause for several minutes to praise the heroic efforts of Easy Company. Among Members of Congress, top military personnel and guests alike, dry eyes were few and far between.

The story of Easy Company is testament to the Allied forces’ fight for freedom in World War II. Today, we benefit from their sacrifices made nearly sixty years ago, and for that, we are all eternally grateful. I know that the
September 25, 2001

House of Representatives joins me in honoring these brave soldiers. Let us never forget their story.

WISR 680 AM
HON. PHIL ENGLISH OF PENNSYLVANIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, September 25, 2001

Mr. ENGLISH. Mr. Speaker, during the past 60 years, we have gone to war four times, landed on the moon, seen the rise and fall of the Berlin Wall. During the past 60 years, presidents have been shot and assassinated, computers were invented, presidents resigned and were impeached and the pope was shot. During the past 60 years, we've added two states to the union and amended the U.S. Constitution six times.

During the past 60 years, WISR 680 AM has kept residents of Butler County up to date on those events and more, becoming a part of the community in the process. WISR brought visits to Butler County by figures such as First Lady Eleanor Roosevelt and presidential candidate John F. Kennedy into people's homes as well as provided an outlet for opinions by local residents.

WISR was licensed to broadcast by the Federal Communications Commission on Sept. 26, 1941. It was one of the first radio stations in northwestern Pennsylvania to focus on regional, local and community news as well as broadcast local editorials. It was also the first in the area to develop a local talk radio format. Hosts such as Dave Malarky and before him Larry Berg offered the community a valuable outlet for the views of the members of the station.

The Rosenblum family owned the station for 55 years and the station call letters stand for Isaac Samuel Rosenblum, the father of the station founder, David. As a local, family run station, the station has supported and continues to back countless charity and community events.

I join the Butler area community in congratulating WISR for delivering quality news and talk radio to the area for 60 years. As a radio station, WISR was not only responsible for delivering the news but also took on an important role in shaping our community. I hope that the future allows many, many more generations of Butler area residents to learn to tune into WISR.

HONORING TWO REMARKABLE INDIVIDUALS DURING HISPANIC HERITAGE WEEK
HON. LORETTA SANCHEZ OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, September 25, 2001

Ms. SANCHEZ. Mr. Speaker, a wonderful thing about our country is how we celebrate each other in art, custom, food and friendship. A “nation of immigrants” might have been blighted had Pilgrims not learned from Native Americans. Proof? Check the menu for the first Thanksgiving Dinner.

Now almost everyone samples each other’s traditional dishes, catches the color and feeling of each other’s special days, senses the human goodness in each heritage and faith. This is how strangers turn into neighbors in so many ways that our ways of getting along have become unique in the world.

It is an American no one else even comes close.

Now we are joyfully in another such season of sharing and appreciation.

On September 17, 1968, the U.S. Senate and House of Representatives adopted House Joint Resolution 1299, creating an Hispanic Heritage Week. Twenty years later, Public Law 90–498 was enacted expanding the Week to a month eventually stretching from September 15 through October 15 each year. The period includes the anniversary of Mexican Independence and “birthdays” of many other Latin American countries.

Cultural sharing will take many forms across the United States of America. At heart, it will reveal itself in real people not only glad they are who they are but also where they are.

LOS AMIGOS OF ORANGE COUNTY, persons who have met weekly for 23 years to talk over community concerns in my district, asked that the two following stories be shared. Millions of people create a blur but sketches of two—a book creator and a bookseller—are offered in the hope they will convey very personal, human glimpses of America’s lively, evolving Hispanic Heritage.

From La Voz, Nov. 16, 2000
LIFE’S AN OPEN BOOK? CRACK IT.
(By Galal Kernahan)

Miami! A big city in Florida? A river in Ohio?

Or is it someplace baked and a little bleached? In it, where the sun is a presence, winds sometimes muter and deer browse on the other side of the hill? Is it where you could read the day away in an outhouse with no more interruption than a buzzing fly?

Rueben, the children’s author, and two girls of Cipriano Martinez and Rometia Rivas de Martinez, was born in Miami, Arizona, in 1940. There he grew to young manhood. His parents were transplanted Chihuahuenses. One took root. The other didn’t.

The children attached their mother to that small copper town, but their father blew away on the notes of an alto saxophone. He made it big with Big Bands like the Glenn Miller Orchestra. By the time the road and that life got old and he got old, his boys and girls were men and women who remembered him no more clearly than he did them.

Rueben came to love books during his school years. He took them everywhere. They took him everywhere. All in Miami.

When he was 10, the town, like other southwestern copper towns, was coming off its World War II-hyped mining high. By the time he graduated from high school, nothing was being hauled to the smelter anymore. At 18, he went to East Los Angeles.

Beside what books taught him, what did Miami teach? What has stayed with him?

“My grade school was segregated to Apaches and Mexicans, but the teachers were good. I loved shop,” remembers Rueben. “And Miami? It was so ugly, it was beautiful.”

It all makes you wonder. Which is its purpose. Rueben’s life is an open book he seems to read like a child. He turns pages, laughs and says, “What’s this?” Then he tries to tell you he knew it all the time . . . that he planned it.

He is a strong believer we all should write down our goals. He writes his down. No one else could have that many! And do credit to them, too.

On a coast-to-coast TV program, he commands his fathers to be perfect husbands: “Take out the trash and read to your children!” He is a sought-after motivational speaker, a consultant to publishers, a friendly pro to writers and artists, an energizer to teachers and a media personality.

The biggest independent bookstore in Orange County, California, began as a few books for customers in a barber shop. Now he carpets the space next door with kids eager to be read to.

Rueben’s life is an open book with one new chapter after another. He reads on and says, “Amazing!” Then and, “That’s me, too!”

Victor Strongs Words to Compute LIFR X 13
(By Galal Kernahan)

As Victor Villasenor emerged from adolescence, his parents sent him to Mexico City. He was overwhelmed by what he saw. The world suddenly opened, widened, deepened.

He became ill. A doctor was summoned.

“You are a doctor?” “Yes,” “You are a Mexican?” “Yes,” answered the baffled physician. Victor thought that, though all Mexicans might not be farm workers like his friends on his father’s place in Oceanside, it was unlikely they would be persons in the professions,
New realities shook him. The discovery of books catapulted him into dawning understanding of human landscapes and feelings, striving and failures. A conflicted teenage functional illiterate he started down an endless road to finding himself. In writing.

He drove himself for decades ten hours a day, six days a week untying, re-ordering and re-stacking strings of words. Eventually, some books reached print and modest success. Then, in 1981, he wrote the made-for-TV motion picture THE BALLAD OF GREGORIO CORTEZ.

Well-wishers came to the large, old Spanish colonial house on a bluff in Oceanside, California. He paid an emotional tribute to his parents, Salvador and Lupe. He promised he would write their lives. All celebrated the Public Broadcasting System (PBS) telecast. The pictures were released to movie houses the next year.

In 1991, ten years later, a more-than-500 page work—parts of it laboriously rewritten more than 40 times—became a milestone in Latino literature. RAIN OF GOLD sold more than 200,000 copies in hardcover. Any given copy may have been read by six-to-ten people.

It recounts the Mexican youth of Lupe and Sal: surviving the Revolution, their separate journeys across the Border, how they met on this side. It ends with their marriage in Santa Ana, but not before sketching the personalities of their mothers, Victor's grandmothers. Hidalgoized the faithful at her church in Corona. Her lively conversations—even arguments—with God and Mary did not go unnoticed.

Now, more than another decade has passed. Victor has gone through multiple rewritings of his latest book. It is about Sal, Lupe and their lives in 1929, 1930 and 1931. It is published by HarperBooks.

Salvador has been dead for years. Lupe passed away in 2000. Both are very alive in pages Victor has filled. So is the cosmically talkative grandmother who, together with Sal, finally makes clear to the author what lies behind all he has been writing.

There have been tumultuous first years of marriage not made any smoother by Sal's profession. He's a bootlegger.

Victor remembers what his father often told him: Casi todos nacen y mueren ya nunca abren los ojos. Poca gente abre los ojos porque no usa todo su sentido. ("Almost everyone is born and dies without opening their eyes. Few people open their eyes because they don't try fully to perceive things.")

What that really might mean became clear in a startling brush with the law. Salvador is driving a truck heavily laden with barrelful of whiskey in Corona. His well-connected mother is with him. A cop pulls them over.

She begins telling God the officer will not see the barrels and that she needs help for her son and that God owes her one and that she wants to get her son out of the cop looks in the back of the truck and says, "Nothing here, but you better get some air at a gas station because your tires are almost flat." Crisis over, Sal asks, "How did you do that?" "I always have a plan," he says, and explains.

"When people finish this book." Victor claims, "They are going to think magic is possible." The title: THIRTEEN SENSES.
President to the anguish of the Vietnam War, our nation was confronted with innumerable and difficult challenges. The strength of citizens overcame all these challenges, and it will once again overcome what lies before us today.

As we see images of the devastation in New York City and at the Pentagon, we are flooded by emotions ranging from profound sorrow to unbridled anger. Yet we are also called upon to defend ourselves from unknown threats and invisible enemies. Ours is a responsibility to put our raw feeling and emotions aside and focus on the grim work at hand of responding to the attacks against us and doing everything in our power to ensure that such attacks will not be perpetrated against us in the future.

The question now arises how we may best fulfill our duty to protect the citizens of the United States and, indeed, the citizens of countries around the globe. The scourge of terrorism affects more than just the United States homeland. For years our friends and allies in Europe, Asia, the Middle East and Africa have suffered the horrors of terrorism. While offering our support and solidarity, we always believed and hoped that America would be spared from the type of tragedy which befall us last Tuesday. We hoped against hope that New York, Washington, or any American city would not be added to the infamous list which includes London, Paris, Belfast, Beirut, Johannesburg, and Tokyo. Now the fight has been brought to us, and we will respond. We must respond.

The question is how we respond. We will be quick to act, or will we be thorough, careful, deliberate, and patient?

We first responded by granting to President Bush the authority needed to prosecute this effort with the strength the task requires. The Congress will appropriate money, grant authority, and rouse popular support for the President as we take each step against terror, together and jointly exercise the Constitutional responsibilities invested by our Founders in both branches of the government.

Our efforts require and are receiving the support of the international community of responsible nations. The support is a crucial component of any action which our government may take in defense of the American People. The world must not be seen as tolerant in the least of terrorists or those who support terrorists. The strong backing of our allies is a reassuring sign that our international partners stand beside us as we jointly face this danger.

As we embark, we recognize that the Congress and the President are equal partners in the effort. We are making decisions and taking action only after tremendous consideration and deliberation. We have a profound understanding of the gravity of the situation which lies before us. We understand that the Constitutional principles upon which this great country is founded must be respected at every turn. As we defend the safety of Americans, we must also defend their liberties. To defeat terror in a way that robs us of our most cherished freedoms must be avoided. I believe that it is possible for America to be safe and free. As we continue to contemplate further actions and investigate those that have taken place, we must be vigilant in the defense of both our safety and our freedom.

As we respond to the attacks, Americans will continue to unite as we have over the past several days and in ways that we have not seen for years. We draw strength from our tremendous diversity as a nation and from our myriad experiences and abilities. We defeat terror by embracing each other in the face of those who would terrorize us and rising above the petty differences that might once have separated us. Our unity will be our strength as we confront this new challenge. The American House in which we all live will not, as President Lincoln said, be divided against itself. We will continue on, stronger and more united than ever.

The United States will meet this challenge as we have met previous challenges before. Our great nation will unite more strongly than ever, and we will prevail. My faith in our country is exceeded only by my admiration for those who place their own safety in jeopardy so that others will be free. America is great. God bless America.

EXTENSIONS OF REMARKS

HON. JOHN D. DINGELL
OF MICHIGAN
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, September 25, 2001

Mr. DINGELL. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to recognize, honor and salute my dear friend Paul F. Marks on the occasion of his retirement from Michigan State University Agricultural Extension, and for his many years of dedicated service to our community.

Paul began his career with Extension more than 27 years ago. Since that time, Paul has received numerous recognitions, including the National Distinguished Service Award from the National Association of County Agricultural Agents.

At heart, Paul is a teacher. He is recognized throughout the state for his expertise and skill in the areas of vegetable crops, fruit crops and beekeeping. In his professional capacity, he has developed and implemented a large number of award-winning educational programs in such areas as cider safety, agriculture employee seminars and pesticide certification.

Paul's passion for teaching extends well beyond Extension. When working with kids in 4-H or the Junior Livestock Association, one can see Paul's gift truly shine. Paul's exemplary teaching efforts were again recognized when he received the Monroe County 4-H Alumni Award. Paul's leadership has also been outstanding in directing Monroe County's Ag Awareness Day that annually gives more than 1,300 county elementary students a better understanding of agriculture. And when the Extension season's over each summer, you can be sure Paul will be there making sure that every kid has their animal ready for show.

When Monroe County was added to my District in 1982, I gained a special knowledge of Paul's ability to educate. Knowing little about farming, I paid a visit to the Extension office and met a young Extension Agent by the name of Paul Marks. I asked him to do the impossible—teach a Polish lawyer from Detroit about farming. To his great credit, Paul was up to the task.

Since then, I have come to rely greatly on Paul's advice and counsel on agricultural matters. More importantly, Paul has become a great friend. His expertise and knowledge will be greatly missed by all of us.

Mr. Speaker, as Paul leaves behind a long and rich history as an Extension Agricultural and Natural Resources Agent to spend time with his beautiful wife Jeannine and his family, I would ask that all of my colleagues salute Paul, his excellent service to his community, his wonderful sense of humor and above all his earnest good will and compassion for his fellow man.

Tribute to Francesc de Paula Soler

HON. JOSE´ E. SERRANO
OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, September 25, 2001

Mr. SERRANO. Mr. Speaker, it is with great pride that I rise to pay tribute to Mr. Francesc de Paula Soler, a gifted and prolific musician. This world-renowned instrumentalist will grace the Library of Congress on October 2, 2001, and fill it with his music. This concert will feature music to soothe and lift our spirits during this difficult time in the wake of the national tragedy.

Francesc de Paula Soler was born in 1949 to a celebrated Catalan family of artists. He began studying music at age 6 and was dedicated to his guitar by age 11. As a young adult, he became an astute and devout student of the great Andrés Segovia, known as the father of the classical guitar. He also studied under the great Narciso Yepes for a number of years. From these musical founders, Soler was taught the classical guitar in its pure form. His music has an original, raw quality that makes it distinct and loved by many.

Although the guitar's ancestor probably originated in ancient Egypt, the version that we use today came from Spain in the early 16th century and became popular throughout Europe later in the century. Soler's first mentor, Andrés Segovia, is credited with legitimizing and revolutionizing the traditionally-regarded "Instrument of peasants" into a popular art form. In the late 1800s, Spanish culture embraced the guitar and, as a result, the majority of music throughout Latin America is flavored with the instrument. Whether listening to Argentinean chacareras, Ecuadorian danzantes, Panamanian murgas, Mexican rancheras, a Cuban mambo, Puerto Rican salsa, or Dominican merengue, one can hear the prolific influence of the guitar. It is indeed a fundamental element of Spanish and Latin culture, which Soler has mastered and re-defined.
Mr. Speaker, Francesc de Paula Soler is routinely referred to as “The Poet of the Guitar” throughout the world, based on the way he conveys raw emotion and tells complex tales with only his fingers and the strings of a guitar. He has mesmerized audiences at the Levine School of Music and the Achison Auditorium in the U.S. State Department, and has entertained a myriad of cultural societies throughout the United States. Thousands have filled the auditoriums of colleges and universities from coast to coast to hear Francesc de Paula Soler’s guitar. Beyond these American performances, Soler has engaged audiences around the world.

In commemoration of Hispanic Heritage Month and the ways that Hispanic Americans have served our country throughout history, I encourage all of my colleagues to attend the concert and enjoy an hour of exquisite music.

Mr. Speaker, I ask my colleagues to join me in thanking Francesc de Paula Soler for his contributions to the world of music and for honoring us with his art.

PRO BONO PROJECT

HON. ZOE LOFGREN
OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, September 25, 2001

Ms. LOFGREN. Mr. Speaker, I rise to recognize the dedicated volunteers of the Pro Bono Project of Santa Clara County. The Pro Bono Project uses volunteer attorneys, judges and other legal professionals to represent low income and indigent clients in Santa Clara County in family law cases, including divorce, custody, child/spousal support, and domestic violence issues. Often, the Pro Bono Project is the last chance its clients have at securing representation.

The success of the Pro Bono Project is a direct result of 150 volunteers, through whose efforts the Project offered over 200 clients per year over $958,000 in volunteer services. Thanks to these volunteers, the Pro Bono Project was able to staff several clinics, including a Bankruptcy clinic and a Paternity clinic. Pro Bono Project attorneys staff the Domestic Violence Collaboration in conjunction with Bay Area Legal Aid, Battered Women’s Support Network, Next Door and South County Alternatives. The Domestic Violence Collaboration provides divorce, support and custody services to victims of domestic violence. The Project’s Family Law Mentor Program provides a volunteer mentor attorney in the office every Wednesday to provide family law advice and help to attorneys.

With very little funding, the Pro Bono Project does an amazing amount of work. I commend the Project’s founders and volunteers. On behalf of Santa Clara County, I thank these remarkable volunteers for all of their hard work.

TRIBUTE TO DAN TRANT

HON. JAMES P. MCGOVERN
OF MASSACHUSETTS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, September 25, 2001

Mr. MCGOVERN. Mr. Speaker, sadly today many American families continue to mourn the loss of their loved ones during the senseless tragedies at the World Trade Center and the Pentagon. As each day passes, their stories are being heard by a growing number of Americans who are becoming intimately affected by these devastating losses.

I have spoken of several of these Americans here on the floor. I am also drawn to the story of Dan Trant, a former basketball legend at Clark University in Worcester, MA, and the older brother of a friend. Dan was a successful bond trader with the firm Cantor Fitzgerald at the World Trade Center.

Recently, the Boston Herald described Dan as an icon in New England college basketball who was drafted by the Boston Celtics in 1984 and went on to play professional basketball in Ireland, his family’s ancestral home. Dan later played for the Springfield Fame during the inaugural season of the U.S. Basketball League, assisting his team in the first-ever league championship.

Off the court, Dan was even more inspiring. He was a father and neighbor who used his great successes in sports and in the business world to inspire hundreds of children in his church congregation, local school district and a nearby university near his home in Northport, LI. Many of the local children he helped attended his memorial service in New York, where they had an opportunity to express their love and say goodbye.

Mr. Speaker, our thoughts and prayers are with Dan’s wife Kathy, his children Jessica, Daniel, and Alex, and all of those who loved him.

TO HONOR THE REVEREND CLARENCE D. ROBINSON

HON. THOMAS M. BARRETT
OF WISCONSIN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, September 25, 2001

Mr. BARRETT of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I am honored to recognize the work of the Reverend Clarence D. Robinson as he leaves St. Mark African Episcopal Church in Milwaukee after more than a decade of service. Rev. Robinson is moving to Chicago where he has been appointed presiding elder for 23 congregations in the city and it’s surrounding communities.

Following his ordination as an Elder in the African Methodist Episcopal Church in 1959, Rev. Robinson’s career took him to churches throughout the Midwest. He came to St. Mark’s in August, 1981 from Ebenezer A.M.E. Church in Detroit. Michigan, and truly left his mark as a leader in our community.

In addition to giving his time as a board member of several Milwaukee organizations, Rev. Robinson has also served our young people as a tireless advocate and role model. St. Mark’s offers the Men to Boys mentoring program, and opens its recreation center doors on Friday nights for Word Up—a night of Bible study, basketball, board games and other activities. Rev. Robinson has helped provide productive and non-violent options for young people, linking them with positive role models and encouraging them to lead a life free of drugs and violence.

Rev. Robinson’s legacy will surely be felt at St. Mark A.M.E. Church for years to come. Last September the church honored it’s second senior citizen housing facility. The congregation named this 25 unit building the C.G. Robinson Terrace in honor of their leader.

During his 10 years in Milwaukee, Rev. Robinson has impacted our community in many ways, and he will be sorely missed. I am proud to join the members of St. Mark A.M.E. Church in thanking him for his service to the people of Milwaukee, Wisconsin and wishing him the best of luck in his new position.

VOLUNTARY SEPARATION INCENTIVE PAYMENTS

HON. DARLENE HOOLEY OF OREGON

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, September 25, 2001

Ms. HOOLEY of Oregon. Mr. Speaker, as part of an effort to reduce the federal work force within the United States Forest Service, Forest Service employees were offered the opportunity to participate in a “voluntary separation incentive payments” program a few years ago. This program was included in the Agriculture, Rural Development, Food and Drug Administration, and Related Agencies Appropriations Act of 1997 (P.L. 104—180). As part of the agreement, employees were paid $20,000; in exchange, they agreed to retire and not be employed by any federal agency for at least five years; if they were re-employed by the federal government they would have to forfeit all or part of the money from said agreement.

However, there has been a severe shortage of qualified firefighters to combat the extraordinary number of forest fires throughout the country over the past several years, specifically in the West. Many retired Forest Service employees have been asked to help fight many of these blazes, unfortunately many of them cannot without risk of forfeiting the payments they received through the buyout program.

My bill will amend Public Law 104—180 to allow former Federal employees who received voluntary separation incentive payments under the Department of Agriculture program to accept employment with the Federal Government once again, without loss of their payments, as long as their employment is directly related to fighting forest fires.

At a time when we need qualified, willing, well-trained individuals to fight these fires more than ever before, it’s egregious if we do not change this law to allow these brave men and women to fight the fires that threaten our forests, wildlife, and our homes without having to worry about forfeiting past reparations they’ve received from the government.

INTRODUCTION OF THE TERRORIST DISASTER RELIEF FOR SMALL BUSINESSES ACT

HON. JOHN J. LaFALCE
OF NEW YORK
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, September 25, 2001

Mr. LaFALCE. Mr. Speaker, the tragic events of September 11, 2001, have caused a massive disruption of businesses all over the country. The most visible of the economic scars can be found in lower Manhattan, which some 15,000 businesses called home, and in the air transport industry, which the government was forced to close. But, the economic hardships caused by the September 11th terrorist attacks reach far beyond the areas immediately impacted by the attacks and involve all types of businesses.

In order to overcome their current difficulties, businesses who have suffered substantial hardship because of the September 11th terrorist attacks, Gordon has stood before Congress to seek access to low-cost credit to cover their uninsured losses and to provide needed operating cash while they regain their footing. Congress has provided financial assistance to the airline industry. And, thankfully, many small businesses in the New York City area will qualify for economic injury disaster loans from the Small Business Administration. However, there are many more innocent small businesses who need the Government’s help to overcome the economic difficulties caused by the terrorist attacks and the resulting turmoil in the air transportation industry.

Among the small businesses that have been injured are those that sell goods and services to the airports, airlines and airline passengers. The current crisis has also taken a heavy toll on the entire tourist industry, particularly, the many small businesses that are integral to that industry. The closing of commercial air traffic during the week of September 11th had a severe impact on many businesses that depend on the airlines and air cargo industry for the delivery of items crucial to the conduct of their enterprise. While we cannot yet measure the economic impact of the attacks on the small business community, many small businesses all over the country are clearly suffering.

The SBA has sought to provide disaster assistance from small businesses all over the United States, including small businesses in the Dallas-Fort Worth area and California, and small businesses from as far away from New York City as Hawaii. But, under the current restrictions that apply to the SBA disaster loan program, the SBA cannot provide disaster assistance to businesses outside of a declared disaster area and contiguous communities.

My bill, the Terrorist Disaster Relief for Small Businesses Act, would provide needed disaster assistance to businesses all over this Nation. First, the bill gives the Small Business Administration the authority to provide economic injury disaster loans to a small business located anywhere in the United States that can demonstrate it experienced a substantial economic injury because of the terrorist attacks, including injuries caused by actions taken by the government in response to attack. Additionally, the bill would permit the Administrator of the SBA to relax, as he deems necessary and appropriate, the “small business” size standards for an injured business that, as a technical matter, does not meet the size standards. These exceptions to the normal SBA criteria would only apply to businesses that have been injured by the September 11th attack.

These are extraordinary times that call for extraordinary solutions to overcome the Nation’s current crisis. I believe altering the criteria for SBA disaster loans will help the Nation’s small businesses to begin to recover from the economic hardships caused by the September 11th attack. I urge my colleagues to support this important legislation.

TRIBUTE TO GORDON GALVAN

HON. FORTNEY P. STARK
OF CALIFORNIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, September 25, 2001

Mr. STARK. Mr. Speaker, I would like to pay tribute to Gordon Galvan’s many years of dedicated service on the San Leandro City Council.

A lifelong San Leandro resident, Gordon is a third generation San Leandran and grandson of Spanish immigrants. He is a graduate of St. Leander’s School and San Leandro High School.

Gordon began his service to the local community in 1992 as co-founder and President of the Bancroft Area Neighborhood Association. He went on to be elected in 1994 to the San Leandro City Council, representing District One and was re-elected by a mandate in 1998.

During his two terms on the Council, Galvan was recognized as a champion of small and large businesses and a passionate advocate for revitalization of Downtown San Leandro. He led the way for public/private partner investments in the area resulting in over $2.5 million of improvements to downtown San Leandro.

Local and regional civic and community leaders recognized Gordon’s leadership on the Council. His colleagues on the San Leandro City Council elected Galvan for an unprecedented two terms as Vice Mayor.

He served as vice chair of the City of San Leandro’s Disaster Preparedness Council, and worked on San Leandro’s FEMA award-winning Disaster Preparedness Campaign.

After seven years of service to the city of San Leandro, Gordon has stepped aside to devote more time to his business. Still devoted to serving his community, he is overseeing the management of the San Leandro Shuttle Program and the San Leandro Industrial Industrial Roundtable.

The Mayor, the San Leandro City Council and the Chamber are hosting a tribute to Gordon on September 27. I join in expressing appreciation for his many years of dedicated service on the San Leandro City Council.

PRESCRIBE U.S. JOBS IN THE PASSENGER VESSEL INDUSTRY

HON. ROBERT A. BORSKI
OF PENNSYLVANIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, September 25, 2001

Mr. BORSKI. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to express my opposition to a proposal to amend the 1886 Passenger Vessel Services Act (PVSA) by designating Panama as a distant foreign port of call. Such designation would allow foreign-flag vessels to carry passengers from one U.S. port to another U.S. port, provided only that the vessels stop in Panama en route.

Under the existing PVSA, vessels making U.S. point-to-point services must be owned, built, flagged and manned in the U.S. This statute has served our country well for over a century, ensuring a vibrant domestic passenger vessel industry that creates and preserves jobs in the U.S. Designating Panama as a distant foreign port would create no U.S. jobs, generate no economic benefits for the U.S., and result in no new business for U.S.-flag cruise vessels. Only foreign-flag—which pay no U.S. corporate income taxes, operate largely outside of U.S. laws, and employ foreign labor—would benefit from this misguided proposal.

The PVSA authorizes the U.S. Customs Service to provide the flexibility needed to meet the needs of the cruise industry public while at the same time preserving important national interests. By arbitrarily designating Panama as a distant foreign port, Congress would supersede the regulatory authority of Customs and contravene the longstanding purposes of the PVSA to bar foreign vessels from engaging in domestic transportation. Such an act would also create a dangerous precedent that could have even graver implications for U.S. cargo transportation governed by the Jones Act.

Mr. Speaker, the proponents of the Panama proposal hope to include it as an amendment to the Coast Guard Authorization bill. I urge my colleagues to strongly oppose this misguided attempt to undermine one of our nation’s most important maritime laws.

TRIBUTE TO PAUL W. IVORY, ADMINISTRATOR OF CHESTERWOOD

HON. JOHN W. OLVER
OF MASSACHUSETTS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, September 25, 2001

Mr. OLVER. Mr. Speaker, it gives me great pleasure to commend Paul W. Ivory, who as of September 30 will retire as the Administrator of Chesterwood, the former country home and studio of sculptor Daniel Chester French in Stockbridge, Massachusetts. French was the creator of two of America’s most powerful symbols: The Minute Man (1875) in Concord, Massachusetts and Abraham Lincoln (1922) for the Lincoln Memorial in Washington, DC.

At Chesterwood, which was designed by noted architect Henry Bacon, French executed many commissions, and he also designed the gardens and woodland walks around the grounds. French is considered to be one of the most important artists of the late 19th century and early 20th century when our country was undergoing enormous change as an emerging world power. Playing a large role in a national movement to commemorate its heroes, French created more than 100 works of public sculpture.

In 1969, Chesterwood was donated to the National Trust for Historic Preservation by French’s daughter, Margaret French Cresson. Shortly thereafter, Paul Ivory took over as Administrator of the museum and residence, and he has been its guiding force for the past 30 years. Mr. Ivory, employed unparalleled dedication, expertise and commitment to excellence in overseeing the facilities and programming at Chesterwood during a time when it evolved into one of the most outstanding artistic and cultural attractions in the region, and indeed in the country.

Today, Chesterwood holds nearly 500 pieces of sculpture by Daniel Chester French, including molds, casts and studies—making it one of the largest collections of fine art devoted to a single American sculptor. Visitors to Chesterwood can enjoy a number of activities, including the studio where French worked and a residence that demonstrates the architectural elements of the Italian Villa and Colonial Revival styles. They can also walk through the studio garden, with its flowered borders, sculptures and vistas of the Berkshire Hills. And they can view exhibits at the new Barn Gallery that bring the career and classical work of French to life even more. Among the other programs and exhibitions that have come to life under Mr. Ivory’s charge are the Contemporary Sculpture at Chesterwood Series (22 years running), which allows visitors to compare diverse artistic styles and materials from both the past and the present, and the Sculpture in Residence, where visitors can become engaged in the art through a series of exhibitions and demonstrations, along with the Walking Tours of Contemporary Sculpture and the Annual Antique Car Show.

Mr. Speaker, Paul Ivory has demonstrated by his many accomplishments at Chesterwood that he is a man of outstanding ability and professionalism. At the same time, he has always exhibited deep respect for all of his associates and everyone connected with Chesterwood. Under his management, patronage at Chesterwood has grown to several thousand visitors every year, who come to be informed, entertained and edified. I also think it is appropriate to note that Mr. Ivory is a decorated Vietnam veteran who earned the Army Commendation Medal, the National Defense Service Medal, the Viet Nam Service Medal, and the Republic of Viet Nam Campaign Ribbon with Device. I am proud to honor Mr. Ivory today and to express appreciation on behalf of myself and the western Massachusetts community in recognizing his accomplishments as Administrator of Chesterwood.

THE DISPLACED WORKERS ASSISTANCE ACT

HON. NICK J. RAHALL II OF WEST VIRGINIA
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, September 25, 2001

Mr. RAHALL. Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to be an original co-sponsor of the “Displaced Workers Assistance Act” introduced today by Mr. Gephardt. This bill will provide job training skills, health care benefits and extension of income support to employees of the airlines, and related industries, who lost their jobs as a result of the terrorist attacks on September 11, 2001.

I am especially pleased that the bill has been introduced just days after the House passed the “Air Transportation Safety and System Stabilization Act” last Friday. I have always supported legislation to improve the quality of life for the American Worker. Last week, when the House passed the “Air Transportation Safety and System Stabilization Act,” I joined in the concern expressed by several unions that the bill did not contain provisions for displaced workers.

During floor debate on the airline stabilization bill, Speaker Hastert and Democratic Leader Gephardt pledged to address the needs of displaced workers in separate legislation as soon as possible. I voted for the “Air Transportation Safety and System Stabilization Act” last Friday because we were given these assurances.

I am pleased that the bill we introduce today has solid provisions to provide relief and security to displaced workers. I will work as hard as I can to help to get the bill passed and enacted into law expeditiously.

Regarding job training, workers who are not expected to return to their jobs within the airline industry will be eligible for retraining benefits for other types of work. Workers who are not expected to return to their present jobs, but who may find some alternative job within the airline industry, will be eligible for upgrade training.

Regarding health care benefits, the federal government will fully reimburse eligible workers for their premiums. Workers who do not qualify for COBRA and are otherwise uninsured will be eligible for Medicaid. The federal government will cover 100 percent of the premiums. These health care benefits will last for a maximum of 18 months.

Regarding income support, workers who exhaust their 26-week eligibility for state unemployment insurance will be eligible for an additional 52 weeks of cash payments funded entirely by the federal government.

Workers who do not meet their states’ requirements for unemployment insurance will receive 26 weeks of federally financed unemployment insurance.

Workers who are eligible for the benefits provided in this bill are employees of airlines, commercial airline manufacturers, suppliers to airlines, and airports.

Only those workers who lost their jobs as a direct result of the terrorist attacks of September 11 or security measures taken in response to the attacks, are covered under this bill.

All Americans, and all people in the civilized world, were horrified at the events of September 11, 2001. But for those workers in the airlines and related industries, the pain was even more severe because of the loss of their livelihood, through no fault of their own, but through the fault of the terrorists’ heinous crimes.

It is my fervent hope that the provisions of this bill will help the fine people who lost their jobs to rebuild their financial security. By providing these displaced workers with job training, extended health care coverage and extended unemployment benefits, we are giving them the tools to get a new job, while receiving compensation and continued health care coverage during the process.

These benefits will provide the displaced workers with peace of mind as they rebuild their lives and financial security. They deserve our help, and we must pass the “Displaced Workers Assistance Act” expeditiously.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

RETIREMENT OF CHIEF FRANK J. COX WEST WINDSOR TOWNSHIP POLICE DEPARTMENT

HON. RUSH D. HOLT
OF NEW JERSEY
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, September 25, 2001

Mr. HOLT. Mr. Speaker, I rise to recognize retiring Police Chief Frank J. Cox of West Windsor Township, New Jersey and of his thirty-nine-year long commitment to serving the people of New Jersey as a distinguished law enforcement officer.

A native of Princeton, New Jersey, Frank Cox first served on the Princeton Township Police Department from 1962 to 1968 before joining Chief Frank Maquire to create the West Windsor Township Police Department in 1968, becoming Chief in January 1980.

During his tenure with West Windsor Township’s police department, Chief Cox was nominated and attended the 109th Session of the FBI National Academy and then served as the President of the New Jersey Chapter of the FBI National Academy. Additionally, he served as President of the Mercer County Chiefs of Police Association as well as serving on the executive board for the past fifteen years.

Because of his tremendous abilities, Chief Cox was even called upon to serve as the Interim Business Administrator of West Windsor Township from June 2000 to September 2001.
Chief Cox’s stalwart leadership for the past half century serves as an enduring example of unending commitment and selfless public service. It has been a pleasure working with him in recent years.

Mr. Speaker, I applaud Chief Frank Cox on his many years of service to the people of West Windsor Township and ask my colleagues to join me in recognizing his invaluable contributions to our community and New Jersey.

IN RECOGNITION OF THE CITY OF LA CANADA FLINTRIDGE

HON. ADAM B. SCHIFF
OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

Tuesday, September 25, 2001

Mr. SCHIFF. Mr. Speaker, I rise today to honor the Southern California community of La Cañada Flintridge. On December 8, the city will celebrate its 25th year of cityhood.

In 1843, in the wake of the Mexican Revolution, Ignacio Coronel, a Mexican schoolteacher from Los Angeles, was granted a valley named “Rancho La Cañada.” Later, U.S. Senator Frank Flint divided 1,700 acres south of modern-day Foothill Boulevard into large lots and called his subdivision “Flintridge.” Eventually, the valley came to be known as “La Cañada Flintridge,” as it is called today.

La Cañada Flintridge experienced its most rapid growth during the 20th Century. A diverse and resourceful collection of farmers, professionals, intellectuals, and ranchers toiled to develop a prosperous city. To this day La Cañada Flintridge reflects their hard work. It is a city with extensive cultural resources and an educated population that has never abandoned the vision of its founders of successful small-town life.

La Cañada Flintridge is a bustling suburb with several important landmarks. The most recognizable institution in La Cañada Flintridge is the Jet Propulsion Laboratory, the world’s leading center for robotic exploration of the solar system, which is managed for NASA by the California Institute of Technology. La Cañada Flintridge is also home to Descanso Gardens, a 165-acre botanical garden famous throughout the nation. The city also provides its citizens a full range of vital services and an excellent education in an independent school district.

On this 25th anniversary of the incorporation of La Cañada Flintridge, I offer my sincere congratulations to the city and its residents. La Cañada Flintridge exemplifies the American dream of a diverse coalition of individuals and families working together to secure business success, a high quality of life, and the friendliness and cooperation that is a hallmark of America’s small-town suburbs.

ECONOMIC REVIVAL PLAN FOR AMERICA

HON. PAUL RYAN
OF WISCONSIN

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, September 25, 2001

Mr. RYAN of Wisconsin. Mr. Speaker, I submit for the RECORD a letter to the President of the United States from a large number of reputable economists and public policy advocates who have identified a pro-growth pro-jobs strategy to revive the U.S. economy.

DEAR MR. PRESIDENT. We, the undersigned, believe that quick and decisive action is needed to rebuild the nation’s economic growth and restore economic growth. The economic slowdown that began in the middle of last year was perilously close to becoming a recession. But, because of what happened on September 11, what was a cause for concern is now a threat to national security.

The terrorist attacks destroyed a significant amount of wealth and damaged the short-term capability of key sectors of America’s economy. Recovering from these despicable assaults will be a tremendous ordeal, but dealing with this challenge is only part of the problem. Equally important is the need to restore the economy’s overall performance. If America is to successfully wage war on terrorism, we will need the resources that only can be generated by an economic firewall.

This means substantial tax reform and significant tax rate reductions. We believe the core elements of an Economic Rebuilding and Recovery Package are:

- A shift toward “expensing” of business investment. It is counterproductive not to allow companies to fully deduct the expense of investments in factories, machines, structures, and technology. Replacing the current “depreciation” rules with immediate expensing—or at least a significant shift in that direction as contemplated in the High-Productivity Investment Act introduced in the US House of Representatives—will boost the need to restore the economy’s overall performance. If America is to successfully wage war on terrorism, we will need the resources that only can be generated by an economic firewall.

- Capital gains tax rate reductions. The tax rate reductions enacted earlier this year constitute sound long-term tax policy, but many of the pro-growth elements do not take effect until 2004, 2006, and 2010. This means the additional growth will not take effect until that time. The rate reductions, IRA expansions, and death tax repeal should be made effective as of September 11, 2001.

- Capital gains tax rate reduction. The capital gains tax is a form of double taxation that penalizes risk-taking and entrepreneurship. This tax should not exist, and it certainly imposes significant economic damage in today’s uncertain environment. A large—and permanent—reduction in the capital gains tax will stimulate new investment and more productive use of capital.

We look forward to working with you to rebuild America and restore economic growth. Thank you for your attention to this critical issue.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

HON. JIM TURNER
OF TEXAS

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES

THE HOME EQUITY LOSS PREVENTION AND ECONOMIC RECOVERY ACT

HON. MAXINE WATERS
OF CALIFORNIA

IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, September 25, 2001

Ms. WATERS. Mr. Speaker, I rise to introduce legislation which I believe is critically necessary at this time. My bill, the “Home Equity Loss Prevention and Economic Recovery Act” or HELP, will restore the tax deduction for personal interest, such as that on automobile loans and credit card debt. It will also eliminate the limitations on the deduction of student loan interest.

This legislation will help prevent the reprehensible practice of stripping home equity to pay nondeductible debt. I have been working on ways to stem predatory lending for years. These practices often end in families losing their homes. I decided to turn to the tax code to eviscerate this problem of predatory lending, known as home equity stripping.

Home equity loans have historically been the privilege of the middle class and wealthy, who generally have high credit ratings, income, and home equity. However, beginning in the 1980s, non-depository finance companies—lending institutions other than commercial banks, thrifts, and credit unions—began to provide home equity loans to lower-income communities, which were not served by mainstream lenders.

Persons in low-income communities typically have little disposable income, but may have substantial home equity as a result of paying down their mortgages or through the appreciation of their property values. This equity can secure sizable loans. While offering loans to low-income and minority communities can benefit these communities, predatory lending practices, which oftentimes use the borrowers’ home as collateral, have milked the last drops of wealth from many of these neighborhoods, leading to increased poverty and public dependence.

When vulnerable persons incur substantial medical costs, suffer sudden loss of income, require credit consolidation, or need funds to maintain their homes, predatory lenders step in, offering loans secured by the borrower’s equity. Unfortunately, predatory home equity lenders target the most vulnerable homeowners—the elderly and people in financial or personal crisis.

The primary selling tools of these loans is the need to consolidate debt on which the interest is not deductible into a home equity loan, so that the interest can be deducted. Individuals with car loans, credit card debt and certain student loans cannot deduct the interest paid on these loans from their taxes. Often, these individuals will strip equity from their homes and pay high fees in an effort to consolidate this debt into one loan on which the interest is deductible. Frequently, these transactions involve high fees which offset any tax benefit that may be realized. Furthermore, after a loan consolidation, many consumers will accrue additional credit card debt.

My bill will remove the greatest incentive for equity stripping by making the interest on personal loans deductible, meaning that people with car loans, credit card debt and student loans that fall outside of current parameters, will now be able to deduct the interest they pay for these loans. The deductibility of the interest will lower the cost of borrowing for individuals and will prevent many individuals from overextending themselves in an effort to reap tax benefits.
I have been working on this legislation for several months, but decided that now is the appropriate time, because it has the potential to provide much needed economic stimulus. People will keep more of their money with these deductions, and will not be encouraged to pay high fees and risk losing their homes. I think that the time is right to restore the deductibility of personal interest and I would urge my colleagues to support this legislation.

AIR TRANSPORTATION SAFETY AND SYSTEM STABILIZATION BILL

SPEECH OF
HON. ROSA L. DeLAURO
OF CONNECTICUT
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Friday, September 21, 2001

Ms. DeLAURO. Mr. Speaker, today I rise with troubled conscience, to vote for the Air Transportation Safety and System Stabilization Bill. The events of September 11, 2001 marked one of the darkest moments in our country's history. On that day, terrorists struck at the heart of our social and economic fabric and the ripple effects of this tragedy are still being felt. In particular, the airline industry was severely impacted, resulting in tremendous economic hardship for the carriers, the people who work for them and the travel industry as a whole. This bill will allow the airlines to continue flying; provide for the security of our airports and airways; and grant critical compensation to the families of victims of last week's heinous and barbaric attack. For these reasons, I hesitate to vote no.

Nonetheless, the bill does little for more than a hundred-thousand workers laid off as a result of this tragedy, nor does it help the employees in associated industries, such as engine and parts manufacturers, hotels, restaurants, travel agencies, limousines and rental car services, and all the others now facing lay-offs. I have serious reservations that if these concerns are not addressed in concert with this legislation, millions of laid-off workers and their families will be left behind with no guarantee that they will retain their unemployment benefits, health care benefits or receive any re-training opportunities.

The security provisions in this bill do not go far enough. The airline industry has repeatedly fought the government tooth and nail over increased airline and airport security measures and efforts to improve customer service. We cannot afford for them to fail, but they deserve a stern warning, not just a check.

I had sincerely hoped that last week's tragic events would have brought this Congress together in a bipartisan fashion to help everyone facing economic hardship. I look forward to legislation next week that brings relief and protection to those already unemployed and to the thousands of additional workers whose jobs are in jeopardy.

AIR TRANSPORTATION SAFETY AND SYSTEM STABILIZATION ACT

SPEECH OF
HON. JANICE D. SCHAKOWSKY OF ILLINOIS
IN THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Tuesday, September 25, 2001

Ms. SCHAKOWSKY. Mr. Speaker, every single member of this body and every person in this country understand fully that a functioning airline industry is vital to the functioning of our country. Yet I stand in opposition to this legislation. Why?

Because, remarkably, this bill completely ignores the heroes in the airlines industry who were and are most deeply and personally affected by the September 11 atrocities. I am speaking of the pilots who fly the airplanes, the flight attendants, the baggage handlers, the mechanics, the ticket agents—the workers who are now losing their jobs as a result of the September 11 attacks.

You can look through every line of every page of this bill and you won't find a single mention of them. But those airline executives who earn over $300,000 will find a whole section of this bill devoted to them. It says that they can continue earning the same amount they did in year 2000, compensation amounting to $35 million for one CEO, $16 million for another, and $12 million for a third. And if those CEO's decide they've had enough, this bill says their golden parachute can be twice their salary.

But not a word about the up to 100,000 airline industry workers who will lose their jobs even if we pass this bill. An angry and hurt Association of Flight Attendants says, "It's sad how quickly those who sacrifice to make our great country work, even in these times of tragedy, get left out when corporations go asking for taxpayer money." These workers are going to lose their jobs, and this bill says nothing about their loss of income, their loss of health insurance, nothing about job retaining.

Some other people are missing from this bill—passengers. Without them, no amount of money will save the airline industry. Yet nothing in this bill addresses the reason why airports are quiet and airplanes are nearly empty, why business travelers, vacationers, families, conventioneers are changing their plans and staying home or driving. That reason is simple: Fear of flying. In this entire bill there are only two sentences that refer to airline safety and then only in passing. If passengers are looking for a list of measures that will be implemented to make airplanes and airports more secure, they better not look in this bill. If they are looking for a security timetable, they won't find it here.

I stand here tonight ready to help the airline industry—but not just a part of it. Those who say they will help the workers next week or next month must be asked, Why not tonight? To those who tell consumers to wait for airline safety measures, I ask, Why can't they be part of this package? Are they less deserving, less important, less needy? We can go back and within hours add them. Then I would gladly and proudly vote yes.
